Negotiations under way for library facility

By Vicki Olgeaty
Staff Writer

Negotiations for the purchase of a building for SIU-C library storage are under way, according to a spokesman for the Illinois Capital Development Board.

The spokesman, Les Pauly, said Monday that the CDB legal counsel has made inquiries about three buildings the University is considering purchasing. The board will probably have responses from owners of all three buildings within the week and will submit the outcomes to the SIU Board of Trustees "in the very near future," he said.

The Board of Trustees asked the CDB in March to negotiate fixed prices for the Bracy Building in Marion, the administration's top choice; the Wal-Mart Building in Carbondale, its second choice; and the Baptist Student Center

Police report two women raped

Two SIU-C students were raped early Friday morning by a man who crawled through an unlocked window of their home in the southeast section of the city, Carbondale police reported Monday.

The double rape was reported at 2:17 a.m. Friday. Police said a man entered the home and threatened one of the victims, 18, who was sleeping on the couch, and then tied her up. The woman told police that the man said he would harm her if she made an outcry.

According to information given to police, the man went to a bedroom where the other victim, 19, was sleeping and brought her to the living room and tied her up.

Police said he raped the woman on the couch, then raped the other woman on the floor, and took the first woman into the bedroom and raped her again.

A boyfriend of one of the women came to the home at this time and wrestled with the suspect, who broke free and fled the home, police said.

Harold McFarlin offers up a victory sign after winning a battle in the fight for his life. A community effort has raised $40,000 for his heart transplant at the Stanford Medical Center.

Additional $40,000 given to fund

By Robert Green
Staff Writer

The Stanford University Medical Center will grant Harold McFarlin funds through a special program which will pay for at least half of his $80,000 heart transplant, said campus fund-raising coordinator Robert Gold Monday.

Gold received the surprise announcement from Stanford via telephone on Friday. It brings an abrupt but happy end to the two-month-old communitywide fund drive which raised more than $40,000 for McFarlin, an SIU-C history professor with terminal heart disease.

Now that the financial aspect of McFarlin's ordeal has been resolved, he will be able to fly to the hospital in Palo Alto, Calif., where he will undergo preliminary tests and then wait for a suitable donor heart. He will leave for California May 10.

Gold said Monday that he will accompany McFarlin on his impending journey and will "help him to get settled" in Palo Alto. During the pre-operation wait, which could take months, McFarlin will live in an apartment near the hospital.

Gold said hospital officials have decided to accept McFarlin to the facility "completely and finally" with $40,000, the remainder of the fee to be paid by a special grant from the National Institute of Health which helps people in need of heart transplants who are unable to pay for the operation. McFarlin had previously applied for the grant but was denied because he did not have enough additional funds to pay for the operation.

Surprise funds lift McFarlin's spirits

By Robert Green

During an interview over lunch on Monday, Harold McFarlin paused several times to catch his breath before proceeding with the questioning and his salad.

Though his diseased heart remains weak, his spirits are now high since learning that his much-needed $80,000 heart transplant operation is signed, sealed and all but delivered.

A communitywide fund-raising drive, which raised over $40,000 in two months, and an unexpected grant from the National Institutes of Health will buy McFarlin his new heart and a chance for a normal life. He will fly to the Stanford University Medical Center May 10 and begin the wait for the operation.

McFarlin was predictably jubilant about the sudden news of the grant money, but he paused before giving his reaction to the local fund-raising effort. It wasn't lack of breath, he just seemed a bit hard-pressed for words.

"My gratitude is unfathomable," he said. "This small part of the state has saved my life."

The 46-year-old SIU-C history professor, who is currently on leave, described the fund-raising effort as "a movement," and like a true academic he couldn't resist a few sociological observations of the fund-raising effort.

"What gets me about the movement is that Southern Illinois is an area with high unemployment, low incomes and a small population," said McFarlin, who hails from Wisconsin. "But this area stood by me and we won."

When he arrives in California on May 10, McFarlin will be admitted to the hospital where he will rest for a few days before undergoing preliminary tests.

He will then live in an apartment near the hospital where he will anxiously await the beep of his electronic pager. That beep will notify him that a suitable donor heart is available for the operation.

He will then be brought to the Stanford medical facility, generally regarded as the best in the country for heart transplant surgery.

McFarlin's plans after successful surgery are cut and dried: "I want to be back teaching by August of 1984. With my health and job back I can once again be a contributing member of society."

Gus says that because Stanford Medical Center and a lot of folks have a heart, Harold McFarlin will get a new one.

Annuitants vote to fight raids on funds

By Rod Stone
Staff Writer

Campaigning for the proposed state tax increase is the best short-run method of preventing further raids by the state on retirement funds, a group of concerned University constituents decided Monday.

Keith Sanders, SIU governmental relations officer, told the group, which included members of the SIU-C Annuitants Association, several SIU-C administrators and representatives from the Faculty Senate, that there must be a substantial increase in taxes before the state will stop dipping into the retirement system to cover revenue shortfalls.

In 1982, $4.5 million was allocated from the State University Retirement System for faculty salary increases, according to James Ford, legislative chairman of the annuitants association.

This year, Thompson proposed that the state use $82.5 million of retirement system funds to cover other financial obligations. His proposal was approved by the House but was rejected by the Senate.

However, Ford said, $5.9 million is to be taken from the retirement system and used again for faculty salary increases.

Although the governor in his proposal did make provisions for the money to be repaid, the senate has drafted a resolution for paying the money back at a 6-percent interest rate.

Ford said Sunday that paying the money back at 6 percent is unfair because the funds would earn a much higher rate if invested properly in the money market.

At the meeting Sanders said that because a resolution is not law and therefore doesn't bind future sessions of the Legislature, the money may not be paid back at 6 percent.

A resolution passed last month by the annuitants association condemned what it called "repeated raids by Gov.

James Thompson" on the retirement system as "illegal and unconstitutional violations of the intent and spirit of the retirement acts."

The annuitants say in the resolution that the state is not contributing its share to the system in terms of matching funds, which has put the system about $1.9 billion in arrears.

Sanders agreed, saying that state funding for the retirement system at the beginning of the

USO approves travel trip plan to relieve 'catch-22' situations

By James Derk
Staff Writer

University travel regulations may be less troublesome to Recognized Student Organizations under a plan approved by the Undergraduate Student Organization.

Current regulations dictate that all money earned by an RSO be deposited into University accounts. The new proposal would not require RSOs to deposit money earned by fund-raising into University accounts.

This action would alleviate an apparent "catch-22" situation, since RSOs which raise money for a trip must now deposit that money into University accounts. Travel Service prohibits the use of these funds for travel which does not officially represent the University.

For example, the University Mid-America Peace Project, a nuclear awareness group, generated its own funds for a trip to Washington, D.C., in March. The Travel Service denied MAPP the use of University buses, even though MAPP is an RSO.

Nancy Hunter Harris, director of student development, sent a memo to Vice President for Student Affairs Bruce Swinburne indicating the apparent discrepancy.

"It is more a matter of interpretation," Harris said. She said setting up a panel of representatives from student groups and the administration would be helpful in determining who shall decide if a trip is in the best interests of the University.

Harris said such a panel will be formed to examine the problem.

MAPP's problem was that the travel guidelines do not indicate who shall decide if a trip is in the best interests of the University.

MAPP was forced to rent vans from an outside firm even though the group had raised the money specifically for the trip. MAPP's constitution states that the group's purpose is to "promote education and discussion concerning the issues of peace, war and nuclear proliferation."

Harris, in her memorandum, said, "It would seem to me that the institution would want to support and encourage the activities of RSOs and to continue to consider RSOs an integral part of the University.

"To somehow encourage RSOs to circumvent the system by going off campus to open checking accounts or to utilize non-University facilities and services seems to be teaching the students the wrong things and detracting from, rather than enhancing, the student development issues."

Official University Travel Regulations state, "University vehicles will only be approved for use by RSOs when it can be demonstrated by the organization that the purpose of the trip is to officially represent the University."

MAPP was turned down for that reason. Funds raised by an RSO and deposited in University accounts become state funds and thus subject to review by the University.

However, the Student Environmental Center sponsored a similar trip in June 1982 and was given permission to use University vehicles.

Harris said the panel would clarify regulations in that area and hopefully prevent more problems.

News Roundup

Bishops call for nuclear 'halt'

CHICAGO (AP) — The country's Roman Catholic bishops, meeting to deal with the "danger of our times," Monday voted overwhelmingly to call for a "halt" in development of new nuclear weapons systems, rejecting a Reagan administration call for a softer "curb."

In the first formal business of a decisive two-day meeting on a long-debated pastoral letter, the bishops rejected less-stringent wording calling for a "curb" on the testing, production and deployment of new nuclear weapons systems, opting instead to call for a "halt."

State ban on spent fuel struck down

WASHINGTON (AP) — Illinois cannot bar out-of-state shipments to the nation's only commercially run storage site for spent nuclear fuel, the Supreme Court said Monday in upholding a lower court ruling.

The justices, without comment, left intact a ruling that struck down as unconstitutional a law passed by the Legislature in 1980 imposing the ban.

The Supreme Court also let stand, without comment, a ruling that a Washington state law prohibiting the in-state storage, or transportation for storage, of low-level radioactive waste is unconstitutional.

Members of anti-doctor church die

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — Fifty-two people, including 28 babies and seven other children, died while they or their parents followed the teachings of a church that instructs members to shun doctors, the Fort Wayne News-Sentinel reported Monday.

The adults who died while they were members of the rapidly growing Faith Assembly church included sufferers of untreated diabetes and kidney disease and seven mothers with complications related to home deliveries, the newspaper said.

Senate GOP near budget accord

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republicans reported substantial progress Monday toward agreement on a fiscal 1984 budget that would provide a small tax increase, less for defense and more for domestic needs than President Reagan wants, and a deficit approaching $200 billion.

"We don't have everyone on board, but it looks a lot better than it did last week," said Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., after he outlined a new budget proposal at a closed meeting attended by most of the 54 GOP senators.

Pedestrians win in court ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court on Monday restrained police from arresting people for refusing to identify themselves when stopped for questioning, saying such arrests can leave to the "whim" of police to decide who may walk the streets.

But the 7-2 decision stopped short of saying that any anti-crime measure forcing joggers and pedestrians to identify themselves would be unconstitutional.

Weekend crimes reported to police

Carbondale police received reports of three batteries and two major burglaries over the weekend.

At 12:26 a.m. Friday, Delores L. King, 23, 602 N. Barnes St., was arrested for aggravated battery after she allegedly bit the nose of Yolanda Love, 21, 518 E. Fisher St., during a fight.

Police said Love's nose was severely disfigured by the bite.

At 1:17 a.m. Sunday, Benjamin W. Andrews, 25, was arrested for battery at Hangar 9, 511 S. Illinois Ave., after he allegedly cussed at Carbondale Police Officer James Temple, who had just entered the bar, and kicked him in the shin, police said.

Fanny S. Richardson, 23, of Carbondale Mobile Homes, was arrested at 1:29 a.m. Sunday after she reportedly stuck 22-year-old Deborah A. Mack, 22, with a screwdriver at 220 N. Washington Ave.

Krack's Auto Repair Center,

603 N. Illinois Ave., reported $3,083 worth of tools stolen between 8:45 p.m. and 9:15 p.m. Friday. The burglar broke a window to enter the building and was sighted by a worker, who chased him but was unable to catch him, according to police.

Between 6 p.m. and 8:15 p.m. Saturday, $6,000 worth of jewelry was stolen from the home of Everett Prosser, 1001 Valley Rd., police said.

located next to campus, the administration's third choice.

Prices are being negotiated for each building as it is and for each with the installation of book stacks.

Vice Chancellor James Brown said Monday that the CDB has indicated that it has received initial responses from at least two of the owners. He said he anticipates that all three initial responses, at the least, will be in by the next Board of Trustees meeting, scheduled for May 12.

Last summer, the General Assembly appropriated $1.6 million for the purchase of a library storage facility. The appropriation will expire June 30, but Brown said it has been included in a reapportionment bill that the Legislature is considering.

He said such reapportionments are usually routinely approved. If a building is not purchased by the end of the fiscal year, University officials "anticipate that the money will be available for expenditure next year if the governor releases it," Brown said.

Pauly said that no funds have been released yet. He said the CDB will request the Bureau of the Budget to release funds after the Board of Trustees requests that a specific building be purchased.

International Student Council re-elects Kotsioris president

By William Jason Yong
Staff Writer

Aris Kotsioris, a graduate student in public affairs, was re-elected president of the International Student Council April 28 at the Student Center.

Kotsioris, from Greece, defeated Pius Kimondollo for the post by six votes to five.

Somenab Mitra, from India, won the first vice-presidential post with six votes. The other candidates for this post were: Wan Shah Wan Mahmood, from Malaysia, with five votes; and Kimondollo, from Kenya, with no votes.

Ahmed Reza Heydari, from Iran, won the second vice-presidential post by defeating Mahmood six votes to five.

The new officers will begin their terms Aug. 21.

The ISC, with a membership of students from 16 countries, represents about 2,500 international students at SIU-C. Kotsioris said. The council has 11 voting members: students from the Chinese, Indian, Iranian, Japanese, Malaysian, Palestinian, Thailand and Venezuelan student associations, as well as the president and the two vice presidents of the ISC.

Kotsioris said that he was happy to have served as president and will continue to enhance the council.

"Last year, the ISC's slogan was to bring more people together," Kotsioris said. "We will work toward the same theme for the coming year."

He said he will include more activities in the council's calendar. Early this year, the council organized the most successful annual International Festival at SIU-C. Past activities organized during his term were: the International Soccer Tournament, health workshops with the cooperation of the Health Service and a monthly newsletter, "Globe."

"I will try to reorganize the ISC so that it can more actively represent the international students on campus," Kotsioris said. "I will enhance the council's activities and include events for women."

Three commissioners were appointed by Kotsioris to assist him: Mahmood, as orientation and programming commissioner; Kimondollo, as information and publicity commissioner; and Mohamad Ayub Armaid as advisory commissioner.

Kotsioris said that the post of assistant to the president will also be created.

"There is a special reason for this," he said. "The assistant to the president will help organize the National Association of International Student Associations conference to be held either in Houston or San Francisco in March next year."

At the association's meeting in Syracuse, N.Y., last month, Kotsioris was elected regional chairman for District 5 which covers universities in Illinois, Wisconsin and Michigan.

He also said that the ISC will look into some of the major problems faced by international students on campus. The council will present a report of its findings to the SIU-C administration so that the administration can help find solutions, Kotsioris added.

fiscal year was projected at $29 million below the gross minimum payment level required, and by the end of the fiscal year it may be as much as $40 million below the gross minimum payment.

In the Illinois Board of Higher Education proposals for fiscal year 1984, Sanders said, is a $92 million appropriation for the retirement system — a 91.4 percent increase over fiscal year 1983.

"But we need a tax increase to get this in '84," he said.

Several ways to campaign for Thompson's proposed $2 billion tax increase were suggested at the meeting.

Since senior citizens are one of the most anti-tax increase groups in the state, it was agreed that a letter-writing campaign to state legislators from members of the annuitants association, all of whom are of retirement age or older, would help show that there are senior citizens who support the tax increase.

It was also decided that it would be necessary to educate people on the dangers down the road of letting the situation continue to slide and to get them to help out in the Legislature.

Ford said faculty members retiring in five or ten years may find that the money isn't there to pay them if the state keeps removing funds from the system.

"It's high time faculty members, whether they're 25 or 55, should start thinking about what's going to happen to them," he said.

The group agreed that without a tax increase the situation will only get worse.

Sanders said that if a tax increase isn't passed, the future raiders of the retirement system will make the present ones "look like pikers who don't know what they're doing."

The group decided it would be necessary to form an organization, but could not agree on who should be included.

Herbert Donow, president of the Faculty Senate, said an organization should include not only University employees but also all state and municipal employees, such as police and firemen.

Ford said he was in favor of doing this but added that it would be more practical to start with an organization of SIU-C employee constituency groups and expand from that base.

Severe earthquake hits California

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A severe earthquake struck California on Monday afternoon, causing damage and an estimated 50 injuries in the community of Coalinga in the San Joaquin Valley, officials said.

The University of California seismographic station at Berkeley estimated the quake at 6.0 on the Richter scale and put the epicenter five miles northeast of Coalinga.

That community, a town of about 7,000 people about 200 miles southeast of San Francisco, apparently took the brunt of the tremor.

Lindsay Daniels, assistant administrative officer for Fresno County, said there was "major structural damage as far as buildings are concerned, fires in the city itself and possible injuries."

A switchboard operator at Coalinga District Hospital said injuries were coming into the facility, but was unable to provide numbers or the extent of the injuries.

Chris Courtney, Fresno County Emergency Services coordinator, estimated there were up to 50 casualties, and said he was concerned about students at West Hills College, located in the area.

Ambulances from Fresno,

Kings and Tulare counties and Lemoore Naval Air Station were dispatched to the area.

Reports of the quake came from Fresno, San Jose, Bakersfield, San Francisco, Sacramento and as far south as Valencia, north of Los Angeles.

The quake hit at about 4:45 p.m. and was felt in San Francisco as a gentle rolling motion which lasted for about 10 seconds. Other areas reported the duration at up to 20 seconds.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude.

Mike Goodkind, hospital spokesman, said Stanford officials rescinded their decision in McFarlin's case, but he will be the last person to receive a grant with only a $40,000 down payment. Future heart transplant patients will be required to have $125,000 up front, Goodkind said.

McFarlin, 46, has been told by doctors that without a transplant he would have less than a year to live. Because faculty health insurance does not pay for heart transplants, McFarlin was left with dim hopes for a future until his friends and colleagues stepped in.

Gold, a colleague of McFarlin in the History Department, promised McFarlin that somehow the funds for the operation would be raised, and Gold and others went to work to organize the fund-raising effort for "Mac."

"We have done it," Gold said Monday. "Harold will get his heart and Southern Illinois has shown that it has a heart."

I BLEW IT OFF.

If you were wondering what happened to my regular Monday column, well, I just blew it off. It wasn't that I didn't think about it — I did. I thought about it Friday night while I was suckin' suds at some dude's house. I thought about it while I was sitting in the sun at Giant City on Saturday. I thought about it Sunday morning as I was watching cartoons. And I thought about it as I drove to work Sunday morning. But then, I just blew it off.

I do that a lot — always have and probably always will — and gauging from the activity at Morris Library Sunday night I'm pretty sure quite a few of you are in the same blow-off boat.

When faced with the choice of do-it-now or do-it-later, a good portion of us continuously opt for the latter.

I tend to blow off a whole lot of things. Like, every morning I walk from Lewis Park to the Communications Building past the Rec Center and I see these young, healthy, trim and muscular fresh-faced students jogging in and out of that place and I think to myself that someday — someday this semester — I will venture in there and do a little exercise. But then, I buy a pack of Marlboro's, get a Mountain Dew, sit down and read the sports section.

AND AS I'M EATING my 200th Big Mac of the year, I think that I ought to someday alter my diet so it includes something other than burgers, frozen pizzas and Stros. As usual, I blow that off too. Every time I go into my bedroom and see my roommate with his gasmask on I think that I should attempt to see what's at the bottom of that pile of dirty laundry he not-so-affectionately calls "The Great Himalay" but I end up blowing that off too. It smells pretty funky and the mountain grows higher by the day but I can always sleep on the couch if it gets too odoriferous.

The last time I wrote home to the 'rents was to tell them what I'd like for Christmas. Aunt Mammie and Uncle Bobo are probably wondering what I did with the birthday present they sent me over a month ago. (I lost it, thanks.) I've been meaning to get the stereo worked on. The last time my camera worked I was bench warmer on my 8th-grade basketball team. I had to bang on the door of the post office for 15 minutes just to get my graduate school admission form postmarked on the right day. I can't remember the last time I paid a bill that wasn't fire engine red.

OH, AND SCHOOL WORK — that's a whole category in itself. Check this out. In the next two weeks I have one 15-page term paper, one 10-page term paper, two three-page book reports, one eight-page book report, three late assignments (from a previous blow-off blow-out) and four final exams requiring an additional 300 to 400 pages of reading. Whew!

I don't know whether I'll ever grow out of this blow-off stage — some say it's an ailment indigenous to college students but I think I will probably always be this way. But that's O.K. because I've accepted it. Not that I didn't wish I was one of those people who did everything ahead of time and I don't recommend this sort of existence to anyone but, if you're going to be a blow off sort of person, then accept it.

These next few weeks are the worst weeks for blow-offs. It's gonna be rough. But the worst thing a person who has blown off everything up to this point can do is to get aggravated, get discouraged, give up, quit. Accept your sins, drink your gallons of coffee, pull your all-nighters and just do it. Before you know it, everything will be done, summer will be here and you can start looking for a summer job.

If you don't blow that off too.

Reject priorities report;
lacks integrity, ranking

If, as Marvin Kleinau states, the Academic Priorities Committee "made no provision for ranking programs within classifications," I must demand to know where the rankings came from and whose idea it was to forward such "non-scientific" information to the administration. As a consequence of this disclosure one is led to suspect, at the very least, that the published ranking was affected by self-serving factors on the part of whomever conducted the ordering and Academic Priorities Committee report.

Furthermore, the integrity of the entire report generation process is called into question. The only way to restore credibility to the Committee's classifications is to make all information considered by the Committee available to the entire University community. As an alternative, the committee report must be rejected and another committee formed.

Editorial
America at war with its schools

WE WAITED over a year for the obvious news from the National Commission on Excellence in Education — there is little excellence in American education today and that fact threatens America's future.

The commission's report, though offering nothing revolutionary, strongly scolded American education for drifting from the basics and urged more stringent requirements for students, a longer school day, more pay for teachers and a greater emphasis on the basics, such as math, science, social sciences and computer science.

Educators hope the report will be a battle cry to spur new national interest in, and support for, education. The report, in fact, did suggest that "national security" is at stake. "If an unfriendly foreign power had attempted to impose on America the mediocre educational performance that exists today, we might well have viewed it as an act of war."

HOW CURIOUS, or embarrassing, that Americans would impose on themselves what they would not allow a foreign power to force upon them. Educators have every reason to hope that a scathing report and words that "our nation is at risk" will wake America up.

At the same time, educators are disappointed. For a blue-ribbon panel that worked more than a year since being given its mission in 1981 by Education Secretary T.H. Bell, little of substance emerged in the report. Longer school days, more teacher pay and more homework are catchwords that offer little in the way of reform, say some educators.

The report, long on criticism, is light on solutions. The commission is content with asking for more as if that alone will prove better. Teachers fail to see suggestions for what should be done with that extra time in school and how added homework assignments will necessarily benefit students if it isn't meaningful work.

ALSO MISSING in the report is any mention of financing the recommendations. The commission left the question alone for the politicians to answer, and teachers rightly are concerned that they are seeing government stretch education budgets thin, putting teacher jobs on the line, forcing programs to be closed and the talk is of cutback, not expansion.

It's ironic that the report calls for more attention to education at a time when student aid is under fire and President Reagan wants to dismantle the Department of Education, saying education is the primary responsibility of parents and local authorities.

The commission didn't complete its job, but the warning that the report has sounded is welcome to educators and all Americans concerned with educational quality. It is ammunition for their battle for better schools. Politicians may find that in this state of war, there's no place to hide.

Letters

'Be fair to all the students' 'Report let cat out of bag'

I am compelled to respond to Karriem Shari'ati's comments about the status of the International Student Council made on the Senate floor and in the April 29 DE. His comments are wrong and misleading.

First, he is ignorant about the events that are organized by the ISC on this campus. He loosely used the word "discrimination."

Second, his contribution to the general student population on this campus has been minimal.

Third, he does not respect the black African constituency of the ISC.

I remind Karriem that the ISC is a Priority 1 organization on this campus. This was stated a number of times at the RSO's meetings organized by the USO last semester.

Being the Black Affairs Council's coordinator, Karriem should be well informed and very careful about his comments and assumptions. The ISC represents 2,500 international students. I wonder if we are a minority group?

Karriem failed to represent the BAC on the Service Evaluation Task Force. He never showed up at any meetings to evaluate the Student Center fees. I am sure that John Kelly is still waiting to hear from him.

Finally, I would advise Karriem to balance the need for sensationalism and to be fair to all students' benefits regardless of race or color. — Aris Kotsioris, President, International Student Council.

ROTC glamorizes war

I looked at the pictures of SIU-C Army ROTC cadets in the Friday, April 29, issue of the DE, and my first reaction was disgust. In reading the article, I realized that many people are unaware of the influence they can have in creating peace.

Sixty people assaulting Shawnee National Forest? Come on, people, wake up! You have a war consciousness. Let's start talking peace! Let's start living peace!

The ROTC is glamorizing war. The only reason there is war is because people create it. All we have to do is agree to peace and we don't have to focus our energy on M-16 assault rifles and camouflage makeup. I actually believe there are some people who see this and say, wow, I want to experience this.

I'm not a hateful person and am actually pretty passive, but it is time for peace and this starts within each one of us. Each person has enough power within their own being to create peace on this planet. Start loving yourself and others more. Let's spend our money feeding starving children, saving nature and creating a healthy, peaceful environment.

Please, in the name of peace, love and harmony — stop focusing on war. Give peace a chance. — Maryann Horwitz, Junior, Pre-Nursing.

Be kind to animals always

I would like to applaud Kim Klamann's letter in the Friday, April 29 DE. I applaud because I feel the same way she does about the animals in our life. They are precious. Not only that, I feel compassion for her and her boyfriend, for I lost a cat just last week.

Our cat was run over in front of our house. The driver did not stop. But the young man driving behind them did. Whoever you are, thank you, you were an immense help to my parents. This letter is for you too.

Some may feel this makes no sense to miss "just a cat." Well, I cannot speak for Kim, but I know our cat had more love and personality than many people I know. Don't limit the prevention of cruelty to animals to only a week long effort. It should be a 365 day belief. — Barb Oakes, Senior, Commercial Recreation

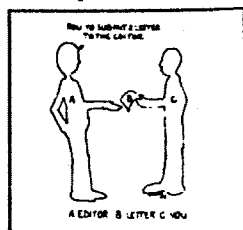

I think the members of this academic community, especially those in the arts and sciences, should not be upset with Professor Kleinau. His decision not to list departments and programs in alphabetical order in the report of the committee he co-chaired with Vice President Guyon, but to list them instead in accord with the general level of support they received in the committee, has done us in the arts and sciences a service rather than a disservice. He has, as the saying goes, let the cat out of the bag.

The administration has so reduced support for arts and sciences that one of its own committees now finds that the arts and sciences, for the most part, can only be ranked on the bottom half of its priority list of departments and programs which are to be maintained. Not a finding, I should think, in which the administration of a university can find any comfort or take any pride.

As always, candor is refreshing and useful. In this case, it has served to alert us in the arts and sciences to the extent of our plight. — Matthew J. Kelly, Associate Professor, Philosophy

Fiddler to play at Fred's

'Pappy' Ray still on the road

By Jeff Wilkinson
Staff Writer

"I've been playing almost since I was born. The Good Lord taught me and with his help I'll be playing till they put me away."

For 66 years, Wade "Pappy" Ray has been playing the fiddle. Burlesque, vaudeville, live radio, movies, television, recording and clubs, Pappy has done it all. He's played with everyone from Sophie Tucker to Chet Atkins to Roy Rogers and he's not about to stop now.

He's still on the road and on Mother's Day, this Sunday at 7 p.m., he'll be performing with one of Southern Illinois' best country bands, Country Lovin', at Fred's Dance Barn. The show will be taped by radio station WHPI for broadcast at a later date.

Pappy started playing at a rather early age. His first fiddle was homemade from a cigar box. At age three he started playing vaudeville and was performing on the burlesque circuit at age five. How did a 3-year-old boy without a show business family get started in vaudeville?

"The news media saw me playing at a picnic and the next day, headlines all over the country read 'Arkansas boy makes music out of a cigar box.' After that I was on my way."

After the burlesque circuit played out, Pappy worked in "cathouses" and carnivals.

"It was a matter of a child prodigy playing for fun turning into a teenager having to make a living."

He managed to scrape a living during those hard times and in 1935 joined a staff of 30 entertainers doing live radio at KMOX in St. Louis. In his ten years there he had his own show as well as appearing on everyone else's before going to Chicago to work in a then-new medium called television.

While performing in Chicago on the National Barn Dance with people like Ernest Tubbs and Hank Snow, he was spotted by Rex Allen and invited to come to California to work in the movies.

"Any time they needed an extra I stepped in. I couldn't tell you how many movies I did, but

Bowie changes style (again) with new LP

By Ray Rinz
Student Writer

On "Let's Dance," David Bowie retains the individuality that made him famous while exploring the world of funk music with the help of co-producer Nile Rogers.

Rodgers, best known as the guitarist of the mid-seventies pop funk group Chic, wrote the top 10 song "Le Freak." With influence like this, it's no wonder "Let's Dance" actually makes people want to "Put on your red shoes and dance the blues" as Bowie says on the title track which describes the mood of the album.

Among the other songs on the album, the first cut "Modern Love" pops things off as a new breed of dance music because it is boppy and danceable but still unconventional. "Modern Love" begins with a basic guitar riff and piano introduction, then features a saxophone which has characteristics of early swing music's danceable solo's.

"China Girl," written by Bowie and fellow new-wave pioneer Iggy Pop, features lead guitarist Stevie Ray Vaughan on brief solos that work well with the song's mellow mood and provide a blues feel.

Album Review

"Let's Dance" exhibits a delightful and danceable perception, due mainly to Rodgers' ability to competently play keen funk guitar riffs. Everything in this song is funky, like the majority of the album.

Bowie also does a rendition of his last hit, "Cat People (Putting Out the Fire)." First released as the title song to last year's "Cat People" which starred Nastassia Kinski, the new rendition is noticeably different. The song has now kept up with the current music styles twice.

When it first came out, it was rock with some heavy guitar. The new version is more rock and roll but the guitar and keyboards are brought out in the production. The first recording was mood orientated, whereas this version is more rhythm oriented. Both versions are reminiscent of Bowie's past work.

Bowie approaches music more as a fine art than just music. This is demonstrated by some of his various styles for which he is known.

One of these styles is his image — he appears to be a very competent person with a mind that views situations well, yet he is also extremely extravagant and sophisticated in his appearance and lifestyle. Bowie's music is pure rock and roll, yet he keeps up with current music trends. His view on music appears to be that funk and dancing all night are "cool".

Bowie's "Scary Monsters," which came out in 1980, was into the new wave influence of music. Its rhythms were progressive and driving, setting up a pace that made a person feel like dancing, as demonstrated by the album's hit single, "Fashion." His lifestyle then was very shy and secluded from society.

On "Let's Dance" Bowie appears to be concentrating more on his vocal abilities, and does not play any of the instrumental parts.

He appears confident to let Rodgers provide a funky, contemporary sound.

if you ever see a fiddle player in an old Roy Rogers or Randolph Scott movie, it's probably me."

During those early days in California, Pappy said he did his best work.

"I think people like myself, Jim Reeves, Bob Wills and Hank Thompson were really doing good things then. Country music hadn't changed so much. It was smoother, not as rowdy. I think it was better then."

In 1961, according to Pappy, country music changed. He left California for Nashville to record and do television.

"Country music changed when Elvis Presley became popular. Everything turned to rockabilly and I just don't think it is as musically good as the older country music. People weren't playing as well as they should. They were just working for money and I don't like that."

Pappy worked in Nashville until he contracted cancer. Under doctor's orders he retired to Sparta, Illinois, his wife's home town, until he received a clean bill of health. Two years ago, Pappy returned to the road.

"Clubs are my favorite medium of all. I've worked in everything, but nothing beats the feedback you receive from a live audience. It's the applause. I work for."

"Sure, being on the road is tough if you're 66 years old. But I know all the shortcuts. And the younger kids help me out. They carry in my equipment and help anyway they can."

After a lifetime in country music, Pappy still savors the old days, but is confident and enthusiastic about the future of country music.

"There's good and there's bad. That's always been true. If musicians play as well as they can and try to be progressive, then country music will keep on prospering. The only thing worse than a young musician selling out is an old one that won't change."

Tickets for the Pappy Wade and Country Lovin' show at Fred's Dance Barn are $3.50 for adults, $2 for kids and children 6 and under are free.

PR practice balances ethics on grand scale, professor says

By Jeff Hild
Student Writer

"The first year when you change jobs everything is wonderful — you're really excited because it's all brand new. Then with the end of the newness, you get down to the day-by-day grind of work."

So says Elizabeth Lance, assistant professor in speech communications.

Lance is also head of the public relations specialization and is adviser to the Public Relations Student Society of America's SIUC chapter.

"Public relations is exciting because human nature is exciting," Lance says.

Lance's interest in public relations began through speech activities. In high school and college she participated in forensics and plays.

She received her undergraduate degree in speech and organizational communication. At Purdue University she became interested in interpersonal communication.

Lance says she's fascinated with public relations because of the intrigue she feels in trying to influence people's attitudes.

"It's sort of like being in the front row of a circus right outside the ring and watching all that happens and knowing you had something to do with it. Being that removed you get to analyze, criticize and shape it," she said.

Lance has many career goals she would like to achieve — such as moving up the professional ladder to full professor, on to department head and someday to dean of a college. Along with these goals, she would like to contribute research to the field and become an adviser in scholarly activities. Currently, she has prepared a proposal for a public relations textbook and hopes to write a book on human relations later.

In attempting to achieve these goals, most people would be looking for free time to sit down and relax, but this one-time marathon participant still manages to get in 35-miles of jogging a week.

"I'm really slow, but very determined," she says.

She also spends her free-time in what she calls "civilizing" her 25-year-old "house with character".

At present, one of Lance's main academic objectives is to get the public relations specialization accredited. So far there are only 24 accredited programs nationwide.

"Accreditation gives national recognition that our program meets certain standards," Lance says.

These standards include having an expert faculty with the academic qualifications, satisfactory equipment and facilities and well-rounded courses.

Lance also believes that accreditation will reflect favorably on graduating students in the job market.

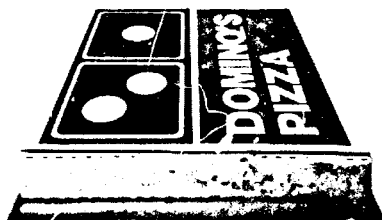

As for the prospective graduate, Lance noted Department of Labor and Statistics show that in the public relations industry, jobs will grow at a rate of 25 percent in the next 10 years.

"The Public Relations Society of America is saying that this is a growth industry because the service industry itself is growing," she said. "It's providing services that are getting people jobs, and this is a specialized service. Communicating is a skill that not everybody can perform."

'King of Comedy' lacks real humor

By Duane Schombert
Staff Writer

Movie Review

People will either love or hate "The King of Comedy."

If a person is intrigued by show business, kidnapping and kooky characters, then he will admire director Martin Scorsese's new film starring Robert DeNiro and Jerry Lewis.

On the other hand, if a person is turned off by glossy Hollywood personalities, feeble attempts at dealing with relevant social issues and one-dimensional characters, then a person is likely to hate "The King of Comedy."

I hated "The King of Comedy."

But I didn't hate the film because I'm not interested in show business, social issues or the film's characters. I disliked the film because of the manner in which Scorsese presented these things. He apparently was more interested in producing a vehicle for DeNiro and Lewis to co-star in than in the overall excellence of the film.

As a result, "The King of Comedy" is a pompous, over-worked film about a man's obsession to be a successful stand-up comic.

DeNiro portrays Rupert Pupkin, a desolate 34-year-old man who desperately tries to get a Johnny Carson-type talk show host named Jerry to book him on his show.

"Call my secretary," Jerry tells Pupkin, so Pupkin keeps going to his office but he continually encounters difficulties in getting past the receptionist's office. He even ventures out to Jerry's home with the intention of spending the weekend. Both pursuits are disasters.

Determined to be a star, Pupkin makes one last attempt at getting on Jerry's show. And what a courageous attempt it is. He and his side-kick Marsha, played with exquisite energy and spunk by Sandra Bernhard, kidnap Jerry with an unloaded gun.

Jerry is taped to a chair in Marsha's house, his producer is called and Pupkin's states his demand. Jerry will be returned only if he can perform on Jerry's talk show.

So, Pupkin makes an effort at stardom while Marsha tries to seduce Jerry.

With "The King of Comedy," Scorsese tries to make a statement on television, a man's obsession to be a star and how our society glorifies criminals.

It is a weak effort from the distinguished director who made such outstanding films as "Taxi Driver," "New York, New York" and "Raging Bull," all of which starred DeNiro.

DeNiro possesses the exuberant hypertension and energy necessary to make his character believable. Lewis, absent from the screen for too long, makes an adequate screen comeback as the rigid talk show host with greased hair and slick talk.

However, it is not DeNiro or Lewis who reign in "The King of Comedy." Rather it is Bernhard, the flamboyant, large-nosed, and obnoxious Marsha who idolizes Jerry so much that she desires to make love to him on the dining room table after he is kidnapped.

Bernhard is a lively and bizarre actress who excels in presenting the nervous qualities of a disillusioned rich girl who longs to love and be loved.

While Scorsese does have a flair for comic excellence as he proved with the film "Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore" starring Ellen Burstyn, his attempt at sarcasm, humor and social relevance fail miserably in "The King of Comedy," so far, the year's most disappointing film.

Dedicated woman honored

Keith Cornelius
Student Writer

A Carbondale woman has been honored for her dedication to providing needed services to children and for increasing public awareness about the needs of families in Southern Illinois.

Miriam Klimstra, of Carbondale, was honored recently with the Child Advocate Award sponsored by the Child Development Laboratory Advisory Council in conjunction with the Human Resources Conference.

According to Jo Ann Nelson, professor of human development, nominees are judged for their service in protecting the rights and needs of children and families and effectively educating the public, professionals and parents about growth and development of children.

In 1982, Klimstra retired from the Illinois Department of Child and Family Services, after 17 years of service. While there, she was licensing coordinator for 27 counties and was responsible for inspecting child care centers, foster homes, child care institutions and child welfare agencies for compliance with state law and standards. She also worked to ensure that proper nurturing environments were developed for children from birth to 18.

Klimstra has served as a consultant for the SIU-C Head Start Health Advisory Committee, SIU Head Start Policy Council and John A. Logan Child Lab School Curriculum Advisory Committee.

To help keep the university community up to date on legislative activity over the summer, the League of Women Voters of Illinois — the state organization in Springfield — provides a legislative hotline toll-free number, 1-800-252-8959. The hotline answers questions about the status of a pending bill, what issues a bill involves

The article should have read that the resolution calls for the evacuation of Israeli settlers in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, freeze of construction and both the permanent and unconditional transfer of ownership of their settlements there to the Palestinians who are currently living in the West Bank and Gaza Strip according to the 1967 boundaries. It also calls for the amending of the Palestinian National Charter to where the sovereign state of Israel's right to exist is recognized as long as the sovereign state of Israel recognizes the right of a sovereign Palestinian state to exist in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

In the Monday Daily Egyptian, the story headlined "Cardboard craft crews keep fun afloat" incorrectly reported that the boat operated by Arran Addington came in fourth place in the Class II race. Addington placed fifth. A boat sponsored by the Southern Illinois Central Research Shop placed fourth in the Class II race.

Klam said the League decided the name at its first convention, but now men are members.

"At that time women didn't even consider men, because men didn't consider them. Women weren't allowed to go into many restaurants alone, and they weren't included in many men's groups," she said.

There are about six men in the Carbondale chapter. The League was formed because some felt that women didn't know how to use their right to vote.

"So they needed help in information and registering," Klam said. "They needed help in knowing who the candidates were, and what the issues were."

During the two elections after the right to vote was extended to women, the voter turn-out percentage was about the same among men and women.

"There was a small voter turn-out from everybody," Klam said, and so "the league decided to change its priorities from focusing on women to helping the public know more about the electoral process."

Baseball season flounders on with conference finale in sight

By Dan Devise
Associate Sports Editor

Rain — it's become a bad word for the Saluki baseball team.

"There's a four-letter word that describes our season," said coach Itchy Jones. "W — e — t."

He laughed. "Or should that be wetter?"

About all the Saluki coach can do in the face of the bad weather is to try and laugh it off. Nothing else has changed since the the Salukis played last — almost a full week ago. On Monday the team worked out in a slight drizzle.

SIU-C almost always wins at least 30 games. This year, they've been hard pressed just to play that many contests. Heading into a doubleheader Tuesday against SIU-Edwardsville, the SIU-C was 18-15.

The latest rainout (a four-game weekend series against Indiana State was swamped) means that the Salukis will have to get their pitching staff in order against SIU-E, and then win three of four against Bradley this weekend. Anything less than that and the Salukis will be fortunate to slip into the Missouri Valley Conference playoffs.

Two of the four teams from the MVC Eastern Division will make post-season play. Indiana State, at 3-1 in conference is almost a sure thing, and SIU-C (2-2) and Illinois State (3-3) will battle for the second spot. Bradley (2-4) is already in trouble and will have to take three games from the Salukis this weekend. Bradley was playing Illinois State in a two-night doubleheader Monday.

The SIU-C-Indiana State series will not be made up unless it has a direct bearing on the final standings, according to MVC officials.

"The only way they'll play each other is if they tie for a position," said Jeff Hurd, MVC director of Public Relations. "All four games will definitely not be made up."

Hurd said that a one-game playoff next Tuesday would be scheduled if a tie needed to be broken.

"That's an MVC decision," said Jones, who is concentrating mainly on this weekend's Bradley series. Against SIU-C the Salukis will concentrate on getting their underworked hurlers sharp for the weekend.

"We're going to split it up," said assistant coach Jerry Green, who added that the staff's fourth starting position was still a toss-up between lefthander Tom Caulfield and junior Rich Koch.

Jones said that Richard Ellis, Jay Bellissimo, Gary Bockhorn and Koch would all pitch Tuesday.

SIU-C will need good pitching performances to beat SIU-C, a Division 2 ball club that has used explosive hitting and steady defense to run up a 24-10 record.

Kent Taylor and Jim Scheibal (5-2 and 1.95), will start games, provided of course that rain doesn't wipe them out.

Jones has a feeling that that will happen. He doesn't think the Salukis will play for a long time.

"Maybe 1987," he said.

Cyclist excels in Iowa; team continues success

Two rides by Lynn Irons highlighted another excellent weekend of cycling by the SIU-C Phoenix Cycling Team. Irons won the Eagle Point Critterium in Dubuque and then placed fifth in the Old Capitol Critterium at Iowa City.

"With a lap to go I just put pedal to metal and got off by myself," said Irons of his Dubuque win. "I stood up in my biggest gear but the pack almost caught me at the line. I was totally wasted at the finish."

At Iowa City Irons crashed midway through the race and was unable to chase down the leaders.

"Some guy from Raleigh fell in front of me and I ran over his neck," he said. "It definitely slowed me down."

In other Iowa results, Mick Letourneux captured 15th at Dubuque, while Dave Brown finished second in a lower classification.

At St. Louis team members John and Linda Elgart took third and first in the men's and women's divisions of the May Day Classic Stage Race.

The race was a combination of two road stages and a time trial held along the Missouri River west of St. Louis. It featured rain, steep hills, flooded roads, twisting descents, gravel and a howling wind.

"When you spread those conditions over 180 miles of racing, you have a recipe for exhaustion," said Linda Elgart. "I had to race with the men's field and I died on the hills, but luckily I was able to catch," added the former Illinois Women's Time Trial Champion. She finished 16th in the men's lower classification.

In the men's upper category John Elgart captured third by finishing third in both road stages as part of the same three man break.

"The hills were a slugfest. That's where we got away," he said. Elgart finished three minutes behind the winner and eight minutes ahead of fourth place.

In other St. Louis action, lower division riders Cyril Friend was ninth, Curth Martel 10th, Bob Grant 12th, and Jesse Piron 17th.

Cagers land blue-chip recruits

By Brian Higgins
Staff Writer

Ann Kattreh, Tamie Saders, Cozette Wallace and Marialice Jenkins may not exactly be household names on campus.

Yet, as assistant basketball coach Julie Beck puts it, "if all of the kids can average as many points on the floor as they did on their ACT, we'll be all right."

The four high school seniors have been signed to national letters of intent, thanks to the recruiting efforts of Beck and head coach Cindy Scott. Scott and Beck describe the foursome as excellent students, but if they play as well in the collegiate ranks as they did on the prep circuit, it'll be roundball that earns them their fame.

Kattreh heads the blue-chip roster. The two-time All-State from Kohler High in Kohler, Wis., averaged 23.7 points and 10.3 rebounds an outing, including 686 points in her final year. Overall, the 5-10 guard-forward netted 1,993 points while leading her club to a 55-12 mark in four seasons, including the Class C state championship this season. Kattreh turned down offers from Wichita State and Iowa State, and shunned possible offers from Minnesota, Bradley, Texas, Louisville and Florida State.

"Ann is an immensely talented athlete who could step right in as a starter next season," Beck said. "She's a tremendous offensive threat who could play guard or forward. She has the potential to be one of the best I've recruited in six years at Southern."

Sanders, a 6-2 center from Hannibal, Mo., scored at a 13.7 point clip in her career at Hannibal High. Last season she netted 19.2 points per contest, while leading her squad to a 19-9 record and a berth in the state quarter-finals. Sanders declined offers from Oklahoma State, Central Missouri, Illinois and Missouri-St. Louis. Other schools showing interest included Missouri, Nebraska, Michigan and Bradley.

"Tamie is a power player who will intimidate down low," Beck said. "She will give us some needed depth at the post position. She has a nice medium-range shooting touch, is an excellent rebounder and the kind of outlet passer who will strengthen our break."

Wallace was an All-District, All-Regional and All-Midstate player during her career at Lawrenceburg High in the Nashville, Tenn., area.

Wallace, a 6-1 forward, is an excellent outside shot, according to Scott and Beck, and adds tremendous quickness and leaping ability to the Salukis' roster. She averaged 17.6 points a contest while pulling down 8.6 rebounds during high school.

Wallace was also recruited by UT-Chatanooga and Middle Tennessee.

"Cozette's quickness and leaping ability are solid assets," Beck noted. "She is a player with a quick first step who will become more aggressive in time. She should also develop into one of the team's top board-workers."

Jenkins, the last player inked by Scott, is a 5-7 point guard from Fordville, Ky. Jenkins was the second-leading all-time scorer in Kentucky history, boy's and girl's, hitting for 3,266 points. She averaged 25 points, eight rebounds and six steals during her senior season. Jenkins, a straight A student who will graduate first in her class this summer, was recruited by some 40 universities.

"Marialice is a coach's dream for point guard because she's so smart," the Saluki mentor said. "She'll be a coach on the floor. She is a good shooter, a great passer and has keen court awareness. She could start for us as freshman."

"We're very pleased with our recruiting year," Scott continued. "We hope to see each and every one of them competing for a starting job. We've done the best job we can do as far as meshing them with what we've got now."

Salukis ink ace hurler, two others

By Brian Higgins
Staff Writer

Deanne Styx will be the first real strikeout pitcher the Saluki softball squad has had in 15 years. And the recently-signed senior from Rock Island has the credentials to back that statement up.

Styx was one of three players signed by Brechtelsbauer. Joining her will be Lake Michigan College transfer Kathy Preske and prep Darci Sue Rice of Milan.

Styx compiled a 42-9 record last summer in American Softball Association play. That statistic, according to Brechtelsbauer, is more indicative of her true potential than her high school stats, since ASA encompasses a higher caliber of competition than the prep circuit. The 60 m.p.h. fastballer helped her squad to an ASA regional championship in doing so. In her junior season at Rock Island High, Styx struck out 114 batters in ten games, or more than one out of every two batters she faced.

"She has pitched very well against high-caliber opponents," Brechtelsbauer said. "Deanne has played against at least a dozen or so individuals I can think of offhand who are now playing for winning university teams."

Styx chose SIU-C over Ball

State, Florida State, Western Illinois, Oklahoma State, Creighton, Monmouth, Northern Illinois and Illinois State.

Styx's ASA teammate, Rice, carried an impressive .364 batting average over two summer league seasons. Her experience has been limited to summer play, however, because her high school does not carry the sport. Rice can play any position.

Preske is another versatile signee. As an infielder at Lake Michigan, she led her club to second- and third-place finishes at nationals while batting over .400.

Teammates striving together for goals

By George Pappas
Student Writer

Pablo Restrepo and Carlos Henao have been trying to make Colombia's national swim team since 1975. Their persistence and hard work finally paid off.

Restrepo and Henao have already made Colombia's 1984 Olympic Swimming Team. Restrepo has qualified for the team in the 100- and 200-meter breaststroke and Henao in the 100-meter backstroke.

"Our goals now," both swimmers said, "are to be the best in the world and to have our country recognized as a top swim team."

Restrepo, a 6-0, 172-pound senior in mechanical engineering, was born on May 26, 1960 in Medellin, Colombia. His time of 1:53.9 in the 100-meter breaststroke and 2:19.4 in the 200-meter breaststroke is not only the best time in Colombia, but tops in Central and South America. He placed fourth in the 100-meter breaststroke at the U.S. Swimming Championships in Indianapolis three weeks ago and placed sixth and fifth in the 100- and 200-meter breaststroke, respectively, at the World Championships held in Ecuador last summer. He will compete in the Pan-American Games in Caracas, Venezuela this summer.

"The Pan-Ams will be only a test for me," Restrepo said. "I just want to see how I place so I can set my goals for the Olympics. I already know a few things I have to work on."

On the road to '84

Restrepo said he has major problems with his turns and his starts. He said he will work on getting his legs stronger which will help him with his start but his turns will take a lot of practice.

Restrepo is four seconds off of the world record time in the 100-meter.

"I always aim higher than my time," Restrepo said. "If I work hard enough and put special training in my turns, I could come close to that record."

Henao is a 5-10, 160-pound junior in electrical engineering who will be celebrating his 21st birthday Wednesday. He holds a Colombian record in the 100-meter backstroke with his time of 51.4 seconds. Along with the backstroke event, he also swims for the Salukis in the 100- and 200-yard freestyle and swims the second leg in the 200-yard individual medley. But his main concern is the backstroke event.

"I'm going to concentrate mainly on backstroke," Henao said, "because my best chance to contribute to Colombia will be in that event."

Henao and Restrepo met in Colombia in 1975 when they both tried out for the national team. Both swimmers came to SIU-C on scholarship but didn't know they were in the same school until the first day of practice in Henao's freshman year. Restrepo had already been at SIU-C for a year.

"I thought it was quite a coincidence," Restrepo said. "And now we made the Olympic team together. That's great."

Both said they will pursue their career in Colombia when they finish school. Both also agree that the United States is the best country to play sports and get an education after high school.

"In Colombia," Henao said, "only one-fifth of the people applying for the University get in, and those who get in, spend the next three or four years studying. The universities in Colombia don't offer sports. But in the United States, anyone can go to college and the universities here prefer that you play baseball or swim or excel in some sport."

Carlos Henao

When a person doesn't get accepted to the University in Colombia, he must go out and find a job, Restrepo said. There are many people who want to continue on with school, but can't.

Both agree that coming to SIU-C has improved their swimming. Their coach, Bob Steele, has contributed a lot to their swimming skills.

"I've bettered my 100-meter time by three seconds," Restrepo said, "and I've improved my 200-meter by eight seconds. Coach Steele always pointed out my mistakes and taught me the right way."

Henao agreed, saying "Coach

Steele is one of the best coaches I have ever had."

Steele said he knows Restrepo and Henao will be the major contributors to the Colombian swim team.

"They'll be the nucleus of the team," Steele said, "and they're training with that in mind."

Henao and Restrepo will go home in a few weeks to see their families and then return to Carbondale for summer school. They will swim three to four hours a day training for the Pan-American Games. Henao will be on the swim team with the Salukis next year, but Restrepo will graduate in December.

Softballers seeded 4th in first GCAC tourney

By Brian Higgins
Staff Writer

Or the way down the originally chartered course to the Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference tournament, the Saluki softballers found that the long and winding road to their final destiny wasn't as long, but was certainly a lot wetter than anticipated.

And alas they have arrived. Not with the 40-some odd games under their belts that the 1983 schedule had led them to believe they were to participate in, but rather with a paltry 31 contests, 17 of them wins, to fall back on. The other dozen or so slipped into the storm sewers of the Midwest with the April rains that tormented the playing fields.

Thursday will kick off the first annual GCAC championships, held in Macomb this year. Despite a slump which has seen the Salukis drop eight of their last twelve games, conference coaches have seeded SIU-C fourth in the 10-team, double-elimination tournament.

"I was a little surprised we were seeded that high," Coach Kay Brechtelsbauer said. "I think the players were too. I think it's primarily because we were a little harder on ourselves. We've played some tough teams. But I think I more realistically expected us to be fifth or sixth."

But, as Brechtelsbauer is quick to point out, seedings mean very little in double-elimination play, "because you'll eventually have to play everyone."

The single preliminary contest pits ninth-seeded Bradley (11-8, 0-2 in conference play with two games remaining) against cellar-seed Wichita State (7-17, 0-1, two games remaining). The winner of that game will face top-seeded Southwest Missouri.

State (23-8, 4-0) in the first round.

Other first round action includes second-seeded Northern Iowa (31-13, 4-0, two games remaining) against seventh-seeded Indiana State (22-20, 2-6), Eastern Illinois (16-8, 6-4), the tourney's No. 3 seed, opens against sixth-seeded Western Illinois (14-14, 3-4, two games remaining). The fourth-seeded Salukis (17-14, 2-3) will square off against arch-rival Illinois State (13-14, 2-3), seeded fifth.

SIU-C is coming off a 1-3 performance at the Indiana Invitational this past weekend, and will bring a three-game losing streak to Macomb. Inclement weather, however, has put as much of a dent in the Salukis schedule as any opponent. Mother Nature doesn't discriminate, though, and only Northern Iowa and Indiana State were spared a sparse season, having stockpiled games before the season began. Thus Brechtelsbauer believes that the tourney will be anybody's ball game, and, she added, her Salukis are right where they ought to be.

"We'd like to have a few more wins under our belt, but I think we're about where we should be. I think we've come a long way," Brechtelsbauer said, referring to the turn-around from last season's 15-24 mark. "I think the fourth seed is indicative of that."

The Saluki's injury situation improved dramatically over the weekend. Third baseman Diane Broe and shortstop Tonya Lindsey, both suffering from knee injuries, returned to action at Indiana. But, as Brechtelsbauer noted, Lindsey is still not 100 percent. Second baseman Susan Jones has been lost for the season (broken foot), and speedster Lisa Cucchi remains questionable with a knee injury.

Laura Michalek may have had no where to go during a game at SIU-C's last home stand, but she broke through during a game this weekend to score her second try of the season.

Ruggers end season with good play

By JoAnn Marciszewski
Sports Editor

A short-handed women's rugby club fought to a 2-2 record and a third-place tournament finish as it closed out its season in Ames, Iowa, this weekend.

A total team effort contributed to SIU-C's 34-0 drubbing of University of Milwaukee in its opening match on Saturday. The club did not have much time to enjoy that victory as it went right into another game, losing to Michigan State University 16-4.

The ruggers were scheduled for yet another game on Saturday, but Ohio State forfeited after being unable to field enough players for a game.

On Sunday, the club evened its tournament win-loss mark in a 14-6 loss to the tournament host and champion Iowa.

The SIU-C club looked good all weekend, according to player Becky Larkin.

"Milwaukee's a new team, but we worked well together," Larkin said of the opener. "There was a lot of support from everyone."

Scoring in the first game came from several sources, as Tammi Fortney, Laura Michalek, Maria Erickson, Brenda Schumacher and Barb Covoto all contributed.

The remaining games were hard-fought ones, Larkin said. Schumacher got the lone try against Michigan State and Larkin and Erickson scored against Iowa, the only time the champion team was scored against.

SIU-C brought only 13 players to the tournament and that number began dwindling during the games, according to Larkin. Debbie Paisley was hurt early in the tournament, and Larkin and Covoto had to come out during the final game because of injuries.

"The Iowa game was a tough one, everyone was playing really hard," she said.

Larkin said the club, which finished the season at 6-5, improved a lot since the fall season.
