Administrators to aid USG elections

By Casey Hampton
General Assignment Writer

The USG election commissioner has cut a deal with the Senate that will allow the elections to continue today under his control but with the assistance of administrators.

Undergraduate Student Government President Jack Sullivan convened an emergency Senate meeting Friday to recommend the impeachment of the election commission for unconstitutionally attempting to eliminate candidates from the election.

Election Commissioner Yusuf Haqq along with his deputy commissioner, Willem Bouwer, yanked Student Party and Independent presidential and vice-presidential candidates off the ballot on the eve of elections last week for allegedly violating campaign expenditure by-laws.

University administrators declared the commission's act unconstitutional and seized the elections April 29.

Haqq pleaded his case before the Senate Friday to no avail, and when asked if he would abide by the decision of the Campus Judicial Board of Governance to put back on the ballot Student Party candidates, he simply responded, "Hell no."

Student Party president, vice president reinstated on ballot by judicial board

By Casey Hampton
General Assignment Writer

The campus judicial board voted Thursday to reinstate Student Party presidential and vice presidential candidates pulled from the student election ballots, but the USG election commissioner is declaring the board's decision unconstitutional.

The Undergraduate Student Government election commission removed from the ballot last Tuesday Student Party presidential candidate Brad Cole for violating campaign expenditure by-laws, automatically removing his running mate, Joe Hill.

The election commission based its decision on a receipt showing Cole ordered and paid $200 for Student Party T-shirts.

Cole said the senatorial candidates paid him the money to pay for the T-shirts and went before the Campus Judicial Board of Governance last week to clarify the allegations against the legitimacy of the Student Party candidates.

The judicial board unanimously decided in his favor.

Patricia Heibner, deputy chief justice of the judicial board, said the decision was based upon the election commission's own evidence.

Hope surfaces from ashes left from LA rioting

LOS ANGELES—Los Angeles awoke this weekend from a horrific three-day ordeal with sunny skies replacing plumes of smoke and expressions of hope—even optimism—finally surfacing in its riot-torn streets.

Carbondale pastor says rioting wrong way to express emotion in troubled times

By Teri Lynn Carlock
City Writer

A Carbondale pastor said the riots resulting from the Rodney King verdict are not an issue of color, it is about people dealing with their feelings.

The Rev. Paul Hicks, pastor at the Mardale Baptist Church, said he brought the circumstances of the incident to the attention of his congregation Sunday, but the members did not express the right or wrong of the people's reactions.

"We realized it was something we all needed to think about and had a word of prayer," he said. "But we did not discuss whether the entire incident was right or wrong."

Preconceived ideas about the jury's decision is one cause of the rioting, Hicks said.

"Because of the video tape, people are reacting to what appeared to be an injustice—it looked as if there was excessive force and violence used," he said. "But because I wasn't a juror, something may have happened in the courtroom to change the jurors' minds that I don't know about."

People need to restrain themselves rather than show their feelings in a violent way, Hicks said.

"Anger is normal, but it also requires discipline—that's exactly what we're saying the police used on King, but then we're breaking the same principle," he said. "Rather than display anger, people need to deal with it."

Members of society need to look into their hearts and minds and stop taking their anger out on each other, Hicks said.

"Now instead of having one person badly beaten, we have many," he said. "The answer is out there if people are willing to search for it."

Rev. Benjamin Chavis Jr., of the United Church of Christ in Cleveland, Ohio, said his congregation condemns the failure of the court system to convict the police officers involved in the King

Sports Writer

The baseball Salukis' post-season hopes were put in jeopardy as Wichita State completed a three-victory sweep of the Dawggs Sunday.

A 13-2 setback dropped SIUC to sixth place in the Missouri Valley Conference with three contests remaining. Only the top six MVC finishers in the regular season are invited to the Valley tournament

May 13 to 15 in Wichita, Kan.

The Shockers scored early and often in the Sunday game, roughing up starter Bobby Richardson, who was chased from the game with one out in the second inning after giving up three runs on five hits and a walk.

Leading 1-0 in the second, the Shockers opened the inning with a single from first baseman Jason White and a walk to second baseman Trent Babcock.

Center fielder Richie Taylor moved the runners to second and third with a groundout to Richardson, then scored three on consecutive singles by shortstop Chris Wimmer, designated hitter Carl Hall and right fielder Todd Dreifort.

The Dawggs were never in the contest, scoring both of their runs in the top of the ninth inning. Third baseman Brian Heather led off with his sixth home run of the season, and three consecutive two-out singles plated SIUC first baseman Darrin Barton with the game's final run.

In the first game of the weekend series on Friday, Saluki starter Mike Van Gilder fell to 5-7 on the season, losing 8-4 in a complete game effort.

Wichita State's Shane Dennis gained the victory, giving up four runs on six hits through 5 1/3 innings. Dennis is 11-2 on the season.

Colts lineman shot, killed in traffic dispute

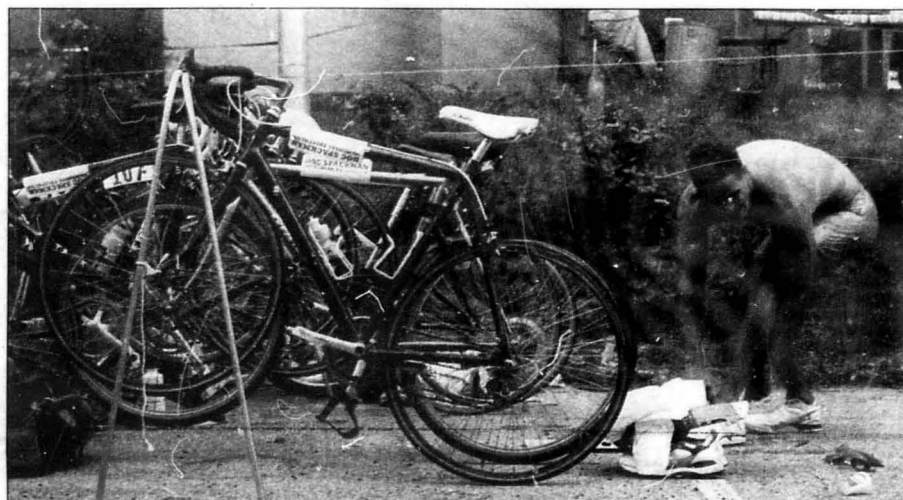

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Shane Curry of the Indianapolis Colts was shot to death in his car by a 15-year-old boy Sunday after a petty traffic dispute escalated to gunfire.

Police said the 24-year-old defensive end was arguing with a group of people over a car blocking the entrance to the Armada Inn hotel. The boy fired a gun from a car window, striking Curry in the temple. Curry, on a visit to his hometown, was rushed to University Hospital, where he died about 1 a.m.

Police have the boy in custody and charged him with felonious assault. The identity of the boy was not released.

Jim Isray, the Colts' president and general manager, said in a statement the club is "shocked and saddened to learn of the unfortunate incident. Our only thoughts and concern are for the well-being of Curry's family."

Curry, 6-foot-5 and 270 pounds, completed his rookie year last season, appearing in nine games as a reserve. He played college ball at Miami and was a second-round draft pick in 1991, the 40th selection of the draft.

Softball Salukis lose three of four games

By Norma Wilke
Sports Writer

After a disappointing Gateway Conference season the SIUC softball team must focus on the conference tournament, said coach Kay Brechtelsbauer.

The Salukis, 6-9-1, ended their regular season Saturday when first place Southwes Missouri State, 14-4, swept SIUC in a doubleheader. SIUC split a doubleheader with second seeded Wichita State Friday.

Coach: SIUC not counted out in Gateway tourney

Brechtelsbauer said the win over WSU tells the other teams that Southern Illinois still is in the running for the conference tournament, but the sweep by SMSU did not help the team's confidence.

"Sometimes the seasons don't work out the way you hoped it would," Brechtelsbauer said. "Once we get to the conference tournament, it's a whole different ballgame."

Pairings for the conference tournament, which begins Thursday, were announced late Sunday.

The Saluki pitching squad may not be at full force in the conference tournament. Junior all-conference hurler Angie Mick has a strain in her arm and has not pitched in the last nine games.

Brechtelsbauer said Mick should be able to at least pitch in relief, but at this point she is not sure of Mick's status.

"When you take a pitcher of Angie Mick's caliber out of the lineup, who was all-conference last year, it does affect the program," Brechtelsbauer said. "If we get the job done defensively and offensively, I know (senior) Dede (Darnell) and (freshman) Shelly (Laine) can get us through that tournament. It would be much nicer if we had Angie there too strong and ready to go."

In Game One against SMSU, the Salukis lost 6-0. The Bears scored on an error in the fifth inning, and then scored five runs in the seventh to solidify the win.

SMSU catcher Recca Clark had an RBI single, and shortstop Patty Porter had a two-run double. Porter scored on an error in right field, and right fielder Emily Morgan came home on a single by third sacker Mary Mudry.

Despite a .500 batting performance by freshman designated hitter Andrea Pierson, the Salukis came

Women golfers set to battle for final crown in Gateway

By Karyn Viverito
Sports Writer

The SIUC women golfers hope 1992 is their year as they take their clubs to Wichita, Kan., to compete for the Gateway Conference title today and Tuesday.

It is the 10th and final year of the Gateway Conference and with a Saluki win, they will have the winningest program in the history of the league.

The Salukis hope to have history on their side, as SIUC has won every even numbered year the championship has been contested.

With wins in 1984, '86, '88 and '90,

Gina Giaccone

Anne Childress

coach Diane Daugherty said the team hopes to run out the string in '92.

The Salukis have improved and are peaking at the right time after having a disappointing fall season, Daugherty said.

Allison holds on to win second leg of Big Four TALLADEGA, Ala. (UPI) — Davey Allison held off a last-lap battle with Bill Elliott and Dale Earnhardt to win Sunday's Winston 500 NASCAR race.

By sweeping the first two races of NASCAR's Big Four events, Allison is in position to win the Winston million, a $1 million bonus from series sponsor R.J. Reynolds.

Allison won the Daytona 500 on Feb. 16 and if he wins either the May 24 Coca-Cola 600 at Charlotte Motor Speedway or the Sept. 6 Mountain Dew Southern 500, he will join Bill Elliott as the only drivers in NASCAR history to win the bonus. Elliott won it in 1985.

"It was anybody's race all day long," Allison said. "When the GM (General Motors) cars hooked up with the Fords, we could rip off some good laps. But it was every man for himself when that checkered flag falls.

"I'm in a great position to win the Winston Million, but they also pay $1 million for winning the Winston Cup title. I'm in a great position right now."

Allison increased his lead in the Winston Cup points race, now leading Elliott by 67 points.

The driver from nearby Hueytown, Ala., led five times for 110 laps, including the final 71. He finished two car-lengths ahead of Elliott and averaged 157.608 miles an hour around the 2.66-mile Talladega YUGOSLAV ARMY RELEASES BOSNIA LEADER — Bosnia-Herzegovina President Alija Izetbegovic was exchanged for an army general Sunday but the fragile agreement that achieved his release was in danger of collapse, threatening renewed attacks on the capital by the Serb-led Yugoslav military. The republic's Muslim Slav and Croatian Territorial Defense refused to let about 500 Yugoslav army soldiers accompany Col. Gen. Milutin Kukanjac when he left his headquarters.

ASSAULT LAUNCHED ON ARMENIAN FORCES — Azerbaijani forces launched a land attack late Sunday against the Armenia center of the disputed Nagorno-Karabakh enclave in what appears to be a serious escalation of the protracted conflict. Russian news agencies reported. A ground assault would represent a dangerous new turn in the undeclared war that until now has been waged mostly with back-and-forth shelling between Armenian and Azerbaijani villages.

U.S. LIFTS ARMS EMBARGO ON LEBANON — The United States has decided to lift an arms embargo imposed on Lebanon since 1984, sources in the Lebanese Defense Ministry said Sunday. The decision was relayed by U.S. Ambassador to Lebanon Ryan Crocker to Lebanese Defense Minister Michel Murr during a meeting early last week. Lebanese and U.S. officials are discussing details of a deal to ship to Lebanon some of the weapons bought by President Amin Gemayel.

MEXICAN OIL COMPANY CONTINUES CLEAN-UP — Workers from Mexico's state-owned oil company Sunday continued to extract thousands of gallons of gasoline from the Guadalajara drainage system 11 days after an explosion that killed nearly 200 persons. Meanwhile, at least three other cities reported evacuations because of similar gasoline leaks near storage areas owned by Petroleos Mexicanos, or Pemex, Mexico's official news agency Notimex said.

The study was done by the National Victim Center, and the Crime Victims Research and Treatment Center at the Medical University of South Carolina. In the National Women's Study there were more than 683,000 rapes of adult women in 1990, while the FBI Uniform Crime Report reported 102,560.

FEAR OF CHOLERA REACHES TEXAS — Health officials concerned about the discovery of two cholera cases within one week are urging impoverished residents without sanitation along the U.S.-Mexico border to prevent an outbreak by boiling their drinking water. The two cases treated in Brownsville, Texas, were apparently brought into the United States from Mexico. A cholera epidemic has killed over 4,800 people in Latin America since last May.

EXCESS RADIATION REPORTED AT PLANTS — Workers at Commonwealth Edison's Zion nuclear power plant were contaminated by radioactivity 567 times in 1990—more than 10 times the industry average, according to a Chicago Sun-Times report published Sunday. CITY TO DISTRIBUTE CONDOMS TO STUDENTS — Cook County officials plan to give out free condoms in high schools as part of a new program to combat AIDS. County board President Richard J. Alpha Tau Omega and Sigma Kappa's boat begins to sink midway through the race in heat one. Registration for the Great Cardboard Boat Regatta started at 10 a.m. Saturday and the race began at noon on the boat dock of the Campus Lake, above. Professor Richard Archer, coordinator and originator of the Cardboard Boat Regatta, informs spectators of the races' progress. Archer started the Regatta 18 years ago in his design class at SIUC.

Cardboard regatta on Campus Lake attracts bizarre entries

By William Ragan
Entertainment Writer

Fire-breathing dragons, ears of corn and baby blue convertibles sailed on Campus Lake Saturday afternoon as part of the 19th Annual Cardboard Boat Regatta.

Several thousand spectators surrounded the lake to watch the cardboard creations, which ranged from the functional to the bizarre, skim the surface of the water.

"We had more people out there for fun," said Richard Archer, coordinator of the event. "There was a lot more really wild boats."

One of the strange creations, Yukinobu Mogaki's boat, "Godzilla," sprayed smoke out of its lizard mouth.

Mogaki's boat did little more than swim in circles, but he said it definitely caught the crowd's attention.

"Everybody liked it," said Mogaki, a junior in art and design from Chiba, Japan. "Most people thought it was cool."

Chi Alpha and Calvary Campus Church's "Noah's Ark" won the Titanic award for the most spectacular sinking. The boat, weighed down by heavy cardboard animals, swayed back and forth, drawing moans from the crowd, until it finally drowned in the waters of Campus Lake.

Eric Yopp was making last minute changes to his paddle boat as the first of 23 heats began.

Many of the boats entered in the regatta were the final projects of 3-D design classes, and Yopp, like most of the competitors, had had little sleep in the past week.

"I spent five days on my boat," said Yopp, a freshman in art from Crystal Lake, as he adjusted the steering mechanism of his boat. "Most people spent weeks. I've been up all week. I practically lived in the Blue Barracks."

Chad Stuenkel, a freshman in art from Altamont, also has been surviving on little more than caffeine and adrenaline for the past week.

Martyrdom not fitting; justice must prevail

SOUTH CENTRAL LOS ANGELES was a pot just waiting to boil over. The pressure cooker of social injustice and economic deprivation kept this community on edge for decades and now threatens its very existence.

The acquittal of the Los Angeles Police officers charged with beating Rodney King was the breaking point. As experts, officials and politicians now decide how to rebuild a community and question their hierarchical criminal justice system, the people of Los Angeles still live in a reality worse than most nightmares.

In a community where citizens fear for their lives every day and few young African-American males are expected to survive the streets, the injustices of life could no longer be tolerated. The rioting is about Rodney King, but also about a class of people that has been written off by the bulk of society. In the social politics of today's government, the citizens of South Central Los Angeles have no voice.

This is the group that everyone wants to forget. This is the group with the problems: Drugs, gangs, homelessness and unemployment typify South Central and countless other urban areas in the United States. To face the problems is to realize mistakes. Instead these problems were ignored until the citizens themselves could no longer stand the body count.

Now the community is in shambles. The burned-out skeletons of businesses symbolize the frustration of the deprived inner city. When they could not fight the system, they turned on themselves.

THE PERVERSION OF JUSTICE that let four Los Angeles police officers slip through cannot be remedied by looting liquor stores and killing fellow sufferers. Rodney King will not be vindicated by stealing a television set or by spilling the blood of a white trucker. The perception that the jury did something inherently evil does not provide an excuse for murder and vandalism. But the King decision was the match that ignited a racial bonfire. In nearly every city, areas of socio-economic neglect wait in the wings, each capable of violent self-immolation.

Although the scales of justice have betrayed Rodney King at this stage, people throughout the nation must remember the process is not complete. Economic wealth and systematic back scratching weigh heavily, but the symbolic Lady of Justice is blind. The system that initially failed Rodney King provides many appeals and civil court alternatives in which justice may be served and mistakes corrected. The acquittals are only the first decision, not the final verdict. The justice system may still serve its purpose and protect the rights of citizens regardless of their race or social standing.

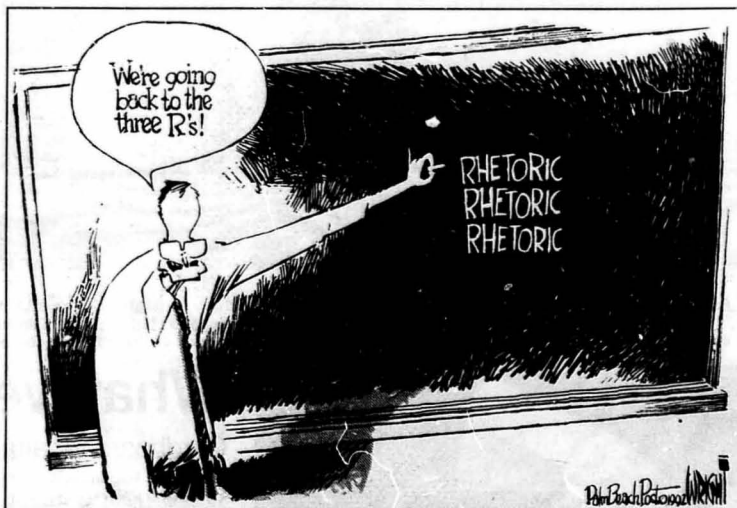

Rodney King cannot become a martyr of either judicial or social corruption. The anger that has resulted in violence must now be concentrated into a new social movement. If advancements in civil rights are to continue, the people must rise up against the oppression, not each other. The lessons of the past must not be wasted on the present. This unfortunate occurrence allows a forgotten community to speak out, but the message cannot be self-hatred and violence.

Letters to the Editor

Cole's accusations groundless; corruption kills USG credibility

In writing this letter, I hope SIUC students will get a clear perception of the latest USG election fiasco. As a member of 1989's election commission and as 1990's re-election Election Commissioner, I gained valuable insight regarding USG elections.

I believe this election will prove futile for voters because it will be disqualified from SIUC election history, as have a growing number in the recent past. Brad Cole's assault on Yusuf Haqq, stating his disqualification was "a personal attack against me by the election commissioner," is unfair. I don't doubt Yusuf's abilities as a competent Election Commissioner, because as a member of the 1990 commission he weighed evidence conscientiously to help select fair judgments.

If Yusuf were attacking Brad personally, Independent candidate William White would not have been disqualified for a similar violation. Brad Cole, as a long-standing, experienced and involved member of USG, should know the rules of the USG bylaws. After all, isn't that what his platform states, as well as his DE endorsement?

I think Brad should take his loss honorably and play the game fairly next time, if he did spend more than the $250 election campaign limit.

Let's try to keep USG uncontaminated this year, since recent years have proved otherwise. A strong prayer will keep this year's election alive, but that is unlikely.

Besides, if Jean Paratore has any say, I'm sure Brad will be reinstated, a new election approved, and the Student Party will be given an unfair win—which is one of the reasons I am no longer involved with USG.—Monique Chevas, senior, English, paralegal and psychology.

System abused by ruling party

As Deputy Election Commissioner, I believe I must comment on the USG election process which has taken place over the last 10 months.

Student Party member and USG President Jack Sullivan refused to appoint an election commissioner or election commission for over six months, I believe, in order to affect undue influence on the political process.

In January, the Student Party-controlled USG Senate refused to reform the election regulations to reduce possible incumbent conflict of interest and undue influence on the election process.

In March, I wrote to President Guyor (and eight other University members) explaining to them my concern that Student Party members might attempt to subvert the USG election process. Recently, Sullivan called on the University to halt the USG elections on the grounds that he did not agree with the Election Commission's ruling to dismiss Student Party candidates found guilty of election corruption.

The USG Judicial Board of Governance, which heard the Student Party appeal, and whose members were mostly appointed by the Student Party, refused to follow their own constitution or even allow the Election Commission to present its evidence. In my opinion, the USG elections have been compromised by Student Party abuse and irresponsible University intervention. The EC has already recommended that Jack Sullivan be impeached, and also noted that the election ballots, which were in Sullivan's control, may have been tampered with.

Apparently, the Student Party has systematically worked to manipulate the election process, and when the Election Commission was given no other choice under the USG constitution than to invalidate Student Party candidates, the EC itself was put on trial.

Given the response to the Rodney King verdict, I hope that students take into account that justice is not simply a commodity, but something which should be pursued for its own sake, irrespective of the vested interests that would be affected.—Willem Bouwer, senior, exchange student.

Con artists prey on friends, trust and comradery

With sincere feelings, this note is for the ones trusting others, including the con artists. How much, and to what extent, would you assist a fellow Saluki?

The other evening, I was alerted that a close Saluki friend was in the Jackson County Jail. I have never spent any time in jail, but tales from others convince me it's nothing to brag about. This Saluki was involved in leadership roles, working as staff here in Carbondale with two leading firms and doing a mighty fine job. He was being nominated for a position here on the Southern facility!

As a friend, I posted his bail, but when I tried to collect the debt from him, I got no response. There were certified letters sent and telephone contacts attempted, but without success.

How far can a Saluki go to be really trustworthy? When you try to recoup your money, do you actually know what it takes? Do you know if you can get it fully returned without spending almost as much for the return?

In fact, do you think if you have debts to collect prior to the 15th of May, the end of our semester, that you will get the amount in full?

It is possible to be tricked and swindled (legal term: "theft by deception with an intent to defraud") no matter how close one gets during campus associations. The mind of the con artist, like the one who swindled me, is like the Trojan Horse—deceptive with the intent to gain control, no matter the results.

Think for a moment. You have a friend in jail without immediate assistance and communication. How much comradely assistance need be provided by you, showing your caliber?—Thomas Angelos, senior, VES studies.

Letters to the Editor

'Justice died last night in America...'

Wake up, people! Wake up!
"Justice died last night in America. She put a gun to her head and committed suicide. When, justice, one of the pillars that our forefathers built this country on, crumbled and failed, America suffered a fatal blow." (Spoken by a courageous black activist on campus, April 30.)

Are you next? If not, who is?
Is it yet another black man? Will he be pulled from his car, his home, and beaten down like an animal? Or is it going to be a Japanese man, beaten for beating us at our own game, democracy and capitalism?
Or will it be a Mexican? Or a Jew? Or will it be you?

We all saw the tape of Rodney

King being beaten and humiliated like a dog, less than a man. Think about it. That action is now legal precedent for police officers to behave according to when someone gets out of line!

Do we live in a police state? A country where a man gets beaten senselessly by the authorities? It sounds similar to Stalin's Soviet Union and Hitler's Germany. And this is "the land of the free?" Wake up!

Can any of you honestly say you have never broken the law, never done anything wrong? I know I can't. We are the Rodney Kings of the future, punching bags of a new generation.

I realize not all police officers are like those in Los Angeles, and that those officers have been thrown into another sticky situation with the riots throughout their city, but they are also not above the laws they enforce.

That was the message sent out last night. Justice is only for the rich, the William Kennedy Smiths, the powerful, and not for "all men created equal."

The amount of time it took you to read this is about the length of time Rodney King was beaten. Think about it. Justice failed last week and civil rights were set another step backwards, another giant leap lost for humanity.

Who's next? Are you?—Jeff Pigati, senior, geology.

LA acquittal highlights racism

Racism in America is running rampant! That point is made very clear by the results of the Rodney King trial.

All the police officers involved in the incident were acquitted of all charges. There wasn't one guilty verdict on one single count. What else is that if not racism? It certainly is not justice.

What gives four white police officers the right to brutally beat a black man almost to death, regardless of what he has done?

This case would never have come to trial if it wasn't for the infamous videotape of Rodney King's hideous beating. No one would have believed him. The police department in L.A. would have laughed at him, thrown him in jail, and told him he deserved it.

King beating verdict, Fest riots make mockery of U.S. society

Recent events in the courts of Los Angeles and on the campus of SIU have made me ashamed to be a human being, let alone an American.

It seems as though we have made no progress since the riots of the late 1960s, and it is time to question just what we are in school to accomplish.

First of all, the message sent by the jury of the Rodney King trial is one that should alarm everyone, black or white.

The message is that even if a jury is presented with overwhelming evidence, it can still decide an outcome irrationally.

No matter what reasons the jury gave for acquitting the police officers involved, there is no sane excuse for beating a man as senselessly as the officers did. The poor excuse that King needed to be restrained is making a mockery of our intelligence.

The other event that had me reeling in amazement was the riot that followed Springfest. It seems that students have come to SIU,

But it doesn't matter about the videotape now. The result is still the same. The four police officers got away with it. This case should have been a classic scenario of getting caught with your hand in the cookie jar.

Two things that trouble me greatly about this case are, first, why was the trial moved to an all-white suburban county? Secondly, why was the jury all-white? Why wasn't there at least one black person to speak out for Rodney King?

The King verdict proves two things. The first is that a black man has a lot to worry about just to survive in America. The second is that black people are in more trouble now than they ever were in the past.—Kerry Richardson, senior, marketing.

and presumably elsewhere, in order to get drunk.

It is the prevailing attitude that students have the right to drink excessively and act in whatever fashion is "cool."

When students have to finally face their own responsibilities and become accountable for their own actions, rather than having Daddy pay for the damages of their irreverence, perhaps a better sense of priorities will exist.

I was glad to see the protest organized in front of the Student Center. It showed a reaction that I didn't think the population of this university was able to create, considering the general apathy and lack of in-depth thinking.

Let us remind ourselves of the civil rights riots which took place in this very part of the country not more than 25 years ago.

Let us also look at the performance of our current leadership in disgust, but let us blame ourselves for not taking part in making the system work.—Bill Moss, junior, psychology.

Love of Christ heals wounds, fills emptiness

Dear Michelle Malkin: I am led by the Holy Spirit to respond to your last letter. I believe you have a distorted idea of who God is. I think that perhaps a bad experience with religion brought you to this point. You may not recognize it, but God is a God of love. In your letter you ask, "Should I not love someone?" Michelle, God wants you to love Him. He loved you enough to send his only son to earth to experience the human condition.

Jesus forgave those who persecuted Him and willingly was beaten, stripped, nailed to a cross, and hung there till He died. Why? Because He loved you, and me, and the world unconditionally. He became a sacrifice so we would have eternal life with God.

Yes, you should love someone. You were given a good head so that you could think about these truths, and He gave you the ability to love; love Him with your whole mind, body, and spirit. However, you have distorted love with lust and perversion. The Bible rejects homosexuality because it perverts God's natural order (Romans 1:27).

Michelle, I get the feeling that you have been hurt, and I'm going to guess that it was a lack of love in your life. Therefore, you chose to believe a lie.

I don't want to "fight" you—just give you absolute truth. God wanted me to pass on this love to you, in hopes that it will fill those empty spaces in your life. Not with lesbian or even heterosexual relations, or religion, or any material thing—only with the love of His son Jesus, who by His suffering has healed us. Don't let the bondage of sin keep you from experiencing true love at its finest.—Brigitte Kittel, graduate student, health education.

Fare thee well, Springfest; we hardly knew ye

We would like to commend SPC and its chairman, Jason Beverlin, for its outstanding programming for Springfest '92. The tailgate and carnival were extremely well-organized and very entertaining. The festivities appeared to be enjoyed by all in attendance. Thanks for a fun afternoon.

It is regrettable the nightly activities after Springfest had to put a damper on the weekend. Just as SIUC was beginning to overcome its Halloween reputation, Springfest occurred to haunt us for many years to come.

The reckless behavior exhibited this weekend will reaffirm what many employers and citizens had begun to forget.

We just loved getting calls the day after Springfest from family and friends regarding the drunken louts taking over the Strip on national television. We know of one fine individual and his weekend guest who prided themselves on throwing bottles and contributing to the destruction of the car displayed on the front of the DE. We are all very proud of these mature adults.

We regret that a small percentage of students had to spoil the fun for the remainder of the SIUC student body. It would be nice if we could have the day's activities without the adjoining chaos.

However, we know this proposal is unrealistic, and consequently Springfest was cancelled. Now we look to President Guyon and the administration to bring our school's poor reputation back up to par with other universities.—Bill Barker, freshman, radio and television; Gene Lamis, junior, agribusiness economics; Mike Garzanelli, junior, business economics.

slept during the night," Stuenkel said. "I've had 12 hours of sleep this week."

Stuenkel's was not sure about the weight distribution on his entry, a full-scale model of a '67 Plymouth Fury, which went on the win the People's Choice award.

One of the most well thought out entries was John Lynch's replica of a World War I fighter plane, which boasted a strong inner shell and a powerful paddling mechanism.

Lynch, a quality control manager for Tesa Tuck, Inc. in Du Quoin, said he spent $500 and 1500 hours on the boat, which was developed to test new and innovative techniques in construction.

The boat later won the Vogue award for best looking boat.

Kieran Fogherly and a crew made of residents of University Hall won the team award after they piloted their boat, the "Team Beast," the wrong way down the course, finally managing to turn the boat completely around to finish the heat.

Joe Torrence made an effort to finish the sixth heat as his paddle boat, sponsored by Campus Comix and Castle Perilous, split into three pieces. Torrence, a freshman in art from Makanda, crossed the finish line as his boat fell apart.

"The Recycler" was a boat which displayed an environmental message on its huge green paddles, the recycling logo.

Matt Malmberg resurrected the boat from a regatta two years ago, when it sunk because of bad weight distribution. Malmberg, a senior in design from Rockford, widened the frame of the boat and added larger paddles for the race Saturday.

The last few heats were: some of the more interesting for spectators. Heat 21 pitted "I Wanna Lay Ya" Island against a "Green Alligator" and an unbelievably tiny boat called "Caution." The alligator won the Prize of the Regatta award for most creative use of cardboard, but its creator, Surachal Tansukaseem, abandoned both the award and the boat.

The SIUC chapter of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws entered a floating joint in the last heat, however the boat tipped over seconds after the start of the race, giving new meaning to the phrase, "roll your own."

The Match Race pitted the boats of local high schools against each other for a $1,000 scholarship.

Two kayaks stuck together while rounding the buoy, leaving Mount Carmel High School's torpedo boat to finish first.

Paul McCormick, technical inspector for the regatta, said kayakers tended to be the big winners of the afternoon, but the person's skill at piloting the boat is often more important the type of boat used.

"It's not so much the design," McCormick said. "People don't test their seamanship."

Novice boat builders got to test their sea legs in the Instant Boat competition. The competitors pieced together their boats during the afternoon from cardboard, duct tape and plastic.

Tom Boughner and Shane Diver of Carbondale won the confusing competition with their boat, "Sunk."

Lars Lindquist won the class I paddle and oar-powered boat competition with his kayak, sponsored by SIUC Mining Engineering.

Bryan Addington, a senior at Carbondale Community High School, won the class II paddleboat competition.

Like a child interrupted in its sleep, the city stumbled gingerly in daylight, uncertain whether to celebrate or distrust the jittery calm, confused about what had transpired over the previous 60 hours and searching anywhere for a comforting embrace.

"This is a time for the city to be together," said Jonathan Kim, 20 who was among 7,000 at a cleanup rally.

Among Saturday's major developments:

■ Authorities reported no new major fires and few major riot-related incidents for the first time since violence erupted Wednesday after the not guilty verdicts in the case of four white Los Angeles police officers charged with beating black motorist Rodney G. King.

■ The Los Angeles County coroner's office reported a total of 45 riot deaths, making the Los Angeles disturbances the most violent and costly in human terms in contemporary U.S. history. The 1965 riots in the Watts area of Los Angeles had 34 fatalities. The previous record was 43 deaths during the 1967 riots in Detroit.

"The current racial crisis in Los Angeles is not an isolated situation," he said. "Racially-motivated police brutality is a national problem—it is an affront to human dignity and a sustained threat to social stability and harmony."

The United Church of Christ, along with other churches, named Sunday the National Day of Prayer for Racial Justice, Chavis said.

"We are expressing our moral outrage and committing to join hands with all who will unite to work for the elimination of racism in the United States," he said. "We pray that the anger and rage will be channeled into a constructive transformation and improvement of race relations."

"Our nation is in another moment of crisis—the unfolding racial violence is only indicative of what happens when political and judicial officials refuse to do justice," he said.

The Rev. Charles Gillespie, pastor of the Greater Gillespie Temple in Carbondale, said members of his congregation believe the madness must stop.

"It is a sad situation—people need to learn to get together," he said. "Our group is praying that people will learn to resolve their differences and work together."

But Sullivan returned from a 10-minute recess and presented Haqq's offer to leave on the ballot any candidate whose disqualification was overturned by the judicial board.

"I will not recommend the impeachment of Commissioner Haqq under the conditions. Student Affairs comes in and assists him," he said. "In return from a verbal mandate by the Senate, Commissioner Haqq will abide by each and all decisions of the Judicial Board of Governance."

Haqq previously decided to ignore the decisions of the judicial board because it did not follow the constitution, but he now will back down to see the elections get underway.

With the assurance the names would not be removed from the ballot and at least one administrator would overlook each polling place and the counting of the ballots, the Senate tabled the bills to impeach the commission and turn the elections over to the administration.

"I felt that justice will come in one manner or another," Haqq said. "But this still doesn't excuse that the Judicial Board of Governance's decision was unconstitutional."

He will try to revoke the decision of the judicial board following the elections, Haqq said.

Sullivan said the final decision in the meeting proved USG still is a workable student government.

"USG showed it can still monitor itself," he said. "We may have pushed it to its limits, but we showed that USG can still take care of its own."

Student Party presidential candidate Brad Cole, who was placed back on the ballot after an appeal before the judicial board, said the deal between Haqq and the Senate finally will allow students to vote.

Independent presidential candidate William White whose disqualification is under appeal also will appear on the ballot.

Students can cast votes today for the student trustee, USG president, vice president and senators between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m. at the Student Center, Trueblood Hall at University Park, Lentz Hall on Thompson Point and Kesnar Hall on Greek Row.

The USG election is open to undergraduates, and the trustee election is open to all students. A valid identification card must be presented to vote.

Referenda concerning the elective termination of pregnancy as a student health insurance benefit and membership in the Illinois Student Association also will appear on the ballot.

"Taken at face value, it appeared Brad Cole had spent the $200," she said. "But we looked at the individual statements from the senators and the receipts added up to the exact cost of all the T-shirts."

USG election commissioner Yusuf Haqq agreed to abide by the decision so elections can carry on Monday, but the events leading to the board's decision still are being scrutinized by other candidates and the election commission.

Cole admitted facts that showed he breached the election regulations such as he paid the bill for the T-shirts, but the board refused to allow the commission to argue the points and refused to admit this when presenting the board's finding, Haqq said.

Mark Shelton, the Reform Party vice presidential candidate, said the judicial board showed a grave incompetency by not allowing the election commission what it constitutionally is granted.

"The election commission was not given time to prepare or present its case," he said. "(The board) doesn't understand the constitution and they broke it—the system is not run correctly."

Haqq said he agreed to abide by the board's decision so he could remain in control over the election, and he will appeal the board's decision following the election.

"I do not trust the administration, Judicial Board of Governance or USG," he said. "I am staying in as commissioner just to make sure it is run fairly."

When better gets bitter: Sports world deals unlevel playing field for races in terms of media coverage, treatment of players

By Tom Callahan

Special to The Washington Post

"A level playing field"—that phrase thrown around like a brick is a concept borrowed from sports, where it does not exist.

At least in terms of race, it does not.

The afternoon Henry Aaron hit his 714th home run, which happened to be the sixth anniversary of the murder of Martin Luther King Jr., the Cincinnati Reds asked their special guest if anything could be done for him on his day of days.

As a matter of fact, he said, yes. In the pregame ceremonies, they could include a moment of silence for King.

We do not get involved in politics, the Reds replied. No, sorry, never politics.

After which Vice President Gerald Ford let go his high hard one to start the game.

Aaron dutifully returned to his position. He had pursued the cause as professionally as he would any foul ball hopelessly out of play. It was not a big deal or story.

On the same field, on the opening day of a World Series, Jackie Robinson said goodbye to baseball. He was nearly blind. He was unable to make out any of the white players who beheld him with awe from a distance. Most of the black players could not resist going up and touching him.

All except Joe Morgan, the little second baseman, who was playing catch behind him and kept playing catch. When the announcement came for all non-uniformed personnel to clear the field, Morgan inched up to Robinson's back and, without identifying himself, murmured simply, "Thank you." Without turning around, Robinson whispered, "You're welcome."

A white sportswriter who overheard the exchange later asked Morgan to explain.

"You wouldn't understand," Morgan told him. "You couldn't understand."

Sports Commentary

A black columnist for the Atlanta Constitution has been in a quarrel with flamboyant Braves outfielder Deion Sanders. The columnist complained that, perhaps unwittingly, Sanders had been contributing to stereotypes. In front of the other players in the clubhouse, Sanders called him a name that is ugly on white lips. On black ones, it is heartbreaking.

"Black bitterness" is an unexamined expression white players and writers toss off in clubhouses.

Oscar Robertson epitomized black bitterness but never explained it.

His school team, Crispus Attucks, practiced outdoors and played every date on the road, yet went undefeated through Indiana's famous state tournament. On the eve of the title game, the mayor of Indianapolis visited Crispus Attucks and warned the students that if they won the championship, there was to be no celebration. No horns were to blow. They could repair to the woods, or wherever they go, for their pep rally. And they did.

Many years later, for the uplifting white movie "Hoosiers," blacks were brought in to be beaten at the end, and Robertson's old coach portrayed the losing coach comforting them as they banged their fists against the court.

"Try to understand, Oscar," a thoughtful pro named Bob Boozer once pleaded.

Michael Jordan is the white man's black player now. He even has the white man's hobby: golf. Charles Barkley is the one about whom Boozer would say, "Try to understand."

During the '80s, I wrote a score of sports cover stories for Time. On a news magazine cover, sports are a meager sell. When the subject is black, weak newsstand returns are guaranteed.

To their credit, a stream of managing editors—all white, of course—unhesitatingly featured Doc Gooden, Walter Payton, Jackie Joyner-Kersey, Carl Lewis, Debi Thomas and Mike Tyson anyway.

The champion seller of that time, more successful even than golden Joe Montana, was an amalgam of Larry Bird and Wayne Gretzky, athletes so white they are translucent.

The week "Rocky III" opened and Gerry Cooney closed, Cooney and Sylvester Stallone shared a Time cover that would have gagged a goat. Larry Holmes, left out of the picture entirely, happened to be the champion.

"If you're black, it's not even enough to be champion, is it?" Holmes later said in his softest voice.

"Anyway, it didn't sell."

"Maybe the magazine didn't sell, but something sold," Holmes said. "People bought it. You don't understand. You can't understand. No, probably not."

Investigation of Cowboys' draft pick lesson in dealmaking for NFL teams

By Greg Logan

(c) 1992, Newsday

At the request of two competing clubs, the National Football League has launched an investigation into whether the Dallas Cowboys violated league rules governing draft-related contract negotiations.

The Cowboys were able generally to agree to terms with their top five picks on the first day of the draft and get them all signed by Friday.

An investigation is a good idea. Maybe the other 27 teams can learn something about how to conduct business.

"We adhered to both the spirit and the letter of the rule," Cowboys owner Jerry Jones said. "We were investigated last year and got a clean bill of health. If anything, we were better this year."

Under NFL rules, only the team with the No. 1 pick is allowed to negotiate a contract before the draft. Other teams may discuss only non-financial matters with prospects. During the draft, a team that is to pick may discuss a player's signability, including the range of a contract, but it may not make a specific offer until after selecting a player.

Questions were raised concerning the Cowboys' negotiations with cornerback Kevin Smith, the 17th pick, and linebacker Robert Jones, the 24th pick.

There is one hitch for those who have accused the Cowboys of wrongdoing—the two players would have been crazy not to take the deals that were outlined and risk falling in the draft.

A source with knowledge of the Smith contract told Newsday it calls for three years plus an option and is worth a total of $3.2 million, an average of $800,000 a year. The key feature: a $1.6 million signing bonus all paid up front. The 17th pick last year, Redskins defensive lineman Bobby Wilson, signed a three-year deal averaging $725,000 per year, including a $1 million signing bonus.

Robert Jones signed a four-year deal worth about $2.64 million, including a $1.2 million signing bonus. Last year's 24th pick was Los Angeles Raiders quarterback Todd Marinovich, who received more because of the position he plays. But Jones' contract represents almost a 10 percent increase over last year's 25th pick, San Francisco 49ers defensive lineman Ted Washington.

Smith and his agent, Steve Zucker, knew the Cowboys were interested. When the Cowboys were up with the 13th pick, they outlined a deal, as they were allowed, and let Smith know they were considering a trade/worth and chose Smith with the understanding they were close to a deal.

"There was no specific agreement on the clock; there were parameters," said Ken Zucker, executive director of football operations for Zucker.

Instead of falling, Smith, a Texas native, went to the team of his choice.

The Cowboys got a player they liked at a price acceptable to all parties, and they know Smith will be at minicamp and training camp.

What's wrong with that?

Here's Johnny

Carson of Oilers' fame tops Letterman's Top 10 list of cards

By Norm Cohen

(c) 1992, Newsday

From the home office in New York comes the Top 10 list of cards David Letterman wishes he had in his collection:

No. 10: Aurelio Montegudo, pitcher, traded to Philadelphia Phillies. Anyone want to buy a vowel?

No. 9: Clarence "Bud" Podbielan, 1956 Topps. No relation to Larry Melman.

No. 8: Paul Noce, 1990 CMC Pre-Rookie. Your average staged shot of a baseball hitting a minor-leaguer in the tush.

No. 7: Keith Comstock, 1989 ProCards. Your average staged shot of a player hitting a minor-leaguer in the crotch.

No. 6: Wilbert Robinson, 1890 Old Judge. The former Dodgers manager pioneered Dave's old watermelons-out-the-window routine when he agreed to catch a baseball dropped from an airplane as a publicity stunt. Instead, the pilot dropped a grapefruit, which exploded in Uncle Robbie's mitt and knocked him to the ground.

No. 5: Billy Ripken. Billy Ripken, Billy Ripken (1989 Fleer). The obscenity-bearing card that needs its mouth washed out with soap.

No. 4: Eleanor Engle, 1953 Topps Archives. OK, she put on a jersey at in the Harrisburg Senators' dugout in 1952. But why isn't she wearing any pants?

No. 3: Marv Albert, 1991-92 Pro-Set Platinum Hockey. Marv Albert? Ye!

No. 2: Lights Out at Candlestick, 1990 Score. Because they used G.E.'s, that's why.

And the No. 1 card that David Letterman wishes he had in his collection (drum roll, please):

Johnny Carson, 1960 Fleer Football. The end from Georgia, not the talk show host from Nebraska. And where was Jay Leno when this guy retired from the Oilers?

On the subject of stupid card tricks, NFL Properties gave it the old college try last week on draft day. The agency introduced its GameDay line with 10 promo cards that tried to forecast the fortunes of five top college prospects. Unfortunately, only two were correct—Steve Emtman with the Colts and Desmond Howard with the Redskins.

It missed on David Klingler (Giants and Chiefs), who was picked by the Bengals; Quentin Coryatt (Rams), who went to the Colts; and Vaughn Dunbar (49ers, Falcons and Seahawks), picked by the Saints.

Oriole Park at Camden Yards makes its trading card debut with a 264-card set aimed at children ages 5 to 12. Besides the usual assortment of stars, the set includes shots of Cal Ripken and five other players as kids; three major-league stadiums, and two mascots—the Phillie Phanatic and the famous Chicken.

It has been a big year for poultry. The Chicken also makes a guest appearance on Cecil Fielder's 1992 Upper Deck card.

The hottest cards this week and prices that dealers are charging, according to Doug Kale, editor of Sports Card Trader:

1. Roberto Alomar, 1988 Score Traded ($24-$35); 2. Travis Fryman, Stadium Club ($5-$6); 3. Andy Benes, 1990 Leaf ($6-$8); 4. Roberto Kelly, 1988 Topps Traded ($1.50-$2); 5. Billy Swift, 1985 Topps ($2-$3).

From the Trick Photography Department: Deion Sanders changes from a Falcon to a Brave via a quadruple exposure on a limited-edition 1992 Upper Deck baseball card (SP3) randomly seeded into foil packs.

Barry Larkin is the victim of a bizarre error by Topps. The gold-foil version identifies the Reds shortstop as a member of the Astros. Topps says it has no plans to correct the error.

The Salukis rallied for three runs in the fifth to take over the lead. Senior second sacker Andrea Rudanovich singled and advanced to second when Smith fumbled a ball hit by junior right fielder Colleen Holloway. Rudanovich scored on a double by sophomore catcher Laurie Wilson. Holloway came home on a single by Irvin, and Wilson scored when Irvin stole second. An error by WSU second sacker Angie Ayala allowed the run to come home. SIUC scored one more run in the seventh on a double by senior center fielder Kim Johansen.

Superspeedway. Allison won $89,325, not including a $100,000 bonus for winning two of the Big Four events. It was Allison's third Winston 500 win and increased his all-time victory mark at Talladega to eight races. Allison, who won Saturday's International Race of Champions (IROC) event, now has three Winston Cup wins and four Automobile Club of America (ARCA) victories at the track. In addition to winning the season-opening Daytona 500, Allison also won the First Union 400 at North Wilkesboro, N.C. on April 26. It was also the 13th straight win for Ford.

"It was one of those weekends where you wonder what will go on all weekend," Allison said. "Today, the pit stops were great—they did their job and I did mine. "I woke up at 5:50 a.m., was out of the house at 6:15, went to Mass and headed to the track—that is how anxious I was to get to this race."

"If you had asked me in the fall if we could win, I would have said 'no,'" she said. "We have gained some much needed confidence over the spring and this is one of the most close-knit teams I have ever had."

Senior Anne Childress, who will be playing her last tournament as a Saluki at the championships, plays a big role in keeping the Salukis together.

Childress has chalked up 16 rounds with scores in the 70's during her career at SIUC and has played a major role in the Salukis line-up since her freshman year, when she placed ninth at the Gateway Championships.

Childress went on to improve as a sophomore where she made an impressive showing at the Lady Kat Invitational placing fifth out of a field of 107 golfers. She finished off the season placing fifth at the Gateway Championships.

However, it was Childress' junior year when her play started to achieve a leading role for the Salukis. She averaged a team-best 82.5 strokes for 23 round that included 4 rounds in the 70's in an all-conference year.

Childress ranked No. 2 in the Gateway standings for a scoring average of 82.4 and finished seventh overall in the Gateway Championships.

Daugherty said it is hard to imagine a lineup without Childress. "It has been fun for me to watch

Anne grow up throughout the years she's played for me," she said. "The past two years she has really taken her role as a leader seriously and has been an important part of our success."

Senior Gina Giacone will join Childress in playing their last tournament after she was sidelined for some time with a back injury.

Daugherty said Gina had to fight an uphill battle with her injury. "Her back is really a problem and she must wear a brace when competing," she said. "It has been nice to see her come back and compete for one last time."

Even with injuries holding her back during her junior year, she managed a 88.5 stroke average for 13 rounds in the spring including closing scores of 79 and 81 in her last two tournaments.

Giacone works hard to overcome off the green as well as on. She was named scholar athlete of the year with a 3.9 GPA.

Daugherty said she admires Giacone's determination both in competition and her studies. "You have to admire someone who works as hard as Gina," she said. "She is a perfectionist in everything she does."

Daugherty said she will hate to see them go after Tuesday. "They are my first recruiting class and now I am going to see them graduate," she said. "It is going to be very different not having them around."

Ryan McWilliams, 2-1, dropped game two, going the distance in a 5-3 loss.

He gave up eight hits and five walks while striking out seven. WSU's Charlie Giandone improved to 10-1 with the victory.

Wichita State captured the MVC regular season crown with the sweep, posting an 18-3 record in the Valley.

The Dawgs drop to 6-10, holding onto a one-game lead over Illinois State in a race for the post-season tournament.

The Redbirds dropped three straight to Creighton during the weekend and fell to 6-12 in conference action.

The Salukis take on third place Indiana State for a three-game series to close out their MVC season beginning Tuesday.

The Dawgs must win both games from the 10-8 Sycamores or hope for help from Bradley, which will play host to the Redbirds for a three-game set beginning Friday. The Braves hold down fifth in the Valley with an 8-9 mark.
