Students to see hike in parking fees

Money for renovations: Increases cited as most efficient alternative for financing construction.

Starting next fall, students will have to shell out extra bucks for parking stickers and paying meter violations, according to a member of the traffic and parking committee. The cost per year for red and green stickers will rise from $10 to $20 a piece and blue stickers will cost faculty and staff $60 per year, said Adrian Kantovich, the Graduate and Professional Student Council representative on the committee.

Parking meter fees and meter costs will double, with the cost for parking at an expired meter climbing to $4 and the meter cost increasing in 50 cents per hour, he said. However, faculty members will make under a pre-determined amount, either $15,000 or $20,000 per year, will only have to pay $45 for a blue sticker, he added.

The increases are part of a University attempt to raise funds for additional parking lots and to renovate the Student Center parking garage, Kantovich said. "They're planning on building a parking lot close to the law school," Kantovich said. "The parking garage needs $500,000 and that will be started one year from now." Kantovich said that $100,000 in revenues from the meter fees will pay for additional parking lots and $250,000 will go toward the Student Center parking lot. The remaining $150,000 will also draw from the funding increase, Kantovich said. Maintenance and operation costs will also draw from the funding increases, Kantovich said.

Kantovich said that "the priority is going to be making sure that we have enough funds to pay for the parking lot and the garage." Council to discuss recommendations to end Halloween

By Aaron Butler and Shawna Donovan
Daily Egyptian Reporters

Tonight the Carbondale City Council will once again debate the age policy in the city's bars to 21, along with other recommendations intended to end the Carbondale Halloween celebration. The council will consider the recommendations each addressing an individual recommendation of the Mayor/PRESIDENTIAL-Halloween task force.

The recommendations, if adopted by the city, would:
- Raise the bar entry age to 21
- Close bars and prohibit serving on W. Strick, and prohibit restaurants on the Strick from selling alcohol.
- Close city parking lots downtown during Halloween.
- Run the possession and sale of drugs during Halloween.
- Commit resources to public safety officers in the city during the 21 day period.
- Aggressively-pursue sanctions against Halloween-weekend offenders.

The item was originally on the council's agenda at the council was held for the May 21 meeting. It is considered an important item for the city and has been debated at recent meetings, although the topic has not been discussed in detail at previous meetings.

Dean search criticized by some faculty

By Stephanie Molett
DE ASSIGNMENT EDITOR

An internal search has been approved in the hunt for a new law dean, but opposition to the search is coming from within the school.

Erick Nordstrom, president of the Student Bar Association, said he believes the overwhelming majority of students support a nationwide search.

Nordstrom said he believes the selection process should be done from within the school.

The current dean, Harry J. Haywood IV, was the result of a national search and came to SIUC in 1993 from the University of South Carolina.

Inside: SIUC plans new on-line service to promote student enrollment.

Students to see hike in parking fees

Money for renovations: Increases cited as most efficient alternative for financing construction.

Starting next fall, students will have to shell out extra bucks for parking stickers and paying more violations, according to a member of the traffic and parking committee.

The cost per year for red and green stickers will rise from $100 to $200 a piece and blue stickers will cost faculty and staff $60 per year, said Adam Kantrowich, the Graduate and Professional Student Council representative on the committee.

Parking meter fines and meter costs will double, with the cost for parking at an expired meter climbing to $4 and the meter cost increasing by 50 cents per hour, he said.

"However, faculty members were able to make under a pre-determined amount, either $15,000 or $20,000 per year, will only have to pay $45 for a blue sticker," he added.

The increase is part of the University’s attempt to raise funds for additional parking lots and to renovate the library. Kantrowich, the Student Center parking garage, Kantrowich said.

They’re planning on building a parking lot close to the law school.

Kantrowich said: "The parking garage needs $30,000 in repairs, and that will be started this year.

"Any additional revenues that are made from water leaks, bearing distress, scaling problems, concrete scaling and improper water drainage, will be used to help fund the increases," Kantrowich said.

Maintenance fees will also draw from the funding increases, Kantrowich said.

"Any additional funds that we receive will be spent on maintenance, and the more maintenance we add, the more maintenance will be each year," he said.

The parking meter fine increase is also intended to discourage faculty and students from using the meters, which are annually intended for visitors, Kantrowich said.

"Often residents will not feed the meter and will just wait for the $5 ticket. The new $4 ticket is meant to cut down on that practice," he said.

Kantrowich said the faculty and staff parking rates will soon be released.

An internal search has been approved in the hunt for a new law dean, but opposition to searching within the school remains.

Erick Nordsrom, president of the Student Bar Association, said the overwhelming majority of students support a nationwide search.

Nordsrom said he believes in the long term the school’s reputation would be furthered by a national search.

Past searches have been conducted on a national level, but at 18 to 5 vote, the faculty amended that procedure, according to Patrck Kelley, a professor at the law school.

Patrck Sowell, the dean of a national search and came to SIUE in 1993 from the University of South Carolina.

SIUE increases advertising to attract potential students

By Kellie Hutner
Daily Egyptian Reporter

As new students flock to SIUE this summer and full enrollment at the school is steadily declining, while the enrollment figures are also not falling at SIUE, in Edwardsville, academic marketers have harnessed advertising to attract students from other universities and schools.

"As we look at these students, we’re looking at how we can attract students from other universities and schools," said John Hynes, an SIUE admissions counselor, who organized the efforts.

"We want to make sure that people talk about us," he said. "We want to make sure that people talk about us."

IBHE to discuss SIUC's low 4-year grad totals

By Dean Weaver
DeVille Special Assignment Reporter

A recent report released by the Illinois Board of Higher Education shows that SIUC’s four-year graduation rate is 12.6 percent, well below the 22.5 percent statewide average.

Ross Hodel, deputy director of enrollment management at SIUC, said the factors that can affect four-year graduation rates include admission, instruction and time-to-degree are among the items the board is examining at today’s IBHE meeting in Edwardsville.

Four-year graduation rates are based on full-time undergraduate students enrolled during fall 1990 who received their degree by Spring 1994.

Hodel said SIUC has set aside resources to focus on improving graduation rates.

The percentages do not include transfer students. Hodel said two of the bigger factors influencing the amount of time students take to complete a degree is a university’s percentage of residential students and the strictness of admission requirements.

Hodel said universities like the University of Illinois in Urbana, which has a 47 percent graduation rate—have higher graduation rates because of stricter admission requirements.

“I think for us to improve our graduation rate, we need to have a high school rank and ACT score, so they’re starting out with students more likely to earn a degree in four years,” Hodel said.

Hodel said the admissions policy should have a bearing on the amount of time it takes to earn a degree, but would say such issues also must be considered.

Hodel said these other factors influence the institution’s overall institutional behavior.

Family feud: Father, son test skills in boat regatta

By Sean J. Walker
De Campus Life Editor

Conflicts between father and son happen naturally when a son gets older, according to a recent SIUC family feud.

Mark Rundle and his son, Mike, have competed lead-to-head in the Class III division of the Cardboard Boat Regatta at Campus Lake for the past two years, and in both races Mark has come out on top.

“Mark and I got to run on him all the time,” said Mark, a 16-year-old senior at Marion High School. “We were probably going faster than him, but he was in front of the pack.”

Frank said this year was a good race, and next year will be no different.

“Each year I’ve heard about how good the course is this year, and I lost again,” Frank said. “I am looking forward to next year because I want to see which one I can beat.”

On-line data to spotlight SIUC

By David R. Kazak
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Information highway travelers can make a pit stop at SIUC through a new system being developed by Information Technologies.

Pilot projects of the new SIUC on-line system say it has the potential to be a powerful marketing tool for the university.

Gordon Bruner, acting chair for the dean of Business, Administration, and Economics, said the system opens the University to prospective high school students and counselors who want information about the school and its changes.

“We took our department map and put it on the web,” Bruner said. “The ‘web’ is one of the Internet’s newest features, the World Wide Web.”

The system allows a user to find information ranging from class schedules to the latest jokes on professors’ research projects.

Mike Schwartz, an Information Technologies coordinator who is helping facilitate the new on-line system, said to be an effective marketing tool some structure is needed for the information placed on the system.

“If you offer to help the departments get online and see if we have a few standards for item to work with,” Schwartz said. “In that case, there is a general template page a department uses to set up its own on-line page.”

We are providing a structure for the departments and anyone else officially connected to SIUC to construct their own information pages, sometimes called a home page,” he said.

The home page is the title screen.

Breath test: John Kaul, a junior in information technology from Naperville, blows into a breathalyzer held by Officer Todd Weir of the Normal Police Department. The department brought its Breath Alcohol Testing Unit—highly portable unit to the Cornedbead on Saturday night for the night of the Wellness Center and the Cornedbead Police Department to promote education and awareness to reduce drinking and driving. People coming out of bars in the normal police officers are talking to individuals who need to check I.D.s since the service was a success for educational purposes.

Senate to examine bill to reduce drivers’ legal blood-alcohol level

By Shawntina Donovan
DE Government Affairs Editor

The Illinois Senate will soon consider lowering the legal blood alcohol level from .10 to .08 in an effort to curb drunk drivers.

The bill, which passed the House 91-2 last week, has been endorsed by the Senate four times, but advocates are expected to have to lobby heavily in the coming weeks, according to Illinois State Legislators, spokesman for Gov. Jim Edgar.

"Illegal strongly supports the legislation," Robinson said. "We are hoping to pass it before the session is over." According to the Illinois General Assembly Information office, the bill is fast-tracked and is expected for first reading Tuesday.

State Sen. Ralph Dunn, R-Du Quoin, said he is against the measure.

"At this time, I have not been convinced that lowering the blood alcohol level would solve any problems because most of the accidents occurred at higher levels," Dunn said. "I have not supported lowering it in the past," he continued.

Dunn, however, said that the House passing the bill a very positive, strong message," George Murphy, with NADD, said.

If the bill is not passed before Sept. 30, 1996, Illinois could lose an important federal safety funds.

Illinois representatives Mike Bost, David Ruprecht, Larry Williams, Dave Currie, and David Phillips, D-uracity, voted in favor of lowering the level.

Penny Zimmun, a spokesman for the Senate, said that the Senate will vote.

"I can't really forecast what will happen that the Senate will vote but failed before," Zimmerman said.
Boat race beneficial to University, town

THIS PAST WEEKEND, SEVERAL STUDENTS massed to a location in Carbondale where fun was had by all and where many got wet. The Student Senate sponsored a Boat Race, which was enjoyed by student participants which does not directly involve bar-hopping. Creators and coordinators of the event are to be congratulated and recognized for this positive contribution they have made to students on campus.

The regatta involves a problem which students must work together to solve. Using cardboard, paint and other specified materials, a boat must be created — preferably one that will sink right away when placed in Campus Lake — for a race against similar vessels. Innovative students, some for class projects and others just for fun, pooled their talents and hard work into the regatta and were able to enjoy the end result of their labors. Whether boats sank, made it to the finish line or both, participants and spectators seemed to have a good time.

PERHAPS ONE OF THE BEST RESULTS OF THE regatta is the positive link it creates between SIUC students and the Carbondale community. Many local business owners sponsored students in their boat-making endeavors, and several community members congregated at Campus Lake to enjoy the competition. University administrators and city officials would do well to remember the positive experience that ment.

Exams to start soon; preparation needed

"TIME AND TIDE WAIT FOR NO ONE."

Students may be realizing this cold, hard fact as final exams week nears. We are already two days into the last week of regular classes, and the first official day for finals is only six days away. All students must put forth efforts on achieving the highest possible grades as another chapter of their college careers comes to a close. If they haven't already done so, students need to blow the dust off of textbooks, crack open their books and where many get wet: This event was not a typical summer event, but it was an event that students and the rest of the community when businesses, both non-alcohol and alcohol related, on the Strip. What is the ultimate fate of the businesses, both non-alcohol and alcohol-related, on the Strip? What is Carbondale going to do to ensure the continued prosperity of these businesses?

How is Carbondale going to ensure the safety of the students when they are going to be a lower in the community after the high school classes end? Who is going to take the places of the students who are now going to be working in the community? Will there be enough police and fire departments to handle the increased traffic? How many new students will be coming to Campus in the fall? How many new students will be coming to Campus in the fall? What is the ultimate fate of the businesses, both non-alcohol and alcohol-related, on the Strip? What is Carbondale going to do to ensure the continued prosperity of these businesses?

Raising bar-entry age forces students into dangerous, unsupervised situations

There has been a lot of discussion about raising the bar-entry age from 19 to 21, as it is an extremely relevant issue to the community. Opinions have run the gamut between militantly pro-21 to fervently pro-19, with not too many in the middle.

I have a few questions that I urge the Carbondale City Council to answer before taking any action on the proposed legislation on May 22. If the bar-entry age is raised to 21, where are all of the students under 21 going to go for entertainment at night?

Letters to the Editor

Raising bar-entry age forces students into dangerous, unsupervised situations

There has been a lot of discussion about raising the bar-entry age from 19 to 21, as it is an extremely probable issue in the community. Opinions have run the gamut between significantly pro-21 to fervently pro-19, with not many in the middle. I have a few questions that I urge the Student Council to answer before taking any action on the proposed legislation on May 2:

- If the bar-entry age is raised to 21, will all of the students under 21 go to for entertainment at night?
- Is the ultimate fate of the businesses, both non-alcohol and alcohol-related on the Strip? What is Carbondale going to do to ensure the continued prosperity of these businesses?

How is Carbondale going to ensure the safety of the students when they are going to be house parties in closed doors? Who is going to call the police if the gods do not rape as a direct result of raising the age to 21? Who is going to ensure that the girls don’t report when they are forced to walk home down dangerous, poorly lit streets at 3:00 in the morning? Who is going to explain the bar-entry policy to the parents of the students who are basically forced to house parties, far from the trained eyes of both the police and the parents? How many new D.U.J. will it take for the city to realize what a bad decision they have made?

Who is going to be responsible for the increased rate of alcoholism among students due to alcohol’s height gained availability for two or three dollars at the house parties? Who will explain to the students of SIUC, one of the poorest student bodies in the nation, that the part-time jobs that have been plentiful on the Strip are no longer there? Who will replace these students when they are no longer able to pay for their education at SIUC?

Who is going to explain the university between the students and the city, and will they possibly explain the near-race like conditions in student housing when everything is no longer available? How many new students will be drawn to the University community that has a reputation of continually ignoring the wishes of its students and forces students to work in an environment of extreme friction? When civil servants and University employees start to lose their jobs due to declining enrollment as a result of the legislation, who will tell them just to stay put in Carbondale, as things will surely get better?

Who will go to the funerals of the students that die from D.U.J., alcohol poisoning and severe beatings as a direct result of raising the bar-entry age to 21?

Since when does the SIUC administration dictate city policy?

"Why are most of the other large college communities in Illinois either staying at 19 or considering going back to 19, while Carbondale continues pushing for 21? Why hasn’t Carbondale learned from the mistakes of Charleston?"

After all of this has become a reality, will anyone really care about Halloween?

The Carbondale City Council votes on the bar-entry age May 2 at 7 p.m. in the City Council chambers at 608 S. College. I encourage anyone who has a vested interest in the safety of students under the future of the University and the continued prosperity of the downtown businesses to come express yourselves and hope that you are not ignored.

I don’t care to address the issue of abortion, try opinions on that subject are unchangeable, and I have no urge to convince anyone else of them.

What I do wish to address, however, is the Daily Egyptian’s complete lack of responsibility and respect for their readers which they demonstrated so abundantly today (April 30).

As it wasn’t enough that the DE can barely produce a single grammar, we are now faced with all the spelling intact. Now, some more on the staff has made the unforfeignable decision to use that piece of garbage cutting itself in the April 30th edition.

What ever happened to scholarship, objectivity, professionalism? The DE should be thoroughly ashamed of itself.

As completely offensive as it was, I read the “She’s a Child Not a Choice” front page story to cover. It was filled of illogical arguments, slanted statistics, and begins inciting the public. I cannot believe that our campus newspaper would opt to help distribute that piece of trash menacing our words.

I cannot condone this action, one goes obviously taken to fire up some form of controversy.

The DE has disappointed me for long enough. The only thing it will be doing any future times of this nature is print it in my car’s liner box. I will not read, read another Daily Egyptian.

student fears gun-control efforts

In regards to your editorial on Tuesday, April 25, I feel that many viewpoints need to be heard and accepted. The Constitution states that all people have certain unalienable rights and this is one of them.

Gun control may be a good idea against sending someone to jail for five years, but it is unlikely to stop us from eventually bringing those numbers down.

I say this not to encourage a black market, but in reality that is what will happen. Guns will still be sold to the criminal element without a 5-day waiting period, and we will find ways to get guns if they want them.

I propose the sale of handguns to citizens to help prevent some of the criminal activity, who by the way has more fire power than our police departments.

Personally, I would rather be caught by the police for having an illegal weapon than caught on a dark street as something to be rob and murdered with out one.

name-calling childish, out of place

I was disappointed, in reading Rev. Derek McDonald's commentary to the letter in the April 25, 1995 letter to the editor as being "fearful-minded and self degrading."

The name-calling seems to be echoed by Father Karban's remarks that the Bible is "not using the Bible as a standard of truth," and "Names of Rights und the name calling on the play."

In fact, the work which forms the Bible Rev. McDonald believes to be folly is the Word of God formed by the Catholic Church in the Councils of the Hippo (A.D. 397) and Carthage (A.D. 397 and 419).

It be to be expected that there will be differences in the way we interpret the Word of God, but please have the name calling on the play.

paper within rights, ethics to publish ad from pro-life group

Though I was not happy to see the anti-abortion letter in the April 20th edition of the Daily Egyptian, and do not support the claim of such a group, I feel compelled to respond to the letter written by Martin McClure in the April 27th edition, Ms. McDonald and Mr. Karban's "profoundly irresponsible journalism" because the letter was written by another relatively non-controversial campus event, whether or not an individual or organization expresses a controversial point of view. They have a constitutional right under the First Amendment of the Bill of Rights to voice their opinion, and newspapers have an obligation to print it.

I am a strong pro-choice supporter. However, I believe that by equating the anti-abortion insert in Wednesday's issue with the non-controversial event mentioned in Mr. Karban's letter is a non-controversial campus event, whether or not an individual or organization expresses a controversial point of view. They have a constitutional right under the First Amendment of the Bill of Rights to voice their opinion, and newspapers have an obligation to print it.

Name-calling childish, out of place

In regards to your editorial on Tuesday, April 25, I feel that many viewpoints need to be heard and accepted. The Constitution states that all people have certain unalienable rights and this is one of them.

Gun control may be a good idea against sending someone to jail for five years, but it is unlikely to stop us from eventually bringing those numbers down.

I say this not to encourage a black market, but in reality that is what will happen. Guns will still be sold to the criminal element without a 5-day waiting period, and we will find ways to get guns if they want them.

I propose the sale of handguns to citizens to help prevent some of the criminal activity, who by the way has more fire power than our police departments.

Personally, I would rather be caught by the police for having an illegal weapon than caught on a dark street as something to be rob and murdered with out one.

Name-calling childish, out of place

I was disappointed, in reading Rev. Derek McDonald's commentary to the letter in the April 25, 1995 letter to the editor as being "fearful-minded and self degrading."

The name-calling seems to be echoed by Father Karban's remarks that the Bible is "not using the Bible as a standard of truth," and "Names of Rights und the name calling on the play."

In fact, the work which forms the Bible Rev. McDonald believes to be folly is the Word of God formed by the Catholic Church in the Councils of the Hippo (A.D. 397) and Carthage (A.D. 397 and 419).

It be to be expected that there will be differences in the way we interpret the Word of God, but please have the name calling on the play.

Paper within rights, ethics to publish ad from pro-life group

Though I was not happy to see the anti-abortion letter in the April 20th edition of the Daily Egyptian, and do not support the claim of such a group, I feel compelled to respond to the letter written by Martin McClure in the April 27th edition, Ms. McDonald and Mr. Karban's "profoundly irresponsible journalism" because the letter was written by another relatively non-controversial campus event, whether or not an individual or organization expresses a controversial point of view. They have a constitutional right under the First Amendment of the Bill of Rights to voice their opinion, and newspapers have an obligation to print it.

I am a strong pro-choice supporter. However, I believe that by equating the anti-abortion insert in Wednesday's issue with the non-controversial event mentioned in Mr. Karban's letter is a non-controversial campus event, whether or not an individual or organization expresses a controversial point of view. They have a constitutional right under the First Amendment of the Bill of Rights to voice their opinion, and newspapers have an obligation to print it.

Alternative to alcohol: High school offers fest

By Rob Neff
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Most of the seniors graduating from the Carbondale High Schools will not be standing around a bar wearing a toga on their graduation night. They will be dancing the night away at a drug- and alcohol-free party at Coo-Coo's near Carbondale.

Senior Fest, an 8-year-old event planned by the students and paid for by the community, is different than most school-sponsored senior events, according to fest organizer Jim Prowell.

"In Carbondale, our Senior Fest is different than any other event in the state," he said. "We take what the students want, within reason, and do it." Jim Prowell fest organizer

"We take what the students want, within reason, and do it."

A group of us got together after a couple of people were killed on the highway," he said. "A group of students, faculty and business people got together to make absolutely sure we give the graduating seniors one night on the community."

Prowell said 75 percent of the graduating seniors attended the event, the number of graduation parties where alcohol is present is greatly reduced by Senior Fest.

"It does replace a lot of the parties where alcohol is allowed," he said. "About three years ago, a young man looked at me and said, 'Jim, we probably won't do this event die. You have probably saved at least one of my friends tonight.' That's pretty powerful coming from a graduating senior."

Alcohol and drugs are not allowed at the party and if a student leaves, that student will not be allowed to re-enter, Prowell said.

The $10,000 event will start at the food court at University Mall, where students will dance and present fun awards to each other. According to Prowell, who designed the competition, "The competition is for the students. It's an event where students can凭着 their skills and a lot of friends are made."

Aim to fly higher in future

Galloway said the team plans to improve on this year's placement in future competitions.

"We're close back up and make SIU a champion," he said.

Graham said the competition was government approved to improve their flying skills and gain recognition for the University.

Benefit from recognition

"One of the best advantages of having a flying team is the gaining the school recognized," Stewart said.

"Stewart said the awards banquet for the senior on the team that places in the competition is a night on the town. Stewart also said that this year's competition was the awards banquet where you get your name read out and be recognized by different national aviation publications," he said.

"The competition is beneficial for aviation students. All of the events encourage students to fly deeper into a variety of areas. The team is different than any other event in the state," he said.

Comitant performance

Graham said students spent about 72 hours a week working ground operations, which gave them competitive advantage over the competition.

"It's almost overwhelming when you first arrive but when you settle down and realize these are the people you have been practicing all week," he said.

Michael S. Freme, a junior in aviation and business, said the competition allows students to apply what they have learned in the classroom.

Flying Salukis take sixth in competition

By William C. Phillips III
Daily Egyptian Reporter

SIUC aviation student Graham Stewart was flying comfortably at 500 feet last week when he went out, forcing him to land by gliding the aircraft in.

"This was not the result of faulty maintenance work, but rather an intentional exercise designed to test the skills of the students," Stewart said.

Stewart said the procedure is not only routine, but necessary in order to prepare pilots for the real world. Stewart and five others from the SIU-I Carbondale chapter of the student organization, the SIU-1 Omega, finished sixth in a national aviation competition which took place last month.

23 universities represented

Aviation students from 23 universities and 10 regional competed in nine aspects of piloting during the event. The competition has been held for several years and was hosted by Delta State University in Greenville, Miss. Stewart said the team flies Cessna 152s for the ground events, which require superior maneuverability, but fly larger Cessnas for events which require more power and stability.

Billy Galloway, a visiting lecturer in aviation management and flight coach of the Flying Salukis, said the competition is beneficial for aviation students.

"All of the events encourage students to fly deeper into a variety of areas. The competition is different from anything the students will face in their future," Galloway said.

The SIUC Wellness Center has been awarded a $1,000 grant by the Center for Disease Control to create a workshop program to educate students about HIV/AIDS through a variety of means.

The first objective of the new program will be to provide an opportunity for art students to become knowledgeable about HIV/AIDS issues, then use their talents to create art-in-education pieces.

Delinda Mills, sexuality education coordinator, said the work is not only art, but educational.

"The visual arts is to be able to submit their works of art to go on display for the fall '95 student orientation," Mills said, "it's an opportunity for artistic students to become involved in issues concerning AIDS."

Workshop leader Brent Bata said the impact of the latest HIV/AIDS art piece, the AIDS Memorial Quilt, lies not only in its size, but in the intricate beauty created by the hands of thousands of quiltmakers.

"We did a similar project when I taught theater in 1993 at Columbia College in Chicago," Bata said. "It worked well at other colleges it was used at, so I thought it would be good for the Southern Illinois community."

Pregnancy testing, assistance available through Student Health Programs Clinic

By Desiree Mills
Student Health Programs

Pregnancy testing is available at the Student Health Programs Clinic. Testing is done on an appointment basis between the hours of 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. To ensure accuracy of results, students should wait until 18-20 days after their last menstrual period before requesting a pregnancy test.

Information about adoption and abortion is available from the clinic. If you or someone you know is pregnant, please call the Pregnancy Hotline at 536-4441 for resource information and short-term counseling. Students are eligible for maternity benefits through their Student Health Insurance. If conception took place while the student was in school, insurance information can be obtained by calling 453-4411. Other prenatal resources in the area include Jackson County Health Department (687-3343), Shawnee Crisis Pregnancy Center (549-2784) and the Department of Public Aid (687-7050).

The fourth workshop will use interactive exercises to allow the students to express and explore different views of their peers, while maintaining a supportive atmosphere, Bata said.

In The Workshop's second stage, there will be a contest for the HIV/AIDS art-in-education pieces in the categories of still-life photography, 2-D art, 3-D art, music, theater, poem and verse, Mills said. A $500 production budget will offset the costs of the art materials purchased by the students (canvas, paint, blank video tape, photos, paper, etc.). Students will be required to provide documentation of proof of expected income upon completion before reimbursement will be made, Bata said.

In stage three, the pieces created will be displayed for two successive weekends and there will be several scheduled shows for the performance pieces (monologues, poems, short verse, sonnets), Bata said.

Gallery viewers will be provided with an open book for any comments they have about the work.

Participants will be given journals to record their feelings and views during the entire process, Bata said.

An awards ceremony will conclude the project, with an opportunity for all participants to discuss their experiences, he said.

... students want more parking spaces. "As long as people want to build more lots and regulate the old ones, we have to accommodate," Knapovich said.

The state will not help fund the proposed parking lot and repairs, Knapovich said.

"The state of Illinois will not pay for the maintenance or building of any parking lots or streets on campus," he said. "Everything that has to be done all has to come out of fees and fines." Knapovich said the last time parking sticker prices changed was in the mid-1970s and that change was actually a decrease.

Despite fluctuations in sticker and meter costs, SIUC students will still pay less than many other Illinois universities.

ISU students pay $101 for a 9-month parking permit.

UF of Champaign students pay $303 for a one-year permit.

NIU students shell out $44 a year for the same privilege.

All of those schools charge 50 cents per hour for metered parking.

Knapovich said he does not think the increases will result much of a burden for students.

"really don't think that students are not going to be able to afford parking stickers," he said. "If they are going down in the spring semester that they can afford $30."

Knapovich said students have been against the fee increases.

"Many students, graduate and undergraduate, said they wouldn't mind paying the cost if they start seeing the changes," he said. Guywalt said another topic that the committee addressed was the license plates. "We are going to make crosswalks safer, he said. "We'll make them up (of Department of Transportation) space."

The lines in the street that lead motorists know where the crosswalks are will be made more visible and the yield signs will be moved out of the middle of the streets, he said.

The committee hired a consultant firm to propose a parking plan to involve the parking and maintenance problems faced by it, according to Thompson Evans is a facility-site appointed committee member.

One option the firm offered was to install barriers to take out a 5-year loan for $2.5 million, the required to position the desired work, he said. However, the "net cost was not effective.

"If you borrow the $2.5 million at the end of 20 years, you will have paid $57 million," Rettig said. "We are not going to pay $57 million in interest."

State regulations were in part the reason for rejecting this idea, he said.

The bond issue passed on April 25, 1994, would allow the increase in the most efficient option for financing the work.

"This turned out to be a 5-year-go plan was a lot more visible than initially thought," he said.

Navy tankers still not done

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON -- Contract number N00024-81-C-2315 of the Minot, unremarkably enough in 1985, or at the height of the Reagan defense buildup. The Pentagon, he explained, is converting 600 ships in its non-nuclear carrier group to a Keiser-class oil tankers to service Western Europe.

Bis $540 million and 60 years later U.S. Navy still doesn't have its tankers. Half of them now are anchored in the James River in Newport News, Va., waiting and waiting and waiting for their busy bells.

The Senate, Governmental Affairs permanent Investigations subcommittee, which Tuesday is hearing hearings on the ships, and the Pentagon's Inspector General say the tankers are available, years of delays and hundreds of millions of dollars, and they've never seen the construction start.

"We don't have anything to show for," said Sen. William V. Roth, Jr., D-Del., the committee's chairman. "How do I go home to taxpayers and justify that?" And by that, he means investigating infusion of current acquisition procedures.

The ships also provide a case study in the protracted nature of federal contracting; government officials say, because every party that played a part in acquiring Navy, the two companies, even Congress, blame somebody else.

"One report shows students who transfer to one or more universities typically take a longer amount of time to earn a degree by improving class schedules," one said.

Kyle Perkins, SIUC associate vice president for enrollment services, said SIUC is working to increase the percentage of students who earn a degree in four years or less while required courses once per year or semester.

Perkins said it is important for students to plan ahead and all the colleges must work together to provide the four-year scheduling plan for freshmen.

He said one reason for the four-year graduation rate could be the number of newly hired students who made class changes due to the accommodate work schedules.

Michael Williams, SIUC jiliche relations coordinator for financial aid, said 84 percent of students were receiving some form of financial aid.

"I think we have the necessary "donor population" to support our mission," she said.

Richard Sanaf, associate director of financial aid, agreed and said SIUC has the largest need-based financial aid program in the state. He said students are required to have passed certain classes, which they must take more than 12 hours per semester to graduate in four years.

Other items that will be discussed at today's IBHE meeting include the dental hospital, the budget and tuition fee increases.

The board will discuss eliminating financial scholarships and reducing the financial aid by $10 million. Additional tuition fee for increases for Illinois universities have increased and therefore the board will be discussing ways to curb these rising costs.

Museum brings artifacts into area classrooms

By Donita Polly Special to the Daily Egyptian

"The objects give kids a chance to see real things, and help the teacher get the point across." -- Bob Defoet, University Museum.

At the other end of the spectrum, DeFoet said, the child development center on campus uses a mini-slide show offered by the program to teach pre-schoolers about primary colors.

The artifact kit was adopted in 1971 when the educational loan program started. The program has just recently began collecting artifacts again, and has benefited from an increased willingness of area museums to provide artifacts, he said.

The loan program has contacted foreign consulates and members of the United Nations, and has received responses and contributions from Argentina, Austria, and Cyprus, DeFoet said.

The kits contain not only educational artifacts, but cultural art from around the world.

"Cultivating awareness means coming up with new loan materials," he said. "The slide program of the International Festival Show turned into a loan kit.

Besides the artifact kits, the loan program also offers specimens of insects, fossils, rocks, minerals and sea shells.

It also has an audio-visual program covering everything from the International Festival Show to the Four Corners of the World," he said.

One of the problems with the program is spreading the word about it to local educators, DeFoet said.

"Getting people to use what we have and making sure everyday people know we have a problem," he said. "The more (we serve) -- the better."

The educational loan program is free and takes about two weeks to send the kits.

Joe and Jody Poole have always been interested in travelling and experiencing different cultures, especially in countries where they cannot physically visit.

Through the J. William Fulbright scholarship program, grants for U.S. citizens allow people like the Poole's to travel and experience open communications with Bengali instructors and students studying in 1985.

More than 1,000 grants are annually given throughout the United States. SIUC has had 66 faculty to travel and study in 135 countries in the past 15 years through the Fulbright scholarship program.

An informational workshop will be May 4 in Woody Hall's ORDA conference room to tell interested faculty about the opportunities available to them through the program.

Lisa Brown, associate director of international programs and services, said the annual competition is an "opportunity for SIUC to participate in the international scholarship program that started in 1968.

"This is a golden opportunity and people should take advantage of it while we have it," she said.

Brown serves as the Fulbright campus contact to faculty who wish to travel.

The university has sent 66 faculty to more than 30 countries since 1971 and more than 200 faculty arcawanised as scholars.

Although they taught at all levels, some of the recipients have been interested in traveling and staying in one country.

"The Fulbright can develop into something that would eventually lead to a linkage grant with the U.S. International Agency to improve communications and has had many Bangladeshi instructors visit SIUC," Brown said. "The Fulbright can develop into many things," he said. "It's expensive, but it is an investment because of the cultural exchange we are achieving.

"We are trying to bond diplomats' knowledge of the world and make SIUC an international university.

"I grew up in rural Oklahoma and I had never been away from home before," he said. "This is the best learning experience, I encourage everyone to sign up and take advantage of this before its funding is gone."

Fulbright scholarship-program workshop set for Thursday afternoon at Woody Hall

The program is an integral part of area classrooms.

DeFoet, said one of the more popular kits is the pioneer kit, consisting of "pioneer village," "pioneer kitchen," and "pioneer thanksgiving" tools.

The objects give kids a chance to see real things, and help the teacher get the point across, DeFoet said.

The kits are used schools in Western Frankfort, Anna-Jonesboro, and many others, and are suitable for any grade levels.

"SIUC's Black American Studies borrowed the Africa kit for their research into the history of African American art in Illinois," he said.

It's "hard to go down the richest part of the world and essentially, the poorest," he said.

"When I went back in 1992 (as a second-time scholar) I felt I had a long-term commitment with those people. We wanted to build relationships there, he said.

"In 1992 I went back and I had new friends that he had miles away from home," he said.

When Poole first taught in '92 he went with his wife and one child, but when he returned to teach in '92, Jody, an SIUC assistant professor of theater arts, was also a Fulbright to teach at Dhaka, as well.

Jody taught at Dhaka's library training institute, but found it difficult to reach his goals because there were not many computers.

"They're very much in the dark over there," she said. "They're at least 20 years behind us, but they're very eager to learn and they do learn what the West has to offer."

Although the library rarely touched had more than 500,000 volumes, she said many were old and in bad condition.

"There is no air conditioning and because it is such a wet climate much of the books moldy," she said.

Despite the isolation from home and certain things they look for granted, such as inexpensive telephone service, and air conditioning and cleanliness, Poole said their experience as Fulbright scholars was invaluable.

Racers

"Because he had to learn so far into the water to paddle, he sunk."
Mark Runille on his dad Class III swimmer

Mark said he made it around the course so quickly that "the divers asked me if I had raced yet, and I told them I had just finished."

So the challenge was set for the 1995 regatta, and again they both had to design their boats and build the boats the day of the race.

"This is just a friendly competition between father and son to see who could build the best boat without the help of the local boat," Frank said.

The design was not that good, because the sides were not tall enough and the water was running in (the boat)," Mark said.

"There was also a shortage of kayak paddles and dad had to use a canoe paddle," he said.

"Because he had to lean so far into the water to paddle, he sunk."

Chances are, if you have a bank account, a đầu credit card or a car loan, you don’t really care what type of loan you have. Who knows all this information? The FICO (Fair Isaac Credit Score) system is used by lenders to determine your creditworthiness.
There are three major credit bureaus - Trans Union, TRW and Equifax. They are the three largest lenders in the country. The credit agencies are:

- Trans Union: 333 341-2100
- TRW: 800-680-9436
- Equifax: 800-680-9466

And you wouldn’t believe what they know about you. They have your income, your employment information, your property ownership information, etc. But that’s not the question today.

Few bother to check files.

According to the National Consumer Credit Reporting Council, only 50 percent of consumers have checked their credit reports at least once a year. Those who have checked their credit files, on average, have 450 million accounts, or 99 percent of their credit scores. Only 20 percent of consumers have checked their credit scores, or the number of times they have been checked.

Mosquitoes as disease carriers focus of $5,500 grant to Jackson County

by Carey Jane Atherton
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Jackson County Health Department officials plan to eliminate mosquito breeding grounds.

P. J. Battle-McCready, public information officer at the Illinois Department of Health, said they awarded grants totaling $140,000 to 14 local health departments for the surveillance and control of container-breeding mosquitoes.

She said the grants were awarded to counties based on the number of Asian tiger mosquitoes, used tires, ditches and other sources of the mosquito-borne disease encephalitis.

"Dr. John Lumpkin, state director of Public Health, said these grants will aid local health departments in the development and administration of vector control programs.

"By controlling the vectors you can control the disease," said Battle-McCready.

She said a vector is any type of organism that will transmit an infectious disease which are caused by encephalitis.

"Battle-McCready said the mosquitoes is the vector and the encephalitis is the pathogen.

"The programs will be used to help us evaluate the threat to the public's health from viruses carried by mosquitoes," Lumpkin said.

"Pam Bloom, director of environmental health for Jackson County, said Jackson County was awarded a $5,500 grant. She said Jackson County has two types of container-breeding mosquitoes: the Asian mosquito and the Asian tiger mosquito.

"Bloom said the Culex mosquito has been reported to carry encephalitis.

"He said Jackson County is mainly concerned with the St. Louis encephalitis.

Bloom said the county has been working on a proposal to eliminate mosquito breeding grounds.

""The programs will be used to help us evaluate the threat to the public's health from viruses carried by mosquitoes," Lumpkin said.

"Bloom said the epidemic hit 29 states and well over 2,000 cases were reported.

"He said 578 cases of St. Louis encephalitis were reported in Illinois, and 47 of those people died.

"Bloom said two of the 47 deaths were Jackson County residents.

"He said that no cases of St. Louis encephalitis were reported in Illinois last year.

"Battle-McCready said the symptoms of St. Louis encephalitis begin five to 15 days after the bite of an infected mosquito. She said symptoms are high fever, muscle stiffness in the back of the neck, severe headaches and disorientation.

"Battle-McCready said the disease is common among adults, and children recover fully. However, she said St. Louis encephalitis can cause permanent neurological damage in some victims.

"Bloom said the Asian tiger mosquito has been identified as a possible carrier of California encephalitis.

"Battle-McCready said the symptoms of California encephalitis are similar to those of St. Louis encephalitis, but the California encephalitis is more common in children.

"Bloom said six cases of California encephalitis were reported in Illinois last year.

"Bloom said the mosquitoes arrived in the United States in 1985. Bloom said it is thought that the mosquitoes traveled in used tires that were shipped here from Japan.

"Bloom said the Asian tiger mosquito has not been found to carry any disease that threatens humans in Illinois, but it is a known carrier of dengue fever in Asia.

"She said dengue fever is painful, but not fatal.

"Bloom said the money received by Jackson County will be used for the surveillance and prevention of container-breeding mosquitoes.

"Bloom said Jackson County was awarded $9,000 in 1994, but due to the dry weather, returned approximately $4,000.

""Last year we eliminated a lot of the mosquito breeding grounds," Bloom said.

Meeting to decide new 'Contract' protest date

"A march protesting the Republican Party's "Contract With America," originally planned for Monday, was canceled due to rain and has been tentatively rescheduled for the intervals between the 1995 spring and summer semesters, according to a march organizer.

"Stop the Contract march organizer Holly Harris of the Stop the Contract Coalition said she hopes the delay will enable the coalition to get more Southern Illinois community members involved with the cause.

"Harris said the coalition will meet Wednesday to decide on a new date for the march. The march was to originate at the Student Center East and end at the State Capitol, where a rally against the contract would take place.

"According to a coalition press release, the purpose of the march is to protest the policies of the contract because only 21 percent of the population voted to elect the Republican who wish to pass the legislation.

"Several campus groups, including the Black Affairs Council and Friends of Native Americans, were scheduled to participate in the march and rally.

Ruth would still be king today

Babe would have hit 940 home runs, been worth $27

By John Strandman

DALLAS EVENING STAR

HEMPESTAD, N.Y.-Historians, statisticians and analysts have determined that if Babe Ruth were playing today, he would be "doubly uncapped" at $7 million a year but that his name would be worth another $2 million in endorsement fees.

Similarly, from a baseball standpoint, the Ruth lifetime home run record is projected to top out at a staggering 940—if he had the same number of plate appearances as Ty Cobb, the man who replaced him in the record book.

It makes for intriguing conjecture, Ruth vs. Cobb, but the figures are solid. It’s virtually no contest.

Although Cobb holds the career high of 755 home runs to 714, he had 3,311 more plate appearances than Ruth to get there. Ruth, of course, hit a home run for every 11.76 at-bats, far and away the best of all-time, and Aaron, in this department, doesn’t qualify for the top five.

Norman Bolotin, president of a communications company in Newton, Mass., appeared at a symposium held at Hofstra University to commemorate the 50th birthday of Ruth, says a mathematical formula, predicated on Ruth having the same number of batting chances as Aaron, would be hit in an enormous career advance.

Based on the numbers involved, Ruth emerges as more dominating than anyone has heretofore been able to comprehend.

A highly significant point is Ruth was more home run prevalent in some of his 22 seasons than the total of 90 other different American League teams had been.

The Babe was the subject of a special conference at Hofstra attended by teachers, scholars, biographers, researchers, sportswriters, historians and former major league players.

A former Dallas Express reporter has written a biography of the real Ruth, and now he is on the road promoting it.

The book, "Babe Ruth: A Life," is the story of the great slugger’s life, from his early years in Boston, his rise to fame in New York, and his later years in Hollywood and as a visiting baseball ambassador.

The author, David Saperstein, was a reporter for the Express for more than 30 years and has written extensively about baseball and other topics.

The book is available at most major bookstores and online retailers.
Men's netters serve up fifth-place finish

By Cynthia Sheets

As well as the usual Saluki winds that blur the lines of the MVC's Western Development Tournament, the above story brought home a tie from the Missouri Valley Conference. All but the championship match was played out in the rain, as heavy wind and rain forced a postponement on Saturday.

The Saluki netters did not have a walkover, however, as they faced the University of Iowa, who were favorites to win. The match was decided in the tiebreaker, 4-0, to advance to the final.

The Salukis entered the tournament as a favorite, having won the last two MVC regular-season titles and the tournament title last year. The team is currently ranked #1 in the nation, and they hope to repeat their success.

Replacement umps to hit the showers

Sticking umpires to return Wednesday

By Brian Baliva
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Los Angeles Times

Baseball's owners ended their 120-day lockout of the umpires' union Monday, reaching a five-year bargaining agreement that enables the regular umpires to return to work Wednesday with raises ranging from 25 percent to 37.5 percent.

This is an agreement in which everyone has won," said Chuck Phillips, the umpires' union. "The leagues have given five years of labor peace with the umpires, and the umpires have received the economic advances they felt were necessary."

"Non-union replacement umpires have been working games since the season began a week ago," Under the agreement, non-union umpires will be guaranteed $100,000 in salary and bonuses, up from $75,000 in the four-year contract that expired Dec. 31, when the owners initiated the lockout. Thirty-year veterans, guaranteed $200,000 under the old contract, could make up to $208,500 under the new deal.

"Having labor peace with the umpires for the next five years is a welcome and necessary development," said Commissioner Bud Selig.

He added that he hopes labor talks with the players' union would resume shortly but said there is nothing definitive.

The impetus for a compromise agreement with the umpires stemmed from the growing number of disputes involving the replacements. "In some cases, the situation was almost out of control," an American League official said—and a decision Friday by the Ontario Labor Relations Board declaring the lockout illegal in the province. The board ruled regular umpires would have to be allowed to work games in the Toronto Skydome starting May 9. California Angel General Manager Bill Barav complained widespread relief when he said he was happy to have the regular umpires back. "It's the same situation as with the players," Barav said. "You want to see the majors on the field. Whether the replacements did a good job or not, we were ready to see the majors back on the field."
