Makanda washed out by torrential rains

By Susan Sarkauskas
Staff Writer

Rainstorms Thursday turned a creek running through the town of Makanda into a small river, while flash flooding elsewhere in the county washed out several roads and made others difficult for travel.

By 3 p.m., flood waters in Makanda were at least 4 feet deep. Several cars parked at the Texaco gas station on Makanda Road were almost submerged and flood waters washed out parts of Springer Ridge Road.

Sgt. Jim Nesler of the Jackson County Sheriff's Department estimated that the flood level had risen about 6 inches between 2:30 and 3:30 p.m. alone Thursday afternoon. Nesler said that there was no danger to any Makanda residents, as most of the homes were out of the path of the flood.

A U.S. Forest Service rescue boat was used to ferry two people to their home on the hills north of the flood. Additional trips were canceled, as Forest Service workers determined that the flood's current had become too swift to navigate safely.

Boskydell Road, west of Giant City School, was closed by the Jackson County Sheriff's Department, as was Springer Ridge Road east of the Illinois, Central Gulf railroad tracks, because of flash flooding.

Above, a rescue boat from the U.S. Forest Service takes Makanda residents to their residences. The roads into the village and the downtown area were flooded. At right, Kevin Kapelski, junior in animal industries, rafts in flood waters on Lincoln Drive near the Agriculture Building. The Southern Illinois Airport reported that 3.8 inches of rain fell during the day. A cold front from the upper Plains caused the rain, according to the National Weather Service. Cool air and no rain are expected in the next few days.

UMW leader calls Reagan's coal record 'dismal'

By Darren Hillock
Staff Writer

Members of the United Mine Workers are solidly behind Walter Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro, said Richard Trumka, international UMW president.

Trumka, who was in Carbondale Thursday to visit local mines and stump for the candidates, said Mondale has said that while he favors acid rain legislation, no miners would lose their jobs as a result of that legislation.

"On the other hand the Reagan administration has a dismal record on coal," Trumka said.

Trumka said that despite the president's claims of economic recovery, 50,000 miners have lost their jobs, 70,000 businesses have failed and 200,000 farmers and ranchers have lost their land.

Gus says Trumka's an exemplary miner — taking digs at coal policy and hoping Reagan gets the shaft.

"We haven't seen the recovery," Trumka said.

However, Trumka

acknowledged that the Reagan administration's stance on acid rain is more in line with the UMW's thinking. Reagan favors more research on acid rain to determine if the causes might be something other than high-sulphur coal.

Trumka said that regardless of whether any federal legislation is passed, state acid rain legislation can be damaging. Advocates of present bills can't say that restricting the use of high sulphur coal will solve the problem.

"But we can say that miners will lose jobs," Trumka said.

Trumka said the UMW has a commitment from Mondale that no miners will lose jobs as a result of acid rain legislation but that they "didn't sit down and negotiate a contract" with Mondale.

The UMW thinks the acid rain issue "is a cloud hanging over the coal industry," Trumka said.

Trumka said the UMW has gotten the same commitment to work for coal from other candidates in Southern Illinois such as Paul Simon, U.S. Senate candidate; and Ken Gray, candidate for the House of Representatives.

The UMW represents about 72 percent of the miners in this country, said Trumka, and produces about 58 percent of the coal mined in the United States.

Indian army sent out to control rioters

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Soldiers were ordered to shoot rioters on sight in six major Indian cities Thursday to stop lynchings, beatings and arson that have killed a reported 157 people in northern India since the assassination of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi.

Hindus were reported to have hanged Sikhs, beaten them to death, and burned their shops, cars and homes in revenge for the prime minister's death Wednesday at the hands of two of her Sikh bodyguards.

Sikhs number 13 million in the predominantly Hindu nation of 730 million people, whom the 66-year-old prime minister ruled for 15 of the last 18 years.

For the first time since India's independence from Britain in 1947 the army was called into the capital to help police maintain law and order. When roaming Hindu gangs defied a round-the-clock curfew declaration, authorities ordered the troops to shoot rioters on sight. Black smoke from burning buildings, shops and cars billowed over the city of 6 million.

Rajiv Gandhi, 40, who was selected by leaders of the ruling Congress Party to succeed his mother, met with opposition leaders Thursday night and issued an appeal for peace saying: "This madness must stop."

More than half a million people stood in a two-mile-long line to view the flag-draped body of the slain leader at her childhood home, the Teen Murti House. Police used tear gas and bamboo staves to keep enraged crowds from running wild over the residence grounds, and some frenzied mourners chanted, "Blood for blood," and "Indira Gandhi is immortal."

Shoot-to-kill orders were also issued in five northern cities: Indore, Patna, Rae Bareilly, Kanpur and Dehra Dun. Curfews were imposed in 30 cities.

Confident Reagan in Boston; Mondale says he 'feels' win

By the Associated Press

A confident Ronald Reagan campaigned Thursday for a landslide strong enough to swell Republican ranks in Congress, while Walter F. Mondale, cheered by a throng of 100,000 New Yorkers, insisted, "I can feel victory in the air." Reagan was greeted with chants of "50 states" as he campaigned in traditionally Democratic Boston for himself and GOP senatorial candidate Raymond Shamie. He invoked the name of John F. Kennedy, a son of Massachusetts who became a Democratic president, and vowed to reduce inflation to zero in a second term. Mondale, with running mate Geraldine Ferraro at his side, found the largest crowd of his campaign in the New York garment district, then campaigned alone for Jewish votes elsewhere in the city.

Birth control pills recalled to foil counterfeits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pharmaceutical manufacturer G.D. Searle is recalling more than 1 million birth control pills because low-strength counterfeit versions, which may not prevent pregnancy, have been distributed, the Food and Drug Administration said Thursday. The FDA is investigating the counterfeiting and has informed the FBI of the problem. The supplier of the counterfeit versions of two lots of Ovulen-21 has not been located. The company, based in Skokie, is recalling voluntarily all packages of Ovulen-21 with the lot numbers 441 and 489 following the expiration date on the right side of the foil blister pack which contains the tablets.

Figures show U.S. losing energy-saving zeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — With oil prices down to less than $29 a barrel and natural gas prices stabilizing after five years of sharp increases, Americans seem to be losing some of their zeal for conserving energy, according to newly released government figures. A report by the Energy Information Administration says per capita U.S. energy consumption dropped only 2.4 percent in 1983, compared with annual 4 percent to 7 percent drops in the previous three years.

Anderson endorses Simon; Percy says it's no surprise

CHICAGO (AP) — U.S. Rep. Paul Simon on Thursday picked up an endorsement in his Senate bid from John B. Anderson, a former independent presidential candidate, who called Simon the "better candidate with by far the superior record." Republican Sen. Charles H. Percy, who is seeking a fourth term, said he was "disappointed" but not surprised that Anderson, a former Republican congressman from Rockford, endorsed the Democrat. With just five days remaining in the hotly contested Senate race, Simon stayed off the campaign trail for most of the day because of a sore throat. The two candidates planned to face off in a radio debate Thursday night.

Tylenol killer may have sought single victim

ROCKFORD (AP) — The person who slipped cyanide into Tylenol capsules that killed seven Chicago-area residents probably was after just one of the victims and killed the others as a cover-up, says a specialist who helped investigators in the case. John Spikes, chief toxicologist at the state Public Health Department's Chicago laboratory, said Wednesday he had his own theories — and a suspect — in the October 1982 deaths.

Poor work practices blamed for EDB deaths

CHICAGO (AP) — Researchers blame "grossly inadequate work practices" for the first reported occupational deaths associated with exposure to EDB, a chemical used as a fumigant and pesticide. In Friday's Journal of the American Medical Association, the researchers reported on the deaths in 1982 of two employees of a small fertilizer-pesticide storage and distribution facility in the San Joaquin Valley, Calif. The plant was not identified in the article.

Man caught in Chicago not fugitive sought

CHICAGO (AP) — Fingerprint identification of a man arrested Thursday morning at O'Hare International Airport showed he was not fugitive Michael L. Trapp, as Chicago police believed when they arrested him, authorities said. Trapp, 31, escaped last Friday from the Winnebago County (Wis.) Courthouse, where he was awaiting arraignment on charges of armed robbery and escape Sept. 9 from a nearby Wisconsin prison farm, said Winnebago County Sheriff Terry Fotti.

Firefighters fought a fire at the Pyramid Lumber Co. in Carbondale Thursday morning.

Fire destroys Pyramid Lumber

By John Krukowski
Staff Writer

A fire early Thursday morning destroyed the main building of Pyramid Lumber Inc., 1200 N. Marion St., Carbondale.

According to Carbondale Township Fire Chief Ron Epperheimer, the fire began shortly before midnight of "suspicious origins," and was reported by officers of the Carbondale Police Department at 12:07 a.m. Epperheimer said that the building was totally engulfed in flames when the fire department arrived at the scene. No injuries were reported.

The blaze took about two hours to control, Epperheimer said, and firefighters were still taking care of smoldering debris at the site until 10:30 a.m.

The chief said that the sort of flammable materials stored at the lumberyard contributed to the long time needed to put out lingering fires.

Epperheimer said that there were no major explosions at the scene.

Epperheimer said that damage to the lumber yard, which included its showroom, is estimated at $500,000 to $700,000.

Patchett, Gray clash in House contest

By Jay Schmitz
Staff Writer

The U.S. Representative race in the 22nd District has often been a personality clash between the two candidates — Ken Gray, the Democrat attempting to return to the seat he vacated in 1975, and Republican Randy Patchett, Williamson County state's attorney who wants to give the GOP the 22nd District seat for the first time in 30 years.

Apart from the personal attacks, the candidates have also had several substantial differences of opinion on how to deal with issues pertinent to Southern Illinoisians.

Coal and acid rain

Both say that research on the causes of acid rain and solutions to the problem is essential. Both say that they would work to prevent any acid rain legislation unfavorable to Southern Illinois coal miners, until this research is done, and that the entire country should share in the costs of controls.

In addition, Gray advocates the installation of scrubbers if research shows high-sulfur coal is the main cause of acid rain. Patchett says that scrubbers are too expensive, and new and cheaper solutions to the problem would be found before scrubbers could be installed.

Both agree that it would be beneficial to export to other countries. Gray says he would like to see additional uses for coal and its by-products developed. Patchett advocates tax breaks to stimulate in-state use of Illinois coal, and forcing utilities to absorb the cost of transporting coal, which would also stimulate in-state use.

Patchett

Jobs and the Economy

Gray says he would have federal money pumped into the region, through Corps of Engineer, road, defense and infrastructure projects. In addition, he said he would push public and private efforts to increase the tourist industry. These ideas are part of his "10-point economic recovery plan" which he has stressed throughout his campaign.

Other key points in the plan are: the formation of an economic development commission, and defense budget cuts of $100 million, half of this money being used to reduce the federal deficit and half for education and jobs programs. He is against a balanced budget amendment, saying that the president would cut social programs to obtain a balanced budget.

Patchett says that he would work to "sell" Southern Illinois.

Marion lockdown a prudent measure

FEWER THAN 20 MILES from Carbondale stands the most secure federal prison in the country. It houses what are considered America's most dangerous criminals.

Since October 1983, the U.S. Penitentiary in Marion has been in a virtual state of lockdown as a result of a series of unrelated violent incidents in which two guards and one inmate were killed during a six-day period.

The lockdown has in turn prompted a class action suit on behalf of the about 250 affected prisoners who claim, among other things, that "goon squads," routine beatings, and unjustified rectal searches by guards are a part of everyday life.

Three lawyers, acting voluntarily, represent the inmates. The attorneys tried to obtain injunctive relief from what they describe as a "pattern of abuse and retaliation" on the part of prison officials and guards. Warden Jerry Williford flatly denies the charges.

AT THE HEART of the controversy, which has mobilized on behalf of the prisoners such activist groups as the Leonard Peltier Support Group, is the contention that the prison's general population is being denied rights to due process, guaranteed under the Fifth and 14th Amendments.

Under the law, any prisoner given "control-unit" status — the status reserved for the most violent and dangerous inmates — is entitled to a court trial before being so classified. Inmates placed in control-unit status have little personal freedom.

The class action suit claims that the general population has, in effect, been placed in the control unit. The prisoners' counsel charges that the prison administration has sidestepped its obligation to provide the inmates a fair trial simply by not terming it "control-unit."

But this doesn't appear to be the case. Prisoners are allowed two hours per day in the law library, two hours per week in both the open air recreation yard and the prison gymnasium, and an hour each day outside their cells. Also, each cell contains its own television set — hardly the conditions of the standard control-unit.

NO ONE IN THE PRISON'S control-unit, which holds but a handful of inmates, is entitled to these kinds of privileges.

A report of a formal investigation by the Subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee, the federal body whose task it is to monitor all federal prisons, is due to be released Nov. 5. The report should shed some light on the prisoners' allegations of abuse and lack of religious freedom, and also indicate whether or not the prison administration has acted appropriately.

No one knows for certain what the ramifications of the report will be if it supports the prisoners' allegations. But unless it can be concretely shown by either the House Subcommittee or another unbiased investigatory commission that the prisoners' rights are being violated by sadistic guards or "administrative malpractice," the lockdown status for Marion Penitentiary should remain in effect. It seems unlikely that such findings will be made.

The need for adequate corrective and protective measures in maintaining prison security must be balanced with the prisoners' civil rights. But it should also be remembered that the practical reality of housing the most dangerous criminals in the United States under one roof necessarily requires — for the simple safety of the prison guards and the surrounding civilian populace — a stricter and more controlled approach.

Ghandi shooting marks latest in long line of domestic killings

By Chris Ogbondah
Student Writer

IS THERE a cognizable pattern in the way many world leaders have died? Indira Ghandi's assassination on Tuesday not only turns the eyes of the world to India, but also presents the opportunity to examine any general pattern in the way many political leaders have bade farewell to this life.

Notably enough, Ghandi's assassination just lengthens the list of world leaders slain by the swords of their subjects. In India she was not the first political figure to kiss the sword of her own subjects. Mahatma Ghandi, the political pundit in India's independence and popularly referred to as the "Father of India," was slain in 1948 by a religious fanatic.

In neighboring Bangladesh, Prime Minister Mujib Rahman was assassinated in a coup d'etat in 1975 by military who also hanged ex-Prime Minister Ali Bhutto for criminal charges. In 1981, the military in that country also assassinated General Zia Ur Rahman in a bloody coup.

SIMILAR CASES can be found in other parts of Asia. President Park Chung Hee of South Korea was assassinated in 1979 by the director of the Korean Central Intelligence Agency, who shot him at a dinner in Geisha House in Seoul. In 1963 Ngo Dinh Diem was killed in a military coup.

Anwar Sadat of Egypt, who was described as a custodian of peace and stability in the Middle East, was shot and killed by religious fanatics in 1981. The death of the second most political figure in the Philippines, opposition leader Aquino, did not depart from this general pattern. On arrival from the United States where he had been on exile, he was fatally shot by that country's military guards.

In Europe, Pope John Paul II, Queen Elizabeth II and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher narrowly escaped assassination. South America has had a string of political leaders. In Chile, Marxist Salvador Allende was brought down from the throne of power and assassinated in a military coup. In the tiny West Indian Island of Grenada, Prime Minister Bishop Maurice was fatally shot by his own people.

ECHOES OF GUNS are frequently heard at presidential houses in Africa. One of the most celebrated cases of assassination of a president was the murder of Patrice Lumumba of Congo. In Somalia, President Abdirashi Ali Sharmarke was violently assassinated by his bodyguards in 1969.

In Nigeria, two heads of state, Major General Aguiyi Ironsi and General Murtala Ramat Muhammed, were brutally assassinated by military officers of the federal guards in 1966 and 1975 respectively. The country's first prime minister, Alhaji Tafawa Balewa Abubaker, was also assassinated in 1966. In neighboring Ghana, all of the country's leaders but Nkruma were shot and killed on the same day, following Lieutenant Jerry Rawlings' first coup.

In North America, the United States has had its share of assassinations and attempts. On Jan. 30, 1835, Richard Lawrence aimed pistol shots at President Andrew Jackson. Although Jackson escaped unhurt, that incident was the first attempted assassination aimed at a president.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN was the first president to die when John Wilkes Booth, an actor who favored the South in the Civil War, entered and unguarded theater box and shot him in the head on April 14, 1865.

On July 2, 1881, Charles J. Guiteau, a radical member of the ruling Republican Party, shot President James Garfield as he strolled by a Washington, D.C., railroad station. Garfield died about two months later.

President William McKinley died eight days after being shot in the chest by an anarchist, Leon F. Czolgosz, at the Pan American Exposition in Buffalo, N.Y., on Sept. 6, 1901. While campaigning for another term in office, Theodore Roosevelt was shot twice by John N. Shrenk on Oct. 12, 1912.

THE WORLD was shocked when Franklin Roosevelt escaped an assassination attempt on Feb. 15, 1933, by Giuseppe Zangara, who blamed capitalists on his stomach pains. Roosevelt escaped harm, but Chicago Mayor Anton Cermak was killed in the assassination attempt.

On Nov. 1, 1950, two Puerto Rican terrorists killed a guard when they tried to shoot their way into the Blair House, the temporary Washington, D.C., home of Harry Truman.

One of the most horrifying assassinations of recent times was the murder of John F. Kennedy in Dallas, Texas, on Nov. 22, 1963. Presidents Gerald Ford and Ronald Reagan narrowly escaped attempts on their lives.

The list of world leaders who were assassinated is so long that making a comprehensive roll would be an odious task. They die by the swords of their subjects who ironically should protect them against external villains.

Blasters dancers just having fun

In response to Doug Williams confusion over all the fun of dancing and stage diving at the Blasters' show, picking up girls can be trying and a hassle. Getting in a fight is usually real stupid, and even more of a hassle. Mellowing out with a few friends and standing bored when so much energy is present is a waste of life.

Dancing is fun. You don't even have to be drunk. The only hassle I had was avoiding the people who were hitting and threatening the people who were dancing. The activity in question is good clean wholesome fun. It creates group unity, and supports a whole bunch of other basically fundamental ideas. I'm glad we shook some people up. — Ed Nichols, Junior, Education.

McClure has best stance on education

In less than a week a major national, state and local election will be upon us. This election will be one of the most important elections in most of our lifetimes. It will be important nationally with the election of our nation's president, but also locally because of the increased responsibility of the state government. Many responsibilities that the national government once handled are now on the shoulders of the state of Illinois. Many of these responsibilities affect us directly and hit close to home; i.e. student aid and aid to state universities.

With this increase in responsibility by the state, the position of our state senator affects our lives more than ever before. Because of this fact, our choice for the 58th District state Senate is more important than it ever has been in the past. One candidate for state Senate from our district stands out; that person is Gary McClure. Gary's abilities as a speaker and experience as a government official will allow him to communicate, to be accessible and open to the people he represents; and to be effective in passing legislation for his constituents. The fresh ideas that he will take to Springfield will benefit all of us — ideas like not raising tuition, but lowering it to make higher education available to everyone who wants it. His opponent has said that he doesn't think education needs more funding at this time. Gary knows education needs more funding now and in the future. Ideas like these and many others will make the 58th Legislative District, and Southern Illinois as a whole, a better place to live and raise a family. — Michael Zurek, Junior, Political Science.

Republican record on education is unfavorable

Long after this year's economic trends become another lounce in the business cycle, our generation and its children will be affected by the support we give to today's and tomorrow's students and teachers.

An educated electorate is a prerequisite for democracy. In our increasingly complex world, education allows us to understand, adapt and excel. Our future compels us to examine the education policies offered by the political perils in this year's election.

Ronald Reagan, the Republican standard-bearer, proposed in 1982 to cut the major federal program for needy college students, the $2.6 billion Pell Grant program, by $1 billion. Those cuts would have eliminated 750,000 students out of the 2.7 million receiving grants and resulted in reductions for many others. By 1983, the administration would have cut the program in half.

Though Congress resisted these initiatives, there has been a "serious erosion" of the program's effectiveness, according to Joseph Murphy, Chancellor of the City University of New York and Chairman of the National Pell Grant Coalition. He points out that in 1979, Pell Grants covered 46 percent of college expenses; today only 31 percent.

The result, he says, is "an economic nightmare: Students are faced with the choice of dropping out of college or assuming crippling debts."

Meanwhile, the administration proposed to cut existing subsidies on interest rates for guaranteed loans while the borrower was in school and increased rates 25 percent on National Direct Student Loans.

Funding for the National Science Foundation, which supports college research and science programs, was to be cut by nearly $1 billion over four years.

The Reagan-led onslaught on support for education was not limited to colleges and universities. Funding for elementary and secondary education would have been halved as well.

That these measures did not succeed in due in is no small measure to the efforts of people like Paul Simon, Chairman of the House Subcommittee on Higher Education, and Democratic candidate for the U.S. Senate. Simon opposed Reagan administration budget cuts in higher education funding totalling $4.1 billion.

Our congressman was not content with merely holding the line against the Reagan budget ax. Recognizing the deficiencies in education, he authored the Emergency Math, Science and Foreign Languages Act to provide for curriculum modernization and ensure continued U.S. leadership in business and technology.

In 1983, Paul Simon received a special award from the United Negro Fund for his efforts to assure the financial viability of historically black colleges and universities.

Simon's opponent, Republican incumbent Charles Percy, has shed his early moderation in favor of a more unabashed conservatism, leading him to support administration cuts in elementary and secondary education and Pell Grants. Indeed, Percy has repeatedly voted against education funding, though not without characteristic flip-flops.

Charles Percy initially voted for an amendment offered by Sen. John Chafee (R-R.I.) which included $2 billion in funding for higher education, only to reverse his position minutes later, leading to the amendment's defeat.

When two-thirds of the U.S. Senate voted to successfully override Ronald Reagan's veto of a supplemental appropriation including $217 million for college student aid, Percy was in the minority position.

David Stockman, director of Office of Management and Budget, has predicted that Ronald Reagan's second-term agenda would include renewed efforts to trim such programs as student aid and medical care for the elderly. When the Reagan empire strikes back at the education future of America a second time, who do you want there to hold the line? — Glenn W. Richardson, Senior, Political Science.

Simon is no friend to farmers

With a friend like Paul Simon, the poor farmer doesn't need any enemies.

In 1984, of the 19 farm related bills that came before the U.S. Congress, Paul Simon voted for one bill, against nine bills, and did not vote on the nine other bills. Simon had more non-votes than all of the other Illinois congressmen combined. Paul Simon supported the farmer the least of the 14 Illinois congressmen.

In 1983 we had a drought in Southern Illinois and have had fairly good crops in 1984, but with all the rains we have had, most of the crops are still in the fields. In other words, the farmers' paycheck is out there in the field and he can't get to it because of muddy fields.

Simon's opponent's voting record on agriculture related bills is much better than Simon's. These 19 bills were supported by the American Farm Bureau, and you can check with your local Farm Bureau to check on the voting record of your senators and representatives. The farmer has received from Simon the same as the rest of the people, rhetoric, rhetoric and more rhetoric.

Evidently Simon thinks that big labor and Mayor Harold Washington's Welfare City plus all the others in the state who get paid for being poor will get him elected. Simon voted against the tax reduction of 1981 and he is already talking about raising our income taxes and he hasn't even been elected yet.

You'll note Ken Gray's signs say "Let's Get Southern Illinois Moving Again" and "Elect Ken Gray to Congress." Evidently Gray thinks Simon did a poor job, too.

Anyone who would vote against the most important business there is, as consistently as Simon, would probably vote against motherhood and apple pie. I recently saw a bumper sign that said, "If you get hungry, you can eat your foreign car." If Paul Simon gets hungry, he can eat his bow tie. — R.D. Downey, Carbondale.

McClure offers leadership

I must strongly disagree with your recent endorsement of Ralph Dunn for the Illinois Senate.

Dunn's experience would be helpful if it benefited the people of this district. From my observation, it ha. not. Dunn has consistently supported the policies of Republican Gov. Thompson and President Reagan. These policies have meant the elimination of the Illinois Veterans Scholarship and less money for education, coal research and other programs which benefit Southern Illinois.

Let's face the facts. Gary McClure is a young, aggressive graduate of SIU-C. McClure will be a member of the majority party of the Illinois Senate where the Democratic leadership has already made a commitment that McClure will be a majority member of the Appropriations II Committee. This is the committee that funds SIU-C, mental health, and corrections institutions.

Don't let our educational programs in Southern Illinois slide backwards. Continue in the tradition of our Southern Illinois leaders like Paul Simon, Ken Buzbee, and Bruce Richmond.

It will take aggressive leadership in the state Senate for Southern Illinois to continue to get its share from state government. Elect Gary McClure to the state Senate for the future of Southern Illinois. — Mary Carroll, Senior, Political Science.

Democratic candidates will support education

You know, it's interesting to hear each election how the Republicans care so very, very much about education. You would almost think that they really cared about higher education until you look at their record.

During the Reagan administration, hundreds of thousands of students across this country have been thrown out of school because of cuts in Pell Grants, National Direct Student Loans, Guaranteed Student Loans, Illinois Veterans Scholarships, and College-Work-Study money. Evidently the president believes that we can move into the future with a less educated society.

The fact is that under Ronald Reagan, we are asked to buy 100 B-1 bombers at $248 million a piece, while the entire Federal College-Work-Stud, budget is only $348 million.

On the state level we have had an anti-education administration in Springfield that attempts to fund its facul' salary increases by pitting faculty against students, telling faculty that unless they support higher tuition there will be no cost-of-living increases. Of course they can't find the tax revenues for education, but they can find the cash for three new jets for Big Jim Thompson's Air Force.

"Oh yes, we support education," they say. But tuition at SIU-C has doubled in just six years. This means a scaled-down SIU-C, and economic trouble for Carbondale, Jackson County and Southern Illinois.

Let's judge these anti-education Republicans for what they are: fair-weather friends. And let's elect some candidates who will help.

The Democratic candidates will work hard for education, delivering performance, not just promises. Vote for education by voting Democratic on Nov. 6. Do yourself and your children's future a favor.— Thomas Jurgens, Junior, Political Science.

Patchett preferable to 'party back' Gray

Chalk up another back-handed endorsement for Ken Gray. The Daily Egyptian has reluctantly shuffled over to his side despite admitting that: Gray claims "he was 'brain-washed' into supporting the Vietnam war," is "part of a machine that no longer exists," and that his style is "often irritating." The D.E. says, "The choice is between which party hack you prefer," and predictably endorses a Democrat who gives new meaning to the word 'hack'.

'Hack' is defined in Webster's as "one who forfeits individual freedom of action or professional integrity in exchange for wages or other assured rewards." The Chicago Tribune, in strongly endorsing Randy Patchett, said Gray "... got rich in the process of funneling federal cash into his district and retired to Florida, but is now back promising his constituents (and presumably himself) more of the same."

Randy Patchett, on the other hand, has proven to be an honest and effective state's attorney for Williamson County. And while he agrees with his president on many issues (he is a Republican, after all), he said in last week's debate that he wants to help correct the president on some issues, too. "There you go again," he told Gray; "I'm not Ronald Reagan." Randy's no hack and the D.E. should know better.

Randy Patchett graduated from SIU-C then went on to get his law degree here. His frequent visits to the campus show how much he values his student constituency.

The race is a virtual dead heat, and some believe it will be SIU-C students who will decide the issue for the entire district. That's got to be a scary thought for Ken Gray, because he knows they won't be swayed by his jokes, poems, wild porcine promises or evangelical style. SIU-C students are going to use their heads. And they just might send Randy Patchett to Washington. — Tim Capps, Senior, Radio-Television.

Contract to end pay-increase delay

By Karen Wilberger
Staff Writer

The University and the Civil Service Bargaining Organization settled minor language changes in the union's contract Wednesday, which is expected to be approved by both parties early next week, said William Capi, executive director of personnel.

Capi said he expects a final contract to be signed by the University and the CSBO at a meeting scheduled for next Tuesday. The last union contract expired June 30.

The move would end a four-month delay in the distribution of pay increases approved by the union's rank and file in July.

The CSBO dropped its demand for a fair share last week, ending about six weeks of negotiations, Capi said. He said fair share negotiations reached an "impasse," and was the major obstacle in reaching an agreement.

Capi said employees represented by the CSBO should receive a 6 percent increase on their checks starting in early December if there are no further delays. He said the retroactive pay to July should be paid at the same time, but it hasn't been determined if it will be a separate check.

Responding to allegations that the University "foot-dragged" during the process, Capi said the University is responsible for some of the delays, but not all.

"We didn't want to string out the process," Capi said, saying that slow negotiations are "the standard rather than the exception."

He said when the University did delay a meeting it was because it had 15 other contracts to negotiate and couldn't attend all the meetings of each organization.

Capi said that Lee Hester has been removed as chief CSBO negotiator, and Sharon Grissom, acting president of CSBO, would take his place for final negotiations. Hester retired from the University in August.

Hester and Grissom were unavailable for comment Wednesday.

Grad Council wants study on fellowship standards

By Ed Foley
Staff Writer

A Graduate Council resolution to relax one aspect of the requirements for the Morris Fellowship for doctoral students was sent back to committee Thursday.

Discussion of the fellowship ranged so far from the point of the resolution that the chairman of the Educational Policies committee, Robert Radtke, was asked by the council to go back to his committee, which authored the proposal, and prepare a complete report on the fellowship.

The resolution proposed that students not enrolled in a doctoral program be made eligible for the award — a stipend of $8,500 and a tuition waiver — on the condition that they were certified by their department as being "doctoral-track" students. As the requirements stand, nominees must have completed master's work to be considered.

The guidelines of the fellowship require that preference be given to outstanding scholars from outside the SIU-C community, according to Radtke, but only two of the last nine selected had no previous connection with SIU-C. The resolution opens up eligibility to those who must technically get their master's "en route" to their doctorate, as opposed to the few departments that allow post-baccalaureate students to go directly into a doctoral program.

The great majority of applicants from outside SIU-C belong to the former category, so more will be attracted to apply, said Radtke, psychology faculty member.

Concern about the ambiguity of the word "preference" in the requirements, the lack of set written eligibility requirements and the uncertainty that "doctoral-track" students would indeed go on for their doctorate prompted the council to ask the Educational Policies Committee to prepare a full report on the award.

The council, however, voted to go ahead with the publicity for this year's applicants without deviation from past practices.

CONTEST: Candidates clash

to bring overseas and domestic industry to Southern Illinois. Private initiative, not government-funded projects, will create long-term economic growth, Patchett says, though government should provide low-interest loans as incentive money. Tourism is one industry which would benefit from loans to entrepreneurs, he says. He is in favor of a balanced budget amendment, he says.

Education

Gray says that he favors increased funding of education to schools, to stimulate research for coal and other technologies. He says that education programs would enhance the potential of Southern Illinois.

Patchett says that education is the best way to relieve the poverty situation in Southern Illinois, by providing training for unskilled workers. He advocates retraining programs for the unemployed, and more money for research projects.

Defense and nuclear politics

Patchett advocates a strong defense, with a decreased dependence on nuclear weapons and a buildup of conventional forces. He says competitive bidding on contracts would cut waste in defense spending. He advocates a "build-down" program, which would be mutual destruction of a number of nuclear weapons by the superpowers.

Gray advocates a $100 billion cut in the defense budget, half to be used to lower the federal deficit, and half for education and jobs programs. He says that efficient spending would enable the United States to maintain its effectiveness as a fighting force. He is in favor of a verifiable bilateral nuclear freeze.

Students' knowledge grows at University Farms

Working at the University Farms as an undergraduate gave Elden Shaffner a broader spectrum about farming practices and exposed him to new ideas.

He is now manager of the farms, which still provide firsthand knowledge for students as well as a place for faculty to do research, he said. Faculty members teach classes and labs at the farms and students get to see the daily routines and practices on a farm.

The farms cover 2,000 acres and have animal centers for beef and dairy cattle, swine, sheep, poultry and horses, as well as plant research centers. The farms began in the late 1950s with just the Poultry Center and the Dairy Center, Shaffner said.

THE FARMS are also a "financial plus" for the 30 to 35 students who work there, he said. Also, other students work for class credit.

Not all universities who teach agriculture have farms. That is not necessarily a handicap, but, without the farms, SIU-C's ag program "would suffer somewhat," Shaffner said.

"The farms give the students an opportunity to get firsthand experience and become more involved and knowledgeable before they leave to go apply for a job," he said. The farms also allow students without farm backgrounds to become more acquainted with agriculture in order to compete with others who have lived on a farm.

*Stories by Joyce Vonderheide

MORE STUDENTS without farm backgrounds are entering agriculture majors, Shaffner said. They may not be studying farming per se, but may be more interested in a related area.

"The idea of agriculture stimulates some people," he said. "They want to get involved because it's a more outdoor activity that they enjoy doing instead of sitting behind a desk."

He said students who go back to the farm take more advanced ideas with them and make the farm more productive and efficient.

More women are also studying agriculture, Shaffner said. According to School of Agriculture figures, 17 women were majoring in agriculture in 1970, almost 2 percent of the school's enrollment. Today, the 235 women in the School of Agriculture are 31 percent of the enrollment. Dean Gilbert Kroening said the number of women has fluctuated between 25 and 33 percent in recent years.

BESIDES EDUCATING students, farmers and the public are educated through services at the farms. Farmers can call to ask questions. Livestock judging training is held for junior colleges, as well as activities for 4-H and Future Farmers of America members.

Tours are offered for two weeks in the spring and a week in the fall, during which kindergartens, grade schools and schools for the handicapped can visit the farms. Shaffner said 1,200 students visited the farms one year.

"When you get a bunch of youngsters from kindergarten or on through the grade school level, you can just see it in their eyes, how thrilled they are. A lot of these are students or youngsters brought up in a non-farm background," Shaffner said. "It may be one of the first chances they have had to touch, feel or look at an animal from a firsthand experience."

WORK AT THE farms focuses on the needs of Southern Illinois farmers. Southern Illinois has a lot of beef and dairy cattle and orchards and some swine. Horses are also popular. Shaffner said the ground in Southern Illinois is more livestock-oriented because of high soil erosion.

The six animal centers make the University diverse and one center isn't favored over another. Shaffner suggested that it may not be good to be so diverse because programs may be spread too thin.

Products generated from the centers, such as meat, milk and eggs, are sold and the money is put in a general fund for the livestock centers, he said. Some centers are self-supporting, while others are not. The profits vary from year to year depending on factors such as feed and livestock prices.

ABOUT SIX years ago the Swine Center was supporting the other centers, Shaffner said, because hog prices were good and hogs have a quicker market turnover than other animals. The cycle changed when hog prices went down and grain prices increased. Another center picked up the slack then.

Shaffner said the objective at the farms is not to make money. "Basically, we're here, as I see it, to support our teaching program at the school itself."

However, farm management is not an area that goes unnoticed. If, for example, one type of feed is cheaper and gives the same results as another, it will be substituted. When gas prices rose three years ago, Shaffner said some farming practices had to be eliminated.

Farmers in the past didn't pay as much attention to what they planted and how much they spent. Today farmers have to be more aware of costs as well as laws, such as environmental and soil erosion laws.

The farms try to be as cost-efficient as possible, but sometimes research requires that more money be spent. Unbiased results are more expensive, Shaffner said.

Beef station tests breeders' top bulls

The University's Beef Evaluation Station allows breeders to bring in their best bulls for comparison with others. Gary Daniels, station manager, said breeders can't accurately compare animals at their own farms because of different environments, feeds and feeding conditions.

At the end of the 140-day testing at SIU-C, breeders have a more accurate means to compare. "If they all bring their bulls down here," Daniels said, "and we feed them (over) the same period of time in the same barn with the same feed and the same people feeding them, they can accurately compare the true genetic differences between their bulls."

Breeders from all parts of Illinois, southeast Missouri and parts of Kentucky bring their bulls in mid-October when the animals are about 7 months old.

Testing is on a first-come, first-served basis with a maximum of 72 animals. Daniels said bulls are rated and ranked according to rate of gain, feed conversion and weight per day of age. Rate of gain is the amount of pounds gained per day, and feed conversion is the amount of feed necessary to put on a pound of weight. Weight per day of gain is weight divided by number of days old and is a measure of total growth, taking into account gains from birth to weaning.

Daniels said most states have one or two facilities similar to the station at SIU-C. Western Illinois University also has an evaluation station.

A testing fee of $125 is charged for facility maintenance and labor costs. Breeders are also charged for their animal's individual feed consumption.

The animals are kept inside and not let out to pasture. Each animal can only eat from a certain feed stall. The door to the stall is unlocked by an electronic key around the animals' necks. The animals quickly learn which door is theirs, Daniels said.

The bulls are divided into breed and size categories, but no particular breed has been the top bull over the 10 years that the evaluation station has operated. Daniels said there is more variation within the breeds than among them.

The animals are sold in an auction in April, which attracts 300 to 500 people. Ninety percent of the bulls are sold to Southern Illinois cattle producers. However, one year a man from South Dakota made a phone bid, Daniels said.

The animals usually sell for $1,000 to $1,500 each, but 120 years ago one bull was sold for $10,000, Daniels said.

At the auction, producers can select bulls based on performance records, he said. The bulls are sold ranked from best to worst according to a composite score. Even the worst animals, though, are still good animals because breeders bring their best animals to the evaluation station.

Farm research is well-known, but facilities seem as inadequate

SIU-C's agricultural research is recognized nationally and SIU-C professors would like to increase that recognition. However, research is hampered by inadequate facilities to do quality research, said Tony Young, chairman of animal industries.

Young said he receives six to 10 viable project proposals each year, but is only able to accept two or three. Research is competitively priced and costs would be "astronomical" if requests for grants included costs necessary to renovate facilities to meet objectives of a grant.

The problem isn't that research funds aren't available. "We turn down enough grants each year to more than pay for the facilities that we need in a four- or five-year period because we don't have the adequate facilities to do research," Young said. "You can't accept a grant unless you have the facilities to meet the conditions of that grant."

USUALLY ABOUT 15 graduate assistants have research projects, and sometimes two or three are working on the same project, Young said. Livestock research concentrates on nutrition and physiology in six animals — dairy and beef cattle, swine, sheep, horses and poultry. Research at SIU-C gives local farmers a chance "to see some of the new research on a first-hand basis," Young said. "It also gives them a chance to look at how new products will respond in their particular environment."

Improving storage and utilization of wet corn gluten is the objective of one research project, Young said. Corn gluten is a by-product of the wet milling process which has been dried in the past and used as feed. The product is now being fed to livestock in its wet form, but it has a short storage life.

ANOTHER PROJECT concerns trying to improve horse fertility rates and finding ways to treat mares who have difficulty coming into heat. A small project at the Beef Center will determine intake of new antibiotics in medicated blocks for beef cattle, Young said.

SIU-C's livestock centers were built in the 1950s and "have outlived their useful life expectancy," Young said, "and they need funds to renovate them and keep them up."

Young said "SIU's facilities can't be competitive with facilities at the U of I," where facilities are well-maintained.

Some of the centers may have to be closed if budgets don't change to allow for renovation. Young said closing the centers would limit SIU-C and make it a less comprehensive university.

GETTING CAPITAL development funds approved has not been easy. Young said other universities seem to be better at getting funds released for updating facilities.

Dean of the School of Agriculture Gilbert Kroening said that funds have been requested since 1973, but there has been difficulty getting funds from the governor's office. Keeping facilities in shape is a constant battle, he added.

Gerald Coorts, chairman of the Plant and Soil Science Department, said a new pesticide laboratory is needed to store pesticides and mix them for use on plots. Additional space is also needed for storing equipment.

Some laboratory facilities are so old that they aren't used for critical work and research may be hindered if facilities aren't improved. "We're bulging at the seams," Coorts said.

THE PLANT and Soil Science Department has modest state support for general operating expenses, plant and soil science professor George Kapusta said, but state funds are more difficult to get compared to 10 or 20 years ago. Kapusta is superintendent of SIU-C's Agronomy Research Center and the Belleville Research Center and coordinates research at those stations. Kapusta said federal grants are difficult to obtain. Nationally $500,000 is available for research in his area.

"Five hundred thousand dollars does not go very far," Kapusta said. "And 60, 70, 80 universities are competing for it, and several research groups within each university are competing for it."

HE ADDED that $100,000 is not a large sum to conduct meaningful research for two or three years.

SIU-C usually comes in second to the University of Illinois but "does do quite well in competing for funds," Kapusta said.

Commodity groups also provide funds. Soybean producers have a checkoff program in which one-half cent of every bushel sold is used for market development and research, Kapusta said.

The amount available from that source ranges from $50,000 to $100,000 each year depending on yields. He said in years with good yields, more funds are targeted for market development, while in years with smaller yields, more attention is given to research.

Firebugs have a blast with cannon

The Quigley Circle cannon, an SIU-C landmark, was subjected to an illegal paint-removal job of scrts early Wednesday morning, an SIU-C police spokesman said.

The spokesman said that shortly after midnight a student who was out for a walk noticed that the cannon was on fire. He notified the police, who later determined that the cannon had been doused with a flammable liquid and then lit by unknown people.

The cannon lost several layers of paint, the spokesman said, but not to fear. The cannon has a tradition of mysteriously changing colors overnight "and there are probably several more layers of paint left," the spokesman said.

Beethoven Society recital scheduled

Paul Simon spoke at a Simon for Senate rally in the Student Center Wednesday night.

Campaign brings Simon to SIU-C

By Darren Hillock
Staff Writer

After a long day of campaigning in Southern Illinois, Paul Simon still had enough voice left to attack the policies of his opponent in the Senate race, Charles Percy, one more time.

At a rally at the SIU-C Student Center, Simon said Percy has cut $4 billion from social services.

"That's a savings, but a savings like when you build a house without a roof," Simon said in a hoarse voice that he said "was about gone."

The rally in Carbondale came at the end of a campaign tour through the southern portion of the state. Simon and other Democratic candidates, such as Ken Gray who is running for the U.S. House of Representatives from the 22nd District, campaigned in eight towns before Carbondale.

Simon told the enthusiastic crowd of about 150 that he isn't surprised that Percy has received large campaign contributions from oil companies and dumpers of toxic wastes.

"He's on their side," Simon said. "I'm on yours."

Simon quoted a column by Mike Royko, Chicago Tribune columnist, that said the distortions in advertisements run by Percy's campaign would make a used-car salesman blush with embarrassment. Distortions in advertisements have been a prominent issue in the Senate race.

"If you see the TV ads, you may not recognize Paul Simon," Simon said.

Simon, sprinkling his speech with references to familiar faces he saw in the crowd, said he wanted to make a deal with the audience.

"You work hard for me the next six days and I'll work hard for you for the next six years," he said.

Simon said that although the race was obviously close, the latest poll he had seen had himself ahead of Percy by 1 percent.

Before Simon, several candidates for other offices in Southern Illinois spoke. Ken Gray, who arrived after Simon, addressed the crowd after him.

Gray loosened his bow tie and told the crowd that he wanted to clear something up while Simon was still in the hall.

Gray said that Percy's claim that Simon is only running for the Senate because Gray was talking about running for the House again is wrong.

Those claims are about as far from the truth as Japan is from Illinois, Gray said.

Dance teacher has high hopes for student repertory company

By Tanya Abramoske
Student Writer

Getting into the Southern Illinois Repertory Dance Theater isn't easy. Of 31 students who auditioned, only 8 were accepted.

Director Linda Kostalik has high hopes for the group and her track record is impressive. During her first four years as a SIU-C dance instructor, about 10 of her students went on to become professional dancers and teachers.

"That's very unusual since it's such a competitive field," Kostalik said.

The student dance company performs one or two major concerts per semester. The group is also planning to go to Edwardsville in February.

"I'm very excited about this group of people. They like each other and they are very talented," she said. "They have inspired me to do a large group piece which I don't usually do."

Kostalik said she would like to expand the group's touring program, which is possible since co-director Evelyn Mojica joined the program. But even with an expanded program, the company doesn't have enough time to do all the concerts it would like.

Although rehearsals and workouts take up much of their time, the dancers are required to maintain a 2.7 grade point average.

"If students weren't students we'd probably be dancing all over the place," she said.

The enthusiasm and dedication of the students contributes to the positive atmosphere of the company, Kostalik said.

"Students have an active role in the organization of the group and try to make it as professional as possible," Kostalik said.

"In a few years we will have some outstanding dancers," she said. Many of the company members are sophomores and will have time to improve together, Kostalik said, and the group is willing to work at it.

"The students have such an enthusiasm and a love for dance," she said.

"It's like a hunger. The urge to dance comes from the human spirit. It's the thing that moves people to write, or sing, or perform. There's something that drives us to create."

A dancer since age 3, Kostalik too, has that love. She moved to SIU-C from San Francisco in 1975 after 10 years of professional dancing.

"I wasn't sure about teaching but I found the students were really talented," she said.

Now Kostalik is working toward improving and expanding the SIU-C dance program. She said the department is in a "transitional period" and is growing. This year was the first that students could have a dance major here. Previously, students had to create a special major to study dance.

Kostalik said she wants to the program to become one of the University's major departments.

"It's going to take a lot of work but I think it's possible," she said. "That's our dream."

SIU-C alumni to speak at Telpro lecture

Debbie Kapusta and Tommy Thaviv of KFVS-TV in Cape Girardeau will give advice on breaking into a career in television at a lecture which will be given at 4 p.m. Friday in the channel 8 studio.

The lecture is part of the Telpro guest lecture series and is open to all interested students.

Kapusta and Thaviv both are graduates of SIU-C and were members of Telpro, the student production company, the International Television Association and Alpha Epsilon Rho.

Renaissance play to be performed

Musical accompaniment plus child actors will lend an authentic flavor to "A Trick to Catch the Old One," a seventeenth century comedy to be performed at 7 p.m. Friday in the Morris Library Auditorium. Thomas Middleton's renaissance play, steeped in the Elizabethan and Jacobean traditions of London-based comedy, will be performed by members of the English Department. The staged reading is free and open to the public.

Prison's newspaper a winner

By Bill Walker
Staff Writer

Although the U.S. Penitentiary at Marion, the nation's highest security prison, is by far the most notorious prison in Southern Illinois, the area is also home to one of the nation's most progressive, minimum-security prisons, the Vienna Correctional Center.

With its modern buildings, dormitory-style living quarters and lack of physical barriers to the outside world, the Vienna facility actually looks more like a sma<sup>ll</sup> college campus than a prison.

Through the use of progressive policies, coupled with the advantages of modern physical surroundings and special selection of prisoners, the Vienna Correctional Center has established itself as one of the nation's model correctional institutions, said Nic Howell, public information officer for the Illinois Department of Corrections.

One's of the prison's achievements is the success of the prison paper, the VIP, Vienna in Progress.

In existence for only five years, the VIP has established itself as one of the finest prison publications in the country, Howell said, citing as proof its success in the annual Penal Press Contest held at SIU-C.

Armando Martinez, inmate editor-in-chief, also stressed the importance of the SIU-C contest.

When the inmates first started the paper, having not yet won an award "was our biggest shadow," he said. "We had to win an award at the Penal Press Contest to establish ourselves as a good prison paper."

Since 1980, when the VIP first entered the contest, it has received honorable mention in the printed newspaper category in 1981 and 1982. Last year it did its best yet, placing second among all the prison papers in the country, ahead of all Illinois prison papers including The

Menard Time, one of the consistently fine publications, Howell said.

It also won awards in other categories, receiving a total of 13 certificates, and was chosen to receive the Charles C. Clayton Award for its outstanding contributions to prison journalism.

Now that the paper is established, Martinez said, some of the enthusiasm to overcome problems is gone.

The actual printing process still causes frustrations, he said, because that is the only aspect of the paper that the inmates do not do themselves.

A main factor in the success of the paper is the educational opportunities available to the prison population in cooperation with Southeastern Illinois Community College near Harrisburg.

Courses offered range from General Education Diploma preparation to college-level instruction, making it possible for inmates to work at their own levels. For those completing the necessary requirements, associate degrees can be earned with elective courses offered in a variety of areas, including journalism.

Diana Douglas, instructor at Southeastern Illinois Community College and journalism instructor and staff adviser for the VIP, said that the inmates are offered a fine program.

In journalism, inmates can receive up to 15 hours of college credit in writing, editing, graphics and layout classes, Douglas said. And in the future the problem of no "hands-on" graphics course and printing facilities may be overcome through the needed facilities at a neighboring medium-security prison under construction on the grounds of the Vienna center.

VIP staff members each learn all aspects of the paper other than the printing process. They are encouraged to try a variety of writing assignments and participate in editing and layout.

With this year's Penal Press Contest under way, staff members are waiting to see if they have maintained, or perhaps surpassed, the position gained last year.

Choosing a Typist?
Each semester we re-type major papers for authors who use inexperienced, "bargain-rate" typists, then come to us in desperation when their paper is rejected by the Grad School. Don't let this happen to you! Evaluate your typist's credentials carefully. Does he/she provide:
► Many years experience typing academic papers?
► Evidence (not just claims) of detailed knowledge of APA, Turabian, and Grad School Requirements?
► Completion of your paper when promised?
► Neat, accurate typing or word processing?
► Superior command of the English language?
► Modern, well-maintained equipment?
► A full-time professional typing service that operates year-rounds, nights, weekends, holidays, breaks, & during bad weather?
► An established reputation for high quality, speed, & reliability?

Don't be misled by ads that copy ours. Verify your typist's word processor's claimed abilities and knowledge, and select someone who is highly competent. If the above qualities are important to you, we hope you'll choose us.

Theft prompts installation of computer lab alarm

By John Krukowski
Staff Writer

Students enrolled in the SIU-C College of Business who need to use their College's computer laboratory for homework assignments have found their access to the lab cut off for the last week because of a theft of four computer keyboards over last weekend, and their separation from the facility could last a week longer according to the College's associate dean.

It's not because the equipment was of such major importance that the lab has been shut down since the theft Friday night, but rather because the college would rather not risk another theft until an alarm system is installed, Assistant Dean Shirley Kinley said. Kinley said that utilization studies which the college has performed on the lab showed that a loss of four keyboard systems, which are valued at about $1500 each, will not place too great of a strain on the laboratory. "We found that there have never been that many people using the laboratory at one time to create a problem," Kinley said. The college is in the process of ordering new keyboards, and is also beginning to take bids for the alarm system. Associate Dean Richard Rivers said he hopes to have the alarm installed and the lab operating again by next Friday. Due dates for students' homework assignments have been delayed in the meantime, but Kinley said that the theft is "really hindering" the about 300 students whom she estimated use the lab regularly. Kinley said that the theft was discovered by a graduate student. A portion of a window in an entrance to the lab had been broken and the thieves apparently reached through the break to open the door. Nothing else in the lab was stolen, although Kinley said that the electrical cables to all the other equipment had been cut. The theft is being investigated by the SIU-C Police Department.

Woman to be executed for murder

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Velma Barfield, rejected by court after court, dropped her appeals and awaited a 2 a.m. Friday execution for poisoning her boyfriend that would make her the first woman put to death in the United States since 1962. Barfield, 52, told prison officials she would exchange her brown prison dress for her own pink cotton pajamas shortly before she was wheeled on a gurney into the death chamber to receive a lethal injection. Defense attorney Jimmy

Little said Barfield had made a "very clear-headed" decision not to carry the case to the United States Supreme Court, where she has been rejected three times in the past. Little visited Barfield at Central Prison after her case was rejected earlier in the day by a federal appeals court in Richmond, Va. Barfield confessed to poisoning St. Pauls farmer Stuart Taylor, who died Feb. 3, 1978. She also confessed to poisoning her mother and two elderly Lumberton residents who employed her as a live-in housekeeper. She repeated the confession on the witness stand while testifying at her December 1978 trial.

She was never charged in the killings of her mother and two employers.

Barfield testified she put two doses of ant poison in beverages Taylor drank Jan. 31 1978. She and Taylor attended a Rex Hubbard evangelistic service that night in Fayetteville, and Taylor became violently ill during the service and Barfield took him home. She stayed with him until he died three days later in the emergency room of a hospital.

Studio recording courses set

By Sarah Rohrs
Staff Writer

Getting recorded music to sound just right takes knowledge of sophisticated recording studio equipment and recording procedures on the part of musicians and engineers, alike.

The School of Music will offer an introductory and advanced course in the spring in studio recording engineering.

The courses will be taught in a professional recording studio in Paducah, Ky., and will offer students "hands-on" experience in taping and mixing music for recording, said Jo Ellen Smith, a secretary at the School of Music.

"The classes give students the opportunity to know how to engineer the recording equipment to make a record sound the way they want it to," she

Student arrested after argument with police officer

An SIU-C student was arrested Wednesday on a charge of obstructing a police officer, a spokesman of the SIU-C Police Department said.

Christophe Ducros, 21, Carbondale, was arrested at about noon after he had allegedly argued with a police officer and interfered while his car was being towed from a lot near Pulliam Hall, the spokesman said. Ducros' car had been illegally parked and he had accumulated unpaid traffic tickets.

Ducros was released on a notice to appear in court on Nov. 27, the spokesman said.

said.

The most essential part of the recording process is mixing the various parts of a song after it has been taped, said Dane Spalt, a senior in music business, who took the introductory course last spring.

Mixing is done on a sound board with controls that adjust by learning how to build a studio and learned how to add musical sounds after the song has mixed, Spalt said.

Spalt plays the drums and said that being able to explain to recording engineers how he wants his music to sound is an important part of writing music.

Spalt would like to take the advanced section because the first section did not give him much time on the sound board. Although the introductory class is needed, the advanced class would give students more time in using the sound board, he said.

Applications for the courses are available from Smith in the School of Music.

Four-year starter McAuley bids farewell to Saluki fielders

By Steve Koulos
Staff Writer

Coach Julee Illner will need a good recruiting year next season, because she will lose four key starters from this year's field hockey team.

One of the players Illner will have the most difficulty replacing is sweeper Nancy McAuley, a four-year starter for the Salukis.

Illner said McAuley is among the six best sweepers she has coached in her 16 seasons at SIU-C.

"Nancy is going to be sorely missed," she said. "Nancy has been a key player for us for four years and handles the position well. We would have been dead without her in a lot of situations this year."

McAuley's responsibilities are to stop the opposing forwards from advancing the ball to the Salukis' goal, and to clear the ball to the midfield. While McAuley doesn't get as much attention as an offensive player who scores a lot of goals, she said that doesn't bother her.

"I always kid J.I. (Illner) that Sharon (Leidy) always gets her name in the paper when she scores, and I get my name in the paper when they score against me," she said. "But it doesn't bother me because the team will know if you play a good or bad game."

McAuley started her first three years at right fullback before being switched to sweeper this season because of the graduation of left fullback Dore Weil. McAuley smoothly made the transition to sweeper and said she is playing with more confidence this year.

"I've matured a lot," she said. "My freshman year, I was afraid if they got the ball back there, they were going to blow it right by me. This year, they are not getting it by me unless they trip me. I've been trying to stop the ball no matter what."

In McAuley's first two years, she played on 12-10-2 and 20-5 Saluki teams, before SIU-C slipped to 9-12-3 last season.

McAuley suffered a freak injury at her home last year, chipping a bone in her ankle midway through the season with the Salukis holding a 6-4-2 record and facing a strong second-half schedule. She missed the next eight games, and came back late in the season but never regained her form as the Salukis skidded to a 3-8-1 record in their last 12 games.

"That was a big disappointment for me because I felt I let the team down by getting hurt and not being able to contribute on the field," McAuley said.

Even though the Salukis haven't played up to their potential in compiling an 8-7-2 record this year, McAuley said it has been an enjoyable year.

"This year we might not have a real strong record but we're a real close team," she said.

Men gymnasts set to open year

By Stan Goff
Staff Writer

The SIU-C men's gymnastics team will open its 29th season under the guidance of Head Coach Bill Meade when it participates in the Big Eight Invitational this weekend in Lincoln, Neb.

The Salukis, who finished second to the host Cornhuskers in last year's tourney, will be faced with some strong competition from this year's seven-team field, which includes six of the top ten teams in the country a year ago.

The Salukis opened last season with a score of 270.90 at the Big Eight Invitational, and went on to record a 14-2 mark in dual meets in 1983-84 and place seventh in the NCAA Championships.

Strong teams from Iowa State, Iowa, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Illinois, Northern Illinois and SIU-C will all be competing this weekend in Lincoln. Iowa State, Nebraska and Oklahoma all placed higher than SIU-C in last year's championships, and Iowa finished eighth in the country, one spot behind the Salukis.

"We need good competition, and we'll be facing all the top teams with this year's schedule," Meade said.

This year's squad has a lot of depth and could turn out to be stronger than last year's, Meade said. The Salukis' lineup is balanced out with four upperclassmen and four underclassmen.

Seniors Lawrence Williamson and Greg Upperman will be counted on heavily. Williamson is one of the best in the country at the floor exercise, but has also developed into a strong vaulter since joining the Salukis as a walk-on. Upperman is one of five all-arounders on Meade's lineup. His strongest event is the rings, but he turned in fine performances on the horizontal bar and the floor exercise last season.

After turgung in solid seasons last year, juniors David Lutterman and Brendan Price may be SIU-C's top scorers this season. Lutterman is the Salukis' top all-arounder, scoring high in all six events last year, and Price will compete as an all-arounder after ranking as one of the top vaulters in the country as a sophomore.

Mark Ulmer, Preston Knauf, David Bailey and Ken Clark provide the Salukis with plenty of youth. They have all improved greatly from last year, Meade said.

"We're just going to go out there (Big Eight Tourney) and have fun and try to stay healthy," Meade said.

JACKSON: Rough start helps in a borderline year and waiting for two years (after school) for it to come around. But I can wait two years. Playing in the 1988 Olympics would be my dream come true," Jackson said.

Jackson said she liked the smaller ball that will be used this year.

Jackson also said the backcourt was like a safe territory to her. Now the new over-and-back rule will force teams to take better care of the ball and use a more effective passing game.

The upperclass Salukis will need to be patient and helpful if this year's young Saluki team is to improve, Jackson said.

"Everything is a major factor now. We've got young people that are expected to play, and that takes hard work, determination and drive," she said. "We practice two-and-a-half to three hours, we have a 30 second shot clock and it's all new to them," she said. "I'd like to say we'd end up No. 1. We have the potential, all we have to do is put it together and make use of it."

Mean introduction to basketball helps Jackson excel as player

By Anita J. Stoner
Staff Writer

Petra Jackson learned to play basketball in a juvenile detention center.

Her father, who worked at the center, would call her on Saturdays to come and play basketball with the boys in his unit.

"I'd say, 'We're going to play with those boys?' I'd ask them what they did to get in there and they'd say, 'I stabbed my mom,'" Jackson said.

Jackson's father and brother influenced her game, and her earliest competition was with boys. Her brother would let her play with his friends only if they didn't have enough players, Jackson said. He didn't want his little sister to get hurt.

Today, Jackson, a junior guard, is the only returning starter for the Saluki women's basketball team. Coach Cindy Scott calls her the key to the season's success, and Jackson's statistics speak for her abilities. Last season, she scored double figures in all but five games, averaging 12.5 points per game. She also averaged 6.1 rebounds per game, and her 52 steals and 73 assists were new team highs.

Jackson said she does not feel any pressure being the only returning starter.

"I might answer differently a week before game time. But basically, I know I'm not the only one. We have other good shooters on the team. It would be different if I were the only one," Jackson said.

Besides her goal of staying healthy, Jackson would also like to provide as much leadership as possible for the young Saluki team. She said she thought it would be difficult because of her low-key personality, but her coaches expect this and she will need to learn that role.

Jackson's strength lies in her offensive capabilities. She said she would like to finish in the top 5 in the Gateway Conference this year and be nationally ranked for her free throw shooting percentage.

"I haven't reached the potential that's waiting for me, and I'm very determined to get there. This will be the year for it, I think," she said.

Jackson said her defense, as her one weakness, has steadily improved each year. She is defending in a more one-on-one style and learning to play without the ball. She said Coach George Iubelt has helped her with this aspect.

"The coaching staff is great, and I have a lot of respect for them. Although it is sometimes hard when all three holler at once about three different things and all three of them are right," Jackson said.

Off season conditioning is a necessity for anyone who wants to succeed at basketball, Jackson said. This summer she played three or four times a week, ran and lifted weights. She found the running particularly important because in high school she only ran drills. Distance running, she said, increases endurance and quickness. She is proud of her personal best time for the mile: 6 minutes and 25 seconds.

To prepare right before games, Jackson said she plays video games.

"I find arcade games mind relaxing. Mentally, they bring me down instead of being nervous," she said.

Jackson chose SIU-C partly because of its proximity to her home, University City, a suburb of St. Louis, so her family can come see her games or she can visit home conveniently. But, if her far-range goals happen, this may change.

"First of all, I'll finish school, whatever it takes. Then maybe I'll go over seas if I get drafted to play basketball there. My goal is to play in the 1988 Olympics. It's tough being born See JACKSON, Page 24

Salukis favored to win GCAC matches

By Duane Crays
Sports Editor

The Saluki volleyball team will travel to Bradley and Western Illinois as the favorite to win the two Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference matches, and while Coach Debbie Hunter said that's a good position to be in, she said it's important the Salukis don't become too confident.

"If we go into the matches too confident, then we would be ripe for an upset," she said.

Hunter said the team must make an adjustment to the styles of play the two teams use. Bradley and Western both use an unorthodox style of offense, while the Salukis have just played against a precision oriented team in Missouri. The Salukis defeated the Lady Tigers Tuesday night.

"We are going to have to make some major adjustments in the way we play," she said. "If we don't make those adjustments early in the match, we could be upset."

Hunter said Bradley has an improved defense from last season, and the Salukis are going to have to be patient with their attack in order to defeat the Braves.

"We are going to have to make a number of attacks before we can put the ball away," she said. "We have to keep our style of play, and control the ball on our side of the net."

Bradley is led by Cathy Vaitkus, an experienced first-year player.

"She picks up the backcourt movement and does a nice job of outside hitting," Hunter said.

"We will have to adjust the timing of our blockers because she is a small player with a big jump."

Hunter said a key to defeating Bradley is to keep Vaitkus from having a strong game.

"By herself, she can keep the ball in play," she said. "We will have to stop her before she gets hot."

Another key to a Salukis win, Hunter said, is for SIU-C to have a strong serving and blocking game.

Hunter said the team will need to make the most of their opportunities and keep high mental concentration in the match.

Western Illinois has lost its three top hitters from last year and has only one victory in the GCAC, but Hunter said she is concerned about the match because the Salukis will be playing in a different court.

"If we play smart volleyball and play well, disciplined and hard we should do fine," she said.

The Salukis have a 3-2 GCAC record going into the weekend's action and a 17-8 record overall.

Lawsuit could put NCAA back into TV picture

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Whether the NCAA gets back in the football television business may depend on the outcome of a lawsuit the NCAA isn't even directly involved in, a spokesman said Thursday.

A ruling Wednesday by a federal judge in New Mexico, however, seems to hand the NCAA one of its few victories in the three-year legal battle over control of college football telecasts. Judge Juan Burciaga, reversing an order he made in 1982, said the NCAA can offer a television plan to its member schools as long as it follows guidelines established by the U.S. Supreme Court in its ruling in June.

Burciaga also affirmed the NCAA's right to ban schools from appearing on television if they are found in violation of rules.

However, many observers feel a suit filed by the Association of Independent Television Stations Inc. has raised questions that must be answered before any group can try to administer college football telecasts.

"The NCAA football television committee met today by conference call and agreed not to pursue the development of a future television plan," said Dave Cawood, director of television programming for the NCAA. "We won't do it unless the members indicate to the committee that they would like it to develop an option."

Cawood said the original case against the NCAA by Oklahoma and Georgia "set the law on the assignment of television rights. The second, we believe, may set the law on how far you can assign those rights — on what restrictions, if any, schools can impose themselves in this area. It's possible the courts may rule that everybody is on his own."

The suit by Independent Television Stations Inc., names the College Football Association as plaintiff. It maintains that restrictions the CFA puts on its schools in its contracts with ABC and ESPN constitute restraint of trade and are anti-competitive — the same legal points, say Cawood and others, which caused the NCAA to take a hiding from the courts.

No hearing date has been set. Burciaga heard the original suit brought by Oklahoma and Georgia in 1981 charging the NCAA with violating antitrust law in forcing schools to take part in its television plan.

Appeals courts upheld that finding, climaxed by the U.S. Supreme Court's June 27 decision. But the appeals courts also suggested that Burciaga should consider modifying his order restraining the NCAA from any future television contract.

Contacts with swimmers in South American countries have been maintained, and he has had good contacts with swimmers from Scandinavian countries and Spain, he said.

Bill Barrett, a national college champion and world record holder for the 200-meter individual medley, was coached by Ingram, as were two Brazilian Olympic swimmers. Two Danes who now hold records in Denmark were also products of Ingram's coaching.

Ingram said he would "certainly like to see junior college swim members in Florida come to SIU."

Ingram was head manager of the '84 U.S. Olympic team and chairman of the United States Olympic Swimming Committee. For the past four years he was a member of the U.S. Olympic International Swim Committee. He is now senior vice president of U.S. Swimming and a member of the American Swim Coaches Association's board of directors.

Sunday. If an agreement isn't reached by then, Sutcliffe, a recent Cy Young Award winner, will be available in Tuesday's free-agent draft.

Meanwhile, Bowa's agent, Jack Sands of Boston, also was trying to work out a four-year deal with the Cubs to keep Bowa in the organization after next season as a player or a minor-league manager.

"I'd just as soon finish up with Chicago," Bowa said Wednesday. "I'm happy with this arrangement. I know that in the last month of the season when they left me alone, I played well."

Bowa, 38, is to continue to receive his $500,000 salary next season.

never broke into the top 10," he said.

What stands out above all the achievements for Steele is not the awards, titles and championships, but simply the fun of it all.

"It's just kind of all melted into a lot of fun," he said. "I haven't accomplished a whole lot. I think people doing cancer research will have great accomplishments. Mine were just moderate."

Coaches say college grid players should be paid

By The Associated Press

If as many as a third of premier college athletes, especially football players, sign contracts with agents before the NCAA-allowed deadline — as one prominent agent claims — the questions become "Why?" and "What can be done?"

"Nowadays, the kids don't get anything," Tennessee football coach Johnny Majors said. "It's not fair, because some of them come from homes where the parents can't afford to send them money."

Majors is one of many coaches and athletic directors who support the idea of paying the athletes up front, giving them perhaps $50 a month or maybe $1,000 a year to cover incidental costs.

"I think that's a possibility," Don James, coach of No. 1-ranked Washington, said. "I'd like to see the players get a little bit more. They do so much for their universities."

"There are problems involved here, though. Can an athletic department afford $50 a month for all college football and basketball players? Can an athletic department afford that amount for all its athletes, both men and women? It probably can't. So the key question would be: Is it (the money) going to be just for football?"

In early 1983, Heisman Trophy winner Herschel Walker left Georgia a year early and signed a multimillion-dollar contract with the New Jersey Generals of the United States Football League after compromising his college eligibility by retaining an agent.

After losing Walker, Georgia Coach Vince Dooley said one of the problems was created by the NCAA itself when it changed its rules several years ago to halt schools from providing spending money and part-time jobs to athletes.

"Some of these fellows have no way of earning any money," Dooley said. "They can't have part-time jobs (during the school year), and if they need to go to school in the summer, they can't work in the summer."

In the last month, Jerry Robinson and Mike Quick of the Philadelphia Eagles and 1983 Heisman Trophy winner Mike Rozier have admitted violating NCAA rules by signing with agents during their senior seasons.

Leigh Steinberg, one of the leading agents, is the one who says one-third of the top collegians sign with agents before the NCAA deadline.

"The competition level among agents has grown enormously," said Steinberg, who adds that he has never signed an athlete with eligibility remaining. "The creation of the United States Football League means there are more jobs for college football players. And that has drawn new agents into the field. Now there are more agents than there are football players."

Ingram excited with job as swim coach

New Saluki men's swimming coach Doug Ingram spoke to members of the press Thursday. He is replacing Bob Steele.

By Martin Folan
Staff Writer

Doug Ingram, the new Saluki men's swimming coach, said he is "more than excited" about his new coaching career at SIU-C.

A former men's and women's swimming coach at Indian River Community College at Fort Pierce, Fla., Ingram has been the National Junior College Men's Coach of the Year every year since 1979. The Indian River men's teams won the junior college national championships all five of those years.

Ingram also coached the women's swimming team at Indian River and was named the National Junior College Women's Coach of the Year last year. Along with the men's teams, the Indian River women's teams won junior college national championships the last two seasons.

The Salukis won the National Independents Title six times and placed in the NCAA finals twice during Bob Steele's coaching career.

"We want to continue the streak at National Independents, and we want to move up the ladder as fast as we can," Ingram said.

Ingram said he hasn't studied the swimming polls and has not yet worked with the Saluki team, so he made no prediction for the '84-85 season.

Steele leaves SIU-C

By Martin Folan

Eleven years and four months of memories will leave with Saluki swimming coach Bob Steele when he steps down from his coaching position and begins a new career as an aquatics director in Florida Monday.

Many awards, titles and championships will surely be remembered, but the people will be thought of the most, Steele said.

"One thing that always stands out are the people who were great swimmers," he said. "But equally great were those who were great people."

The associations with people were "87 percent" of his enjoyment and accomplishments during his career, he said.

"What I'll miss right up at the top is lunch with Dick Ingram and Steele will differ, but changes will be slight and won't be noticed until later, Ingram said.

"By the end of the year the team will notice a difference in the training program. They'll train a bit longer and probably have more morning practices," he said.

While Steele focused more on particular skills, Ingram said he will work more on mental aspects, relaxation techniques and weightlifting.

His philosophy of recruiting is to "try to get the best local talent first, then state, then

Dogs need win to escape MVC cellar

By Mike Frey
Staff Writer

The football Salukis and Drake University enter Saturday's game at Des Moines with the same goal in mind — to gain a win in order to escape the cellar of the Missouri Valley Conference.

The Salukis are 0-4 in the MVC and 3-6 overall, while the Bulldogs' records are 0-3, 2-7. The loser will finish last in the Valley.

SIU-C and Drake have experienced similar problems this year. Both clubs have had a lack of stability at the quarterback position. Both have struggled offensively and both have been plagued by turnovers.

"They (Drake) are kind of where we're at right now," SIU-C Coach Ray Dorr said. "We both have struggled to get pointed in the right direction, and I'm sure we expected to play better."

THE DRAKE offense is averaging less than 17 points per game, and has scored just nine points in its last two games. The Bulldogs have alternated quarterbacks Ed Cheatham and Ray Gronowski in the last several games without much success. The pair has thrown 10 interceptions in the last three games.

"Our passing game, in itself, continues to amaze me in that it can be so good and so bad on the same day," Drake Coach Chuck Shelton said. "We still throw and catch the ball well at times, but we've given 10 interceptions up in the last three games."

"That is a pertinent statistic, the big problem being that half those interceptions have just been poor throws. You're going to give up some interceptions when you throw, but they have disallowed us from gaining some momentum."

The Bulldogs' offensive load has been carried primarily by freshman tailback Tim Ray. He has rushed for over 100 yards twice this year and has scored four touchdowns.

The Saluki offense has had turnover problems of their own. They committed two last week against Indiana State, bringing their season total to 34.

"That's something we try to emphasize," Dorr said. "You can't turn the ball over and expect to win. A good team like Indiana State can't do it, and neither can we."

THE DRAKE defense has played well at times this year. The Bulldogs' best defensive performance came two weeks ago when they held Indiana State in check for most of the game before losing 17-3. Sophomore linebacker Wade Harman has paced the Bulldog defense with a team-leading 132 tackles.

"They've played well enough to win," Shelton said. "If the defense has to stay on the field constantly, then people who throw and catch are going to have something click for them. The most devastating thing would be that our defense actually has put our offense in great scoring position, and we came away with nothing."

Dorr agreed that the Bulldog defense has been steady, but said the secondary is weak because of a lack of quickness.

"The secondary has been suspect because they don't have the speed they need," he said. "As a result, they can't get away with playing man-to-man. They must play zone."

Dorr said the Salukis would take advantage of this by dumping short passes in front of the Drake zone. He said the Bulldogs' other opponents have been successful in doing this.

SOPHOMORE JOE Graves will start his second straight game at quarterback for the Salukis. But Dorr said freshman Pat King will also see action.

The Salukis will keep the same starting lineup they used against Indiana State with the exception of inside linebacker. Dorr dismissed three-year starter Fabray Collins from the team on Monday over a "philosophy disagreement." Freshman Mark Griggs will start in his place.

Other freshman who will start are cornerback Ira Davis, outside linebacker Altonzo Bailey and flanker Nate McGhee.

Dorr said the game is crucial for the Salukis because it gives his youthful team an opportunity to gain confidence in each other for the future.

"We must come together," he said. "We don't need people going in different directions. We need to believe in each other and we need to develop. That's what team sports are all about."
