Pettit outlines goals for 21st century

Plans include developing SIU-C's research capabilities

By Theresa Livingston
Staff Writer

Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit is planning for the University of the future.

Pettit outlined his specific goals for the University's transition into the next century when he met with more than 70 University deans and administrators Thursday in Edwardsville.

"I feel the University needs to set a tone, a direction for the next ten years. This strategic plan is a device through which we can evaluate ourselves and to scan the environment to decide what the best course of action will be," Pettit said.

His "blueprint for the future" is a framework within which to set priorities on the allocation of funds, the development of new programs and departments and University's growth.

The plan calls for the transformation of the Carbondale campus into a major resource center and the Edwardsville campus to take a leading role in undergraduate education.

Pettit said Carbondale should concentrate such already existing strong points in the curriculum as international understanding, the natural environment, public service and public policy awareness.

Pettit proposes increasing the number of graduate students, enlarging the engineering building, expanding Morris Library, constructing a research facility for the biological sciences and channeling more resources into "premier programs."

These changes would help convey what is distinctive about the University, Pettit said, and would help the University meet the strenuous criteria for classification as a Carnegie Research I institution.

Currently, the University of Illinois is the only public state university classified as a Research I institution. SIU is second in the state and is ranked at a Research II level.

"I think SIU has been moving in the direction of becoming a major research University since the '70s. It seems to me we have a responsibility to the state to provide a second center of research activity in Carbondale," Pettit said.

The plan also would enrich the University's instructional capabilities and strengthen our service activities, Pettit said.

Pettit's plan calls for the elimination of "irrevocably outdated and outmoded activities and programs" in favor of a "limited amount of new ventures in areas of excellence."

"I don't have a specific hit list of programs, but there are going to be some departmental casualties as a result of this," Pettit said.

New University programs would be implemented in Carbondale, such as recreation and tourism centers, information and artificial neurological systems and material sciences, while the Edwardsville campus would develop a center for urban policy.

Pettit also recommended the completion of four-lane Interstate

Wage bill delayed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A gradual increase in the minimum wage to $4.25 an hour, blessed by the president and leaders of both parties, was stalled in the Senate Thursday, a pawn in a partisan battle over cutting the capital gains tax.

Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, blocked consideration of the bill, saying he would not allow action until the Senate establishes an agenda for dealing with the capital gains tax and several other measures.

President Bush's proposed reduction in the capital gains tax rate, repeal of a law requiring equality of employee benefits, and legislation to kill or modify catastrophic illness insurance are embroiled in a tug-of-war as Congress tries to adjourn by Thanksgiving.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., also expressed concern that the bill does not include farm workers in a new sub-minimum wage for teenagers on their first job.

The bill, approved by the House 382-27, would increase the wage floor in two 45-cent steps, the first on April 1 next year and the second in April 1991. The current $3.35 minimum has been in effect since 1981.

Agreement on the compromise bill, including a lower so-called training wage for teenage workers in their first job, ended a long deadlock between congressional Democrats and the Reagan and

Chamber rejects city plans to raise bar-entry age to 21

By Lisa Miller
Staff writer

The Carbondale Chamber of Commerce unanimously passed a resolution to oppose raising the bar entry age to 21, despite a report from the city staff suggesting otherwise.

Jim Prowell, executive director of the chamber, said it was the consensus of the chamber that there were adequate legal means available to discourage underage drinking.

The resolution stated the Chamber appreciates the efforts to reduce underage drinking, but it is the responsibility of those who serve the alcohol to prevent underage drinking.

Prowell said raising the bar entry would be "punishing everybody for the errors of a few."

The resolution stated current laws should be strictly enforced and suggested raising the fines for underage drinkers.

Currently, fines for underage drinking in Carbondale range from $50 to $500.

The resolution also suggested "penalties to bar owners (caught serving alcohol to underage patrons) should include closure of the their establishment or loss of licensure."

The possibility of raising the bar entry age stemmed from a report of a study on ways to curb underage drinking in Carbondale prepared by the city staff in September.

The report stated, "The simplest solution (to the underage drinking problem) would be to raise the entry age to 21."

"It's clear that something must be done by the city or the problems of underage possession and con-

Ortega: Only invasion could interrupt election

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — President Daniel Ortega, whose Sandinista troops launched a blistering attack on Contra rebels as soon as he lifted a unilateral cease-fire, said Thursday he was willing to again negotiate peace and laid plans for a United Nations meeting on the conflict.

Ortega met with Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo Thursday and asked him to participate in the U.N. meeting, scheduled to be held in New York next week to discuss demobilizing the U.S.-backed Contras.

Obando y Bravo said afterwards he would witness the upcoming meeting, which will include representatives of the Nicaraguan government, the Contras, the Honduran government and an international commission. Under a plan signed by five Central American presidents last August, the Contras are to be demobilized in December.

"We have accepted to go as witnesses to New York to be at this meeting and hopefully we Nicaraguans will be able to find a formula so that we can all live in peace and brotherhood," the cardinal said.

Ortega, who announced

Wednesday he was ending a 19-month unilateral cease-fire because of increased attacks by Contra rebels, said after meeting with Obando y Bravo that he would be willing to negotiate a new cease-fire.

"The Nicaraguan government is willing to re-establish the cease-fire, this is something that should be very clear," he said.

Ortega said Thursday in an editorial written for the U.S. media that he decided to end the cease-fire because he feared increased activity by the Contras would disrupt general elections in February.

As soon as Ortega announced an end to the truce Wednesday morning, Sandinista troops attacked Contras within Nicaragua's borders, setting ambushes for the rebels along trails and attacking them.

Senate confirms nomination of D'Esposito to SIU board

By Theresa Livingston
Staff Writer
and UPI

The state Senate Thursday confirmed the nomination of Molly D'Esposito to the SIU Board of Trustees, ending the debate of whether the Chicago-area woman could adequately represent the best interests of the University.

D'Esposito's appointment was voted on as a package with numerous other nominations and was unanimously approved, 54-0.

D'Esposito, 42, is a Winnetka homemaker who has never visited either the Carbondale or the Edwardsville University campuses. She holds an undergraduate degree in business administration from Barat College in Lake Forest, where she later served as a trustee, and a master's degree in business administration from Northwestern University.

D'Esposito was nominated in October by Gov. James R.

East Germans enter Prague as visa-free travel ban lifted

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (UPI) — About 1,000 refugees Thursday crowded the West German Embassy on the second day of a new exodus of would-be emigrants to the West sparked by eased travel restrictions from East Germany. The East Germans began pouring across the border into neighboring Czechoslovakia by train and automobile after the East German government lifted a ban on visa-free travel at midnight Tuesday. A West German embassy official said about 1,200 people already had arrived and about 8,000 more East Germans had crossed the border and were traveling to Prague.

U.S., Mexico work to solve drug trafficking

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Mexican-U.S. relations need not be tense despite complex border problems and "a history burdened by acts of extreme aggression," President Carlos Salinas de Gortari said in his first state-of-the-nation address. The Harvard-educated president, who has earned a "Mr. Clean" image since assuming office last December, said the two countries are working together to combat drug trafficking and to promote the status of Mexican migrant laborers.

'Star Wars' program gets first budget cut

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The "Star Wars" missile defense program suffered its first actual cut Thursday in a compromise $305 billion 1990 defense authorization bill that also provides a "soft landing" to Grumman's F-14D Tomcat fighter. In addition, the bill developed by a House-Senate conference committee cuts back on the B-2 stealth bomber program and gives Grumman a brief reprieve by buying a final installment of 18 Tomcat fighters. It allows research to continue on the V-22 tilt-rotor Osprey being developed by Bell Helicopter and Boeing's helicopter unit.

Senate 'blackmailed' on free mail debate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate, buckling to what one member called a "classic case of blackmail" by the House, rejected demands Thursday that congressmen make public the amount they spend on free mail. After heated debate, the Senate rejected 64-35 a proposal by Sen. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., to require the disclosure of franked mailings by House members. In rejecting the proposal, the Senate heeded warnings that the House would never let the Senate dictate its rules and that adoption of the amendment would kill the $1.9 billion fiscal 1990 appropriations bill for Congress itself.

WHO doctor warns AIDS cases on the rise

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The global AIDS epidemic is gaining momentum and "dangerous complacency" threatens to make matters worse, a World Health Organization leader told the National AIDS Commission Thursday. Dr. Johnathan Mann, director of WHO's AIDS program, said there are an estimated 600,000 people worldwide who have developed acquired immune deficiency syndrome and unless a cure is found, the figure will rise tenfold to 6 million by the year 2000.

Witness says prison official died of knife attack to heart

MORRIS (UPI) — A pathologist has testified that a knife wound to the heart caused the death of Pontiac Prison Superintendent Robert Taylor. Pathologist James Blanding Gilman, was the first witness Wednesday at the murder trial of Roosevelt Lucas, the second inmate to go on trial in the slaying two years ago of Taylor. Taylor, 44, was beaten and stabbed to death in his prison office in September 1987, a slaying that prison officials at the time said was ordered by a Chicago street gang and was intended as a warning for corrections officials.

Women for America celebrate 10th anniversary

By Sean Hannigan
Staff Writer

The Southern Illinois Concerned Women for America will hold a tenth anniversary celebration Saturday at the Sports Center, 1215 E. Walnut, with a live satellite transmission from Washington D.C.

The local conference will be one of 200 nationwide that will listen to various live speakers. The conference is titled "1900-2000, the Decade of Destiny for America's Children."

Among those speaking will be drug czar William Bennett, syndicated columnist Patrick Buchanan, and Joe Clark, the former New Jersey school principal made famous by the movie "Lean On Me."

Sandy Payne, spokesperson for CWA, said Dr. James Dobson, the foremost Christian psychologist, also will speak. Dobson conducted the last interview with serial killer Ted Bundy.

Payne said the group works to preserve, protect and promote traditional and Judeo-Christian values through education, legal defense, legislative programs and humanitarian aid.

She said the group is concerned with the declining quality of education in the U.S.

The groups two main concerns for the next decade include the promotion of secular humanism and the emphasis of homosexuality in schools.

"A lot of the ideology of the New Age movement is perpetrating our schools," Payne said. "We are concerned that this movement will homogenize individual religious views."

As for homosexuality she cited project 10 in Los Angeles, which has recently been endorsed by the National Education Association.

"In L.A. they ask junior high schools to examine their sexual feelings. They ask questions like, 'Have you ever had any feelings for someone of the same sex?' Then they are sent to a counselor that has been OK'd by a homosexual group," Payne said.

"We're worried because the NEA has supported this," Payne said.

While the group has used legal action to combat the American Civil Liberties Union on some fronts, they would rather refer to a higher court.

"Saturday will be a day full of prayer," Payne said. The 200 chapters will break from the satellite hook-up for prayer throughout the day.

There will be a banquet in the evening and Beverly LaHate, president and founder of CWA, will speak and lead prayer from Washington.

University community gets chance to hear issues concerning disabled

By Sean Hannigan
Staff Writer

An open forum on disability issues being held next week will give people with disabilities an opportunity to impact the decisions made by the University on the issue.

The Disability Issues Committee will be hearing from faculty, staff and students Nov. 6, 7 and 8 in the Student Center on concerns of these people. Joe Moore, committee member, said.

"This is a chance for people who are out there, on campus and in the community, to let us know their concerns and problems," Moore said.

"We can look at statistics and sit in our cubicles, but it won't tell us what they can tell us," Moore said.

The committee has asked campus groups and RSOs to appoint speakers in advance. Moore said a timer will be used to limit the speakers in an effort to get more viewpoints.

He said the views of handicapped and non-handicapped people would be welcomed, but added "there are a lot of people whose idea of handicapped may be different than the state and federal definition."

The federal government defines a handicapped person as any individual who has an impairment that substantially limits one or more major life activities, one who has a record of such impairments or one who is regarded as having such an impairment.

Moore said this is important because people with heart conditions or diabetes are included and may not realize the rights and services they have under this definition.

Carla J. Hayes, chair of the committee and coordinator of disabled student services said, "We need specific feedback on the problems people with disabilities face."

Seymour Bryson, assistant to the president on affirmative action at SIU-C, formed the committee, which will prepare a survey and make recommendations after the conference, Hayes said.

Hayes said the committee will prioritize the problems. She added that things brought up most often by people at the forum will head the list.

"I assume any recommendations will be enacted through the affirmative action program," Moore said.

Moore and Hayes both feel the University has a history of providing for the needs of disabled students, but Hayes said, "Every so often you have to look and see if history is holding up."

"We want to encourage anyone who has an interest on disability issues to share with us their concerns," Moore said.

Interstate deaths up; speed limit too high

THE BUMPER sticker was right — "Fifty-five saves lives."

Nationally, the number of fatalities have risen since states were allowed to raise their speed limits from 55 to 65 mph.

The federal government stated that there has been at least 900 extra deaths on rural interstates during the two-year period after the speed limit was raised from 55 to 65 mph.

Rural interstates are defined as stretches of interstate in areas that are populated by fewer than 50,000 people.

There are about 1,200 miles of rural interstate in Illinois. In Illinois, traffic fatalities on rural interstates have increased 15.2 percent after the speed limit was increased.

Illinois Division of Traffic Safety expected 46 traffic fatalities the first year the limit was raised, but there were 53 — an increase of 15.2 percent. Injuries were up by 5.4 percent, also.

The state of Illinois, and other states that have a 65 mph speed limit, should consider changing the law to reinstate the 55 mph speed limit.

IT NOT only would save lives but it would conserve our natural resources.

The goal of lowering the speed limit to 55 mph in the late '70s was to save gasoline that was being burned at a far greater rate with the speed limit at 75 mph.

Our country was in a situation where there was a fuel shortage and the move was needed.

The United States is not in such dire straits now, but gasoline lines should not be the main concern — saving lives should. And one day, we could be faced with both concerns.

The Illinois Legislature should not wait for a proposal to be passed on the national level. The legislators should make a proposal to decrease the speed limit to 55 mph.

Remember, states were allowed the option of raising their speed limits: The federal government didn't say the states would be forced to increase the speed limit.

Central America's struggle

Providence Journal

With his unfailingly poor sense of timing, President Daniel Ortega of Nicaragua, the Sandinista strongman, chose the celebration of Costa Rica's century of democracy — a Central American record — to announce the resumption of military action against the democratic resistance in his homeland.

Costa Rica, of course, is governed by Oscar Arias, whose plan for hemispheric peace won the Nobel Prize and has thus far maintained a 19-month-old truce. Under the Arias Plan, free elections are scheduled to be held in Nicaragua next February, and opposition candidate Violetta Chamorro, widow of an editor murdered by Anastasio Somoza, appears to be well ahead in the opinion polls. That might explain Mr. Ortega's action: Cuius, some isolated violations of the truce, he has raised the specter of a full-scale campaign to destroy the resistance: That is, not just eliminate the Contras as a fighting force, but rid Nicaragua of them and their allies.

That would be tragic. We have supported the Arias Plan since it was first proposed, but have always believed that its success could be dependent on the status of the Contras. President Ortega might have confirmed that dread suspicion this past weekend. The resistance has been effectively neutralized by the refusal of Congress to furnish military aid; now the Sandinistas demand an end to humanitarian aid as the price of postponing new military action. That last proposal was suggested by Jesse Jackson, who has been offering advice to the Sandinista regime. President Ortega wants the Reverend Jackson to serve as mediator as well!

No thanks; no mediation is necessary. The elements of the Arias Plan are simple, clear and compelling; the only question now is what happens if Mr. Ortega should carry out his threat to undermine the plan. In Costa Rica this past weekend, President Bush was properly indignant, and President Arias looked appropriately glum. Indeed, those Latin American statesmen who have urged the adoption of the plan and chided the United States for supporting the resistance seemed especially perturbed. No wonder. If the Nicaraguan government should end the cease-fire and make war on the Contras, it will be difficult for the Organization of American States to avoid definitive action: To condemn Nicaragua and to isolate its government, to contemplate sanctions, and to insist on adherence to the Arias Plan.

That is diplomacy. On the political front, Congress should remind itself that peace in Nicaragua is simple to achieve: Hold free and fair elections; don't abandon the opposition.

Two cheers for another U.S.- Soviet summit — great expectations again

By Brian Dickinson
Providence Journal

Another U.S.-Soviet summit is about to unfold, this one aboard ships in the center of the Mediterranean, and early reactions to the news are predictably upbeat.

Summit talks are popularly (if not always accurately) seen as constructive exercises in diplomatic harmonics, and so the Bush-Gorbachev meeting next month may prove to be.

We pump up these conferences with great expectations, however, and I wonder how much this ritualized emphasis on summery still makes sense. That such meetings have value I take as a given. But if one looks ahead at the forces likely to shape the world of the next quarter-century, it seems doubtful the U.S.-Soviet relationship we have known will continue to exert the dominant role.

Patently, Moscow and Washington need to keep practicing their new habits of getting on with each other, and it seldom does serious harm — although history supplies a few notable exceptions — for leaders to talk shop face to face. A stable U.S.-Soviet linkage remains a central sine qua non for global security, and if summits help nurture this relationship, then bring out the flags and sign up the press pools.

It also seems undeniable that a substantive U.S.-Soviet conversation, coming just as the Soviet colossus is fraying at the edges, has merit as a way to shape the agenda about Europe's future. The agenda remains very much unresolved, involving as it does critical questions about nuclear forces and the future of Germany, and at a minimum the United States and Soviet Union need to exchange honest views about the implications of all the changes so dramatically at work.

After 40 years of various levels of nuclear anxiety, the chances for easing tension and enhancing stability must be seized.

Looking beyond the Moscow-Washington axis, however, quite a different perspective comes into play. World affairs, which for much of the postwar era have been colored by the superpower rivalry, have generated bewildering new energies and power centers of their own. Even as the Americans and the Soviets explore the prospects for strengthening their own tenuous ties, it has grown clear that there's many another game in town.

Not only have other players risen to play in the same league — Japan, the European Community, China (at least potentially) — but a dizzying array of new concerns has surged toward the forefront of the global agenda. Managing the nuclear balance and understanding the theology of arms control, so critical a decade and more ago, have acquired rivals for our attention on the global stage.

In this regard, one thinks instantly of the fragile environment, with concern mounting over man-induced stresses to the biosphere and its base of resources. One thinks as well about the urgent North-South agenda, as hungry Third World countries seek their chance to develop and escape misery. One thinks of the global nature of the economy, in which incalculable amounts of money can be transferred among nations and huge banks by the touch of a button. One thinks of terrorism, the random madness of which mocks many of the civilities most nations have struggled to achieve. And one thinks of the hot fervor of ethnicity and nationalism, driving forces for hundreds of millions of people, forces that show small sign of abating.

It is these kinds of concerns — not scholastic disputations about warheads or cruise missiles — that seem likely to form the central agenda as we move into the next century. These are the sorts of issues we already face; our children will face them compounded. And most such problems, far from hinging on the U.S.-Soviet axis, have little relevance to traditional nation-states at all.

If this forecast is even partly on the mark, managing the global agenda as the centuries change will demand an originality and breadth of vision that range far beyond the set-piece nature of U.S.-Soviet summery, valuable as that custom may be. It will demand wholly new approaches — even entirely new world-scale institutions — equipped (and somehow empowered) to address the concerns that have come to dominate the last years of this troubled century.

A few years ago, this task would have seemed impossibly utopian. What makes it somewhat less so today is a gradual growth of candor and mutually realized interests between the two superpowers. A prudent accord on reducing nuclear arms could provide an opening for further East-West cooperation on a broad range of other shared problems.

Perhaps Bush and Gorbachev won't think in these broad terms as they chat next month. But since they know how much the U.S.-Soviet relationship has moderated in the past few years, they might usefully explore new ways to pool their nations' expertise and address problems that have been in eclipse during the years of high nuclear tension.

That approach — focusing on the potential for U.S.-Soviet cooperation — could keep the organizers of summit conferences productively occupied for years to come.

Make 'em laugh: Comedy Cellar is a hit

Organizer hoping to make Cellar a campus tradition

By Doug Toole
Staff Writer

The Comedy Cellar, a stand-up comedian act sponsored by the Student Center Special Programming Office, opened in the Big Muddy Room on Feb. 15, 1989. Since then, over 18 comedy acts have performed, usually appearing on Wednesday night in the Big Muddy Room.

Remy Billups, a graduate student who works with the Special Programs Office, is the organizer of the Comedy Cellar for the 1989-90 school year.

Daily Egyptian: When did you first come in contact with the Comedy Cellar?

Remy Billups

Remy Billups:

Well, I'm a graduate assistant with the Student Programming Office, and part of my job is to do student programming. The Comedy Cellar is the major project I'm involved with.

DE: Why did SPO approach you for this? Do you have a background in comedy?

Billups: No, I don't have any background in comedy at all. I do have a degree in communication and public relations, and experience with special events, so I've organized events before and that helps out a lot, because you have any sort of organizational skill, this sort of thing is easy to run.

DE: How were the first few Comedy Cellars you were involved with?

Billups: They went really well. I was a little nervous. I wasn't exactly sure how the program ran, being new to it, but it's going really well.

DE: Were you at any of the performances last year?

Billups: I wasn't here; I was working up in Chicago.

DE: So you kind of got thrown into all of this?

Billups: Exactly. Thrown to the wolves, so to speak. Thrown to the daws, I guess. This is SIU, so I'll stick to the Saluki theme.

DE: What comedians have really worked well, in your opinion? Is there a certain comedic type of a particular sort of personality that seems to work better than others?

Billups: It seems like most of the comedians are very easygoing; they're very cooperative as far as the set-up goes. A lot of them aren't used to working "in the round" (with seating all around the stage), which is the stage set-up for the Big Muddy Room, but they seem to enjoy it because it's different, it's a challenge and it keeps them on their toes. A couple comedians have commented that they had to keep spinning around so they didn't have their rear ends in somebody's face for the whole show.

As far as comedic type, I don't think you can put your finger on what type of comedy works because each person has a different sense of humor. I know Buzz Sutherland (who performed at the Comedy Cellar on Sept. 13) got bad reviews, but I've had a lot of people comment that they liked him. One point of the review was that Sutherland didn't seem to have a lot of material, but I thought the way he handled the crowd and messed around with them was funny.

DE: What do the comedians think of the Cellar and having to perform in the round, downstairs with no bar?

Billups: They like it a lot. We've had a lot of positive comments. A lot of schools have comedy shows but not all of them know what they're doing. Every comedian has said that we do a fine job, that they get taken care of, if there's a problem it gets taken care of pronto and they enjoy working here.

DE: Any chance of doing different things with the act, like when Jones + Jools (who performed on Oct. 25) performed in (Student Center) Ballroom D?

Billups: Right now I'm working on the budget for spring semester and we're looking at options for having the Cellar in other areas to accommodate the performer. We're looking at the Big Muddy Room still, the possibility of the (Student Center) Auditorium and Ballrooms B and D, depending on the size of the show, because you can get more people in there.

DE: Is there a problem with people crowding into the Big Muddy Room or the size of it?

Billups: Well, the problem with the Big Muddy Room is that it has a strange shape and there's not much aisle space for chairs, so a lot of people end up in the back by the wood shop area, and those aren't the best seats. All I can tell people is to get there early and you won't have too bad of a seat. The room doesn't have the ideal set-up but I think it's the best comedy club atmosphere that we have of all the available rooms.

DE: Do you get complaints for charging $1 admission?

Billups: Not really. I don't think you can beat a show like this for $1. Last semester the show was free, but we've spent the money trying to improve the quality of entertainment.

Comedy is very hot right now, so as comedians get more exposure, their price tag goes up. For example, Dean Edelson, Campus comedy fans could see more of Joe Marlotti, left, who has scored the highest on the Comedy Cellar survey so far. Organizers say they hope to bring him back for a return performance. He performed Oct. 11. The Comedy Cellar, which was started last spring, also has played host to Kathleen Madigan, above, who failed to liven up a "dead" Big Muddy room crowd Oct. 18.

who performed here in the spring (on Feb. 15) went up $800 in a four-month period. He got some TV exposure and his price tag just shot up. If a comedian is moving fast you have to book them right away because two weeks later their price tag may be up $500.

DE: Will David Romanelli be returning as emcee for the Comedy Cellar?

Billups: I have no idea. At this point the show seems to work without him. I don't think we need an opening act, really. The comedian that we book is the show.

The Comedy Cellar T-shirt giveaway is more for fun. I enjoy doing it. I really do. It gets the crowd into the show. There are a lot of regulars and I like the giveaway as a way to thank them for supporting the program. Sometimes it's funny, sometimes it's not. I'm not a comedian. I'm just trying to have fun with the audience and everyone's taking it really well. A lot of comedians have commented that they like it because it warms up the crowd. Going out and performing to a cold audience means the comedian has to start out really quick and BOOM try to get the crowd into it.

DE: Not to dwell on Romanelli, but was in planned to use him as emcee up to a certain point in the semester and then after that it would be tentative?

Billups: No, it was motivated the whole way. We wanted to see how it would work. Nothing against David, but people had seen him once last semester, and most of the people who come to the crowd are regulars and I just think they got tired of him. I'm not saying he's not funny, but you wouldn't go to see the same comedian every week.

DE: What other comedians do you have booked in for the rest of the semester?

Billups: We go through Nov. 29 and then we take a break until next semester. It'll be the end of the semester, and we've got other performances like the madrigal dinner in December that we don't want to interfere with. We've got some excellent comedians coming through for the rest of the semester and we're starting the booking process for next semester.

Funding for Cellar comes from soda

The Comedy Cellar, like many great ideas, got its start from a can of pop.

Extra money was found in the Student Center budget the fall of 1988 that was generated from the vending machines on campus. The Special Programs Office in the Student Center decided to find a way of using the money, said Christina Varotsis, former graduate assistant for Special Programs.

"BG's Comedy Club had closed, so there was a gap we could fill with programming," —Christina Varotsis Varotsis went to the National Association of College Activities to pursue the on-campus comedy club idea. She said she met with comedy agents and received videotapes of comedians performing samples of their acts.

In order to get other opinions on which comedians would be worth booking, Varotsis said she would watch the sample videos with office workers or other people and see which comedians got the best responses.

"I wasn't into stand-up comedy before, but after watching all those videos I started to like it," she said.

Varotsis said the Big Muddy Room in the Student Center was selected as the place to hold the performance because it was "the only place that looks like a (comedy) club."

Wanting to have a connection to SIU-C in the show, Varotsis said Special Events looked for University students to emcee the comedy show.

David Romanelli, an undergraduate student in Communications who had been an emcee at BG's, was selected to provide a short warm-up comedy act and introduce the main performer.

On Feb. 15, Dean Edelson performed for the opening of the Comedy Cellar. The event filled the Big Muddy Room that night, and has done well ever since, Varotsis said. —Doug Toole

Journalist dropped by KGB

MOSCOW (UPI) — A dissident journalist charged with libel for criticizing the KGB was injured Thursday when he was dropped by guards carrying him from his trial, sources said.

Sources said Glasnost magazine writer Sergei Kuznetsov, weak from a hunger strike, was dropped on the steps of the court building in Sverdlovsk in the Uralis. Sources said it appeared to be a deliberate attempt to hurt the journalist.

Four sources said Kuznetsov, 34, suffered a concussion and an injury to his spinal chord and was in a prison hospital. He has asked that doctors from France come to treat him, the sources said.

"Such things did not happen even in the time of Leonid Brezhnev," said an editor at Glasnost.

Kuznetsov, 34, was originally arrested last December and charged with libel for a pamphlet that criticized the KGB. He was held for seven months without trial and underwent psychiatric tests.

The case prompted international protest, including a letter sent last July to Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev by the New York-based Committee to Protect Journalists.

Last month, political activists asked U.S. Attorney General Richard Thornburgh to investigate Kuznetsov's case and alert legal officials in Moscow.

Kuznetsov was freed on July 26 to await trial, but on Oct. 19, he was imprisoned after he criticized the local KGB chief, said the sources from both Moscow and Sverdlovsk.

He then declared a hunger strike, the sources said.

Romania rejects report aiding citizens' rights

SOFIA, Bulgaria (UPI) — The Soviet Union Thursday urged its hardline Warsaw Pact ally Romania to accept a report by a European environmental conference that endorses the right of citizens to express their views on ecological matters.

Romania was given until Friday morning to reconsider its refusal to accept the document. Romania's refusal threatened the successful conclusion of the three-week Ecoforum, a follow-up meeting to the 1975 Helsinki Agreement on human rights.

Romania rejected the report despite a personal telephone call from Bulgarian President Todor Zhivkov to Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu in Bucharest, one diplomat said.

"We regret the fact that at this stage we have not obtained a consensus, because all the work of the past few days could be subjected to a serious threat," Evgenij Minaev, deputy head of the Soviet delegation, said at an evening session following Romania's announcement.

"We should like to turn to our friends, the delegation of Romania, to examine in greater detail" the final draft, he said. "It is our hope that once Romania has further examined the document, it will be able to support it."

Acting conference chairman Hans Voss of East Germany, which along with Romania appears resistant to Soviet-style reforms, proposed a recess until Friday for Romania to decide whether it will provide the needed consensus.

The head of the Romanian delegation said clauses in the document about the rights of individuals and groups to express their views and to obtain and disseminate information on government environmental policies "goes beyond the mandate of the meeting."

Unless Romania changes its objections, the conference could either adjourn without adopting the document, or end without the consensus that has accompanied all previous follow-up Helsinki sessions.

The Helsinki Agreement was adopted Aug. 12, 1975, by 35 nations, including the United States and Soviet Union. The declaration stressed "fundamental rights, economic and social progress and well-being for all peoples" and the need to jointly promote world peace and security.

The United States has championed the cause of human rights at the conference, calling for more freedoms for individuals and groups to exchange information and express themselves on environmental matters as part of a broader human rights policy.

"From the human rights standpoint the document itself is a definite plus," said Joshua Gilder, deputy U.S. assistant secretary of state for human rights and humanitarian affairs.

Cease-fire declared by Contras

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (UPI) — U.S.-backed Contra rebels declared a unilateral cease-fire Wednesday in their war against the Nicaraguan government but said they reserve their rights to defend themselves if attacked.

The declaration by Contra military chief Enrique Bermudez came hours after Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega suspended a 19-month unilateral cease-fire with the rebels.

"We declare an unilateral cease-fire ...," Bermudez said. "We are going to continue in our position of not initiating military actions but reclaim our rights to defend ourselves if attacked."

"If the Sandinistas continue the war, and as they are announcing the end of the cease-fire, we will seek help from the United States," Bermudez said, adding they would seek logistical as well as military aid.

In his announcement, Ortega said he will reimpose the cease-fire only if international negotiations lead to the dismantling of the U.S.-financed rebel army.

FRED'S

Let Your Boots Go Free

Two weeks ago Donna Hale and her "perky" side-kick Irene came out to Fred's. They came out not only for a good time but as Donna said, "to get some use out of our boots."

Remember, six years ago "Urban Cowboy" was still "IN". Every West Rogers Parkian looked and dressed as if he was born and raised in Cheyenne, Wyo. The fad is over but the closet full of country clothes remains. Well, dust off your duds, recycle your remnants, and buff up your boots because there still is a place where country is cool and more important FUN!

Fred's was country before, during, and now after the fad.

DE: Are you planning on getting any returning acts from this semester or the previous one?

Billups: I would like to get Joe Mariotti (who performed on Oct. 11.) We passed out a survey one night and everyone liked him a lot. So far, I think he's been the most popular comedian. I'd like to take some advice from the regular crowd we have and bring Joe back.

DE: Did you have a good response to that survey?

Billups: I think we had a couple hundred surveys that were filled out. A lot of times people don't even care enough about surveys to put down some stupid answer and just make a paper airplane out of them.

DE: About how many people go to the Comedy Cellar?

Billups: So far we've been averaging 430 people each night.

DE: What time do performers usually arrive before a show?

Billups: It depends. I had one get here ten minutes before the show started. I was getting as little bit nervous about that, because I'm not going to go up on stage and give away 40 T-shirts while I wait for the comedian to show up.

DE: Any chance of getting a big-name comedian for a show in the Spring?

Billups: What I'd like to do is get a popular performer and then two other comedians and do a two-hour show. I have Shryock (Auditorium) on hold for a possible co-sponsorship, but everything is still in the planning stages.

DE: Anything else big planned for the Comedy Cellar like a "Topless Night" theme show?

Billups: No, I'm going to keep my shirt on, I know that.

DE: Recently, more comedians have been using props during their show. Last year no one really used anything on stage, but this year a couple performers have played guitar and Jones + Jools had a huge amount of stage settings and toys. Is that being done on purpose?

Billups: That's really just been coincidence. If some comedians have musical talent and can put that into the show, great.

DE: Are you going to stay in charge of this through the Spring and into next year?

Billups: Definitely through the Spring and let's just go semester by semester after that.

I think the Comedy Cellar is one of the most successful programs that's been through the Student Center in some time. I can't think of another program that has a consistent crowd of over 400 people attending. The audience we have down there is just excellent. I'm wide open for suggestions.

I love comedy. I always have. I realize that sometimes you can enjoy it so much you say, "that's funny" and "that's funny" and it's not funny, so I'm very receptive to the input of anyone who goes to the Comedy Cellar.

Bush administrations.

Bush vetoed an earlier bill this year because it would have raised the minimum wage by 30 cents more than the $4.25 he insisted on, and did not include his proposal for a six-month training wage.

Under the new plan, the training wage — 85 percent of the full minimum wage — could be paid to new workers under age 20 for three months. It could be extended for another three months if the employer has a training program in effect for the new worker. The training wage is eliminated in 1993.

Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine told Symms, "I can't understand why anyone would want to hold up the minimum wage bill," asking what would happen if Congress does not deal with the other bills this year.

Symms, saying it does not matter whether the wage measure passes "today, tomorrow," asked why the Senate should not attempt the attach the capital gains tax cut, the catastrophic insurance and repeal of the benefit law to the minimum wage increase.

"We have had a lot held up because of capital gains," Mitchell said. "I hope a 90-cent increase over two years for the poorest working Americans will not also be held up for that purpose."

Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., added, "There are some people so determined to get this big tax cut for the very wealthy that they're prepared to hold up any legislasumption in Carbondale will continue unchanged," the report stated.

The report also noted some of the bar owners in Carbondale, especially those on the Strip, could be forced out of business.

Prowell said there was no discussion from the chamber about the economics of raising the bar entry age.

City Manager Steve Hoffner said the report was made at his request and it will be addressed by the Liquor Advisory Board at its December meeting.

Hoffner said the board could make a recommendation to the City Council for further action.

Police Blotter

A University student told police he was bitten on the hand by a squirrel while trying to feed one near the Coal Research Center Tuesday morning.

Jeffrey Pigati, 20, 800 E. Grand Ave., went to the Health Service after the incident and received a tetanus shot, police said.

John Soucek, 20, 412 W. Oak St. told police his Suzuki 750 motorcycle was stolen from parking lot 13 near McAndrew Stadium shortly before noon Wednesday, police said.

A witness told police he saw someone drive the motorcycle from the parking lot, police said.

GPSC gives award, fills vice president post

By Jeanne Bickler
Staff Writer

Wednesday night's Graduate and Professional Student Council meeting was a two-star event for the department of curriculum and instruction.

Terry Bratcher and Harold R. Hungerford, both from the department, received recognition from the council.

Bratcher, a graduate student in curriculum and instruction, was elected as GPSC's new vice president for administrative affairs, Charlie Ramsey, GPSC president, said.

Bratcher spoke at the meeting before the vote.

The other nominee for the position, Ronald Smith, of educational administration and higher education, had been filling the position since it was vacated Sept. 21. Smith addressed the council at the previous GPSC meeting, since he had to be out of town for the vote.

Charlie Ramsey, the previous GPSC vice president for administrative affairs, left the position when Trudy Hale resigned as GPSC president. Ramsey automatically became the president upon Hale's resignation, according to the GPSC constitution.

The vice presidential position was open to all graduate students, Ramsey said. Only Smith and Bratcher were nominated.

Later in the meeting, the GPSC voted on its choice for the GPSC outstanding contribution to SIU-C award.

Hungerford was elected as the best choice to receive the award, after two votes were taken, Ramsey said. Hungerford is a professor in the curriculum and instruction department.

Ramsey said Hungerford would be notified of this honor by telephone and would be asked to attend the next GPSC meeting to receive the honorary plaque.

Also nominated for the award were Erwin Atwood, journalism faculty member, and Lewis Hahn, philosophy faculty member.

Any SIU-C student, faculty or staff member was eligible for this award.

Department chairman picked as adviser for national panel

By Tony Mancuso
Staff Writer

The chairman of the University Vocational Education Department has been selected for a national panel that will direct vocational education research.

John S. Washburn was appointed in September to serve for the next five years as an adviser on the National Resource Panel for the National Center for Research in Vocational Education.

Washburn, who has served as Vocational Education chairman since 1986, said he was appointed to the position partly because of the University's vocational program.

"SIU has been recognized for its excellence and leadership in vocational education. A recent review committee has named the University one of the top 23 vocational education units in the nation," Washburn said.

He said his job will be to provide feedback for the present research in the field and to direct future research.

"The entire idea behind vocational education is to prepare students for the job world. The panel's job is to direct the institutions involved in the research so they will become better places to get vocational training," Washburn said.

Washburn said he wants to create new priorities for research in the training and employment of students.

"One of our priorities is a need to integrate the academics and technical training for workers preparing for the job market. We need to study how students use the math and English they learn when they become employed," Washburn said.

He said the institutions involved in the research also must make priorities in other areas.

"More emphasis must be placed on preparing minorities, single parents, criminal offenders and welfare recipients for the job world," Washburn said. "We also will try to help females enter non-traditional occupations for their gender."

He said there are six sites involved with the research advisement, including the University of California at Berkeley, which is the headquarters for the project. The United States Department of Education is providing $25 million to fund the research.

Washburn said the first panel meeting is scheduled in December.

Prior to his current position, Washburn served as research manager for the Illinois Board of Education's Department of Adult, Vocational and Technical Education.

Rec Center to stay open later Saturday nights to test usage

By Jeanne Bickler
Staff Writer

The Student Recreation Center will be closing three hours later than usual Saturday night, an Undergraduate Student Government senator said.

On Nov. 4, the Rec Center will be open until 11 p.m. to test student reaction to the later Saturday hours, Mike O'Connor, USG east-side senator, said. The Rec Center normally closes at 8 p.m. on Saturdays, he said.

"People have expressed interest in wanting the Rec Center open late," O'Connor said. "This is their chance to show that they would like the later hours."

Mike Dunn, director of intramural recreational sports, has granted three trial dates in which the Rec Center will be open until 11 p.m., O'Connor said.

The dates are all Saturdays from Nov. 4 to 11 and Dec. 2, he said.

"If there is a strong response, (many students using the Rec Center during these trial dates) it could affect closing hours in the future," he said.

Anna fire kills two, injures several

ANNA (UPI) — An apartment fire caused by what authorities termed a "cooking accident" killed a 3-year-old boy and a 47-year-old man Thursday and left a 1-year-old girl in critical condition.

The dead were identified as Johnny Roe, 47, and Carl F. Coryell, 3. Authorities said the two were not related.

The girl was identified as Jessica Coryell, the dead boy's sister. She was listed in critical condition suffering from burns and smoke inhalation at St. John's Mercy Hospital in St. Louis.

The fourth occupant of the apartment was Donna Coryell, 32, the mother of the children. She was listed in stable condition at Union County Hospital in Anna. Hospital officials declined to discuss her injuries.

Authorities said the apartment belonged to Donna Coryell.

The dead man was found in a hallway outside the apartment and the young boy was found in a bed in the apartment, authorities said.

Anna Fire Chief Jim Cross said the dead man apparently had been cooking eggs at an electric stove when the fire occurred.

"It was a cooking accident," Cross said. "Whether he fell asleep, passed out, we don't know yet. We're still interviewing." Union County Coroner Darryl Rendleman said the boy probably died of smoke inhalation. He was pronounced dead at Union County Hospital. Roe was pronounced dead at the scene. Rendleman said an autopsy would be performed to establish the cause of death of each victim.

Cross said the fire occurred in the Four Seasons building, a two-story downtown structure, at 12:30 a.m. Cross said there were at least two people working in a lounge, which occupies the first floor of the building. They were uninjured.

Thompson to replace retiring board member Carol Kimmel.

D'Esposito's husband, Julian, served as Thompson's chief legal council from 1977 to 1979.

D'Esposito, who did not attend the hearing, said she was "very pleased" with its results.

However, University alumni and others earlier had objected to D'Esposito's nomination because she has no previous connections with the University or the area.

Sen. Jim Rea, D-Christopher, said Monday he had filed several complaints from University alumni and Southern Illinoisans who are upset that D'Esposito was appointed over an area resident or SIU grad.

"I'm not objecting to the person as an individual," Rea told the Senate floor. "The appointment is a very important one. I am an alumnus. I served on the staff there for 11 years and I feel there should be alumni representation on the board."

There are seven board members, but only one, William R. Newwood, of Rolling Meadows, is an SIU graduate. Carmi Attorney Ivan Elliot is the only member residing in Southern Illinois.

James Gildersleeve, president of the University's Alumni Association, had said his organization was opposed to D'Esposito's appointment when there are "more than enough University alumni" in the state who would qualify for the position.

Undergraduate Student Government President Tim Huidebrand had said he thought the appointment should be given to someone with an active interest in SIU.

Tuesday night, the Carbondale City Council voted unanimously to oppose D'Esposito's appointment and a copy of the council's report was sent to the senate.

The report stated the committee should appoint someone familiar with the University and one "preferably an alumnus."

However, University students and staff and Carbondale officials expressed congratulations and said they were willing to work with D'Esposito following her confirmation hearings.

Carbondale Mayor Neil Dillard said he and the city council would urge D'Esposito to visit both campuses at the earliest opportunity.

"We would be happy to escort her around the city and the campus to better her understanding of SIU and I'm sure the people in Edwardsville would extend the same invitation," Dillard said.

Graduate and Professional

Student Council President Charles Ramsey said while there should be more of a balance between alumni and local representatives and other board members, D'Esposito "will probably do the job well from what I know of her qualifications."

SIU-C student trustee Bill Hall said he thought D'Esposito's occupation would be consistent with the concept of lay government.

"I like the fact that she calls herself a homemaker. If we get too many doctors, lawyers and millionaires, the board tends to lose sight of the concept, the real issues that effect education and the campus," Hall said.

Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit said he was pleased that D'Esposito had received the approval and, while he thought Southern Illinois "should definitely be represented" on the board, not all board members should be required to be University alumni or area residents.

"We are a statewide University with statewide responsibilities. We would be limiting ourselves by doing this," Pettit said, "in any given year, one-fourth to one-third of our enrollment comes from the greater Chicago area and we need to expand our support in this area."

24 between the Carbondale area and St. Louis, the development of Highway 413 along the western end of the Edwardsville campus and the development of a major public airport in southwestern Illinois.

Pettit's plans include the development of a major airport.

"The University should do what we can to facilitate certain infrastructure developments, which will allow us to overcome our geographic disadvantages. The economics, the politics, the demographics, the geography in this state are all against us in our relative isolation here at the end of the state," Pettit said. "This makes it all the more imperative we get our act together and that we begin thinking strategically how we're going to position ourselves as we begin the 21st century."

A planning committee comprised of upper-level University administrators will review the first draft of Pettit's proposal. After incorporating faculty, staff and student suggestions, it will return a revised version to Pettit next spring.

The chancellor and both campus presidents then will work on a final version of the proposal, which Pettit will draw from when he makes his recommendations to the SIU Board of Trustees next

Book paints new scenario of Chappaquiddick accident

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Author Kenneth Kappel claimed Thursday that a car driven by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., had been in an accident before it went into the water at Chappaquiddick 20 years ago, claiming the life of a young woman.

Kappel told a news conference that his book, "Chappaquiddick Revealed: What Really Happened," contains new analysis of photographs of the car Kennedy drove the night of July 18, 1969, that show damage that could not have been caused by impact with the water.

The accident occurred shortly before midnight July 18, 1969, when Kennedy's Oldsmobile 88 ran off the 10-foot-wide bridge on Chappaquiddick, Mass., a sparsely populated island used mostly by tourists from neighboring Martha's Vineyard.

The car landed upside down in 10 feet of water. Kennedy got out and survived, but Mary Jo Kopechne, 28, a former aide to his late brother, Robert, did not.

Kennedy said at the time that he made seven or eight attempts to rescue Kopechne, but then delayed reporting the accident for 10 hours.

Six days later, Kennedy pleaded guilty to leaving the scene of an accident. He received a suspended jail sentence and lost his driver's license for a year.

Kappel's account is based on enlarged photographs that he said have never been published. The photographs show long scratches on the car's hood and a bashed-in roof.

Kappel and Jon Ahlbum, the low-truck driver who picked up Kennedy's car after the accident, said the scratches indicate the car was involved in a roll-over, landed on its top and then was rocked back and forth to get it back on its wheels.

Kappel also said there were blood stains on Kopechne's blouse, which must have dried and set before the car went into the water, suggesting she had been injured in an earlier accident.

Asked about Kappel's claims Thursday, Kennedy's press secretary, Paul Donovan, said, "The story is preposterous and absurd. We're not going to comment any further."

He told reporters he never attempted to interview people who helped Kennedy at the scene of the accident.

Pentagon says 4,000 rebels in Nicaragua

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Defense Department said Thursday about 4,000 Contra rebels are in Nicaragua but their supplies of ammunition, grenades and mines are "almost exhausted and insufficient to support offensive operations."

At the same time, the Pentagon acknowledged there have been some attacks by the Contras but called them "rare events" that apparently were "retaliation raids" rather than planned offensives.

The Pentagon, which normally refers questions about other countries to the State Department, released a status report on the Contras that sought to reinforce administration claims that the rebels are on the defensive.

Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega a day earlier ended a 19-month cease-fire, charging that the U.S.-backed rebels have launched offensive operations against civilians and soldiers.

The Defense Department said there are about 10,000 Nicaraguan rebels in the Yamales area of bordering Honduras and "about 4,000 in Nicaragua."

"The general location and strength of the Contras hasn't altered appreciably in the last 18 months or during the period of the cease-fire," the statement said.

Klan, survivors mark anniversary of Greensboro shootings, deaths

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UPI) — Survivors and friends recalled the grief, suffering and legal battles as they observed the 10-year anniversary of a shootout in which Nazis and members of the Ku Klux Klan opened fire on a group of communist protesters, killing five men.

Organizers from both sides said events, public and private, were planned for Friday and Saturday to commemorate, and even celebrate, the bloody confrontation of Nov. 3, 1979.

"It's time to remember people for what they were, not what the media made them out to be following the murders," said Dale Sampson-Levin, widow of one of the victims. "It's also a time to bring the communities together. That's very important for me, to reflect and renew energy."

"We want to remember the commitment and strength of those people — all the people involved," she said. "People are really seeing that Greensboro was an opening of hate violence."

Observances honoring the victims began Wednesday with a memorial service at Bennett College in Greensboro, and folk singer John McCutcheon performed Thursday at Duke Chapel vate party would be held.

"We have no desire to create any friction," Covington said. "It's a commemoration of a victory we believe the Lord provided us. These men went through three trials. They went through an incredible ordeal. The Lord was with them on Nov. 3 (1979), and the Lord was with them in those trials."

Survivors were expected to recall the events that led to the killings

Covington said he was the North Carolina unit leader for the National Socialist Party of America, commonly called the Nazi Party, at the time of the Greensboro shootings, but he said he was not involved in the confrontation.

The killing of five communist protesters and the wounding of others unfolded in 88 fleeting seconds before television cameras as a "Death to the Klan Rally" began at a public housing project.

Members of the Klan and Nazis opened fire on the protesters. Some of the protesters returned the gunfire with their own weapons.

The years have not blurred the memories of the participants. Nor has it cooled the dispute over the events of the day and the succeeding years.

"I saw that all five of the people that had been killed were shot in the heart or the head," said Tom Clark, 38, of Durham. "We subsequently found out that the police had escorted the Klan caravan in. Some people are as clear as I am that it was a police coup."

Clark was peppered with bird-shot fired from a shotgun and still carries pieces of shot in his body.

Four of the demonstrators — Cauce, Jim Waller, Sandi Smith and Bill Sampson — died at the scene. Nathan was wounded and died later.

Six men with ties to the American Nazi Party, the Klan or other extremist causes were tried and acquitted on charges of murder. The 21-week trial ended in mid-1980.

The trials were punctuated by bitter disputes, including the refusal of witnesses to testify and the gagging with tape of one of the widows for outbursts during one of the trials.

Jaguar agrees to Ford Motor Co. takeover bid

LONDON (UPI) — The maker of Britain's prestigious Jaguar automobile agreed Thursday to a $2.5 billion takeover by Ford Motor Co. that would give the U.S. automaker control of Jaguar stock and end weeks of bidding between Ford and General Motors.

Ford, which now owns about 13 percent of Jaguar PLC shares, offered $13.345 for each ordinary share and the Jaguar board of directors was expected to recommend that shareholders approve it.

Jaguar said it would schedule an emergency meeting of shareholders. A 75 percent majority is necessary to approve the $2.5 billion deal.

Jaguar, which gained 28 cents on London's International stock exchange Wednesday, tumbled 5 percent or 69 cents to end the day at $13.11 a share.

The agreement came two days after Secretary of Trade and Industry Nicholas Ridley said he would relax the government's "golden share" law, which bars foreign shareholders from holding more than 15 percent of the British luxury automaker.

In recent weeks, Jaguar has been the subject of a bidding war between U.S. auto giants Ford and GM, the top U.S. automaker. GM said in a statement from its Detroit headquarters it would not bid for any Jaguar shares.

"After an intensive review of Jaguar's products and plants and in view of the losses currently being sustained by them ... GM concluded that the maximum value that could be assigned to all of the Jaguar shares was very significantly below the $13.40 being offered, and that the premium of approximately $2 billion over book value at year-end 1988 could not be justified," GM said.

Ford said it would make a separate cash offer in the United States for all outstanding Jaguar shares at the same price offered in Britain.

Ford said the offer represented a premium of about 110 percent over the middle-market price per Jaguar share on the official stock list for Sept. 18, the day before Ford announced it intended to seek a 15 percent share of Jaguar.

Jaguar did not say why it accepted the Ford bid after weeks of saying it would prefer a deal with GM.

"Quite naturally, the board and the chairman have to think about what's in the best interest of shareholders and it's apparent they think this is," a Jaguar spokesman said.

California Legislature to address quake

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — The California Legislature began a special session Thursday to raise money for earthquake recovery with a quarter-cent emergency sales tax hike and to address other relief measures.

The tax increase was expected to pass easily since it had the support of GOP Gov. George Deukmejian and top Democratic and Republican lawmakers who interrupted their fall recess to respond to the Oct. 17 disaster.

If approved by the Legislature, the tax would take effect Dec. 1 and remain in place for 13 months. It would raise a total $800 million — an average $18.20 from each Californian, plus a total of $280 million from businesses.

Congress already has approved a $3.45 billion federal relief package for the quake, which killed 65 people and caused an estimated $7 billion in damage. The money will pay for highway repairs and loans to individuals and businesses.

As state legislators began what was expected to be a three-day session, others complained the quarter-cent sales tax increase would be too meager to pay for quake recovery.

Don Perata, chairman of the Alameda County Board of Supervisors, criticized Deukmejian's proposal as "short sighted." He and other leaders from Alameda County on the east side of San Francisco Bay said they asked lawmakers for a 1-cent state sales tax increase — four times the amount sought by the governor.

The state Seismic Safety Commission also said more money is needed to prepare California before another major earthquake occurs in densely populated coastal areas.

The California Poll public opinion survey indicated two-thirds of the state's voters would approve a temporary half-cent increase in the state's sales tax to finance earthquake repairs and safety modifications to existing freeways and bridges.

But prospects for a larger state effort were hampered by a constitutional spending limit that restricts the amount of tax money the state can raise and spend in any one year.

The conservative governor had refused to propose a general tax increase before the earthquake.

The Assembly met as one large committee to hear damage reports and statements from state officials before consideration of the legislation.

Molestation case going to trial jury

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The McMartin Pre-School molestation case, the longest and costliest criminal trial in U.S. history, was finally set to go to the jury Thursday.

Superior Court Judge William Pounders scheduled a 90-minute hearing to instruct the jury of eight men and four women, who were expected to begin deliberations immediately.

Pounders has said the deliberations could last as long as several months since the panel has such a massive amount of evidence to sift through.

However, deliberations also could be relatively brief if the jury believes the nine children who testified that they were molested by former preschool teachers Raymond Buckey, 31, and his mother Peggy McMartin Buckey, 62. The Buckeys are also accused of molesting two other children who did not testify at the trial.

Soviet coal strikes, nationalist rallies increase

MOSCOW (UPI) — Labor unrest and nationalist protests spread in the Soviet Union Thursday, with coal strikes growing in the Arctic and thousands of Georgian demonstrators refusing to leave Tbilisi's main square.

The persistent labor strikes and nationalist rallies follow a tumultuous summer of unrest and showed the government's inability to stem the protests despite a deepening economic crisis at the onset of winter.

In the northern Vorkuta zone, nine of the region's 13 mines joined a weeklong protest by fellow coal miners claiming the government has reneged on promises it made during nationwide coal strikes in July, the official Tass news agency said.

All miners in the town of Inia, 140 miles southwest of Vorkuta, also voted to go on strike at 7 a.m. Friday, Tass said.

"We are not demanding undeserved privileges," the Vorkuta miners said in a statement. "We don't want to take money, food or consumer goods from other regions. We just want the government, the Coal Ministry and the (official) trade union leadership to keep their word."

The regional strike committee in Vorkuta, 1,100 miles northeast of Moscow on the Kara Sea, adopted a resolution Thursday saying the miners will suspend the labor action if the government sends a "competent commission" to Vorkuta to hear their demands.

Local Communist Party officials planned to go to Moscow by Friday to carry the miners' grievances to the Central Committee, the state-run radio station said.

Radio Moscow said the miners were angered by Deputy Prime Minister Lev Voronin's claim Monday that Moscow was fulfilling its July pledges to give all Soviet coal miners greater economic independence, better supplies, improved working conditions, more time off and increased pensions.

About 1,500 workers remained on strike for the seventh day at the largest shaft, Vorgashorskaya Mine, which produces one-quarter of the region's annual coal output of 25.7 million tons.

Radio Moscow said "tension at the Vorkuta mines continues" and reported that workers at factories in the region had staged rallies in support of the colliers.

In Soviet Georgia, far to the south, 10,000 protesters continued to occupy Tbilisi's main Rustaveli Square on the eighth day of a nationalist demonstration for independence, Georgian Television editor Medea Chomakhidze said.

"The round-the-clock protest at the site of April's drama in front of the (Georgian) government headquarters continues," Radio Moscow said.

Soldiers broke up a peaceful demonstration in the Tbilisi square April 8 with clubs and tear gas, killing 19 people, including 14 women, and leaving 200 injured.

East Germany's secret police denounced

BERLIN (UPI) — A former East German intelligence chief spoke out against the powers of the secret police, saying "it is wrong to believe the State Security Ministry is above the state," the official news agency reported Thursday.

In a speech at Leipzig University, Markus Wolf also said it is "necessary and right" to advocate changes in the East German system, the news agency ADN said.

Wolf, 67, who had been in charge of East German espionage before he retired two years ago as deputy minister of the State Security Ministry, is considered a follower of Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

"It is wrong to believe the State Security Ministry is above the state and independent of developments in society," Wolf was quoted by the news agency as saying.

Wolf also said the ministry should not be above the law.

Curtailing the power of the "Stasi," the hated secret police, has been one of the demands of the hundreds of thousands who have taken part in demonstrations for reforms throughout East Germany.

In the latest demonstration Wednesday night, the news agency said 20,000 demonstrated in Neubrandenburg, 1,000 in Freital, 10,000 in Frankfurt-on-Oder and several thousand in Halberstadt.

The demonstrations and a mass exodus of East Germans to the West led to the resignation of hard-line East German leader Erich Honecker last month.

The East German government confirmed the resignation of Honecker's wife, Margot, as education minister. Her resignation was reported Monday by the West German newspaper Bild.

Mrs. Honecker, whose ouster had been demanded by the reform movement for her hardline views, has been education minister since 1963. Last month, she outraged the reform movement by telling students they should be ready to use weapons if necessary to put down enemies of socialism.

The new leadership under Egon Krenz has been making a series of concessions, but another rush of would-be emigres to the West was sparked when the borders to Czechoslovakia were reopened Wednesday.

In a move aimed at stopping a further loss in confidence, the East German communist labor union accepted the resignation Thursday of its hardline chairman, Harry Tisch, a 62-year-old Communist party politburo member.

School officials try to avert any copycat roulette killings

MARISSA, Ill. (UPI) — School officials, struggling to maintain a normal atmosphere to avert copycatting, struggled Thursday with the death of a youngster who killed himself playing Russian Roulette.

Matthew Scott Johnson, 13, died Tuesday afternoon at his home while playing Russian Roulette in the company of at least two other students, school officials said. A police statement Thursday said only that an investigation into the death was in progress.

Johnson, who would have been 14 next week, was an eighth-grade student and described by Marissa Junior-Senior High School Principal Tom Manning as "a very nice young man, I'd say a very typical junior-high student ... a well-adjusted person, a likable kid."

Manning said the death appeared to be an accident and not a suicide. He said school officials had brought in a social worker and ministers to help counsel students, "while trying to maintain a normal air," he said.

"It was a rather unfortunate misjudgment in the use of firearms but by no means intentional," Manning said.

The school, with grades 7 through 12, has 331 students. Marissa, a town of 2,600, is located in St. Clair County about 35 miles southeast of St. Louis.

Manning said students will be free to attend Friday's funeral, but school will not be dismissed. He said a band concert assembly also will be held Friday.

"We're trying to be sensitive to the boy, his family, our students," Manning said. "The longer it is played up, the longer we'll have that possibility (of copycatting) around here."

Marissa Superintendent William Gullick said he and Manning heard rumors of the shooting Tuesday as they boarded a bus to attend a Class A state sectional volleyball tournament in Carterville. Gullick said the death was confirmed during the tournament — a tournament Marissa lost.

State Senate votes to ban smoking in most public places within Illinois

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — The state Senate voted unanimously Thursday to ban smoking in most public places in the state and to stop local governments from choosing their own no-smoking policies.

The bills (H1695) ban the smoking of cigarettes, cigars and pipes in most work places but do not require the establishment of designated smoking areas.

The measure applies to schools, libraries and elevators but exempted from the legislation are bars, factories, warehouses and industrial complexes not generally open to the public.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. John Dunn, D-Decatur, passed the House Wednesday. It passed the Senate Thursday on a vote of 50-0. The bill now advances to the Gov. James R. Thompson for his consideration, and legislative leaders said he was expected to sign it.

Opponents in the House attacked the bill because they said it would override the home rule powers of municipalities, which currently lack no-smoking ordinances.

Cities that did not have a no-smoking law by Oct. 1 of this year, must follow the state law, but communities that already have a rule do not need to comply with state standards.

The American Lung Association of Illinois was opposed to the bill because of the restrictions on communities and another bill that bans discrimination against smokers.

"These two are clearly tobacco industry tactics being used in order to keep local municipalities from passing stronger legislation," said Harold Wimmer, executive director of the association. "The bill could be stronger to better protect the health of the non-smokers."

If the governor signs the bill, smokers who violate the law would commit a petty offense and be subject to a $500 fine.

Illinois is currently one of eight states that does have a state law restricting smoking.

State health officials said the law would cost about $80,000 annually.

Illinois farmers suffer fewer accidents than rest of nation

URBANA, Ill. (UPI) — Illinois farmers have a significantly lower accident rate than the national average, but the injuries are just as severe, a study released Thursday by the University of Illinois Department of Agricultural Engineering showed.

Extension Safety Specialist Bob Aherin said Illinois farmers suffer about 11 injuries for every 1 million hours of work exposure, compared with the national average of 20 injuries per 1 million hours. However, it still exceeds the national average for all occupations of seven injuries per 1 million hours of exposure, he said.

remains high. Only 16 percent of the accidents were classified as slight injuries.

The average number of work days lost to injuries provides additional evidence of the high severity level. Machinery-related accidents, the most common type of farm accident in Illinois, resulted in an average of 44 work days lost.

Another significant finding was that about 55 percent of Illinois farmers still do not have their tractors equipped with rollover protective systems, known as ROPS. Aherin's study did not deal with fatalities, but he estimated if all Illinois farmers would equip their tractors with ROPS, one-fourth of the average 34 farm fatalities in the state each year would be prevented.

In compiling the accident study, Aherin received completed surveys from 768 randomly selected farms during the early part of 1989.

"If you apply the results to the entire state, we estimate there are 5,229 accidents in Illinois every year," he said. "This translates into about 15 accidents every day, or 6.3 injuries for every 100 farms in a year."

For the purpose of the survey, an "accident" was defined as any injury that required medical attention or caused someone to miss one-half day of work or more.

Some other findings from the study:

- The highest accident rate was among those in the 15- to 24-year-old age group with 34 injuries for every 1 million hours of work exposure. The second highest injury rate was in the 25- to 44-year-old group.
- Livestock still account for a large percentage of the injuries.

Machinery-related accidents, the most common type of farm accident in Illinois, resulted in an average of 44 work days lost.

"Illinois farmers have a lower accident rate than farmers in many other states because the average farm size is larger," Aherin said. "Large farms tend to have newer, safer equipment."

He also said there is a high proportion of full-time farmers in Illinois and they tend to be more skilled and use better equipment than part-time farmers. Another reason for the low accident rate is the small number of dairy farms in Illinois compared to many other states. A lot of injuries occur when handling animals, particularly in dairy operations, Aherin said.

Although the overall farm accident rate in Illinois is relatively low, he said the severity level still

Candidate for state's attorney vows to combat gang violence

CHICAGO (UPI) — Former Chicago School Board President Raul Villalobos Thursday declared his candidacy for state's attorney by blaming the state's attorney's office for not attacking the El Rukn street gang.

But he refused to criticize directly either incumbent Cecil A. Partee or his predecessor, Richard M. Daley.

Federal agents raided the El Rukn's South Side headquarters last week, arresting about 50 people on the basis of federal grand jury indictments.

"How could the El Rukn gang have terrorized the neighborhood for 10 to 15 years (with) virtual impunity, and suddenly they're gone?" Villalobos asked at a news conference in front of the bricked-up El Rukn headquarters.

"Why did it take the U.S. attorney to do it? Why did it take so long?"

He refused to blame Daley directly but added: "I'm not blaming" Partee. He just came into office six months ago."

Villalobos said he would appoint a deputy state's attorney to organize and combat gangs and drugs in the suburbs and would develop a strike force to attack gangs county-wide.

Colombian officials baffled as drug lords continue attacks

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — Officials reacted with revulsion Thursday to the assassination of a member of Parliament in the capital and a court magistrate in Medellin in an apparent continuation of the drug lords' attacks on the government.

"This wave of violence must cease because I do not think the Colombian people can take it anymore," Norberto Morales Ballesteros, president of the House of Representatives, said Thursday morning.

"We can't continue calmly offering victims every day," Morales said in an interview with Bogota radio station RCN.

Representative Luis Francisco Madero, 62, a member of the Social Conservative Party, was shot Wednesday evening as he returned home from work in Bogota and was to be buried in the capital Thursday afternoon.

Former presidential candidate Alvaro Gomez condemned Madero's killing and told reporters, "this assassination is a clear notification that we are at war. Without doubt the country is at war, a war that is proving long and costly."

Judge Mariela-Espinosa Arango, 44, who sat on the Medellin Superior Court, the highest in Antioquia state, also was to be buried Thursday in Medellin in a ceremony attended by city judicial employees. Espinosa was gunned down Wednesday night as she arrived at her Medellin home.

"We can't continue calmly offering victims every day," Norberto Morales Ballesteros said.

"The authorities are carrying out important operations" in tracking Espinosa's killers, said Medellin's acting mayor, Guillermo Marquez Vargas. "I hope in the coming hours we'll have some results."

Marquez was filling in for Juan Gomez Martinez as head of Medellin, Colombia's second city and home of the powerful Medellin drug cartel. Gomez Martinez was traveling in New York.

Police said they believed the killings were the latest in a string of retaliatory attacks against government workers by gunmen affiliated with the nation's cocaine cartels.

The attacks apparently were revenge for the extradition Sunday of Jose Abello Silva, wanted on drug trafficking charges by a U.S. federal court in Oklahoma.

Five Colombian wanted for drug trafficking have been flown to the United States since President Virgilio Barco re-established extradition in August after a string of assassinations attributed to the cocaine drug barons.

The assassinations prompted the Ministry of Defense to place troops and police in Bogota and Medellin on alert to quell the attacks, a Defense Ministry spokesman said.

No group claimed responsibility for the attack on Madero, but police said it appeared to be related to the nation's war against cocaine drug lords.

The Social Conservative Party immediately condemned the slaying of Madero, who was a member of the Foreign Relations Committee of the Chamber of Deputies, the lower house of Colombia's bicameral legislature.

East German leader visits Polish capital

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — East German leader Egon Krenz pledged to continue reforms during a brief visit to Poland Thursday even as thousands of his countrymen were fleeing to Czechoslovakia in search of passage West.

Krenz traveled to the Polish capital for an eight-hour layover after wrapping up a two-day visit to Moscow, where he was vocal in support of Soviet-style reforms but said the Berlin wall that divides the two Germanys would not be torn down.

In talks with Solidarity Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki, whose election ended four decades of communist rule in Poland, Krenz vowed he would continue East German political and social reforms. In one recent move toward reform, Krenz eased travel restrictions which led to the flood of refugees Thursday to Czechoslovakia.

"The intention to continue the reforms has been underlined as well as the different situations of two countries," the news agency PAP said following the visit.

PAP said Mazowiecki was interested in the latest developments in East Germany, apparently a reference to the mass exodus of East Germans to West Germany via Hungary, Poland and Czechoslovakia.

The vaguely worded PAP statement also indicated that Mazowiecki urged Krenz to start a dialogue with political dissident groups in East Germany and to give more freedom to the churches there.

"A need of dialogue has been stressed as well as the role of the churches in the process of political changes," PAP said.

In his talk with communist President Wojciech Jaruzelski, Krenz agreed to respect Poland's move toward political and social reform but said East Germany would progress at its own speed, PAP said.

"We had a good talk," Krenz said in an interview broadcast by Polish-state run television. "We can learn from each other. The talk was open and clear."

Comedian Spanky's laid-back style accents unusual humor

By Doug Toole
Staff Writer

A Review

they can't read well enough to play 'Bingo.'

Spanky also talked about his family, particularly his brothers. He said he once convinced his younger brother that if he turned a lawn mower upside-down, he could fly. He said Lefty still hasn't forgiven him. Spanky said he was a triplet, sort of; his twin brother was schizophrenic. Spanky said that his brother killed himself, but they thought it was self-defense.

His delivery was slow and steady, and occasionally he would laugh at his own jokes. Spanky's voice sounded like Jack Nicholson's, and he had the same pacing. His style was off-the-wall, but he got great audience reaction.

Next, he talked about jobs. He said he was fired from a ladies' large fashion store for being honest with the customers (when asked what would make one woman look slimmer, he suggested she stand next to Saturn). On job applications, where it asks who to notify in case of an emergency, he always said "a doctor."

Jokes like those were his best. His observations were weird, but always thought-provoking. He wondered why battered wives were never deep-fried, if Jewish red-necks go to Bar-B-Q-Mitzvahs, why signs tell you to 'Watch Your Head' (try it some time), who invented circumcision and what did he say to get someone else to try it?

Spanky was really good. His style resembled Steven Wright's in part because of the slow, cracked way of looking at things,

Colleges face needed changes by year 2000

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) — The days of college classrooms filled with 18 year olds may be coming to an end, and universities must adapt to the needs of a rapidly aging pool of adult students.

A recent survey conducted by "College Board News" found that by the year 2000, half of college students nationwide will be classified as adult students — those 25 years of age and older.

Adult students have different needs than their younger counterparts. Peggy Sullivan, assistant dean of students at Purdue University, says schools will have to seriously consider those needs.

"For a long time, colleges have considered themselves 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. institutions, and that won't be the case anymore," said Sullivan, coordinator of Purdue's Span Plan Program for adult students. "With adult students who work, there will be an emphasis on evening and weekend courses and on degree programs offered at night. Child care is going to become an issue, since a lot of single parents will be attending school."

Along with the changes in scheduling will come changes in attitudes, she said.

"Once the adult population hits, it will be vocal," Sullivan said. "If someone's not teaching or working well, adult students let you know. Adults are used to dealing with bosses, and they're not intimidated. They'll be here because they want to learn, and in many instances they'll be sacrificing quality time with their families to go to school, so they will have high expectations of their schools."

She said attracting adult students could be the key to survival for some schools.

"The number of 18 year olds is declining, and a lot of schools are feeling the crunch. The pinch is especially hitting small private schools, and many of them are recruiting adult students — and even retired people — as a matter of survival," she said.

Some schools are offering credit for a student's life experiences, especially in the work arena, as a recruiting incentive.

Sullivan said 45 percent of today's college students are adult students, and the number is increasing. At Purdue, there has been a 121 percent increase in the number of adult students in the past 13 years.

Carnegie fund awards real heroes

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — A Mokena, Ill., greenhouse manager who braved intense heat and smoke to save the life of a 1-year-old baby boy was among 18 people honored Thursday by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission.

Richard E. Bass, 31, pulled Joseph R. Holwell, 1, from his crib in the Dec. 28, 1988, blaze that broke out in the living room of the toddler's home.

Bass, who was working at a nearby greenhouse, ran to the home once he learned of the fire, officials said, and broke out a bedroom window to try to save the boy.

But the child was too far away. Bass then climbed atop a picnic table and reached into the room, but still was unable to reach the boy. So he braved intense heat and smoke by climbing into the bedroom, where he took the child and climbed back outside to safety.

Barry,
 To a very special man. I may not say it as often as I should, but it's a feeling I carry in my heart constantly. When things get difficult, you lighten the load with your help, understanding, and support. I know that you want me to succeed, and your unselfishness and encouragement inspire me to do my best. Not many men would give so much of themselves in such a caring way. I feel lucky to have you, and I wanted you to know I love you, and these last 3 years have been wonderful. I can't wait until I can say Mr. and Mrs. Wright

People over 60: Driving car more important than religion

NEW YORK (UPI) — A survey of 857 Americans over age 60 show, they believe the ability to drive a car is more important than religion, Parade magazine reported Thursday.

Asked about their sex lives, slightly more than half of the men said they were sexually active, but only a third of the women said they were.

The poll, conducted by the Mark Clements Research Inc., found 58 percent of those questioned believe it is "very important" to be able to drive.

Fifty-five percent gave top priority to religion, but the importance of friendship came out tops, with a 67 percent vote.

The survey showed, however, that 73 percent believe "strongly" or "somewhat strongly" in life after death, and 56 percent said they did not fear death or dying.

A whopping 89 percent said they would not want to be kept alive by artificial means if they were beyond medical help.

Ninety percent said they were concerned about the cost of medical care, and 51 percent said they feared there would be cuts in Social Security benefit.

Sixty-six percent of the couples questioned said they were satisfied with their spouses. But more men — 77 percent — were satisfied than women, 55 percent.

In relation to this, the survey found only one in 12 men surveyed was widowed, as compared to one in three women.

Suicidal elderly, teen-age males mirror many of same emotions

MUNCIE, Ind. (UPI) — Many emotions experienced by suicidal elderly men mirror those of adolescent males, says a counseling psychologist who specializes in geriatrics.

"For adolescents, there is a struggle from dependence toward independence," said Royda Crose, associate director of the Ball State University institute of gerontology. "In late life, there comes a concern about the loss of independence and the fear of dependence."

Family members always should be aware of the struggles faced by older people and the potential for suicide.

A new study by the American Association of Retired Persons shows that older white males — usually widowers — are at the highest risk of committing suicide. The study said people age 65 to 71 have a suicide rate 50 percent higher than the rest of the nation.

Crose believes that an identity crisis similar to that suffered by many adolescents contributes to the high suicide rate among older men. Similarities between adolescents and the elderly, she said, include the desire to work and to be independent.

While young people can look forward to gaining their independence, Crose said, older people often despair about the loss of self-sufficiency and purpose.

"Adolescents who are able to look beyond present feelings of loneliness and confusion have hope for their lives to get better," she said. "Older people, especially men, often feel like there is no hope for the future, only more loss and despair."

Crose said three losses are especially traumatic for older men and can result in suicidal thoughts. They are the loss of one's employment, driver's license and spouse.

"Males in particular have so much of their identity centered around their careers," she said.

"When they retire, they often lose a sense of themselves. They sometimes feel useless and see no need to go on living."

Women usually become more autonomous and driven as they age, Crose said.

"After their children are grown, many women develop careers, increase social networks and get involved in a variety of activities. They can find a new sense of worth."

The AARP study found that while suicide is a major mental health concern in the United States, intervention efforts focus on adolescents and young adults.

"Seniors don't avail themselves of the resources that younger adults do," said Crose, adding that counseling could help older people deal with the feelings of helplessness that often occur in late life.

She said counselors and family members always should be aware of the struggles faced by older people and the potential for suicide.

"We cannot discount how hard it is to survive your mate, your family, your friends and to lose your independence," Crose said. "We need to help older people continue to find something worth living for."

and win against the big teams."
 The Southwest Missouri State Bears are currently tied with Western Illinois for fourth place in the conference with a record of 17-9, 3-2 in conference play. The Wichita State Shockers, 16-13, 1-4 in the Gateway, are tied for seventh with Indiana State.
 Hagemeyer said the Bears have always performed well in the Gateway.
 "We have had problems in the past with (the Bears). They have a very controlled defense," she said. "If I had to compare them to someone, I would say they have some shades of an older SIU team."

 Hagemeyer said the Bears always draw large crowds to their games.
 "I really want to beat Southwest Missouri," said sophomore Saluki setter Terri Schulteichrich. "That way it would put us in the top four. We have both lost to the same people. If we can beat them it should be a good win," she said.
 Last year, under coach Phil Shoemaker, the Wichita State Shockers recorded their best ever overall record of 21-14 in the school's history.
 Shoemaker said his team was experiencing a few problems this year because of player injury but would not comment on the health of specific players.

 "Injuries have caused us some problems," he said.
 "Wichita is big on blocking," Hagemeyer said. "Up until now they have been a strong team. I expect them to be tough."
 Hagemeyer said if the Salukis' season could be summed-up in one word it would be "great".
 The Salukis play their final home conference match against the Eastern Illinois Panthers November 9th.

Rose wants back in pro baseball

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Pete Rose, saying he always considered himself a "model citizen," is promising to do his utmost to win reinstatement to baseball next summer.

"I'm just going to try to be a model citizen. I always thought I was," Rose said in a keynote speech at a charity dinner Wednesday night. "I'm not going to do anything around gambling and I'm going to try to do my best to get reinstated."

The former Cincinnati Reds star player and manager was banned from baseball for life in August for gambling. However, Rose may apply for reinstatement next August.
 Rose recently hired a public relations agent to help him win favorable publicity.

Rose's public relations campaign will include a national interview tour, beginning next week.

Sycamores will not have to do with ability but with health, Smith said. It will depend on how fast the quarterback can recover by Saturday.
 Gibson has taken the majority of snaps in practice this week but still has a swollen knee as a result of early season knee surgery. Gabbert is recovering from a shoulder injury suffered last week against Kentucky State.
 If either Gabbert or Gibson are unable to play, freshman Brandon Prenger and junior Scott Planz will be the backups.
 Both Willie Davis and Scott Boelte will be back in action after missing last week with injuries, Smith said.

 Smith said it is important to play well against the Sycamores going into the last game of the season against Northern Iowa Nov. 11.
 "Offensively we just hope we can get a week better," Smith said. "We will probably throw it 50 more times at a minimum."
 "Our ability or inability to contain their offense," will be the key to winning or losing the ballgame, Smith said.
 "We need to put pressure on Sahn, shut down the run and make some big plays in the secondary — some interceptions," Smith said.

Upshaw rejects calls for resuming negotiations

WASHINGTON (UPI) — NFL Players Association head Gene Upshaw Thursday rejected calls by management to resume contract talks following a court ruling gutting the union's antitrust suit against the league and said decertification of the NFLPA is a "very serious" option.

A three-judge federal appeals court panel sitting in St. Louis ruled 2-1 Wednesday the free agency provisions of the old contract between the NFL and the union cannot be challenged as a violation of federal antitrust laws simply because labor negotiations have stalled, thereby eliminating the possibility of monetary damages against the league. The divided panel also urged the sides to resolve their differences at the bargaining table.

Upshaw, the NFLPA's executive director, said the union's executive committee has officially voted to appeal the ruling, either to the entire 8th circuit appeals court or to the Supreme Court.

Reacting to a call by Jack Donlan, the executive director of the NFL Management Council, the league's labor relations unit, to resume contract talks, Upshaw said the union would not do so until the owners improve their contract offer, which now includes a restrictive entry-level wage scale, a league-wide salary cap and a restrictive free agency system.

"What's keeping us from the bargaining table is their position," Upshaw said. "They haven't changed (their offer). Does that give you a reason to go there?"

NFL Commissioner Pete

Rozelle, whose term ends Saturday, said Thursday the appeals court ruling could have a positive result if it spurs the sides to resume contract talks.

Upshaw, the NFLPA's executive director, said the union has officially voted to appeal the ruling, possibly to the Supreme Court.

"Anything that will possibly bring both parties in a compromising way to the table is helpful," Rozelle said. "I think it could lead them to the table. I sure hope so, rather than some of the extremes." Decertification could have a calamitous impact upon the league, eliminating the so-called "labor exemption" the league enjoys for the collegiate draft and player reserve system and exposing the league to federal antitrust scrutiny.

Under federal labor law, the league is allowed to violate antitrust laws in contracts bargained with a certified union representing workers. With no such labor representative, the league would have to comply with antitrust laws that almost certainly would find many league policies — such as limiting a player's ability to bargain with any team — as anti-competitive, making players able to sue for triple damages.

"Given the ruling, decertification is a very serious option and it's something that we'll consider and discuss and a decision will be made," Upshaw said.

The union could be decertified only after a vote of its membership supervised by the National Labor Relations Board.

"Obviously, I hope that isn't done," Rozelle said. "I don't think it would be healthy for football, for the NFL. And I think the answer is to get together at the table and have both sides willing to compromise. You have to realize there's a big pie — they have to find a way of carving it up equitably."

NFL players have worked for three seasons without a collective bargaining agreement and are still receiving benefits at levels approved in an expired five-year contract approved in 1982.

1989 Cowboys rank among all-time worst

By Gil Lebreton
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

The task, as put to computer game designer Dave Holt, was to find out what every Dallas Cowboys fan painfully wondered:

Just how bad is this Cowboys team?

Without Herschel Walker, can they run, even against a stiff wind? Can that defense of theirs slow down anything, without installing speed bumps?

Using an IBM PCT clone and his game, Micro Sports' Pro League Football, Holt discovered the answer.

Yep. They're awful. They're making history at Texas Stadium.

The 1989 Cowboys couldn't beat the notorious, winless 1976 Tampa Bay Bucs. They couldn't even beat their notorious, winless cousins, the Cowboys of 1960.

Holt, a resident of Chattanooga, Tenn., and a self-confessed, longtime Cowboys fan, took a novel approach to gauging the '89 team's futility. He matched the current Cowboys against their actual 1989 schedule, yet used each opponent's alleged worst team ever — i.e., the '67 Saints, the '66 Giants, etc.

The results? Dallas won only twice. They defeated the 1967 Atlanta Falcons, a 1-12-1 team, 14-10. And they slipped past the 1-12-1 Washington Redskins of 1961, 14-13.

They lost to those 1966 Giants (1-12-1), 41-7. They were drummed by the 1962 Rams, another 1-12-1 team, 37-7. In a rematch at RFK Stadium with the '61 Skins, Washington rolled, 27-7.

Scrrips-Howard News Service

NFL 'healthy' despite disputes, Rozelle says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle, nearing the end of a 29-year reign, said Thursday successor Paul Tagliabue inherits a "healthy" league despite an unresolved labor dispute and lingering bad feelings among some owners from a bitter power struggle over selecting Rozelle's replacement.

Rozelle, a former public relations man who was elected as a compromise candidate after 23 ballots in 1960, is credited with orchestrating the league's mushrooming popularity and financial prosperity. His term officially ends and Tagliabue, a Washington lawyer who served as the league's primary outside counsel for two decades, takes over at midnight EST Saturday.

Rozelle, in his final news conference as commissioner, said some of the owners are still angry over the seven-month process that culminated with the election of Tagliabue. A band of new owners led a stunning rebellion that scuttled the candidacy of New Orleans Saints President Jim Finks and forced the election of Tagliabue, dealing a setback to so-called "Old Guard" owners who favored

Finks. "I think to say there are no hard feelings or hurt feelings would be an over simplification and not completely true because there have to be (bad feelings) after that period of time and those meetings and the harsh debate we had over the commissioner," said Rozelle, who resigned on March 22 and will retire to a new home in California. "(But) I don't think they'll follow the so-called party lines that we established during the commissioner elections on other issues," Rozelle added. "I don't see the division remaining — New Guard versus Old Guard — in the future."

Rozelle said he is satisfied with the state in which he leaves the league, despite the fact the NFL players have worked for three straight seasons without a collective bargaining agreement and ownership and the NFL Players Association appear no closer to resolving their differences than they did during a 24-day strike in 1987.

"I think the league is healthy, but, of course, there are issues that need to be addressed," Rozelle said.

NBA also-rans look to knock off Detroit Pistons

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (UPI) — The Detroit Pistons ended the 1980s by supplanting the Boston Celtics and Los Angeles Lakers as the best team in basketball.

They'll enter the 1990s replacing the Celtics and Lakers as the team everyone else in the NBA wants to beat.

Detroit opens defense of its NBA title Friday by playing host to the New York Knicks. The Pistons will receive their championship rings and their title banner will be raised to the roof of the sumptuous Palace in a pregame ceremony.

Detroit returns NBA finals MVP Joe Dumars to team with Isiah Thomas at guard. Mark Aguirre, who blended in better than anyone figured last year when acquired in a midseason deal for Adrian Dantley, reported leaner than any time since getting out of DePaul. Bill Laimbeer has his muscle, outside shooting ability and rebounding skills intact while Vinnie Johnson provides spark off the bench.

Coach Chuck Daly has warned his team that opponents "will come at us harder than they ever have. I guarantee it. We saw that during the preseason."

It is a feeling veteran Boston and Los Angeles players know well — every team coming at them as if it were Game 7 of the NBA finals.

It's not like Detroit is unprepared, however. The Pistons' "Bad Boys" reputation has pumped the opposition up for nearly two seasons. Winning the NBA title will only increase that feeling a notch or two.

"They hated us already," Pistons assistant coach Brendan Suhr said. "It's like going to see one of those horror movies when they say, 'If you didn't like them then, wait until you see them now.' So it's like a double whammy."

How tough is it to repeat in the NBA? Detroit stopped Los Angeles from making it three straight titles last spring, but before that there had not been a repeat winner in the league since the Boston Celtics of 1968 and 1969.

Detroit may not even win the Central Division, generally accepted as the strongest grouping in the NBA.

Until the last two months of last season, when Larry Nance got hurt and other injuries slowed them, Cleveland had a better record and was regarded as far superior to Detroit. The Pistons caught and passed the Cavaliers late in the season.

The Chicago Bulls surprised the Pistons in the playoffs — until Detroit clamped down on Michael Jordan and used its superior depth to wear down the Bulls. Chicago has changed coaches and added some potentially impressive rookies. By season's end, the Bulls could be the best in the league.

Detroit lost a key part of its championship until just two days after winning the title when Rick Mahorn was drafted by the expansion Minnesota team. He has since been traded to Philadelphia.

The Pistons signed Ion Koncak of Atlanta to a huge offer sheet in an effort to replace Mahorn's muscle but the Hawks matched it to retain his rights. Detroit signed forward David Greenwood instead but he has been slowed by a pulled leg muscle.

Scott Hastings, another veteran with some size, has been added and 7-footer William Bedford has returned from more than a year in a drug rehabilitation center. How much any of them contribute is speculative.

While most regard the loss of Mahorn as crippling to Detroit's chances of repeating, what is often overlooked is the increased amount of playing time John Salley and Dennis Rodman will receive.

Those two played most of the fourth quarters anyway and that was when Detroit was toughest in the playoffs. Rodman is a ferocious defender who can guard anybody from power forwards to big guards with no loss of efficiency. Salley must show a consistent level of high play off the bench for the Pistons to have a shot at reaching the finals again.

Spurs banking on 7-1 Robinson

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — San Antonio Spurs owner Red McCombs is already feeling the impact of having David Robinson on his team.

McCombs, determined to turn the Spurs into an NBA championship contender, helped sign Robinson in 1987 to an eight-year, $26 million contract, then had to wait while the U.S. Naval Academy graduate completed his military commitment.

The 7-foot-1 center finally makes his NBA debut Saturday in front of a sellout crowd of 15,868 at HemisFair Arena against Los Angeles, but his presence in the Alamo City has generated an outburst of support for a club that won just 21 games last year.

"We knew that David was going to make a big impact on and off the court, but I never dreamed he would make as big an impact as quickly as he has," McCombs said. "Obviously, we expected big things from him and he's delivered more than we expected."

Season-ticket sales were at a club-high 7,800. In three preseason games, the Spurs averaged 13,405, including a record exhibition-game crowd of 14,305. Two years ago, the Spurs sold just 3,000 season tickets.

"That's simply unheard of for this club," said Spurs spokesman Wayne Witt. "David has had a big impact on the club. His reputation alone is probably responsible for a big part of it. He has generated quite a bit of excitement."

Robinson downplays his part, giving credit to the makeup of the entire team. Only three players are back from last season, and the club has acquired numerous marquee players, such as Terry Cummings, Maurice Cheeks, Caldwell Jones and No. 1 draft pick Sean Elliott.

Prep star commits to Illinois

By Kevin Simpson
Staff Writer

Christopher Community High School standout T.J. Wheeler officially made a verbal commitment to play basketball at the University of Illinois during a press conference at the high school Thursday morning.

The 6-4, 190 pound senior said he picked Illinois because of its accomplishments on the court and because the school has a solid business program. Wednesday is the first day high school players are allowed to sign national letters of intent.

"Being from Illinois, I always wanted to be an Illini," he said. "Like I said my sophomore year, if I had a chance to be an Illini, I would. I was given that chance this year and that's why I went ahead and committed with Illinois. I'll sign on Wednesday, the first day and get it over with."

As the most heavily recruited basketball player in Southern Illinois this year, Wheeler said he has been waiting a long time to make the decision.

Wheeler had narrowed his choices down to the Illini and four other schools including SIU-C. Although he picked Illinois, he said there was nothing negative to say about any of the schools.

"The hardest thing for me was telling the other four coaches where I was going to play ball," Wheeler said. "Signing Nov. 8 will take a lot of pressure off of me."

"Coach Henson has made great strides with the teams he's had over the years. I always wanted to play Big 10 ball. Now I'm getting the opportunity to play with some great players."

Wheeler has scored 1,777 points going into his senior year of high school basketball.

The final decision was made after the Wheeler family visited the Illinois campus last weekend. Wheeler took the time to watch basketball practice and spent some time with some of the Illini players.

"After I went to the Sunday practice, I was pretty much convinced in my mind that I could go up to Illinois and play," Wheeler said.

Carbondale native Steve Bardo, now a senior guard with the Illini acted as an escort for Wheeler during his campus visit.

"Steve Bardo had a lot of influence on me," Wheeler said. "He had the same kind of recruiting class I'm going to have. He had a lot of influence on my decision."

Going into his fourth year of high school basketball, Wheeler has scored 1,777 points, and led his team to a 24-4 record during his junior year when he averaged 25 points, 14 rebounds and 7 assists per game for the Bearcats.

Christopher went on to capture the First Class A regional championship in school history. Wheeler is a two-time all-state selection by the Associated Press.

Wheeler took time to praise the members of his high school who have helped him with his accomplishments over the years.

"Coach Choate took us to 24-4 last year, there's not much more of a high school player can ask for," Wheeler said. "The teachers here have helped me prepare for a college career. The many people I would like to thank are the teammates I played with. They took a lot of scoring opportunities away from themselves to open things up for me."

Bell said the main things he has to concentrate on are defensive pressure and patience when running the point.

"Sterling and I have to pressure the other team's point guard," Bell said. "We really have to pressure the ball and not let the other team pass the ball around."

"We'll be ready to step in and help. I think I'm the backup point guard right now," Bell said. "Hopefully I'll be able to give him a rest when I go in. Hopefully we won't lose anything. I have to protect the ball and keep the turnovers down."

"I would like to see the team make it into the NCAA, that comes before any individual goal. For myself, I would like to make the freshman all-conference team," Bell said.

Hodges was a unanimous all-conference selection and was one of 20 players named to the Chicago Sun-Times all-state squad. Hodges scored 20 points per game during his senior year while hitting 45 percent from the field.

Hodges said the defensive strategies the coaches have implemented will be what it takes to make a winning team.

"I think it will take tough defense to make a winning team," Hodges said. "It's a five man effort. Everybody works together. If one man gets beat the other guys have to cover for him."

Hodges is making the adjustments it takes to move up from the high school to the college level of basketball.

"I'm working a lot harder. It calls for a lot more effort. Basically getting down and working a lot harder," Hodges said. "I'm seeing the court more, playing smarter defense. If I'm in the right position, I won't have to move as much. But if I'm in the wrong position, I'll have to work even harder. I'm playing smarter and more aggressive."

As for personal goals, Hodges said he would like to help the team in any way he can.

"I would like to play hard, make sure I play hard in practice to help the other players so we all get better," Hodges said. "Everyone is coming together. There aren't any selfish players."

Ashraf Amaya, a 6-7, 210 pound forward, was an Associated Press all-stater who led Melrose Park to a third-place finish in the 1988 class A state championship. Amaya was a two-year starter and averaged 19.7 points and 10.9 rebounds during his senior year.

Herrin has referred to Amaya as a diamond in the rough.

Amaya said he, Hodges and Bell should be able to fill whatever roles they are placed in.

'Eerie similarities' between 2-7 Salukis, Indiana State

By Daniel Wallenberg
Staff Writer

Statistically, the game between the football Salukis, 2-7, and Indiana State Sycamores, 2-7, this Saturday "is so similar it's eerie," head coach Bob Smith said.

"In the 10th week of the season there are a lot of comparisons between Indiana State and us," Smith said. "They have a tough schedule, we have each lost a lot of close games and we each have had some key injuries."

The Sycamores have lost six straight and the Salukis had lost five straight before whipping Kentucky State 54-12 last week. During the Saluki losing streak, the team lost by an average of 6.4 points. The Sycamores have lost by 6.6 points over their last five games.

"In August people were picking Indiana State to win the conference and for us to finish in the cellar or close to it," Smith said. "So as you look at them on film they are a hard team to study because it appears that they are beating everybody they play. Then they have a tendency to self-destruct. I guess that is another similarity."

The Salukis average 20.4 points a game to Indiana State's 19.3. Offensively the Dawgs average 349.4 yards a game to the Sycamores 358.3.

Defensively, the Salukis allow an average of 24.1 points per game compared to the 23.2 of Indiana State. The Salukis have allowed 337.1 yards per game while the Sycamores have given up 338.6.

"But they are a very talented team," Smith said. "They have two very good wide receivers and their quarterback (John Sahm) is right up there with the best in I-AA.

Sahm has passed for 1,739 so far this season. He has connected 149 times on 263 attempts for seven touchdowns with 15 interceptions.

The Saluki quarterback tandem of Scott Gabbert and Fred Gibson have thrown for 2,132 yards, completing 194 of 292 for 15 touchdowns with 12 interceptions.

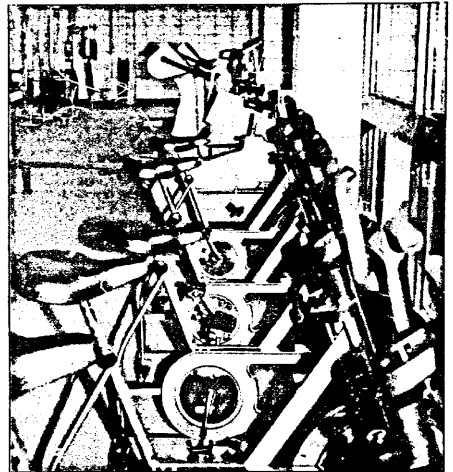

Though similar, the final score is questionable, Smith said.

"It's an important game for both of us," Smith said. "They are good enough that if we don't play hard, they could blow us out. But by the same token we are good enough to win if we play hard for four quarters."

"The fortunate thing for this game, although we are not going to be 100 percent everywhere, is that we are going to be healthier than we have for the last four weeks," Smith said. "There is a chance everybody could be back. We won't know about the quarterback situation until pregame warm-ups."

The decision on who will start at quarterback this week against the action are Freshman Ashraf Amaya (left), junior Erik Griffin, senior Jay Schafer and sophomore Kelvan Lawrance. The Salukis have been stressing tougher defense since practice began.

Moving from high school to the college level of any sport can be a difficult adjustment to make. The freshmen on the men's basketball team seem to be making the transition as smoothly as can be expected.

Although it is too early in the practice season to determine exactly how much playing time any given player will receive, the freshmen will be ready if their numbers are called. Head coach Rich Herrin said all three possibly could get some playing time this season.

Guards Tyrone Bell and Jason Hodges are listed at an identical 6-3, 185 pounds.

Bell possesses great court awareness and is looking forward to backing up Sterling Mahan at the point-guard position. He averaged 19 points per game during his senior year while shooting 53 percent from the floor.

As an honor student at Evanston, Bell was first-team all-conference during his junior and senior seasons.

According to Bell, the defensive strategies are the hardest adjustments to make from the high school to the college level.

"There are some different philosophies than what I played in high school," Bell said. "You have to adjust to a different style of defense. The players are much stronger so you have to get used to that. On the whole, it hasn't been that much of an adjustment. They're pushing us really hard. It will pay off in the long run."

Rec Center expansion

New addition opens Monday

By Kevin Simpson
Staff Writer

Fitness enthusiasts across the SIU-C campus will be happy to hear the new addition to the Recreation Center will open at 6 a.m. Monday.

The $6.2 million addition adds 63,000 feet of recreational space to the existing facility. Finishing touches will be completed during the weekend.

Included in the expanded facility will be a multi purpose court, an NCAA-standard six lane, 200 meter running track, a suspended jogging track, six racquetball court, separate 3,500 square foot weight room, called the fitness forum and a multi-purpose room.

During construction, the Sports Medicine Center has been expanded from 3,500 to almost 10,000 feet.

Bill McMinn, assistant director of the Recreation Center, said he was a little relieved now that everything has finally been completed.

"I'm excited for everybody," McMinn said. "I think this facility is going to exceed everyone's expectations. The final product has exceeded what I envisioned during the final stages of the drawing. Everyone will be proud of what we have here."

McMinn also said special thanks need to be given to Purchasing office and the Physical Plant for their help throughout the project.

As the completion date was drawing closer, McMinn said the combination of sports programs and facilities place the complex among the top 10 in the country. The new addition, which was started in August, 1988, will be totally handicapped accessible.

Brian Lukes, coordinator of Intramural-Recreational sports, said most of the new equipment has been delivered, but some equipment for the fitness forum and existing weight rooms will be delivered by the grand opening on Nov. 16.

A total of $192,000 worth of new exercise equipment will be installed in the Recreation Center.

The project is being funded completely by student fees included in tuition costs. Fees are currently $53 per person, per semester. Of this, $15 will be diverted to the new addition.

Saluki volleyball team battles conference foes

By Tracy Sargeant
Staff Writer

Only three conference games remain for the Saluki volleyball team before they know whether or not they have a shot for the Gateway Conference Championships.

This weekend the Salukis, 13-8, 4-2 in the Gateway, finish up their conference road tour with a pair of matches against Southwest Missouri State and Wichita State.

After a loss to Illinois State last weekend, Saluki coach Patti Hagemeyer said her team isn't dwelling on the past.

"They have learned their lesson," Hagemeyer said, "they don't dwell on too many things. They are more confident that they can play
