24-hour access to Morris Libiary was made official Monday by Library Affairs Dean Carolyn Snyder and several others involved in the project.

Opening of all-night library floor comes unannounced

RYAN KEITH ACADEMIC AFFAIRS EDITOR

The wait for 24-hour access to Morris Library ended Sunday with an opening that would demand respect from even the most strict librari

The library officially opened the first 24-hour access floor at a press conference at the library Monday afternoon. But that announcement came after the unofficial and unannounced opening Sunday at 11 p.m. After a three-month wait for the floor to open that began at the begin-ning of this semester, Library Affairs Dean Carolyn Snyder said the deci-sion to open without public notification was a calculated one

We decided that since it was Sunday night and students were just coming back from home. We wanted a trial run," Snyder said. "We had put the doors the new hours. But just like department stores have a quiet opening and then a grand opening, we wanted to test everything and make sure it worked."

Snyder was one of several SIUC administrators and students who spoke at the opening Monday.

Undergraduate Student

Government President Kristie Ayres and Graduate and Professional Student Council President Michael nt President Kristie Ayres Speck were among those who thanked the many library staff members and students involved in the project. Each speaker received a large key to commemorate the event.

The first floor is now open 24 hours Monday through Thursday, closed at midnight Friday and open from 7:45 a.m. to midnight Saturday and Sunday. All other floors of the library will be closed at 11 p.m. Monday through Thursday. Most facilities and services of the first floor and the circulation desk will be available to patrons, but those will not include transactions involving money, including paying fines or purchasing materials from the Self

Library users will be able to park in Lot 6 north of the library during extended hours provided they have a parking decal of any color but green. Guest permits can be received at the 's Circulation Deak with the guest's name, social security number and license plate number.

Charcellor Administration James Tweedy, whose staff was in charge of providing the new parking arrangements, said the 24-hour access was worth the extra effort

The winners, I think, are going to be the undergraduate students and the faculty," Tweedy said, "People can come here now with work at night, and they have access to as much material as they need. That's why we're all here."

The announcement to open the floor to 24-hour access came after several delays. After proposing this summer to open the library's first floor; full-time Sundays through Fridays, the plan was postponed from its scheduled Aug. 24 opening date because of the ordering and installing of security equipment and hiring of additional staff.

The library announced plans this summer to close all floors but the first floor at 11 p.m. Security measures such as special locks, panic bars, key and ID scanners wer ordered to ensure the project would he feasible.

The library also hired additional staff to work the extra hours on the first floor, providing assistance at the reserve desk and in equipment use.

Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs and Provost John Jackson said restrooms installed on the first floor created the biggest cost at more than $100,000. Jackson said continuous operation of the plan would cost the University about 590,000 annual-

Despite the delays, Jackson said the opening showed another step in making the University more student

Although the floor has been open under the new plan less than two days, Snyder said the future is bright

We opened the first floor quietly last night, and some students just stayed in the Undergraduate Library, and a couple stayed until 6 a.m.," Snyder said. "We're pretty excited, and we think we have the glitches out of the systems."

Democrat Mary Lou Kearns and Republican Corinne Wood are both vying for the chance to be the first female lieutenant governor. The candidates plan to use the historically inactive position to focus on health care

Kearns, who served as Kane County Coroner for 22 years, promises to promote health care as a key point of her agenda. She would also head the Commission on the Status of Women, a temporary commit-tee gubernatorial candidate Glenn Poshard promises to

For Wood, interest in health care is personal. She under a mastectomy last year and has been in remission from breast cancer for 15 months. Wood, who was handpicked by Republican gubernatorial hope-ful George Ryan, says she will ficus on making mammograms more affordable and accessible for women

Attorney General

Jim Ryan, R-Bensenville, is running for his second term as

attorney general.

Considered to be tough on crime, the 52-year-old Ryan's most prestigious accomplishment may be Illinois' adoption of truth-in-sentencing laws.

The campaign of Miriam Santos, D-Chicago, has been marred by a federal investiga-tion into her fund-raising tac-

She earned a master's degree at Northwestern University and has gained pre-vious political experience as Chicago city treasurer beginning in 1989.

Treasurer

Incumbent Republican Judy Baar Topinka believes comb ing the office of treasurer with the comptroller's office would be a prudent way to eliminate bureaucracy.

Topinka, a resident of Riverside, describes herself as "cheap" and says she is proud of the $1.4 billion the state has earned in interest during her tenure as treasurer.

Democratic challenger Daniel McLaughlin of Orland Park has been critical of a deal in which Topinka offered $40.3 million in loans to two politi-cally connected hotels - loans that were later halted by Attorney General Jim Ryan and have been described by critics as a "sweetheart deal."

McLaughlin has proposed to increase aid to farmers as well as minority-owned businesses and says he views the office as a means to offer financial advice to intere ted citizens

Molly Edwards never wanted to accept the thought of losing her husband a-year-anda-half ago. Now she knows she never has to Molly Edwards, academic adviser for SIUC's College of Applied Sciences and Arts, lost her husband, Bob Edwards, at age 48 to a 16-month battle with a brain tumor on Oct. 15. Bob left behind Molly and three children, James, 16, Charlie, 12, and Hannah, 9.

Get out and punch a ballot today

Voting gives citizens a way to be part of the political process and is the easiest and most effective way to influence public policy. Sadly, it is a gift that too many of us take for granted. Overall, as a society, we trust and assume that government will work efficiently and effectively, but we do very little to ensure that it properly addresses our needs and demands.

The DAILY EGYPTIAN encourages all registered voters to go to the polls and vote today. As U.S. citizens, it is not only our privilege to vote, but also our patriotic duty.

On this election day, our votes can make a dif-ference and bring real change to the University and Southern Illinois. Students concerned about issues such as technology and financial aid should make their voices heard at the polls. The only problem is that a majority of college students do not participate in the political process.

Studies have shown that older voters turn out at election day. They are going to vote for their issues—usually ignoring the needs and demands of students. Why? Because they are more concerned with issues that hit closer to home, such as health/care and taxes.

Students already have witnessed that their vote can make a difference. In the 1997 City Council .

election, students showed up to the polls and voted for he candidates that they thought would best repas them.

Changes in the bar-entry age and towing fees were results of student participation in the political Southern Illinois citizens also can use this election to give their region a voice in Springfield. Key victories could change the leadership within the General Assembly and provide Southern Illinois representatives a chance to stray from towing the party line.

Imagine that — the democratic process serving its intended purpose of working for constituents instead of party leaders.

Students and citizens alike should study the campaign platforms of the candidates and consider the issues that affect them. If you are unsure about where a candidate stands on issues, you can refer to recent issues of the EGYPTIAN. the tragedy, she said, "the only reason for these deaths is the one aspect in the victim's life which they have no control over."

It made me think about how when an aclobolic, who is powerless over alcohol takes out a family of six, we don't string him or her up. It's my opinion that Matthew Shepard probably tried to be "normal," at one time. Another modern day marryr. Do not clench the sphincter and thump the Bible. Fear and hate are not new family values!

The Egyptian is wrong about Rainbow

Prigary states

Dear Editor,

The Currents section of the Oct. 22 Daily Egyptian regarding the Rainbow Gathering ("Welcome Home") was seriously misguided. The article depicted the Rainbow Gathering as a positive, healthy eventifiestyle.

This is WRONG, people.

The Rainbow Gathering is in no way a positive event for anyone. Allow me to explain exactly what is wrong with Rainbow.

First of all, the way these scumbags treat their children is homfic. For example, to my knowledge the Rainbow children are not vaccinated for my diseases. This lack of vaccination could realistically bring back once-defeated diseases like smallpox and polio. I certainly haven't beard of any holistic medicine program that can cure the bubonic plague.

Second, these crusters contribute nothing to society. They leech off of working people, yet claim to hate people who have jobs. I hate to tell "Bert" his, but "Jamba the dumpster god" does not fill those dumpsters. The world of the working people is referred to as "Babylon" — implying a bad place, yet these dirtballs frequently venture into it to panhandle money. I work on the Strip and panhandling increases by about 350% when the Rainbow is in town. If they really don't believe in a money-driven system, what do they need to panhandle change for?

Another strike against the Rainbow is these people's disregard for other people's sense of smell. Many Rainbows claim that their scent is natural and beautiful." Well, in my world "Jimba the good of showering and doodoran" rules. When a Rainbow person enters my place of work, the customers literally gag at the smell some of these crusters put out.

Lastly, these people are on DOPE. A lot of white, suburban, rich kids join Rainbow because they get tired of their wealthy parents telling them to go to drug counseling. These criminals manage to elude law enforce.

Lastly, these people are on DOPE. A lot of white, suburban, rich kids join Rainbow because they get tired of their wealthy parents telling them to go to drug counseling. These criminals manage to clude law enforcement because they don't pay taxes and have no place of residence. If there was only a way to find out how much they owe and make them pay, I would be happy. Frankly, I wouldn't be a bit surprised if some of these so-called ex-hippies are dealing controlled substances at grade schools to support their habits.

Keep in mind that these people are, on the whole, dangerous criminals with a serious proclivity for panhandling. Their lifestyle does not amuse me in any way, shape or form.

DO NOT, under any circumstances, give Rainbows time, money or attention, as this only encourages their behavior. If they really want to live a holistic, amarchic lifestyle, perhaps they should move to Antarctica where penguins walk in balance and heal the Earth.

group were affiliated closely with the Edwards family: Joan O'Brien, a former col-league of Bob's, and A. J. Morey, director of Both O'Brien and Morey helped organize a variety of services for the family, including 24-hour bed watches with Bob during the last month of his life.

For Morey, the decision to help out the family in its time of need was a simple humanitarian effort.

"They were a close-knit family." Morey said. They were good people. They had great kids. You hate to see a tragedy like this breaking into their lives, and you naturally want to reach out and do what you can to try and make it easier for them.

"Between the two of them, they were very involved with the community. You just want to offer help — it's one of those human Bob's devotion to his role in the depart-ment made it easy for O'Brien to sacrifice e of her time.

"He was a deeply spiritual man," O'Brie said. "He was a great intellect, and he and I worked in the foreign languages department together. All of his colleagues loved him and revered him."

The Edwards' ordeal began in spring 1997, when Bob had several severe headache, and a seizure. After receiving the bad news in June 1997, the family had little hope of seeing Bob live more than a year.

But the family was determined to make sure Bob stayed around much longer. With University colleagues and even strangers, Bob and Molly made several trips to The Methodist Hospital in Houston for experimental treatment and surgery, both of which Molly thinks helped extend his life.

m until shortly before a major surgery in April. He slowly, slipped away, although he never lost any intellectual capacity and never seemed to give up even in his final days—a feat Molly believes encouraged their children as he battled the tragedy at their home.

as no cauted in engegy it incer nome.

"After a while they got used to him being in a hospital bed in our bedroom with people gathered around him almost all of the time," Molly said. "They would come home from school, crawl-into his bed, and hug and kis." him. It (his death) was completely and totally tural."
Bob's loss also struck a severe blow for the Russian section. Bob served on four doc torate and four master's committees at SIUC as well as nine department committees. He led groups of SIUC students on trips to the Russian city of Vladimir twice in 1991 and Russian city of vianimir twice in 1991 and served as host for a group of students from the Vladimir Polytechnic Institute in 1992. College of Liberal Arts Acting Dean Robert Jensen said Bob's leadership in the section is irreplaceable.

"The Department suffered the loss in that he was the center of our Russian language program," Jensen said. "He taught, he directed the program, he advised students, he led trips to Russia."

Looking at the future, an Edwards Children Educational Trust fund has been set up, and anyone interested can contact the Edwards family at 549-4272. But with one last nod at the past, perhaps Molly provided the most fitting farewell in her prepared remarks at Bob's funeral services Oct. 17.

"Bob did not want to die." Molly wrote. "He was not at peace with the imminence of his death. He did not accept that he would die with the manufacture of this death. He did not accept that he would die with the would die with the would die with the would die with the would die word. until the very last, perhaps the last 24 hours, of his life.

"He fought and struggled, and I with him, through numerous surgeries and experimen-tal protocols, through months away from our children, through the loss of basic abilities and functions that we all take for granted. We continually picked each other up, again and again, and strove daily to keep each other warm, no matter what."

Comptroller

l Hynes, D-Chicago, said his work in health re and business transactions for his Chicago law firm prepared him for the position of state comptroller, although he has never held a public office. (1) Hynes' opponent Christopher Lauzen, R-Aurora, criticizes Hynes for his lack of experience and said his bid is insulting to Illinois voters. Hynes said that criticizes manded the male the male that bid is insulting to Illinois voters. Hynes said that criticism avoids the real issues such as pushing for HMO reform and combating those that evade child support.

Lauzen is looking to use computers to battle state nd aims to open the comptrollers vernment fraud a office so that the public can see how their tax dollars are

Jackson County Sheriff

Looking to secure his fifth term as Jackson County sheriff, William Jon Kilguist, D-Murphysboro, faces

Sherin, William on Kinduls, D-Numphysoton, lace Chris Guetersloh, R-Murphysboro, a correctional offi-cer at the Big Muddy Correctional Center. Kilquist, an SIUC graduate in administrative justice, points out lower crime rates during the first six months of the year and the installation of the 911 emergency dispatching systems as some of his major accomplish-

But Guetersloh said the public needs a sheriff who is more available than Kilquist and offers to work days and nights to be more accessible. He said this would also save the county on overtime costs.

County Clerk

Boasting efficient management and improved services in the clerk's office, Irene Carlton, R-Carbondale, is competing with Larry Reinhardt, D-Murphysboro, who said be can correct mistakes Carlton has made in Reinhardt charges Carlton with labor problems from her 10-person staff and said the difficulties could be solved with better management practices.

Carlion denies the charges and said her staff is hard-orking and has a good working relationship.

Reinhardt said he has the dedication, drive and sire to delve into the job full time.

Carlton, the County Clerk and Recorder since 1994, said she decided to run again because of the amount of effort she has contributed to her position.

Treasurer

Incumbent Democrat Shirley Dillinger, Booker is seeking her seventh term as Treasurer, but James, Yaughn, R-Carbondale, is hoping the public is ready for a change. The 25-year-old Vaughn promises to install email that would allow taxpayers to keep in touch with the county treasurer's office. the county treasurer's office

Booker said the county is in the process of installing software package, which would improve the process of collecting county property taxes.

But Vaughn believes his energy and work in student government at Southeast Missouri State University gives him an edge. If elected, Vaughn would take office before he graduates college.

chance to interact with their peers from several different locations

DelMarcus Collins, coordina tor for the conference, said it is ng to be beneficial for students to interact, network with others and learn more about their careers.

This is an opportunity for stu-dents to meet with people in their respective field and learn about things such as employment, gradu-ate school, assistantship information and internships," Collins, a senior in history education from Chicago, said.

The conference will feature erformances such as the Midwest Step-down and Vanity Fashion Show to allow students to see that there is more to college than

These shows will show the student body that student life does not end when you leave the class-room," Collins said. "It will hopefully encourage students that the more you participate in university organizations the more they will receive out of college life."

Jennifer Ohlson, a senior radio and TV from Peoria, went to the leadership conference last year, and through meeting and networking with people, she got an intern-ship with Black Entertainment Television this summer.

Ohlson understands that the registration fee is a lot of money for students, but it is worth it.

"By attending the conference, I meet a lot of people in radio and television," Ohlson said. "I think ti's a good opportunity for students to meet others in the same predica-ment. It is a lot of money to spend, but you get a lot in the end."

"I was looking forward to working with a dance group that was more jazz and modern," Nelson Most dance groups are street and hip-hop. That's not what I was looking for."

Various Black Fire Dancers members said there are many reasons to join their organization, but it all comes down to a love for the art of dance and a passion to entertain.

"I joined because I have always loved to dance," Ali said. Barber joined Black Fire Dancers after seeing the group perform and wanted to be a part of what it had to offer. But no matter what the reason for joining. Black Fire Dancers is on the move to fulfill its duty as an entertainment organization The dancers enjoy performing so much that last year they sponsored their own show. Barber said since they got such a good response from the show, members will be having another one this year.

Barber said Black Fire Dancers members will try to continue to give good shows for the students because they are motivated by the positive response they receive.

"We love what we're doing, and we just want to keep giving great performances," Barber said. "Our focus this year is having our own show. Our main purpose is entertaining."

CAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Although rocism, sexism and classism are issues which need to be confronted by students at SIUC, workshops discussing these problems are often ignored.

Don Mullison and Roy Joy. staff psychologists of the Counseling Center at SIUC, stared at the vacant seats Monday that were supposed to be filled by par-ticipants of "All Those Isms," a workshop concerning issues of racism, sexism, and classism.

The workshop was canceled hen no SIUC students attended.

"All Those Isms" was designed to make students aware of the different perspectives from people with various backgrounds and give them tips on inter-group commu

Mullison expressed his disappointment and frustration when students do not take advantage of workshops, which are intended to make people more sensitive to cer-

"It's disappointing," Mullison said, "because we need to reach as many students we can to make hate crimes less likely."

Workshops that focus on multi-cultural activities happen regularly on campus, including past annual weekend retreats dedicated to cultural appreciation.

Mullison said it was unfortu nate that no one was present to dis-cuss the difficulties of interacting with people of different back-

Julie Flores, a graduate assis-tant for Student Development, also pressed her disappointment due the lack of attendance from SIUC students at the workship

"I wanted to make students aware of the issues out there and aware of the issues out there and answer questions they might have." Flores said. "It's disap-pointing to find out that no stu-dents cared to show up." Mullison a emphasized the importance of participating in activities that will make a person more culturally diverse.

more culturally diverse.

"I encourage students to participate because it's the only way to look at the diversity of different social and cultural groups, Mullison said. "I guess I can onl hope more people will show up next time."

Poshard factor could help democrats

COATTAILS:

Democratic candidates count on Chicago and Southern Illinois voters.

SARA BEAN POLITICS EDITO:

Democratic candidates Southern Illinois could fare well today, a local political analyst says, thanks to strong support for Democratic gubernatorial candidate Glenn Poshard

There is a lot of enthusiasm in Southern Illinois for Glenn Poshard," said Mike Lawrence, associate director of the SIU Public Policy Institute, "His supporters will turn out regardless of the weather, and many of those people will vote primarily Democratic."

Forecasts of rain throughout much of the state may dampen voter participation at the polls.

Lawrence said the challenge for Republican candidates in Southern Idinois is to counteract the strong Democratic support with solid turnout from their own supporters.

Poshard is pitted against Poshard is pitted against Republican George Ryan in the race for governor of Illinois.

Statewide polls have shown Poshard trailing Ryan throughout the campaign, but members of Posiard's camp have said they are continuing to run "an old-fashioned campaign" and believe their grassroots c.flort will prove successful. Republican Peter Fitzgerald is the challenger likely to unseat Sen.

Carol Moseley-Braun from her U.S. senate seat. Moseley-Braun, whose tenure has been plagued by contro-versy, has lagged behind Fitzgerald oughout the campaign. Fitzgerald has used $11 million of his family's banking fortune to launch an advertising campaign launch an advertising campaign assaulting Moseley-Braun's cam-paign finance and travel woes. Though Lawrence is not sure what percentage of the voters will venture to the polls, he is certain that the demographics of that turnout will be very important.

"If there is stron nimout in Chicago and Southern Illinois and a lower turnout in the suburbs, there is a chance for an upset by Braun and Poshard." Lawrence said. "Otherwise, it is very likely that Ryan and Fitzgerald will win."

And on Saturday, Carpenter's persistence finally paid off. A 37-yard run in the third quarter of the 28-13 loss to Southwest Missouri State University etched his name in Saluki history. Only a junior, Carpenter became the school's all-time rushing leader (2,859), surpassing Burnell Quinn's 19-year-old mark.

The career (record) means a Carpenter said. Just to be on top of everyone else says a lot. It feels good and everything . . I just don't know what to say." He finished the day with 189 yards on 35 carries, but what makes his feat more impressive is that he has been hampered by a thigh brui for half of the season. He suffered the injury Oct. 10 against Youngstown State University.

The pain became so severe in his right leg, it even kept him out prac-tice all last week. It also kept him out of the end zone on his historic if you've seen the tapes.

"He hurts you when you tackle him," Indiana State University coach Tim McGuire said after arpenter ran for 179 yards and three touchdowns against the Sycamores. "He's like the Energizer Bunny. He just keeps running and running. Our players had a lot of running. Our players had a l respect for him after the game.

Now with two games remaining, there are still three attainable records left to be garnered.

Carpenter should break the SIUC single-season mark Saturday against Western Kentucky University, needing a mere 18 yards to break Andre Herrera's 1,588 mark set in 1976. Carpenter also is 388 yards shy of Western Illinois University tailback Aaron Stecker's 1997 Gateway-best total of 1,957 yards.
And 45 more carries will break tillinois State's Toby Davis' conference record for attempts (341) in a season.

"I'm definitely going to try," he said. "I'm awfully close. To reach 2,000 yards at any level of college of football is great."

So if he reaches 2,000, will Carpenter's 1998 campaign be the best ever in conference history?

"I'm not going to compare myself with these other guys," Carpenter said. "But mentally, to be a running back, you've got to think you are the best to be a good back anyway.

CROSS COUNTRY: Men finish fourth, women eighth at MVC Championships.

But that does not mean MVC teams can stop worrying about SIUC's runners.

The Saluki men's team gave it their all but came up just 10 points shy of winning the MVC Championship, finishing fourth at the Championships in Peoria on Saturday.

Coach Bill Cornell knew the meet would be tightly contested.

Before the meet, he said he felt his team could finish anywhere from first to sixth. This was certainly the case. Indiana State University won the MVC title with a score of 68, while three teams — Illinois State University (71), Drake University (73), and SIUC (78)
— were in contention the entire race.
Cornell was correct in his prediction of a tight race, but that did not erase the bittersweet disappointment of coming

'I'm never encouraged unless we win the championship," he said. "We didn't quite get the breaks we needed in a close race. If our fourth runner (junior Eric Rushing) had finished 15th instead of 25th, things would've been a lot different.

They all ran their hearts out, and I guess there's nothing more they can do but that."

A bright spot for SIUC was the return of seniors Joe and Jeremy Parks to All-Conference status. Jeremy last earned the honor in 1995 as a freshman, while Joe was All-Conference as a sophomore

Women's hoopster undergoes MRI

INJURY: Courtney Smith's immediate future lies in result of Monday's MRI test.

PAUL WLEKLINSKI DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIUC Women's Basketball Guard Courtney Smith underwent magnetic e imaging Monday night after suffering a sprained anterior cruciate ligament to her right knee in practice last Wednesday. Smith's status for the remainder of the season was unknown as of press time and will be released today. First year coach Julie Beck is anxious to learn if Smith will need players goes down with an injury."

Smith, a sophomore, was injured during an attempt to steal the ball from senior guard Jessie Phillips during a scrimmage. Phillips dove for the loose ball and landed on Smith's right ankle.

"My ankle went one way, and my knee went out the other way," Smith said. "My ankle hit first and that's what I thought it was when I went down. Then I felt my knee, then I thought, 'that's not my ankle.' Then I knew that my knee was a little more serious.

Everything happened in slow motion, according to Smith, and the pain was sharp and excruciating. Her knee is immobilized and she has been on crutches since Thursday.

From behind, it looked like she was fighting through a screen and [Phillips] feil on her," junior for-ward Meredith Jackson said. "Her ankle went one way and her knee went another. You could here her knee pop."

Smith's immediate concern was directed at the same ankle that she had surgery on at the conclusion of the 1997-98 season. She first injured the ankle during her senior year at Carlyle High School, where she was named USA Today's Player-of-the-Year in Illinois for 1996-97.

The aftermath of the injury and the surgery hampered her freshman season, as she was looking for-ward to this season to redeem her-the entire season? Will I be where I was before this happened? There are a lot of questions right now — and they're all bad."
