Carnegie classification stops concern

Rhonda Scarr
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Conceals that SIUC may lose its classification as a Carnegie II Research University may no longer be valid if proposed changes to the Carnegie Classification System are made next year.

A new classification, to be called Doctoral/Research Universities, would subdivide universities into two levels according to the number of doctorates awarded annually across a number of disciplines.

Currently, the system differentiates between "research" and "doctoral" universities, based on the amount of federal research money the institution brings in between "research" and "doctoral" universities, said Scott Kaiser, media coordinator for SIU-C's Office of Public Affairs.

"The changes take away perceived disadvantages SIUC has concerning the Carnegie classification, Kaiser said.

"To our knowledge, nothing that we've proposed is going to affect SIUC more than the next year," Kaiser said. "It is just merely in the discussion stage.

The changes aim to eliminate misconceptions that the system is used as a judgment of the abilities of colleges and universities.

According to the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, the current classification system is misinterpreted as a ranking system and has caused administration to set "moving up the Carnegie classification" as an institutional goal.

"These classifications have been misunderstood by universities," said Prudence Rice, director of SIUC's Office of Research and Development.

"They intended it to be a classification of universities of higher education on the basis of that college's mission."

The changes take away perceived disadvantages SIUC has concerning the Carnegie classification, Rice said.

"The fact that the previous Carnegie classification used only federal dollars and didn't include dollars that come in from the state means that the total research budget for SIUC wasn't understood," she said.

HOPE request denied on technicality

Illinois Attorney General Jim Ryan will not investigate the political makeup of the SIU Board of Trustees, in spite of an Oct. 11 request by members of Southern Illinois HOPE, because his office deals only with requests from state agencies.

An Oct. 11 letter to the attorney general's office, HOPE members asked Ryan to investigate the alleged illegal composition of the board.

Beverly Stitt, a coordinator of HOPE, said Ryan indicated his office could not take up the matter because the attorney general's office is only authorized to deal with state agencies, which HOPE's not.

Stitt said she was not discouraged by the news from Ryan.

"He indicated in no way that our concerns lack merit," Stitt said. "We simply need to go through the right channels.

Stitt said HOPE members will continue to gather information for the next several to 10 days and will decide specifically what their next move is at that time.

Illegal state indicates no more than four members of the board, who are appointed by the governor, who is not required to follow the 1999 Illinois-Cuban Humanitarian Mission.

The mission left for Havana from Chicago Oct. 23 and arrived back in Illinois Oct. 27.

Getto, along with the director of the Illinois Department of Health and other Illinois physicians, formed a medical delegation that met with Cuban health officials, doctors and nurses in Cuba hospitals. Other delegations that accompanied Ryan included representatives in the areas of agriculture, culture and education.

"This was an opportunity for Dr. Getto and others to see first hand the medical system in Cuba," said Dave Urbanek, spokesman for the Illinois Department of Public Health.

Cuban health officials get SIUC influence

Rhonda Scarr
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The dean of SIU's School of Medicine is devising plans for an upcoming medical education conference that will allow Cuban health officials, as well as others, to exchange information about medical education.

The conference, in conjunction with the Illinois Department of Public Health, is a follow-up to Dean Carl Getto's visit to Cuba last year and will occur within the next year.

Getto, along with the director of the Illinois Department of Public Health and other Illinois physicians, formed a medical delegation that met with Cuban health officials, doctors and nurses in Cuba hospitals. Other delegations that accompanied Ryan included representatives in the areas of agriculture, culture and education.

Students study excuse abuse

JENNIFER WIG

Pete Hahn missed class one day. His excuse? A court appearance.

"That one didn't work," said Hahn, a freshman in business from Adams. Those are just two of the excused absences that have occurred this fall in the Student Center over the past few weeks.

Past excuses that have worked for Hahn include an ear infection that prevented him from attending class because of his ailing eardrum and a lack of ink for his printer. Hahn said he uses excuses often when he is too busy to complete his homework on time.

"The teachers don't realize that you have other classes and obligations," Hahn said. "I know they do realize [you are giving them an excuse], but they don't want to be too hard on you. Some teachers are just nice."

Excuses are a common part of student life. Students often use them part of the curriculum. Psychology 489 students must test different used excuses; a death in the family, said the professor. The 27 students in the class polled 175 older students and 160 professors in the College of Liberal Arts.

The study was part of a larger project to explore student transition difficulties. USG President Sandy Heng said the amendment to the student activity fee would allow landlords to advertise that they are landlords and agents in the lease together with different perspectives.

Wilson had a productive meeting but will meet again before renting, Doherty said. Ed Ford, GPSC secretary, interacted with the test was not acceptable.

The task force was formed at the March 30, 2000 meeting to address residential life and tenant relations to the City Council.

City Manager Jeff Doherty said the council had a productive meeting Nov. 15 to finalize its recommendations.

I thought the task force made some really good progress, probably more at that meeting than at previous meetings," Doherty said.

The task force was formed on Sept. 20 and will council meet six times a month, starting with the first meeting on Monday, Doherty said.

"It will be very tough to pass," Henry said.

"They should be some kind of standard among U.S."

Tayloe also wrote a resolution, which will be presented to the student body and the faculty at the meeting. He also suggested that student activity fees, which should be represented.

"Nobody can come out and say what the [USG] should be at and why," Tayloe said. "It's a mystery."

USG President Sean Henry said the amendment may be difficult to pass because there needs to be some type of academic regulation.

Losing sight of good political tactics

S.E.E. wants the attention of the powers-that-be. Even more, they want someone in power to listen to their concerns and provide answers. But you don’t get someone’s cooperation by threatening them or showing how unskilled you are in holding a conversation.

As a result of their barrage, Jackson walked away and S.E.E. members were left with their unrelieved anger.

When trying to get something accomplished in the world of politics, it takes too much time and energy to hold a grudge. Dawn Roberts, S.E.E. coordinator, and Leah Bierstedt, a member, wrote in a letter to the Daily Egyptian.

"With Roberts being in self-admiration demanding recognition of her title as a matter of prestige and justice, her power is waning. True, justice for others is important, but only if S.E.E. members accomplish something more than raising their own blood pressure."

Expect well come if they create positive change, not yelling, corralling people or throwing a tape recorder in their face. Instead, it’s time for S.E.E. to rethink their tactics.

Losing sight of their bold goal for the sake of personal vendettas won’t get anything accomplished.

The only thing anyone ever got from throwing a temper tantrum was diaper change.

Instead, S.E.E. has levered its tactics to some other means. The larger issue here is not the threat of arrest or physical disruption.

Dr. Douglass May, acting Chancellor for Academic Affairs, wrote in an opinion column.

Jackson answered their questions before they got to his face and continued to respond in the same way as they kept asking him questions. S.E.E. wanted to know why they were threatened with arrest if they protested in the Student Center.

By getting Jackson face to face a tape recorder and virtually intimidating him with questions they wouldn’t allow him to answer, S.E.E. lost any respect Jackson may have had for them. Scare tactics and verbal bully may win you the respect of a third-grade bully but certainly not the attention of anyone mature.

As family instructors and staff who work in Food Services, we were encouraged by your taking up the issue of student rights and practice around the building. We strongly urge the "do-gooders" to respect clear rules and regulations.

Two years ago, we received numerous signatures for a petition against a liquor vendor in the Student Center. Rather, it is S.E.E.’s response to those events.

"...the governor, can be of the same political affiliation as the governor. The HOPE maintains that when board Chairman A.D. VanMeter, a Republican, was appointed by Republican Gov. George Ryan in January, there were already four Republicans on the board.

The board members HOPE say are Republican, VanMeter, are Molly De'Pasquale, Harris Reese, Catherine M. Stietl and George T.

The main point of contention is that Wiltens originally was appointed as a Democrat, though HOPE points out recent actions by Wiltens shows his affiliation with the Republican Party.

Records indicate Wiltens voted in the 1998 Republican primary in Indiana and voted in the Democratic primaries from 1999 to 1999, with no record of voting from 1993 to 1997.

Stitt said HOPE concerned the board has been acting illegally since VanMeter's January reappointment, and the board's actions since then also were illegal.

Southern Illinois HOPE is a non-profit organization that was founded soon after former Chancellor Jo Ann Argersinger was fired by the SIU Board of Trustees June 5. The organization is dedicated to the reinvention of Argersinger as chancellor, the removal of SIU President Ted Sanders and improved leadership by the board.

The next step, Stitt said, will be expressing HOPE's concerns to various people of influence in both parties throughout the state. Because the attorney general cannot help, Stitt said several individuals are investigating their legal options in relation to the board members.

"Our question is, does [board makeup] matter, and if it does, why don't mix things and do something?" Stitt said. "If someone would explain this to us, that is what we want."
Forum takes a look at student violence

BRENT COLLINS FRED BECKMAN

Anna high school students and eight parents gathered last week to address a serious issue that affects Southern Illinois, school safety and school violence.

The Illinois State Bar Association Law Student Division presented a forum at the Law Building Auditorium's Wednesday called "A Student's and Faculty Focus on School Violence and Safety." About 150 people, including high school and college students, school officials, and community members, attended the forum.

Panelists included Williamson County States Attorney Charles Garnati and experts in education, psychology and criminal justice. Each panelist was given seven minutes to present their point of view as to the causes of school violence and lack of safety.

There is no one solution to school violence and safety," Garnati said. Garnati believes violence in children is caused by their environment. He also said the elimination of domestic violence will contribute to get more students involved in the volunteer program. "The intent of the press conference is to bring attention to the issues and allow the Finance Committee to turn around and be more law enforcement interaction at school," said James Shryock, auditor for the Jackson County Region.

"The culture of the school will determine what the community will tolerate," Shryock said. "We want to react, not over react." One area of concern that was brought up was the need to protect students as they go to and from school, which may have a negative effect in the future.

"We can't trample on students' rights and expect that they're going to turn around and become productive and responsible citizens," McDermott said. "Schools and communities must work and hard to diagnose their problems and take a non-violent community response."

"We need to make a better effort to educate our boys emotionally," Kelling said. "We need to shut down their feelings at a very young age, we inhibit empathy, sympathy and other key ingredients of pro-social behavior."

Jackson County, Juvenile Probation Department supervisor for the Jackson County Region, said a lack of parental roles is common in violent offenders.

"Parents need to pay attention," Garner said. "They need to take responsibility for their own children." John Doyle Jr. said schools and the community ultimately will make the decisions as to what needs to be done concerning school violence and safety.

"We can't trample on students', rights and expect that they're going to turn around and become productive and responsible citizens," McDermott said. "Schools and communities must work and hard to diagnose their problems and take a non-violent community response."

Rape 101.

If you think rape can't happen to you, you're in for a real education.

Because statistics show that a college-aged woman is vulnerable to rape. Very often by someone she knows. A fellow student. Even a date.

And that's a crime. Because any time a woman is forced to have sex against her will it's a felony.

Women's cross country team places third at championships

CHRISTINE BUNN

There are certain things SIU cross country runner Becky Cox would rather ignore.

The press corps of the Missouri Valley Conference Championship is one of those things. Cox paid no attention to the poll that picked her Salukis to finish second.

"The poll was a little generous as the Salukis missed the prediction by one finishing third," Bundren said. "I think how we finished." the junior from Jerseyville said. "The press poll doesn't mean a thing. Last year, we were picked first and didn't." Molteni said. "We thought they would have brought the crown back to Carbondale."

"We ran a great race, but I am not surprised because she is an awesome runner," Leedy said about the Salukis' top runner. "Becky Cox really stepped up for us. We needed her to be our strong fifth runner."

Other Saluki contributors include freshman Erin Simoni (20:32) as 33rd, freshman Katie Henning (21:11) as 66th runner to finish.

"Becky Cox really stepped up for us. We needed her to be our strong fifth runner," Bundren said.

"We were able to move from sixth place last year to third place this year. However, I am not pleased we lost," DeNoon said. "I thought we [should have] competed better than that. The competitions run a lot better than we thought they would." Freshman Katie McChesney (18:39) paced the Salukis with a 12th-place finish. Seniors Erin Lebedy (18:45) and Simone (19:24) in 33rd, freshman Chris Owen (20:51) rounded out the top five for SIU at 35th place.

"There are certain things SIU would rather ignore," McClelland said: "It's not about preseason polls. We do not mean a thing. Attention to the poll that picked her in two weeks."

"We all tried hard, and didn't give up," Cox said. "We couldn't have asked for anything more."

Men's cross country takes fifth

The Salukis' fifth-place finish in the NCAA Midwest Regional is a marquee achievement.

Illinois State University followed with 78 points for second, and Indiana State University trailed the Redbirds by a mere two points for third. The Salukis were as ready as they could be. Their home course played three runners in the top 10 and claiming the MVC crown with 51 points.

"I was pleased we were able to move from eighth place last year to third place this year. However, I am not pleased we lost," DeNoon said. "I thought we [should have] competed better than that. The competitions run a lot better than we thought they would." Freshman Katie McChesney (18:39) paced the Salukis with a 12th-place finish. Dr. Husain will elaborate on her national efforts to adopt women in the political system in Bangladesh. Women's participation in national politics is also a condition of Bangladesh's sustainable development. "Women's participation in politics is essential" is not "women's participation in politics is the only solution". Dr. Husain will elaborate on women's participation in politics and its significance, benefits, and strategies to implement the positive results. Women's participation in politics is not only for a women's cause, but also for common people's benefit. Women's participation in politics is the key for sustainable development and the well-being of women in Bangladesh.

Both men and women enjoy successful meet in Cedar Falls

The SIU men's and women's swim teams intensified what was supposed to be a relaxing mid-season competition at the inaugural Missouri Valley Conference Relay Meet in Cedar Falls, Iowa, Saturday.

The Saluki men beat the other MVC (Missouri Valley Conference) teams with a score of 40. The women also enjoyed much success winning by a 20-point margin over second-place Illinois State 102.

The victories put the men's team record to 2-1 and improves the women's to 1-3 overall.

Southwest Missouri claimed third while UNI placed fourth ahead of Evansville and last-place Bradley, respectively.

What happened is what I somewhat expected it to happen," said SIU men's swim coach Rick Walker. "Even though you go in there and you say "Okay, we're going to be low-key, there's not a whole lot of pressure," competitiveness is going to come no matter what. And I saw a lot of that going on.

"It's just something within, you know. It's kind of like a pick-up basketball game. Competitors are going to be there fighting like they're making $1 million a year."

The coaching staff was not responsible for the pressure on the players, though. The players themselves claimed the ability to scout the talents of the fellow MVC teams was not lost on SIU women's swim coach Mark Kluemper.

"We go into every year where our big goal is to win the MVC title," Kluemper said. "And this is the first time that we've had a meet like this where we could see all the teams early in the season together.

"To me, it was a real eye-opener. It showed me that a lot of the schools are getting better."

The meet itself, though, was refeshing by day and coachable, providing an opportunity for the Salukis to bond during the eight-plus hour bus ride. Women's head coach Mark Kluemper was especially pleased with the way the teams came together.

"It was a pretty good meet," Kluemper said. "I kind of didn't know what to expect going into it since it was the first time we've done something like that. But I think everybody enjoyed it. Everybody likes to swim relays. It's one of the more enjoyable parts of swimming."

"It was a pretty good experience for them. We had never been to Northern Iowa, and it was a long trip. But I think sometimes trips like that have a way of pulling the team together."

Salukis looking for positive ending

Football team shooting for its first winning season since 1991

JAY SCHWARTZ  DEAN EDDY

Given the amount of blame SIU head football coach Jane Quinnless has shouldered for the Salukis' struggles this season, it is only fair the coach accepts credit when credit is due.

Despite the majority of the accolades for the Salukis' final road game of the year, it is also deserving of a little praise.

"I'd like to get a little credit for that," Quinnless said. "I don't know if, because we opened up the season with Cornell Craig (being) a big receiver, it's inclined to believe he is also deserving of a little praise."

"I'd like to get that little credit for that," Quinnless said. "I don't know if, because we opened up the season with Cornell Craig (being) a big receiver, it's inclined to believe he is also deserving of a little praise."

After overcoming a five-game losing streak, Quinnless said, "I'd like to believe they are excited about it." Quinnless said, "We've made more of a situation that it hasn't happened here for quite some time, so maybe they can establish themselves or set themselves apart."

If SIU is to have a winning season, it is becoming evident the offense will need to continue its impressive pace.

The Salukis have allowed no fewer than 43 points in the last four games, but Quinnless said he has not lowered expectations for the defensive unit.

"I don't think you ever have in mind that you're going to be in ballgames," Quinnless said. "I think they are one of the better 2-6 teams in the country."

"I think they have beaten Youngstown State, and they played Illinois State very well - so they've been in ballgames."
