Walker proposes SIU coal center

By Gary Delsohn
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Gov. Dan Walker announced Tuesday he is proposing a coal experiment and research center at SIU.

In his opening address to the "Illinois Coal II conference," Walker said, "We need the SIU mining research center to fill the alarming gap between current mining techniques and the prospect of increased coal production." "Mines to Market: The Challenge" is the theme for the two-day conference held at the Student Center. It is the second coal conference Walker has called. The first was in Chicago last March.

Speaking of the proposed research center at SIU, Walker said, "It is not going to be a science laboratory for tomorrow. It's going to be a workshop for today. There is no more logical place for the center than SIU."

Walker said he could not give an exact date for establishing SIU as a national center for coal research because he is working with the federal government on the proposal.

"We're talking with them right now, and we're moving right along. I thought I'd make the appropriate announcement before it actually comes about."

On the world energy crisis, Walker said there is an international problem, and Illinois coal is one possible solution. "It's obvious we need more coal."

The governor said Illinois has the largest reserves of bituminous coal in the world and a plentiful water supply that is essential in coal gasification operations.

Illinois coal contains extremely high sulphur levels, which have led industry to purchase "cleaner" coal from western states, Walker said.

Illinois coal is cheaper because it does not need to be transported. The problem is cleaning it to eliminate environmental damage, or changing coal to a liquid or gas fuel.

"As far as I'm concerned, coal is not a dirty word. A vigorous coal development program does not mean we have to forfeit the progress we have made to protect our environment," said Walker, who dedicated a state-sponsored coal smoke scrubber at the SIU Physical Plant.

The scrubber removes sulphur dioxide from coal fumes. It was built through cooperative efforts of the state Institute for Environmental Quality, SIU and a New York chemical firm.

The scrubber project's goal is to "demonstrate the feasibility of burning high sulphur Illinois coal without polluting the air," Walker said.

Walker said the important thing to achieve is the realization of what he called "project independence." "We can, and must, as a nation, minimize our dependence on foreign sources for energy."

After his talk, Walker introduced the conference chairman, Edwin R. Phelps. Phelps is President of the Peabody Coal Co. and chairman of the National Coal Association.

Phelps said the coal industry wants a federal reclamation bill, but "up to now, the proposals have been prohibitory, not regulative."

University readies reply to Allen demands

By Wes Smith
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

"Demands" for an out of court settlement have been delivered to the University by attorneys for Douglas M. Allen, former SIU assistant professor in philosophy, and SIU lawyers say they are preparing "a counter offer."

Carl Runge, Allen's attorney from East St. Louis, said Tuesday, "The demands have been delivered to the Chicago attorney representing the University and I am awaiting a response."

John Huffman, University legal counsel, said he would be meeting with an attorney from the Chicago firm, Jenner and Block, who was handling the Allen suit.

Huffman said he and the attorney have discussed Allen's offer and would meet Tuesday night or Wednesday to prepare the "communication of a counter offer." No details were released.

Allen, now an assistant professor of philosophy at the University of Maine at Orono, filed suit against SIU in 1972 after the Board of Trustees voted 3-2 to deny him tenure. Allen claims the denial was based on his opposition to alleged SIU support of U.S. involvement in Vietnam.

Runge said he was "tickled pink" with the prospect of a counter offer but he declined to say whether he thought a settlement was near.

Runge also refused to comment on the provisions of the demands but Allen hinted that more than money might be involved.

"In our original suit, I think we ended up suing for reinstatement with pay, granting of my tenure and $100,000. We asked for $50,000 for actual damages and $50,000 for punitive damages,"

Allen related in a telephone interview Tuesday.

"What I want is not simply financial compensation. I would want the Board of Trustees to rescind their denial of my tenure. They have been proven wrong. What they did, they did illegally, unethically and unprofessionally and I want the University to right this wrong," Allen said.

"What happens to freedom and rights of the individual when the University compromises its freedom and principles and becomes dependent on corporations and government agencies; and then throws both academic freedom and constitutional rights out the window when people stand up and criticize?" Allen asked.

"If the image of the university is nothing more than that of a factory, then the whole nature of education is destroyed," Allen commented.

Allen said a Sept. 14 published statement by Interim President Hiram Lesar saying the University was "close

Mace to fill vice president post

By Bob Springer
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

George R. Mace has been named acting vice president for administration and campus treasurer by SIU Interim President Hiram H. Lesar; it was announced Tuesday.

Mace will fill the $35,000-a-year post created by the resignation of Dale Knight, who left the post to enter business Monday.

Mace assumes his duties immediately, Lesar said.

The appointment of Mace is subject to ratification by the Board of Trustees, John Huffman, University legal counsel, said.

Because the trustees are searching for a permanent SIU president, and the future president has the right to choose his own vice presidents, Lesar said

Mace's status can only be that of "acting" vice president.

"That is about all we can do while a president search is going on," Lesar said.

Mace has been an outspoken critic of the firing last December of 104 faculty and staff. He chaired a budget review committee of the Faculty Senate during the last year which criticized the University's grounds of "financial exigency" in the firings.

The committee contended that the accounting methods used by the University in determining financial exigency (counting the number of teachers and the number of academic hours generated in developing a student-teacher ratio) were inadequate.

This accounting method, the committee concluded, made no proper provision for research work done by many departments.

Mace came to Carbondale from the Edwardsville campus in 1971. He served as chief administrator of student affairs until June, 1972, when he was named dean of students and vice president for student affairs.

On his own request, he was reassigned to a full time teaching position in political science Sept. 15, 1973.

Mace's appointment as vice president is expected to go before the board for confirmation at their next regularly scheduled meeting Oct. 10 in Edwardsville.

In another personnel change announced Tuesday, Jack E. Simmons has been named acting controller. Simmons has served in various capacities in business operations since coming to SIU in 1953 as general stores supervisor.

Five days left to register to vote

Deadline: Oct. 7.
Where: Dorm eating areas—Oct. 2, 3; County Clerk's Office, Courthouse, Murphysboro, 684-2151; Carbondale City Clerk's Office, 222 E. Main St., Carbondale, 549-5302. Mobile registration units, various locations around town.
Who: Anyone 18 years old or older.
What: New registrations, address changes, transfers in registration.
How long: Entire process takes five minutes.

Students fail to muster voting clout

By Gary Delsohn
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The student vote has great potential for action, but has not been as effective as once expected.

Research revealed there is no viable youth bloc on a national level because youth is apparently as divided on issues as any other voting blocs.

The youth vote, however, can be very effective on the local level, especially in areas where students comprise much of the population, according to an article in the Wall Street Journal.

Duke Koch, coordinator of the SIU Student Vote Project said students have failed to realize how much input they can have in local government.

Koch cited the Carbondale city elections in 1971 and 1973 as prime examples of students not exercising their potential influence at the polls. "The student vote had virtually no effect on city elections in '71 or '73,"

Koch said. "The problem exists because there isn't a large scale publicity effort for local elections," he added.

A student government sponsored registration drive this fall has been effective, according to Koch. "By the time the books close Oct. 7 (registration deadline) there should be eight or nine thousand registered new voters," Koch said.

The voter registration is still going on, Koch said. Registrars will go to eating areas of the dorms Oct. 2-3. Mobile units will appear in "high student density areas" to register voters "on the spot."

Koch said the current drive has not been as effective as the one in 1972 when the 18-year-old was first given the right to vote.

George McGovern was the democratic presidential candidate and he stirred up a lot of interest among the young voters, Koch said. Proof of the effectiveness of McGovern's recruitment of young voters at SIU, is the fact that Jackson County was the only county in Illinois, and one of the few in the nation, to be won by McGovern.

McGovern's opponent, Richard Nixon, almost completely ignored the youth vote in his campaign and still received the majority of the 18-24-year-old vote, according to Gallup Polls.

Attempting to explain the decrease in the number of registrants this year, as opposed to 1972, Koch said, "The political interest level has dropped considerably across the nation since then."

Koch also said the current drive is strictly non-partisan where as McGovern's objective in 1972 was to get new Democratic voters registered. He also said the "low profile campaign" that seems to be pervasive this year in Jackson County has kept publicity down.

"Except for Paul Simon, there hasn't been much information given out. Everyone seems to be waiting longer this year."

Koch said he would like to see the voter registration effort develop into "an ongoing thing."

Koch said he has proposed a plan whereby students will be given voter registration questionnaires when they register for classes. "This will give us a handle so we can get registrars to the people," he added.

He said he hopes to have the plan implemented by spring registration. Student government workers will also concern themselves with "handing out non-partisan campaign literature to make students aware."

Summing up, Koch said, "Students have the potential to have a big say in what goes on in Carbondale and in all of Jackson County. Which ever way their politics go, I just hope they get out and do something about it."

Allen to get counter offer

to a settlement" with Allen was news to him.

"I read that with total disbelief," Allen said.

"I called my attorney to see what was going on and he said he knew nothing of it either. I can't understand why Lesar would say negotiations were near completion even before contact had been made," Allen stated. "It might be some sort of public relations attempt to make it appear that the University was pursuing negotiations."

Allen said after reading Lesar's statements he contacted his lawyer and told him to get in touch with the University's counsel.

"The initiative was ours, not theirs and if we hadn't taken the initiative, we might still be waiting," Allen said.

Lesar said Tuesday that at the time of the statement "We had asked Allen's attorney for an offer and we were waiting for their response. If Mr. Allen didn't know about it, it was because his attorney hadn't told him yet."

John Huffman, University legal counsel, said he thought the Lesar statement may have preceded a formal offer although discussion was taking place prior to the statement.

Burditt blames cynicism for cut in contributions, public support

By Pat Corcoran
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Cynicism is cutting public support and financial contributions to political campaigns, U.S. Senate candidate George Burditt told SIU students Tuesday night.

Speaking in Lawson Hall to a political campaigns and elections class, Burditt, R-LaGrange, said, "All across the state, I find people saying they are willing to vote for anyone who is not incumbent."

He noted this cynicism is most felt when it comes to campaign contributions because the money is difficult to raise.

"So far," he said, "I have raised about $300,000 and spent about $300,000. This compares to more than $1 million spent in previous state-wide campaigns."

Burditt said he has no plans to run a deficit campaign and is planning to "shake the financial trees one more time."

He noted his opponent's, Adlai Stevenson's, campaign, the budget had been cut from $1 million to $555,000 to meet the restrictions placed on it by lack of funds.

"This could be the start of a trend to lower finance campaigns which I would welcome," Burditt said, "but it hurts to be on the spear point of the thrust in that direction."

On amnesty, Burditt said he was in favor of the conditional amnesty extended by the President and had been advocating such amnesty for several months.

The stand of my opponent against any form of amnesty is not in keeping with his earlier stands against the Vietnam War, he said.

On inflation, Burditt said he favored a return to balancing the budget, and cited as example that every state government and every business was required to balance their budget.

The role of the federal government in the energy crisis is to work with the fuel companies to help solve it, not compete with them, he said. He added he disagreed with his opponent's idea of the government establishing a federal gas and oil company to serve as a yard stick of efficiency for the rest of the industry.

"It is naive to think that the government could serve as a yardstick of efficiency," Burditt said.

The development of coal gasification should be a great concern, said Burditt. If elected, he said he would sponsor legislation for federal funding of research in this area.

"Something must be done to stop the flow of leaders away from politics and into other fields, he said, and he sees his primary goal of restoring a balance of power between legislative and executive branches.

Burditt, will oppose the Democratic incumbent Adlai Stevenson as well as minor party candidates in the November general election.

Student Center policy comes under fire

By Jim Murphy
Student Writer

An open forum of the Student Center Board gave several SIU students and staff members a chance to air more than opinion Tuesday night.

'Sly' concert ticket lines set Thursday

Ticket lines for the Oct. 26 Sly and the Family Stone concert will form at 8 a.m. Thursday in the Student Center, according to Charles W. Searcy, assistant program director of the SIU Arena.

Places in individual and block ticket lines will be allotted on a first-come basis. Tickets will go on sale Tuesday at 7:30 a.m.

To hold a space in line, persons are being asked to show I.D. to line attendants in the Student Center once a day on Thursday, Friday and Monday, Searcy said. Potential ticket buyers also must be present at 7 a.m. to answer a roll call on the day tickets go on sale, he said.

Individuals may purchase up to 19 tickets, while groups of 20 or more must buy blocks of seats. Block ticket applications must be filed in the Student Activities Office by noon Monday, Searcy said.

Sly and the Family Stone ticket line was organized by Mike Barr, Don Heitch, Don Drauden and Mike Jacobs, all SIU students, according to Searcy.

Mixing criticism with recommendations, center users zeroed in on Student Center policy and raised the issue of alcohol in the Big Muddy Room.

Reid Atkins, a part-time staff member in Animal Industries, advised the Board to study the possibilities of opening a rathskeller-type bar in the Big Muddy Room. "The students don't want another bar like Merlin's or the Peppermint Lounge," Atkins said.

Disagreeing with Atkins, Tim Griffith, a junior in Wildlife Ecology and a student worker in the Student Center, said, "The Big Muddy Room has a lot of possibilities and one of them isn't becoming another bar." Others at the meeting advised the Board to study the possibility of a coffee house.

Atkins asked Clarence "Doc"

Dougherty, director of the Student Center, if it would be practical to keep sections of the Student Center open 24 hours. "When the Big Muddy was open all night," Dougherty explained, "right after night, the only guy that showed was found asleep."

Questioning the hours of the center, one student said the midnight closing on weekends wasn't fair to people using the bowling alley and billiards areas. "There's no excuse to say that it's not being used," said Atkins. "If you don't like to go downtown to the bars, what else is there to do?" he added.

Advised that the University of Illinois' student union has a 24-hour operation schedule, Student Center Board Chairman Nancy Buffum, said the idea of keeping the center open round the clock is an idea that will be looked into.

Advised that about 250 people were turned away from a video presentation last weekend, Dougherty said that there are no plans to relocate the video group. He did add, however, that there would be additional television sets for the TV lounge.

The center's director apologized for some of the actions of the building's night managers. In response to students complaints, he said the managers are sincere and dedicated people.

Student Senate to consider allocations, song, mascot

The Student Senate will consider allocating funds for two guest speakers sponsored by the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws (NORML) at its 7:30 p.m. Wednesday meeting in the Student Center Ballrooms.

NORML plans to bring John Finlator, retired deputy director of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs, and R. Keith Stroup, executive director of NORML, to speak Oct. 17.

In other action the senate will consider approving partial funding for Barry McGuire and an eight piece band to perform in a free concert on Oct. 30.

The senate will also consider a bill calling for the song "Somewhere Over the Rainbow" be designated the official Student Government theme song.

A portion of the bill requests that Diane Solberg (Daily Egyptian Staff Writer) be named Student Government's official mascot.

The bill, submitted by David Stevens, states its reasons for the recommendations as "the student government has no theme song, and the Daily Egyptian has associated the Student Senate with the movie, 'The Wizard of Oz.'"

SIU rules govern dorm room searches

By Scott Burnside
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

In these days of drug raids on the wrong house, SIU police are careful of whose room they search and for what reason.

There are four ways a policeman may search a student's dormitory room.

According to Community Relations Officer Mike Norrington, searches may be conducted if an officer has a search warrant, contraband is visible within plain sight, permission is given by the residents or the search is incidental to arrests.

SIU police's search policy is not quite as liberal as the procedures carried out by the Housing Department. Housing's representatives in the dormitories can make two kinds of inspections.

Housing Director Sam Rinella said, "We have a room inspection to insure that health and safety standards are being met. It is announced in advance.

The other method is an administrative search, which can be carried out to insure university rules are followed, and to see if there is physical damage to the property.

The housing contract signed by a student has a provision which says officials of the university can make a reasonable inspection of the room at any time. He said the reference to a university official did not refer to SIU police.

Rinella went on to say if anything illegal is found during the administrative search, it may not be admissible in court.

SIU Police Chief Virgil Trummer says any contraband found during an Housing Department inspection could be reported to the police, and treated as a tip from an informer.

When police arrest an individual, they are allowed to search the immediate area Norrington said, but there is debate as to the nature of that immediate area. During this search, officers are allowed to look for weapons or evidence of a crime.

Even if contraband is in plain sight of an officer, an arrest might not be made, but the illegal substance or property can be seized anytime.

Chief Detective L. Lowell McGee insists a plain sight search has to be made carefully.

"Recent court cases have stated the eyeball can trespass an area also," said McGee.

McGee said if ownership of an illegal substance can be proved on the spot, an arrest can be carried out.

Consent searches, where a person gives permission for a search, are the most common at SIU, according to Detective Robert Hopkins. He said nine times out of 10, a student will let the policeman search the room even if there isn't a warrant.

"I've searched a lot of rooms on campus, and never once has any student not said to come in," Hopkins said.

Police officials were quick to note that a consent search can be stopped by the resident of the room at any time. Hopkins also explained police officers can not search a roommate's personal area when the other resident agrees to a consent search.

The safest search procedure is when the police have a search warrant signed by a judge, Norrington said.

"If there is any doubt," Norrington said, "a police officer will get his warrant before taking any action."

Norrington also explained SIU police officers operate under a contract signed with University Housing. Under this contract, policemen are supposed to patrol only the public areas of the ground floor.

"We can go up to the other floors on routine business or an emergency, Norrington said. "When we do go up to the living areas we'll get a counselor to go with us, if possible."

Gov. Walker puts scrubber to work

By Kenneth Temkin
Student Writer

Flashing an okay sign and pointing to clean white smoke billowing from a small smoke stack, Gov. Dan Walker started operation of an experimental pollution control system for SIU's steam production plant Tuesday morning.

At about 11 a.m., after receiving a short tour of the pollution control facility from its designer, Howard Hesketh, Gov. Walker stepped out on a balcony of the pollution control building and pulled a switch which set the pollution "scrubbers" into operation.

The governor spoke to reporters after turning on the system. He talked of having SIU become a center of pollution control engineering for Illinois.

He said he has proposed a $70 million bond issue which would finance the continuing research in environmental pollution control.

The governor praised Hesketh and all those who contributed to the pollution control system saying, "We're really off and running in the burning of Illinois coal."

The governor and other officials who were present at the ceremonies are in Carbondale for a two-day conference on the increased production of Illinois coal.

The pollution control system, the product of the combined efforts of Hesketh (an associate professor of air pollution control engineering) and the Chemical Construction Corporation (Chemico) is designed to prove that Illinois coal can be burned cleanly.

Robert Quig, vice-president of Chemico, was on hand for the opening ceremonies and was favorably impressed by the operations. He said it was the intention of Chemico to continue its program of pollution control experimentation in cooperation with university engineering departments.

Quig was hopeful that the pollution control system at SIU would be in full operation within a short period of time and that engineers from his firm would be able to visit SIU to talk to students about careers in environmental engineering.

Chemico donated much of the complicated and costly equipment to the project that Hesketh has been working on with an $84,000 grant from the Illinois Institute for Environmental Quality.

The system, which has been in the construction stage since December 1973, uses a series of venturis and cyclic precipitators in conjunction with a lime water solution to "scrub" coal smoke of sulfur dioxide and particulate matter.

The design of Hesketh's "scrubber" is similar to one in operation at the Mitsui Aluminum Plant of Omuta, Japan.

The system at Omuta is 150 times larger than Hesketh's operation and it has been in successful operation for three years.

Hesketh's system, which is purely experimental, is only capable of handling about 5 per cent of the SIU Steam Production Plant's emissions.

The next several weeks will be occupied determining quantitative and qualitative levels under which the facility will operate. Soon after those levels have been determined the first substantial results of the new pollution "scrubber" will be available. The facility is planned to be in operation 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Dean's committee studies SIU dropouts

By Wes Smith
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

"No shows," dropouts and "opt-outs" at SIU-C are being studied by a committee recently formed by Bruce Swinburne, dean of students.

"I have been interested in retention studies and student persistence for some time, even while I was teaching. When I took this job I decided to take a more complete look at the problem," Swinburne said Monday.

"When the committee met and formed it decided to conduct essentially four studies all relating to retention," he said.

Swinburne added the four studies would center on separate but related aspects of student persistence.

"The first study will be of shows and no shows. No shows are people who apply and are accepted but don't show when school starts," Swinburne said.

"We want to determine how we can encourage a greater proportion of those admitted to show," he said.

The second study will examine the effects of academic factors on student dropouts while a third study will look at the effects of non-academic factors on student retention.

"It has been found, in other studies that the amount of financial assistance a student gets, the dormitory he lives in, or his affiliation with a fraternity, sorority or other organizations all affect whether a student opts to stay or leave," Swinburne said.

The fourth study relates to communication within the University.

"I'm not sure what form the fourth study will take but we are concerned about whether the student is getting the correct information on classes and services in the University," Swinburne explained.

Swinburne said the committee has been "very interested" in a dissertation by John L. Baier, assistant dean of Student Life, on retention at SIU-C. Baier's study shows that nearly 50 per cent of SIU's entering new students left the University by the end of their second year.

"Generally people seem to think our dropout rate is worse than average but, according to reports I've read, the national rate is around 50 per cent and in many areas our rate is lower," Swinburne said.

"Although some figures show nearly 50 per cent of those entering haven't finished in four years, if the study is extended to five or six years the percentage of those leaving diminishes," Swinburne said.

"There seems to be a growing trend toward students opting to sit out a year or a semester for various reasons and then coming back to graduate.

"I do want to stress that, compared to other schools in the state, we are faring well with retention of students. This institution has a good track record but, it is not good enough and we are not satisfied," Swinburne said.

"We hope to have the results of the study ready by the end of this year. We will have a number of students working on it and we will be generating doctoral dissertations from the study," he said.

"It really takes a massive effort to improve persistence by even five per cent," Swinburne said. "There are things you can't control such as personal crises and family problems. We can only exert a minimal amount of influence."

Committee members are Baier; Charles Hinderman, dean of school of business administration; John H. Baker, assistant provost to the vice president; Tom Busch, assistant to the dean of Student Life; Loren Young, supervisor in the office of Admissions and Records and Swinburne.

Register to vote, it's that simple

Preliminary figures from the Jackson County Clerk's office show that more than 1600 persons registered to vote in last week's registration drive held on campus. And according to Duke Koch, coordinator of the drive, an additional 300 persons registered Sunday night at Merlin's. These are new registrations. The figures do not include those persons who transferred their registration from a former county to Jackson County.

The deadline for registering to vote in the November 5 general election is October 7 (Monday next). Persons who did not register last week will still have a chance Wednesday and Thursday evenings from 4 until 6:30 p.m. in the cafeterias of Grinnell, Trueblood and Lentz Halls. Koch also plans to have mobile registration units in community areas of high student density this weekend to aid in the registration process. He mentioned that Brookside Manor and Lewis Park apartments were targeted spots for the mobile vans.

Koch has set a goal of 9,000 new student registrations for the upcoming elections. We feel this is a conservative figure, and urge all eligible persons to register.

In a county of approximately 31,000 registered voters (based on 1972 election figures), it becomes readily apparent that the potential vote of approximately 15,000 students (again a rather conservative estimate) can be a deciding factor in local, county and even state races.

To those who complain of poor student representation on Carbondale councils and boards, we can only suggest the electoral process as being the most viable remedy to any shortcomings.

But you cannot vote unless you have first registered. It is that simple. And October 7 is the deadline for the November 5 general elections. Again, we urge all eligible voters to register before Monday.

New bikeway system is top priority

By Joanne Reuter
Student Writer

The number of bicycle accidents in Carbondale is double the national average. The accident count increases as the number of bikes in Carbondale grows. One third of the city's population uses bicycles for transportation, and the number will surely swell in the face of inflation and rising automobile expenses. The Carbondale City Council would be spending time and money well by constructing bikeways with the safety of the cyclist in mind.

The present temporary bikeway is inadequate. Merely a designation of safer streets for bicycle travel, the only separation of automobiles and bicycles is a painted line on Poplar and Sunset. Traveling along with traffic is very dangerous for a cyclist. Half of all bike accidents in Carbondale occur at intersections, with the cyclist usually being injured. Because of obvious differences in vehicle construction, the motorist can't always tell what the cyclist is going to do and vice versa. The cyclist is also extremely vulnerable to pavement conditions. If his wheel skids on an oil slick, or gets stuck in a pothole or sewage grate, the cyclist's life is in the hands of oncoming motorists.

Although a painted line may suffice on streets with little traffic, a physical separation of the road and bikeway is necessary on the major routes traveled by cyclists and motorists alike.

A proposed system developed by Pat Murray, senior in design, combines several types of bikeways in a route connecting major recreational, business and residential areas in Carbondale. Included in her plan are:

—Protected bike lanes: lanes within a street separated from automobiles by rubber cones or parking bumpers.

—Bike tracks: lanes separated from traffic by a small strip of land.

—Greenways: separate paths for bikes at some distance from a road.

A 1973 study conducted in Atlanta estimated the cost of properly paved greenways and bike tracks at $10 thousand per mile. A protected bike lane would cost $3 thousand per mile. With $8.1 million dollars coming to Carbondale for community improvement, and plans for future road construction being formed, the city council should find the much needed safe bikeway system economically and practically possible.

The Egyptian has a new editorial policy

You are reading an unsigned Daily Egyptian editorial—the second such editorial published by the Daily Egyptian in recent years. The only other unsigned editorial since 1970 was published earlier this semester, dealing with the secrecy surrounding the current presidential selection process.

Since then, the members of the Publications Policy and Review Board of the Daily Egyptian, a board appointed by SIU Interim President Hiram Lesar to supervise and determine Daily Egyptian policies, has agreed to establish a five-member editorial board. The board consists of the editorial page editor acting as chairman, the student editor-in-chief, the faculty managing editor, a member of the School of Journalism faculty, and a Daily Egyptian staff writer. It will have responsibility for content of the opinion pages.

All unsigned editorials will reflect the opinions of at least three members of the editorial board. The faculty managing editor will make the day-to-day determination as to whether editorials and other material on the opinion pages are consistent with the criteria established by the editorial board.

All signed editorials written by either Daily Egyptian staff writers or students enrolled in journalism classes will reflect the opinions of the author only.

The editorial board will provide for a more democratic method of selecting material for the opinion pages. In the past one person had the final voice in determining content, and there was no appeal from his judgment. Under the new system, the faculty managing editor may still veto any material he deems inconsistent with the editorial board policy, but the editorial page editor as chairman of the board may appeal the decision to the Publications Policy and Review Board.

Until the appeal is acted upon by the board, the material in question will not be published. While the Daily Egyptian has and will continue to serve the campus community as an information and opinion medium, it also serves as a laboratory newspaper. Student writers, like their counterparts on commercial newspapers, will learn to be accountable to others for what they write. At the same time, vesting decision power in the faculty managing editor fixes responsibility for editorial decisions.

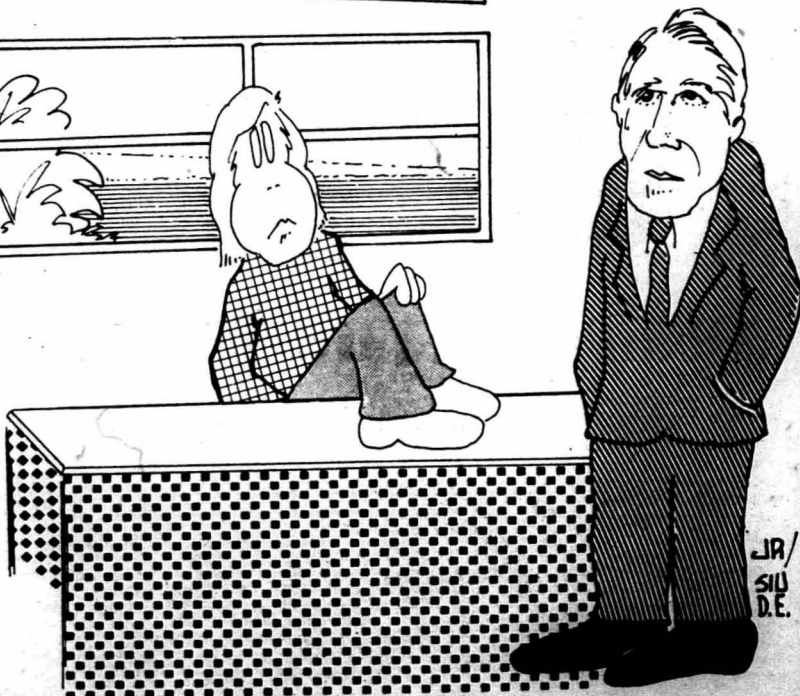

The editorial board was established in order to provide editorial leadership for the newspaper through professional guidance from School of Journalism instructors. The actions of the board will be governed by the ethical and professional "Canons of Journalism" of the American Society of Newspaper Editors and the Basic Statement of Principles of the National Conference of Editorial Writers.

Editorials should never be written in a way that will consciously mislead a reader, distort a situation, or place any person in a false light. Presenting the issues as fairly and honestly as possible is the ultimate goal of the editorial board.

The board also has adopted a simplified "Letters to the Daily Egyptian" policy. Subject only to a few rules of the road, every student, faculty member, civil service employee, administrator, and area resident has access to the Daily Egyptian letters column. We need help from you. And, if you would like to try your hand at column-writing, submit some samples. The newspaper will strive to provide an outlet for differing writing styles as well as differing ideas.

The editorial policy board seeks to enhance the value of the Daily Egyptian as a learning laboratory for student journalists and to expand the range of ideas and opinions in the university newspaper. Contrary to what you may have heard, freedom of the campus press is alive and well at Southern Illinois University.

"THE WAY TO ACHIEVE MORE STUDENT REPRESENTATION ON PANELS AND BOARDS IS TO WORK FOR MORE STUDENT REPRESENTATION AT THE POLLING PLACES"

President Sullivan should reexamine priorities

By Diane Solberg
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

If the first month's performance of Student Body President Dennis Sullivan's administration is any indication of what is to come, then University administrators do not have to worry that students will organize and demand a voice in what happens at SIU.

The intentions of the administration are impressive.

Sullivan's goals for the year include changing the image of Student Government from a do-nothing rubber stamp organization to one that is a positive influence on students' lives.

Sullivan plans to do this by revising the constitution in order to clarify the duties of each branch of government, by bringing the Grateful Dead to Southern Illinois in order to provide a variety of entertainment to students, by holding informal meetings throughout the campus to solicit students' ideas and by securing an attorney for students.

But, Sullivan seems unable to get organized. At the first Student Senate meeting Sullivan emphasized the ambiguous wording of the constitution, and called for revision. By stating what areas needed revising, he gave the impression he had studied the constitution carefully. Yet, Sullivan had hardly given a fleeting glance at the document.

This came to light when Sullivan vetoed the Saluki Stables bill. One day he announced to the press he had mistakenly vetoed a resolution, which he said he wasn't allowed to do.

The next day he announced that a senator had told him he was allowed to veto the resolution because the constitution states that all senate acts are bills, and bills may be vetoed. The next day, Sullivan had a different version of his veto powers.

Why all the confusion? Because neither Sullivan, nor his executives, had a copy of the constitution in the Student Government offices; nor did they know where to readily find one.

Disorganization also appears in the formation of the student lawyer committee.

Sullivan said he had planned to announce the names of the committee members on Sept. 19, but the names have yet to be released. According to one of Sullivan's assistants there is an abundance of volunteers to work on the committee. Why hasn't this committee been formed?

The problem is that Sullivan is putting in too much time trying to book the Grateful Dead. He won his post on the campaign promise that he would offer part of his salary to secure the Dead for concert.

He has most of his staff working on the booking of the Grateful Dead—from his executives making phone calls to promoters, to his secretaries sifting through the Daily Egyptian's files looking for clips to mail to the Dead.

Sullivan should reconsider his priorities. He was elected to office by a grand total of approximately 430 votes out of a student population of 18,000. Half of those students may be graduated or dropped out of school by now. Are there enough students interested in the Dead to fill up concert seats?

Sullivan said the reason he has taken the booking of concerts into his own hands is because Dean Justice, Arena manager, is not taking students' interests into account.

If this is the case, Sullivan should appoint a committee to investigate Arena booking policies, and that same committee should investigate the feasibility of bringing the Dead to SIU. Students volunteering to work on the student lawyer committee is an indication that a committee could be formed to investigate SIU entertainment.

Sullivan has some good ideas for the year, such as the Student Government newsletter, but if he doesn't get organized soon, there will be little hope in the possibility of student government becoming more than a rubber stamp organization.

Liquor rep urges participation

To the Daily Egyptian:

In regard to Mr. Leverenz's letter September 26, I feel that certain points should be discussed. Thank you for your concern which I appreciate, and hope you and others will correspond regarding any Liquor Advisory Board action(s).

Bicyclists, bike racks and campus confusion

To the Daily Egyptian:

It would be much easier for the student to follow bicycle regulations if sufficient bicycle racks and paths were provided. As it is, the paths are often unfinished and in many places so narrow that two bicycles cannot pass. On the sidewalk, the bicyclist endangers others and on the road he is endangered. Many bike racks are overcrowded and inconveniently located forcing students to park illegally. Recently, bicycles have been ticketed for violating parking, registration, and operation rules. I feel that the police should stop ticketing bicyclists until proper provisions are available for them.

Egyptian should endorse candidates

To the Daily Egyptian:

I do not agree with your Policy Review Board's decision prohibiting the Daily Egyptian from editorially endorsing candidates for elective office this fall. The decision displays a lack of backbone and raises the question whether apathy shall reign over the normal disagreement, controversy, and excitement of an election campaign.

John Sheley, Policy Review Board member and publisher of the Pinckneyville Democrat, argued against endorsements saying, "The University right now cannot afford to start building a list of influential enemies." What enemies? Is Mr. Sheley suggesting that successful candidates might hold it against the University because an editorial in the Daily Egyptian endorsed their opponent? What candidate plans such an "enemies list"? Maybe the Policy Review Board should tell us so we can vote this character down. Apparently, though, the board would rather begin immediate construction of a three mile wide "enemy-

First, Steve Hoffmann is an ex officio member with no voting power due to his obvious conflict of interest (owning a liquor license).

Second, I believe that revising the ordinance was for the purpose of effective-efficient means of control over liquor sales; therefore, I felt that a chain store would not lend itself to these protective measures of control. Too simple? Perhaps, but it will go to the City Council for final vote.

Third, the Board informally passed an amendment that the student representative shall be appointed by the Student Body President with one vote. If the Local Liquor Commission is incorporated into the City Council's powers, the students will only have one vote in the entire liquor situation unless a student is elected to the Council. Therefore, I believe that there should be two more student representative appointments. Thus, enlarging the total vote to seven, with two ex officio members. The monetary support alone is a valid reason for expanding and I feel that until students start organizing into a solid lobbying bloc, we will always play a silent figure in the policy making of city government.

Finally, you have a legal right to demand equitable, safe and clean business establishments of any type. Use the right! Feel free to complain by contacting me through Student Government or appear at the Board meeting, October 2, 7:30 p.m. at the City Hall court room.

Letters to the Daily Egyptian

The Daily Egyptian welcomes expression of opinions from all members of the University community. Writers are requested to be concise and, in the event the subject has a time element, to bring letters to the Daily Egyptian newsroom as early in the day as possible. The editors reserve the right to condense letters to permit a larger variety of opinions, to correct minor typographical and grammatical errors, and to edit out material that is considered libelous or in bad taste. Letters should be typed, double-spaced, and accompanied by the full address and signature of the writer.

resistant" geodesic dome to protect the University from the post-election onslaught of angered influence. After it is built, we can all huddle within it, safe from the outside world of vindictive public officials, dishonest politicians, and other strong-arm thugs.

For those of us who don't want to be trapped inside the "enemy-resistant" dome, I suggest we hastily form an Ad Hoc Committee for Political Backbone to select a fair sampling of Daily Egyptian readers, have them examine the candidates, and announce their endorsements for all to see. If somebody doesn't like our endorsements, they can form their own Ad Hoc Committee and endorse somebody else. But let's get started with it before the Daily Egyptian freezes us out past the October 7 voter registration deadline. A month or so of good political haggling would make things a lot more interesting around here.

Dead want $25,000

To the Daily Egyptian:

Last year, when Dennis Sullivan was campaigning for president, he said if elected he would bring the Grateful Dead to SIU. After taking office, I think Sullivan found out that this is probably next to impossible!

Mr. Sullivan also intimated to that he had an "in" with the Dead. Maybe this "in" has given Sullivan the facts of life of getting the dead to come to the hills of Southern Illinois. Maybe he asked where Southern Illinois is! Or how much money is in it for the Dead if they come here. The truth is that The Grateful Dead want $25,000 to come here.

Maybe the Dead did say, in St. Louis, that they would come to Southern Illinois if asked; only they rarely, if at all, answer a call to do the same.

The fact that Sullivan has to campaign to get the Dead to come here shows what his "in" is really worth.

So, sign another petition if you really think it will work. Personally, I think Dennis Sullivan has about as much chance of getting the Dead to appear here as an "ice cube in hell".

Rabbi improving, but still has his faults

To the Daily Egyptian:

I wasn't here last year, so I can't talk about the supposedly jovial Yom Kippur services that Rabbi Vinecour held last year. I was there this year, however, and he made up for that joviality in spades. However, I'm not so sure that the alternative was desirable.

In the first place, part of the service is a prayer for those who have departed this past year. The Rabbi deliberately changed the wording of the prayer, so that he led the congregation in a prayer not for "our dead", but for "our martyred dead"; which must make those Jews who died of natural causes feel like slackers.

This brings up my other complaint. There was a grievous and ridiculous war the year before, on Yom Kippur. Yet, I didn't feel Rabbi Vinecour had the right to mount a soapbox and start politically posturing. This backfired on him rather royally during his sermon about the threat to the Jewish race. (Gee, and me, in my budding liberalism, had been disbelieving all that propaganda about the Jews being a race, rather than religion). In his sermon, he claimed "we are being threatened by miscegenation, by intermarriage." I've heard those words before, but when I went back to check my sources, I still found it hard to believe. I've heard of Jews quoting Jewish literature, but the Rabbi is probably the first Jew I've heard who quoted from "Mein Kampf".

The point is that the Rabbi was so interested in the trees that he couldn't see what forest he was in. He shouldn't have been looking at or behind trees anyway. I, a Gentile, was there to pray to the one God and ask forgiveness for my separation. That may or may not have been what the Rabbi was there for.

New student handbook distribution slow

By Wes Smith
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The new student handbook may reflect the typical SIU student image.

It's covered with jeans, slightly wacky and slow moving.

Tom Kachel, an instructor in design who helped plan the new handbook, said Monday plans are underway to speed up handbook distribution to students.

"It's just not going as fast as we would like," Kachel said. "As a wild guess I'd say we've distributed only 7,000 of the 10,000 copies. When it first came out at the semester's beginning it was distributed to all new students in the dormitories but, unfortunately, not all new students live on campus."

Kachel said the handbook is distributed at the Student Center Information Desk and in the Dean of Students' Office on the third floor of Anthony Hall.

"People who live off campus are probably having a hard time finding copies of the handbook even if they are aware of its existence," Kachel said.

"If they are aware of it they probably assume it looks like all the other University publications and will do them about as much good," he said. "Several people have told me they don't believe the University printed it."

The different design and approach makes this so significant. Students had a lot of input into the layout of the handbook. We asked students in our design classes what students need to know and we designed it along those lines," Kachel said.

Tom Busch, assistant to the Dean of Students, said the handbook was probably not moving well due to a lack of publicity.

Busch and Kachel agreed the reactions to the new handbook have been favorable.

"President Hiram Lesar and the Board of Trustees probably were more pleased than anyone on campus," Kachel said.

Kachel said the handbook will be displayed sometime this week across from the Student Book Store in the Student Center.

"This is the first new handbook put out since 1969-70. We would like people to see it and get their reaction. Hopefully the next edition will be even better and contain more."

Busch said his office had already received calls from various groups requesting space in the next edition.

Alumnus put on film board

On recommendation of Dennis Sullivan, student body president, the Chicago Film Festival Board, has appointed an SIU alumnus to its panel of film critics.

In a session of the Association of Illinois Student Government, at Springfield Saturday, Sullivan submitted a resume of David L. Kite which contained recommendations by Tom Busch, assistant to the dean of students and the advisor to Student Government Activities Committee (SGAC), Sullivan said. Kite, who graduated with a home economics degree and a specialization in films, will work on the Chicago board to help select films to be shown in the Chicago area, Sullivan said.

Kite works as a post office "clerk-carrier" in Chicago, Sullivan said. Kite's appointment is non-paying, Sullivan said.

Geology chairman says job opportunities good

By Calvin Dreger
Student Writer

Geology is solid as a rock as far as the opportunity is concerned, Russell Dutcher, geology department chairman said.

"Many people are hiring and using geologists. More people have found out what a geologist can do for them," Dutcher said.

He said major oil companies will visit the SIU-C campus throughout the months of October and November, interviewing students for prospective employment.

Dutcher said more major oil companies have been scheduled for interviews than ever before. He said their major interest is in the graduate student but some are also interested in the undergraduate and in hiring summer employees.

Yielding Handbook?

Student groups get scarce response

By J. Peter Gonigam
Student Writer

Only a handful of students stopped to talk to representatives of student organizations in a recent Mae Smith coffee hour.

The East Campus Educational Programming Committee sponsored the program and 25 to 30 representatives attended.

Melissa M. Henz, graduate intern in student life in cultural and educational programming said, "There was a good response on behalf of student organizations, but the response from students was not real good. I can't possibly give a reason why."

"The University dignitaries were here two weeks ago and we had an overwhelming amount of students coming out talking and that ran the full two hours. We finally had to break it up."

"There are so many variables. It's a little chilly out. Maybe there are schedule conflicts. We've done this before and maybe they're tired of it."

In two weeks the committee will sponsor coffee hour allowing students to meet officials from schools and academic departments. In three weeks another coffee hour will feature business people from East Campus.

Property owner resists city license for landlords

by Dave Ibhata
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A Cable TV camera zoomed in on the man's face as he stood at the lectern facing the City Council.

The klieg lights made his brown hair look almost blond. He wore blue-green shirt and pants, a working man's clothes. He was there to tell the council why he doesn't like the city's proposal to register rent property.

"I'm Don Bryant, Carbondale landlord," he said into the microphone.

Bryant squinted past the lights. From their seats at a U-shaped table the councilmen returned his look.

"If the lights and microphones weren't here we could speak plainly," Bryant said. Southern Illinois twang coloring his every drawl. He ignored the TV camera and the WCIL commentator.

He opposed city-wide registration of rental property because the licensing would hold landlords, not student tenants, responsible for grounds upkeep, he said. The city will license landlords according to good conduct as it now licenses liquor stores, he pointed out.

"Property is rented to students," Bryant said. "The students I cannot govern because they cannot be governed." He waved a yellow hardware store receipt in his right hand like a semaphore. "I don't think it's right to charge the landlord with something students should maintain," he said.

Mayor Neal Eckert and City Manager Carroll Fry noted Bryant's complaints. As though on cue both occasionally paused in their writing, leaned back in their chairs and thoughtfully put the tips of ball-point pens to their lips.

Students refuse to maintain yards, Bryant continued. He noted two poorly managed properties. Code enforcement personnel make regular visits to the houses, yet nothing is done, he said.

"The yard is like this," he said, stooping to one side and putting his palm at knee level. "The landlord's not going to mow it. The student's not going to mow it. And damn it, the city's not going to mow it."

The city fails to mow its own lots, Bryant protested. "And it expects landlords to mow their lots?"

"We ask for help and we don't get it," Bryant said, leaning forward on the podium. "I pay about $10,000 in taxes. I ask for a little bit of help and it's forgotten about." He gazed hard at the men behind the table.

"I was born and raised here," Bryant said, arms folded, elbows on the podium. "There's a lot of older ladies, there's a lot of older gentlemen that are renting property. And if they get one or two problems, it's enough for the code enforcement department to go out and tell them, 'This is the way it is.'"

"If we have two students in a house that don't act right, I ask for some city help, and it's ignored," Bryant said. The city has the power to evict tenants, he said.

Fry started writing on his legal pad. Eckert stared back, attentively, pen to lips. Council members alternated, first glancing down at their notes, then looking up, then returning to their scribbles. Bryant finished. "Thank you," he said.

"Thank you," the mayor replied. Bryant turned. Scattered applause came from the audience. Cameras followed him as he walked to his seat.

Trustees may adopt building renaming plan

The Board of Trustees may adopt a plan to form a committee to rename buildings on SIU's campus at its October meeting.

T. Richard Mager, vice president of development and services, said if the plan is adopted, Interim President Hiram H. Lesar will form a campus-wide committee to suggest names.

Mager said action was deferred in September to clarify that the suggestion committee selection is the president's job and not the Board of Trustees'.

Mager said permanent names for buildings would aid in sign making, mapping and make it easier for everyone to get around.

The policy being submitted to the Board of Trustees doesn't provide for disclosure of potential or future names.

"If someone starts a rumor that a building is going to be named after someone, then it's not, it could hurt feelings. It could also impede future donations to SIU," he said.

Mager said no particular buildings are being considered to be renamed. The policy is a general procedure, he said.

"I would certainly think that in the long run Life Science I, Life Science II and General Classrooms would deserve better names," he said.

Name please

LONDON (AP)—A reporter on the Daily Telegraph says that, when he moved recently, he received a letter from the North Thames gas board, with his name and address spelled correctly, asking for his name so that the board could send him money he is owed.

Kennedy will visit SIU Friday

By Gary Delsohn
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

U.S. Sen. Edward Kennedy will appear in Carbondale Friday on behalf of Paul Simon's campaign congress.

Kennedy will arrive at Southern Illinois Airport at 5 p.m., said Terry Michael, Simon's press secretary. A car will meet Kennedy on the runway and go directly to Shryock Auditorium for a "question and answer period."

Michael said the session at Shryock is open to SIU students and the general public.

Kennedy then will go to the Student Center Ballrooms as the featured guest at a $50-a-plate dinner to raise campaign funds for Simon.

Dyhrkopp said anyone wanting a ticket should contact his Democratic county chairman or call Terry Michael at 457-4171.

Violence fills screen

By Michael Hawley
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Starting with "The Wild Bunch," director Sam Peckinpah brought new dimensions to screen violence. He liberally bathed his footage with characters who acted out "man's inherent instincts," through sensually choreographed violence, his basic theme, survival by any means, brought him a notorious international reputation. People hated him for his theories on man's animalistic nature, although greatly respected him as a film maker.

Peckinpah's newest film, "Bring Me the Head of Alfredo Garcia," shows Peckinpah either has to conjure up a new act, or breath something fresh into the old one. We've suffered through more than two dozen of Peckinpah's infamous slow motion death scenes. We've been led down once too often. The name Peckinpah should no longer be a bankable box office pull; especially after the typically crude treatment of women and emotionless irony in this film.

Peckinpah raised a big stink in Hollywood by producing this film entirely in Mexico with an all Mexican crew. Unions threatening to boycott the film were further angered by Peckinpah's threat to produce future films there. If "Bring Me the Head of Alfredo Garcia" is evidence of Peckinpah's aspirations, I doubt anyone will even bother waving good-bye.

In the opening scenes of "Alfredo Garcia," an apparently happy-to-be-pregnant young Mexican woman is forced to reveal (they threaten to break her arms) the name of the child's father, who turns out to be a super-stud named Alfredo Garcia. In turn, the girl's relative's offer mucho pesos for his head.

Becoming involved in the search for Garcia's head is Bennie (Warren Oates), an American bartender working in Mexico, and his girlfriend, Elita (Isela Vega), who has recently slept with Garcia. Elita informs Bennie that Garcia was killed only days before, so the two search for his grave.

The relationship between Bennie and Elita is typically Peckinpah. Though she once loved Garcia, she is forced into a search which will end only when Bennie cuts off the valuable head. She protests and he explains that they will be able to live happily on the reward money.

"Do you think he'd give a damn if his head could give you everything you've always been looking for?" he reasons.

In another scene, Elita appears to enjoy an attempted, but never realized rape, much like Susan George in Peckinpah's "Straw Dogs." Elita is too human to fit in the Peckinpah framework, so she is done away with.

After much blood has flowed, Bennie secures the head. The rest of the film deals with his attempts to keep it. The head becomes his constant traveling companion as it rolls around the front seat in a fly-infested burlap sack.

More slaughters take place periodically before the film's end, with Bennie always surviving the holocaust. Peckinpah villains are such lousy shots.

As Bennie twirls off into the sunset in the end with Garcia's head and a briefcase full of $100 bills, we ask the same question Bennie did a few scenes earlier: "How much is it really worth?"

About the only thing that makes this film worthwhile is Mexican actress Isela Vegas' introduction to American audiences. Perhaps Hollywood could trade Peckinpah to Mexico for Vega.

Peckinpah explains audience reaction to the violence in his films by saying, "People want to walk out on them, but they can't. They can't turn their faces away. They watch—and that makes them mad."

Maybe his next film will get someone mad enough to run out of a theater screaming, "Bring me the head of Sam Peckinpah!"

But most likely they'll be too tired to bother.

Speech on Frenchman set

University Professor Charles D. Tenney will speak about French philosopher Jean-Paul Sartre at 4 p.m. Thursday in Panzer Hall 1136.

Tenney, founder of the philosophy department, is one of four people in the history of SIU to achieve the rank of University Professor, and is the only one now at SIU. The last person to achieve the title was R. Buckminster Fuller.

As a University professor, Tenney has the privilege of teaching in any department at SIU. Since being named to the post in 1969, he has taught courses in English, education and journalism.

Tenney will speak on Sartre's reputation as an existentialist. He described existentialism as the belief in "man's responsibility for his own life," and said Sartre was a "great believer in personal freedom. To him, art is a living example of freedom."

Tenney will speak for approximately thirty minutes. He said the colloquium is open to anyone with an interest in fine arts and aesthetics, the "general theory of the arts."

In addition to teaching, Tenney has been working on a book about discovery. He said the book is about how things come into the world.

"I've always been interested in the problem of how people are off-beat. The idea of innovation has always fascinated me. The people that do these things are interesting," he explained.

Other University professors in SIU's history in addition to Tenney and Fuller were Eli Gilbert Lentz (1948) and Charles Colby (1958), both deceased.

BAC president explains organization's purpose

By Diane Solberg
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Low ceilings, sloping walls and wooden floors indicate the third Black American Studies (BAS) building, once was an empty attic. Black Affairs Council (BAC) needed a place to house its newly formed organization, this is what BAS had to offer.

Narrow wooden stairs inside the colonial-style building lead up to the garret offices. The sparsely furnished rooms are decorated with posters from the black American subculture.

The door of Edgar Philpot's office, has a red, black and green banner covering the missing window pane. In the late afternoon sun shines through a western bay window, illuminating posters of black faces and black movement slogans.

Philpot is comfortable in this office, since this year marks the beginning of his second term as BAC president. He was re-elected last spring by representatives of 18 black campus organizations.

In a recent interview Philpot described activities of BAC while sitting behind his desk in a brown corduroy hat and Playboy T-shirt.

Philpot explained that BAC had its origins three years ago when blacks on campus decided to form an organization of their own because they felt that the Student Government Activities Committee did not meet the needs of black students.

He added that BAC's purpose is to "coordinate different activities for black students on campus. The main objective... is to meet the needs of black students... socially, culturally, politically, and whatever way we can."

These activities include the Miss Ebony Pageant, October 27.

"It's being coordinated by one of the member organizations on campus... and it's a pageant, a cultural affair where black women... exemplify black womanhood. We have girls competing for the title of Miss Ebony and they compete on the basis of their talent," the senior in administration of justice said.

Philpot added, "It's not a beauty contest, it's more or less judgment on talent presentation."

He also said there are no protests over the contest from women of the liberation movement.

"Black women's liberation is non-existent. In my opinion the black woman is already a liberated woman. I don't feel that, more or less, the white woman's aspirations would be the same as black women's aspirations. That is why I don't feel like they, you see, have a place in that sort of movement... Black women have been on equal plains since slavery."

Philpot went on to explain the prison program sponsored by the campus Black Cultural Society.

"The prison program we have at Marion Felony Penitentiary... is ongoing. It's been going on a year. Each Thursday we go out to the prison and take groups with us and participate in the Black Cultural Society at the prison."

"Every fourth Thursday we bring an outside presentation to the prisoners—entertainment... like the dancers," he said in reference to the Black Fire Dancers of the Black Togetherness Organization.

Philpot said the prison presentations are "attended mostly by blacks. We have a tremendous response from the Black Cultural Society within the prison. They just love to see people from outside."

In February BAC will celebrate

Ballet school opens enrollment

NEW YORK (AP) — The directors of the Harkness House for Ballet Arts have announced plans to open enrollment and charge tuition beginning with the fall 1974 semester.

Until now, the school operated on a full scholarship basis. Enrollment in the fall is expected to increase 150 per cent over the 1974 spring enrollment of 80. Approximately 45 full scholarships will be offered this fall. With the exception of those enrolled in open classes, students must audition.

Black History Week by extending the event to a month of activities on campus. Four weekends will highlight various black themes such as political, social, cultural and educational, Philpot said.

BAC, which is funded by the Student Senate, has been allocated $16,500 for the year, Philpot said.

The first year, BAC was granted $30,000 for their budget, Philpot said the decreased budget is "indicative of how the black organizations are treated throughout the nation."

Philpot, who was a senator last year, said he brought 150 students to spring meeting last year. Blacks were concerned about the way the Joint Fee Allocation Board was setting up the budget.

Philpot said that when the senate decided to vote, a senator recommended a closed session.

"At that point... Al Jacobson jumps up and said, 'I feel intimidated and I can't vote if I feel intimidated. Now the presence of students in the room intimidates us. Now, I don't think it intimidated him because they were just students, I think he was intimidated by the fact that they were black students... I think every black student had a right to be there. Jim Kania, former vice-president and chairman of the senate, recommended they go into executive session. And include a few guests... that were in the gallery.'" Philpot laughed.

The student senate asked the blacks to leave, so the senate could go into executive session, but they refused Philpot said.

Philpot said the student senate tried to change meeting rooms, but the blacks followed the session. Kania dismissed the senate and scheduled a special session for Saturday. Philpot said BAC's budget was determined in that session.

Philpot added, "I think that the students should be able to view the student senate's budgetary process. It should be a learning experience for everybody in the University," Philpot said.

Philpot said that a black student conference of organizations throughout the state is planned for January at SIU.

The purpose of the conference is to "open up black communication channels between black student organizations throughout the state...to share ideas on how to get things done."

Ivick to Bulgaria, Govin to South Africa

By Ron Sutton
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

Final Jeopardy is over. Jim Ivick won a trip to Varna, Bulgaria. Lynn Govin's consolation prize is a jaunt to South Africa.

Ivick, a Saluki senior, placed fourth among the 14 men qualifiers in the trials last weekend at Anaheim, Calif. The top six, plus an alternate, are eligible for the championships.

Meanwhile, in Long Beach, Calif., Saluki freshman Lynn Govin ran into difficulties in Friday night competition and missed the Big Seven in women's competition.

Govin, the only one of 13 qualifiers without previous international experience, impressed onlookers enough Saturday, though, to earn an invitation to a series of competition and exhibitions in South Africa next month.

"There are two international competitions and I don't know how many exhibitions," said Govin. "It's for three weeks around the end of November and the start of December, but we can't say too much because there's still some political things to be worked out."

Ivick overcame a slight ankle injury to win his spot on the American team. He twisted an ankle the Friday before he left for California, hampering him during his final workouts.

"That whole week before, I laid off the events in which I had to run and tumble," said Ivick. "I think it did hold me back a bit on floor exercise and the vault, just because of the fact that I didn't get to work on them. I think it's healed now to where I can get back on it."

"This is the first time he's competed in a tryout for me," said Saluki Gymnastics Coach Bill Meade, "and it's the first I've seen him in a tryout where he didn't have a break."

Ivick peaked with a 9.3 in the parallel bars and a 9.1 in the rings in compiling 105.45 points overall. His lowest score was in the floor exercise where his 8.1 trialed the field.

The ankle injury showed in the vault, where he dropped from a 9.4 in his last outing to 8.7's at Anaheim.

"The coaches were most complimentary toward him," said Meade. "It's a young team all around, but a good one, and the experience in this will help all of them in preparing for the '76 Olympics in Montreal."

Ivick will train for the 32-team competition in Varna's Palace of Sports at SIU, because the United States is not holding a training camp this year. He will leave Oct. 14, and upon his return, will try out for the Pan-American Games the first week of December.

"He'll have to learn the compulsory exercises for the Pan-Am Games, then for the NCAA, so he'll have a long season," remarked Meade.

SIU's first representative at the Games since Tom Lindner in 1970 is not eligible to compete for the Salukis until Jan. 2—but that's prior to the first dual meet, anyway. Ivick came to SIU on that date a year ago from the University of New Mexico "for personal reasons" concerning coaches and teammates.

"I worked out with the team and trained as if I was competing," said Ivick.

Govin, meanwhile, would have been heading for the same games, if not for an off-balance landing on the even bars.

"That was a full point deduction, or she would have been fifth," explained Vogel. "She was swinging very nicely and would have gotten a 9.3, but she landed on the side of her foot. In all, the scoring was very tight and close."

"I was fairly tense, even though I did fairly well the last night," said Govin. "It was a matter of consistency, but I can compete with the girls that were there."

The competition was rough enough, that even Roxanne Pierce, one of the top two gymnasts for the past four years, according to Vogel, could not qualify.

"Lynn was a little uptight, but in about three-fourths of the 16 events, she was impressing people with what she had accomplished in the last two months," remarked Vogel. "Many people in the so-called 'power' were encouraging her."

"Her fall shook her up a little, and she was shaky on the next two events," he recalled. "The next morning she averaged about 9.2 in four events."

"She could have pulled back in if she had finished strong Friday night after the fall, but she didn't produce her best routines then on the beam and floor exercise."

Vogel estimated that about 30,000 people attended the two-day, two-night women's competition.

L.A. wins title

ATLANTA (AP)—Buzz Capra stopped Cincinnati on four hits Tuesday night, pitching the Atlanta Braves to a 7-1 victory.

The loss, on the next-to-last day of the regular season, clinched the West title for the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Volleyball tournament for mentally disabled

A benefit volleyball tournament for the mentally handicapped, co-sponsored by the Carbondale Park District and the B and J Schlitz distributors, will take place Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 5 and 6 at Southeast Park.

George Whitehead, program coordinator for the park district, said 50 volleyball teams have registered to participate in the tournament. The teams consist of most of the SIU fraternities and sororities, various departments at SIU, the Carbondale and SIU police departments and downtown businesses.

Whitehead said the distributor is selling the beer to the park district at cost. He said there will be no admission charge, and added the profit will be derived solely from the beer sales.

Prizes will be awarded to individual members of the top four teams, Whitehead said. First prize will be a Schlitz Gusto jacket and a Trophy. The prize for the second place team will be a ceramic stein, third prize will be a choice of a variety of Schlitz hats and fourth prize will be a plastic insulated beer mug.

Proceeds from the tournament will go toward the cost of the Southern Illinois Special Olympics to be held at SIU May 1 and 2. The Olympics will consist of mentally handicapped representatives from the southern 36 counties of Illinois. The Olympics will be sponsored jointly by the Carbondale Park District, the Special Olympics organization, SIU and the Schlitz brewing company.

Whitehead said the double elimination tournament will last from 8 a.m. till dark on both days.

Club wins again

Bijan Yargani scored four goals to lead the SIU Soccer Club to an 8-2 win over the University of Evansville at rainsoaked McAndrew Stadium Saturday.

The Club led 3-2 at the half, but broke the game open with a give-goal second half. Jean-Jacques Messeke added two goals for the Salukis. Jeff Barlow and Fernando Casal each scored once.

The win gives the Club a record of two wins, one loss and one tie. It will seek revenge for its only loss as it goes against Murray State University Saturday at McAndrew Stadium. Kickoff time will be 2 p.m.

An organizational meeting will be held from 6:30-8 p.m. Friday in the Ohio Room of the Student Center.

Jim Ivick, Saluki senior gymnast performs a stunt on the pommel horse. Ivick, despite being hampered by an ankle injury, earned a spot, last weekend, on the American team which will compete in the World Games in Varna, Bulgaria.

Rugby A team evens record

The SIU Rugby A team evened its record to 1-1 by defeating the Illinois Normal, Ill. last Saturday.

At half time the Saluki rugger was down 0-4. Mark Fischewich, of Chesterfield, Ill., was the first SIU rugger to touch down for a Saluki score with Mike Kavanaugh, of Chicago, Ill., giving a crucial assist. The point-after attempt failed. Kevin Conway, of Aledo, Ill., scored the final try for SIU, making the score 8-4. Ed Willi, of Peoria, Ill., and president of the Rugby Club, added two points with a successful point-after attempt that hit the crossbars and bounced in to make the final score 10-4.

Illinois State's B team proved to be tough competition, as they defeated the SIU B team 8-0.

Player-coach Tex Asche, of Marion, Ill., said "The A team looked much more aggressive and together than they were last week. We've been stressing keeping together to back up each other. I was very pleased with the effort of the A team. As far as the B team is concerned, we were just faced with a more experienced group and they were able to use that experience over us."

The Saluki Rugby Club holds its first home game against a tough Rambler Rugby Club of St. Louis at 2 p.m., Saturday, Parents Day at SIU, on the Rugby Field next to Abe Martin Baseball Field. All the ruggers invite the students, as well as their parents, to help cheer the Salukis to a victory over the Ramblers of St. Louis.

Ampon a winner

Felix Ampon won his second tennis tournament of the fall, Saturday, when he defeated his brother Mel, 10-3, in the final match of the Sikeston Open in Sikeston, Mo. Previously, Ampon had won the Murray Open in Murray, Kentucky. SIU tennis coach Dick LeFevre said Tuesday that the SIU tennis team will travel to Notre Dame this weekend for the Central Collegiate Championships. Eight teams will compete in the three-day tournament.

"Indiana has to be rated the favorite with their top player Dennis Sullivan who was runner up in the Big Ten last year," said LeFevre, "but I'll be disappointed if we don't win it."

Harriers escape from British attack

The British were coming. But they had no supporting ammunition.

Instead, they were followed by a steady flow of maroon-and-white clad foes, and the British charge went for naught.

The result was a thrilling 27-28 triumph for the Saluki harriers, and team balance again overcame the stars of the opposition.

Brian Rutter, a freshman from Bristol, England, was the only Murray State harrier in the top four for much of the race, leading from the gun and reaching the finish line in 25 minutes flat.

But fellow British freshman Martyn Brewer made a contest out of the meet by finishing strong, overtaking two Salukis down the stretch, and claiming second in 25:11.

Only Saluki balance turned the tide. Bill Britten, another freshman, but from Canada, gave in to Brewer's charge, before completing his best effort of the year in 25:13.

Eight seconds back of him was Saluki Jerry George, followed by teammates John St. John and Tom Fulton within the next 18 seconds.

But the story for SIU was a few seconds farther back, where another Canadian freshman, Bruce Paterson, outlasted Murray State's Rod Harvey in the battle for ninth to give SIU the one-point win.

"The young guy that really saved our neck was Bruce Paterson," remarked Saluki head coach Lew Hartzog. "I have to be pleased with him, finishing fifth after he's been running last."

A last-mile kick did the job for Paterson, who overcame three foes during his meet-saving drive.

"You could tell they knew the course," remarked Cornell, concerning the SIU runners. "They knew where to put in the sprints. I really thought we could get them this year."

The loss had double the pain for Cornell, a two-time All-American miler for SIU in the early '60s under Hartzog.

"I've beaten him once in cross country and once in track," said Cornell, a seven-year man at Murray State. "It looks like he's determined not to let it happen again. When you return to your old school, your old coach, you sure like to win it."

Cornell didn't come upon his overseas freshmen by accident. Brewer is a native of Chelmsford, England—Cornell's hometown.

But this time, the Canadians had enough help from the U.S. forces to overcome the British.

"I have to consider this Britten's best performance," said Hartzog of the short, bushy-haired native of Thunder Bay, Ontario. "He came up and went ahead of our other people, who ran the same five-mile race that he did Saturday at Normal."

"We have four awfully good kids," he added. "If one of the other four—Mandehr, Craig, Paterson and Bryant—can do the job each time, we'll win."

Fulton finished sixth Tuesday while running on a blister which formed at the SIU meet.

"I feel lucky to get away with a win here," said Hartzog. "I really was very afraid that they would beat us. Being an 'ex,' Bill has no trouble getting his men up."

The race was Murray State's first five-mile effort of the year, probably an SIU advantage. On the other hand, the Salukis had competed most recently—the five-mile effort at Normal Saturday.

Murray State will have a quick chance for revenge Saturday, when they compete in the Indiana Invitational along with SIU.

Hailey is still confident that SIU will be winner

Mark Hailey still has confidence in the SIU football team even though it has lost the first three games of the season.

"Our morale is still high," said the 195-pound defensive end. "We've been so close the last few weeks that I still feel we can have a winning season even though we are 0-3 right now."

Hailey, a senior from Murphysboro, led the SIU defensive unit Saturday night with 10 unassisted tackles, one assisted tackle and two recovered fumbles. "It was a real physical game," commented Hailey as he prepared for Tuesday's practice.

"After the last Carolina game I was real tired because of the humidity. I felt that I had a pretty good game but I wasn't satisfied because we lost."

Hailey started his second game of the season against the Pirates. The 6'2" recreation major replaced Matory Bailey as the starter against Indiana State when Bailey dislocated his shoulder during practice. Hailey started several games last year as a junior. He ended up the 1973 season with eight unassisted tackles, six assists and one fumble recovery.

Hailey has felt the mental fatigue of playing three away games in a row thus far. "We got home from East Carolina about 4 a.m. Sunday. I had three hours of sleep before I went to church."

Hailey is a Southern Baptist and is involved in the activities of the Walnut Street Baptist Church. "When I graduate in the spring I plan on entering a seminary to get my Master's in Religious Education. After that I want to become involved in church recreation which involves churches that are now setting up gymnasiums and recreation programs."

Hailey has an extra incentive to do well for SIU when he's on the field. His father, Bob Hailey, is the Saluki defensive backfield coach.

"I don't get any special privileges because I'm the coach's son and I'm glad," said Hailey. "I don't really have a lot of contact with him on the field because he coaches a different position from the one I play."

Hailey will be starting for SIU when the Salukis travel to Dayton Saturday searching for their first victory. "We feel we can win this weekend and we should," said Hailey.

After Dayton comes a trip to Philadelphia to take on Temple. "After we play Temple we open up at home," said a happy Hailey. "I love to play at home in front of our fans," said Hailey.

Southern Illinois is truly home for the Murphysboro native.

Cards in second

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Bob Robertson's two-run homer in the eighth inning gave the Pittsburgh Pirates a dramatic 6-5 victory over the Chicago Cubs Tuesday night and a one-game lead in the National League East race.

Pittsburgh's victory, coupled with St. Louis' 3-2 defeat earlier at Montreal, clinched at least a tie for the Pirates. The Pirates and Cardinals each have one game to play in the regular season.

Mike Jorgensen's two-run homer in the eighth inning gave the Montreal Expos a 3-2 victory over St. Louis Tuesday night.

Bonapartes victorious

Bonapartes and Edgewood met at high noon Sunday in a battle of unbeatens.

In a well-played, exciting 12-inch softball game, Bonapartes stunned Edgewood with a last-inning three-run rally, and then hung on in the bottom of the seventh for a 4-3 victory.

Bonapartes manager Jack Stein, bemoaning the absence of five starters, opened the rally with a one-out single. Stein scampered to third on a smash up the middle by Jim Burke. He slid in under the tag while Burke moved to second on the play.

Then the Edgewood defense fell apart. Shortstop James Simko couldn't find the handle on a routine grounder off the bat of Keith Arbanas. Stein scurried home, as left fielder John MacDonald threw wildly to home plate, allowing Burke to score the tying run. Glenn Parke followed with an RBI single that proved to be the winning blow.

It was a tough loss for Edgewood and a hard-earned victory for a Bonapartes team dependent on power hitting.

"We have a lot of power and the wind was blowing in, so it made it tough for us," said a relieved Stein after the game.

Jim Kohrig managed to beat the wind factor, however, as he belted a solo homer in the top of the fourth for Bonapartes' final run.

But a team can't win without a solid defense. And, in the end, it was the superlative play of Bonapartes' third baseman George O'Hare which saved the game.

O'Hare made at least three fantastic plays, including a diving stab of a line shot headed for left field. He made it look easy—a la Brooks Robinson—as he stopped cold the Edgewood offense. His presence certainly didn't go unnoticed, as one Edgewood player moaned, "Get rid of that guy at third."

Well, Edgewood will get another shot at Bonapartes, as the two teams are almost certain to meet when the playoffs begin this weekend.
