Perot back in race for White House

Los Angeles Times

DALLAS—Ross Perot, continuing to astound and confound the American political system, Thursday declared that he would be a candidate for the presidency after all.

Saying that he was responding to the will of the people, the diminutive Dallas billionaire said that he planned to run an abbreviated and unconventional campaign focused solely on what he called "the issues that concern the American people."

He said he felt compelled to run because the two major candidates had failed to face up to the country's current economic and political problems.

Perot had said last July that he would not be an independent candidate for the White House because he had concluded that he could not win and that his presence would be disruptive.

In a raucous and at times hostile press conference in a North Dallas hotel, Perot ducked most specific questions on his controversial plan for economic revival, which he issued in book form last month.

Instead, he doled out large portions of his standard stump speech, heavily laced with patriotic homilies and attacks on the media.

More than 200 press representatives were present to witness the hurling of Perot's latest political grenade. The room was also packed with cheering and sobbing Perot supporters.

Perot announced that he was joining the campaign in an 18-minute speech, which he read from a prepared text. He left the stage immediately after his remarks, refusing to answer a single question.

Logging resumes

Environmentalists protest at Shawnee

By John Rezanka
Environmental Writer

Hardwood logging has resumed in the Shawnee National Forest, and environmentalists have gathered at the logging site to protest.

The 200-acre logging site is located near Whoopie Cat Lake, north of Elizabethtown, about 55 miles southeast of Carbondale.

Jackie Turner, a member of the Regional Association of Concerned Environmentalists, said the timber cutting caught environmentalists by surprise.

Turner accused the forest service of misleading the public and trying to conduct a timber harvest without notifying the public.

"We were led to believe, by forest service personnel, that there would be no harvesting this fall," Turner said. "Despite these assurances they went ahead with this sale."

"I think it is outrageous," she said. "It is an example that the forest service is not acting in good faith and the public has a reason to not have confidence in what the forest service is saying."

People are camped out at the site to protest and bear witness to what is going on, Turner said.

Yopp defends quality of graduate programs

By Christy Gutowski
Administration Writer

The dean of SIUC's Graduate School defended the quality of the college's programs Thursday at its October meeting.

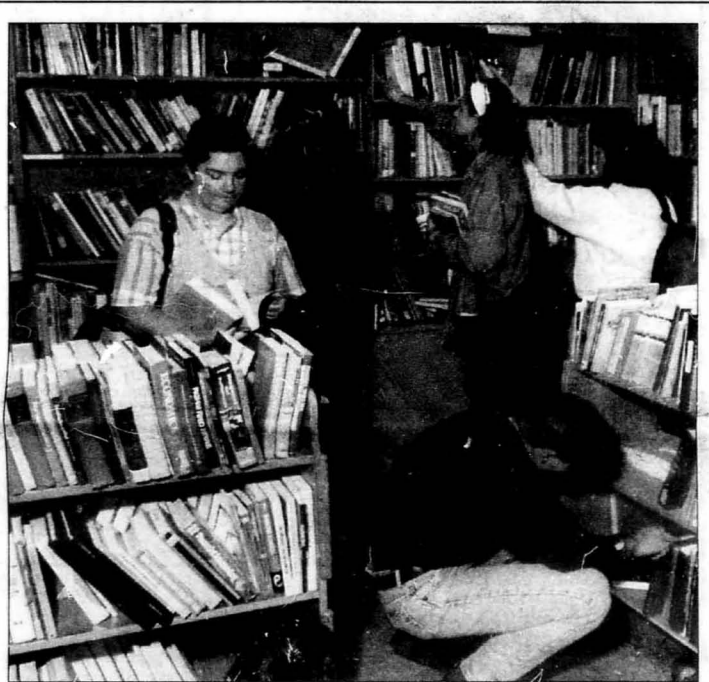

John Yopp said he will work closely with Benjamin Shepherd, vice president of academic affairs and provost, and with college deans to review program quality by focusing on the "uniqueness of graduate programs and qualitative rather than quantitative criteria for reviewing graduate education."

Yopp has been working with deans and the budget office of institutional research to provide updated productivity-based data to evaluate graduate-level programs.

"We're working closely together to correct the impression that some of the graduate programs have less than adequate productivity and less than adequate quality," he said.

Dean: IBHE plan not only way to meet budget

By Teri Lynn Carlock
Special Assignment Writer

The dean of the College of Education says the college can meet its budget goals differently than the way the Illinois Board of Higher Education proposes.

"We're not going to wait for other people to tell us what to do," Dean Donald Beggs said. "We're trying to initiate proposals at department levels that will be budget saving in the long run."

In its report released in September, the board recommended the college cut the doctoral degrees for physical education, higher education and educational administration. The board also suggested the college cut the master's degree in higher education.

The IBHE has recommended that the College of Agriculture eliminate or reduce four of its master of science degree programs because of reduced costs and low enrollment.

The board stated in its recommendations

see CUTS, page 7

The board recommends all public universities in Illinois consider consolidation, elimination or reduction of bachelor's, master's and doctoral degree programs in a quest to meet state budget goals.

Across the state, the board suggests 190 programs, about 12 percent of the programs offered by public universities, be considered for elimination. SIUC has about a year to respond to the board's recommendations.

Beggs said although college faculty and administrators are looking at the board's suggestions, they are not written in stone.

"Of course we will consider their (the board's) recommendations, but we've already started considering other ways of solving the budget problem," he said. "We're

SIUC to fight in Panther den

By Jay Reed
Sports Writer

Interim SIUC defensive coordinator Tom Seward said that he will enjoy going back to his alma mater Saturday.

But, Seward said emotion will give way to responsibility as he takes the field in his first game as defensive coordinator for SIUC.

Seward said the biggest factor that concerns him going into Saturday's 6:30 p.m. tilt at Eastern Illinois is the versatility of the Panther offense, which may throw 24 different offensive formations at the Salukis.

"They have everything imaginable in their offense, so we have to work on the things that will hurt us," Seward said. "We are anticipating draws, sprint outs and the option from different formations."

Seward said the secondary especially will have its work cut out for it because of Eastern's passing attack.

"I think their strength may be throwing the football, but they have everything imaginable on offense," Seward said.

The Eastern passing attack will rest on the shoulders of freshman quarterback Pete Mauch. Mauch took over for Jeff Thorne, who was injured in last Saturday's Gateway Conference loss at Illinois State.

Mauch has completed 13 of 30 passes for 245 yards with one interception and two touchdowns this season. He has rushed the ball 16 times for 27 yards.

Eastern head coach Bob Spoo said that Mauch is a spunky competitor who is capable of leading the Panthers to victory.

"Our backs are against the wall, so we have to win this game to stay in the league race," Spoo said. "This game will show what our kids are made of."

Spoo said he is not pleased with the direction of this year's team, in part because of injuries and poor defense.

"We have to play aggressively with a lot of emotion and hit our tackles well if we are going to win," Spoo said.

SIUC head coach Bob Smith said the running game will have to crank it up a notch, and Scott Gabbert will have to read the defense and make adjustments if the Dawgs are going tame the Panthers on their home turf.

"We are going to put a lot on Scott Gabbert this week to automatic at the line of scrimmage," Smith said. "He is going to have a busy week because Eastern Illinois, in the four games they have played this season, have played a number of different fronts and defenses."

Eastern is last in three Gateway defensive categories. The Panthers are last in rushing defense allowing an average of 247.3 yards on the ground, last in scoring defense giving up 27 points a game and last in total defense giving up 404 yards of offense a game.

The bright spot on the Panthers is shone in punter Jason Caldwell, who is first in the conference and fourth in I-AA with an average of 42.3 yards a punt.

SIUC spikers face Shockers

Salukis enter contest with defensive edge

By Karyn Viverito
Sports Writer

It may come down to a tug-of-war battle when the SIUC Volleyball team faces Missouri Valley Conference rival Wichita State Saturday.

The Salukis, 8-5 overall, are coming off a non-conference first-place finish in the Gamecock Invitational, while the Shockers are off to one of their best volleyball seasons ever as they are 4-2 in conference action. WSU is in a tie with Illinois State, a team they upset early in the season, for second place.

The Salukis, 2-3 in conference, take the court at Wichita with a defensive edge because they lead the conference in digs. The Shockers present one of the most effective conference offenses, ranking No. 2 in kill average.

WSU also pulled ahead of SIUC in the preseason MVC coaches poll to No. 4. The Salukis earned the No. 5 ranking.

Head coach Sonya Locke said the Saluki defense is going to have to adapt to the multiple offense game the Shockers play.

"Our blocking is going to be an important factor for us in this game, because we are going to have to be able to set our block in a lot of different areas," she said. "We had practice with this last weekend, and I was pleased to see that we were capable of executing and able to adjust."

Shocker head coach Phil Shoemaker said he is concerned with the upcoming match against SIUC.

"The Salukis are a tough rival for us to face and I must say I am glad we are playing them at home," he said. "Not only do they have Dana Olden and Stacey Snook, but they have talented young players to back them up and show a bit of leadership themselves."

Shoemaker said even though WSU has moved out to a quick start in the conference, the Shockers are close to even with the Salukis.

"I can't really point a finger at any area where we have really improved and excelled as a team," he said. "We are just playing with a little more consistency right now."

Senior Monica Hill serves a ball in practice for the Saluki volleyball team. The Salukis were practicing Thursday afternoon in Davies Gym for their game Saturday.

Olden racked up 39 kills, 31 digs, and 11 block assists while Snook had 25 digs, 12 block assists and 24 kills.

Sophomore middle blocker Deb Heyne had 16 kills and 19 digs in the match against South Carolina last weekend that earned her career highs, and she racked up 15 kills and 11 digs against Central Florida.

Women harriers try to defend home title

By Sanjay Seth
Sports Writer

The SIUC women's cross country team will try to defend its crown Saturday at the Saluki/Country Fair Invitational.

Coach Don DeNoon said the 5-kilometer tournament has been an annual event for the past five years, but sponsorship was almost lost last year when a new manager took over.

"I approached the management some five years ago with the idea of a sponsorship in cross country and they agreed," Denoon said. "I am glad we haven't lost their interest because this meet brings together 12 teams for some tough competition."

The Salukis blasted the competition last year, winning by a more than substantial, 30-point margin, he said. The closest competition was from second-place Vanderbilt.

"Our team was running really well at this time last year," DeNoon said. "We are definitely going to be very competitive this year as well, because we certainly have the athletes to do the job."

The Saluki athletes who are likely contenders include junior Cathy Kershaw, sophomore Debbie Daehler, and seniors

Saluki golf places seventh out of 20 at Tri-State Classic

By Andy Graham
Sports Writer

The SIUC men's golf team has displayed its talents in its opening tournaments, and junior Clyde Berning said the Dawgs are bound to be a threat to their division by the end of the season.

The Salukis placed seventh out of 20 teams at Tri-State Golf Classic Sept. 28-29. The tournament was a two-round event, which took place at the Pick Wick State Park in Counce, Tenn. The team's total score for both days was 607, which was good, considering that they placed first at the Bent Creek Intercollegiate the week before with a score of 611, coach Gene Shaneyfelt said.

"I was pleased with our performance, but I still don't feel that we've reached our potential," Shaneyfelt said.

The competition at the tournament turned out to be a surprise to the Salukis.

"We were really surprised by SEMO and Western Kentucky because we beat them the week before. It was a real shock," Berning said.

Top finishers for the Salukis were Berning and junior Sam Scheibel, who tied for 24th place with low scores of 150.

Netters to battle at home

By Sanjay Seth
Sports Writer

The SIUC lady netters meet Tulsa Friday and Marquette and University of Louisville Saturday in the SIUC Invitational.

Coach Judy Auld said the level of competition would be very tough this weekend, and she could not see any one school blowing another team away.

Auld said the matches, especially against Tulsa, will be important as far as seedings for the Gateway Conference Tournament in April.

"We beat them 7-2 last year, but the Tulsa team had several injuries and not much depth," Auld said. "There have been several changes in their lineup, and I am expecting a very solid team in competition."

The Salukis will have to be at full strength to beat the new conference school, which includes several new foreign athletes, she said.

The doubles combination of senior Lori Gallagher and freshman Katherine Prietsch will play together again. The duo

20 CONTAMINATED IN NUCLEAR MISHAP

Some 20 workers were contaminated by nuclear radiation after an accident at a foundry of the Komintern plant in the Belarus city of Vitebsk, ITAR-TASS news agency reported Thursday. They were tainted after a measuring device containing Caesium-137 melted, contaminating an area of over 20 square meters. Work at the foundry continued until midday, although the accident was discovered early in the morning.

MOSLEMS, SERBS, CROATS AGREE TO TALKS

The agreement by Moslems, Serbs and Croats to hold talks in the Bosnian capital Sarajevo aimed at demilitarizing the city is a significant "break-through," the spokesman of the Yugoslav peace conference said in Geneva on Thursday. The spokesman, Fred Eckhard, cautioned against expectations of rapid progress, however, saying the foremost task was to bring calm to the beleaguered city.

U.N. APPEALS TO WORLD FOR AID TO KURDS

The United Nations Thursday appealed to the world to donate up to $85 million to help provide relief aid to Kurds in Northern Iraq. The cash was needed to provide some 750,000 Kurds with food, fuel and medicine in the coming winter months, U.N. aid coordinator Gualtiero Fulcheri told reporters in Geneva. Fulcheri said Iraqi authorities had not allowed any fuel transports into the region for the past three months.

SENATE APPROVES HOUSING LOANS TO ISRAEL

The U.S. Senate Thursday gave overwhelming approval to a $14 billion foreign aid bill that authorizes the U.S. government to give up to $10 billion in housing loan guarantees to Israel over the next five years. The controversial housing loan guarantees passed the Senate 87 to 12, with hardly any controversy after the government of Prime Minister Itzhak Rabin took over in Jerusalem.

COURT MAY BE SHIFTING IN 202ND YEAR

When the Supreme Court opens its 202nd year Monday, the spotlight will be on three conservative justices who appear to be steering the court on a slow path to the right. In one of the most surprising events of the court's recent history, three so-called "centrists" — Justices Sandra Day O'Connor, Anthony Kennedy and David Souter — got together in June to apply the brakes to a court that appeared revved up to undo its liberal past.

CHICAGO SCHOOL BOARD LAYING OFF 556

The Chicago school board is laying off 556 non-teaching employees—including all of the school system's transient officers. The school board ordered the layoff Wednesday following weeks of negotiations with the Chicago Teachers Union. In addition to transient officers, the cuts will hit clerks, library assistants and service personnel.

CTA FACING MORE CUTS

The Chicago Transit Authority apparently will have to cut back even more services next year to solve its continuing budget crisis. The Regional Transportation Authority says it's opposed to providing any "bailout" money to the CTA from funds set aside for capital improvements. If the RTA does not provide some money, then the CTA will be looking at a budget shortfall of at least 13-million dollars in 1993.

Burial ground halts NY building

SIUC professor aiding federal government to find solution

By Brian Gross
Special Assignment Writer

An SIUC professor will help advise the federal government on what to do with an 18th-century slave burial ground that has stirred the African-American community in New York City.

Jerome Handler, a professor in anthropology, was selected for a General Service Administration committee that will analyze the skeletons found at the site, review proposals for reburial of the remains and develop a memorial or historic site.

The grave was discovered during construction of a 34-story federal office building in lower Manhattan. After pressure from the African-American community and New York officials, the General Services Administration agreed in July to stop construction until the site could be studied and protected.

The grave dates before the Revolutionary War, when the site was located outside the city limits of New York. Slaves were not allowed to be buried in the city.

More than 300 skeletons have been uncovered, and as many as 20,000 bodies are estimated buried at the site, according to the National Movement for the Preservation of the Sacred African Burial Grounds of New York City. Many of the skeletons are children's.

"It is the largest number of African and African-American skeletons discovered in an urban area and the earliest," Handler said.

Nobody knows yet where or how the remains will be reburied or what kind of memorial will be erected, Handler said.

"Everyone's been too busy just trying to get the skeletons out," he said. "Everything's stopped after tremendous political pressure. It's a big issue in New York."

Handler will meet with members of the committee in New York and tour the site. The committee will recommend how the bones should be treated and studied for their scientific value.

Handler has studied a similar slave burial ground on the island of Barbados, in the Caribbean, for 10 years. Robert Corrucinni, also a professor of anthropology at SIUC, worked with Handler in studying the bones found at the Barbados site.

Medical officials: Cow milk study lacking proof, scientific evidence

By Rebecca Campbell
Health Writer

A study linking cow's milk to health problems in children has no scientific proof to support such a claim, medical officials said.

The Physician's Committee for Responsible Medicine released a statement by a panel of doctors, including Dr. Benjamin Spock. The panel cites nutritional concerns about cow's milk, such as iron deficiency and a trigger for juvenile diabetes, a news release from the PCRM said.

The study of 142 diabetic children revealed they all had a high level of an antibody to protein found in cow's milk, a study published in the New England Journal of Medicine said.

The panel used that as a kernel of truth to create a plausible lie, said Craig May, senior spokesman for the American Medical Association.

May said the PCRM did not release any research information when they announced their stand on cow's milk.

"Before you go scaring the hell out of people you should have some basis in fact," May said.

Dr. Romesh Khadori, an associate professor in the Division of Endocrinology and Metabolism at the SIUC School of Medicine in Springfield, explained the importance of the study in the journal.

"It is an article that raises a flag about certain external factors that could effect juvenile diabetes," he said.

Infants under one year of age should be breast fed, the news release from the PCRM stated.

M. Roy Schwartz, senior vice president of medical education and science for the AMA, said "The belief that breast milk is more healthy for infants than cow's milk is well documented."

"However, whole milk has been found to be nutritious for children

Shepherd must let students do their job

IT TOOK A LOT OF "COURAGE" for Vice President of Academic Affairs and Provost Benjamin Shepherd to put two Daily Egyptian student journalists "in their place." Imagine the strength it took to steamroll these students in the midst of 100 of his peers. Leadership such as this is needed to take the University into the next century—crush those idealists who still believe that people empowered with information can make good choices about their future.

SHEPHERD'S CRITICISMS originated from a mistake in an information graphic published Sept. 24 breaking down the degrees that were on the cutting block in a proposal by the Illinois Board of Higher Education and because the story ran prior to official release by the administration.

But the jokes and comments, made at a meeting of about 100 faculty and administrators, went beyond the error and attacked the newspaper's work of the past 22 years. Of the audience, two were not being laughed with, but laughed at.

BUT THE DE WILL NOT make an issue of Shepherd's bullying a reporter, who just won a national writing award, and a photographer. Nor will the Daily Egyptian place a grade on Shepherd's leadership in these uncertain days for SIUC, even though he chose to give insulting marks to a paper that has won state, regional and national awards. Instead the focus should be on an environment where information is hidden and wrongly framed, on an environment where information is not freely shared.

SHEPHERD ASKED ADMINISTRATORS to battle the DE and its efforts to release news quickly, even though the IBHE report already had passed through his hands. He wants to be able to control the newspaper, but he knows he cannot. "The DE has a mind of its own, if it has a mind," he said. "...We will just have to combat (the newspaper) because the DE, we cannot control."

A newspaper's responsibility includes posing as a check on the government. The SIUC administrators are this University's politicians.

Indirectly, criticism of the administration came as the DE published news that was held secret from the 24,000 students, faculty and staff. As politicians, administrators should expect some criticism. Information seems to move faster through the newspaper.

THE NEWSPAPER IS OFTEN quoted at numerous Undergraduate, Graduate and faculty meetings as a source of information. The DE is a strong voice in providing information to the students and Carbondale community, and has been for 75 years. The student newspaper has been ranked in the top 12 college dailies in the nation and, in 1992, was named No. 1 in the Midwest and No. 2 in the state.

The DE is always open to correction if errors occur, even when President John Guyon decides to personally stomp into the newsroom after the error on Thursday and demand a correction.

THE REPORT ACQUIRED for the graphic published Thursday came through a "back door" source. Regrettably, the pages were mixed and SIUC's cuts were included with SIUC. But had the report come from an open administration willing to communicate with the campus newspaper more freely, the chances for error would have been decreased. Yes, the Daily Egyptian erred in the graphic and regrets it.

Striving to gather news, a DE student journalist and a photographer were reproached by Shepherd.

Letters to the Editor

CCFA move not explained to profs

I write to express the public relations faculty's opposition to a reorganization of the College of Communication and Fine Arts described in the September 11 Daily Egyptian. Specifically, I refer to the proposed creation of a School of Mass Communications to include SIUC's program in public relations.

Public relations is now taught in the Department of Speech Communication. However, neither the chair of the department nor any member of the PR faculty was consulted before the proposed reorganization was presented to the CCFA Dean. Had the advocates of the proposed School of Mass Communication discussed their proposal with the public relations faculty, they would have learned that public relations is more closely allied academically with the traditions in rhetoric and persuasion found in the department of Speech Communication than it is with either Journalism or Mass Communication. Further, the entire faculty in public relations is either tenured in Speech Communication or is preparing for tenure application in that department.

Currently several CCFA Departments, including the Department of Speech Communication, have been asked to consider a move to the College of Liberal Arts proposed by Vice President Ben Shepherd. While I do not have enough information to either support or oppose a move to COLA, I note that Dr. Shepherd is facilitating a discussion of the advantages and disadvantages of his proposed changes with the people who will be affected.

Any proposal which affects the academic future of our students and which could have profound impact on the career development of our faculty should not be advanced without first consulting those affected. I cannot help but wonder how many other programs to be subsumed in the proposed School of Mass Communication were not consulted before the proposal was submitted.

While change to facilitate progress should never be discouraged, it seems inappropriate to suggest the dissection of an academically solid department without even consulting that department. — Michael Parkinson, associate professor, speech communication

Shepherd owes apology for remarks

Judging from his statements in the front page story of October 1, "Daily Egyptian defends criticisms by Shepherd," I would suggest that the vice president for academic affairs and provost has been too long removed from the classroom and too long under the pressure of budget cuts and program reduction proposals.

Administration is a tough job these days. Even so, public humiliation of any student, inside or outside the classroom, is quite simply an abrogation of the trust students place in their teachers and an abuse of the power of the professor's position.

I'm especially upset because the reporter the vice president berated at Tuesday's meeting is one of my students — a good student who works hard in the classroom and then works hard to communicate the day's news to her fellow students and the entire university community. She has been taught to work honestly and when necessary, to own up to an honest mistake made.

What she has learned from Dr. Shepherd through the incident I cannot say and I will not assign him a grade on his performance the way he assigned a grade on the Daily Egyptian's. Grading is a serious and largely private matter of evaluation between teacher and pupil. It is not a political weapon.

But as a teaching member of the faculty on this campus I will suggest that he owes an apology to the students in attendance at the meeting. There's a lot of bad news going around these days, but we need not beat up our students over it. — James D. Kelly, assistant professor, journalism

Campaigns hold to past strategies

Historical party beliefs remain strong from year to year, election to election

By John McCadd
Politics Writer

The Republican campaign focus on morality — as best typified by the highly publicized "family values" campaign — is nothing new.

Although Republican party officials say social values are an integral part of this year's campaign, the theme of morality has been utilized by the party since Abraham Lincoln was elected — around the time "In God We Trust" was printed on U.S. currency.

John Jackson, SIUC College of Liberal Arts dean and political science professor, said Lincoln was the first Republican president and an advocate of minorities more than today's Republican party.

"The Republicans at that time focused on how immoral slavery was," Jackson said. "Ronald Reagan and George Bush both have borrowed quotes from Abe Lincoln's speeches because of the religious significance."

He said in the 1860s, "In God We Trust" began appearing on money, and the phrase "under God" was inserted into the Pledge of Allegiance during Republican Dwight D. Eisenhower's term in the 1950's.

Today, Republicans stress moral issues such as abortion abolition and decreasing welfare incentives for broken families, Jackson said.

Family Values have become the latest major theme Republicans have run with in an election year, but the party has retained its old themes such as military strength and small business growth.

SIUC political science professor David Derge said most of the morality issues have been argued about since the beginning of government, but they were recently brought to the forefront because of controversy between Supreme Court rulings and religious groups.

"People have made a big enough issue out of things, and politicians pick up on them," Derge said. "Abortion became a big issue when government ruled in favor of it. They had done something that went against religious doctrine and Catholics activated against it."

Derge said family values was most likely a phrase meant to represent Republican advocacy of an orderly social system, in which they think respect for authority and law and order are important.

The modern Democratic party took its shape when Franklin Roosevelt took advantage of a negative economic situation at the end of a Republican term in 1932.

This phenomenon was not unlike today's situation, said Barbara Brown, SIUC political science lecturer and Jackson County Democratic party official.

"Right now, the Democratic party has the advantage of being able to point at the Republicans for what's gone wrong with the economy," Brown said. "In the Great Depression, (Republican Herbert) Hoover bore the blame just as Bush has today for having government stay out of the economy."

"Because of the depression, Democrats were able to pick up the theme of standing for the common man, which they pretty much run on today," she said.

Brown said the Republicans' "laissez faire" approach to the economy has surfaced

Influence of catchy slogans lost as media grabs campaign focus

By John McCadd
Politics Writer

The list below was compiled from suggestions and comments by professors of political science and journalism.

GOOD CAMPAIGN SLOGANS

Tippecanoe and Tyler Too — Benjamin Harrison's 1888 slogan.

I Like Ike (and Dick) — remnant of Eisenhower's stable 1950's where content more or less was not necessary.

JFK and LBJ — poetic 1960's slogan somewhat overshadowed by television, Johnson said.

Ross for Boss — slogan for Independent candidate H. Ross Perot.

Jim Rea Leading the Way — safe slogan for incumbent state senate democrat Jim Rea, since it is difficult to dispute without thorough investigation.

POOR CAMPAIGN SLOGANS

Read My Lips. — famous 1988 Bush "rundute under scrutiny of Democrat" who propose tax increases.

In your heart, you know he's right — Republican Barry Golowater's 1964 slogan "Democrats said, 'he's right, far right,'" Jackson said.

Vote Republican, Before It's Too Late — Chicago mayoral candidate Bernard Epton's 1982 racial slogan guided at Harold Washington, who would become the city's first black mayor, Jackson said.

"Presidential candidates have gotten away from campaign slogans since television became popular," he said.

"Slogans have become made-for-TV messages, like George Bush's 'Read my lips, no new taxes.'"

Johnson said slogans often are more popular in local elections because the candidates may not be as well-known as those in a presidential election.

David Kenney, SIUC political science professor, said slogans usually are most effective when they sound catchy, usually presenting a subtle rhyme scheme.

"Good slogans are able catch people's ears," Kenney said.

"Some slogans may look good on posters, but really good ones, like 'I Like Ike,' will sound good."

"Those are the kind people remember," he said.

Kenney said although catchy slogans often are effective, they sometimes lack content necessary to summarize their campaigns.

Barbara Brown, SIUC political science lecturer, said the last truly potent slogan came from Ronald Reagan's first campaign in 1980.

"Ronald Reagan's 'Vote Republican, For A Change' slogan was really effective," Brown said.

"It told people not only to change the way they vote, but to help bring America a change."

People voice opinion regarding candidates to Ronald Reagan during his visit to Herrin. Reagan was campaigning for the 1980 presidential election.

Polling helps politicians appeal to values, concerns of citizens

By John McCadd
Politics Writer

Although the two leading presidential candidates are assigned left and right identities, polls and the media help them appeal to voters up the middle, SIUC professors said.

In fact, the concept of political campaigns are built around appealing to the largest mass of voters, which professors say lies somewhere between Democrat and Republican theory. The appeal is found through polls.

John Foster, associate professor of political science, said there are two kinds of polls; those that display a raw percentage of popularity among voters and those that show public reaction to crucial issues.

The latter is usually done by private pollsters, who work with presidential candidates and some Congressional hopefuls, he said.

Political science professor David Kenney said pollsters probably hastened President George Bush's decision to relax his family values campaign.

"Bush realized he can't gain anything by being strictly pro-life," he said. "If he moves closer to the middle, he'll get more votes. People on the right would still be satisfied as long as he doesn't move too far toward the middle."

Kenney said the same principle applies to Clinton's realization of the importance of right wing ideas, such as small business strength and providing alternatives to welfare.

Foster said pollsters shape the elements of campaigns.

Foster said most campaign elements are tested with a response-group technique, enabling candidates to see what works and what does not.

Local Christians celebrate World Communion Sunday than the functions that come out of each of our buildings." The liturgy that will be used is a combination.

A lot of the prayers and readings are from different traditions around the world, so this year's celebration will have an international flavor, Webb said.

The celebration will include pastors and lay people from several churches that will be participating, as well as a joint choir.

Children are going to bring banners from each of the churches, she said.

John Mochnick, associate professor in the School of Music, will lead the volunteer choir on Sunday.

He said he expects close to 50 people to participate in the choir.

Mochnick said World Communion Sunday is a good thing for people to participate in.

The sharing of the world wide Christian spirit is always a good thing to do, he said.

World Communion Sunday, a traditional service that is celebrated throughout the world to stress Christianity as a whole, will be this Sunday at Shryock Auditorium.

Suzanne Webb, Minister of the First Christian Church, will preach the "Celebrate Christ" theme.

She said World Communion Sunday is a day when Christians all around the world are having communion.

"Here in Carbondale, it's a chance for several different churches to get together and celebrate the power of the Christian faith," she said. "It helps us realize the church is one.

"It's a chance to really celebrate together and its a time to forget all the differences that separate us," she said.

"It also helps us concentrate on the true power of the church rather Frances Young, executive director of the St. Louis Dairy District Council, said the information came from a very small study and needs to be duplicated to confirm the information.

She said people should remember the PCRM is group of "extreme people" and only 10 percent of the group are bona fide physicians.

"Last spring these same people wanted all animal products deleted from the food grouping system," Young said.

Corrucinni said the studies of the bones help archeologists figure out what kind of diseases the people had.

At the Barbados site, which is dated earlier than the New York grave, many slaves suffered from syphilis and lead poisoning, probably because rum was distilled in lead containers, he said.

Corrucinni said he and Handler have had 10 years to study the bones, which is nice because they can go back to look again when new ideas occur. The New York study will not have that luxury because of the pressure to rebury the remains. Barbados has never requested the bones from the island be returned for reburial.

Handler said a lot of the people buried in New York came from the same areas of West Africa that the people buried in Barbados came from.

"These people weren't buried with tombstones," Handler said. "The studies will put some individuality with them, the kinds of medical problems they had. The scientific value is in what they can tell us about Africans in the new world."

TELLS WHAT HAPPENED TO THE BULL
 You thought you were safe and snug. It was only a T.V. happening. So the price of plywood doubled, (you weren't going to build a house in the next few years anyway).
 Little did you know that Fred's sent the Bull's Air Bag to Southern Louisiana to be repaired. The air bag is still in Louisiana. But the repair shop, thanks to Hurricane Andrew, is in Texas and Mississippi. Where is the President when WE need him? So what if 150,000 people are homeless & jobless - WE WANT TO RIDE OUR BULL. 14,000 National Guardsmen repairing streets & homes, not one E2 sent to help Fred's. No wonder some people still want to vote for Perot.

that the college's costs exceed the national average. The board recommended degrees in agriculture education and mechanization and plant and soil science be eliminated. It also recommends degrees in animal science and agribusiness economics be reduced.

The data IBHE based its recommendations on does not give an accurate perspective on the programs, said William Herr, dean of the College of Agriculture. "I don't know how IBHE came up with the data that lead them to their recommendations," he said. "Our statistics show a stable to increased enrollment in our master's programs."

Robert Wolf, chairman for the Department of Agriculture Education and Mechanization, said the data used in the board's proposed definitely is inaccurate. "I have pulled together the college's enrollment data over the past five years and the information shows that we have had stable or increased enrollment as opposed to the decreases stated by IBHE," Wolf said.

SIUC has the strongest agriculture program in the state, Wolf said.

"The Agriculture and Mechanization department just received the largest grant the department has ever seen," he said. "Our program shows nothing but productivity and efficiency."

The Illinois Board of Higher Education recommended in September the elimination of 20 graduate-level programs. SIUC has a year to reply to those suggestions.

IBHE staff also said in its report that the Graduate School has experienced a decrease in grants and contract productivity.

Yopp said one reason for the decline is low morale because of misconceptions that SIUC is no longer a "research-active university."

"Those are definite misconceptions," he said. "We intend to maintain our status as a graduate-level institution supported, hopefully even better, with external grants."

"I don't want to see a decline in that kind of interest in proposal writing. Internal grant proposals are of course still healthy. There is money there to support that research."

President John C. Guyon said the University community should concentrate on its own three-year planning process, not IBHE's recommendations, because the way SIUC views itself outweighs the trying to control our destiny, and in this environment it's hard."

In its report, the board said it doubts the physical education doctoral program's ability to deliver quality instruction across six different specializations.

The board also stated its concern or low faculty productivity and enrollment in the program. The board noted that the program averages two to three degree annually, compared with 11 statewide.

The board is targeting higher education's doctoral degree program because graduation rates are low and about 70 percent of the 1991 Doctoral Review Committee ranked the quality of the program as poor to satisfactory, and 61 percent recommended reducing or eliminating the program.

But Beggs said the college deliberately is decreasing the amount of students in the higher education doctoral program.

said the timber harvest is being conducted by a local logging company with a two-year-old hardwood timber sale contract for a 200-acre area.

"The purchaser has chosen, because he has a legal contract with the forest service, to begin cutting timber," Schultz said.

He constructed a logging road about one month ago and began cutting timber about two weeks ago, Schultz said. The type of cutting is individual selection along with cutting small, individual plots of trees.

"The original contract called for harvesting groups up to 2 acres in size," he said. "We negotiated to remark the sales under the Amended Forest Plan guidelines and the purchaser agreed."

The original decision notice authorizing the sales was appealed in 1990 by individuals representing two groups, he said. Since then, the appeals on this particular sale have been resolved.

"This is a legal contract and we feel the contractor has the right to proceed with logging activities," he said.

board's suggestions. "I've tried very hard to convince the University community those recommendations are not something to give their attention to," he said. "(The IBHE document) recommends approximately 190 degree programs in the state."

"It recommends the elimination of schools and colleges all over the state, (including) service centers, research activities and whole academic units," Guyon said.

"That is a very substantial piece of paper and clearly that is not all going to happen," the president said.

Steven Kraft, chairman of the Graduate Council, said the University needs to take a two-level approach to the political nature of IBHE's initiatives.

He said the University as a whole should interact with IBHE through its Board of Trustees, administration and legislators as a first step.

Then, internal processes dealing with restructuring the University should take place through numerous processes and shared governing, Kraft said.

"Many campaign elements are personality oriented," he said. "Pollsters will try out campaign pitches and slogans before a group of people to see what works."

Foster said media polls that feature in-depth questioning impact candidates more than polls that merely feature a raw percentage of who is most popular.

Darcey Campbell, Bush's assistant press secretary, said because percentage polls change so often, Bush will not pay attention to them at length.

She said Bush has not changed his stand on family values, but he merely began stressing "traditional" values that encompass his perspective of family.

"We do use polls to find out where the public feels, but that has nothing to do with what Bush decides for his platform," she said. "Polls are so volatile. They're constantly changing from one day to the next."

Campbell said although Bush's polling unit plays a role in public opinion sourcing, she was not at liberty to discuss the party's polling strategies.

Ethan Zindler, Democrat Bill Clinton's assistant press secretary, said Clinton's polling is as important as the town meetings Clinton has attended.

in recent campaigns in the likeness of the North American Free Trade Agreement and deregulation of banks. "The philosophy was that the economy would grow if the government took its hands off," Brown said. "The depression made people question that theory."

Derge said there were several instances in which Republicans were able to cash in on Democratic-term plans gone awry. Most of these occurred when Democrats were to blame for failed social programs and military misadventures overseas, Derge said.

"In the 1968 election, America was preoccupied with the war in Vietnam, which Republicans thought was mishandled by (Democrat Lyndon) Johnson," Derge said. "In the 1960's, (Democrat John) Kennedy supported social welfare programs intended to equalize things, but they resulted with an increase in unemployment and crime."

"After Kennedy had spent $10 billion to end crime and poverty, Republicans were able to say, 'It doesn't seem to be working,'" he said.

The movement that shaped modern partisan themes was the period between the Civil War and the Great Depression — the latter half of the industrial revolution. According to a book titled "American Political Parties" by Everett C. Ladd, the United States began a massive industrialization movement in the late 1800s that changed the worth and distribution of currency. With that change, an alteration of political culture occurred, according to Ladd. "The principal component of change occurred with transformation of rural and agricultural societies into urban and industrial cities," Ladd wrote. "In place of an economy of small farms and cottage industry, there was an economy dominated by industrial giants," he said.

Around the 1900s, the nation bore two aspects that greatly influenced political parties — big businesses and labor unions. According to Ladd, big businesses slowly became monopolies at the turn of the century. When laws were made to protect labor unions, the nation's economy was forced to thrive on private entrepreneurship, which spawned an early middle class, according to Ladd.

Republicans such as William McKinley favored strengthening business by raising protective tariffs — the beginning of the Republican "hands-off" theory.

Production honors James Dean on 37th year after legend's death

By Melissa Willis
Entertainment Writer

This week marks the 37th anniversary of screen actor James Dean's death, but his legend lives on in McLeod Theater's production of "Come Back To the 5 and Dime, Jimmy Dean, Jimmy Dean."

Written by Ed Graczyk, "Come Back To the 5 and Dime" begins with the 1975 reunion of four women on the eve of the 20th anniversary of James Dean's death.

The women, who call themselves the disciples of James Dean, reunite in a small nickel and dime emporium to reminisce until a mystery woman arrives and turns the lives of the other characters upside down.

Director Alex Chrestopoulos, professor of theater, said the audience will experience a range of emotions during the play because it is part comedy and part drama.

"I want the audience to feel the full gamut of laughter and tears as they watch the play," he said.

The play is based on the lives of women who want to escape from reality, said Nick D. Janik, a senior in theater from Dallas, Texas.

"The show is about people who live in a dream world to avoid facing everyday life," Janik said. "The bonds and relationships make this a very endearing show."

Janik plays Mona, a woman who claims to have had Dean's illegitimate son after having an affair with him when she was an extra in the film "Giant."

The play includes actresses Amy Ellis, a sophomore in theater from Memphis Tenn., Erika A. Mastro, a sophomore in theater from Chicago, and Valerie Pargo, a senior in theater from Springfield.

"My character is flashy and trashy," said Ellis, who plays Sissy, a girl who wants to be in the loocapades. "She uses her charms to try to get a part."

"The whole show is guaranteed to show the audience a good time," she said.

Pargo said she could not divulge anything about her character because it would spoil the surprise of the play.

"My role is very challenging," Pargo said. "I hope all of our hard work pays off."

The play focuses on a series of flashbacks with the characters remembering times when they were young, Chrestopoulos said.

"Semi-memory plays are very tricky things for actors to do," he said. "The actors must play the past and present at the same time, the characters have to look at themselves on three levels, who they think they are, how others perceive them to be, and who they really are."

Rebecca Stuckenschneider, a freshman in theater from Washington, Miss., plays a young Sissy.

"Sissy was a very carefree, fun-loving character in her younger years," Stuckenschneider said.

Sue Fronczak, a junior in theater from Ottawa, plays the innocent Edna Louise.

"Edna Louise is a very real, very open character in this play," Fronczak said. "She is the nice character in this play."

But not all the characters are so nice. Nicole Hoffek, a senior in speech from Sherman, plays Siella Mae, an obnoxious small-town girl who marries money.

"The play has been fun since the first read through," Hoffek said. "Everyone gets along really well."

"Come Back to the 5 and Dime, Jimmy Dean, Jimmy Dean" opens Friday and runs Oct. 3, 9, 10, and 11. Curtain times are 8 p.m. on Fridays and Saturdays, and 2 p.m. on Oct. 11. The Sunday performance will be signed for the hearing impaired.

Tickets are $8 for adults, $7 for senior citizens, and $4 for students and children. The McLeod Theater box office number is 453-3001.

Brazil president's duties suspended beginning Friday

BRASILIA - Brazilian President Fernando Collor de Mello will be suspended from office as of Friday, pending the outcome of a Senate hearing against him on corruption charges, Supreme Federal Court President Sydney Sanches announced Thursday.

The announcement revised an earlier statement by Senate President Mauro Benevides saying the 43-year-old president would be suspended from his duties as of next Monday.

Following Collor de Mello's suspension Vice-President Iamar Franco, 61, takes over as acting president.

Also on Friday the Senate will convene to open a hearing to determine whether Collor de Mello will retain his post as president.

Mimes study with Marceau

Master-trained professional mimes perform in local schools

By Dave Kazak
Entertainment Writer

When Brian Begley and Mary Inman met in college, they did not expect to study under a mime legend or travel across the country.

Begley and Inman, both professional mimes, performed at Lincoln Junior High School in Carbondale in one of 21 performances at area elementary schools. The shows are part of the Arts in Celebration '92 festival.

The two white-faced performers offered workshops that began Tuesday and continued through today. They also will perform in the actual Festival at Evergreen Park this weekend.

Their show Thursday contained everything from slapstick to juggling to small skits. The pantomime they performed accomplished what Begley called the suspension of disbelief.

"That is where you know something is not true or not really happening, but you forget about that for a while and view it as real," he said.

One instance of this suspension is when kids moaned as Begley pulled imaginary gum out of his hair and ate it.

Begley met Inman in 1981 at The University of South Dakota in an acting class, and the two immediately began putting together mime performances.

"When we met and started doing performances in mime we just exploded with creativity," Inman said. "We were really performing some off-the-wall things when we first started."

In 1984, Begley and Inman were selected out of 60 candidates to participate in a study program with legendary mime Marcel Marceau.

"Working with Marcel Marceau was a life-long dream come true for me," Begley said.

Begley said he and Inman expected to work with one of the many instructors under the legend, not with Marcel himself.

"We were very surprised when Marcel taught all the classes himself," he said. "We thought he was going to be very aloof or something, but he turned out to be very personable and easy to talk to."

Since then, the two have attained bachelor degrees from the University of South Dakota, toured the Midwest, and performed in a dramatic performance entirely in mime.

"Touring gives us an opportunity to share the art of mime," Inman said. "Many kids in the Midwest have never been exposed to mime."

Inman also said the work they do in schools inspires children to be creative in more ways than usual. She said she wants teachers to become more creative in their teaching.

"Using an activity like mime could bring something into a kid's reach that would normally be out of reach," she said. A teacher, she explained, can let kids be the solar system instead of just telling them about it.

Despite their work with children, Begley and Inman said they prefer to work on their mime drama.

"We are working right now on a new drama that is more multicultural and also deals with more serious issues," Inman said. "This play deals with the Native Americans around where we live in South Dakota."

Begley and Inman have three children, who travel around with them during the summer. Although Begley has a love for the road, he expressed a view shared by his wife.

"Being away from the kids is the hardest thing to deal with when we do these shows," he said.

Israel calls for negotiations to discuss peace with Syria

NEW YORK - Israel called Thursday for negotiations with Syria at the highest level in order to discuss peace negotiations.

Calling for a departure from old dogmas and dictates, Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres said top leaders of the two nations should be directly involved in the current bilateral negotiations.

"I call on the President of Syria to set aside his reservations and meet with the Prime Minister of Israel," Peres said in a statement before the United Nations General Assembly.

Earlier this week, Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk al-Shara rejected meetings as an attempt by Israel to undermine the mechanism by which the Arab and Israeli parties have met in the Madrid Peace Conference.

GSPC plans input in SIUC reform

By Julie Birkmann
General Assignment Writer

The Graduate and Professional Student Council took steps to increase understanding of and input into proposals to restructure the University.

At its meeting Wednesday, GSPC decided to develop a committee to help representatives of the graduate programs create defenses for their programs, GSPC President Susan Hall said.

Responding to a suggestion by the Illinois Board of Higher Education to cut 20 graduate degree programs, GSPC wants representatives to help save their programs, Hall said.

"The committee will defend graduate programs to the IBHE, the community and the General Assembly," she said.

The council also discussed progress in graduate students' response to another proposal, one created by Benjamin A. Shepherd, vice president for academic affairs and provost.

Next week, an expanded constituency head group representing SIUC will discuss the campus planning process, GPSC Vice President Bill Hall said.

"The group may decide not to recommend cutting certain graduate programs if the group has no strong feelings against the program, and if students try to defend their programs," he said.

The council also voted to propose a process for students to evaluate Student Affairs personnel and services.

Hall said there seems to be no process for students to participate in the evaluation of services for purposes of peer review or personnel evaluations.

Brett joins 3,000-hit club

Los Angeles Times

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Sometime this winter George Brett will sit down with his family and friends to decide if he will return to the Kansas City Royals in 1993, which would mark the 20th anniversary of his major league debut.

That decision might have become considerably easier Wednesday night when Brett collected hits in each of his first four trips to the plate against the California Angels at Anaheim Stadium to become only the 18th player with 3,000 for his career.

What a way to go — if, indeed, Brett decides to go.

Forget that second baseman Ken Oberkfell, who covers less range than a singing cowboy named Gene Autry does at 85, couldn't get to Brett's soft ground ball in the third inning that became hit No. 2,998.

This was a bravura performance characteristic of a career that has included a succession of them and should be remembered, hopefully, as Brett's way of saying goodbye.

He has nothing more to prove, nothing more to accomplish, really. He has hit .370 in a World Series and .390 across a long series of 162 games. He has hit three home runs in a playoff game and a three-run homer in a game that put the Royals into their first World Series.

He has been on the disabled list 10 times and still managed to hit .300 or better 11 times, drive in 100 or more runs four times and slug 20 or more home runs eight times.

There is nothing left. At 39, Brett's next assignment, after Thursday's series finale and the last three games of 1992 in Kansas City, should be as a Royals' vice president, bidding time until his induction into the Hall of Fame.

The events of Wednesday night only underscored his credentials.

Shaking off the strained shoulder that had forced him to miss the first two games of the series and had cynics suggesting that he was trying to save No. 3,000 for the final weekend in Kansas City, Brett took a few pre-game swings on a batting tee, deemed himself less than 100 percent but able to play, then delivered the 54th four-hit game of his career and fifth of a season in which he was talked out of quitting in a miserable April by his brother, Ken, and Manager Hal McRae.

The blip that Ducey failed to catch and the grounder that Oberkfell came up with only served to get Brett rolling. He roped a single to center in the fifth inning, then reached 3,000 on a wicked one-hopper that ate up Oberkfell and would have done the same to Jose Lind.

Brett was immediately engulfed by teammates at first base, but he would say later that he didn't necessarily see the faces surrounding him. His thoughts, he would say, were on three people who helped shape his career and may have been watching, he hoped.

Free agency socks Redskins in wallet

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Free agency's endless possibilities swept through Redskin Park this week, dominating many hallway and locker-room conversations, bringing some ongoing contract negotiations to a halt and leaving the defending Super Bowl champions considering a world many surely never believed possible.

"Baseball salaries," Redskins linebacker Andre Collins said, drawing the words out. "That's what you think about."

A few weeks after the Redskins completed their most difficult contract negotiations in years, they're now confronted with an offseason that's likely to be even more difficult. They face on one side a rapidly changing marketplace, one that seems likely to include some form of unrestricted free agency for at least a few veterans.

And the timing couldn't be worse, at least for Redskins management, which will have a long and prominent list of unsigned players for 1993 — believed to be 19 in all — including Art Monk, Gary Clark, Wilber Marshall, Mark Schlereth, Kurt Gouveia, Ricky Ervins, Martin Mayhew and others. Only three of their top 13 defensive players — Darrell Green, Bobby Wilson and Fred Stokes — are signed for next season.

The talk of free agency stems from Judge David Doty's ruling last week in Minneapolis, when he granted Philadelphia Eagles tight end Keith Jackson and three other players unrestricted free agency for five days.

Men's tennis to play in tourney

By Andy Graham
Sports Writer

The young SIUC men's tennis team will have a good opportunity to strengthen its team and gain experience playing against quality competition when it travels to the Husker Invitational, coach Dick LeFevre said.

The Salukis will compete against seven of the toughest teams in the NCAA this Friday and Saturday LeFevre said.

"Our goal is to try and be as tough as possible for the conference tournament (which takes place in January). We'll do this by playing good competition now," LeFevre said.

Lecan Conway-Reed and Dawn Barefoot, he said.

"I think they could run in the 17 minute range this weekend, and it will be difficult to beat us because this makes us a national level team," DeNoon said.

DeNoon said this would be the first time in the 10 years he has been at SIUC that so many good teams and individual runners could compete for the top spot.

"We've had 10 years where a really dominant team like Kentucky or Alabama sweep up five of the top six or seven positions," he said.

"This year there would seem to be five or six individuals from several different schools that could win."

The athletes include two time individual champion Lucy Mays from Tennessee, Chattanooga, Laura Simmering from the University of Illinois, who was an Olympic trials participant this year, Debbi Ramseyer of Indiana State, who was Conference champion two years ago and Jenny Schmeichel of Illinois State.

"I don't think we've ever had a field with so many prospective sub-

The toughest team the Salukis will be up against this weekend will be Nebraska, who is currently picked to be the best team in the Big Eight Conference. A key player for the Huskers is Mathias Mueller, who is ranked No.28 in the nation.

"Our whole line-up is pretty solid," Nebraska coach Carry McDermott said. "We're a lot more experienced this season and I'm expecting good things."

Other teams that will give the Salukis a challenge are Drake, which won first last year and Iowa State, which the Salukis faced numerous times last weekend at the Iowa State Invitational. McDermott said Creighton also could be a top contender.

18 minute 5000-meter runners," DeNoon said. "There could very well be 15 girls in this category compared with only three last year."

DeNoon said he felt the Saluki squad could win this weekend.

He said what made the Salukis a good team was that so many girls were vying for the top positions in the team.

"We emphasized from the beginning that this is a team of depth and everybody, no matter what position they're in, has to be pushing somebody ahead of them," DeNoon said.

The team has a trip planned in two weeks for the Rice Invitational in Houston, and DeNoon said the trip is one incentive for the athletes.

"Eight athletes will be able to attend the meet, and it is based on their achievements," DeNoon said. "The eight athletes that have the most points on the board will travel."

The Country Fair Invitational will take place at the SIUC cross country course, west of Abe Martin Field at 10 a.m.

The tournament is a two-day, three-round event consisting of eight teams. On Friday, two rounds of singles and one round of doubles will be played and on Saturday, two rounds of doubles and one round of singles will be played.

Representing the Salukis this weekend will be senior Jay Merchant, who will be playing No.1, freshman Altaf Merchant, who will be playing No.2, senior Tim Derouin will play No.3, freshman Andre Goransson will play No. 4 and freshman Juan Garcia will play No. 5.

"I hope we do better this weekend, than we've done in the last couple tournaments," Goransson said.

played together in competition for the first time last weekend and proved to be a lethal combination, Auld said.

Gallagher said she thought they got along well.

"Katherine is as aggressive in her play as I am, and our styles do match," Gallagher said. "I guess we did pretty well considering it was our first match together."

Senior Wendy Varnum, in addition to her role in Flight I of the singles category, will combine with junior Leesa Joseph in the doubles.

Auld said Joseph had not played in competition yet because of illness and a strained quadriceps muscle.

"I'm hoping that she is well recovered and is able to take the strain of competition," Auld said. "Leesa will have to be patient and keep herself mentally in the match."

Auld said Marquette would be another strong team that should provide good competition.

"I am glad we got in the game against Southeast Missouri State last weekend," Auld said. "It was tough that the weather did not serve our interests, but the outlook is clear for this weekend."

and effort has really paid off and has helped the Salukis game.

"Deb's play has improved since she has worked on her skills over the summer and during the off season," she said. "She has really pulled through for us because we need her when opponents key in on Dana and Stacey."

With a strong performance, the Salukis could go .500 for the season with a record of 3-3, but a loss could send them down in the MVC standings with a 2-4 record.

The spikers will treat the match the same they would any other match, Locke said.

"We have to go out there confident and knowing what we have to do against them," she said.

With a good performance, the Salukis hope to even things up in the conference, Locke said.

"We don't want to dig ourselves in a deeper hole, falling to far behind," she said. "When that happens, we are put in a position where we might think 'We have to win, we have to win,' and we don't want that to happen."

Looking at the Shocker lineup, freshman setter Kori Rosenkranz has seemed to stir things up averaging 11 assists per game in last weekend's matches.

Against Drake, Rosenkranz matched her season-best with 54 assists, and picked up 17 digs and 4 block assists.

The Salukis face WSU at 7 p.m. Saturday in Wichita, Kan.
