Officials search for clues in collision

By Erick Enriquez
Police Writer

A gas cylinder and kerosene heater discovered inside the vans involved in a head-on collision that killed seven people Friday afternoon could have attributed to the fire that engulfed the vehicles, a Lake of Egypt fire chief said.

At about 4:30 p.m. Friday, a 1968 Dodge van driven by Alice Phelps, 43, of Metropolis, collided with a Nissan Van driven by Phillip Janes, 51, of Carterville, on Illinois 148.

Those killed from Carterville were: Janes; Charles R. Church, 57, and his wife, Connie S. Church, 45; Jerry G. Harris, 53, and his wife, Cleo A. Harris, 50.

Three of the Carterville residents were teachers in the Carterville School District.

Mrs. Phelps and her husband,

Dan, 49, also died in the collision.

Williamson County Coroner Monte Blue said Linda Janes, 46, the sole survivor of the tragedy, is in very critical condition at St. Francis Hospital in Cape Girardeau, Mo.

Norm Ruth, chief of the Lake of Egypt Fire Department, said their department is in the process of investigating whether or not there was an accelerator in the vehicle.

"There was a number of items in the white vehicle, where the bulk of the fire was coming from," Ruth said. "One was a 20-pound gas cylinder and it was discovered yesterday by investigators that there was a hole in it.

"If that fuel had been expelled during this incident, that could have led to a heavier fire load. There was

Residents remember those killed in accident

About a half a mile west of Lake Egypt on Illinois 148 Sunday, 1,000 high school students stood near the charred patch of grass where five Carterville residents were killed Friday.

Scattered across the area were plastic remains of the vehicles, cross and heart memorials and several apples for the two teachers, Phillip Janes and Connie Church, who died in the accident.

Also at the site was a bouquet from a student with a card that read, "In memory of my teacher killed in this wreck."

Three other Carterville residents died in the two-van accident:

Charles Church, 57, Jerry Harris, 53 and Cleo Harris, 50.

Also killed were Alice Phelps, 43, who drove the other vehicle, and Dan Phelps, 49, both from Metropolis.

Janes was head baseball coach at Carterville High School, and Church was chairman of the English department at the school.

Mac-Shane Frank, a senior at Carterville High School, stood quietly at the site and said baseball at the school has changed dramatically with Coach Janes' death.

"It will be different — way different," he said. "I can't see playing there without him."

Frank said he is one of many students who has been influenced by Janes' coaching and teaching.

"He was full of life," he said. "He would invite us over all the time to go fishing with him at his pond, and he'd stay after practice to help you."

Clinton reinforces support for Yeltsin

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—President Clinton and his senior advisers Sunday expressed virtually unconditional support for Russian President Boris Yeltsin, blaming his rivals in parliament for the violence in Moscow and signaling that the administration would be understanding if Yeltsin uses military force to end the crisis.

Sunday's bloody events in Moscow were ignited by "a transparent and outrageous provocation" by Yeltsin's chief antagonists, a senior administration official said. "They started it."

He said Yeltsin had told U.S. Ambassador Thomas R. Pickering that the elite troops he had summoned to restore order in the Russian capital would open fire only if fired upon, but added, "It is unrealistic at this point to think" the confrontation can end without further violence.

Asked if this amounted to giving Yeltsin a "green light" to use force, the official said it did not. The U.S. policy of support for Yeltsin and hope that he can prevail by peaceful means "is identical to what it has been all along," he said. "If they have to use force, our view won't be any different."

Clinton was briefed on developments in Russia by national security adviser Anthony Lake, who had talked with Secretary of State Warren Christopher and with Ambassador at Large Strobe Talbott, the administration's chief strategist on Russia, officials said.

Waste officials agree incinerators pose risk

By John Rezarka
Environmental Writer

Two hazardous waste experts raised questions about the safety of incineration Saturday during a community awareness conference about toxic contamination in the heartland.

Two speakers at the conference expressed different views on hazardous waste incineration, but agreed it poses a health threat.

Peter Montague, editor of Rachel's Hazardous Waste News, said incineration always is a bad idea because safer alternatives exist.

Medical waste incinerators, commercial incinerators, Superfund incinerators and cement kilns release a variety of toxics including dioxin, he said.

Recent EPA research shows that there is no threshold level for dioxins, and this means that even small doses of dioxin are harmful to human health, Montague said.

He cited a January 1992 EPA study, "EPA's Scientific Reassessment of Dioxin," that said dioxins cause cancer in humans and can cause immune system and reproductive damage at levels 100 times lower than will cause cancer.

Low dioxin levels are harmful and there is no real evidence that incineration can achieve the destruction and removal efficiencies required by law, he said.

EPA claims that properly functioning incinerators destroy or remove 99.9999 percent of hazardous materials such as dioxin and PCBs are based on

USG to clarify Waight case

Meeting planned for students, faculty to voice concerns

By Tina Davis
General Assignment Writer

The Undergraduate Student Government will meet Tuesday with students and faculty who have questions about the Jose Waight case.

All students leaders who met with Jackson County State's Attorney Chuck Grace last Monday will be at the meeting to help with students' concerns.

USG president Mike Spiwak said he hopes the meeting will clarify any rumors.

"A lot of students don't understand why the manslaughter charges were dropped and we'd like to tell the students what Chuck Grace told us," Spiwak said.

USG vice president Lorenzo Henderson said, however, the meeting will be primarily to discuss the Waight case, but students also can voice their opinions on some of the things going on around campus like jaywalking and program cuts.

"No administrators or city officials are invited to the meeting," Henderson said. "Students seem to have a lot of animosity toward administrators and city officials."

Henderson said he wants to hear what the students have to say without those particular people there to interfere.

Unlike the open forum last spring about Jose Waight, Spiwak does not plan for things to get out of hand.

"I was not there last year, but I heard things got out of hand," Spiwak said. "That won't happen here, because Chuck Grace and the other city officials won't be there for students to lash out against."

Spiwak said they also will discuss ways to keep things like death in bars from ever happening again.

Saluki men runners win home invite

By Grant Deady
Sports Writer

The SIUC cross country program got a big lift on Saturday as both the men's and women's teams turned in strong performances at the Saluki/Country Fair Invite.

On the men's side, Neil Emberton won his third straight individual crown which elevated the Dawgs to another blue ribbon show. Arkansas-Little Rock was the Salukis' closest challenger as SIUC compiled a meet low of 27 points.

Women make strong showing, finish second to Indiana State

Emberton smoked the competition with a time of 24:53 which was 18 seconds better than second place finisher Steve Faley from ARLT. SIUC runners Martin Fysh(25:24) and Garth Akal(25:35) provided the one-two punch that sealed a Saluki victory as they placed third and fourth respectively.

Mark Russell(26:05) also came up big for the host squad finishing eighth, while Saluki's Josh Daly(26:11) and Dan Mallon(26:13) stole 11th and 12th for SIUC.

Race champion Neil Emberton said winning at home sweetened the prize, and he's just going to take one meet at a time.

"I'm pleased that we won, and even more delighted that we won at home," he said.

"Every race I take individually and I give the best I can on that day and what happens, happens."

Going into the Invite, there was some concern that the team may be tired due to their practice schedule. Head coach Bill Cornell said his squad wasn't as sharp as he would have liked, but it was still a big win.

"They(the team) were down a little bit even though we won," he said.

"To beat Illinois State they'll have to do better, but I'm happy with the way they ran and it's just a matter of keeping them fine tuned."

Cornell also said he's well aware of the over-confidence possibility, but thinks his team realizes what's at stake.

"They know we have a good balance, but I just hope they don't get cocky and think it will be easy to win the conference or district," Cornell said.

"Our true test will be this week at Indiana because there will be some nationally ranked teams there."

Not to be outdone by their male counterparts, the SIUC women's team provided some excitement for

"Cowboy" Johnson lassos SIUC; gridgers suffer third straight loss

By Dan Leahy
Sports Writer

LeShon "Cowboy" Johnson showed the Salukis Saturday why he is being tabbed as a possible first-round NFL draft choice.

Johnson, nicknamed "Cowboy," for the Western apparel he wore while being recruited, rushed for 322 yards on 20 carries to lead the Northern Illinois Huskies to a 45-15 victory over the Salukis.

By the time this "Cowboy" rode into the sunset, he already had galloped into the record books.

It was the nation's best rushing game of 1993 and the 19th best in history. It also set an NIU school record for single-game rushing yardage.

The first sign of Johnson's big day came on NIU's first play of the game. Johnson took the hand-off and raced untouched for a 92-yard touchdown.

SIUC head coach Bob Smith said Johnson is a big-time player.

"We got beat by a good team and an All-American, superstar player who is going to be a millionaire someday," Smith said. "He may very well be the best back in the country right now."

Even with Johnson running amok, the Salukis trailed just 28-15 in the fourth quarter. But the Salukis could not mount a charge and were outscored 17-0 in the final stanza.

But Smith said the team will take some positives away from this game.

"We attained some of the goals we set for ourselves in that we had good ball-control, 22 first-downs and 282 yards through the air," Smith said. "The negatives were the big-plays, we can't afford those, but Johnson is a super player."

Another big positive was the play of Saluki quarterback Matt Jones, who started in place of Dave Pierson and went on to play the entire game.

Jones responded by completing 25 of 37 passes for 282 yards with two touchdowns and two interceptions. Jones also rushed for 43 yards on 11 attempts.

Pierson started the first three games, but has thrown five interceptions in the last two games, three of which were returned for touchdowns.

Smith said Jones played himself into the starting spot for the upcoming Gateway opener against Western Illinois.

"After viewing film the better part of the evening, I think Matt Jones production in the Northern game merits that he take the first snap against Western Illinois," Smith said.

Western Illinois marks the end of a four-game road-trip where the Dawgs played three straight Division I-A teams.

Some other notable performances by Salukis included Billy Swain, Greg Brown and Clint Smothers.

Swain caught nine passes for 130 yards and one touchdown, Greg Brown returned from a knee injury to rush for 56 yards before re-injuring the knee and Clint Smothers led the defense with eight tackles, three for losses.

Bradley, ISU send SIU home with two losses

By Kevin Bergquist

PEORIA— Two steps forward, two steps back.

For the second time in as many tries, the SIUC volleyball team failed to move three games over the .500 mark, instead dropping two road matches to fall back to the break-even point.

The weekend losses to Missouri Valley Conference leader Illinois State Friday and Bradley Saturday left the Salukis at 7-7 on the season and 3-4 in the conference.

SIUC head coach Sonya Locke said her squad realizes it must play better if it is going to make a run at the MVC tournament.

"We have a group of fighters on this team, and they believe they can play better, and feel confident they can do what it takes to get things done," Locke said. "They realize to be a championship team, or at least get into the conference tournament, you have to win on the road and win against some good teams."

On Friday, the Salukis came within an eyelash of taking the defending league champion Redbirds to a fifth game, but folded in the fourth game, allowing ISU to win its 16th straight league match.

SIUC, trailing two games to one, led the Redbirds 13-5 in the fourth game, and it looked as though the match was headed to a rally-point finale. However, ISU ripped off the final 10 points of the game to win the match.

Locke said tentative play by her team allowed the veteran Redbirds to come back strong.

"They (the Salukis) felt a surge of energy from the other side of the net and got a little tentative," she said. "To beat a team like ISU there is no way you can play tentative, because they are a veteran team and are not going to roll over and die."

"They didn't and we did." That tentativeness cost the Salukis, who outkilled ISU 52-50, and turned in a strong defensive effort with a season high 103 digs to the Redbirds 64.

"They dug some great balls and made some good transitions," ISU head coach Julie Morgan said.

"They are very disciplined team. They kept adjusting to us, and never stopped coming at us."

The key to ISU's surge was the play of senior all-conference outside hitter Kim Nelson. Nelson

Knicks' snooze in offseason equals another losing year

Newsday

The Knicks spent the summer in their very own Biosphere 2, with nose and fingertips pressed against the bubble, watching the commotion going on outside their doorstep.

It is a very exclusive neighborhood, the one in which the Knicks reside, and yet all the homes on the block have been upgraded.

Except New York's.

At least that's the impression the Knicks will give Friday when they open camp looking the same, while others have fewer wrinkles, thanks to cosmetic surgery.

There's the marriage of Europe's best player, Toni Kukoc, to America's best team, the Chicago Bulls.

The Phoenix Suns, Seattle SuperSonics and Portland Trail Blazers were looking for talent that will take them from May to June on the schedule. Forward

A.C. Green goes to a Suns' team that lasted six games in the Finals.

In Seattle, guard Kendall Gill could be the star he thinks he is. And now here's Portland, with forward Harvey Grant and center Chris Dudley, back from its temporary sojourn to R.I.P. City.

"I've been around long enough to know you never rest on your laurels," said Suns president Jerry Colangelo. "The moment you step backward, two or three others pass you by."

Well, what if you stay put? The salary cap and a reluctance to shave a layer off their nucleus have kept the Knicks stagnant.

But everyone knows there's a point guard problem that needs addressing.

So, are the Knicks staying in one place but sliding back?

Either because they can't, or

$3 MILLION IN U.S. AID ON ITS WAY TO INDIA

Torrential rains and confusion among competing relief agencies are hampering efforts to aid tens of thousands of homeless and injured people in the remote Indian farm region devastated by the earthquake. Saturday, authorities said as many as 30,000 people could be dead or missing. "The devastation is so great that even now full reports have not been received," Prime Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao said in an address to the nation. Senior officials announced Saturday that they will begin accepting foreign aid, including $3 million from the United States.

RUSSIAN POLITICAL CRISIS TURNS VIOLENT

Right-wing demonstrators battled Moscow police Saturday in the most serious clash of Russia's 13-day political crisis, as negotiators for President Boris N. Yeltsin and his parliamentary opposition reached a tentative agreement aimed at settling their standoff. About 300 to 400 demonstrators remained behind the barriers, faced by 4,000 to 5,000 riot police with bulletproof vests and shields and backed up by water cannon.

TUBERCULOSIS EPIDEMIC HITS SWITZERLAND

A new tuberculosis epidemic is erupting in Switzerland, driven by poverty and homelessness, according to a study to be published in Saturday's edition of the British medical journal Lancet. Swiss scientists used new DNA fingerprinting technologies to analyze 45 TB cases that occurred in Berne during 1991-92. The technology allowed them to tell precisely which strain each person was infected by, and trace the origins of each case.

ISRAELI RAID PALESTINIANS IN GAZA STRIP

Israel's army launched a broad raid using helicopters and rockets Saturday against Palestinian radicals, just 11 days before the army is to begin withdrawing. "They're damaging the peace process, not just buildings," the director of the PLO office in Gaza, Sami Abu-Samhadana, said Saturday night. Israel is trying to round up "wanted" Palestinians before it is obligated to turn the West Bank town of Jericho and the Gaza Strip over to a Palestinian autonomous government.

AIDS MOVIE CHARGED WITH INACCURACIES

When the definitive history of this century's titanic struggle between AIDS and biomedical science is written, many knowledgeable scientists say, it will bear scant resemblance to television's first major effort to dramatize that story — the HBO movie "And the Band Played On." The made-for-TV movie, which played on Home Box Office's cable channel seven times in September, purports to depict the early days of the pandemic when several labs were competing, sometimes acrimoniously, to find its cause and to learn how to fight it.

UNIONS EXPECTED TO WELCOME CLINTON

Despite a potentially bitter division over the proposed North American Free Trade agreement with Mexico and Canada, President Clinton and organized labor have so far avoided outright alienation. In fact, when Clinton appears Monday before the AFL-CIO convention in San Francisco, White House aides expect a warm welcome. And for Clinton, that welcome still matters. As a result, Clinton knows, labor support is indispensable to rounding up votes in Congress for everything from his budget package to health and welfare reform.

COST OF VIOLENCE TAKES TOLL ON NATION

For years, medical professionals, health economists and hospital administrators have complained that violence is taking a devastating and expensive toll on the nation's health. Many call it an epidemic, and their frustration is heightened by their belief that violence, like AIDS and lung cancer, can be prevented. Depending on who is counting, the United States spends from $5.7 billion to $18 billion a year on medical care for victims of violence — and experts agree that those estimates are conservative. By comparison, the nation spent $10 billion last year to treat people infected with the AIDS virus, $11 billion on strokes and $13 billion on diabetes.

100 people gather for rally despite storm

By Erika Bellafiore
Minorities Writer

It was a cloudy, dreary night when about 100 people gathered in front of the Interfaith Center on the corner of Illinois and Grand Avenue Friday night.

"Hey, hey, ho, ho rape and violence got to go," chanted people while marching north on the Strip.

When the march began, the wind was blowing and the candles barely stayed lit, but the spirit and mission — to fight back against violence — were alive.

When the group reached the pavilion in Town Square, its destination, a rally began. There were many moving speeches and uplifting acoustic music.

The Take Back The Night March involved a group of men and women who joined together to empower women's safety in the community and on campus.

Margaret Winters, member of the planning committee and self-defense instructor, said safety is a community problem and people need to work with the city and the University.

"The march calls attention to people that the streets are not safe for women," Winters said. "They have a right to go out at night and not be afraid."

Macy Lai, campus safety representative, said she was encouraged at the march because the group was enthusiastic about the cause of the event.

"The march is a way of telling people the safety that exists on campus is not good enough," Lai said. "The entire campus should be lit; why limit people to a few places at night?"

The march signifies the demand both women and men have for better safety and as a way to empower each other in the community and on campus, Lai said.

"The noise and participation represented the concerns of the community and will hopefully get the attention of community leaders and university administrators," she said.

Lai said to see people bonding at the event was empowering.

Jackie Badger, president of Mid-America Peace Project, said the march must go on every year

Despite Friday night's fierce thunderstorms, both men and women made an effort to march against rape. The march began at the corner of Grand Avenue and concluded at the Town Center Pavilion with a rally. Take Back the Night was sponsored by the Southern Illinois Women's Safety Week Committee. The event was instituted in the mid-1980s.

Former SIUC student finds success at CMAAs

By Stephanie Moletti
Entertainment Writer

Former SIUC student Stephen Ennen says his studies in the radio and television department have helped him in the "real world" of radio — and now he has an award to prove it.

Ennen's radio station won best country music station during the Country Music Association Awards Sept. 29.

Ennen is general manager of WUSN 99.5 in Chicago. He left SIUC in December 1976 to begin his long career in radio.

Ennen said SIUC's radio and television program has helped him and many others.

"Half of the people in broadcasting in Chicago are SIUC graduates," Ennen said. "I would definitely recommend students in that field to look at Chicago as a possibility for future work."

"I went there because it was a party school," he said.

"But when I was there the radio and TV program was one of the top three in the country. The professors I had were excellent, all of them had worked in the industry."

Ennen said students should take advantage of the opportunities presented to them at SIUC.

WUSN radio awarded Best Country Music Station

"They have the opportunity right now to be involved in one of the best stations around — WSIU," he said.

"I started out there doing the noon news."

Ennen talks highly of SIUC and its communication program.

"SIUC has a great reputation nation-wide for its communications program," Ennen said.

"From my stand point, the management program is one of the best in the country."

While still in school he worked as a disc jockey for WEBQ AM in Harrisburg. In 1975 he became the FM sales manager and moved up again to general manager in 1979.

It was after several promotions that Ennen left SIUC to try to beat the odds and pursue a career in radio before graduating from college.

Ennen then moved closer to his hometown of Loda, a small town outside of Champaign, to work as staff director at WPGU at the University of Illinois in 1979.

He began working for WUSN as account executive in 1984. He moved up quickly from local sales manager in 1985, general sales manager in 1987 and finally to general manager in 1990.

Ennen said his station has worked hard for the award it will receive this week on stage during opening night of Garth Brooks' four-night sold out show in Chicago.

This is Brooks' third or fourth stop of his tour with the most shows performed in any city including Dallas, Ennen said.

"He (Brooks) is only doing three shows in Dallas and he's doing four in Chicago," Ennen said. "Every night is sold out — that's 80,000 tickets."

Brooks is opening Wednesday in Chicago and will play through Saturday.

Ennen said the award is a great privilege and honor for the station.

"From a station stand point, this is the highest award to be given to a station and we're extremely proud of it," Ennen said. "There were seven stations nominated, and we won it."

Ennen said his country music station has one million listeners out of the eight million people in Chicago.

"WUSN is the most listened to country music station in the country," he said.

"Last week — Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, we did our morning show out of Nashville from the Grand Old Opry. We had 40 country music singers on the show."

Some of the stars on the show included Vince Gill, the new best entertainer, Tonya Tucker, Billy Dean and Restless Heart.

Ennen said he believes WUSN won the award because of its community involvement.

The station is involved with many charities around Chicago, and it does a benefit with the Chicago police and fire department.

All the money raised helps support the families of men killed on duty. It has an annual golf outing to help the Marklund Children Foundation.

The station also gives benefit concerts at Lambs Farm, which houses 150 handicapped adults, giving them a productive life, said Ennen.

Besides its involvement in the community, the station also does its part to help country music overall. It is a major sponsor in New York's Country Takes Manhattan, Power Country Radio, which brings in the top 100 advertisers showing them country music is listened to, and that companies should advertise their products on country music stations.

"Our number one commitment is to provide the listener with a product which is exciting to be listening to," Ennen said.

SIUC student captures first place, speech reflects personal struggle

By Melissa Edwards
General Assignment Writer

SIUC student Lisa Shumpert was annoyed when her high school speech teacher told her she would not be allowed to take a class because she had a bad attitude.

But when she needed a way to help pay for college, that same attitude gave her the confidence to apply for a scholarship that, ironically, was based on public speaking.

"I'm going to send that teacher a letter about this scholarship," she said with a laugh.

Shumpert, a freshman undecided major from Chicago, won a $2,100 scholarship for her speech titled, "The Power and Responsibility of the Church in These Troubled Times," sponsored by the National Baptist Convention USA.

She won the national competition Sept. 8 in New York City.

Shumpert said she has faced a lot of adversities in her life, and many of her convictions come from these hardships.

"My father died when I was seven, and after he died it was like going from riches to rags. My mother had never paid a bill in her life," she said.

Her father Walter was the former alderman of the 24th Ward of Chicago. Her mother, Eloise, is a teacher in the Chicago public school system.

While it was difficult growing up without her father, her mother made certain she had her priorities straight, Shumpert said.

The importance of an education, along with problems such as drug abuse and prison, and as Shumpert says, black issues, were all components of her speech.

"I used a reach, teach and develop idea in my speech. We need to reach out to people when they are Christian babies, teach them how to live, and then help them develop their lives.

"I closed with a quote from Martin Luther King that said the ultimate measure of man is not where he stands in moments of comfort and convenience, but where he stands in times of challenge and controversy. I filled in the word 'church' for 'man' to end," she said.

She said public speaking has given her new confidence.

J. Thomas Williams graduated from SIUC with a degree in forestry and said he wanted to work outdoors, but now he works indoors, behind an administrator's desk at the University.

Williams, assistant-dean for administration at SIU's School of Medicine, received the Outstanding Administrative-Professional Staff Member Award Sept. 23.

Philip Lindberg, director of Touch of Nature, works with Williams on the Administrative and Professional Staff Council.

"I nominated Williams because he is an outstanding assistant dean for administration of SIU's School of Medicine. He has made numerous contributions to the medical school and the college," Lindberg said.

Williams said he became an administrator by circumstance.

"I got married when I was a sophomore here (at SIUC) and took a full-time job as a lab assistant," Williams said.

"I always wanted to be outdoors, but I enjoy solving problems and assisting program coordinators, chairmen and directors in meeting needs for their programs."

He began this job in 1971, making him one of five employees in the newly formed SIU School of Medicine.

Today, Williams said his job involves assisting each medical school department head at Carbondale to make sure their department's needs are met.

One of the problems he has been successful in solving is acquiring additional space for the medical school with the construction of the new biological sciences building.

Williams said when he started working for the medical school it was assigned 600-square-feet. The Carbondale school will have 80,000-square-feet of space when the new building is completed.

As for the future, Williams said he looks forward to seeing the school provide expanded rural health services.

Williams said the roots of this project already are in place with Family and Community Medicine. The school already has clinics in Belleville, Quincy, Decatur and Carbondale.

Valuable assets lost along with teachers

TEACHERS PLAY A PRIMARY ROLE IN shaping the lives of the children they touch, and often serve as one of the most important influences with which they will ever come in contact. Whether they are elementary, high school or college educators, they hold the key to tomorrow's generation in their hands. Sometimes one good instructor can make all of the difference between success and failure.

A traffic accident Oct. 1 stripped the children of the Carterville School District of the opportunity to learn from three remarkable educators, and their lives may never be the same. Phillip E. Janes, language arts teacher at Carterville Junior High School; Connie S. Church, English and speech teacher at Carterville High School; and Cleo A. Harris, fifth and sixth grade teacher at Carterville Grade School, along with Charles R. Church and Jerry G. Harris were victims of the accident. Janes' spouse, Linda, was the only survivor.

THE LOSS OF THESE TEACHERS WILL NOT only affect the children enrolled in their courses, but also will reach far beyond them to future generations. No longer will students be able to benefit directly from their knowledge and understanding, and the void may never be filled completely.

The tragedy has brought the community together to provide the comfort each member requires in this time of suffering. The role the remaining teachers must assume will not be easy, in that they will serve as the support systems for the children who have been cheated by this act of fate. The memory of those who have been lost must be preserved, and the standards of teaching they upheld carried on in the educational system.

Children must be reminded of the value these teachers brought into their lives and should use them as a standard of excellence by which to judge their own accomplishments. Many positive things can come from a tragic loss, and the ambition to carry on with their education, and reach levels these educators would have expected them to should be one of them.

THE AMOUNT OF DEVASTATION FELT BY THE entire community will remain for some time, but the bonds created through the support they provide for each other in this time of need will last forever. It has been said there is strength in numbers, and this is a prime example of the need for that strength. It is never easy to lose a family member and the Carterville community lost five.

As the citizens of the community mourn their loss they will not be alone. Everyone who has ever suffered a similar tragedy will be with them, and in time the area will recover from the accident. They will never be able to replace those who have been lost, but the values they instilled in their students will carry on as their legacy forever.

Death of SIUC student causes finger pointing to locate blame

The extremely unfortunate death of an SIUC student at a local dance club last year has re-entered the public eye in the last few days via the news. This time though, the concern is over bringing justice to those involved and holding those responsible accountable for their actions.

This seems to be where the finger pointing begins. Who is responsible for the death of this student, which occurred after he had to be forcibly removed from the premises because he would not leave when told the club was preparing to close for the evening.

Of course, I'm talking about the death of Jose Waight which many seem to believe was caused directly by the intervention of six doorman who were needed to remove him from the inside of the club and then restrain him until the police arrive to handle the situation.

The doormen are now the subject of criticism and blame for the death of Mr. Waight. They are being made out to be the evildoers and the complete parties at fault by many students and especially by their elected officials in the USG and the GPSC.

The doorman in bars are not there to intimidate the patrons or act out some power-trip, as many seem to believe.

They are there to help the customers have a good time and keep them safe while on the premises. Mr. Waight was described as violently out of control as well as quite intoxicated.

His refusal to leave the club at last call only illustrates how he chose to make things difficult for the doormen who were trying to do their jobs. Mr. Waight was still posing a perceived danger to others when he continued to act violently outside the club and the doormen had to restrain him until the authorities arrived to take over.

Now people are calling for justice by convicting all of the doormen on charges of manslaughter, even after the state's attorney has thrown out some of the charges.

It comes down to this; has Mr. Waight left the premises when told like the other patrons, he would probably still be here today and this entirely confusing situation would not have transpired.

Justice will be served by those who know the facts better than any of us or anyone on the USG or even Ms. Hall of the GPSC.

Blame will fall on the most deserving.

Professors, students need to claim responsibility for poor teaching quality

I am writing in response to a comment made by the Dean of Liberal Arts, John Jackson, in the September 30th article on the "mirror" booklet.

His comments state that most teachers teach their class the same every year and that it is the attitude of the students that make the class successful or not.

I find it hard to believe, Mr. Jackson, that you have been teaching this long and can make such a one-sided statement.

I am a very good student and I approach every class with the attitude that I am going to do the best that I can.

Sometimes I get a teacher who has fallen in a rut of standing in front of the class and rattling off names and dates as we write them down in a half daze because they are so boring.

Then there are teachers like Dr. Fredrick Williams of the University Honors Program, who teaches GEC 330, Classical Mythology.

This class has the potential to be another boring names and numbers class but it isn't because this man captivates his students. Just show up at his class some day.

How many GE's do you know of that at midsemester, if you nor there 5-10 minutes early, the only seats left are on the floor?

This is in Lawson, not Fanner. So, Mr. Jackson, student attitudes are only half of the story; the other half belongs to you and the rest of the faculty.

Take responsibility for it.

because of new people on campus. "When people are put into a new environment they often lose perspective and get carried away," Badger said. "This often implies unwanted situations, it comes down to valuing and honoring the dignity of others."

Badger said it makes him feel sad when people do not feel safe or secure.

"It worries me when I see how much people deny there are problems while so many are suffering," he said.

Badger said the violence portrayed on television and in the movies projects images that do not reinforce people's values.

He said there used to be a lot more lighting on campus and it bothers him that not much is being done.

"Out of a multi-million University budget it is ridiculous that people have to argue over a couple of tens-of-thousands when people's safety is at stake," he said.

Lorenzo Henderson, chairperson of the Unity Coalition, said this was the first time he participated and it was a great experience, because people of different races and gender collectively came together to fight against problems people face.

Todd Schlender, co-director of Gays, Lesbians, Bisexuals and Friends, said GLBF was marching to show its support for women.

"We want to warn people and help make people feel safe," Schlender said. "Not all men and women are committing acts of violence — there are people who care."

Kevin Green, co-director of Black Affairs Council, said he is glad Women's Services had this program, but they cannot change things themselves.

Green said when men get involved with events involving women's concerns and issues it makes them more aware.

Laura Pate, a graduate student in recreation from Boone, N.C., said it is important to share support for people who have suffered violence.

"The problem won't be solved until people's values change, and they instill basic respect for all people," Pate said.

SIUC student Dawn Taylor, a junior in special education, graduated from Carterville High School in 1991 and had Connie Church for English.

"Mrs. Church was a wonderful teacher, and she'll be deeply missed by everyone," Taylor said.

Andy Dawson, a 1988 graduate of Carterville, said his return to the town from Chicago last night was a solemn experience.

"I saw people standing out in their yards with blank looks on their faces that I've never seen before," he said.

Dawson had both Church and Janes as teachers, and said his memories of both are lasting.

"I had Coach Janes my freshman and sophomore years, and he was a player's kind of coach we all respected," he said. "He will be sorely missed."

Dawson said Church was a very special teacher.

"It's a crushing blow for our community," he said.

The loss of two teachers has affected the entire school, and Carterville School Superintendent Gale Dawson said help will be available to anyone who needs it.

"There will be 25 or 26 counselors to serve the staff and students," he said. "We're going to try and present some pro-active material in small group settings, but individual counseling will also be offered."

Dawson said school will be open today, but will dismiss one hour earlier. Carterville schools will not be open Tuesday when a combined memorial service will be at 10:30 a.m. in the Carterville High School gymnasium, he said.

Lake of Egypt Fire Chief Norm Ruth, whose department was first on the scene, said an accident of this magnitude necessitates counseling for everyone involved.

"In the last 15 years, we've found that when firefighters go through a very serious trauma, it is best to get everybody who was on the scene together and have counseling," he said.

Flags at Carterville High School remained at half mast Sunday.

assumptions, Montague said. Although temperature, oxygen and carbon dioxide levels are constantly monitored, levels of toxics are not.

Montague also said the testing procedures used to measure an incinerator's effect on the environment and ability to remove toxics are inadequate.

Risk assessments that measure the potential impact of incinerators on people and animals in the area are subjective, unscientific studies, he said.

"There is no way to scientifically measure multiple exposures to more than one chemical, he said.

"Risk assessment is a bogus technique," Montague said.

"It is not a science, it is an art," Montague said.

Trial burns only test the ability of incinerators to operate properly under ideal conditions, he said.

"During the day-to-day operation of an incinerator, things can go wrong," he said. "During a trial burn, everyone is on their best behavior."

When incinerators are not operating properly, high levels of toxics can be released into the atmosphere, he said.

Machinery breaks, people are fallible, personnel changes and people relax, he said. There are plenty of opportunities for things to go wrong.

Storing hazardous materials in concrete reinforced buildings is a much safer alternative to incineration, Montague said.

As safer waste disposal technologies develop, the hazardous waste can be treated.

The U.S. Navy is using a chemical method to clean up PCB contamination at a naval base in Bakersfield, Calif., he said.

"There are a dozen ways to deal with the PCBs besides incineration," Montague said.

"There is simply no need for incineration at Crab Orchard or other places," Montague continued.

Environmental consultant Dward Kleppinger said incineration is a potentially effective technology, but it is not being done properly.

"I believe in the technology," Kleppinger said. "Incineration can work, but not how we're trying to do it."

Incompetence of incinerator operators, design flaws and poor regulatory enforcement make incineration hazardous, Kleppinger said.

Better technology and management, along with more enforcement, is needed, he said.

The EPA is destroying incineration with kindness,

Kleppinger said. It is promoting the technology without enforcing the regulations.

The public does not trust incineration because violations are being ignored, he said.

Cement kilns are releasing tons of toxics into the atmosphere, he said.

EPA enforcement and monitoring has been weak, and breaking the laws is more profitable than obeying them, he said.

Kleppinger said cement kilns in Missouri burned 200,000 tons of hazardous waste in 1991.

This is three times the amount proposed for incineration at Crab Orchard and it is an ongoing problem, he said.

Kleppinger said an incinerator that does not meet regulatory standards should be shut down.

"A permit to burn hazardous waste is not a right," he said. "It's a public trust and responsibility."

Instead, the companies operate on interim permits for years and continue to violate environmental regulations, he said.

Kleppinger said mobile hazardous waste incinerators such as the one proposed for Crab Orchard are risky because they tend to be under-designed.

The more safety features an incinerator has the better, he said.

'Phantom' promises spectacular show

By Emily Priddy
Special Assignment Writer

Gaston Leroux's 1911 novel "Le Fantome de l'Opera" has been the subject of literally dozens of dramatic interpretations, but never has there been a more romantic version than Andrew Lloyd Webber's Tony award-winning musical "The Phantom of the Opera."

The timeless story of the tormented, disfigured genius who haunts the cellars of the Paris Opera House and his love, the beautiful chorus girl-turned-diva, came to life before a sellout crowd last weekend on the stage of the Fox Theatre in St. Louis.

Understudy William R. Park, who plays the title role during matinees, does not sing as dramatically as the original Broadway Phantom, Michael Crawford.

Besides being a talented actress, Sylvia Rhyme, as Christine, has the kind of voice her predecessor, Sarah Brightman, can only dream of possessing. Christine is a highly demanding role, requiring tremendous vocal control and an extensive range.

One of the highlights of the show is "Phantom" newcomer John Schroeder, who gives an outstanding performance as Christine's childhood sweetheart, Raoul de Chagny.

While the part does not require the vocal stamina demanded by the two other principals, Raoul's duet with Christine, "All I Ask of You," gives the audience a glance at Schroeder's abilities.

The show is beautifully staged, from the dramatic unveiling of the gilded chandelier, which rises from the stage to its place high above the audience during the overture, to the Phantom's mysterious disappearance in the final scene of the musical.

The makeup also is incredible — when the Phantom is unmasked toward the end of Act Two, his deformities are shocking even in the 25th row.

Anyone who has not heard "the music of the night" needs to get out the plastic and call for tickets now, before all the performances between now and Nov. 6 sell out.

Local group, club support efforts through annual AIDS fundraiser

By Katie Morrison
Health Writer

What started as a fun drag show at Club Paradise has evolved into a community support fundraiser for AIDS.

Rick Young, benefits coordinator for the club, 213 E. Main, said he and a friend thought it would be funny to dress up as the famous country singers the Judds.

The crowd loved it so much, they begged for an encore performance, Young said.

"People kept asking us to do it again, so I thought, 'Why not turn it into a fundraiser?'" he said.

Young's idea obviously worked — the club raised more than $4,000. Club Paradise will have its second annual AIDS benefit at 8 p.m. Oct. 10 at the club.

For a $5 cover, people can bid in an auction for prizes donated from local merchants, see 30 different entertainers and give to a good cause.

All of the event's proceeds go to the Southern Illinois Regional Effort for AIDS, Young said.

Kathie Kurtz, president and volunteer coordinator of the group, said the benefit has helped expand the organization's scope and services.

Because of the proceeds from last year's benefit, the group was able to offer emergency financial help, individual counseling, volunteer training and a family and friends support group, Kurtz said. The group also expanded from Jackson to Williamson counties.

More importantly, the expansion of services has put the group in a position to apply for grants, she said.

Because the group is all volunteer work and its resources are spread thin, a grant would be the key in providing the group with necessary office space, a 24-hour hotline and a paid staff for administrative services, Kurtz said.

The club does not limit its fundraising efforts only to AIDS — other benefits the club has sponsored are for the Women's Center and St. Jude's, Young said.

There is a social stigma that the club is primarily gay, but there is a need to get beyond the labels, he said.

"We need to get rid of barriers," Kurtz said. "The club is assisting the community regardless."

"We are working toward the same goal," she said. "Education is the most powerful weapon — we have to get beyond thinking AIDS won't touch our lives or that it's a gay disease."

a kerosene heater in the back seat of the white Dodge van."

Ruth said investigators from the fire marshal's office, state police and Williamson County Sheriff's Department, inspected the vans after the accident and there will be a follow-up investigation by his department today.

"Right now I can't definitely say there was an accelerator used," he said. "The things that point to the possibility was the heavy black smoke hydrocarbon and a lot of red flame."

Eye witnesses said Phelps drove off her side of the road and steered into the path of Janes, Blue said.

When Ruth arrived on the scene he said, he noticed it was a "beyond the normal" vehicle fire. Lake of Egypt firefighter

Randy Shafer was coming home from work when he passed the Nissan van and saw the the Dodge van lose control, he said.

"In a split second they collided," Ruth said. "He saw glass flying and immediate involvement of fire."

"In the process of Shafer putting on his coat and helmet, the windows already had blown out of the van," Ruth said. "It means there was extreme heat and we're trying to determine what was causing that."

Other individuals aided Shafer in pulling three of the victims from the van, Ruth said.

Frank Huffstader, assistant chief of the department, said the fire was an ordinary fire to extinguish.

"At the point we pulled up, any hope for life was nil."

'Age of Innocence' shines on big screen

By Thomas Gibson
Entertainment Writer

Martin Scorsese's new film "Age of Innocence" adds to the filmmaker's track record of brilliance behind the camera.

Scorsese's love of New York comes full circle in this time-piece set in the late 19th Century.

The passages of Edith Wharton's Pulitzer Prize winning novel help tie together a movie which is superbly acted and beautifully filmed, possibly one of the best of the year.

Daniel Day-Lewis is Newland Archer, a lawyer who senses there is more to life than the intricate social dance of a few hundred members. Lewis, virtually in every scene of the movie, is excellent as Archer.

Film Review

Michelle Pfeifer portrays Ellen Olenska, the unconventional woman who seems to offer Archer a way out of his stifling world. Pfeifer's performance is stylish, both Lewis and Pfeifer's performances may have them celebrating at Oscar time.

The triangle at the center of the plot is completed by Winona Ryder as May Welland, who is supposed to marry Newland Archer.

Scorsese, who is totally out of his depth this time, directs "Age of Innocence" with the same passion as his previous works, "Raging Bull," "Goodfellas" and "After Hours."

Tribalism always has been Scorsese's best subject. Wharton reminds us that it is her subject, too, saying that her overly civilized characters are not all that far removed from their Saxon ancestors.

The film is about how societies defend themselves from instability through the considerable reward of marriage, love and children.

But that perhaps is too sociological of a description of complicated fictional work that is comprised of people with basic human traits like rage, jealousy and hypocrisy — not to mention gluttony and lust.

Works of literature seldom become movies we can tolerate, let alone call great; the "Age of Innocence," though, is an exception. The film is rated PG and is playing at the Varsity Theater.

for bouncers or maybe some rules on the amount of forced use on a person," he said. "I also know that when bars are up for their liquor license, the board looks at how many arrests for underage drinking were made, as well as how many times the notice have to come out."

This method stops bars from calling the police in fear of losing their license, thus allowing accidents like this happen, Spiwak said.

Henderson said he hopes a lot of students come out.

"We need to hear the voice of the students so we know what they're thinking."

The panel will include Spiwak, Henderson, Hall, Bill Hall from GPSC, Kevin Green from Black Affairs Council and Willie Ciannan from USG.

The meeting will be at 2 p.m. in the Student Center Auditorium.

Knicks officials say they don't have to do anything.

"Not at the risk of breaking up what we worked so hard to build," coach Pat Riley said. "We have to take responsibility for what we have and who we are. We can't always be begging for reinforcements. Let's get another player, get another point guard, get another shooter. Somewhere that's got to stop. We've just got to go forward."

"I'm very confident with this team. I don't care what the perceptions are."

Instead of supplementing their talent, the Knicks will continue to draw from it.

So maybe John Starks can be a 20 point scorer, and Hubert Davis a serviceable sub.

Perhaps Greg Anthony will repay Riley's trust with fewer mistakes, and Charles Smith with more impact games.

And maybe Rolando Blackman and Doc Rivers won't qualify as spokesmen for Clinton's health plan.

But the tendons in Patrick Ewing's 31-year-old knees are starting to burn. And so, it seems, are the Knicks' title hopes.

had 15 kills, including four straight in game three.

Junior Deb Heyne and sophomore Heather Herdes both tallied in double figures for SIUC. Heyne tied for a match-high with 15 kills, while Herdes notched 12 kills to go with 20 digs.

Saturday's trip 40 miles to the west yielded similar results, as the Salukis held their own defensively, but sputtered on the offensive front to drop a 3-1 decision the Lady Braves.

SIUC won the w/g war 76-68, but hit only .122 and had 36 hitting errors. BU hit for a .259 clip and had more kills (68-58) in winning their third straight match.

the hometown fans too.

If it weren't for a powerhouse Indiana State squad, the Salukis would have swept their competition as well.

The Sycamores edged SIUC 24-41, due in part to their big four combination of Debbi Remseyer, Amy Cohee, Amy Lathrop and Tana Dahman.

Remseyer stole the individual crown clocking in at 17.55, before her other three teammates packed in to grab third, fourth and fifth places.

SIUC then brought in a wave of their own as Cathy Kershaw (18:26), Karen Gardner (18:38) and Deborah Dachler (18:52) took sixth, seventh and eighth to challenge

"Bradley is very much improved and they deserved to win the match," Locke said. "When you go against a team that is going to punch it at you, you end up playing catch up."

SIUC was indeed playing catch-up from the get-to as BU stormed out to a 8-1 lead in the first game and used the same sputts to win the third and fourth game.

Heyne recorded a double-double to lead the SIUC charge. Her 17 kills and 21 digs were both match highs. Herdes also notched a double-double with 14 kills and 13 digs.

Locke said she told the team to look ahead, not back at the winless weekend.

Indiana State.

Jennie Horner (19:01) and Kim Koerner (19:01) made things even closer by placing 12th and 13th overall for the Salukis.

Head coach Don DeNoon said he knew of Indiana State's capabilities, but he's happy with the progression of his athletes.

"I'm excited about the fact that we're slowly catching Indiana State and maybe we can pick them off by the end of the year," DeNoon said.

DeNoon also said he thinks his runners are more than capable of challenging the Sycamore standouts.

"I have no doubt about us being able to break them up," he said.
