Midterm progress reports suggested

TENTATIVE: USG passes resolution requesting seven-week progress reports.

JACOB LIVENGOOD
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Students at SIUC could receive midterm grade reports after Undergraduate Student Government passed the first step of a resolution requiring instructors to issue progress reports during the seventh week of the semester.

The vote came at Wednesday night's USG meeting after an hour of debate on the issue.

For the resolution to be implemented, USG President Kristie Ayres said the next step is for all other constituency groups to approve the resolution, such as the Graduate and Professional Student Council. The resolution will then go before the Dean's Committee and the policy change would be made by Provost John Jackson.

The resolution, which recommends that all students receive midterm reports on their grades on the Monday of the seventh week of classes, has not been passed or discussed with the GPSC.

It was originally geared only toward students with a GPA under 2.5 for the class, but concern was raised about students with GPAs above 2.5 knowing where they stood in classes.

Senator Melissa Carlson said the resolution should be for all students. "If I am getting a B, I want to know what I need to get for an A," she said. "This is a privilege."

USG President Kristie Ayres said the resolution was written because students have little opportunity to drop classes, especially for courses with only a midterm and a final. Ayres said there are no grades sometimes until week nine in those classes, which causes the student to miss drop dates and receive a WF.

She said a WF has many harmful effects on students, including hindering financial aid, having permanent status on the students' transcripts and unregistering the student.

Nearly 1,300 students were dropped with a WF this past summer, Ayres said, and 900 of those students were able to fix the problem. Of those 1,300 students, she said 400 of the students probably had to leave the University.

"They left, and we did not tell them how they were doing," Ayres said.

The resolution states that students will have five full class days to meet with their instructor and with the financial aid office for guidance and allow them enough time to drop the class.

Disseminating the information was also of concern to USG. Methods of distribution included U.S. mail and the Internet.

USG decided to rid the portion of the resolution calling for the reports to be mailed, and members wanted higher authorities to handle the issue of distribution.

Senator Brian Atchison said mailing the reports to students' local addresses was costly and would cause great difficulty.

"It will be hard to find each students' local address," he said. "There will be a lot of people upset if they are mailed out. It will cost a lot, and some students' local address is their parents' address."

Ayres said there would be some resistance if the reports were mailed since the volume of mail would be so great.

USG requests community service as alternate to fines

LABORING FOR LIQUOR: Substitution for underage drinking fines awaits City Council's consideration.

The Undergraduate Student Government unanimously approved a resolution Wednesday evening urging the Carbondale City Council to revisit discussions about community service.

The resolution supports the idea of community service and calls for the formation of a panel to coordinate the program in the community.

The panel would be made up of a City Council member, a representative of the Carbondale Police Department, USG City Affairs Commissioner Connie Howard, a student representative appointed by the USG President Kristie Ayres, a Graduate and Professional Student Council representative, and a Carbondale citizen.

USG Vice President Jackie Smith said she believes this is an important resolution. "We are looking at alternatives forms of penalties," Smith said. "I think it will be a positive thing for city."

Smith said the issue will go before the City Council at the next council meeting on Tuesday in the Student Center.

This is not the first time the City Council will have looked at the issue of community service.

In January 1998, City Attorney Paige Reed submitted a report to the City Council to look at the advantages and disadvantages of a community service program in Carbondale.

After extensive discussion, the council voted 3-2 not to pursue a program and said it would look at the issue again in a year.

Mayor Neil Dillard, Councilman Mike Neill and Councilwoman Maggie Flanagan voted against the program. Councilmen John Budstick and Larry Briggs voted in favor of a community service program.

The Illinois Municipal Code provides that the governing body of a municipality may pass all ordinances and make all rules and regulations it sees necessary.

John Hicks, safety officer with the SIUC Center for Environmental Health and Safety, discusses fire safety issues with students outside Neely Hall Wednesday afternoon. Hicks told students what type of fire extinguishers to use on different types of fires and how to use them properly.

Recent deaths spark fire safety education

PREVENTION: Carbondale firefighters educate students in campus residence halls about fire emergencies.

THORRIE T. RAINEY

Nhemya Ward braced herself as she pulled the pin to the fire extinguisher. The water-like substance squirted out of the can and drizzled on the small gasoline fire.

Ward, an undecided freshman from Chicago, had never used a fire extinguisher before this fire safety demonstration.

But she now is beginning to understand the importance for students to learn about fire safety. She is even starting to feel confident that she will not panic if she is ever in a fire.

"If a fire ever breaks out I'll know what to do," Ward said. "I think that it's very important for a student to know about these things."

Numerous fire-related deaths of college students prompted residence halls to educate residents about fire safety. At 4 p.m. Thursday in front of Neely Hall, the Carbondale Fire Department took time out to educate students on ways to battle fires.

Police Blotter

UNIVERSITY

- A 28-year-old student reported that sometime between 3:30 p.m. and 4 p.m. Wednesday she was walking in Evergreen Terrace when a man, who was walking behind her, ran up and pushed her down. The suspect is described as a white, 135-pound male, 5 feet 7 inches tall, with brown hair and brown eyes. The suspect was last seen wearing a white T-shirt, faded blue jeans and black shoes. The woman was not injured in the incident.
- A 25-year-old female student reported that sometime between 3 p.m. and 3:45 p.m. Monday, she lost her wallet on a Saluki Express. A University Police officer contacted her to let her know someone tried to use her credit card. Suspects have been identified in the incident, which is under investigation.
- Andrea Hughes, 19, of University Park was arrested at 9:02 p.m. Wednesday for driving without a valid license and possession of cannabis. Hughes was arrested in Lot 35 east of Boomer Hall after University Police stopped and questioned him during an investigation. Hughes posted a cash bond and was released.

CARBONDALE

- Anthony E. Anderson, 19, of Carbondale was arrested at 2:14 a.m. Thursday on South Illinois Avenue on a Jackson County warrant for failure to appear in court on an original charge of underage possession and consumption of alcohol. An officer recognized Anderson in a crowd, and he was taken to Jackson County Jail to wait an appearance before a judge.

Tunnel vision

SNEAKING A PEEK: SIUC's underground tunnels may be interesting to look at, but pose a threat to trespassers.

ANGIE ROYER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Flashlights swept through the underground tunnels below Woody and Pulliam Halls in September, 1995. Secret Service members examined every pipe, valve and crack to ensure President Clinton's safety when he visited SIUC.

The heat from the steam-transporting pipes caused the Secret Service members to sweat and feel suffocated. They crawled under and over piping within the six foot by five foot area of the tunnels.

The tunnels are a system of pipes that carry five to seven miles of steam pipes, electrical wiring and telephone services for the campus. The tunnels mainly are used for transferring and distributing steam.

The steam in the tunnels is used to generate the centrifugal chillers that provide chilled water for the air conditioning and provide heat for the buildings on campus.

Chancellor Jo Ann Argersinger was the first SIUC chancellor to tour the tunnels in July.

"I decided I wanted to go down there, and see the condition of the tunnels myself," she said.

The pipes in the tunnels that carry the steam can severely burn a person, even if they only touch the pipe for a second. The heat index in the tunnels can get as hot as 150 degrees Fahrenheit in the tunnels during the summer.

The upkeep of tunnels falls under the responsibility of Scott Pike, superintendent of maintenance and construction.

"We try to keep things secure," Pike said. "Anywhere there is an entrance we try to keep them secured and locked."

People who find the tunnels fascinating and want to explore them are discouraged from doing so if they find an unlocked entrance because of the threats that exist.

"It can really be a dangerous place if the lights aren't working and you are trying to navigate the tunnels without a flashlight," Pike said.

Not only do the tunnels contain hot metal piping, but there are also huge valves into which people could stumble. There could be animals such as possums or raccoons, or insects such as poison nous spiders wandering in the tunnels.

TEN SCHULTZ/DAILY EGYPTIAN

This tunnel below Harwood Steam Station extends throughout the University.

Because the tunnels are underground, there is no way for anyone to know if someone else is in the tunnels. Walking in the tunnels poses another danger because of the fact that some dripping pipes may leave puddles.

"The floors aren't dry everywhere, and the person could possibly slip, and nobody would know they are down there," Pike said.

The most life-threatening possibility is a development of a steam leak. If a person was in the tunnels when a leak occurred, a person would suffer from burns and not be able to breathe.

"It could kill you," Pike said.

The Physical Plant's maintenance and construction policy states that at least two people can work in the tunnels at a given time. In case an accident occurs, the other would be able to get out of the tunnels and get help.

After Argersinger's tour of the tunnels, she was able to see the dangers that exist in them and the importance of maintaining their safety.

"I got a sense of the hard work and dedication from the people in charge of the maintenance of the steam tunnels," Argersinger said.

The tunnels are of vital importance to the University regarding the steam distribution and other utilities that run through the tunnels. Without the tunnels, many campus buildings would not be able to have heat, air conditioning, phones or electricity.

Pike said that although some people may be curious about the tunnels and want to see them, it is better if they do not try to venture below the campus.

"We try to keep them secure, and we would like unauthorized people to stay out of them," Pike said. "They are dangerous, and if a person would be there during a steam rupture, it could be life-threatening."

Study reveals administrative problems

REVIEW: Report suggests changes to several University organizational functions.

SARA BEAN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A study released by the University Thursday reported that several administrative functions within the SIUC campuses are being performed inefficiently.

The study, done by accounting and consulting firm Arthur Andersen, looked at the University's organizational structure to try to identify the problematic areas.

The three major areas the study targeted were procurement functions, payroll functions and accounts payable functions.

Jim Roth, a partner with Arthur Andersen, said the administrative changes recommended in the report may raise some eyebrows.

"It is a very big deal," Roth said. "People are used to what they are doing. There is a lot of uncertainty and disbelief that this is really going to happen."

Roth met with constituency heads Thursday morning to explain the results of the study. Board of Trustees members were briefed about the findings a couple weeks ago.

He said there was a lot of interest in what the report had to say, but there were also several concerns.

"They all want to know what this is all going to mean to them," Roth said. "What it means and how it all rolls out."

The report said the procurement, payroll and accounts payable functions are duplicated on every campus, and the University could save money by centralizing these functions to one campus.

Though Roth said he realizes the importance of campus autonomy, sometimes students call for compromises that can diminish it.

"Campus autonomy is something that is very important to each campus," Roth said. "However, if under pressure to perform more efficiently, changes may have to be made that can change the autonomy."

The report also said the campus management often focuses on resolving issues in terms of campus location, with only limited concerns in regard to effects on the entire University.

A few examples the report offered regarded information technology functions, labor relations functions and institutional research and studies functions.

The report recommended the University adopt a shared service approach or examine outsourcing for those specific functions.

Roth said the report also included a recommendation to look at the efficiency of the vice chancellors and vice presidents of the University.

University, city made second annual Pig Out a success

Accolades of success surround the second annual Carbondale Pig Out as Carbondale officials share their feelings about this year's turnout.

"Having a year of experience helped the event to run smoothly," said Joel Fritzier of the Carbondale Main Street Foundation. "We had a really good mix of students and other residents."

More than 13,000 Carbondale residents, students and non-students alike, showed up to enjoy the food and fun behind 710 Bookstore on the weekend of Sept. 18 and 19.

Fritzier said the weekend went well. He only had to use one battery for his cell phone when last year he had used three to make sure things were running smoothly. Next year the city hopes to have more barbecue teams.

Connie Howard, city affairs commissioner for Undergraduate Student Government, also believes the Pig Out was a success.

She said the weekend was proof that the city and the University could come together "at an event with alcohol present without any problems. She was surprised to discover that USG had more volunteers than they needed for the weekend."

"I'd like to thank all of the students and residents that helped out to make the weekend possible," Fritzier said.

Next year's Pig Out is scheduled for Sept. 17 and 18.

WASHINGTON

New program to ensure greater aircraft safety

The Federal Aviation Administration, which launched an "aging aircraft" program after an Aloha jetliner lost a chunk of its roof in 1988, Thursday announced a companion program to help assure that aircraft systems such as wiring and fuel systems do not fail as they grow older.

The program, which grew out of the investigation of the in-flight explosion of Trans World Airlines Flight 800 that killed 230 people in 1996, includes stepped-up inspections of wiring, a long-term research program, a model-by-model assessment of each aircraft type and other items.

Exact details will be worked out as the program evolves.

A year-long detailed inspection of five older aircraft — three McDonnell Douglas DC-10s, one DC-9 and one Boeing 727 — found such items as deteriorating wires and cracked insulation, corrosion, excessive dust on bundles and metal shavings from maintenance work. Inspection procedures were vaguely defined and sometimes overlooked, and there was no process to identify and address catastrophic electrical failures.

But Federal Aviation Administrator Jane Garvey said the inspections confirmed that properly maintained older aircraft pose no safety dangers.

"Did we find anything that tells us we should take planes out of service?" she said. "The answer is no."

Our Word

City Council should reconsider penalty

The Carbondale City Council should seriously consider revising its penalty for underage alcohol violations.

On Wednesday, the Undergraduate Student Government unanimously passed a resolution asking the City Council to revise its penalty for underage consumption and contributing to the delinquency of minors. The current fine amount is $250 for first-time offenders, but the USG is suggesting in its resolution that "community service being issued to those citizens receiving the first offense... in lieu of or in conjunction with a drastically reduced fine."

The DAILY EGYPTIAN supports the USG recommendation but is concerned that City Council members will not entertain the idea. USG has worked with councilmen John Budzick and Larry "Skip" Briggs to draft the proposal, but other City Council members and the city attorney seem less interested.

A Jan. 20 report written by City Attorney Paige Reed that examined the pros and cons of adopting community service as a penalty appeared strongly biased against the idea, hinting that the city is not taking the proposal seriously. In the report, there were three positive impacts listed for adopting community service: more power to the court ("the court would have different options to choose from when imposing a penalty..."), deterrence ("persons, such as juveniles or college students, who may not be deterred by the financial impact because their parents normally pay for it, will suddenly have to be responsible for their actions..."); and indigent offenders ("for persons who cannot afford to pay the fine...").

But the report heavily illustrated the negative impacts. Those included the expense of enforcing community service, less power for the city (more power for the court), decrease in municipal revenue, minimal deterrent effect, loss of job opportunities for students because they are pulling weeds rather than pursuing a career, the community service does not motivate unemployed people to find a job and the liability of the city if a person is injured while performing community service. Obviously Reed put greater effort in her report to defeating the idea rather than looking for positive benefits.

The negative impact of revenue loss is a poor reason for not revising the penalty ordinance violations. The report stated the city receives $400,000 annually from city court fines. The report further stated that "if community service is imposed in 25 percent of city court cases, then the city can expect the General Fund to decrease in the amount of $100,000 a year."

Is this saying that the city of Carbondale relies on its citizens to violate city ordinances to fill a large chunk of its budget? That is an unrealistic and asinine expectation.

Reed's report also stated that the city contacted 40 municipalities in Illinois and found that only four incorporated community service into their penalties for city ordinance violations. According to the report, three of the four municipalities said they no longer enforce community service because of reasons similar to the cons stated in the Reed's report.

The DAILY EGYPTIAN agrees with USG in saying that college towns like Carbondale are different from many cities and may need different laws to effectively govern its citizens.

From all the pros and cons presented in Reed's report, the only fact evident is that the city will lose revenue if it adopts the community service penalty. The remaining points are pure speculation and balance each other.

The DAILY EGYPTIAN supports USG's effort to correct bad public policy and hopes that the three other voting members of the Carbondale City Council consider acting like progressive representatives rather than irresponsible city accountants.

The (first) five sins of men

When I started asking women what five things men did most to aggravate them, I didn't know what I was getting into. Let me tell you guys — we're in trouble.

Women really hate us. I got pages of lists back, some 20 items long. I got answers ranging from the banal to the bizarre, including men who take showers with their dogs, stop brushing their teeth and showering when relationship begins, men with lower sex drives than women and men who are afraid of vibrators.

When I asked the girls at work, they warmed up with my list and then continued cursing men for the rest of the night. I accidentally created the level of hell that Dante missed.

So, I went into hiding and compiled the lists together and came up with the first annual Chris Kennedy "What Men Do Wrong" survey. Here are the top five responses.

1. Lying. This was on 120 percent of the surveys I got back. Some women put it down two or three times. It appears that women believe we lie about everything from our income to our age, and even our status in relationships. The interesting thing is that the word "lying" does not appear to be in the male vocabulary. We don't say, "I'm going over to Billy-Bob's to drink beer and lie." We say, "I'm going over to Billy-Bob's to drink beer and shoot-the-bull." As far as we're concerned, what you girls call lying is actually a socially accepted form of communication among males.

2. Cheating. There really is no explanation for this phenomenon except "biological" and that excuse is so cliché I refuse to entertain it. Cheating is an awful thing to do, and it's a shame that it has become so prevalent in today's relationships.

3. Pick up lines. I've never heard a woman complain when an Adonis-type guy walks over and mutters some ridiculous line. They only complain when the aesthetically challenged do. I've never used pick-up lines before, but I had a roommate down in Miami who used them all the time with great success. He told me the trick was to start laughing before they did.

4. Bad in bed: I place the blame squarely on the women for this travesty. Almost every woman I've slept with has told me that sex was great. Right, I wonder what they tell their girlfriends. I'm not nearly egotistical enough to believe that I've been great every time. How could it be possible when women never tell men how to improve? (And women say that we don't communicate well!) They just faldly pad our ego and hope that it will somehow make us better.

5. Leave the toilet seat up. I'm for division of labor on this subject. Why should the man have to lift the toilet seat up before he uses the bathroom and then replace it after he's finished? If a man is courteous enough to lift it every time, the woman should share the work-load and put it back down. It's only fair, and isn't fairness what women are striving for in today's society?

Looking back on my comments here, I have an urge to delete this entire mess and write an article on the joys of renting movies alone on a Saturday night.

If I'm foolish enough to submit this to my editor and it appears in print, I'm afraid that is what I'll be doing for the next two years, or however long this dastardly piece haunts me. My mother has assured me that if this appears in today's paper (which it appears it has) I will never get a date again — ever. But consequences be damned! I'll stick a fork in my social life after next week's article: "What Women Do Wrong."

I'll see ya'll at Blockbuster.

Students need to be more aware of Internet rules

Dear Editor,

Many people come to college not realizing that using a university e-mail address to conduct business activities is a violation of state law and school policy. What should be a matter of common sense can quickly become a search for the Holy Grail for those who try to rationalize breaking the law with access to their university's Internet server.

to guard with determined spirit. We do not find many statutes denying us these rights as students.

The state, however, does not owe us the right to make use of our University's Internet server in the interest of commercial enterprise. Nowhere in the Bill of Rights will we find any vague reference to such a concept. We may not like this restriction, but as long as it is the law we must abide by it. Students who spend their time surfing the net as entrepreneurs might be better served remembering who they are and why they are here at SIUC. Opportunity to learn the law and other useful information in the practical world is right at our fingertips.

Those who knowingly allow the laws of the state to be broken and do not report such incidences to law enforcement officials are not responsible enough to keep their positions of authority in the University. A university is an institution wholly reliant on enforcement of the laws and is not simply an opportunity for anyone's immediate and private monetary gain or pursuit thereof. With Microsoft Hotmail running advertisements (such as the one in the September 8 issue of the DAILY EGYPTIAN) giving students false information, it is little wonder the law is not respected. Microsoft is wrong. There are many things we cannot get just because we want them. I would think that the editors of the DAILY EGYPTIAN would know this as well.

Extreme measures

NO LIMITS: SIUC Outdoor Adventure Club ready to launch its first Extreme Team Adventure Challenge race Nov. 7.

BURKE SPEAKER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A dream that began two years ago for Chris Follmar, president of the SIUC Outdoor Adventure Club, is now a reality as applications for the first Extreme Team Adventure Challenge are released on the Internet.

The Extreme Team Adventure Challenge is a triathlon race that features canoeing, mountain biking and orienteering through the forested areas in Touch of Nature.

Sponsored by the Outdoor Adventure Club, the race starts at 8 a.m. Nov. 7 at Carbondale's Touch of Nature Little Grassy Methodist Camp.

EXTREME

Those interested in participating or volunteering in the Extreme Team Adventure Challenge can contact Chris Follmar at 457-6054 or Clint Knox at 549-2670. Applications are available at <http://www.siu.edu/~outdoor>.

Applications on the Internet are the only way teams are able to sign up for the race.

Follmar, a senior in recreation from Rockford, said sleepless nights while trying to locate funding were part of his mission to bring a nationally popular event to Carbondale.

"I hope it gives, not just the students, but the city and community something fun and competitive to do," said Follmar.

Follmar, who is in charge of the race, said growing interest in the race has spread. Teams from 13 states outside of Illinois have expressed interest.

People everywhere from Alaska to Florida are listed as prospective applicants in the triathlon.

"It's just amazing to see all this interest in a little plan you had from way back," said Follmar. Carboz Nightclub, 760 E. Grand Ave., and Shawnee Trails Wilderness Outfitters, 222 W. Freeman St., are two area businesses sponsoring the event, and Follmar said is seeking more sponsors and volunteers.

Bree Rankin, a senior in exercise science from Beardstown, said she is volunteering to organize the canoeing segment of the race. She is getting excited as the race date gets closer.

"It's going to be pretty extreme, you could say," Rankin said.

An idea that started with 15 to 20 organizers has become a race featuring an estimated 60 teams and "countless volunteers."

"It's panic time now," Follmar said. "People are writing in from all over to join or to help out."

Readying equipment, clearing the racetrack and printing up passports for team members keep the volunteers busy, and Rankin said plans for the race are all slowly coming together.

"We have a way to go, but we're getting everything organized and ready for the race," Rankin said.

Each team member is issued a passport the day of the race. The passport is stamped at various stops throughout the race that will enable them to continue.

The first segment of the race involves canoeing eight kilometers with checkpoint stops requiring the passport.

Teams then face orienteering, which is finding way through the forest with a map—a six-kilometer trek through various checkpoints throughout the forest.

The last part of the race is mountain biking through a 12-mile loop of forest trails.

There also are mystery events during the race.

Follmar said there is a lot of interest in what the mystery events are, but he is keeping them a secret. "A lot of people want to know what they will be, but all I can say is it is outdoor related," said Follmar.

The race will focus on being ecologically safe as well as on being a test of endurance, determination and teamwork.

In the spirit of the race, any team that does not finish together will be unranked.

Fliers featuring more information about the race are available throughout at places including Carbondale Cycle, 303 S. Illinois Ave., Shawnee Trails Wilderness Outfitter and the SIUC Recreation Center at Base Camp.

Follmar said the race will bring an alternative, thrill-seeking form of entertainment to Southern Illinois.

"This is something that Carbondale has not seen before," Follmar said. "We're bringing cutting edge racing to the area."

Family Weekend!

SIUC opens its door this weekend to the parents of students.

STORY BY
DANA DUBRIWNY

TOURS, MOVIES, CONCERTS, DINNERS, BOWLING, THEATRICS AND FOOTBALL GAMES ALL MAKE UP THE ANNUAL SIUC FAMILY WEEKEND, SPONSORED BY THE STUDENT PROGRAMMING COUNCIL.

Activities on Friday will include a motorized train ride tour of the SIUC campus starting at the Student Center, a showing "City of Angels," in the Student Center Auditorium, and a concert featuring the nationally known singing group, the Blenders, who will be performing in Student Center Ballrooms.

McLeod Theater will present the classic American murder play, "Machinal," a classic American murder play will be presented in McLeod Theater in the Communications Building today and Saturday. Directed by Brandon Burton Belzer, the theatrical entertainment will inspire audience from all walks of life.

On Saturday, the day is packed with fun filled events for the entire family. The "Fit for Life Race" will begin at 8 a.m. at the Carbondale Civic Center. This 5K run is sponsored by the Carbondale Police and Fire Department.

A program titled, "The Classroom Experience," will put parents of SIUC students in the classroom environment to help parents understand what their children face everyday.

After being lectured by professors, parents are invited to the Tailgate Picnic to be entertained and indulged in free donuts and coffee. The Saluki Family Carnival, sponsored by Non-traditional Student Services, will be occurring at the same time as the picnic so whatever their fancy, parents are sure to have a good time.

The Greek Sing, sponsored by Inter-Greek Council, will take place on the steps of Shryock Auditorium. The informal competition will allow various sororities and fraternities on campus to express their musical side. The competition will consist of different themes that each chapter will do, such as a sports theme or a skit of Grease II.

Manya Paunovic, the public relations officer for Inter-Greek Council, said she hopes there will be a good turn out for the Greek Sing. Paunovic also is a member of the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority and will be participating in the event.

"The competition should be a lot of fun," Paunovic said. "This is more fun, actually, than anything we do—even if we don't win."

The competition will be judged by a panel of six people who will evaluate choreography, music, costume, originality, comical, group participation and voice projection. Trophies will be handed out to the winners.

The highlight of the afternoon will be the Saluki Football game. The Salukis will play at 1:30 p.m. against Southwest Texas State University at the McAndrew Stadium. At half-time, the Family of the Day contest winners will be announced.

The highlight for the evening will be SIUC's first Saturday "Welcome to Campus Dinner," which will be hosted Chancellor Jo Ann Argeringer.

This dinner will give parents and students the opportunity to see the chancellor in an informal setting.

Andrew Daly, the executive director of SIUC, said the dinner provides a good opportunity for parents to come out and meet the chancellor.

"This is a way to make the parents feel at home, like they are a part of the SIUC campus," Daly said.

Celebrating the Arts

October Days offer many creative activities during the SIUC's Family Weekend.

Raffle tickets for the house are $1 and will be on sale throughout the festival. The winner will be drawn on Sunday before the cake is cut. Proceeds from the raffle are being earmarked to support summer art scholarships for area kids.

Food
A food court filled with award-winning regional favorites will include barbecue, seafood, vegetarian specialties and Neapolitan dishes.

The 17th Street Bar & Grill, of Murphysboro, will offer hard-to-resist world-famous ribs, baked beans, cole slaw and potato salad, and Seafood Specialties brings back its popular New Orleans-style cooking with grilled shrimp and a new dish — alligator stew.

The Neighborhood Coop will round out the menu with its vegetarian Jellights, and Kings Concessions will provide plenty of sausage, chicken and hot dogs.

The work of dozens of Southern Illinois painters, sculptors, potters, weavers and jewelers will be sold at this booth-oriented weekend gallery.

Here the 10th anniversary sculpture, a forest of individual tiles painted by area artists and assembled to create a collage of regional art, will finally be dismantled and the art pieces sold.

Parking
There will be a free shuttle service provided Saturday and Sunday from the SIUC Student Center and the SIU Arena Parking Lot to Evergreen Park.

Priority Parking will be available in the McLafferty Road Lot, Gate 3, for $5 per car. Handicapped parking is available at Gate 1 on Pleasant Hill Road.

According to festival director, Nancy Stempfer, close to 500 local artists will be participating in this year's festival and up to 10,000 adults, teen-agers and children are expected to attend the event.

"This is exactly what the name says," she said. "It is to celebrate culture and communication. You can walk into the festival and see these things that are important in our every day lives."

"It is a seven-acre park filled with art and music for two days. There are magical places if you're small enough that are a more artsy form than you'd see in Disney World. If you haven't been to one yet, you owe it yourself to go."

STORY BY
DANA DUBRIWNY

WHEN PARENTS ARE ROLLING INTO TOWN TO VISIT THEIR STUDIOUS OFFSPRING FOR FAMILY WEEKEND, ONE THING REMAINS CLEAR — THE LOCAL BARS ARE NOT THE MOST IMPRESSIVE WAY TO DISPLAY CARBONDALE TALENT.

There will be, however, an ensemble of aesthetic achievement at Evergreen Park on Pleasant Hill Road for the 10th annual "Arts in Celebration: October Days" provided by the Carbondale Community Arts.

This two-day arts jubilation, open from noon to 6 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, will celebrate visual art, dance, music and performance art. There will be six performance stages, interactive exhibits, a marketplace and a variety of food.

Performance Arts
Six stages located at the west end of the park will provide ample musical and theatrical talent including jazz as David & Roselyn, the Irish jubilee of the Dorians, blues artists of Mr. So & So, Beatles tribute Dr. Robert and the funky-jazz sound of the Groove Merchants.

The Community Performance Ensemble will educate and entertain through traditional and contemporary dances of Africa, the West Indies and North America; The Stage Company, the Carbondale Community High School Theater and the SIUC Theater will present performances throughout the weekend.

Art for Kids
Located in the center of the park will be a walk-through, crawl-through, touch-and-feel, look and laugh storybook garden that is surely absent in Mickey Mouse's backyard.

An "art house" located at the end of the garden will be raffled off at the weekend's closure and will serve as an artful gazebo for a young artist.

Liquid Soul

Acid jazz band comes to the Copper Dragon.

STORY BY NICOLE A. CASHAW

ACID JAZZ IS THE TERM DEFINING LIQUID SOUL'S MUSIC, BUT ACCORDING TO MARS WILLIAMS, THE GROUP'S ECLECTIC SOUNDS SURPASS THE GENERIC GENRE.

"Acid jazz is a term originally from England," Williams, saxophonist and leader of the band, said. "It's a mixture of hip-hop and jazz. I say we're beyond acid jazz."
"We use elements of Latin, funk, R&B, hip-hop and mid-eastern flavoring. It's a multitude of different sounds of musical genres mixed into one."

Liquid Soul will perform its hybrid collection of hard-driving and energetic rhythms at 10 tonight at the Copper Dragon, 700 E. Grand Ave.

When acid jazz was flowing into the Midwest, Liquid Soul was at the forefront. Liquid Soul erupted from a small underground scene in Chicago. There, the band blended instantaneously into the surge of music, and soon it began appearing every Sunday night at Chicago's Elbo Room.

Along with its unique style of music, Liquid Soul's diversity in band members adds copious flavor to the music.

The 10-piece band includes Williams, The Dirty MF, rapper/MC; Ron Haynes; trumpet; John Janowiak; trombone; Rickie Showalter; bass; Dan Leali; drums/percussion; Tommy Sanchez; guitar; Newt Cole; percussion; Ajax; disc jockey; and Simone, vocalist.

One style of music isn't the limit for Liquid Soul. The band is all about incorporating as many fashions of music as it pleases, and making the music sound good.

"The band is a musician's dream band," Williams said. "We're able to experiment with so many musical styles. There are very unlimited boundaries as far as what we can do as a band."

The band independently produced its first self-titled album, which was soon picked up and distributed nationally by Miles Copeland's record label, Ark 21. The band's second album, titled "Make Some Noise," has elevated the wide ensemble beyond the term "acid jazz."

Liquid Soul produces an array of musical sounds that harvest pure dance music with intricate funky beats.

"It's all about fun," Williams said. "We really involve the audience in our music, and everyone gets blown away because it's a really powerful sound."

Seeing the satisfaction among its audience is what keeps Liquid Soul's energy abundant.

"To see the audience reaction, to see people with smiles on their faces and having a good time—that's what it's about," Williams said. "Everyone will have a good time vibin' with the band and we will with the crowd."

At 10 tonight, Liquid Soul will take the stage at the Copper Dragon, 700 E. Grand Ave. Admission is $6. For more information call 549-2319.

Entertainment in Brief

CARBONDALE Evening of classics

Beginning its season with flagrant sounds and musical renditions, the SIUC Symphony Orchestra performs at 8 p.m. Tuesday in Shryock Auditorium. The flowing sounds of Aaron Copland's "Outdoor Overture" is the opening ensemble for the show, and Nicolai Rimsky Korasakov's "Scheherazade" is scheduled to conclude the performance.

Special guest to the concert is former Sen. Paul Simon. Simon will narrate Sergei Prokofiev's classic tale, "Peter and the Wolf." Admission is $3 for general, $2 for students, children and senior citizens. Season tickets are available.

For information or to order tickets call 453-2787.

CARBONDALE Dark drama opens tonight at McLeod

Murder, love and deceit are all mischievously entangled within the seams of McLeod Theater's opening production, "Machinal" at 8 tonight.

"Machinal," directed by Brandon Burton Belzer and written by Sophie Treadwell, is an inspirational play surrounding the events that occurred in Ruth Snyder's life.

Snyder, infamous for the Snyder-Gray murder trial of 1927, was sentenced to the electric chair after she murdered her husband. She claimed he constantly belittled her and held her to never-ending comparisons to his previous ancee. The production also will be shown on Saturday, Oct. 9, and 10 at 8 p.m. and on Oct. 11 at 2 p.m. Admission for the show is $10 for adults, $8 for senior citizens, $5 for children and non-SIUC students and $5 for SIUC students with valid identification. For further information call 453-7581.

CARBONDALE The Blenders to mix up Family Weekend

For a pop-cultural twist of music the Blenders will perform its mixtures of talents for audiences at 8 tonight in the Student Center Ballrooms.

The concert is sponsored by the Student Programming Council as a part of the Saluki Family Weekend series.

For further information call 536-3393.

CARBONDALE Nobel Prize poet to perform at Shryock

Irish poet Seamus Heaney prepares to capture audience members in his spiritual reading of poetry at 8:30 p.m. Monday in Shryock Auditorium.

Heaney is the 1995 recipient of the Nobel Prize in Literature. He currently is Ralph Waldo Emerson poet-in-residence at Harvard University.

The reading, sponsored by the Irish and Irish Immigration Studies, is intended to provide a wide array of works selected by Heaney. The event is free.

Union of Music

Husband and wife duo to play Cousin Andy's CoffeeHouse after international tour.

STORY BY KELLY E. HERTLEIN

DYNAMIC DUO, DAVID AND ROSELYN, WHO HAVE SPENT THEIR LIVES DEVOTED TO EACH OTHER AND THEIR MUSIC, RETURN FROM A TOUR IN GERMANY TO PERFORM AT 7:30 TONIGHT AT COUSIN ANDY'S COFFEEHOUSE, 402 W. MILL ST.

Married in 1959, David Leonard and Roselyn Lionhart casually met when Lionhart was performing upbeat sets for the men of Randolph Air Force in Texas. Since their union, the couple has been performing folk-blues and jazz for audiences around the globe.

"Most of our lives are in or at least revolve around music," Lionhart said. "We love each other very much, and we just love traveling and making music together."

The New Orleans jazz combination plays authentic Delta-style country blues. The duo's eclectic band is known for its humor, style and intricate instruments.

Lionhart introduces unique and complex sounds into the performance through African finger panels (a small wooden box played by running fingers over tiny openings cut from the top of the box) and a mandolin.

Lionhart became interested in folk-blues after her family taught her to appreciate the old sounds of folk by encouraging her to take-up the violin.

"In my background, I was given all of the keys to folk music when I was growing up," she said. "I played the violin through junior high and high school, and then I taught myself how to play the other instruments after that."

The band performs for several schools throughout the year in hopes to introduce a new style of music to younger crowds. Lionhart said the current generation is in a trend toward rock music, and she and Leonard hope to supply new ideas and sounds to the students in their audiences.

"My son is still trying to convince me rock is music," she said. "We have traveled all over the country, with several audiences and in several schools. We put new music in the schools; we are making music in the schools, and we have played for just about every state in the Union."

Despite the difference in ethnicity, the couple has found a shared love for traditional folk.

"There is a black and white culture, but it is overall American," Lionhart said. "We will argue about things, just like everyone does, but our arguments are more like brother and sister."

"He grew up with many of the same inspirations as I did. We both love the music; we love what we are doing, and we love each other."

Many of the songs the duo performs are original tunes, written mainly by Lionhart. She says many of their songs are humorous and intended to lighten the spirits of the listeners.

"We do a song called 'Dirty Ole Men,' and we are thinking of dedicating it to President Clinton," she said. "I write more songs than David."

"Sometimes I just quickly grab a notebook and write down what I'm thinking before I forget it; other times I will hear a phrase or it will pop into my head, and I will look for something I can do with it."

The couple said that music is a family foundation. Lionhart said there may have been a time when music was not the main focus of the family, yet those days are far behind.

"We went with music because it is more fun than anything else," she said. "We really enjoy it. I guess you could say ... we have always loved it and expected to perform and have a living at it."

David & Roselyn will perform at 7:30 tonight at Cousin Andy's CoffeeHouse. Suggested donations are $5 for adults, $3 for students and low income individuals and well behaved children are free.

For information call 529-3533.

The duo will also perform at noon on Saturday at the Arts in Celebration at Evergreen Park on Pleasant Hill Road.

For information call 457-5100.

Two reasons to go see 'Ronin'

The term "ronin," as explained to me by the opening title of the film, "Ronin," is the name given to a dishonored Japanese Samurai warrior who must freelance himself as a thief or a murderer.

John Frankenheimer's "Ronin" is a tale about an elite group of misfits and ex-intelligence agents brought together to chase a suitcase all over the prettiest towns and cities in Europe. Its characters have all been dishonored in the past and would, presumably, want to use this opportunity to restore their honor. But think again, this movie doesn't dig that deep.

There are, though, two big reasons you should cough up your money to see "Ronin."

BEN NEMENOFF
MOVIE CRITIC

1. In what seems to be a welcome trend ("Rounders" and "Simon Birch"), this film boasts an impressive cast. The star of this show is Robert De Niro as ex-CIA man Sam. Jean Reno, Skipp Sudduth and Stellan Skarsgard make up the rest of the team, with Jonathan Pryce as their elusive employer.

It's not everyday you see De Niro in an action film, and he handles the load with the accuracy and professionalism that has made him famous. The weight of the film is on him, especially since it seems that the script was written with him in mind. 2. Director John Frankenheimer still has it. He takes a dull and unoriginal script and jams it full of slick camera movements, nice scenery and two very elaborate car chases. He turns water into wine.

This is not surprising though. If anyone can take a thriller, it's Frankenheimer — he practically wrote the book.

Still, "Ronin" is no "The Manchurian Candidate," and the reason behind that is the script. It's cluttered and pointless. It fails to present anything useful or anything I'd take with me. There's no moral and certainly no soul.

The whole thing has this "Ooooh, look at us! We're writing a thriller!" feeling about it, and it serves as a dark cloud over what is the rest of the film. Thankfully, we have Frankenheimer, his people and his cast.

RATED "R" for language, violence, and lots and lots of car crashes.

MONICA

THE BOY IS MINE

With the rush of R&B teenage vocalists coming on the scene, it's sometimes hard to keep track of them all. Brandy, Mya, Aaliyah and countless others are battling for record sales and recognition. Only the best and the baddest can survive.

Following the release of Brandy's latest album, the music world anticipated one from her competitor and friend, Monica. Monica, whose vocal stylings make Brandy's voice sound like a preschooler, has disappointed her fans in this sad attempt of a second album.

Produced by Dallas Austin, who had also produced her debut album,

"Ms. Thang," Monica's sophomore album entitled, "The Boy Is Mine" sounds like Austin had a long list of priorities and making a quality album for Monica was not one of them. Out of the 13-track CD, only the first four songs are of tolerable quality.

After the fourth track, the rest of the album goes down hill fast. Unless you can appreciate depressing love songs back to back, I suggest that you don't buy this CD. Monica tries to change her image from an immature teenager to an adult, but the style that she tries to display in this album does not fit.

It's a shame that an artist with remarkable talent can be forgotten so quickly. Oh well, better luck in her third album.

TRIBE CALLED QUEST

THE LOVE

Q: Tip said in an interview prior to the release of "The Love Movement" that the group has taken enough chances in creating a hip-hop album that dealt mostly with the subject of love.

So what's with all the negative and lukewarm reviews that I have been reading since the middle of the summer? Some critics said that "The Love Movement" was too laid back and monotonous.

No, the album is not all over the place adventurous as "The Low End Theory" or "People's Instinctive Travels and Paths of Rhythm." And it is not a classic like those two, but that does not mean that it is not a very good hip-hop album.

Maybe, that's the problem. We hold Tribe to standards that we don't even mention when talking about other hip-hop acts, and we are so inclined to shoot down classic artists when their albums do not sound like their past classic work. Please, This is 1998. To want "The Love Movement" to sound like the "Low End Theory" would be ludicrous.

So, take "The Love Movement" as it is: a very good hip-hop album. And remember that, while other groups may have caught up to Tribe in the art of moving butts, very few can move the mind as well as they can. In that sense, they always will succeed forever. Give up the props.

A murder is committed Agatha Christie style, and the question is "Whodunnit?" The murder mystery play "The Hollow" premieres at 8 tonight at The Stage Company, 101 N. Washington St.

NO SLEEP AT 'THE HOLLOW'

STORY BY
NICOLE A. CASHAW

WITH HALLOWEEN SLOWLY CREEPING AROUND THE CORNER, NOW IS THE TIME TO UNLEASH THE SCARY STORIES AND MYSTERIES THAT RECYCLE THEMSELVES YEAR AFTER YEAR.

"The Hollow," a play written by the well-known murder mystery writer, Agatha Christie, will premiere at 8 tonight at The Stage Company, 101 N. Washington St.

"It is a murder mystery similar to the play she uses in many of her books," Michael Lehker, director, said. "It takes place at a country estate outside of London named 'The Hollow' where Sir Henry and Lucy Angkatell live."

The play encompasses romance and humor but mystery is the driving force of the action. The question is "Who killed who?" — is it the wife, the mistress or the butler? This mind-boggling play is perfect for those who love to solve mysteries.

The play will continue for three weekends, ending on Oct. 18. The play begins at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday and at 2 p.m. Sunday. Tickets for Friday and Saturday performances are $7, and Sunday tickets are $5.

Lehker said he has always contemplated directing a murder mystery because of his love for mystery.

"It's been something I've been wanting to do for a while," Lehker said. "I like mystery. I was an advocate for this show because it's a classic mystery, and we haven't done many of those."

Lehker said the play is being performed at an ideal time of the year because of Halloween being just a few weeks away.

"Mysteries are fun and entertaining," Lehker said. "It seemed like a good time to do it because it's fall and Halloween is coming."

"The Hollow" has a cast of 12. Performers include Jane Klucker, Ken Collins, Karen Huntley, Emmy Trout, Roy Weshinsky, Steve Falat, Signe Skinton, Brenda Bender, John Lipe, Amy Clark, Mark Beyke and Lee Brackett.

Brackett said Lehker has done a wonderful job directing the play and communicating with the characters.

"Mike lets people develop their own characters," Brackett said. "He's a lot of fun to work with."

Brackett said he has performed in 15 plays, but he particularly likes the character he is playing in "The Hollow," which is the detective.

"I enjoy the part I get to play," Brackett said. "You get to be the one who questions everybody. You get to be the one who figures out the mystery — it's kind of like being Sherlock Holmes."

Since the play takes place in London, all the characters have been practicing for five weeks trying to perfect their accent authenticity.

"Most of the people are doing very good with the English accents," Lehker said. "Agatha Christie tends to be on the verbose side, so we've been working hard to keep the energy going."

Lehker said the play will probably run two hours and 15 minutes, but the mystery of it will keep the audience intrigued.

"I think the play should be enjoyed," Lehker said. "It's not a lot of very tense moments. I think people will have a great time figuring it out."

"The Hollow" takes the stage at 8 tonight at The Stage Company, 101 N. Washington St. Admission price is $7 for Friday and Saturday and $5 on Sunday. The play's final show is on Oct. 18. For ticket information, call 549-5466.

THE SKINNY:

Support group debunks media image of starving-model look.

ASTARIA L. DILLARD
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Angela Chatman said she is happy with her body and who she is even though the perfect woman often is portrayed as tall and slender.

"It does not personally affect me because I have learned to accept me for me, and I have a high self-esteem," Chatman, a junior in social work from Chicago, said.

Women's Services Body Image support group, which meets every Monday, offers women the chance to feel comfortable with who they are and to share their experiences and concerns with each other.

MEETING

•The Body Image support group meets 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. on Mondays. For more information, contact Theresa Sharpe at 453-3655

The support group addresses the issue of the way women feel about their bodies and the effects that others have on women's perceptions.

Theresa Sharpe, a counseling and administrative assistant at Women's Services, said the irony is that most of the models that women try to emulate are not perfect.

"People should realize that even the women in the media that seem attractive and perfect in society's eye still are not happy with themselves," Sharpe said.

According to The Body Image Workbook, published by MJF Books in New York, studies show that one-fourth to one-third of a person's self-esteem is related to how they feel about their body image. If the person has a poor body image, they will have poor self-esteem, which equals low self-worth.

According to About-Face, a San Francisco-based group which combats unrealistic images of women in the media, a study in 1986, showed that 69 percent of females on television are thin. Only five percent are overweight.

Sharpe said body imaging is a big concern for women, and the issue needs to receive more attention.

Sharpe said one of the problems is the message that women get from family, friends and other sources. These messages maintain that in order to be successful, women need to be beautiful and perfect.

Seattle gets new MS research center

WASHINGTON DAILY

SEATTLE, Wash. (U-WIRE) — A $3.5 million grant awarded to the University of Washington Medical Center earlier this month will help establish the nation's first Multiple Sclerosis Research and Training Center.

UW currently treats MS patients in the MS clinic. The clinic and the Research and Training Center both will be administered by the Department of Rehabilitation Medicine.

In addition to the 750 patients the UW already treats, the center will be able to add 1,200 patients to take part in a wide range of research studies.

The federal grant, given by the National Institute on Disability and Rehabilitation Research, will last five years, after which time UW must reapply. New York's Albert Einstein Medical College has received the money the past 15 years.

Security Council renews warning to Yugoslav leader

LOS ANGELES TIMES

UNITED NATIONS — The U.N. Security Council sent a new warning Thursday to Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic over reported atrocities in Kosovo, and White House national security adviser Samuel R. "Sandy" Berger indicated that U.S. and other NATO aircraft could strike targets in the breakaway Serbian province in a matter of days.

Spurred by the latest reports of massacres and house burnings in civilian areas of Kosovo, the Security Council condemned the bloodletting and called on Milosevic to identify and prosecute those responsible — believed to be Yugoslav government security forces — and to withdraw his troops and police.

With council members Russia and China still counseling against the use of force, the statement refrained from a specific threat of military punishment. But diplomats here, in Washington and in Europe said they hope that a report on the situation, due no later than Monday from Secretary-General Kofi Annan, will build further support for an attack.

Annan and other U.N. officials have been unusually outspoken this week in blaming Serbian troops controlled by the Yugoslav government for the latest outrages in which more than 30 civilians were killed.

"I utterly condemn the wanton killings and excesses by Serbian security forces," Annan said Thursday.

If Annan does not sway opinion on the council more strongly in favor of an attack, diplomatic sources suggested that the North Atlantic Treaty Organization might proceed with airstrikes without additional authorization by the council.

At a breakfast meeting with reporters in Washington, Berger said the U.S. could begin assigning aircraft to participate in such strikes as soon as Friday.

"We will designate, as will other NATO forces, particular aircraft wings, particular personnel that will be engaged in this, but that doesn't mean we would move them at that point. The final step ... is a decision by NATO itself. Preceding that step, each of the NATO capitals would have to make a political decision (that) it was prepared to act."

A senior NATO diplomat in Brussels said the alliance is now going back to member governments, checking to make sure the forces that countries had pledged were actually going to be provided. Then these forces have to be trained for Kosovo, where hundreds have died in a Serbian crackdown against ethnic Albanian guerrillas that began in February.

This timetable, coupled with Berger's remarks, indicates that the earliest practical date for action would be the end of next week.

Berger ruled out deployment of any U.S. ground troops for Kosovo, a decision likely to make it far easier to get congressional support.

Berger, Secretary of State Madeleine K. Albright and Defense Secretary William S. Cohen briefed members of the Senate on the situation at a closed meeting late Thursday, and Albright said afterward that "the combined threat of the use of force and diplomacy is the best way of proceeding."

"We believe the best solution continues to be a diplomatic solution," she added.

Berger also stressed that the administration prefers a diplomatic solution.

"We have to ... make it very clear to Milosevic that we prefer a negotiated solution, that we prefer he move his troops back, that he move the troops he traditionally has had in Kosovo into barracks, that he allow humanitarian workers to do their job and engage in serious negotiations," Berger said.

Fire fighters answered questions about fire safety to a crowd of 30 students. They described different types of fires and explained a few simple techniques on how to fight them. Then they filled a metal canister with gasoline and instructed students how to extinguish fires properly.

In the past few weeks, students have been injured and killed because of a fire. On Monday, Joan Knowles, a 23-year-old SIUC junior in forensic pathology, died in a house fire in West Frankfort.

On Friday, Sept. 19 at Murray State University in Murray, Ky., a suspected arson fire broke out in one of the residence halls. Michael Minger, 19, of Niceville, Fla. was killed, and 15 other students were injured.

Tony Earls, coordinator of residence life in University Park, said the purpose of the demonstration is to teach students the correct procedure if a fire occurs — not to create heroes.

"Our No. 1 priority is to get students out of the building as soon as possible," Earls said.

John Hicks, safety officer with the SRUC Center for Environmental Health and Safety, instructed students about how to use a fire extinguisher. He said everyone needs to know basic information on fires.

"There is going to be a time in everyone's life when they are going to be in a fire," Hicks said. "We want to provide students with basic awareness. If they learn the facts about fires and know how to exit a building, they can save their lives."

Sarah Morgan, a residence assistant in Allen, helped put the project together. She stressed the importance of keeping residence halls safe.

"We want to inform students things that they never thought of can be a fire hazard, such as halogen lamps," Morgan, a junior in history education from Geneva, said.

After the demonstration, some students felt more secure in their knowledge of fighting minor fires.

Andrew Guardia, a sophomore in physical assistance from Litchfield, thought the demonstration was a good idea.

"People don't think about fire safety," Guardia said. "The worst time to learn about fires is when you're in one."

Mining their own business

RENEWABLE: Mining Engineering Department sets to present its fly ash bi-product for testing.

KENDRA THORSON
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The SIUC Mining Engineering Department will submit a proposal Monday or Tuesday to the Mining Safety and Health Administration to commercially present a fly ash bi-product by March.

The product was scheduled to be sent to Benton Wednesday to undergo a series of tests this week regarding strength and durability.

The department has taken yet another step into advancing conservation with the creation of a concrete material that will take the place of wood in the average coal mine.

Representatives from the SIUC Mining Department and Bob Young, president of the Fly-Lite company, presented the project in Collinsville: Sept. 24 and 25 at the Illinois Mining Institute. Young set up a booth there, and the product peaked the interest of 10 companies.

The concrete material is significantly cheaper than lumber supports. The concrete supports will sell from $1.10 to $1.20 on the commercial market, while wood supports of the same size cost roughly $8 to $9 apiece.

Dr. Paul Chugh, chairperson for the University's Mining Engineering Department, said the department is confident that the product will be successful.

"We have looked at the economics," Chugh said. "We will have no problem competing."

The project, which uses a careful combination of fly ash, waste material of coal mines, human or animal hair and a foaming agent, creates a lightweight, cheaper material that will take the place of the traditional wood supports in coal mines.

In the research stages, the fly ash product will run through a series of steps to create the finished product. Fly ash is first combined with 50 grams of hair and stirred into a careful blend.

Then a foaming agent consisting of microbubbles is added to give the material its light weight. The material is boiled and finally

"We have looked at the economics. We will have no problem competing."

— PAUL CHUGH
CHAIR PERSON FOR THE UNIVERSITY'S MINING ENGINEERING DEPARTMENT

poured into molds, and the process takes approximately four days.

There are five men, including Chugh, on the SIUC research team. Three members of the team have worked in coal mines for 20 years.

Chugh explained the importance of teamwork on the research team and said he is happy with the research team's cooperation.

"These men work very well together," said Chugh.

If the product is commercially produced, Chugh wishes to employ five to seven workers in each factory that distributes this product.

The factory hopes to produce 200 blocks a day and close to 100 poles. This would increase the daily production by 10 times.

The material is not limited to only mine supports. The research team hopes this material might be used for housing insulation and sound-proofing rooms.

Spikers set to two-step weekend

VOLLEYBALL

• The Salukis play Bradley University tonight at 7 in Davies Gym.
• The Spikers are also in action Saturday night against Northern Iowa University at 7.

HOME COOKING:

Volleyball team entertains Bradley, Northern Iowa. University over weekend.

PAUL WLEKINSKI
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Please remain seated at all times and keep all arms and legs inside the railing until the ride comes to a complete stop.

A little advice for Saluki fans before they enter Davies Gymnasium this weekend: The Salukis (6-6, 3-2) have seen the peaks and valleys of this roller-coaster season, as they welcome Missouri Valley Conference foes Bradley University tonight and the University of Northern Iowa Saturday.

Tuesday night they experienced one of the lowest-scoring games of the season.

volleyball preview

The Salukis suffered a three-game sweep at the hands of regional rival Southeast Missouri State University. But the Salukis are fortunate to be home after finishing last weekend with a disappointing 1-2 record, falling to SEMO and Illinois State University.

The Salukis have been flying high at home this season, as they defend their undefeated record of 5-0 in Davies Gym. The record at home will be placed on the line, however, when UNI brings its 5-0 MVC record to town.

"We just know that we need to get two big wins this weekend," senior Lindsay Resmer said. "Those are conference matches, which are much more important. I think we will prepare ourselves better, and hopefully our attitudes will change for conference games."

The Salukis will have to stop the Panthers (10-2, 5-0) balanced offensive attack led by four players that are totaling over 100 kills each. Sophomore Alexandra Aufer leads the Panthers with 164 kills, and paces the team in digs (119) and aces (13).

The Panthers also are led by senior Kerri Eich, and junior Holly VanHofwegen. Eich was a first-team all-conference choice last year and is second on the team with 143 kills, while VanHofwegen is third with 112 kills.

"Northern Iowa runs a quicker offense than Bradley does," SIUC coach Sonya Locke said. "They (UNI and Bradley) both are defensively sound. They both are offensively sound. We're just going to have to do all the basics very well and make sure that we control the pace of the game."

The Braves trail the Salukis by one game in the MVC and hope to move into a three-way tie for fourth place with SIUC and Wichita State University with a win tonight.

Junior Abigail Kohlen leads the Braves with 159 kills, and her 4.08 kills-per-game ranks third in the MVC.

Sophomore Lindsay Chang and senior Jennifer Dority are second and third on the team with 101 and 98 kills.

For the Salukis, senior Marlo Moreland is two kills shy of becoming only the third player in school history to register 1,200 career kills.

Entering this weekend, she is second in the MVC with 4.33 kills-per-game and seventh in attack percentage with .301.

A vast majority of Moreland's kills have come via junior setter Debbie Barr's assists.

Barr became SIUC's all-time career assist leader Tuesday night with a 25-assist performance to set the new record at 3,257. Barr keeps her count down to 5,000 going and will be honored Friday night for her accomplishment.

"We definitely want two wins this weekend," Barr said. "It would definitely give us some confidence back."

Salukis ready to rumble

Cross Country teams look to dominate on home turf

ROB ALLIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

After a successful start to the season, the SIUC cross country teams are ready to show the home crowd just how far they've come.

Both the men's and women's teams play host to the annual Saluki Invitational at 10 a.m. this Saturday in Carbondale.

Cross country preview

Following a dominating first-place finish at the Vanderbilt University Commodore Classic, the Saluki men are looking to match that finish against some stiffer competition.

Coach Bill Cornell expects the biggest threats to come from the University of Illinois, the University of Tennessee-Chattanooga and the University of Mississippi.

The Salukis hope to draw a little home-field advantage from their course near Abe Martin Field. With Parent's Weekend taking place, a big crowd is expected.

"This is our one home meet this year, so we hope we can run well in front of all our supporters," Cornell said, "Running at home always does give us a lift."

For senior Jeremy Parks, a team title isn't the only championship to follow-up on. Parks garnered his first collegiate top finish at Vanderbilt, and he looks to lead his team again.

No. 1 runner Joseph Parks also will try to establish his usual influence, as well. He, along with juniors Matt McClelland and Brian Bunderen, all made top-10 finishes last weekend.

Cornell said his team was definitely fired-up to make a run for its second championship of the season — especially with the Salukis' intrastate rival among the competitors.

"We're going out there to win. If we lose to any one of these schools we'll be disappointed," Cornell said. "And it's always been a real big rivalry between us and the (Fighting) Illini."

The women's team also is looking to build on a big finish. Two weeks ago, the Salukis finished a close second at the Midwest Collegiate Tournament in Wisconsin.

Coach Leann Reed said that having the past weekend off would give her team an advantage mentally and physically on Saturday.

The added rest should help the Salukis keep up with two of the better teams participating in the Invite — the University of Tennessee-Knoxville and the University of Tennessee-Chattanooga.

"The girls are all rejuvenated and hungry to race again," Reed said. "I'm more excited for this meet than any other this season. Physically, we're moving toward our best racing shape of the season."

More importantly, Reed has seen encouraging signs of teamwork in practice over the idle weekend. Reed would like to see her team finish in the top three.

"I've noticed some of the girls have really moved together as a group," she said. "I don't think I'll see any girls running by themselves (Saturday)."

INVITE

• The Saluki Invitational begins at 10 a.m., Saturday near Abe Martin Field.

In prime of his athletic career, Sanders is living on a prayer

WASHINGTON POST

IRVING, Texas — Deion Sanders wants to escape the image he created to make him millions of dollars. He says he's tired of Prime Time, though that's what many of his teammates still call him. He says he doesn't want the attention that comes with fame, though the words "Prime Time" adorn the gates to his suburban Dallas estate. Sanders, who arrived at last Sunday's game against Oakland in a creme-colored suit, driving a black Lamborghini with Florida State license plates that read "PT 21," says he has changed.

He's now a man of God.

A man who puts the holy book before his playbook. A man who memorizes sermons the way he used to study receivers' moves.

A man who regularly leaves religious pamphlets and books in his teammates' lockers and holds a weekly 30-minute Bible study Thursdays during the Cowboys' lunch period. And he's a man who spends his off day Tuesday visiting a nursing home in south Dallas, speaking to high-school students and holding a Bible study in a church near his home. He made a $1 million donation to a Dallas church in order to build a youth center.

"People want to know what happened to me," Sanders told the Dallas Morning News. "It's one thing to see you dancing and high-stepping, all flashy and flamboyant, and one day you come out and say, 'You know, I love Jesus Christ. He's everything to me.'"

That's because Sanders said he couldn't find happiness in money, fame or women. No matter, how hard he tried. He was in the process of a divorce and separated from his children — Diondra, 8, and Deion Jr., 4, whose nickname is Bucky.

Sanders said he even tried to commit suicide in the summer of 1996, when he drove his car off the highway and into a ravine. When he escaped without a bruise or a scratch, Sanders said he gave his life to God — no questions asked.

Sanders, though, has been questioned intensely about his religious convictions. Many have scoffed at Sanders' beliefs. It doesn't bother him.

"I am not offended because even Jesus was persecuted," Sanders said. "I was on five commercials at a time. My bank account was overflowing. I had numerous cars in my driveway and 15,000 square feet homes."

"I am not boasting. I am not bragging. I am being real. Why would I need to use Jesus?"

Sanders has been an influence in the Cowboys' locker room, especially among the younger players. But he also has had an impact on the lives of veterans such as running back Emmitt Smith and safety Darren Woodson.

Each has become a born-again Christian in the past year. Sanders didn't influence them to make changes in their lives, but he made it easier. They also sympathize with the scrutiny he has gone through.

"When some people say they're Christians, people just accept it," Smith said during training camp. "With Deion, they want to question him. Why can't they just be happy for him? The man has changed his life."

While Sanders has changed his spirituality, nothing has changed about his approach to professional football. He remains one of the best in the business.

Two weeks ago, he turned in the best performance of his storied 10-year career. That's impressive considering Sanders has scored 19 career touchdowns, including 16 on punt, kickoff, fumble and interception returns, and played in six Pro Bowls.

Against the New York Giants, Sanders returned five punts for 100 yards, including a 59-yard touchdown. He had another punt return for 39 yards, caught a 55-yard pass and returned an interception 71 yards for a touchdown.

And with quarterback Troy Aikman out with a fractured left collarbone, first-year Cowboys coach Chan Gailey has included Sanders in the game plan as a quarterback in short-yardage situations.

STATISTICS

• The Salukis take on Southwest Texas State University at 1:30 p.m., Saturday at McAndrew Stadium.

"So yeah, right now we do have a lot of confidence in them. Once we get better on defense, which we will, we'll be okay."

Getting back into playoff watching shape

WASHINGTON POST

After a swell September spent watching Sammy and Big Mac swat dingers to the farthest reaches of ballparks around America, it's a little difficult to break old habits as the opening round of the Major League Baseball playoffs proceed on three different networks.

Having no rooting interest in either the Chicago Cubs or St. Louis Cardinals, my clicker finger got a great workout switching between sluggers. This week, trying to watch a full nine innings of baseball on ESPN, Fox and NBC, I find myself continually surfing away to catch a snippet of "Frasier" here, a dash of "Chicago Hope" there. If games get too lopsided, I'll click back for a score update, but hardly ever stay unless a rally is in the works.

It's not that all three networks don't do a terrific job televising the games, though some clearly do it better than others.

If Jon Miller is broadcasting a game on ESPN, it's always worth sticking around no matter what the score.

The more you hear Miller, the more you hear Morgan, and on Wednesday with newly retired Joe Carter, the more you know how badly Baltimore Orioles owner Peter Angelos blundered two years ago in not keeping him around Camden Yards in perpetuity.

formidable people, but beyond that you can talk to their guys about (Southwest Texas)."

If the defense can handle the Cats and the Kicking game shows up, it could become a catwalk for the Salukis. After senior Matt Simonton missed a late field goal against Illinois State, Quarless still doesn't know who will be his starting placekicker.

The way the offense is playing, he probably won't need special teams anyway. Over the last few weeks, the Salukis had near flawless execution.

Led by junior running back Karlton Carpenter, they are scoring nearly 29 points per game. Carpenter, who has three-straight 100-yard rushing games, is the Gateway's leading rusher with 571 yards. Evers' junior Paul Davis is starting to show signs of life.

The running game has helped senior Kent Skornia get settled in the pocket, as he his first interception of the season came just last week against ISU. The Dawgs have also found that freshman wideout Brian Hamilton can be counted upon in the passing game.

"I think (the offense has) done it the last three weeks," Quarless said. "If we keep doing it, people will have a lot of trouble defending us. A lot of credit goes to them."

"So yeah, right now we do have a lot of confidence in them. Once we get better on defense, which we will, we'll be okay."

Saluki football preview

Preparing for battle

BIG PLAYS: Dawgs' defense looks to overcome last week's outcome against SW Texas St.

SHANDEL RICHARDSON
SPORTS EDITOR

Oh, how fast things can change in a week. Seven days ago, the Saluki defense had everyone talking about its big-play ways — how the team gave up the most yardage in the Gateway Conference but got those key defensive plays when needed.

How the defense came up with a huge stop in the closing minutes of the Salukis' Sept. 19 upset of the University of Northern Iowa, after being dominated the entire second half.

Those joyous days seem like years ago. A 41-38 loss to Illinois State University this past Saturday has put the defense on the spot once again. Although the Salukis (2-2, 1-1) forced three turnovers, the Redbirds found the end zone early and often.

"41-38 ain't my kind of football game, and it will never be," SIUC coach Jan Quarless said. "If it's 41-38, you're probably not where you want to be in terms of your future."

"We weren't executing the way we had been at times. It catches up to a young defense, and I think sometimes, we as coaches, maybe put too much in too quickly."

A Monday team meeting began a week of practice devoted strictly to defense. In the meeting, Quarless questioned the play of the upperclassmen.

"He said we got to turn it up," senior defensive lineman Kelly Washington said. "Our seniors, like myself, got to get our intensity up and go over the fundamentals. We got to play four quarters of football, instead of two or three."

Hopefully, that mentality carries over to Saturday's non-conference home game at 1:30 p.m.

Considering the defensive woes, Southland Conference-member Southwest Texas State University is a happily welcomed guest to McAndrew Stadium.

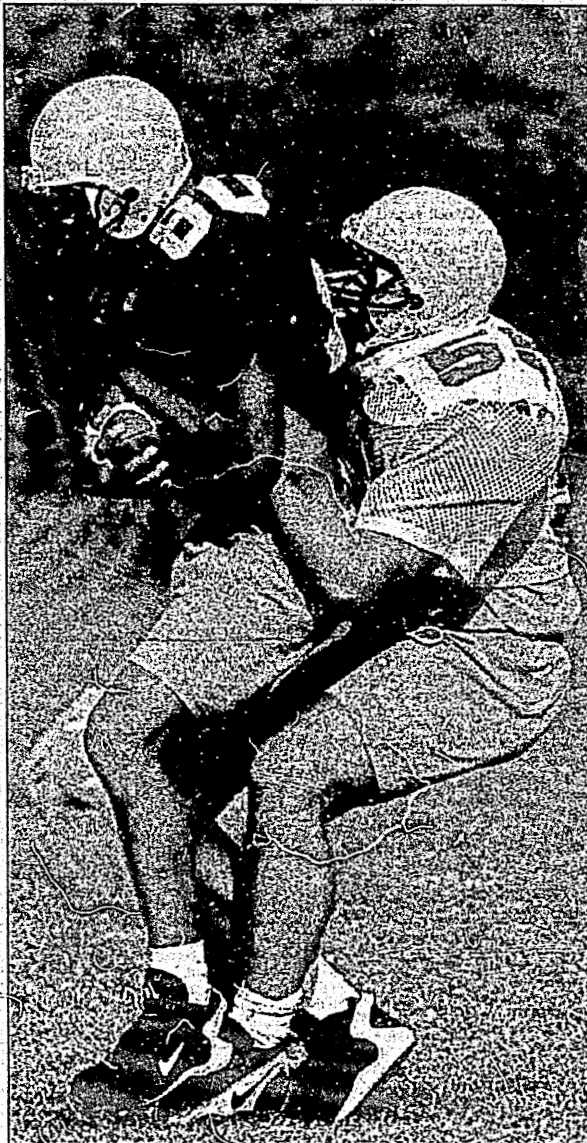

The Bobcats (1-3) have been more like kittens on offense this year. They rank last in the Southland, racking up a mere 237 total yards per game.

Tailback ReShawn Brown is the Cats top rusher (307 yards), and D'Angelo Torres has caught 12 passes for 165 yards, but that's about it for an offense that has gone up against some of the Division I-AA powers.

Southwest Texas is coming off three-straight losses to teams ranked in the Top 25. This is the first-ever meeting between the schools, so the Salukis really don't know what to expect.

All they know is a win here would give SIUC some much-needed momentum heading into next week's showdown with No. 2-ranked Youngstown State University.

"I don't think their record indicates the kind of football team they are," Quarless said of Southwest Texas. "They've played some
