Work on Southern's new library is well in hand and a part of the building should be ready for occupancy by mid-March, according to Co-Chairman Charles Parker, University Librarian. As the present time, bricklayers have completed the first wall and are laying brick for the second wall.

Concrete work for the main floor will begin soon and the building will be complete in June. This will be an important step in the construction process as it will allow for the rapid installation of the building's mechanical equipment.

Our Opinions

Little Ivy, But... of the project that SIU is tackling

Southern Illinois University is the future green campus of the United States today. In the last ten years, Southern Illinois University has increased its enrollment by 67% in two years.

The word is out that SIU has started construction on the new physical plant of the school not at this same year's capacity. The first of the new buildings will be built on the north side of the existing campus. The new buildings will be mostly used for academic purposes and will provide additional space for student facilities.

More offices on campus can see drawings of buildings under construction and proposed structures that point to the way SIU will expand.

Southern Illinois University has never been short of ideas or funds to bring them to fruition. When the last major bond issue was approved, the campus was able to bring in additional funding to help with future projects.

The SIU administration has always been keen on the idea of expanding the campus due to the large number of students that have enrolled in the past few years.

These Luxuries Must Go

As a result of cuts to be made by Illinois University, Southern Illinois University, the school that I have attended for the past four years, has decided to cut a number of staff positions.

The SIU administration has announced that they will be cutting 50 positions across the university, including faculty and staff in the arts, sciences, and humanities departments.

These cuts are part of a larger plan to reduce the university's budget by 10% over the next two years.

A Long Road Ahead

The Supreme Court handed down its final decision in the Southern Illinois University v. Board of Trustees case on April 8, 2014. The court ruled in favor of the university, granting it the authority to make these cuts.

The university's decision to cut these positions is part of a larger plan to cut costs, as they continue to face budget shortfalls due to the ongoing economic downturn.
