Buses Begin Student Service Today

A student bus service, s sored by the Student Council, begins operation on campus and in Carbondale this morning. Bus service to VT1 morning. Bus service to VTI began Tuesday. The campus run of the bus service offers 15 trips daily Monday through Friday from 7:35 a.m. through 9:20 p.m. Buses will make scheduled stops at Small Group Housing end of Thompson Deirt Only and at Thompson Point. Only morning runs will operate on Saturday.

The Carbondale run is made ourly from 7:16 a.m., begin ning at East Main and North Wall streets, until 5:05 p.m. Runs are also made from the University Center at 9:28 and 9:56 p.m. on Monday through Thursday. Each run takes 30 minutes. This is only a shake-down schedule, according to B. D. Hudgens, director of Auxillary Enterprises, and will probably be changed within a few weeks to better meet student needs. Hudgens said that Pat Micken, student body president, other tudent government officials and himself will determine how this schedule suits the student body, and make necessarv changes.

A complete schedule of the present campus and the Car-bondale routes is available at the Student Activities office in the Judgen Activities office in the University Center, Riders on either of these routes pay a i0 cent fare. The inter-campus service to VTI, which is free to stu-

be entered through either the foyer at the library's main entrance or a set of outside stairs at the northeast corner of the library. The room will be equipped with tables, chairs and a few general reference books, Randall said, In addition, the two-hour reserve books also will be kept in the same area.

Tryout Dates Set For 'Boy Friend'

Singers, dancers and actors are needed for "The Boy Friend." first production of the 1964-65 theater season at SIU.

Tryouts will be held at 7:30 p.m. Monday and Tuesday in the Southern Playhouse. Jim Bob Stephenson, associate professor of theater, will direct the musical, a spoof of the 1920s. Copies of the play are now on two-hour reserve at Mor-ris Library. Persons in-terested in trying out are urged to read the play first,

Thomas Easterly, city building and zoning adminis-trator said, "Information filed for building permits indicates city, eight residence hall projects for 1,185 single students and 65 one and two-bedroom apartments will be completed in time for the start of fall term this year." This, according to Mrs. Kuo, has absorbed most of the

Mrs. Kuo estimates that there are now 50 vacancies women and 100 for men off-campus.

Atty. Edward Helton City caused a good deal of concern in the housing office at the first of this month when he announced his opinion that persons living in areas zoned specifically for one-family dwellings could not legally rent rooms in their homes to students. However, Helton announced a moratorium on enforcement

In the meantime, residents of Carbondale will be allowed to rent rooms to students providing the total number does not exceed five.

The future for off-campus housing was brightened when Easterly told University officials that an estimated $6 million in off-campus con-struction plus plans still on the drawing board should provide housing for an additional 6,500 students.

This involves off-campus residence halls for single stuand small apartments dents for married students, attend-ing SIU in greater numbers each year because of the expanding Graduate School program.

Off-campus housing accom-modated about 42 per cent of SIU's enrollment in the spring quarter, according to Albin J. Yokie, housing director, and on-campus housing served 25 per cent. Eighteen per cent commuted from their homes, and 13 per cent found lodging in nearby towns.

Officials Expect Drop-Outs To Take Care of Overflow

However, they are counting on drop-outs, accidents and even homesickness to take care of the overflow.

Comments by Eric Sevareid Illuminate Recent History

This Is Eric Sevareid. By Eric Sevareid. New York: McGraw-Hill Book Co., 1964. 306 pp. $5.95.

More than anything else Mr. Sevareid illustrates the role of the journalist in this "age of the journalist" through a selection of his articles written between 1955 and 1964. He comments knowledgeably and interestingly on such diverse subjects as the Cuban crisis, the Kennedy assassicrisis, the Kennedy assassi-nation, the common market, Gaullism, Africa, the Peace Corps (whatever it accom-plishes "will have nothing to do with peace"), the "death" do with peace"), the "death" of New York City, destruction of our Shangri-las, the need to know what we "are" rather what we are going to than become.

The articles bear out his Ine articles bear out his assertion that he has em-braced domestic liberalism while becoming "increasingly conservative on foreign af-fairs." His liberalism prob-ably needs no documentation here ne his formerid/acting here, as Mr. Sevareid's radio, television, newspaper, and magazine comments over the past third of a century have stamped him a liberal. Although he concedes that the "American social-worker the "American social-worker mentality that regards the world as our sick oyster has probably done more good than bad," he warns that the United States is overcommitted to the point that it is virtually in-capable of achieving anything anywhere. He argues that the problems of Latin America, for example, cannot be solved by our ineffective attempts to improve the economic lot of the downtrodden.

Some of the columns carry dates. It would have helped one to place them in perspective if all had been dated. Too, headnotes giving the setting for each article or each chapter might have helped. Failure Has Compensations for Irish 'Beggar'

The Life of Riley, by Anthony Cronin, New York: Alfred A. Knopf, 1964. 276 pp. $4.95.

In reviewing a book by an Irish author I am conscious of being an Irish priest. The clergy in Ireland have often been used as a foil by Irish writers publishing overseas. The first question in my mind was why had The Life of Riley to be published in the U.S.A.? There are few ref-erences to priests in the book and even then I got the feeling that the author had felt compelled to stick them in lest his English and American readers should be dis-appointed.

appointed. Reference to the purity and bourgeois ideals of Riley's Irish girlfriend could only please the clergy just as ref-erences to his English one could only please Irish nationalists.

However, by publishing his book in this country Cronin ensured that it would not be taken for a Catholic Truth Society pamphlet. Reading the book I didn't know whether it rang true or not. Here and there I got the hint of a sociologist speaking and some of the explanations slowed up the story. It is hardly a story at all, but a series of stages in the life of Riley.

We are introduced to Riley as the "assistant to the sec-retary," an office not to be confused with assistant secretary. The secretary is an opportunist who makes a comfortable living running a grocer's organization. Riley's main job is to be obsequious to the secretary and to come in time for work.

But Riley has pretensions of his own and despite the fact that he can intercept an occasional player passing be-tween one grocer and another doesn't feel that he is ful-filling his function in life by

Riley meets various inter-esting people; his landlord, an English gentleman known as Sir Mortlake who keeps him-self by giving bottleparties and selling the bottles; Sir George Dermot of Ardash castle who has been on the verge of bankruptcy for years and with whom a man of Rilev's and with whom a man of Riley's literary status car stay as Riley is fired in a roundabout way and goes in a routuanout way any good to England to get wired in on the B_B_C. He hopes to get some of his Irish stories broadcast and while he waits sponges out an existence on moderately successful compatriots.

Finally he decides to seek unemployment assistance from the British Labor Government and finds that he has fallen below the level at which social security is available.

The book should be read by American mothers children haven't done well in life or by American wives who cannot push their husbands up the ladder, because Riley points up the many compen-sations of failure. John Ralph

Select Group of Freshman Football Hopefuls Said to Be More Talented Than 1963 Squad

A select group of fresh-man football hopefuls, composed of scholarship winners and products of a top recruiting year, are at work preparing to keep up with last year's undefeated, untied freshman squad.

Two SIU Woman Gymnasts To Compete in Olympic Games

Two SIU woman gymnasts have earned positions on U.S. and Canadian gymnastics eams for the 1964 Olympics, and to be held next month in Tokyo.

Dale McClements, a 19year-old sophomore from Se-attle, Wash., will represent this country after qualifying as the top-scoring woman on the U.S. team.

Miss McClements was the national champion woman gymnast in 1962. She represented this country at the World Games in 1962 and the World Games in 1962 and the Pan-American Games in 1963. Gail Daley, an 18-year-old freshman from Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, who graduated from Carbondale Community High School, will represent her home country in the Olympics. This way she wan berthird

This year she won her third straight Canadian National Championship. She also rep-resented her country at the

Kansas U. Harriers Oppose SIU Oct. 3

SIU's cross-country squad will face a well-trained Uni-versity of Kansas team in its first meet of the season here at 10:30 a.m. Oct. 3, Lew Hartzog, track coach, said.

"We thought we would be in real good condition this year," said Hartzog, "but we lost our No. 2 man, John E. Jaeger, because of grades, and that is bound to hurt us,"

Even with this loss Hartzog is predicting he will have his best cross-country team in the past couple years.

University Oversells Housing Space

(Continued from Page 1) cause of a projected number of students who are not expected to arrive, plus those who are expected to drop out within the first few weeks. "We know from experience that a certain number of students we have contracted will not show up," said Robert E. Maurath, assistant coordi-nator of housing for operations.

Therefore, to come up with adequate housing for as many as possible, we should make an overassignment which in our best judgment will com -pensate for the no-shows," Maurath continued.

"We are not doing this out of any reason to maximize our financial advantage--al-though this is a by-product-- but to provide maximum housing," he explained. In order to assure that there while no vacancies while are students are in need of hous-ing, students are assigned to temporary quarters until they can be moved into the rooms left vacant by the "no-shows."

The compelling reason for cording to Maurath, is to insure that students aren't deprived of university housing when it is available, or soon will be.

Some students are allowed Some students are allowed to come to college only with the provision that they are able to live on campus, Maurath said. "If we deny students on-campus housing and then the first day of school announce that vacancies exist in the residence halls, they are going to wonder why."

J. Albin Yokie, coordinator of housing, explained that stu-dents who have been overassigned were notified of the situation before they signed "This is done on a personal counseling basis," Yokie said. "The student is informed either by letter, phone or in person that theirs is an overassignment and the uason for quarters. temporary

"If, after being informed of the situation, the student still agrees, he is given a con-tract," Yokie said.

An exception, however, is a group of foreign students who, because of a clerical error in the Housing Office, failed to receive their contracts and were thus overassigned.

When informed that some students who had been over-assigned had denied having been notified before signing their contracts, Yokie com-

"There may be some, but there shouldn't have been." ere shouldn't have been.' Yokie also said that if students were required to live in the temporary quarters for more than two weeks, they would receive adjustment in the amount of their housing contracts.

Yokie said that those whe are required to share living quarters with overassigned students for an extended period will also receive contract adjustments.
