Welch names new aid boss

By Brad Bushue
Staff Writer

Pamela Britton was named the new director of financial aid Thursday.

Pamela Britton

Vice President for Student Affairs Harvey Welch announced Britton, an associate director of financial aid since 1984, as his choice for director.

Britton fills the vacancy left by Joe Camille, who is now director of financial aid at the University of Missouri.

Britton, 39, said she will strive for good communication with students and provide clear and accurate information, but no drastic changes will be made immediately.

The implementation, possibly in September, 1989, of the Student Information System, a college-wide computer system that will increase efficiency, will cause some initial chaos, Britton said, but her staff will have the necessary training to make a smooth transition.

Officials are tentative about when the system will be implemented.

African students concerned for families caught in floods

By Diana Mivell
Staff Writer

University students from Sudan and Ethiopia are concerned about their families following destructive floods that left many homeless in their home countries last month.

"This is very depressing to us. We are thinking about what our families are doing and if they are okay," Mahmoud A. Mahmoud, graduate student in journalism and a native of Sudan, said. He has not been able to contact his family because of the communication breakdown.

Late July rainfall in Sudan and Ethiopia began with a hopeful outlook after a five-year drought. A week later the welcomed rain had turned several areas of the two countries into flooded disasters.

A record-breaking 8.3 inches in just one night added to the floods that destroyed the major crops and left many homeless, according to Salah Mohammed, associate professor in mathematics.

Mohammed, also a native of Sudan, said the yearly average rainfall is approximately 6.3 inches total. The rain began on July 30, he said.

Mahmoud said University students and faculty members have donated about $1,000 so far to aid the country. One faculty member donated $500, he said. Donations are tax deductible, he said.

Donations are being collected by Mahmoud A. Mahmoud and Mudawi Elmusharaf. The donations will be sent to the American Society for Humanitarian African Development and to the Islamic African Relief Agency, Mahmoud said.

Sudanese student Abuzar M. Eljelly has not been able to contact his family.

"I am worried because my family lives in a village near the Nile. Eljelly said that to contact his family he must call the province because there is President John C. Guyon said he is awaiting a letter from the Undergraduate Student Government requesting partial aid in a feasibility study to determine if a proposed mass transit project will receive federal and University aid.

Guyon said he offered to partially fund the study after its need was established in an Aug. 15 meeting between the Illinois Department of Transportation and University and city officials. He said he was unable to estimate the size and the source of the University's contribution until the scope of the study was

Sociologist talks on Soviet education

By Diana Mivell
Staff Writer

Soviet sociologist Igor S. Kon told students Thursday that professional orientation in the Soviet Union is given sooner than in the U.S. to enable Soviet students to start their education knowing exactly what career they want to pursue.

One of the founding fathers of sociology in his country and professor at the U.S.S.R. Academy of Science's Institute of Ethnography in Moscow, Kon said the education in the Soviet Union is free but the universities are very competitive to get admitted.

"The competition to get into engineering is on the decline due to the fewer students, so now it is easier to be accepted into this program," Kon said.

"In my country students are given professional orientation sooner than in the United States," he said. "Soviet high school students are told about the different career possibilities so that they can make a choice early and know exactly what they will study in college."

Kon also said that sex education for teen-agers in the Soviet Union is not taught because if youths aren't taught about sex, teenage sex will remain less of a problem than in other countries. Contraceptives are not used in Russia, Kon said.

"Soviet youths are ignorant about sex. Girls may have six abortions and sometimes girls do not know they are pregnant until the eighth month," Kon said.

"Handicapped people in the Soviet Union didn't have facilities or outlets to help them until the problem became more aware," Kon said. Facilities are being built in the schools to facilitate the handicapped.

Decision on condom vending machines near

By Jackie Spinner
Staff Writer

The Undergraduate Student Government and Graduate and Professional Student Council are closing in on a decision about whether to have condom vending machines on campus. Sam McVay, director of the Health Services said.

"With support from the student government organizations, we could begin to talk with the necessary people," McVay said.

The GPSC is very much concerned with health issues on campus. Thaddaus Phillips, vice president for graduate affairs said.

The GPSC will meet Wednesday to discuss the condom vending machines proposal made by the executive council.

The next measures would be to contact the housing directors and find the best places for the machines. A bid specification also would be written to the purchasing agent and auxiliary, maintaining the condoms' effectiveness and life expectancy, McVay said.

"This is the time when people need the machines," Sheri Rhode, University AIDS Task Force member, said.

The Task Force is not encouraging sexual activity, but it wants to make measures available in an educated and easy manner if people choose to engage in sexual activity, she added.

The concept of installing condom machines on campus was first recommended by the Student Health Advisory Board because of student support, according to Nancy Williams, an advisory board member, in a letter to the Daily Egyptian last May.

Trade union talks to begin, Polish workers end strike

GDANSK, Poland (UPI) — About 15,000 workers ended strikes at four shipyards and a steel mill and marched home to a hero's welcome Thursday after the government promised to hold talks on reviving the outlawed Solidarity trade union. Solidarity leader Lech Walesa ordered an end to the strikes following a government promise to discuss the re-legalization of the banned union during a series of round-table talks with opposition leaders.

U.S. begins removing missiles from Europe

HEILBRONN, West Germany (UPI) — The first of 108 U.S. Pershing-2 missiles marked for destruction in Europe began the trip to the scrapyard Thursday under the terms of the treaty signed by President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev. Nine of the $3.8 million medium-range nuclear missiles were removed from Camp Redleg, a missile site at Heilbronn, 20 miles north of Stuttgart, operated by the U.S. Army's 56th Field Artillery Command.

Burma president rejects plea for democracy

RANGOON, Burma (UPI) — Ignoring half a million protesters marching in the streets, Burma's socialist president rejected demands Thursday for a new interim government and the scheduling of free elections. An estimated 500,000 people streamed through the capital demanding multi-party democracy and the abolition of the ruling Burma Socialist Program Party as a nationwide general strike brought transportation and commercial activity to a standstill.

Thatcher vows to defeat terrorism in Belfast

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — Catholic youths rioted overnight in IRA strongholds, torching scores of buses and cars, and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher Thursday vowed "terrorism will not win" in the province that was rocked by 25 slayings in August — the bloodiest month of violence in 15 years. In the overnight rioting in West Belfast, gangs of youths swarmed through the streets seizing cars, buses and delivery vans and setting them afire, police said.

Bush insists only on 2 debates with Dukakis

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice President George Bush's campaign, in a new round of talks with the Michael Dukakis camp Thursday, remained firm in insisting on only two televised presidential debates, to be held between Sept. 25 and Oct. 17. No agreement was reached in the second round of negotiations between Bush campaign chairman James Baker and Dukakis campaign chairman Paul Brontaus other than to discuss debates again next Tuesday.

Philadelphia violates federal Clean Water Act

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Justice Department charged Philadelphia Thursday with violating the Clean Water Act by dumping pollutants and sludge into the Delaware River. Assistant Attorney General Roger Marzulla said the suit was the fourth civil action against Philadelphia in 10 years for violations of the Clean Water Act at the city's three sewage treatment plants.

Tape reveals cockpit talked of engine problem

GRAPEVINE, Texas (UPI) — A Delta airliner flying as Flight 1141 — the same flight that crashed a day earlier killing 13 people — aborted its takeoff at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport Thursday because an engine experienced a "compressor stall," officials said. A first-time reading of the cockpit voice recorder from Wednesday's crashed plane revealed Thursday the crew was discussing a possible stall condition and engine trouble shortly before the plane crashed, said Lee Dickinson, head of the National Transportation Safety Board investigating team.

Computer problem stops shuttle simulation

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI) — With launch just a few weeks away, the crew of the shuttle Discovery, fighting through a host of make-believe malfunctions, ended a final flight simulation Thursday that was cut short by real problems with a computer system.

Professor honored for aiding retarded

By Loria Roberson
Staff Writer

A professor at the University's Rehabilitation Institute was named a fellow by the American Psychological Association for his research on how the mentally retarded learn and retain new skills.

Anthony J. Cuvo, also acting dean of the College of Human Resources, said he wasn't expecting to be named a fellow, but one of the criteria for inclusion as a fellow is exhibiting "solid evidence of unusual and outstanding contribution" to a particular area of psychology.

"The honor is sort of a validation of one's career by one's peers," Cuvo said.

Cuvo said he has spent 15 years scientifically analyzing ways of teaching life skills to the mentally retarded.

"My work has focused on the instructional variables that promote the learning of functional community living skills by persons who are mentally retarded or who have related disorders," Cuvo said.

His research, Cuvo said, has mainly revolved around the variables that affect three learning processes: acquisition, maintenance, and generalization. Acquisition refers to learning new skills and in his research, Cuvo said, it specifically refers to community living skills, such as shopping and going out to eat.

Maintenance, he said, involves studying the variables that help people retain these skills over time, and generalization focuses on the variables that will help promote performance in more than one setting.

"For example," Cuvo said, "students are taught by their instructors in a classroom, but they are expected to utilize what they learn outside of class. It's the same with the mentally retarded. We teach them how to go McDonald's, but we want them to know how to go to fast food restaurants in general."

Cuvo also stressed that teaching functional tasks to the mentally retarded is important, but studying the variables that promote effective learning of the three processes is equally important.

Cuvo and his colleagues at the Rehabilitation Institute are also studying techniques where the mentally retarded can promote their own instruction.

Self-management instruction is similar to what students do when they leave class and do some studying on their own, Cuvo said, and peer instruction is where mentally retarded people with certain skills teach others without those skills.

"We've done enough research over the years to have a model of effective training of community living skills," Cuvo said, "but we are always striving to become more effective and efficient."

Guyon: University needs more private funding

By Kathleen DeBo
Staff Writer

The University has "probably reached the bounds of propriety" in tuition increases and needs to do more to encourage private fundraising, President John C. Guyon said Thursday at a Graduate Council meeting.

Guyon said the University is spreading its resources too thin and needs to establish a process to evaluate all University activities for cost control. "If we don't get more money we're going to have to stop doing some things," he said. Guyon added that the University should not expect any general revenue increases and commended the council for getting grants and contracts from private agencies.

John Yopp, dean of the Graduate School said the school needs to shorten the time it takes to process admissions. He said the number of admissions has doubled and the applications are coming from more countries than before.

Yopp said international admissions are treated the same as American admissions and that the school needs to find a way to weed out "less synonymous admissions" without adding staff or increasing fees.

In other business, Susan Ford, anthropology, was elected chairwoman of the Graduate Council at the council meeting Thursday morning. David Kammer, mathematics, was named vice chairman.

Community in debt to Howard R. Long

"HOWARD RUSK LONG was to the School of Journalism what Delyte Morris was to Southern Illinois University." Those were the words that journalism faculty most often used, upon learning of the death of the former leader of the journalism program, to impress upon students the breadth of Long's influence. Comparing a person to Delyte Morris, the former University president credited with developing a small teacher's college into the comprehensive University it is today, is exceptional praise. Howard Rusk Long, though, was an exceptional man.

"IF IT WEREN'T for Howard Rusk Long, the students at the Daily Egyptian wouldn't have a job." Those were the words that were heard coming from faculty offices as the newspaper staff grappled to understand the significance of Long's passing. Long retired as director of the journalism program in 1972 and from the University in 1974. The extent of many student's knowledge of Long comes from the portrait that hangs in the journalism reference room and the fact that an annual lecture bears his name. But, the students of the University owe a great debt to Long, who was in effect the father of the Daily Egyptian.

"WITH ALL ITS FAULTS, with all the room for improvement, philosophically, structurally, and functionally, as well as improvements in the product, the Daily Egyptian is a bargain for the University community, the people of Illinois and as an example for the whole world of journalism." Those are the words Howard Rusk Long used in one of his last editorials as he tried to convey his beliefs on the importance of the college press. That, in a nutshell, is Long's legacy. While many of us never met Long, his ideals, his spirit, if you will, has touched us all.

THAT IS WHY Howard Rusk Long is as important a figure today as he was in his heyday when he was the driving force behind the Daily Egyptian. Those were the years the Society of Professional Journalists recognized the paper as one of the top college newspapers in the Midwest, a paper that won national awards. While Long was director of the program, the School of Journalism was ranked among the top journalism schools in the United States in a survey conducted by the S.I. Newhouse School of Public Communications at Syracuse University.

Long recognized that a strong campus newspaper, with a solid journalism school educating its reporters, is a combination that is more than a great education: an opportunity for the students who work there. He saw the campus newspaper as a vital, dynamic servant of the community. Hence, all students are affected by Long's considerable accomplishments.

LONG'S MEMORABLE list of accomplishments is:

- founder of the International Conference of Weekly Newspaper Editors and publisher of its Grassroots Editor;
- founder of the Mid-America Press Institute;
- organizer of the professional chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, national journalism fraternity;
- organizer of the Illinois Advertising Club;
- organizer of the Newspaper in the Classroom Workshop and a workshop in Journalism Education Administration for college teachers;
- established the Elijah Lovejoy award for weekly newspapers, a lecture in honor of the weekly newspaper editor and perhaps the country's first Sigma Delta Chi annual lecture.

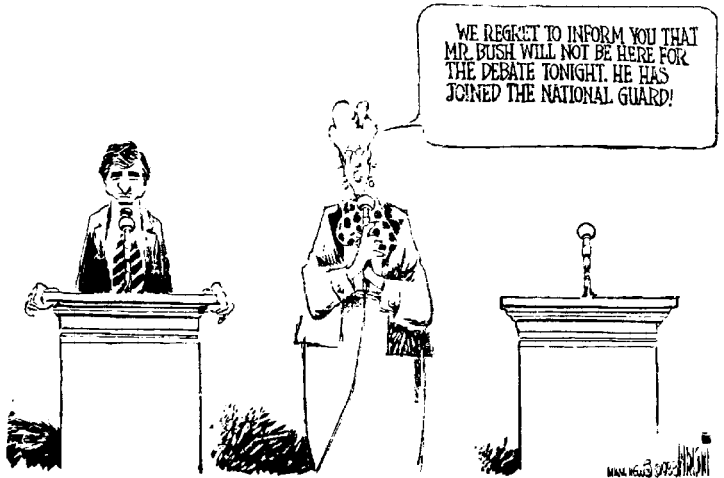

BUT, STUDENTS at the University have another reason, one that hits them more closely to home. That reason is expressed best by Long's own words, "Where would you go to find a responsible newspaper with more freedom to serve its readers than the Daily Egyptian?" Thanks to Long, the answer is nowhere. That is a fact all students should remember when they stop to pick up the morning's paper produced, as Long said it should be, largely through the efforts of student journalists striving to live up to Long's aspirations.

Fighting far-off wars the duty of future followers, not leaders

HUNDREDS OF READERS demanded to know why I have not written about how Sen. Lloyd Bentsen's son got in the National Guard.

Others have asked why I haven't mentioned that Sen. Bill Bradley, the former basketball player, also was a guardsman.

And many have said that I have shirked my journalistic responsibility by failing to mention that Gov. Michael Dukakis was in college during the Korean War and didn't go into the Army until that war had ended.

They raise a valid point, and I'm going to answer them.

I haven't written about these other noncombatants because I now realize that I was wrong to criticize Sen. Dan Quayle for using family influence to join the Indiana National Guard and avoid combat duty in Vietnam.

YES, I WAS wrong and I publicly admit it.

I've listened to Vice President George Bush defend Quayle. I've listened to Pat Buchanan and other prominent conservative journalists defend him. I've heard from thousands of rank-and-file Republicans, all of whom praised him.

And I'm not ashamed to confess that they have persuaded me that I was mistaken about Quayle. And I apologize for every nasty, low-down, mean-spirited, liberal remark I made about this fine, patriotic young man.

In other words, I now believe that what Quayle did was right. Not only right, but honorable and brave and true-blue American.

SO IT STANDS to reason that if what Quayle did was right, the same holds true for Bentsen's son, Sen. Bradley, Gov. Dukakis and every other American who, for one reason or another, did not take an active part in war.

Therefore, it would be wrong of me to criticize Bentsen's son and the others for doing something I now believe was right.

Sen. Bentsen insists that he didn't help his son get around the draft. If he didn't help, I ask: "Why not?" What kind of father is he if he wouldn't put in a little fix for his own flesh and blood?

Mike Royko

Tribune Media Services

But if he did use his clout to protect his lad, I say more power to him. He only did what any decent father would have done. If God didn't want Bentsen to make a phone call or two in his son's behalf, He wouldn't have had Alexander Graham Bell invent the telephone.

Staying out of Vietnam was the intelligent thing for a young man to do.

AS COUNTLESS readers have pointed out, staying out of Vietnam was the intelligent thing for a young man to do. So by doing it, Quayle has demonstrated his intelligence. And since we want our leaders to be intelligent, he has increased his credibility as a candidate.

Following this reasoning, had Quayle allowed himself to be drafted and sent to Vietnam, that would not have been the smart thing for him to do. As many of Quayle's admirers have convincingly told me, it would have been stupid.

So ask yourself: Would we want somebody that stupid to be only a heartbeat away from the most important job in the world?

Before recognizing the errors in my thinking, I was also critical of Quayle's family for interceding in his behalf with National Guard contacts. As Quayle himself said: "Phone calls were made."

BUT AFTER rethinking that issue, I realize how misguided I was. The most important unit in American life is the family. And if a family won't help one of their own avoid going into the Army, who will — the neighborhood gas station attendant?

I also was wrongheaded in chastising Quayle and his family for being hawkish about the war while Quayle avoided the war.

But that's because I had a narrow perspective, rather than taking the broad, long-range view.

If we are to survive as a great nation, we must be pragmatic, not giddy and silly. And if we are going to be pragmatic — as many readers have urged me to be — we must face facts.

AND THE FACT IS, young men such as Quayle, Bentsen's son and Sen. Bradley have fine family backgrounds and have been exposed to excellent educations. They are a national resource — the sort of young men who have the potential to rise to positions of national leadership.

So does it make sense to let them go to some far-off land to fight in a war and risk dying? Do we want to squander our finest resources that way? Obviously, the answer is no.

If wars are to be fought, then it is far more practical to allow those who are expendable to fight them.

I'm not being cold-hearted. But if anybody is going to get blown away in a war, doesn't it make more sense that it be someone with a ninth-grade education and few prospects for the future?

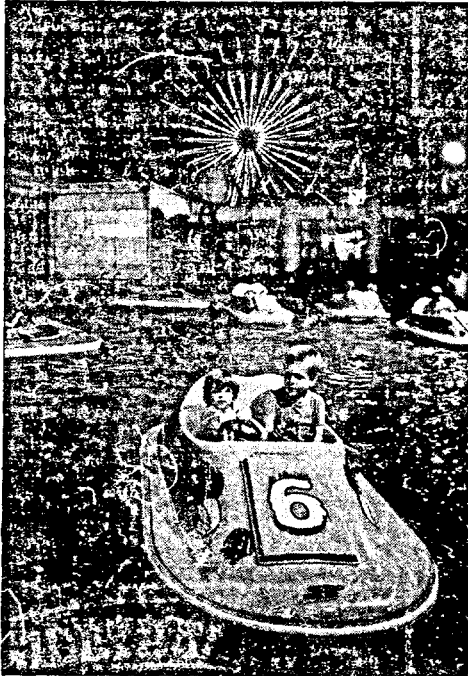

I MEAN, face reality: Does your average, uneducated ditch-digger have even the faintest chance of becoming vice president?

We must have priorities.

So I now agree that it is ethically and morally possible to be a hawk while at the same time remaining out of harm's way. It is not only possible, it is a responsibility. Sure, we must confront the communists when the chips are down. But we should not squander our future leaders when there are more than enough future followers to do the job.

As Nathan Hale might have said, if he had given it a bit more thought: "I regret that I don't have 10 lives to give for my country. Then I could give nine of them and still stick around."

State Fair has smorgasbord of events

By Beth Clavin
Entertainment Editor

Walking through the Du Quoin State Fair may give one the feeling of being in several different worlds.

Activities range from lumberjack shows and agriculture exhibits to booths selling Indian items and Western wear.

The fair offers entertainment for all ages and types of people.

Several area groups have booths set up at the fair to provide information for the public about their organizations.

For example, the Illinois Department of Employment Securities offers employment information, the Eagle Shield Company gives facts about radiation protection, and Kayak Pools and Energy Savers Company have their products on display.

The politicians also have their booths.

Other area groups are selling food at the fair. The Illinois Beef Association sells ribeyes, and the Southern Illinois Pork Producers sell butterfly pork chops.

Also at the fair are cinnamon rolls, pizza, curly fries, hamburgers, and chocolate chip cookies.

In addition, you can buy almost everything on a stick.

There is catfish-on-a-stick, steak-on-a-stick, and cheese-on-a-stick, to name a few.

Throughout the week, livestock shows were held, with judging of everything from horses to cattle to sheep.

To get the public involved in some of the fun, several contests are being held, such as the back seat driving contests and a mud volleyball.

Program in Rehab Institute accredited for 5-year term

By Loria Roberson
Staff Writer

The University Counselor Education Program in the Rehabilitation Institute has been accredited for five years, a University professor said.

No doubt ever existed that the program would be accredited for another term, said Brockman Schumacher, professor in the Rehabilitation Institute and coordinator of the Rehabilitation Counselor Training degree program.

William E. Jenkins, president of the Council on Rehabilitation Education, which gave the program its accreditation, said the accreditation was awarded following an "extensive evaluation."

The material submitted to the Council on Rehabilitation Education included surveys of faculty, current students and employers of graduates, Schumacher said.

He said it cost between $800 to $1,000 to prepare the material for the accreditation. Part of that comes from the school's budget and some is paid by the Council on Rehabilitation Education.

The counselor program trains future counselors on a master's level.

AIDS risk high for migrant workers

ATLANTA (UPI) — Migrant farmworkers have a higher incidence of the AIDS virus than the general population, federal health officials said Thursday, calling for "innovative approaches" to reach transients about the deadly disease.

The national Centers for Disease Control reported 2.6 percent of 426 blood samples from an undisclosed health clinic in North Carolina that serves about 4,500 migrant farmworkers contained the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV), which causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

"It does appear to be relatively high compared to some of the other traditional sources of data such as blood donors and military recruits, although we have to be aware that the population is different," said Dr. Richard Spiegel, a Centers for Disease Control epidemiologist.

(Also with two of the finest female singers you will find east of the Mississippi.)

1. We could play Elmer Fudd's Marching Band and you would still have a good time. The party isn't normally the music, but the celebration. Except this time is different, the music is really quite good.

Report, vets differ on Agent Orange

CHICAGO (UPI) — Federal researchers reported Thursday that most U.S. ground troops in Vietnam apparently were not heavily exposed to the herbicide Agent Orange, but a veterans' group immediately challenged the assessment as flawed.

Scientists from the Centers for Disease Control, reporting in the Journal of the American Medical Association, said 646 veterans, active in areas most heavily sprayed with Agent Orange, appear to have no more dioxin in their blood than do 97 veterans who did not serve in Vietnam.

"Most U.S. Army ground troops who served in Vietnam were not heavily exposed to TCDD, except perhaps men whose jobs involved handling herbicides," concluded the researchers from CDC in Atlanta.

TCDD is the most toxic form of dioxin, a contaminant in the defoliant Agent Orange. Dioxin is suspected of causing cancer in humans.

Barry Kasinitz, spokesman for Vietnam Veterans of America, attacked the CDC study for generalizing about "most" troops exposure.

"The study shows it is unlikely military records can be used to identify veterans exposed to Agent Orange. It does not say those people do not exist," Kasinitz said. "(Over 2 million men served in Vietnam. We just don't know how many were exposed.)"

Kasinitz said the agency has known for a year that service records were of little use and charged publication of the study reflected politics rather than science.

"We have learned from bitter experience that when it comes to the Agent Orange issue, the fine work done by CDC scientists is grossly distorted by this administration," Kasinitz said.

CDC statistician John Karon said Agent Orange was used in Operation Ranch Hand sprayings to expose enemy positions in wide areas, but was also sprayed locally to clear brush around base camps.

Dukakis, Bush tie in poll

CHAMPAIGN (UPI) — Presidential candidates George Bush and Michael Dukakis are in a dead heat in Illinois.

A statewide telephone poll by WCIA-TV of 550 registered voters shows each candidate with 42 percent of the vote, with 16 percent undecided. The poll, taken Aug. 24-29, has an error margin of plus or minus 4.2 percent.

Judge: Suspect not fit to stand trial for killing

BELLEVILLE (UPI) — A judge has ruled that a man charged with killing an intern reporter at the Belleville News-Democrat is unfit to stand trial for murder.

Rodney Woidtke, 27, formerly of Bakersfield, Calif., is charged with first-degree murder in the slaying of Audrey Cardenas of College Station, Texas.

Cardenas, 24, a recent graduate of Texas A&M University, had worked at the newspaper about 10 days before her disappearance in June. Her decomposed body was found June 26 in a dry creek bed near Belleville High School East.

found. IDOT can't approve the Carbondale project unless the University donates an estimated $650,000 collected through a $15 per semester student fee increase, Marvin Tanner, USG Mass Transit Commission vice chairman, said.

The USG Mass Transit Commission met Wednesday to write Guyon a request for partial University funding of the feasibility study for the mass transit system.

The study, which could cost $20,000 to $40,000 is also essential before the SIU Board of Trustees will approve the student fee increase and before the IDOT will give matching funds, Kris Fabian, the commission's chairman, said.

City manager Bill Dixon offered to help fund the study through the Carbondale's city motor fuel tax fund, Tanner said. The contribution will still have to be passed through the City Council, he said.

Tanner said IDOT will give a maximum of about $150,000 from the $2.5 million allocated to Illinois' 34 mass transit systems only after a feasibility study shows Carbondale as the major benefactor of the project.

The USG members who attended the meeting agreed that this provision may result in a loss of University control and discussed the need for a Mass Transit Board developed through the USG to work in conjunction with the city.

well." "I have never seen anything like this in Sudan," Manzoul said.

"It is very frustrating not knowing," Manzoul said. He said he has tried calling a relative in Saudi Arabia to see if he had any information, but he had gone on vacation to Sudan.

Mohammed said the rain began on July 30, beginning at sunset and continuing through the following afternoon. He said in that week it rained three times.

Mudawi M. Eimusharaf, doctoral student in computer based education said he received a letter from his family in Sudan on Tuesday.

"Part of my house fell down and in our neighborhood 150 homes fell down, but now I know my family is okay," Elmusharaf said.

"Ethiopia is a mountainous country," Wanna Leka, a University student from Ethiopia said. "The heavy rains moved downward towards the lowlands causing floods in the northeastern part of Ethiopia, the flooding of the Blue Nile and the capital of Sudan—Khartoum," he said.

"My family has not been affected by the floods because they aren't in any of the areas the floods have damaged. Food prices will probably go up," he said.

Elmusharaf, whose uncle had recently returned from Sudan and told him about the conditions, said the sewer systems have mixed with the flood water.

tournament. Fun is to be found for people of all ages. The older crowd seemed to enjoy the craft shops and booths the best.

John and Dorothy Luther, of Pinckneyville, said they liked the Exhibition Hall the best, which showed different crafts, fruits, vegetables, and artwork that were judged.

The younger generation also has plenty to keep it busy.

Johnny Hopman, of Carrier Mills, said he liked the rides the best.

The rides are at the Link Shows that have been open every day of the fair. They also include carnival games, the world's smallest girl and exotic animals.

Other attractions include the AgriLand, which gives harvesting and tillage demonstrations, and AgriWorld, which exhibits several types of farm equipment from area dealers.

Music is always to be found at the fair. Besides the Miller and Anheuser Busch tents, which provide daily music shows, there is the free entertainment tent, which provides both music and comedy. The Grandstand also has nightly shows.

Harness racing began Tuesday and will end Saturday with the World Trotting Derby, the second richest race in the world for three-year old trotters.

For car enthusiasts, the Southern Illinois 200 stock car race will be held Sept. 5 and the Silver Crown dirt car race will be held Labor Day.

The fair provides several information booths, including a state police information center, and also provides help for those with infants by having the Baby Comfort Station, which provides free diaper changes.

To get an overall view of the fair, trams are available to transport the public around the fair.

The wide range of entertainment is reflected in the attendance of the fair. The attendance this year has already exceeded last year's fair by 48,000 people.

search committee, Britton said her major concern in the current trend of financial aid is the increased amount of student borrowing. Since 1975, students' borrowing has more than doubled.

"I don't want loan eligibility to go down, I want grant eligibility to go up," she said. "The school, state and federal levels need to take a serious look at the financial aid programs available, improve them and create new programs," she said.

"I don't want loan eligibility to go down, I want grant eligibility to go up."

—Pamela Britton

Britton was chosen over Dan Mann, also an associate director of financial aid, and Connie Shanahan, an academic adviser for Advanced Technical Studies.

Weich said "all three were very qualified, but (Britton) had wonderful experience in all financial aid situations and was well received by the search committee and the financial aid staff and advisory committee. She also worked very closely with Joe Camille."

Memorial held for student

Memorial services for University student Teresa Eileen Bleyer will be held at 10:30 this morning at St. Joseph's Catholic Church, 600 N. Russell St., Marion. Burial will be at Oakwood Cemetery in Cartersville.

Miss Bleyer, 24, died Tuesday from injuries sustained in an automobile accident. She was a senior in physical education.

Memorials may be made to the church building fund.

'Temptation' bomb threat clears theater

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Central Ohio's first public screening of "The Last Temptation of Christ" was interrupted by two telephoned bomb threats Wednesday night at the Drexel Theatre.

The suburban Bexley theater was evacuated, but no bomb was found. After waiting outside about 15 minutes, a sell-out crowd of 730 went back inside and the film was resumed.

Every theater that's shown the movie so far has received bomb threats but the Drexel is the first to be evacuated, said a Universal Pictures spokesman.

Protests by more than 200 people lining both sides of the street outside the theater were orderly for the first showing but included several shouting matches before the second show.

Protesters included some singing "Amazing Grace," silent sign-carriers and Roman Catholics praying the rosary. A group of 16 atheists picketed in support of the film.

Protest signs included "The greatest story ever distorted," and "Tickets to Hell: $5."

Held back by yellow plastic tape, protesters started lining up about two hours before the first show. Most stayed at least until the second show began.

Is the Church Speaking a Foreign Language?

When you are speaking to a Christian or you overhear Christians in conversation, does it sound like they are speaking in a foreign language, incomprehensible? Does it seem as though you are somehow being left out or excluded? (No doubt, many new international students will have this experience the next few weeks.) Be assured, this is not intentional or part of any grand design.

Christians and the institution to which they belong (the church) are not unlike university departments dedicated to particular fields of study. Each department has developed its own language and set of symbols unique to its endeavor. The purpose is not to make your learning more difficult but to allow those in the field to communicate more efficiently their ideas and concepts. What has been created is an enriched language that contributes to a greater understanding.

Many times students' success relies upon their ability to learn the language spoken in order to grasp the concepts taught. One of the primary responsibilities of instructors is to introduce the language so students can begin to develop understanding.

The Church has also developed a language and a set of symbols so those within the institution can more efficiently communicate. Much more can be expressed about Jesus Christ through a language specific to his nature and fullness. What results is those within the Church are strengthened in understanding.

A problem can arise when those within the Church fail to recognize their responsibility to communicate Jesus Christ to those outside the Church in a language they too can understand.

What can result is a feeling that the faith in Jesus Christ and a relationship with God are difficult or that certain individuals are separated or excluded.

This is not God's intention or his method. He willingly and efficiently communicates with every individual who seeks to know him and have a relationship with him.

If you seek to know God and have a proper relationship with him, go to his son, Jesus Christ. He is an open channel of communication as well as a doorway to that relationship. God will respond in a way that your heart will surely understand.

At the American Baptist Campus Ministry, we try to speak so that everyone can understand. Visit us soon.

Man swigs gas line to prove tale

SANDP... A jury accused story that gasoline, demonstration regular unbreathaly? Barry J. Sagle, co... District Co... he was sip... into his ca... he was arr... In an at... story, he g... regular ga... County Jail... then unde... analysis tes...

In an attempt to prove his story he gulped down a cup of regular gas ... than underwent a breath analysis test.

Twenty minutes after he swigged the fuel, the device showed his blood-alcohol level was .31 percent, three times the legal level of .1 percent. Raynor suffered no apparent ill effects from the demonstration.

Raynor said he did not tell the arresting officer he had been siphoning gas because, "I didn't think gasoline would make any difference or show up on the intoximeter."

In the end it didn't matter. The jury convicted him of drunken driving.

Robinson said police reported no gasoline odors the night of the arrest and said Raynor failed field sobriety tests.

One juror said the panel hearing the case Wednesday was convinced of his guilt by the sound of his voice on an officer's tape recording of the arrest.

"The tape was pretty bad," Raynor conceded after the verdict was read.

90 dead, alive animals discovered in house

HOUSTON (UPI) — Animal control officers responding to a complaint of too many barking and free-running dogs outside a home went inside and found some 60 dogs, 30 cats and assorted fowl — including an 18-year-old Thanksgiving turkey that the cook couldn't bear to kill.

"It's just a case of misguided animal love gone past common sense," said Capt. Dan Bugg of Houston's Bureau of Animal Regulation and Care.

Late Wednesday, the animal regulation bureau discovered most of the animals, many ill and underfed, as well as the skeletal remains of other domestic pets in one Houston home.

They found Bessie Mills, 61, in a neighboring home where she lives with her husband and elderly mother as well as a few of the pets, and charged her with cruelty to animals, a misdemeanor that carries a maximum one-year jail sentence and a $1,000 fine. At least 60 dogs and 30 cats were taken from Mills' homes, along with an undetermined number of geese, roosters, ducks, peacocks, chickens and a turkey.

"Cats, dogs, roosters, chickens, geese, rabbits. They were all in there. I've never seen anything like this. This is the worst I've ever seen, the worst," said Sgt. Robert Williams of the bureau. "The whole house was filled. Some were dead, some were alive."

Workers had to wear masks and rubber boots as they removed animals from the one-story house, which was strewn with litter, animal waste and the carcasses of some animals.

"The smell is so bad it burns your eyes. It gets in your throat and you can't breathe," said animal control Officer C.D. Lacy, who discovered the situation after responding to a complaint about numerous dogs barking.

Alumni response in Southern Illinois has been good, Hart said. Seventy percent of those who contributed to the "First Fifty Club" campaign were new contributors to the SIU alumni fund.

Ball said contributors are capable of reaching much higher goals. "I feel we can reach the $200,000 mark," he said. "If we do, we will have raised more than has ever been raised at SIU in a fund-raising campaign."

Ball said the University will be hiring an athletics fund-raiser in two weeks, to continue with Hart's campaign efforts.

Field hockey opens season

Unless the temperatures start to rise, the field hockey team is prepared for its season opening games against Southwest Missouri and Louisville on Saturday in Springfield, Mo.

"The fact we are playing two games in one day may be a factor," Coach Jules Illner said. "We're playing on the Omniturf, and it could get rough if it gets over 80 degrees."

The 10 a.m. contest versus Southwest will be the greater challenge, Illner said. "We definitely have to be aggressive early," she said. "We can't let down because they always have been able to come back."

The Salukis play at 2 p.m. against Louisville.

Spikers hold alumnae match

The SIU-C women's volleyball team will play its annual Alumnae Match Sunday at 2 p.m. in Davies Gym.

Among the alumnae returning are Chris Boyd, Robin Deterding, Bonnie Norrenberns, Mary Maxwell, Barb Clark, Joan Wallenberg and Sonya Locke.

to mopping up the floor to calling time outs to stop them," Memphis State coach Jim Callender said. "But we had nervousness which caused a lot of mis-serves.

Memphis State finished with nine service errors. However, the Salukis had 18.

"The biggest thing we lack is consistency on the service line," Sinclair said. "I'm disappointed with my own performance there. Our enthusiasm was up and down because of it."

"We have a young team and we only had two days to prepare because of three injuries," Callender said.

Sinclair said the Salukis' attack hinged on the passing game.

Rhoades to get first test in Macomb

By David Gallianetti
Staff Writer

Saturday is opening night for Rick Rhoades as Saluki football head coach, and the crowd he has to entertain won't exactly be on his side.

SIU-C is at Western Illinois for their season opener against the Leathernecks. Rhoades said the task ahead won't be an easy one.

"It's going to be a tough opening assignment," Rhoades said. "We have got to stop the run first, but we are very concerned with their passing game."

Senior quarterback Paul Singer will be running the show for Western. Singer, who already owns all but one of Western Illinois' passing records, is expected to surpass the 8,000 career-yards mark this season.

"We are going to treat him with a lot of respect," Rhoades said. "We're planning on mixing it up on him and never giving him the same thing twice. We have to be able not to let him rip us to shreds."

Leathernecks' coach Bruce

Craddock said he is expecting a battle from the Salukis, despite Rhoades' crew being picked toward the bottom of most Gateway polls.

"They are a bonafide football team," he said. "We have beaten them by only a six point difference over the last four years. We know the players they have."

Besides having Singer, Western sports a strong backfield. Senior fullback Brett Grimshaw, junior running back Mike Cox and sophomore running back Derek Swanson make a potent combination.

Grimshaw was Western's leading rusher and pass catcher last season, averaging five yards per carry while racking up 530 total yards.

Craddock said the Leathernecks will mix up their passing and running options. "We will try to do both and have a balanced attack," he said. "I think you have to do that or their defensive zone is going to catch on to what

'They call me Bruce'

Led by sixth-year coach Bruce Craddock, Western Illinois has been relentless on the Salukis, winning the last four meetings. That doesn't mean Craddock is counting this year's game an easy victory. "One must remember the average win has been by six points," Craddock said. "I'm overwhelmed by (SIU-C's) mammoth size and talent."

Climbing the polls

The Leathernecks were ranked No. 12 in the NCAA Division I-AA preseason poll. This was the first time Western Illinois has received a preseason ranking.

Singer's hit record

Western Illinois quarterback Paul Singer is only one touchdown shy of possessing every passing record at the school. All that remains is the career touchdown mark. The 6-foot-3 senior has passed for 41 career touchdowns, which ties him with Bob Majjka (1969-71). Majjka is being inducted into the WIU Sports Hall of Fame on Saturday.

The record's B-side

Salukis' first-year coach Rick Rhoades is excited about facing Singer. "We know all we care to know about Singer and his teammates," Rhoades said. "That's the bad story. The good is that going against an outstanding individual and team only makes it that much

The women's volleyball team sent Memphis State tumbling 6-15, 15-7, 15-4, 15-12 in the opening match of the season Thursday night at Davies Gymnasium.

Salukis' coach Debbie Hunter said her team had a quick attack. Leading the way was Nina Brackins, who had 15 kills.

"I think we do better with a quicker attack," Brackins, a junior middle blocker, said. "We were talking to each other on the court, and it made a difference."

Joining Brackins on the attack was senior Teri Noble, who had 12 kills. Salukis Beth Winsett and Lori Simpson each had nine kills.

Memphis State was led by Sarah Tjeimeland, who had 11 kills.

The Salukis came out sluggish in the first game, making 11 hitting errors.

"They wanted to perform so well that they did themselves a disservice," Hunter said.

The Salukis came back to win the second game, primarily on the strength of redshirt senior setter Sue Sinclair, who finished with 36 assists.

"Sue's been out of the (playing) situation for too long, but she did a tremendous job. Sue got to some balls that I didn't think she'd get to all season.

Sinclair made a key save in the fourth game that resulted in Noble making a devastating kill off a rally, giving the Salukis a 7-4 advantage.

Jim Hart raises $86,110 for athletics program

Jim Hart

By Robert Baxter
and Megan Hauck
Staff Writers

Athletics Director Jim Hart, the man with the Midas touch for the Salukis so far, announced Thursday that his "First Fifty Club" campaign surpassed the original goal of $50,000 in 50 days.

Hart, speaking to a group of about 200 boosters and coaches at the Ramada Inn, presented a check for $86,110 — the grand total of his first fund-raising campaign — to Rex Ball, president of the SIU Foundation.

"The fact that we've reached our first goal of $50,000 is just the tip of the iceberg," Hart said. "Our real goal is $200,000, which is the budget for the athletics department this year."

Hart announced a plan to continue his fund-raising efforts, which he dubbed the "First Year Club."

To generate funds, the SIU Foundation has opened alumni offices in the Chicago and St. Louis metropolitan areas. Ball said about 50 percent of SIU alumni are living in those areas.

Hart set a possible timetable to meet the $200,000 goal for the first quarter of 1989.

"We still have a challenge ahead of us," he said. "We've only won the first battle — the war is still on."

Charlotte West, who served as interim athletics director for 11 months at SIU-C, said Hart's fund-raising efforts will benefit the entire athletics program.

"We exceeded the goal," West said. "It portends of even better things to come."

She said she probably would not have the same methods as Hart, but "there are different ways to skin a cat."

"I think we're doing a good job together," West said. "If you go back and look at all the reasons people supported him and all the reasons people supported me, I think they're
