Stadium parking idea dropped by University

By Tracy Moss
Administration Writer

University officials have scrapped plans for a $10 million McAndrew Stadium parking project and will concentrate on the traffic and parking situation of the entire campus.

James Tweedy, vice president of administration, said because support of the project was mixed he will recommend to the Traffic and Parking Committee that the project be cancelled and a long-term traffic and parking plan be devised.

"The costs of the project were high in relation to what people are willing to support," Tweedy said.

"Constituencies on campus had a lot of concerns with the project," he said. "President John C. Guyon and I decided that we're just not ready to do this."

AAI/Campbell Designers, Inc. of Collinsville had proposed a parking structure with east and west wings adjacent to McAndrew Stadium providing 1,000 additional parking spaces. The estimated

For Jennifer Jochums, who did not do as well when she was in high school in Peoria, hard work and self-motivation paid off when she was recognized Sunday for her grades by the College of Agriculture.

Jochums, a freshman in plant and soil science/environmental studies from Peoria, said college was a second chance to do well in school and make her parents proud.

"I didn't do too well in high school so I really wanted to do well to make my parents proud of me," Jochums said. "I was a self-motivator. I knew that I had the materials to do well. So I did it with my own motivation."

Jochums was one of 1,800 students honored for high academic achievements. It also was a chance for parents and faculty to be proud.

"Honors Day is always a delight," SIUC president John C. Guyon said. "It's important that students receive positive strokes for their accomplishments."

Honors Day has been a tradition at SIUC for at least 30 years, said Levida Kruse, assistant director for admissions and records.

This program is one of the most important that the University gives, Kruse said.

"It's the most important because it gives a good image of the University in the number of students honored," Kruse said. "Students get to meet the faculty and president and the parents get to meet the people that teach their kids."

Ten SIUC academic units participated in recognizing students.

"I'm so proud of the students, my school and the University for the support of the School of Social Work," said Director Mary Davidson. "Our college is growing and the students are doing great."

Some students were surprised by the honors.

"I was surprised because I didn't do that well in high school," said Mark Herman, a freshman in the College of Technical Careers from Naperville.

Honor students are required to have a 3.5 grade point average and both their SIUC career and cumulative if they are transfer students.

School has not come easily to Jochums because of the way she must balance it with work.

"It's been difficult because I work too," Jochums said. "It seems like there's not enough hours in the day. But, I designate days where I work on certain classes at night. I don't overwork myself. I say 'I'm going to work three hours on plant biology, then I'm going to go do

State officials discuss ways to save local surcharge tax

By Jeremy Finley
Politics Writer

State officials have taken a first step in the fight to save the local government portion of the income tax surcharge.

Gov. Jim Edgar's budget has proposed cutting the tax for cities and counties, prompting representatives from the Southern Illinois region to meet Saturday at the SIUC small business incubator to discuss the impact of a surcharge and a property tax cap.

Edgar's proposal states that the local government only will receive $40 million next year from the state surcharge. Local governments in Illinois have received $1.25 billion since the surcharges began in 1989, aimed at funding education and local governments.

Murphysboro Mayor David McDowell said Edgar pledged his support for local governments in 1989, but he wonders where his loyalties now lie.

"We're anticipating the surcharge money for capital projects, so what are we supposed to do now?" McDowell said. "How are we going to find another source of revenue?"

Sen. Jim Rea, D-Christopher, said the surcharge funds are necessary for the success of local governments in the state.

"I know the value of the surcharge, I feel it should be extended now," he said. "I know that local governments need the surcharge badly. I believe we can win this one if we stand together, but it's not going to be easy."

Dunn, Democrats clash on Illinois budget plan

By Jeremy Finley
Politics Writer

Illinois Democrats have accused Sen. Ralph Dunn of ignoring the state's growing deficit problems because he did not support their suggested budget plan, but Dunn said the Democrats are only playing a political game to hurt Gov. Jim Edgar.

The Senate Democrats introduced a comprehensive plan aimed at reducing the state's deficit last week and said Dunn and other committee Republicans voted against the plan.

Pat McGuchin, press secretary for the Senate Democrats, said the plan suggested a reduction in the deficit for the coming year by $426 million and increased funding for elementary and secondary education by $150 million, $40 million more than Edgar suggested in his budget proposal on March 3.

But Dunn, R-Du Quoin, said this is a move by the Democrats to injure Edgar's budget proposal.

"This is only a political plan to embarrass the governor," he said. "It is just plain political rhetoric."

Dunn said he realizes the budget situation is getting worse, but other areas of the state require immediate attention.

"Last year, when they had the majority in the Senate, the Democrats hurt the budget with cuts," he said. "They made cuts for medicare and child services. The deficit is bad, but the only way you can help the deficit is by raising taxes, and no one wants that. And certainly I support funding higher education and secondary education."

Sen. Howard Carroll, D-Chicago, said in a press release that Dunn and Edgar are sending out a message that they are not concerned about the deficit.

"Voters sent us a resounding message last November that they're tired of 'politics as usual,' and they are demanding that government get serious about reducing our staggering budget deficits," Carroll said. "Sen. Dunn had a chance to respond to that message this week, but he thumbed his nose at the voters."

"Like Gov. Edgar, Dunn seems content with catchy slogans and election-year panoply, when what Illinois needs is a serious budget reduction measures that will accomplish what every hard-working Illinois family is going today—tightening their belts and living within their means," he said.

Dunn said the Democrats introduced the amendments for the plan but withdrew the rest of the amendments after seeing that the Republicans would not vote for any of the suggestions.

Mark Gordon, press secretary for Senate Republicans, said they are waiting for further details with the plan.

"We haven't seen the entire plan yet," he said. "The Senate Republicans have requested that we see the plan. But frankly, I don't think they have a completed one yet."

But Cindy Huebner, press

Texas Tech Swoopes to women's crown

Zapnews

ATLANTA — The crowd at the Omni wasn't booing, although that's what it sounded like.

No, the crowd was "swooooooping." As in Sheryl Swoopes, which rhymes with hoops, and that's all you need to know.

Swoopes, a 6-0 player (no position need be listed—she plays them all), provided the most thrilling individual performance in NCAA women's championship history Sunday as she scored 47 points, breaking Bill Walton's NCAA title record of 44, set in 1973, and led Texas Tech (31-3) to an 84-82 victory over Ohio State (28-4) for its first national title.

Swoopes' personal performance aside, the game itself was a veritable highlight film as the two teams had an old-fashioned shootout from the opening tip.

There were six lead changes in the second half after a 9-2 run by Ohio State, which had trailed Texas Tech 40-31 at intermission.

With 2:30 left, Texas Tech was clinging to a two-point lead. And then came more Swoopes.

The NCAA Player of the Year hit two free throws and followed that with a tremendous layup in traffic on which she was fouled.

It was the first time in the game that Swoopes, who never changes her expression, showed emotion.

She punched her fist in the air and clapped.

You don't really appreciate Sheryl Swoopes until you have to try and stop her," said Ohio State coach Nancy Darsch. "She hurt us, not only physically, but mentally. We pride ourselves on our defense, but I saw us get dejected when she scored so many tough shots on us."

SIUC fast out of Valley gate

By Karyn Viverito
Sports Writer

The SIUC softball team got off to a fast start in its first season in the Missouri Valley Conference, going 3-1 over the weekend.

The Salukis' only loss came in its last game of a doubleheader against Creighton Saturday afternoon.

After shutting out the Bluejays in eight innings to win 1-0 in the first game, SIUC found itself in trouble when CU jumped on Saluki hurler Tania Meier for two runs in the first inning of the second game.

With the score 2-1 in the top of the sixth inning, the Salukis' comeback effort looked promising when left-fielder Karrie Irvin started off the inning with a towering triple off the right-center field fence. Christine Knotts followed, reaching base on a dropped third strike and Mandy Miller then singled to load the bases with no outs.

Three groundouts ended the Salukis' inning and their hopes of a comeback.

Saluki head coach Jay Brechtelsbauer said her team definitely had its opportunities, but just couldn't drive the runs in.

"We were in a position to score in a couple of innings but their pitchers really got themselves out of those situations," she said. "I also have to give Creighton's defense a lot of credit, as their third baseman took a lot of hard hit balls away from us and showed she's one of the better fielders in the league."

The two Bluejay runs were the only runs Meier would give up for the entire game. Angie Mick pitched a strong first game, giving up four hits and striking out six in her efforts on the mound.

SIUC was coming off of a two-game sweep over Wichita State on Friday, when the Salukis took the Shockers, 3-2 and 2-0.

Pitchers Mick and Meier pitched full games in their appearances and held the Shockers to a total of seven hits for both games.

Brechtelsbauer said she thought

Jays win slugfest, take two of three from SIUC

By Dan Leahy
Sports Writer

The Creighton Bluejays had the Salukis feeling blue Sunday, as they scored a season-high 14 runs en route to a 14-11 victory over SIUC.

The win allowed Creighton to take two of three games from the Salukis and drop SIUC to 1-2 in the Missouri Valley Conference.

The Salukis split a doubleheader on Saturday, getting great pitching from Mike Bender and Mike Van Gilder.

Creighton won the opener 2-1, before the Dawgs came back in the nightcap for a 3-2 victory.

In the first game, Creighton's Alan Benes tossed a complete game three-hitter. He fanned 10 Saluki hitters while walking just two.

SIUC starter Mike Blang went seven innings, allowing five hits before leaving with a right elbow strain.

Creighton tallied both of its runs in the second inning. Bill Hahn was hit by a pitch with one out and Jon Dunlop walked. With two outs, A.J. Walkenhoff plated both runners with a double.

The Salukis got their only run in the eighth. After a double by Dave Taylor, Clint Smothers was thrown out at first. Taylor bolted for third on the play and the first baseman unhooked a wild throw, allowing Taylor to score.

In the second game, the Salukis got a run in the third on a two-out solo home run by Jason Smith, his fifth of the season.

SIUC extended its lead to 3-0 in the fourth, when Dave Taylor got things going with a one-out single. Jeff Cwynar tripled to score Taylor and Chris Sauritch singled Cwynar home.

Creighton tallied a run in the fourth and a run in the sixth, but otherwise was shut down by Saluki starter Van Gilder. Van Gilder pitched a complete game, allowing six hits while striking out five.

Sunday's game was a big change of pace from the pitching duels of Saturday.

The Salukis led 3-2 until the Bluejays cut loose with seven runs in the fourth and four more in the fifth to take a 13-3 lead.

The Dawgs never quit, however, as they scored seven runs in the sixth and one in the seventh to trim the lead to 13-11.

The Salukis made things interesting by loading the bases in the top of the eighth with one out, but Bluejay reliever Aaron Puffer induced a strike out and a fly ball to end the inning.

Scott DeNoyer and Dan Esplin each had three hits and three RBI to lead the Saluki offensive attack.

Mike McArdle made an early exit, going 3 1/3 innings and allowing five runs to take the loss (3-2).

The Salukis (14-11) will be at home Tuesday to face the University of Kentucky at 2 p.m.

Wright qualifies NCAAs; SIUC 5th

By Jeff McIntire
Sports Writer

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo.—Cameron Wright qualified for the NCAA outdoor track and field championships and the Saluki track team overcame the cold weather to tie for fifth at the SEMOtion Relays Friday and Saturday.

Wright qualified for nationals with a high jump of 7-3, which also was good for first place in the event. Wright's jump beat former Saluki olympian and NCAA champion Darrin Plab's second-place 7-0 mark.

Wright said that qualifying early in the outdoor season relieved some of the pressure on him and enabled him to open up his level of competition. "Now that I have 7-3 out of the way, I can concentrate on hitting 7-4 and 7-5," he said.

"I'm glad I finally qualified; I want to win it this year. That is my goal."

SIUC tied Central Michigan for fifth at the meet with 21 points, behind Missouri (22), Illinois State and Arkansas State (30, tied for second), and first-place Middle Tennessee State (33).

Brian Miller also made a significant contribution, placing second in the shot put with a throw of 53-11, and fourth in the hammer throw with a distance of 165-4.

SIUC assistant coach Darren Barber won the javelin with a throw of 216-3, bettering fellow Saluki Jonathan Hirsh's season-best mark of 195-4.

Torry King also had a good weekend, winning fourth place in the shot put with a throw of 50-8 1/2, and winning third place in the discus with a 169-3 mark.

A strong running performance was turned in by the 4x1600 relay team of Josh Daly, Bernard Henry, Garth Akal and Neville Brooks, which finished second with a time of 17:35.45.

"Our field athletes did well, but our runners were flat," SIUC head coach Bill Cornell said. "The highlight for us was Cameron's 7-3 high jump getting him in nationals."

Saluki women netters take two of three in Valley action

By Kevin Bergquist
Sports Editor

The SIUC women's tennis team picked up two crucial Missouri Valley Conference wins over the weekend to help its chances of a strong seed in the upcoming league tourney.

The Salukis lost to Wichita State, but rebounded to claim wins over Southwest Missouri State and Illinois State. SIUC now stands at 6-8 overall, and 3-1 in the MVC.

On Friday, the Salukis dropped a 5-1 decision to the Shockers. Catherine Pietsch collected SIUC's only win in the match, topping WSU's Dona Lemschek, 6-2, 6-2. It was just the beginning of a strong weekend for Pietsch, who won all three of her matches.

"It was a good match (WSU) for us, and it set the tone for the rest of the weekend," SIUC head coach Judy Auld said. "It could have gone either way, but we weren't winning the crucial

City candidates to discuss local economy, reform

By Sanjay Seth
City Writer

Diversity, economic development and change — those are the campaign platforms three City Council candidates will stress when they square off in a public forum tonight.

The forum for Carbondale City Council and Carbondale Township candidates will be in the Student Center Auditorium at SIUC.

This forum, which is co-sponsored by the Jackson County League of Women Voters, the Graduate and Professional Student Council and the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce, is the second in the series of the city elections.

The final four council candidates, Maggie Flanagan, Mike Henry, and incumbents John Yow and Keith Tuxhorn will present opening and closing statements followed by a question and answer session.

The township candidates will follow immediately after.

In the first series on Feb. 22, the nine original candidates met in a public forum at the City Council Chambers before the primary elections.

Entrepreneur receives honors from University

By Mikael Pirtel and Thomas Gibson
Special Assignment Writers

Business entrepreneur Earl Graves was able to found Black Enterprise magazine in 1968, but he told SIUC students that today probably would be a terrible time to start a new magazine.

People are not as open minded as they were when Black Enterprise was first published in 1970," said Graves, owner of Pepsi Cola distributing in Washington D.C. who was honored Saturday by SIUC as Entrepreneur of the Year.

"The school of business has bestowed a signal of honor that I will always hold in the highest esteem," Graves said.

Graves entrepreneurial efforts began with a 25,000 personal loan from Citibank in New York.

He said he would never do business with Citibank again.

"Because of the way they operate and their advertising I think it is a racist institution," he added. The need I envisioned was a publication targeted specifically at the growing number of African-American entrepreneurs, corporate executives, and business professionals."

Graves said he had no doubt their numbers would grow and so would Black Enterprise.

Graves credits the military with having giving him the discipline and confidence to start a business.

Graves said the level of opportunity has changed for African-Americans.

The last 23 years have been bad politically and economically for black people, he continued.

Graves

"Martin Luther King and Robert Kennedy had visions of an America at peace with itself. Where people of different backgrounds, would join hands to fulfill the promises of this nation, to make the American dream come true," Graves said

He said he is optimistic about the Clinton administration, which has demonstrated it is determination to do something about the economy.

"Over the 1980's and longer, we consumed too much and saved too little. Quick fixes have substituted for public responsibility," Graves said.

He said the $1 trillion debt is a tax on U.S. children. Americans now must have the intelligence, willingness, and strength needed in the face of hard realities.

"Access to capital for African-Americans is still a problem but is better than it was 30 years ago," he continued.

He said African-Americans who are on a fixed income should try to invest.

Starting a franchise only cost 5,000 dollars.

"Real estate is always a good investment because for the most part land does not depreciate," added.

Michael Haywood, director of Minority Programs and COBA Undergraduate Recruitment for the College of Business and Administration, said that the information Graves imparted on the University goes beyond financial realms.

"He clearly demonstrated that minority blacks can excel in corporate America as well as in sports and theater," Haywood said.

"There is a need to diversify with the business world. Students need to take advantage of the 21st Century opportunities. We can all grow through better communications with each other."

DE staffers win advertising award

By Tina Davis
General Assignment Writer

The Daily Egyptian advertising staff won a third place award, the highest honor it has received in the National College Newspaper Contest.

Chris Ogren, senior in advertising from Chicago and student ad manager, and graduate Karl Hartfelder designed the full-page ad that won third in the best newspaper promotion advertisement.

The conference and contest was held by the Business and Advertising Managers Inc. from March 31 to April 3 in Charlotte, N.C.

Ogren said she was surprised to hear that she had won.

"I'm happy that we won at a national contest with over 200 schools involved," she said.

The ad was a Thanksgiving house ad with two pilgrims and turkey cartoon characters who depicted the words "Don't be fooled, Pilgrim. Drop by and we'll talk turkey."

The Daily Egyptian entered nine of 16 contest categories.

Sherrri Allen, advertising manager and Vicki Krether the, classified manager accepted the award. "I'm pleased with the recognition by receiving an award such as this," Allen said.

Mass transit needs large student vote

A MASS TRANSIT SYSTEM has been in the works since 1980 and the proposal finally will see the light of day on its second student referendum April 21.

The proposed system would provide routes through student residential areas and the city and would include 13 routes and eight buses as well as shuttles.

The idea of a mass transit system is a good one because it serves not only the needs of a diverse student body but those of the community as well.

But its advantages are not without a price, which will fall most heavily upon the students. That is why it is crucial that all SIUC students are informed of the issue and take part in the April 21 referendum.

THE COSTS FOR THE MASS TRANSIT system are about $1.3 million, said David Madlener, chairman of the Saluki Advisory Committee and of the Jackson County Mass Transit District.

According to a feasibility study, consultants estimate that the federal and state governments will provide only $300,000 of that portion, leaving $1 million to be obtained from a $20-a-semester student fee.

If the students vote yes April 21, the Jackson County Mass Transit District will present the plan to the Board of Trustees for approval. Because the mass transit is such a costly issue and affects the entire student body, students must turn out in large numbers.

If the students vote no, Madlener says there will be a transit system in Jackson County but not on a practical level. Without student support the transit proposal would not happen right away and only at a small level.

THE MASS TRANSIT PROPOSAL caters to the student population and is not without numerous advantages. The system would provide students with an alternative to congested parking, with its routes everywhere on campus and in Carbondale.

The transit would be available from 7:30 a.m. until 11 p.m. weekdays and until 2:30 a.m. on Fridays and Saturdays. The late night route would be available to students who need transportation home from the bars on Friday and Saturday nights. Service also would be offered during the breaks and the summer session.

In addition, the mass transit system is made accessible to the disabled population. Students would ride for free, non-students would pay a 50-cent fare for a bus-ride and $1 for a seat on the para-transit vehicles that would serve the elderly and people with disabilities.

IN A 1988 REFERENDUM, students favored a proposal for a mass transit based on the same routes and with a $15-a-semester student fee. However, President John C. Guyon said no because he felt there needed to be a professional consultant to convince him of the costs, Madlener said.

But because of inflation, the costs of the transit system have risen and the need for state and federal money is being requested in addition to the proposed $20 semester student fee.

If the mindset of the student body is similar to the one in 1988, it looks likely that students will favor the mass transit proposal. It should be noted, however, that there is a new population now and tuition has escalated as well as student fees.

This makes the sacrifice all the more real. A mass transit system funded mostly by the students would serve the students as well as the entire community — but not without its costs.

Students will determine whether or not the wheels of the system are put into motion and should do so in large numbers so that a clear message can be sent to transit organizers.

Letters to the Editor

Homosexuality not mental disorder

I am writing to correct the misinformation presented by Marc Perry, in his letter to the editor in the March 31 edition of the DE. First and foremost, homosexuality is not a mental disorder.

It is true that the first edition of the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders (DSM: 1952) classified homosexuality as a mental disorder; however, the medical and psychological communities have since determined that homosexuality is not a mental disorder and have reflected this in subsequent editions of the DSM.

Second, homosexuality is not an unnatural act. In fact, in our not-so-distant past, men typically restricted sexual relationships with women to reproductive purposes; when men wanted to have sex for pleasure, they sought out other men.

In addition, homosexuality is not limited to the human species. There have been several documented instances of homosexual activity among other species.

Third, homosexuality is not merely havin' intercourse with a member of the same sex. While sex is a part of homosexuality, it is not the main purpose of the relationship. Homosexuality is a relationship between members of the same gender, based on love, companionship, trust and understanding. In addition, in a homosexual relationship, one person does not take the role of "man" and the other "women."

Fourth, the difference between transvestism and transsexualism needs to be clarified. A transvestite does not want to become a member of the opposite sex, but to merely dress like one. A transsexual is someone who believes they were born into the wrong gender and feels the need to change.

Finally, homosexuals do represent a minority (they make up less than half of the population), and they, like all Americans, are entitled to all of the rights and freedoms provided by our Constitution. — Sam Rubenzahl, graduate, clinical psychology

Homosexuality no more illness than ignorance

This letter is in response to Marc Perry and his views on homosexuality. It is apparent that Mr. Perry is the one suffering.

Does he actually believe that homosexuals are similar to necrophiliacs and pedophiles?

Yes, Mr. Perry it is obvious that all people are not meant to be homosexuals just as all people are not meant to be heterosexuals.

What a boring world it would be if this were true. It is apparent that you know nothing of homosexuality and appear to want to remain ignorant on this issue.

Homosexuality is not a psychological disorder just as severe ignorant bigotry is not considered a psychological disorder.

It is your responsibility to become educated on this issue. Don't waste your educational opportunity here at SIUC.

No one is asking you to embrace a homosexual, but you could start by talking to one.

When you learn that homosexuals are not pedophiles and do not have "severe mental problem(s)" you will probably be a happier person. — John Cowles, graduate, higher education/psychology

Diagnostic tool proves being gay a preference

In response to your letter published March 31. Get with the 90s.

Your opening statements are biased, unsubstantiated, archaic, and indicative of ignorant thinking and prejudice ideals.

Just try to convince me and the entire psychological community that homosexuality is a mental disorder! Tell me, do you know what the DSM-III is? It's a diagnostic tool used to determine severity and types of personalities and personality disorders.

Guess what? Homosexuality is not regarded as a personality disorder!

It is seen as an affinity towards the same sex; a preference if you would, and not the next step before transvestism, for transvestism is something entirely different. Homosexuality is viewed as a desire, just as some prefer blondes over redheads.

Also, your hypothesis of homosexuality is incorrect because it doesn't promote the continuity of the human race is absolute balderdash!

Heterosexuals have been known to engage in sexual activities that don't promote population growth, and I'd make a pretty safe bet that "straight" people still do!

...if you can find any tangible proof that your statement is true today, I'll eat the entire journal!

Oral sex, anal sex, and foreplay are found in many straight couples, but are they considered mentally ill? Not! Just kinky, because it's more acceptable by people like yourself.

Your thesis is that homosexuality is a mental illness, and if you can find any tangible proof that your statement is true today, I'll eat the entire bloody journal!

Only then will I agree that homosexuals shouldn't be allowed in the military on the basis of mental illness; but I guarantee you that you won't. — Erwin J. Gregorio, senior, psychology

College of Agriculture

Putting in extra effort is one thing that Brett Hunly, a senior in agriculture from Auburn, makes a definite commitment to do.

"I've had to put in a little extra effort as far as taking time out to stay around, study hard on certain subjects and make sure I do a good job," he said.

Ryan P. Miller, a junior in agriculture from Browning, said high excellence in one semester led to a succession of high goals.

"I got a 4.0 my first semester, so I guess it's been a personal goal to get it every other semester," he said.

William Herr, dean of the College of Agriculture, said seeing peers receive awards will inspire other students.

Herr said Honors Day awards show outsiders the students' dedication to their field.

"It's not the award itself but it's what they've accomplished in getting the award that will help them in the job market," Herr said. "Most, if not all of our students come to us with good intentions, high ideals and great possibilities. However, only a portion succeed as measured by honors day standards."

Susan Kervey, senior in agribusiness economics from Taylorville, challenged her fellow students to make a difference in their lives and in others.

"No one really understands how close people in the College of Agriculture are until they're here," Kervey said.

College of Business and Administration

Kimberly Freeman, a sophomore in management from Matteson, said good habits, attention at home and sacrifice comprises her formula for success.

Freeman received recognition for achieving honors status, the Carrie Baines Award, the Stevenson Arms Minority Award and the Presidential Minority Scholar Award.

The College of Business and Administration celebrated the achievements of its students who have excelled in their classrooms as well as at campus activities.

COBA, said it is hard to find only one reason to account for these students' success.

"I am not convinced that all honor students are brighter than the average student," Mathur said. "What sets them apart is their willingness to work hard."

Jason Ervin, a freshman in accounting from Chicago, said he is glad the University sets aside time to recognize its students.

Ervin received honors for maintaining a grade point average of 3.5 and being on the dean's list for the College of Business.

Ervin said what motivates him to persevere is his strong belief in himself and his faith.

"I look on the television and I see negative images of African Americans, and when I see that it fuels the fire in me to excel," Ervin said.

College of Communications and Fine Arts

Stephanie Grant, who won the University and College Award, said she started out doing things she did not enjoy, such as working in a factory and grocery store.

"When I finally started working with art, I had no choice but to excel, because this is something that I truly love," said Grant, a senior in art and design.

Grant was one of more than 50 students recognized from the College of Communications and Fine Arts for outstanding work within the college.

This year is the last CCHA Honors Day because it is being abolished.

Gerald Stone, dean of the college, said students are achieving at such high levels because they like what they're doing.

"These students are interested and dedicated to their field and as studies come into place and they find themselves achieving at levels they aren't used to," Stone said.

Anthony Swinger, a senior in radio and television and a winner of the Delyte W. Morris Scholarship, said working hard inside the classroom and outside the school is the key to success.

"If a you can stay on top of your life, you can accomplish anything you want to," he added.

Other students attribute their achievements to something that just came naturally to them.

Brent Davis, a senior in journalism and winner of the Outstanding Graduating Senior Award, said he doesn't take things too seriously.

"You can't get too stressed out around here. You just have to go with the flow and try not to be competitive," he said.

Stone said achievement can come from any combination of philosophies and views, but they all involve dedication.

College of Education

Mary Ann Gearing drives an hour every day to SIUC, but the commute does not cut into her time to maintain a 4.0 GPA.

Gearing, a senior in elementary education from Cypress, won several awards during the Honors Day ceremonies, and attributed her success to her desire to be a teacher.

Dozens of students of the various branches of the Department of Education lined up next to the stage to accept awards Sunday.

Susan Shepherd, a senior in elementary education from Carbondale, said she came from a very supportive family of teachers and had good role models.

"I had excellent teachers who inspired me," she said. "I have just given my school work to God, and given Him the credit for whatever I achieve."

Don Beggs, dean of the College of Education, said 385 students in education were eligible for honors this year.

"This group of students represent themselves and others, showing that if you do well, you will be recognized and awarded," he continued. "We recognize donors for something special done for students."

College of Engineering

Phillip Davis, a professor in civil and mechanical engineering, said a basketball team win more games at home than on the road because of the support and encouragement from home. "That is why the students that have been recognized are doing so well — because of the encouragement they received from home," Davis said.

Wade Torres, a senior in electrical engineering from Rockford, won the Minority Engineering Program Scholarship.

Latresa Jackson, a sophomore in electrical engineering from Belleville, received honors from the department for having a grade point average of 3.8 or better.

Jackson said time management and hard work paid off.

College of Liberal Arts

A serious commitment to academics characterized students who received College of Liberal Arts awards Sunday.

COLA Dean John Jackson said the students have a very serious commitment because they know the hard work will open doors for them in the future.

"The awards presented today represented hundreds of hours of hard work in the classrooms, dorms and computer labs," Jackson said.

Chris Lowery, a sophomore history major with a 4.0 GPA, received the Robert W. Davis Memorial Scholarship for COLA.

"(Academics) is kind of my job, and I don't like to be bad at any job I do," he said. "That's how I view almost everything I do."

Michael Spiwak, who received the Frank L. Klingberg Youth World Scholarship, credited his four years in the military with making him a more mature student.

"A person must make a lot of hard choices at 18 about their schooling and career," he said. Jackson said the ceremony was one of the happy occasions for the college and the University.

"These folks are more numerous than those that burn cars," he said.

School of Social Work

As Darla Peters looked out into the darkened auditorium at Quigley Hall Sunday afternoon, her eyes focused in on the people who motivated her to earn the scholarship she received.

"As a single parent with two kids, it was extra hard for me (to maintain a 4.0)," said Peters, a junior in social work from Salem. "My children co-operated fully."

Peters, one of about 40 students honored, was a recipient of the C.L. "Pete" and Margaret Odum Memorial Scholarship.

Elaine Schmidt also received this award, and faces a similar challenge. Schmidt, a mother of three who commutes 55 miles to school every day, also works as a part time rural mail carrier.

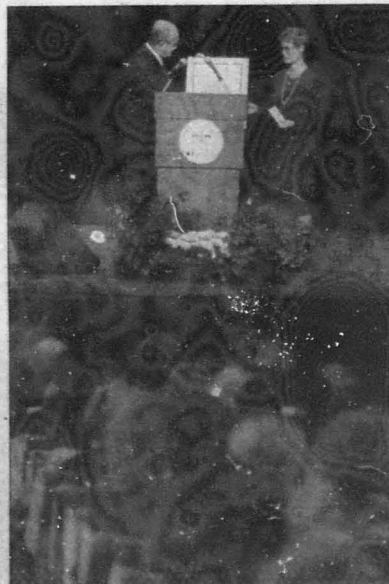

"It's difficult sometimes trying to juggle work with my responsibilities as a parent and a student," said Schmidt, a senior in social work from Marissa.

Jolanta Dziejgielewska, chief academic counselor of social work, said non-traditional students such as Peters and Schmidt are becoming more common in the field.

Mary Davidson, director of social work, said this dedication is evident with many students.

"We're seeing a switch from conservatism to liberalism, and it's wonderful."

Asian Americans face insensitivity

By Candace Samolinski
International Writer

Asian Americans face many problems with prejudice and insensitivity to their cultural differences, a UCLA professor of psychology told students last week.

"I think some of the biggest problems Asian Americans face are in the areas of cultural differences and conflicts," said Stanley Sue, who directs a mental health clinic for Asian Americans in Los Angeles. "There is a lot of prejudice and insensitivity toward them."

Sue visited SIUC Thursday and Friday to give lectures on race and ethnic relations from an Asian perspective. He said the insensitivity comes from a lack of understanding.

"Many times people form general images and stereotypes," he said. "These include things like 'all Asians are successful' or 'all Asians are like the Japanese and they are taking over business.' Too many people do not take the time to understand Asians."

Sue said cultural diversity is a topic that is becoming increasingly popular as the population of the United States becomes more diverse.

"Diversity is now a very hot topic," he said. "We know that the United States is becoming more diverse and the largest growing population is within the Asian community. It is about time we learned to deal with different types of people."

Students who attended the lecture Friday said it is important for people at the University to be familiar with these issues.

"I learned a lot from this seminar," said Lee The Lizzie Yow, a senior in business. "I think this topic is important for anyone in any major."

Barbara Yanico, associate professor of psychology, also said the information was important.

"A lot of what (Sue) had to say was based on studies and research that he has conducted," she said. "It was empirical knowledge and that is rare. He is a leader in his field of multicultural counseling."

Sue said differences between people do not have to be a problem.

"I believe people should try to appreciate diversity, Sue said."

SURCHARGE, from page 1

Rep. Larry Woolard, D-Carterville, said he wished he could share the optimism that the surcharge will stay intact.

"It's going to be difficult to win this battle," he said.

Woolard said the public should not be deceived by the $40 million offered to the local governments.

"The $40 million given two years ago, it's just a negotiation chip," he said. "They're offering you a portion of what you're already getting."

In his budget address, Edgar said the money used from the surcharge was not intended for salaries or for a permanent basis because it was designed to help with expenditures such as construction projects.

Carbondale City Manager Jeff Doherty said the city has proposed in its budget $50,000 for a city day care facility, but services in the city cannot be ignored.

"We're in the kids business, but we've had to borrow more money to utilize services for our local governments," he said. "I have a concern about the smaller communities. I don't know how they're going to make it."

Lee Roy Rendelman, chairman of the Union County Commissioners, said the counties need the surcharge to fund projects the state insists they complete.

Rendelman said the state ordered his county to renovate a new jail, despite the fact that the sources to fund by the county will suffer if the surcharge is removed.

"The Department of Corrections tells us that our jail is out of compliance," Conrad said. "Now I ask you how in the world can I ask the taxpayers of Union County, when two school referendums just failed recently, to reach down and pay for a new county jail?"

"When the legislation's introduced these mandates, they don't fund them," he said.

Michael McCreery, executive director for the United Counties Council of Illinois, said the state tells the governments to upgrade facilities and do not offer funding for them.

"They shove them down to us and say take care of it, that's unfunded mandates," he said.

Dan Reitz, chairman of the Randolph County Commissioners, said a large mandate problem for counties is city and school elections that the county must pay for.

"(Counties) are told that we have to run a school board election like a major election," he said. "All three, unfunded mandates, the surcharge and the cap on property taxes, are strikes against us. And three strikes is all you get, and three strikes you're out."

Conrad said the state also is suggesting a tax cap on property taxes, and that also hurt the county.

"The property tax is the only tax we control," he said. "They're suggesting we don't raise the tax, but we have to provide these mandates."

something for myself." It keeps me motivated, and then I have time to do the things that I want to do."

Some of the students are parents themselves.

Carol Hsin, a senior in social work from Carbondale, balances studies with raising a family.

"We're double proud because she's a non-traditional student, Peter Hsin, Carol's husband, said. "She goes to school and is a mother."

Frances Zielke, a senior in social work, came back to school as a junior to finish her degree and has two children.

"I was a flower child in the 60s and now I'm raising my GPA," Zielke said. "It's nice that they (SIUC) honor us."

Parents that are SIUC students get a lot of support from their families.

Larry Johnson, a father and freshman in aviation maintenance from Murphysboro, gets help from his daughter Kari. Johnson got the David L. Rich Scholarship.

"She helps with the math," Johnson's wife Sharon said.

"It's been 20 years since I've been in school," Johnson said.

Johnson's son Chad said he doesn't get as good grades as his dad.

DUNN, from page 1

secretary for the Senate Democrats, continued to say the Republicans have seen the plan.

"Them saying they haven't seen it simply isn't true," she said. "We offered it committee (Thursday)."

Gordon said the Democrats are offering solutions to the state's problems without a solution of how to fund them.

"They're trying to pretend that they can do everything without an increase in taxes," he said.

Carroll said the financial problems in the state need a strong and thought out budget plan.

"A serious budget would cut our staggering deficit, reduce our craving for foreign more spending and commit Illinois to responsible budgeting, while still providing the necessary resources for the most needy in our society, he said. "Our plan achieves those goals, but Sen. Dunn dismissed it."

Barb Brown, SIUC political scientist lecturer, said although Dunn usually sides with his Republican party, he has in the past sided with the Democrats especially on university related issues.

John Jackson, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, said Dunn sided with the Democrats on the issue of the surcharge when it was introduced in 1989.

But former Gov. Jim Thompson also was in support of the surcharge at the time.

"Gov. Thompson was for the tax increase, so while (Dunn) sided with the democrats, he was really siding with his republican governor."

Brown said Dunn's allegations of election-year pandering all relies on his actions in office.

"Politicians said in 1992, 'Elect me and you're going to see a streamlined government, and I'm going to bring the budget into balance,'" she said. "Edgar campaigned on it. If they don't do it, they're opening themselves open to attack."

cost of the project was $10 million.

Tweedy said he will recommend that the Traffic and Parking Committee hire an outside consultant this fall to study traffic and parking of the entire campus.

"This is the way to develop a long range plan to meet our needs," he said.

Charles Van Rossum, the administrative representative to the Traffic and Parking Committee, said the campus is not ready for a big parking structure.

"Some type of parking plan is needed for the campus," he said. "It does need to be studied on a long-term basis."

Jason Matthews, the graduate student representative to the committee, said he was very happy when he heard of the decision to cancel the project.

"I thought the plan wasn't well thought out and wasn't based on any evidence that proved we needed a parking structure near the stadium," Matthews said.

Tweedy said the project received opposition from some groups because of the location.

People worried about traffic around the structure, other campus parking problems and the identification of the structure with the athletic stadium, Tweedy said.

The construction of new buildings will create other parking problems on campus.

The new life sciences building will congest the traffic and parking areas near the Communications Building and the new technology annex also will pose a parking problem for faculty and students.

The new hotel to be constructed adjacent to the Student Center could cause a parking problem without a McAndrew parking garage.

Tweedy said University officials are considering parking alternatives for the hotel.

He said about 100 spaces will be added this summer in the lot north of the arena to alleviate congested parking around the stadium.

Tweedy said he will schedule a meeting to present his recommendation to the traffic and parking committee.

"I think they will react favorably to the decision," he said.

FORUM, from page 3

Tuxhorn said he will speak to the community on change.

Yow said he will not dwell too much on issues that have been discussed in the past as he feels all candidates are after the same thing — improvement.

Flanagan said she would like to address proposals she has for the city, her vision for Carbondale and where her community comes from.

Henry said he will speak on several issues he feels are equally important.

These include economic development for the city, a youth program aimed at the high school aged youth and downtown development.

Both Flanagan and Tuxhorn said a different format for the forum would be welcome.

Tuxhorn said dialogue between individual candidates would be interesting.

He said he has several questions to pose himself.

Flanagan said she would like to see a debate-style format where the common issues all candidates had could be discussed.

The forum will begin at 7 p.m. and elections will be on April 20.

University curtains computer purchase plans

SIUC's computer purchase plans with Apple Computer and IBM will expire tomorrow. SIUC will not renew these contracts, which ensured special computer hardware and software discounts for the University community. Here's why.

The original purchase plan gave discounts through local dealers, which footed the costs of stocking and selling equipment in exchange for a "captive" market. To maintain profit margins amidst falling computer prices, IBM and Apple have cut dealers out of the plan. New discount plans would require SIUC to operate as an on-campus dealer.

Under this option operating costs alone would force prices up to a point where discounts would virtually vanish. But more importantly SIUC's legal counselors believe that it is illegal for a state institution to compete with local businesses in this manner.

Information Technology administrators regret any inconvenience that might stem from this change, but believe the course the University has chosen is the most prudent given current constraints. -Db

Toolbook makes programming easy

Last year, staffers at Personnel Services found themselves spending too much time fielding routine questions from office visitors. Today, employees save time because inquiring minds get basic retirement information from a custom-made computer program via a PC in the reception area.

Many people in the University community who could benefit from disseminating information on a PC don't pursue the idea because they think they need computer programming expertise. However, if you have Microsoft Windows (3.0 or higher) and a special Windows program called Toolbook, you don't need technical experience to design your own applications.

Ainon Mizan, an SIUC alumna with a doctorate in sociology, created the pre-retirement guide for Personnel Services with Toolbook even though she had never used Windows before.

Based on the concept of a book, the first screen of Mizan's program features an introductory paragraph and offers the option of viewing the Table of Contents or Instructions. Users simply use a mouse to click on their choices. (Applications work with keystrokes, too.)

The table of contents offers a list of topics such as "retirement age" and "eligibility or service credit." When users click on a subject, they get another list of subtopics from which to choose. They return to the table of contents or instructions or link up with other topics by clicking on these options at the bottom of the screen.

Toolbook's many design and programming options let Mizan combine text and graphics to get Personnel Services' message across in a very effective way. Training applications that come with Toolbook software also helped her.

Toolbook also lets one access other Windows programs to retrieve information to use in an application, such as a portion of a text from Word For Windows or data from a spreadsheet in Excel. Program designers can install devices such as buttons, menu bars and context-sensitive controls called "hot words" to help users navigate through the application.

For more information, see your local software vendor. Toolbook prices vary from $200 to $600. -Db

Toolbook JARGON*

Application:

A computer program designed to perform specific functions. A program may be developed for classroom teaching, managing or conveying information, entertainment or training. The developer can customize the program. Applications can be informative or interactive, designed to provide customized information in response to data provided by the user.

Hot Words:

Designated words that allow the user to acquire additional information. If you click the mouse or hit a specific keystroke on a "hot word," you'll be linked with a definition or given a reference to another file for more information.

Menu Bar:

A device that helps the user move quickly around an application. Found at the top of the screen, this line features categories such as "File," "Edit" or "Text." When an item is selected with the mouse or an appropriate keystroke, the user pulls down a list of operations that can be chosen.

Buttons:

Devices that help you navigate an application, these small boxes are usually found at the bottom of the screen and are activated by the mouse or keystrokes. Examples include "Exit" and "Go Forward" buttons.

The ABC's of ADR's

Computer help is only a phone call away...

Each day, University faculty and staff seek help from Information Technology for a variety of projects and problems. Their needs range from a simple change in a report heading to more involved tasks like fixing machinery or creating new mainframe offerings such as the Campus Wide Information System.

So far this fiscal year, we have fielded 1,104 service requests, 414 of which we have completed and 121 that are currently active. The remainder stay on a waiting list until staffers are available to handle them.

Information Technology manages this heavy work load with Application Development Request (ADR) forms, which enable the staff to prioritize jobs and ensure the proper administrative approval.

An ADR allows faculty and staff to request computer-related work from Information Technology.

Individuals with a service request fill out an ADR form with details about the job and why they need it done and return it to Information Technology. We evaluate the project and send back the ADR with an estimate of the job cost. If the "client" gets proper administrative approval, we rank the request among others from the same vice presidential area in the following order of importance:

- 1) projects funded by real dollars (not out of vice presidential computer dollar allocations).
- 2) those governed by federal or state statutes or mandated changes, SIUC board policy or presidential directives.
- 3) warranty service.
- 4) other requests.
- 5) rainy day projects with no time constraints.

If you have submitted an ADR to Information Technology, you can get a listing of where it falls in the job hierarchy of your vice presidential area by typing ADRLIST at the CMS "ready" prompt.

If you'd like to put in a request for service, pick up an ADR form at the Computing Information Center in the basement of the Communications Building. -Db

F1 How does Information Technology track calls for help?

We provide assistance through the Network Control Center and its Job Management Control staff and through the Computing Information Center.

F1 What is the Network Control Center?

A round-the-clock monitoring facility at the central computing facilities in the Wham Education Building. It tracks data communications networks and major services like CICS or CMS (the systems supporting interactive applications such as the Student Information System and OfficeVision). Call if you have trouble using the services or for equipment repair (453-6217).

F1 What is Job Management Control?

A special network control center where staffers monitor jobs to ensure that they run successfully and that the overall job load is managed efficiently. The center can provide job status information and help with special needs (453-6241).

F1 What is the Computing Information Center?

A help facility temporarily located in the basement of the Communications Building. The center's information technicians (student workers) screen problems from callers and visitors and answer basic questions. If they can't help, they route the problem to an information specialist via an on-line problem management system. The user is contacted within 24 hours. (Walk-ins may be referred directly to a specialist for a 15-minute session.) If the specialist can't help, the problem is sent to the appropriate software product administrator in Information Technology (453-5155). -Db

College of Science

For chemistry and biochemistry professor David Koster, 1993 Outstanding Teacher for the College of Science, the future begins with educating new scientists and providing research.

Koster, along with several College of Science faculty members, awarded students who have achieved honor status in their scientific fields.

Erin Conley, recipient of John W. Voigt Natural History of Plants Award of $260 and certificate and junior in botany from Peoria, said she does a lot of field work related to wetland ecosystems.

Steve Morton and Kerrie McDaniel received the James E. Ozment Achievement Award in Natural History of $400 and certificate for being outstanding students in plant biology.

Morton, a doctoral student from Melbourne, Fla., who is researching toxic grounds under an electron microscope, said his family has been his major influence on his success.

"My family is what keeps me going," Morton said. "My wife Julia and my little girl have helped me as well as my parents."

Julie Porter, recipient of the William Ballowe Sr. Memorial Award in Physics and College of Science Dean's Scholarship and a senior in physics from Equality, said her parents kept her going to achieve excellence.

Brad G. Simms, Zoology department Carter/Kenney Endowed Scholarship winner and senior from Athens in Fisheries Management, said he owes his success to his interests in the outdoors.

College of Technical Careers

Nancy M. Gonzenbach, who was recognized as the CTC teacher of the year, compared teaching to golf, her favorite sport, in her Honors Day address.

"Most golfers approach each game with the idea of improvement, possibly making or breaking par, and the hope that the elusive hole in one will happen," said Gonzenbach, who teaches graphic communications. "As a teacher, we, too, approach each year, each semester, each day, and each class with the idea that improvement will be seen."

Gonzenbach, the daughter of two accomplished educators said that her drive to succeed in education comes from her background and the values that she was taught while growing up.

For Elaine M. Vitello, dean of CTC Honors Day is a day for her to recognize the students in her programs who have found success.

"The meaning of this day for me is that I get to stand on the stage, shake everybody's hand who did an outstanding job," Vitello said.

For many students, receiving the awards and scholarships is a necessity for staying in school.

"The award is a great honor, but I need to keep my grade point average high so that I can get a full ride scholarship," said Katerina D. Leventi, recipient of the Minnie Mae Pitkin Memorial Scholarship.

For other students such as Aviation Management major Charles E. Jennings III, receiving the reward symbolizes a major academic achievement.

"I dropped out of high school, so this is kind of a highlight in my life," Jennings said.

Special assignment writers Erik Enriquez, Mikael Pytel, Tina Davis, Michael T. Kuciak, Thomas Gibson, Shawna Donovan, Tracy Moss, Angela Hyland and Andy Graham contributed to this story.

PRINCIPLES OF SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING

UNFORTUNATELY, THIS IS WHERE PEOPLE ARE PUTTING TOO MANY RETIREMENT DOLLARS.

Every year, a lot of people make a huge mistake on their taxes. They don't take advantage of tax deferral and wind up sending Uncle Sam money they could be saving for retirement.

Fortunately, that's a mistake you can easily avoid with TIAA-CREF SRAs. SRAs not only ease your current tax bite, they offer a remarkably easy way to build retirement income—especially for the "extras" that your regular pension and Social Security benefits may not cover. Because your contributions are made in before-tax dollars, you pay less taxes now. And since all earnings on your SRA are tax-deferred as well, the money you don't send to Washington works even harder for you. Down the road, that can make a dramatic difference in your quality of life.

What else makes SRAs so special? A range of allocation choices—from the guaranteed security of TIAA to the diversified investment accounts of CREF's variable annuity—all backed by the nation's number one retirement system.

Why write off the chance for a more rewarding retirement? Call today and learn more about how TIAA-CREF SRAs can help you enjoy many happy returns.

Benefit now from tax deferral. Call our SRA hotline 1 800-842-2733, ext. 8016.

Salukis add to all-time list; team ends 10th

By Jeff McIntire
Sports Writer

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo.—The SIUC all-time top five list added more members as the Saluki women's track team finished 10th at the SEMotion Relays Friday and Saturday.

Cathy Kershaw led the attack on Friday, winning the 10,000-meter run in 36:28, third on the all-time list.

Dawn Barefoot followed with a second-place mark of 10:03 in the 3,000 meters, fourth all-time.

The distance medley relay team of Jennie Horner, Mary Amy Hornik, Shaunae Winfield and Barefoot placed third in the meet with a time of 12:05.57, second on the all-time list.

Also overcoming the cold weather to finish strong was Crystallia Constantinou, who finished third in the 100-meter dash.

Also performing well for SIUC were Deborah Daehler, placing second in the 5,000 meters with a career-best mark of 17:46.22; Nacolia Moore, placing third in the long jump (18-6) and fourth in the triple jump (38-5); and Karri Gardner, placing fifth in the 10,000 meters with a career-best time of 38:25.

Leann Reed also won fifth place, with a career-best 10:09 mark in the 3,000 meters.

"Our distance runners had a super, super day."

Add that to our jumpers and throwers, and we had a good meet," SIUC coach Don DeNoon said.

The relays were the only team-scored event.

DeNoon attributed the finish to the removal of sprinters Constantinou and Moore from the relays after their individual events.

"When you remove your top two sprinters and replace them with your fifth or sixth sprinters, you can't expect to finish as well," DeNoon said.

Rain stops men's tennis match against Hurricane

It wasn't a Hurricane, but rather rain, that stalled the SIUC men's tennis team Saturday.

The Salukis had two wins under their belts against Tulsa before the rains came and wiped out the rest of the match.

SIUC head coach John Lefevre said the team hopes to finish or make up the match this weekend when the Salukis head out on a two-match road swing at Southwest Missouri State and Wichita State. The Salukis had captured wins at the No. 2 and 3 singles spots before the rain began. Jay Merchant won at No. 2 singles, 6-2, 6-3, while Altaf Merchant won a 6-2, 6-0 decision over Ian Harris, avenging a loss to Harris in the fall season.

Four other matches were in progress. Lefevre said it has not yet been determined whether the matches will be started over or resumed this weekend.

points yet."

Things did go the Salukis' way in the second match, as SIUC pulled out a 5-4 squeaker over Southwest. With the match tied at 4-4, the No. 2 doubles tandem of Leesa Joseph and Wendy Varnum won a 6-1, 4-6, 7-6 decision to seal the deal for SIUC.

The Salukis left nothing to chance against Illinois State, tossing a shutout at the Redbirds, 5-0. Varnum, Lori Gallagher, Joseph, Feofanova and Pletsch were winners over their Redbird foes.

Feofanova, who is battling bronchitis, notched two wins on the weekend against one loss.

"This weekend was a good turning point for us; we finally started pulling out the close matches," Auld said. "Everything is starting to jell together."

SIUC's newfound cohesive-ness could not come at a better time, as the league's conference tournament is just around the corner, April 22-24.

Auld said the Salukis' two weekend wins give them a shot at the No. 3 seed in the tourney behind favorite Drake and WSU.

The Salukis will play host to Northern Iowa Friday in SIUC's last match against a league opponent before the tournament.

her hurlers held their own and definitely helped it become a pitcher's weekend.

"Both Wichita and Creighton have five or six hitters in the lineup whose averages are well above .300, and they were able to shut them down and hold strong," she said.

Coming off MVC player of the week honors, Irvin was the story of the weekend, going 2-for-3 with a triple and an RBI on Friday and 3-for-3 with a triple on Saturday.

Irvin is leading the team in batting average (.450), triples (6), and hits (27), and is second in RBIs with 12.

Brechtelbauer said Irvin is definitely coming into her own this season.

"This is the kind of play that we were looking for from Karrie last season, and for this year she is really pouring it on, not only being in the plate, but in the field as well," she said.

"Her honors were well deserved and it probably helped to give her a little boost."

Center-fielder Colleen Holloway also excelled in her performance this weekend, becoming the first Saluki to have 100 or more RBIs, runs, total bases and hits. Holloway needed one RBI to achieve the milestone and got it in the second game against WSU.

Holloway also collected her seventh school record when her total of 69 walks broke the SIUC career mark for walks in the first game against CU, when she was intentionally walked.

Shelly Gibbs (1987-90) was the former recordholder with 67 walks.

The Salukis now stand at 15-5.

Brechtelbauer said she is pleased with the way her team has jumped out in conference action.

"We played tough against two very strong teams, and three out of four games is not a bad way to start off," she said.

"Of course we wanted to get that fourth game, but at least we had been in a position to win, because when we are, we will win most of our games."
