arbondale man charged

General Assignment Reporter

A Carbondale man Monday was charged with the murder of his wife and the beating of another Carbondale woman.

Carbondale Police report Edwin Jones, 34, is charged with two counts of murder, one of aggravated battery and one of unlawful use of a weapon by a felon for the death of Jeannie Boyd-Jones, 26.

Charges were based on an autopsy of Boyd-Jones' body, ordered by Jackson County Coroner Jerry Thurman, Investi'Other wife' recovering at local hospital gators said they believe Jones administered a series of beatings with a wooden stick to the two women Saturday night over a period of several hours. Jones claims to be married to three women, saying his Islamic faith allows multiple marriages; he only is married legally to Boyd-Jones, however. Boyd-Jones was the mother of three of Jones' children, ages three, two and one. Another wife currently is pregnant.

During the beatings, the victims were believed to have passed out several times but regained consciousness

Police said one of the alleged wives, 28, whose identity is being withheld for her protection, was transported around 5 p.m. Sunday to Carbondale Memorial Hospital, after apparently suffering injuries similar to those of Boyd-Jones. She currently is in critical

The woman, who was able to provide police with a statement about events at the residence leading up to the death of Boyd-

Police reported the Jackson County Ambulance Service called officers before 10 a.m. Sunday to assist in transporting Boyd-Jones from her residence, 522 N. Allyn, to Carbondale Memorial Hospital, where she died shortly after arrival.

During Boyd-Jones' treatment at the hospital, doctors discovered severe bruising over much of her lower body and it was obvious she did not die of natural causes

Police began an investigation Sunday.

King's dream recalled at campus vigil

Special Assignment Reporter

Although Martin Luther King Jr.'s large-scale boycotts, marches and demonstrations are just memories in history books, SIUC students illustrated Monday that a flicker of his dream can still be seen

The Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity sponsored a candlelight vigil in memory of the April J. 1968 assassination of King. He was assassinated by James Earl Ray while planning a multiracial march for antipoverty legislation in Memphis, Tenn. About 50 participants walked from Grinnell

Hall to Gaigley Hall, where eight years ago the Tree of Hope was planted as a memorial to the civil rights leader.

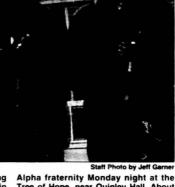

Fraternity president Steven Skinner said the group has had the march in honor of King for about 15 years

"We hope to show that although he's (King) dead, his memory is still alive." Skinner said, "For many of us, he was our first role model and his teachings haven't been forgotten."
Fraternity member Calvin Williams said the symbol of King's struggle moves him spiritually

This march is a tribute from me to him. showing that what he fought for isn't forgotten. Williams said. "His struggle is a symbol that we as people can come together, we can unite and we are equal. I hope this march brings back his message of civil rights and equality and carries it

In remembrance of Martin Luther King Jr., Calvin Williams, middle, a junior in psychology from Chicago, stands with two other members of the Alpha Phi Tree of Hope, near Quigley Hall. About 50 people participated in the vigil to honor the memory of King and his work.

Tuition increases 'necessary'

Despite Gov. Edgar's plan, universities continue to seek funds

By Katie Morrison

Despite Gov. Jim Edgar's plan to fully fund higher education's budget request with a $86.4 million hike, SIUC and other state universities are asking for more money through tuition increases.

But SIUC Vice President for Academic Affairs and Provost Benjamin Shepherd said the proposed tuition increase is necessary for costs that state funds do not "Even with money from the state, it is not enough to allow as to pay our bills," Shepherd said. "We have no resources for price increa-ses, library materials, utility increa-

TRADE STATUS WITH CHINA AFFECTS RETAILERS

LOS ANGELES—Robert Solomon, fresh from a trip to China, where he was checking on orders of Flintstone plush toys, has one word to describe the impact on his company if the United States yanks China's most-favored-nation trade status: "horrific." About half of the stuffed animals and other toys sold by Solomon's Los Angeles-based Dakin Inc. are manufactured in China. Overall, about 30 percent of the toys sold in the United States by various toy marketers are made in China

ALCOHOLISM INCREASING PROBLEM IN RUSSIA —
LIPETSK, Russia — Worn out by the daily battle for survival, impotent in the face of overwhelming economic and social upheaval, more and more Russians are finding solace in an old fashion. They're getting more drunk than ever. An epidemic of alcohoi abuse is sweeping the nation, with costly consequences. Here in Lipetsk, a typical city of 500,000 and the center of a region of 1.2 million, doctors estimate that nearly half the adult male population is alcoholic. And this is a place where they are trying to do something about it. For Russia, alcohol has become a deadly enemy, although one often overlooked in the general chaos of post-Communist life. ETHNIC CLEANSING CHARGED IN BHUTAN — SAMCHI, Bhutan — Remeshoor Ghaley and more than 40 relatives and neighbors fled their native village near here last month after police demolished their homes and threatened to kill them, charging they helped anti-government terrorists destroy a local bridge. Ghaley said the villagers had nothing to do with the bridge-razing but, instead, were forcibly evicted from this isolated Buddhist kingdom of a reputed 600,000 people in the Himalayas — their homeland for generations — because of their ethnic Nepali and Hindu heritage. In a monarchy so intent on preserving its national culture that citizens are required to wear native dress and buildings must conform to traditional architecture, refugees accuse Bhutan of expelling up to 15 percent of its population in three years to be rid of people it doesn't consider true Bhutanese.

Wells and four others were aboard the helicopter when it went down in a remote mountainside location known to locals as Thorpe Creek Canyon, about 5 miles south of Lamoille, said members of a search party. Student wins fellowship award

Small nations to be researched, Iceland chosen as location

By Jamie Madigan Politics Reporter

SIUC student Phil Calvert, the recipient of a Fulbright Fellowship. will spend next year in Iceland studying the role of small nations in -Cold War society.

Calvert, 24, a doctoral student, was awarded the fellowship, along with 700 other people throughout the country.

"I was pleasantly surprised," he id. "About 8,000 people apply said each year.

Congress sponsors the fellowship which provides research grants for one year to scholars who want to do research abroad, he said.

Applicants must make a research proposal appropriate for the country they choose.

"I will be doing research on the role of small nations (in international politics,)" he said "The economic and political climate is becoming favorable for these small countries - Iceland is going to be my central case study.

Calvert said he specifically is researching a theory that these small nations, like Iceland, will be increasingly important international politics.

John Jackson, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, said he wrote a letter of recommendation for Calvert and is pleased he won.

We've never had a Fulbright among our students," he said. (Calvert) is an excellent student. He has an excellent academic record and a wealth of good, down-to-earth experience. Calvert said he and his wife Kristen will attend the University of Iceland at Reykjavik while he does research.

"I'll be taking courses at the university," he said. "I'll be interviewing government officials in addition to studying. I've already been in contact with the Prime Ministers office

T'll also interview business leaders to study international trade and finance.

Calvert said Iceland roughly is the size of Maine but only has onefifth of the state's population.

"It's a very compact country," he d. "It has about 200,000 people all concentrated in the southern

Problem of jaywalking exists without ticketing

Special Assignment Reporter

Since the University implemented a jaywalking regulation more than seven months ago, SIUC Police have not issued any tickets, but the problem still exists, officials say.

When the University first implemented a $15 jaywalking fine Sept. 1.

150 SIUC students staged a protest in front of the Student Center blocking traffic on Lincoln Drive.

After all of the effort focused on jaywalking, little has changed, Sgt. Steve Ellis, patrol supervisor, said.

Ellis said there continues to be a problem where traffic and pedestrians meet because both are in a hurry.

"It is not just the drivers or the pedestrians, but a combination of the two." Ellis said. Ellis said the difference between a University citation and a state citation is at least $60, and it is up to an officer's discretion whether to us SIUC Police Chief Sam Jordan said the jaywalking regulation was implemented along with other regulations, such as walking a bicycle in a Jordan said before Sept. 1, there was no campus régulation, so SIUC officers had to charge people with the state ordinance, a $75 fine, or the city ordinance, a $50 fine.

Jordan said, 350 inc.

"Pedestrians only have the right-of-way over vehicles when they are in a crosswalk," Jordan said. "And even then, if a pedestrian bolts out in front of a vehicle, the driver is not at fault."

Undergraduate Student Government President Mike Spiwak, who helped organize the protest of jaywalking fines, said he is pleased the is sticking to its word.

The University told us they would not fine people for not using the crosswalks unless there was an accident, and it appears that is what they are doing," Spiwak said.

Spiwak originally was concerned the high cost of the crime did not fit the punishment, and the fines would be used as an additional source of revenue. Although officers have not issued any citations to pedestrians for jaywalking, several drivers have been given citations.

Theresa Nesler, statistical clerk for the SIUC Police Department, said in 1993, there were 12 incidents of reckless driving and six people cited for failure to yield to a pedestrian in a crosswalk.

Nesler said there also were four accidents reported last year involving nedestrians and vehicles.

Ellis said drivers should reduce their speed to the posted 20 to 25 mph and yield the right-of-way to pedestrians.

Nesler said police wrote 25 speeding tickets on the state charge, 30 on the University charge and 87 warnings.

Ellis said the department soon will have two mobile radar units in operation that will help to enforce speed limits on campus, but for now they will continue to look for cars that appear to be above the speed limit.

"We currently do not use radar, but the speed limit is so low, we can tell when someone is going faster," Ellis said. "It is a myth that to make a speeding charge stick in court, you have to first show the driver the speed from the radar unit.

Spiwak said although there are a lot of problems when pedestrians and cles meet on campus, increasing the number of citatio the solution

"I don't think the police department has the resources to safeguard everyone — people just need to think about what they are doing," he said.

Courageous WWII women can teach Bosnians lessons

By Angela Hyland Minorities Reporter

The ignorance and intolerance which led to the persecution of millions during the Holocaust still is evident today, author Alison Owings says.

Although the political situation in the United States greatly differs from that found in Germany during the '30s and '40s, the people essentially are the same, she said.

Some people assume every woman living in Germany during the Third Reich viewed Jewish people negatively, but this is far from the truth, Owings said.

"There is a lot of individual differences among women, and you can not look as that as the stereotype," she said. "The women from that time are so unknown that most Americans, if they know anything about them at all, probably thought they were all very

Owings is a free-lance television news writer and author of a book titled "Frauen: German Women Recall the Third Reich," published last year. The book tells the stories of 29 women, both Aryan and Jewish, who lived in Germany during the Third Reich.

Memorial Week

She will speak at 7:30 tonight as part of Holocaust Memorial Week in the Student Center Video

While conducting interviews for her book, Owings said she not only met women who supported the Nazis during that time, but also people who hid Jewish friends in their homes

The courage and resistance exhibited by some women during that time can serve as encouragement to women today.

"I think that students now have to know that one individual's response can make a difference. she said.

Students can resist intolerance even in their daily lives, through ways such as stopping people when they make a remark against any group, she said.

"When you hear someone making a remark against any group, whether it's anti-Semitic or anti-gay, it's best to intercede early," she said. "It changes the climate, to some extent. It lets people know that they cannot get way with that kind of talk.

Robin Gross, director of SIU Hillel Foundation, said many people are unaware of the extent to which acts of intolerance currently

Awareness programs an end to ignorance

ONCE AGAIN, GAY AWARENESS WEEK HAS HIT the media, providing information to everyone who cares to watch, listen or read about it.

It may very well be true that people learn more about individuals with different sexual orientations during this particular week while others feel good about themselves because they attend some of the specially organized events for gay awareness. But what really gets accomplished during Gay Awareness Week, or any other "awareness programs" such as Asian American Awareness Month, Wo.nen's History Month, Black History Month or Hispanic Heritage Month, which seem to be in the news in quick succession?

IN ESSENCE, THESE AWARENESS PROGRAMS are educational tools. They seek to educate and erase the ignorance and other misconceptions that individuals might have.

People are, as the name obviously states, made more aware of the minorities and related issues. In some cases, it is the answer for people who are too afraid or too embarrassed to ask any questions.

BUT ARE ALL THESE AWARENESS PROGRAMS taking things too far? Is all this just hype and not of substance to the community? After all left-handed third basemen are looked at in a very bad light by baseball enthusiasts and this bunch is therefore prejudiced against. But we do not see an awareness week for lefty, do we?

It is important to understand that racism, prejudiced notions and understanding an issue are not things that you can tackle and set right through a day, a week, or even a month of intensive information overload.

Just as Rome was not built in a day, it is senseless to believe that a single event like Gay Awareness Week will make everyone understand gay people and what they stand for.

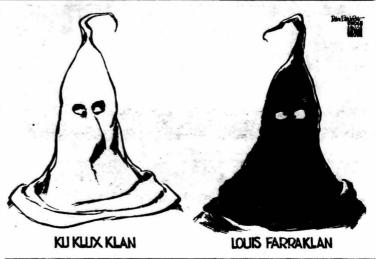

THE MEDIA, AND SOCIETY IN GENERAL, needs to tackle these important, and sometimes crucial issues, on a regular basis and not a a specific day that is set for it. On this specific day, the news items are usually overplayed and after the event, be it a day or a week, nothing is heard about it — it is shelved until the next year.

Prejudice, women's issues, racism and so on are things occur everyday. It is real. It affects everyone. All the time. Not just once a day, once a week or even once a month.

PERHAPS, AN IDEAL SITUATION WOULD BE one in which everyone talks about these issues in a frank open and cordial manner in an attempt to address each others shortcomings.

Ideal, yes, but rather far from being realistic.

Until then, people will have to be prodded, poked and led to the issues and hopefully an awareness program will be a good start for more understanding and acceptance in the future

Events in Bosnia parallel Holocaust, world leaders must push for peace

The events in Bosnia over the past two years have been and continue to be horrifying and alarming. Comparisons to the Holocaust during World War II are inescapable. Again, there is a policy of appeasement by world leaders in the face of nationalist expansion by force. Again, innocent victims are being killed in the name of ethnic purity. Again, the vast majority of victims are non-Christians in predominantly Christian Europe.

We don't have the excuse of those who claimed not to have known about the concentration camps and the genocide of World War II. We've all seen images of such atrocities in Bosnia on our TV screens. We've read about systematic mass rape being used as a tool of genocide. Recently, we've been reminded of the plight of the children by a young Bosnian Girl whose diary is compared to that of Anne Frank.

Since the marketplace bombing in February that seems to have shamed Western leaders into complementing their diplomatic efforts with a credible threat of military action, attention has been focused on the cease-fire in Sarajevo. However, there is continued pressure on the Serb-surrounded Bosnian enclaves outside of Sarajevo where as substantial portion of the Muslims population lives. A U.N. commissioner reported in late March that ethnic cleansing and violence toward minorities have clearly increased in the last month.

Genocide is what distinguishes this war form the namerous conflicts that plague our world. We need to speak out against the atrocities and to ensure that humanitarian deliveries actually reach the people under siege. We need to pressure our government to work for a just and enforceable peace in a war where the cards have been so unevenly stacked since the onset. We need to hold accountable the perpetrators of war crimes, who are ironically some of the same individuals with whom U.N. diplomats have been trying to negotiate deals.

April 4-8 marks the national observance of Holocaust Memorial Week. The promise of "Never Again" will be broken if we do not commit ourselves to a more active role in support of the people of

to the Revisionist...background editorial on March 1, I would like to point out facts that misrepresented and/or ignored. I would like to start with the fact that Columbus did not teach the natives anything. All he did was report an accident, which is what every discovery is. Columbus had a great idea at the time - the world is round. Based on this idea, he decided to find an alternate route to India, home of salts and spices needed at that time. In this vovage, he, literally, sailed into the Americas, incidentally, named after Amerigo Vespucci, not

Next, after his reports, the king and queen of Spain, Fernand and Isabel, sent explorers. When these explorers arrived in the Americas, they enslaved and exploited the natives. The Americas, meaning North, South, and Central, were popular at the time because of the precious stones and metals brought back by Columbus as evidence to the royalty of Spain. Furthermore, in some places of Latin America, the explorers were uncontested about their motive, which as in any war in history, was money. Usually these explorers would not only rob the native's land, but, at times, even raped native women.

Before the conquerors arrived, these natives were, at least in the Caribbean, fisherman and farmers, meaning they fed themselves on fish, fruits and vegetables, not each other.

In conclusion, I do not think of the natives as "unintelligent". It is easy to call someone "unintelligent" with hind view. Columbus may have been a great sailor, but he may not have known how to grow corn. Does that mean he was "unintelligent"? If you are interested in this topic please consult a professor in the subject or look at history books around the years 1490 and 1600.

Illinois Board of Higher Education representative Ross Hodel said even though the board is encouraging no more than a 3percent tuition increase, the board only can make recommendations to state universities.

Shepherd said unfunded mandates, costs not covered by state funds, are costing SIUC about $5 million, which is one of the largest bills left unpaid.

The major unfunded mandates

Illinois Board of Higher Education representative Debra Smitly said SIUC will receive about a $2.6 million increase in state funds by fiscal year 1995

Plastic cards beginning to replace paper money

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON-Now that credit cards are in the hands of virtually every living, breathing adult in the country-not to mention a lot of children and the occasional family pet-and now that almost as many people have ATM cards, card companies are wondering where future growth will come from.

At Visa International, the answer is: Replace cash with plastic.

Last month, the giant association of card issuers announced it had formed a coalition of banking and technology companies to develop technical standards for a product it dubbed the "Electronic Purse," a plastic card meant to replace coins and bills in small transactions.

second coalition manufacturers and suppliers will to develop low-cost equipment for use with the card.

The concept is much like the magnetic cards used in some city subway systems. Consumers would or electronically "load" the card with a small sum, typically $40 or less, according to isa officials, and carry it with them to use in pay telephones. highway toll booths, vending machines, parking meters and thousands of other small-ticket

The card would be reusable. It would contain a memory chip that could exchange information with bank ATM terminals for "loading and with terminals at vending machines and other places for payments. Visa envisions it both as a stand-alone product and as a feature that could be incorporated into credit or ATM cards.

"There are a number of benefits to different players" in the market, said Albert Coscia of Visa.

In theory, machines that would take the "electronic purse" would be used with small-change kinds of devices, such as phones and parking meters, so for consumers, it would eliminate the problem of having the right change.

In addition, depending on what consumers want and what the technology can accomplish, the cards might have other features, such as the ability to remember specific transactions so that a consumer could keep track of exactly what he or she spent the money on and where. Budget-conscious individuals or business travelers doing their expense accounts might find that very appealing.

For vendors, the card would cut the need for sorting and counting coins and carting them to the bank. The day's transactions would be totaled instantly. Also, vendors would be less likely to lose sal because a potential customer didn't

"If I hadn't become an actor, I wanted to be a veterinarian," says Irons, who was born on the Isle of Wight, "That's because I wanted to continue my childhood, which is just sort of walking dogs and riding my horse and living in the country. And I thought, how can I do that? Maybe if I'm a vet I'll be near someone else's horse, anyway, and be able to have a dog, so I thought this was a nice way to do it.

African culture, history offers lessons

By Emily Priddy

Although it is easy to romanticize traditional African culture, it is important to remember that the continent's great civilizations suffered from their share of social problems, a Black Studies director says

Sundiata Chi-jua, director of Black Studies at the University of director of Missouri, told a group of SIUC students and faculty remembering positive and negative aspects of African history is essential to understanding and learning from the culture.

We must come to understand African (history) in terms of its strengths and its weaknesses those things that were beautiful and those things that are ugly," he said.

Chi-jua, giving the keynote address for Africa Week, sponsored by the SIUC African Student Association, said while ancient Egyptians made many technolo-gical advances, they also enslaved "It's imperative that we recognize the greatness of classical Africa, but recognize that greatness carried with it a flawed social structure," Chi-jua said. "As we look to the African continent, we st see with clear eyes

Chi-jua that race is not the key force in uniting Africans on the continent, in the United States and in the Caribbean region, but shared history and social conditions — particularly slavery — are the forces that unite people of African

"The unity of African people I don't believe is forged on the question of race," he said. "One's race is defined by the political power in that (person's) society at (a given) point in time.

We have to talk about slavery as a cauldron — a melting-pot — in which African people had to merge (and) create a new culture, and the culture that was created together was a pan-African society," he said "Those (cultural) things that survived slavery were those things that allowed African Americans to resist in that society." Chi-jua said he classifies Christian and Islamic influences together ecause they represent imperialism.

"In reality, we can collapse two of the categories - Islan Christianity — into one, (creating a dual heritage)," he said. "This dual heritage speaks to imperialism those who have imposed their way of life on the African people — but it also speaks to the classical greatness of traditional Africa."

Dele Omosegbon, president of the African Student Association, the African Student Association, explained the significance of this year's Africa Week theme, "A Celebration of Our Triple Heritage." Omosegbon said the term 'triple heritage" refers to indigenous Elamic traditions and heritage" refers to indigenous customs, Islamic traditions and Western Christian ideas that influence Africa.

"Africa can no longer be defined in geographic (terms) or in terms of biology — black people and all that," Omosegbon said. "Africa is more than that

Too often, Hickman said ga rights groups try to fight discrimination on their own.

More could be achieved if minority groups would support each other and form coalitions, he Finding out which legislators support gay rights and supporting them is another source of political strength, he said.

"The reason the radical right has been so successful fighting gay, lesbian and bisexual rights issues is because they get together, sit around a kitchen table and write letters and post cards (to legislators)," Hickman said. It also is important to keep a high profile, letting the media know when injustices have been committed, he said.

Texas When the University president attacked an anti-discrimination clause which included sexual orientation, media attention helped the group grow from 20 to 70 members, Hickman

It also can be helpful to learn how to counter the opposition's arguments, especially in the area of religious condemnation, he said.

"If you're not 2 theologian by temperament, you might want to spend some time reading up on the subject," he said.

Gay rights activists always should treat the opposition courteously, never attacking the right of people to condemn homo-sexuality, Hickman said, but instead activists should focus on the content of the message.

"The jerks of the world have a right to their opinions, too,"

Party nets 12 underaged drinkers

Williamson County sheriff's deputies served notice Friday night that underage drinking is a big no-no. Deputies nabbed 12 people for underage consumption of alcohol at Lorthwest of Carterville. Chief Deputy Alan Ozment said this morning.

The two men accused of supplying the underage partyers with alcohol were also arrested.

All suspects were issued charges and released pending a court

The crackdown continued the next night, when sheriff's deputies and state troopers arrested 51 suspected underage drinkers at a "roadside safety checkpoint" on West Grand Avenue between Carterville and Cambria.

lice also arrested four motorists for driving under the influence of alcohol at the checkpoint.

The chief deputy said the weekend crackdowns was designed as a preventive measure.

Perhaps we can stop an underage drinker from consuming enough alcohol to be involved in a serious accident," he said.

6 explosives found in Benton park

Six crudely made explosive devices were found at the Benton Community Park on Saturday morning

The park was evacuated and then closed down while authorities combed the entire facility looking for more of the home-made

Gerald Pyron of Benton, a park security officer, made the discovery at approximately 9:30 a.m.

The police department along with the Benton Fire Department and Franklin County Ambulance Co. responded to the call.

The devices were made with unidentified chemicals that were placed inside plastic soft drink bottles. Each bottle had a piece of tin foil insid

Benton Police Chief Raymond Bain, who was in contact with explosive experts from the Illinois Secretary of State office, said the type of explosive found at the part can cause serious and permanent injury.

"We won't know for sure until we have the chemical analyzed, but from the information we have given to the Secretary of State's office, we think we know what type of explosive device we are dealing with," Bain said

These type of homemade bombs are made by putting two chemicals together inside a plastic bottle. The chemicals don't react to each other immediately-which gives the person who put them there time to get away. They build up pressure over a short period of time and then explode," Bain said.

The first of the devices was found close to the main entrance of the park, along the roadway adjacent to the playground and picnic area in the north end of the recreational area

Two more of the bottles which had exploded-were found along the road between the round and tennis court area

Authorities also found fragments of what had been two more of the devices in the grassy area between the tennis courts and the mad.

Small fragments of the plastic bottle and tin foil were blown between 60-70 feet.

The last of the bottles was found in a trash barrel located in the overflow parking lot north of the baseball fields.

The contents of the last bottle were visibly bubbling when authorities made the discovery. Bain and Benton police officer Melvin Dixon "defused" the last of the explosive devices found

The two officers, after removing the bottle from the barrel, used a piece of metal to shield them-selves while bleeding off the pressure built up by the chemicals.

The defused devices, along with the fragments of the ones that had exploded, were sent to the Illinois State Police Forensic Lab in Desoto, to be analyzed.

Bain said that his department, along with other law enforcement agencies that are helping in the investigation, are not looking at the matter as a prank.

"The fact that when the devices exploded, fragments blew 70 feet is enough to show that someone could have been hurt bad." Bain said.

"If a child would have picked one of those bottles up and it would have exploded in their hands, they could have been blinded or received severe burns," Bain said.
"I'm certainly not looking at this as a joke or a prank. It could have very well ended in permanent invities to spreade or seven.

injuries to someone, or even a worse tragedy," Bain said.

worse uragedy," Bain said.

Lab results of the type of chemicals used to make the homemade explosives will not be available for several days, according to Bain.

Coach recalls opportunities, looks to change stereotypes

CHARLOTTE NC - He would not be the first black coach to win the national championship — Joh Thompson has already done that but .rkansas' Nolan Richardson has been the first black coach nearly everywhere else: first to coach at the high school level in his native El Paso, Texas; first to win the national junior college championship; first to coach a major college in Oklahoma; first to coach in the Southwest Conference.
Richardson, 53, was the first black to integrate his high school. He was one of the first blacks south of the Mason-Dixon line to play major college basketball. If Nolan Richardson were any more of a pioneer, he'd have been born in a covered wagon.

"My grandmother always taught me. Know where you're from.
And if you don't like the road you're traveling, make your own road," Richardson said.

'I make my own road. I wasn't born with a silver spoon. I've paid born with a silver spoon. I've paid all of my dues, every last one of them. I will never forget those people who gave me an opportunity, who gave me a chance in an era when they weren't many chances being given. I tell people, Crack the door for me and I'll hook the deam diver down." knock the damn door down

But it's easier to knock down a door than to alter a perception. Cracking the door — getting the job — is a tangible thing. Knocking down the door — winning 338 games, having the winning 338 games, having the fifth-highest winning percentage among Division I coaches with at least five years experience - is a tangible thing

But struggling against racial ster-otypes, altering perceptions about the quality of the job you're doing is a much slower and intan-

"I make my own road. I wasn't born with a silver spoon. I've paid all of my dues, every last one of them."

-Nolan Richardson

And for Richardson, an aggravating and frustrating one. He sees the former coaches, nearly all of them white, giving their "expert" opinions on television, despite the fact, Richardson says, "that they never won nothing." He sits on the dais at his Final Four press conferences staring into the sea of white faces that constitute the national media, who mold those perceptions. And he knows that a man can spend most of his life trying to puncture perceptions and stereotypes, yet take only a little air out of that foul balloon.

"I have known all my life that there's a stigma placed on black coaches," Richardson said. comes out clear and loud. 'What a great recruiter. What a great You listen to other guys motivator. talking about what intelligence a good (white) coach has. I have a problem with that.

"Not long ago, I (and blacks in general) couldn't play quarterback because I guess we couldn't pass the ball or hand the ball or call the pla; the coach sent in. Bear (Bryant) said, 'We need some of .' Some of them. What are you talking about, some of them? wasn't long ago that I wouldn't be sitting here, wouldn't be coaching

"If we get fired, we never resurface. Never surface again. But the coaches who aren't Afro-Americans, they get fired and they surface again. The kids see that.

That's the way it is. It's just sad.
"I think the stigma has died some. It's all about perception. That's why when we go to the airport, I tell 'em to put on a necktie and sport coat. They say, 'Why?' I say, 'Because they may look at you as a bunch of N's.' This way, maybe they look at you and Wow

Richardson wanted people to say 'Wow' when he lost Todd Day, Oliver Miller and Lee Mayberry to the NBA yet coached his 1992-93 team to the sweet 16, where his freshmen and sophornores lost a hard-fought game to the eventual national champion, North Carolina. It didn't happen.

At a press conference Friday when one writer asked Richardson about black coaches being stereotyped as discoverers rather than developers of talent. Richardson said, "You've certainly got that right." What set him off Sunday was an ESPN show in which he heard a writer suggest that underdog Duke's intelligence might allow it to overcome Arkansas' depth and talent Monday

FIFA chief fights for final term

Havelange promises 3rd team in '98 to gain re-election win

He is autocratic. He is boastful. He is cunning.

But what Joao Havelange, the 78-year-old Brazilian who has ruled international soccer for the past 20 years, also might be is unbeatable

For the past few weeks, an intense, behind-the-scenes struggle has been going on within soccer's corridors of power in Zurich, Switzerland, to see whether Havelange could either be tempted to step down or tossed out as president of FIFA, international soccer's governing br ty.

But Havelange seems to have found a way to have the last I gh. Call it bribery, if you will. Havelange's detractors certainly

By promising a third team in the 1998 World Cup in France to both Asia and CONCACAF (the North and Central American and Caribbean confederation), Havelange just might have swayed enough votes to win re-election to a sixth four-year term when FIFA's 167 member nations cast their ballots in June in Chicago.

But not many of those votes are likely to come from Europe, which would lose two of its World Cup places if Havelange delivers on his promise

Tuesday in Zurich, Havelange will meet with leaders from each of the five confederations that make up FIFA. He will seek their support in his bid for a final term

With Asia and CONCACAF already in his corner and Africa leaning that way, the Brazilian would appear to have a lock on the election. South America, certainly, is unlikely to oppose him.

e Europeans are another But th matter. If UEFA (the European Footbali Union) decides to put up a candidate to challenge Havelange, and then starts a campaign to discredit him, the next two months could see all sorts of fireworks.

As far as long-term impact, what happens in the election in Chicago June 16 is likely to have far greater importance than what happens in Pasadena, Calif., July 17 during the World Cup championship garr

The winner at the Rose Bowl will be world champion for four years. A new, much younger FIFA president, however, could control and shape the sport for decades.

Graham Taylor, the luckless coach who presided over England's humiliating, 2-0 loss to the United States last summer and its subsequent failure to qualify for the World Cup, has landed on his feet. "Turnip" Taylor, as he is known by Britain's tabloid press, was fired as England coach in November but last week was named coach of Wolverhampton Wanderers.

Marshall—decision no hurry

The Hartford Courant

CHARLOTTE, N.C.—UConn junior forward Donyell Marshall said Sunday he has started weighing his options for next season but is in no hurry to make a decision.

Marshall said the chances of him returning to UConn or declaring himself eligible for the NBA draft are "still even."

Sophomore outfielder Jodi Smith is hitting .400 to pace the Orabikians and senior outfielder Robyn Sitzes is leading the priver charge. threats the Salukis will look out for.

The Otahkians, whose worst lost of the season was their season opening 7-0 drubbing to the University of Illinois-Chicago, have had opponents scratching their heads all season at the plate. They will be tested today against the Salukis who own 43 extra-base hits in 20 games and a .431 slugging percentage.

Freshman Becky Lis and Schuttek have been almost unstoppable at the plate. Schuttek leads the Salukis in hitting (.455) and Lis is hitting (.406 and leads the Salukis in runs (18), hits (26), RBIs (13) and on-base percentage (.556).

Christine Knots, Jenny Klotz and Laurie Wilson have also been on top of their offensive game for the Salukis. Knotts leads the team in doubles (5) and hitting (,370). Klotz has not let her move to shortstop affect her hitting as she is at .339, and Wilson has come on of late hitting .419 in her last 12 starts with nine RBIs.

Richmond said her biggest concern is SEMO's defense, but it will take more than just defense to win.

"We need to keep SIU off the bases," Richmond said. "And we need to play solid defense, because we're not going to score a lot of purs."

Brechtelsbauer said SEMO has been historically known as a strong hitting team and that both teams have the capabilities of scoring runs or being shutout.

The Salukis, who begin conference play this weekend, are looking to use these games as sort of a final preparation for conference action.

Brechtelsbaue, said she hopes the Salukis can pick up more confidence and consistency to go along with it for the conference season.

"At this point we are looking for more consistency yet," she said. "Some days we play well and others not as strong but we have to keep going after it."

The doubleheader begins today at 3 p.m.

NBA scouts and executives naming Marshall among the top five players available, his checkbook might hold the deciding vote.

"As soon as I feel comfortable with whatever decision I make, that's when I'll make an announcement," said Marshall, who is attending the Final Four as a finalist for the RCA Award as player of the year, presented by the U.S. Basketball Artiters Association. "It's just going to be how I feel after doing different kinds of research and what I feel is going to be a better situation for

"I've talked to some people and gotten ome input. The decision is going to be all mine. It's just nice to have some input and see how people feel.

"Once I sit down and talk to Coach (Jim Calhoun) and a few more people, that's when a decision will be made."

review the matter in detail and to determine what the appropriate disciplinary action will be. This type of behavior is extremenly detrimental to the ballclub and will not be tolerated."

Sunday's incident is the latest in a series of troubles Strawberry has endured since signing a $20.25-million contract before the 1991 season. If nothing else, his future with the team is in doubt.

The Dodgers owe Strawberry $8 million for two years, including this season, but his contract could be voided if he breached a standard good-behavior clause. The reason for his absence was not disclosed.

Either way, Claire said late last year that one more incident by Strawberry would not be tolerated.

That sentiment was percipitated by !ast season's problems. Strawberry, trying to comeback from back surgery, had a dismal time on the field as well as off it. In September, he was arrested for allegedly assaulting his girlfriend, Charise, now his wife. The charge was later dropped.

But after a season of defying clubhouse rules, Claire had had enough. He began to shop Strawberry as early as August before the trading deadline and continued throughout the rest of the season. After Strawberry showed disrespect for Los Angeles fire victims last November, Claire put Strawberry November, Claire put Strawberry on the waiver wire, making him available to any team for $20,000, plus his remaining contract. There were no takers: That move seemed to shake up Strawberry, who once again in his tumultuous, II-year career, re-dedicated himself. Since then, he has shown a strong work ethic, so much so, that he even was an example for teammates. During the spring, he was often the first one to arrive at the clubhouse and one of the last to leave.

Dawgs take road trip to battle 'Cat

The Saluki baseball team will try and ride the emotion of Sunday's 12-11 extra inning win over Creighton today when it mows into the Bluegrass State for a game with the University of Kentucky.

Playing teams like UK shouldn't tartle this year's Salukis as SIUC has already faced national powerhouses such as Mississippi, Miami and Rutgers. The Wildcats, however, are the start of a brutal week for the Dawgs.

Adams or Dave Farrow are probable starting pitchers for the Kentucky game after seeing limited action this spring.

The Saluki pitching staff has been suspect as of late with Creighton most recently shelling the Dawgs for 30 runs in three games. Although SIUC won two of those three contests, Riggleman said he is still hoping for more consistency from his pitching staff.

"I still think we'll be okay and hopefully we can continue to improve," he said. "But we're not going to blow the ball by people by retch of the imagination

Saluki confidence is running high, though, after knocking off a Creighton team that was ranked three spots ahead of SIUC in the Missouri Valley Conference preseason coaches poll.

Senior shortstop Chris Sauritch said the Creighton series was big, but the team can't dwell on it for "We just have to stay focused and not let games like Creighton get us too high or too low," he said.

Some key help from the Saluki reserves are what helped key the Saluki success lately, which has Riggleman excited about what's to

All season long Arkansas labeled its playing style as "40 minutes of hell" for the opposition, but it only took 15 minutes of cond-half fury for the Razorbacks to clinch its first NCAA men's basketball title Monday night over Duke, 76-72.

Arkansas had to fight through more than just a tough Blue Devil squad as Duke had the obvious homecourt advantage only playing an hour and a half from its own campu

Duke came out on fire going up 5-0 on the Hogs, while Arkansas drew some pettie solid en fouls and stumbled out of the blocks

It wasn't long, though, before Razorback head coach Nolan Richardson regrouped his troops and began to display why U of A deserved to be playing for the National Arkansas clawed and scratched its way to a 34-33 lead at the half despite Duke forcing the Razorbacks into more uncharacteristic halfcourt style of play.

The second half opened with a Arkansas being hit with a Blue Devil wave as Duke went on what appeared to be a backbreaking 13-0 run Arkansas began hammering the ball inside to forward Corliss Williamson who devoured Duke's big man Cherokee Parks. Williamson commanded the defensive boards allowing Dake limited second offensive attempts down the stretch.

However, Duke's All-American forward Grant Hill refused to go down easy and hit a clutch three-pointer with 1:20 remaining in the game to tie the contest at 70-70.

But with just over :40 seconds remaining,

Arkansas' Scottie Thurman hit a prayer from behind the three-point arc as the shot clock sounded to put the Hogs up 73-70.

SIUC, SEMO rivalry heats up in softball action

Salukis put streak on line to uphold old-time challenge By Chris Walker Sports Reporter

Local women's softball fans have a chance to see one of the oldest rivalries in the area when SIUC and Southeast Missouri State square off today for the 65th and 66th times in a doubleheader at the IAW Fields.

The rivalry dates back to 1965 and, although the Salukis own a 42-22 mark over the Otahkians, memories of past contests linger. The Salukis have taken four in a row against the Otahkians, but many still remember when SEMO knocked off the Salukis three years ago halting the Salukis 23-game win streak

The rivalry should be at full tilt today as the 14-6 Salukis put a seven-game winning streak on the line against the 22-11 Otahkians, winners of six of their last eight.

SEMO head coach Lana Richmond said she expects the rivalry to make today's action

"I've been here (SEMO) for 12 years and every year it has been intense," Richmond said. "It's a good rivalry because the team really gets up to play SIU, and we have a lot of Southern Illinois kids on the team.

head coach Brechtelsbauer agreed that a rivalry exists between the two, but it is different for each team.

'It's more for them than for us." Brechtelsbauer said. "We have a good healthy rivalry, and we do have some players from the area.

Something will have to give today, as both teams have been scoring runs while remaining stingy on the mound. The Salukis are hitting at a .309 clip while SEMO is at .300. Both team's pitching has been exceptional. The Saluki staff boasts a 2.01 era and the Otahkians have been unbeat-able at times with their 1.33 team era.

The Otahkians are led by junior hurler Nicole Mortimer, Mortimer (8-4) has stifled the opposition holding them to only 10 extra-base hits while lowering her era to 0.89. The Saluki pitching staff has
