Bush: Americans are hostages

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The designation of the Americans stranded in Iraq and Kuwait as hostages raised a new dilemma for to trade the freedom of those citizens of many nations he holds against their will in return for concessions, there can be little government of Iraq responsible for the safety and well-being of American citizens held against their will.

He didn't specify what action he would take.

But the designation of the trapped Americans as "hostages" limits U.S. policy options because of a standing rule stated repeatedly by the Bush administration: "The United States will not negotiate for the release of hostages."

Other nations — notably France — have negotiated with Iran in order to procure the release of some of their nationals held by pro-Iranian groups in Lebanon.

House Armed Services Committee Chairman Les Aspin, D-Wis., said on NBC Sunday that Bush must strike "the right balance between concern for the hostages but not letting our policy be driven by the existence of hostages or be paralyzed by it."

For now, he said, Bush should make clear that Saddam will be held responsible for the Americans' safety.

Aspin said, "In a sense, this is an easier situation to deal with than, for example, the hostages that are somewhere lost in the morass of Lebanon. We at least know the address of the person responsible. So if we want to send a message, we know where to send it."

Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., similarly noted that freedom of passage for the 3,000 or so Americans in Iraq and occupied Kuwait was only one of several vital interests at stake in the Persian Gulf, including the restoration of stability and "the free flow of oil at reasonable prices."

"Presidents have to weigh those interests as well," he said, "and it does take balance and you cannot let one interest predominate over these other interests that are terribly important."

Bush, aboard Air Force One after his speech in Baltimore, was asked why he was turning up the heat on Iraq and calling the American detainees "hostages."

Bush replied, "I don't think there's any turning up the heat. It's a recognition of the fact that now demands are being made for the release of people, and that, I think, is the definition of hostages."

Asked when he decided to use the term, Bush said, "We had a meeting there (at the White House) last night and then this morning I decided, 'Look, as long as these demands are being made, why, it's semantical. Why not just say that?'"

State Department spokesman Richard Boucher, asked if the U.S. policy of non-negotiation with hostage-takers remains in effect, was guarded, saying that has been the U.S. policy but he did not want to limit the president's options.

But, other officials said that the appearance of willingness to negotiate with hostage-takers will open up a hornet's nest of criticism for the past policy, and give an incentive for other nations to seize Iraq and calling the American

Iraqi oil tankers continue path despite U.S. shots

MANAMA, Bahrain (UPI) — President Bush's interdiction program against Iraq faced its first challenge when two Iraqi oil tankers that had already ignored U.S. warning shots headed south through the Persian Gulf, shadowed by American warships.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, in the region to visit U.S. forces and Persian Gulf leaders, monitored the situation Sunday and talked to Washington by telephone during his trip.

He became less talkative about the two Iraqi tankers during the day and refused to say what action, if any, would be taken to stop the vessels.

But it was believed the Police receive drug money

Area agencies get $500,000 in funds

By Brian Gross

Recycling drug money back to law enforcement agencies boosts the morale among local police officers.

The Carbondale police department and the Southern Illinois Enforcement Group were among local and state agencies receiving a total of $500,000 in drug seizures and assets in Marion Friday, August 17.

The process of recycling the seized assets back to police to aid them in fighting drug traffic boosts morale, Frederick J. Hess, U. S. Attorney who presented the money, said.

"It does a great deal for the morale of the police officers involved," Hess said. "They have the opportunity of driving the dopers' car around the community for awhile and it sends a message to the other dopers that this guy lost his ride. And it benefits the police when they sell the car to buy the resources they need, whether it be modern weaponry or undercover vehicles."

Gas prices continue to skyrocket despite Bush's pleas for restraint

United Press International

Gasoline pricing restraint was in little evidence Monday as station operators and motorists braced for another round of soaring costs.

Higher gas pump prices abounded — after a temporary lull last week in the price run-up that has accompanied unrest in the Middle East — as station operators pressed on to motorists new hikes in wholesale costs.

Oil companies said higher crude prices are forcing them to ignore President Bush's plea for restraint and raise the prices they charge station operators for gas.

The American Automobile Association said self-serve unleaded gasoline averaged $1.23, a gallon nationwide Monday, up 2.1 cents from its last survey Aug. 13.

Since Iraq invaded Kuwait Aug. 2, casting uncertainty and the threat of war in the oil-rich Persian Gulf, gas prices have risen a total of 15.7 cents a gallon, it — motor club said.

Gas prices moderated briefly last week in the midst of temporary freezes and rollbacks by some oil companies inspired by Bush's call for restraint Aug. 8.

But by Monday — with such giants as Amoco Corp. and Unocal Corp. having lifted freezes late last week — most signs of restraint were a memory.

"Pressure at the retail level has increased in the past couple of days," AAA spokesman Geoff Sundrom said.

Poshard makes campaign finance standards

By Karen Radius
Staff Writer

Congressman Glenn Poshard said he believes most of his campaign is going to be financed by people who give him contributions of about $10.

He spoke Monday in Herrin about campaign finance reform and legislation. Poshard, democrat, established specific standards for his campaign office in July 89 when he put his staff together. "The bottom line in campaigns is how much you can raise and how much you can spend," Poshard said. He said the average amount of money spent on campaigns per candidate in 1988 was $350,000.

He said that this reduces time away from work a person is elected to do and it reduces the possibility of a legitimate candidate challenging an incumbent office.

"It's a front burner issue in congress and with the people," he said, "People are justifiably outraged at the way campaigns are run."

His office has made many provisions for themselves concerning campaign finance and ethics and Poshard said they want to act as an example.

Among the many changes, Poshard established a mandatory $100,000 spending limit on campaigns as opposed to the House bill's $550,000 voluntary limit to the primary and general election combined.

He has proposed and followed his guideline of not accepting any PAC contributions while the House bill accepts $250,000 total PAC contribution limit. His explained how politicians commit themselves when they sign the questionnaire from a PAC, and if they change their minds, they are called liars.

"That's not the kind of pressure that Congress needs to have," he said.

The House bill also follows a current law that states an individual can contribute $1,000 per state

Judge calls Steinbrenner out

CLEVELAND (UPI) — A federal judge Monday refused to grant a temporary restraining order that could have allowed George Steinbrenner to remain, at least temporarily, as general partner of the New York Yankees.

The ruling by U.S. District Judge Alice Batchelder effectively ended the controversial owner's reign as the leader of baseball's best-known franchise.

Batchelder denied the request by Yankees limited partners Daniel McCarthy and Harold Bowman, who filed suit in a last-ditch attempt to prevent baseball from enforcing an agreement signed by Steinbrenner and Commissioner Fay Vincent ordering him to surrender control of the baseball operations of the club by midnight Monday.

"We are obviously pleased and gratified that the decision of the court in Cleveland is consistent with our position," Vincent said.

Attorneys for McCarthy and Bowman claimed they would suffer "irreparable harm" if Steinbrenner relinquished control of the team and said that Steinbrenner was coerced into signing the agreement with Vincent on July 30.

Vincent ruled that Steinbrenner's conduct in the Howard Spira affair, which included giving the admitted former gambler $40,000, was not in the best interests of baseball.

"The plaintiffs did not present evidence that this settlement was anything other than an unpleasant choice," Batchelder said. "I find that the temporary restraining order which has been demanded should be and will be denied."

The agreement Vincent originally brought into the July 30 meeting with Steinbrenner called for a two-year suspension and three-year probation, but the Yankees owner and his attorneys opted for an agreement that forced him to step down as general partner. He is allowed to continue to take part in the financial affairs of the Yankees, and his family will control 55 percent of the stock, said Patrick McCartan, a spokesman for the major leagues.

Steinbrenner has denied being part of the lawsuit and has said all along he intends to follow the agreement, and attorneys for baseball even played a tape of an interview on the ABC news show "20-20" in which Steinbrenner said he wanted to step down.

Steinbrenner, who is banned from fighting the agreement under terms of the settlement, might be called on to testify by phone. Both parties agreed after a lunch break that his testimony was not necessary Monday, and there was no evidence presented that stated he wanted to stay on as general partner.

"No injunction from this court can order Mr. Steinbrenner to continue in his position of general partner," Batchelder said.

Hoopster declared ineligible

The 1990 Missouri Valley champion Saluki men's basketball team suffered a preseason setback Monday as it was announced that 7-foot freshman recruit Marcello da Silva will be ineligible for play with the squad until at least Dec. 15.

Da Silva, who came to SIU-C from Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, has yet to pass his Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL) test for foreign students. The test centers on the students' English skills. Da Silva has played at SIU-C's Arena before, as a member of the Brazilian National Team that played an exhibition against the Salukis last fall.

The loss of da Silva makes for the second casualty among the Saluki's 1990 recruiting class. Dennis Winfield, a 6-foot-11 center, of Minnesota, opted to go to junior college instead of enrolling at SIU-C.

Saluki head coach Rich Herrin has the choice of whether to play da Silva after Dec. 15, or to let him mature a year by redshirting him. If redshirted, da Silva would sit out the entire 1990-91 season and would have four years of eligibility remaining.

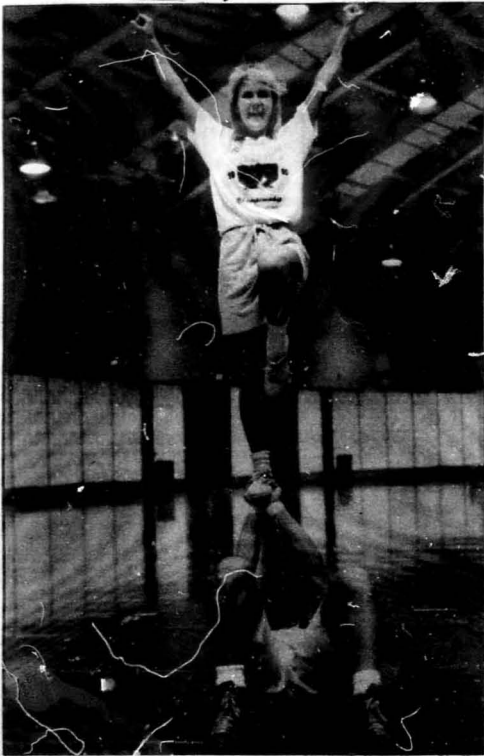

In the past year the Salukis have lost four players of at least 6 feet 11 inches. Last August, 7-foot freshman center Tony Harvey transferred to the University of Georgia, while 6-foot-11 junior center Dave Busch left the team in mid-season, and now da Silva and Winfield are at least temporarily in limbo.

The good news for Saluki hoop fans is no other players, recruits or returning letterman, are ineligible for the upcoming season. Included in that list are foreign recruits Emeka Okenwa and Mirko Pavlovic.

Okenwa, a 6-foot-8 sophomore center out of Owerri, Nigeria, is eligible after sitting out his freshman

Shakers, cheerleaders make changes

Saluki cheerleaders John Berglin and Marci Well work on perfecting a stunt during Monday's practice at the Arena.

Cheerleading coach Nancy Esling hasn't had a minute's rest since her move from Student Programming to the athletic department.

The cheerleaders, Saluki Shakers, and mascots, which made up the Spirit program at the Student Programming Office, have recently been moved to the athletic department from SPC and Esling was hired as a full-time coordinator.

Though not sure how much athletic department funding her programs will see, Esling does know that the Shakers will be getting new uniforms, which have been needed for some time, and she is currently looking into getting a new Saluki dog costume for the mascots. The old "sauna suit" is heavy, poorly-ventilated and "doesn't smell very nice," Esling commented.

Saluki Shaker coach Sheri Black said fund-raising will still be held by the group in order to supplement the money provided by the athletic department.

Changes also being made in some of the dance styles used by the Saluki Shakers. Last year during an intercollegiate Athletic Advisory Committee meeting comments were made concerning certain movements in the routines of the Shakers which were considered suggestive by some of the members of the board. The SIU athletic department is concerned about the dance styles used during performances, as are coaches Esling and Black.

Tryouts this year were geared specifically toward the athletic ability of prospective dancers.

"We want them (Shakers), first of all, to elicit spirit and enthusiasm from the student body and people that attend the events," Esling said. "And when we entertain, we want it to be in a very athletic style."

Esling's office is stacked to the ceiling with boxes of uniforms, pompons, mascot outfits, costume accessories, and trophies, all brought over to the Arena from SPC.

"I'm still sorting through it trying to put things in a spot," Esling said. "I haven't had a minute's rest yet, but it's work that I enjoy."

The Saluki cheerleaders, Shakers and mascots started their season off on the right foot by bringing home numerous awards from UCA camps held earlier in August in Murfreesboro, Tenn.

The cheerleaders received six superior awards and most improved at the camp.

The mascots captured all superior awards as well as gold awards for ingenious mascot activities.

The Shakers nailed down a total of 42 blue superior ribbons on individual routines that were learned at the dance camp. They also received a red ribbon on their home routine evaluation and a gold superior ribbon on their fight song.

In addition to the various ribbons that were won, the Shakers also came home with a superior trophy for winning all blue ribbons and a Master Key to Spirit trophy for being the most spirited squad at the camp.

The S Club in stands to support Saluki sports

By Julie Autor

There's a new club in the stands.

Tim Jackson, Student Programming Council Spirit Chair, developed a new student pep club called The S Club. The club will take an active part in supporting the Salukis at football and basketball games.

"The idea has been floating around for a number of years, but the opportunity has never come about," Jackson said. "Students were always asking for a special student section, so here it is."

Memberships will include a Saluki athletic pass, reserved seating at McAndrew Stadium and behind-the-basket seating at the Arena.

Members also will receive priority purchase of tickets at away games. Travel packages are planned for football games to

The S Club will have weekly meetings to brainstorm for activity ideas.

"We want new and zany tactics," Jackson said. "Our goal is to have 100 people sign up."

The membership package is available for $27 or $7 for students who already have purchased a Saluki athletic pass.

Meetings to sign up for membership will be held from 7-9:00 p.m. on Monday, Aug. 27 and Tuesday, Aug. 28, in Ballroom D in the Student Center. Another membership meeting will be held from 7-11 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 30 at the Carnival of Crazyness in the Student Center.

"We want to see what the students want," Jackson said. "We want some self-generated ideas."

Memberships also will be available after Aug. 27 at the SPC office on the third floor of the Student Center.

'Itchy' Jones insists 'I am still coach at SIU'

By Paul Pabst
Staff Writer

Despite all the attention in the media on the possibility of his departure, Saluki head baseball coach Richard "Itchy" Jones insists he is still exactly that, the Saluki head baseball coach.

"The Illinois interview has gotten a lot of attention," Jones said. "All I know is that right now I am still coach at SIU. I'm preparing for the upcoming season just like I do every other year."

All the attention is due to Jones' interview last Friday and Saturday for the vacant head coaching position at the University of Illinois. Jones met with Illinois Athletics Director John Mackovic, assistant Athletics Director Bob Todd and the athletics support staff.

The Illinois job is open due to the resignation of Angie Garrido who is returning to coach Fullerton State University.

Moving from SIU-C to Big Ten athletics would have a number of benefits, Jones said, these benefits will weigh on his decision whether to stay or go.

"The benefits in going to Illinois would be to have such a large baseball budget," Jones said. "Also they have a new facility, an excellent support system for athletics and the Big Ten allows

Soviet Union vice president: Premier Ryzhkov must go

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Russian Federation's vice president Monday accused Premier Nikolai Ryzhkov of disobeying Mikhail Gorbachev and said he should be fired for refusing to work on a radical economic plan. Ruslan Khasbulatov, the giant republic's No. 2 man under Boris Yeltsin, also accused the Soviet government headed by Ryzhkov of gross incompetence in trying to deliver the country from economic crisis. "We have not had a more unsuccessful or more ineffective government in our country," Khasbulatov told reporters.

Factional fighting spreads in South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Factional fighting spilled into previously unaffected black townships Monday, threatening to rage out of control and bringing intense pressure on black leaders to set aside tribal differences and act in unison to stop the bloodshed. The death toll after the eighth day of savage battles rose to at least 371 and the number of injured to about 1,400. The tribal-style fighting claimed more than 40 dead and 80 hurt in the latest day's strife. The number of townships involved now totals nine, police said.

Armies take positions in Mohawk dispute

OTTAWA (UPI) — Canadian armed forces were cheered and applauded by Quebec residents and Mohawk Indians Monday as they replaced provincial police outside two native Indian communities embroiled in a bitter land dispute with the federal government. Lieutenant-General Ken Foster said the 1,400 soldiers, transported in personnel carriers, would dismantle police barricades and, if asked, would also tear down Indian barricades set up in the communities of Oka and Chateaugay, near Montreal.

Automatic spending cuts total $105.7 billion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If White House and congressional budget negotiators fail to agree on a deficit reduction plan by Oct. 1, automatic cuts of $105.7 billion in defense and other programs would be triggered, the administration said Monday. In its initial report on the potential spending cuts, called sequestration, the administration's Office of Management and Budget said that under current law the cuts would total $85.4 billion.

Airline crew convicted of flying intoxicated

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Three former Northwest Airlines pilots were found guilty Monday of being under the influence of alcohol March 8 when they flew a jetliner with 91 passengers aboard from Fargo, N.D. to Minneapolis. The defendants — flight captain Norman Prouse, 51, of Conyers, Ga., co-pilot Robert Kirchner, 36, of Highland Ranch, Colo., and flight engineer Joseph Balzer, 35, of Antioch, Tenn. — stood stone-faced as the verdict was read by the jury forewoman. "I came into this trial expecting the worst," Prouse said. Sentencing is expected in about 30 days, pending the results of a pre-sentence investigation.

Thompson signs camp bill for first-time juvenile felons

CHICAGO (UPI) — Some first-time felons can trade their prison blues for the chance to sweat under the hot Southern Illinois sun in unison to a drill instructor's harsh cadence under legislation signed Monday by Gov. James R. Thompson. Thompson removed the last hurdle from a proposed minimum-security "boot camp" prison for youthful offenders when he signed two identical bills that formally authorize the facility as one way to reduce the skyrocketing population in Illinois' regular prisons.

Auditions for fall plays to be held at McLeod

By Wayne Wallace
Entertainment Editor

Auditions for four different plays will be held Tuesday and Wednesday nights as the Department of Theater gears up for a semester full of stage productions.

The auditions begin at 7 p.m. in McLeod Theater. Auditionees are asked to prepare two one-minute monologues, contrasting in nature.

Call-back auditions will be held men and 11 women.

"A Little Hotel on the Side," (aka "Hotel Paradiso") by Georges Feydeau and Maurice Desvallieres, will open at McLeod Theater on No. 30 and will run Dec. 1, 7, 8 and 9.

The translation is by John Mortimer. Mike Morris, assistant professor of theater, is slated to direct.

An assortment of Parisians at a small Paris hotel encounter unexpected guests, ghosts and a police raid in this madcap farcical farce.

The play holds parts for nine men and seven women, plus numerous porters, constables and hotel guests.

"The Adventures of Harlequin," a two-act play for young audiences, takes place in a 16th century Italian village square and includes the performance of a short play in commedia dell'arte style during a holiday carnival. This play within a play allows some of the cast to act both realistically and in farcical commedia style.

The play has speaking roles for nine males and five females, plus additional "entertainers" for the carnival in Act II. These include a fire-eater, juggler, magician, acrobat and strolling musician.

"The Adventures of Harlequin" will be performed in daytime performances Oct. 16, 17, 18, 19 and 20.

"Cloud Nine" by Caryl Churchill will be performed in the Lab Theater Nov. 8, 9, 10 and 11. Brian Holtz will direct.

"Cloud Nine" requires four men and three women to double—and sometimes triple—to portray 16 roles.

New bill will boost regional health care

RURAL ILLINOIS lacks even the most basic in modern health care services. People in the southern-most counties of Illinois are forced to drive more than an hour to get the essentials in medical attention.

What's more, these economically depressed areas have a harder time competing with northern Illinois and wealthier states for qualified health professionals to revive the services.

The General Assembly passed a health care package designed to attract doctors, nurses and other medical personnel to downstate Illinois and sent it to Gov. James R. Thompson at the close of its spring session.

ONE BILL SENT to the governor in late July would provide an incentive for nurses licensed in other states to practice in small rural Illinois towns. The bill would cut through the red tape of applying for an Illinois license. Under the bill, the Department of Professional Regulation could issue a temporary permit within 14 working days and, after a background check of nursing licenses in other states, the much-needed nurses could get right to work in Illinois while awaiting a permanent license.

THE WAITING PERIOD for a permanent license now can take up to several weeks. Even more time is needed to process applications when problems arise getting special records. Sometimes misunderstandings between the department and health care provider as to what is really required to recognize and provide the licensure further impede action. Meanwhile, the shortage of nurses needed to staff our hospitals continues to reach critical proportions.

This is a code-blue alert for rural health care in Illinois. The governor has until mid-September to sign the bill or this particular legislation may have no hope for recovery.

We encourage the governor to sign this bill and provide Southern Illinois with some health care relief it so desperately needs. This legislation would allow for the relatively immediate and inexpensive step in the right direction.

THE LEGISLATURE needs to take a close look at rural health care and continue to approve bills that would help alleviate the health-care crisis that entangles Southern Illinois.

Other solutions to the health care pinch in Southern Illinois, such as developing new medical facilities and expanding medical personnel and services, require considerable funding and time to implement.

The nurse licensing bill is one way to provide the quick, effective care that the area needs.

Yellow ribbon fever spreading as Persian Gulf crisis grows

Slat Grobnik picked up his beer bottle and waved it menacingly at the TV set. "Turn it off," he bellowed at the barkeep, "or, so help me, I'll cave it in."

What's the problem? It's only the evening news. We always watch it. "It's starting over again. Look for yourself. The yellow ribbons. See, there they are. Yellow ribbons, you see them?"

Yes, I see them, but be calm. "How can I be calm when we're going to go through another yellow-ribbon crisis. Every time we turn on the TV news, we're going to see yellow ribbons."

Yellow ribbons wrapped around trees. Yellow ribbons hanging from porches. Yellow ribbons in lapels or wrapped around hair. Yellow ribbons everywhere.

But it is to be expected. You know how compassionate Americans are when it comes to hostages. Their hearts immediately go out to them, and they want to express their fears and concerns, so they put out a yellow ribbon.

"You think I ain't compassionate?"
I didn't say that.
"Yeah, but that's what you're thinking."

Well, you did react a bit violently to the sight of the yellow ribbons.
"That's right. Because you know who wants to see those yellow ribbons flapping on the TV?"
Who?
"This Sammy Hanson guy in Iraq."

"You mean Saddam Hussein."
"Whatever. Oh, boy, I bet when his satellite dish brings in the American news he says: 'Hey, Abdul and Akim, looky here, we got 'em on the run. The Americans are putting up the ol' yellow ribbons. It won't be long now. All we got to do is sit and wait for yellow-ribbon fever to spread and George Bush to foid up."

But what would you have people do? About 3,000 Americans are being held as hostages in Iraq. That is a lot of people.

"Sure, I know that. That's all the TV blabbermouths have been talking about. But there are 250 million Americans who ain't being held hostage in Iraq, and that is a lot more people. And if we're going to go eyeball-to-eyeball with this creep, we gotta knock off the yellow-ribbon stuff."

You would deny the family and friends of the hostages the right to express their concern?

"Hey, there's a lot of people with concerns. We already got, what, 30,000 troops over there? Another 45,000 Marines are on their way? All those sailors and pilots? By the time we get dug in, it could be 100,000 or 200,000 in the desert. And they might have to go up against this loony tune with his poison gas?"

Yes, it is a tense situation.
"So what would happen if the mother and father and wife and brother and sister of every one of those troops started sticking yellow ribbons on their houses? What if they all started calling up their local TV stations and giving interviews about how Bush got to do something to bring the troops home right now?"

I don't know.
"Well, I'll tell you. We might as well pack it in right now and let Sammy Hussein run all over the place and grab all the oil and become the world's biggest gooc. We could run a yellow flag up over the White House and say: 'Sammy, you win. Please don't shut down our factories and ruin our economy. We'll be nice, Boss.'

So what would you have President Bush do?

"He ought to go on TV and make a speech. He ought to say: 'Look, I'm doing what I think is best for this country. If you think I'm wrong, then in a couple of years you'll have a chance to let me know by voting me out of office.'

"But, in the meantime, I'd appreciate it if you don't try to put me in the trick bag because of 3,000 hostages. Remember when World War II broke out, there were civilians trapped all over the world. It was a bad break, but Roosevelt didn't say everything had to be put on hold until we got them back. If he did, we'd all be talking German and Japanese."

"Now, I know all you TV guys like to put stuff on that twangs the heart strings and makes for good pictures. So when you hear about a yellow ribbon being strung up, you send a camera crew out there faster than the anchorman can put on his makeup. It saves you the bother of thinking."

Paper recycling hinders Canada

Canadians want you to know that every time you bundle up your old newspapers and send them off to be recycled you are putting a Canadian out of a job.

Ridiculous as that may sound to Americans who now regard recycling as a patriotic duty, it is an argument getting serious support in Canada. The Canadian Pulp and Paper Association has asked Canadian Trade Minister John Crosbie to make it an issue in trade talks with Washington. And Crosbie is taking their complaints seriously.

Obviously, the Canadians can't object to individual Americans going gung-ho about recycling. Some Canadians are doing it, too. But they are squaring off on the issue by claiming that state laws requiring increased production of recycled paper are trade barriers that contravene international trade law and the Free Trade Agreement between Canada and the United States.

The Canadian newsprint-makers are in a squeeze. They export more than $5 billion worth of newsprint to the United States. Over the years, much of it wound up in U.S. landfills, which is why some states have passed laws requiring newspapers to use up to 40 percent recycled newsprint in future years.

But the old newspapers that go into recycled paper don't go back to Canada. Freight costs prohibit that. So the recycling plants are being built in the United States, closer to where the old newspapers are. Abitibi-Price, a major Canadian papermaking firm, recently announced a newsprint recycling plant at Claiborne, Ala. That's simply good business.

City council may approve money for Sycamore Street extension

By Anne Ryman
Staff Writer

The Carbondale City Council may approve a resolution Tuesday appropriating $65,000 in Motor Fuel Tax Funds for the West Sycamore Street Extension Project. To proceed with engineering design costs, the resolution, required by the Illinois Department of Transportation, must be approved before the Motor Fuel Tax Funds can be spent. In the fiscal year 1991 budget, funding was included for the extension. However, some board members wanted further consideration of the project before deciding whether to proceed with it.

The extension of West Sycamore from North University Avenue to North Illinois Avenue would help alleviate some east-west traffic congestion, the Capital Improvement Committee said. The council also will hear a request for local matching funds for a historical survey to identify potential landmarks and historical districts within the City's jurisdiction. The council is requested to commit a maximum of $6,000 in local matching money to fund the $12,000 survey when and if a grant becomes available during the fiscal year.

A possible source of funding for the grant is the U.S. Department of Interior through the Illinois Historic Preservation Agency. This money would be grant-in-aid not exceeding 50 percent of the project cost.

The council will hear a status report on the restoration of the Old Depot at Illinois Avenue and Monroe Street. A structural report indicated the building is in fair to good condition.

A report required by the Illinois Department of Transportation also is being prepared by the Preservation Commission nominating the old railroad depot as a historical landmark.

The council may proceed with the old depot stabilization by having the building inspected for hazardous materials.

The program, which began in 1986, attacks the past practice of narcotics dealers burying their drug money until they get out of jail and using it again to finance new drug sales, Hess said.

The government is now able to seize houses and cars owned by drug dealers, even if the assets were purchased free and clear before they became involved in narcotics, he said.

"We take the financial assets away so they won't have it when they get out," Hess said.

The money and assets seized from drug busts are shared between the FBI, IRS, DEA officers, state police and local cooperating agencies quarterly, Hess said. Some of the money also goes to providing jail space and the hiring of more agents.

In 1987, $27 million in seizures was recycled, but in 1989 the amount increased to over $500 million.

"We've taken a number of different approaches to the problem in the late '80s that we hadn't even thought of in the early '80s," Hess said.

Carbondale received about $17,000 Friday, police chief Ed Hogan said. The Southern Illinois Enforcement Group received about $12,000, director Steve Kuncze said.

"Any time we receive money in this manner from the U. S. Attorney it has a very positive effect on the members of the department," Hogan said. "They know we'll be able to purchase technology and training that otherwise would not be available."

The Enforcement Group works drug investigations using officers from a four-county area, Kuncze said. Often times the group does not get the funding from the state that it needs and the return of the drug seizures helps, he said.

Though Hess said he thought the presence of SIU made Carbondale a larger drug market, both Hogan and Kuncze agree the drug problem is no worse here than in the rest of Southern Illinois.

Hogan said Carbondale is not any worse on a population-based scale, and Kuncze said more drug traffic is seen here mostly because of Carbondale's size.

election. But, Poshard's reform limits the individual to $500 for combined primary and general elections.

Poshard does not accept gifts, honorariums and incentives because he does not think that other enterprises should pick up costs for campaigns. He also has limited the use of personal funds to $25,000 because he thinks that it is unfair for a congressman to spend anymore.

"Who would stand a chance against those who could spend $5 million of their own money," he said. "If you haven't spent years in the party or are not independently wealthy, you can't run for Congress."

This year, he said that congressional mail went up to $80 million and that there is no acknowledgement of individual congressional mail accounts.

"There needs to be a public record of every penny that is spent on mail," he said.

"He said he thinks there should be strict reporting and spending limits. He also believes there should be no financial assistance from the national party, no Washington DC fundraisers and travel only on official business of committees.

In the fall of 1987, when Poshard began his campaign for a seat in Congress, he said he spent 25 percent of his time raising money for his campaign in endless fundraising activities.

"I felt I was short changing my job and family," he said. "It was clearly evident to me after spending 25 percent of my time for my last campaign that I could not, in good conscience, go through this ordeal again. Money should not control this country."

owners said Monday. A weekend delivery of fuel at C&R Sunoco pushed up pump prices by a cent each for the five grades of gasoline, ranging from $1.15.9 a gallon to $1.46.9, station owner Raymond Russo said.

"It's gone up about four times in three weeks," Russo said, noting that the highest grade of gasoline was $1.35.9 a gallon before the crisis in the Middle East. "They (Sun Co.) don't tell you (the price is rising) until it gets here."

Sun Co. spokesman Dennis Byrne said wholesale prices charged to Sunoco stations on the East Coast last went up 4 cents to 5 cent: a gallon Aug. 17.

"We've always said we support the president and we'll show as much restraint as we can," Byrne said. "But we need to respond to changes in the market, and crude has gone up substantially and it's still going up."

Phillips Petroleum Co. raised its average wholesale gasoline prices 2.2 cents a gallon over the weekend, on top of rise of a penny Aug. 17. Phillips has raised its wholesale price a total of 24.2 cents since the invasion.

barrel in trading Monday on the New York Mercantile Exchange, up about $8 a barrel — 40 percent — since the Iraqi invasion.

Oil companies have been bombarded with charges of price gouging but have dismissed such accusations, explaining that retail gas prices are not rising nearly as quickly as the companies' costs.

One holdout from the upward-pricing trend Monday was Atlantic Richfield Co., which has maintained a price freeze announced Aug. 8.

Arco's average self-serve unleaded pump price of $1.16 a gallon — up 4 cents since Aug. 2 — has lifted business at the company's 1,700 gas stations.

United States was delaying military action to avoid influencing a pending U.N. Security Council vote on a resolution to enforce economic sanctions against Iraq. The council adopted the economic embargo in response to Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion and occupation of Kuwait.

further actions on enforcement of the sanctions."

The administration official said the Navy would continue its interdiction operation and keep monitoring the two Iraqi tankers, noting they are not near any port or harbor.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, traveling with Bush from the president's summer home in Maine to Washington for briefings on the crisis, added, "We intend to enforce the sanctions, but we want to give them every opportunity to turn around and

Program to push recycling

New Clean and Green coordinator plans to concentrate on new markets for recycled paper and plastic products

By Anne Ryman
Staff Writer

Recycling will be the buzz word of the future for the new coordinator of Carbondale Clean and Green, Inc.

Carbondale resident Eugenia Becker was announced as the program coordinator on Monday.

Becker said a major focus will be encouraging markets for recycled goods.

"A major concern when a city starts recycling is the need to educate the entire citizenry of the town," Becker said. "School children are a remarkable avenue for educating families."

One of the drawbacks to recycling is that some of the markets do not exist. Markets that need to be targeted include those for recycled paper and plastics, she said.

"I think Carbondale is ahead of the game," Becker said of the organization's accomplishments. She would like to enlist the help of SIU-C students and increase the awareness that South Illinois Avenue should be as beautiful as the rest of the city.

Carbondale Clean and Green has done a remarkable job of coordinating all elements of the community, Becker said.

Civic involvement is very important to the organization and citizens have a sense that Carbondale is their's and they can make an impact, she said.

Becker will replace Jeanne Foster who has been the coordinator for three years. Foster will leave on Sept. 4 for the position of Director of Fund Raising and Development at Carbondale Memorial Hospital. Primarily interested in program development, Foster felt she had achieved this with Clean and Green and it was time to move on.

Being coordinator will give her the chance to go from being a recycling individual to a position that will have broader impact, Becker said.

Becker was chosen from a pool of 26 candidates for her proven track record and her knowledge of how to unite a community, Jim Prowell, executive director of the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce, said. Becker served as executive director of downtown district and commercial development manager in New Britain, Conn.

"We want a continuation of that unity that is best for working with all facets of the community," Prowell said. "We want Carbondale Clean and Green to be a community effort."

Carbondale Clean and Green is the local chapter of the Keep America Beautiful Program. During Clean and Green's three years, a 76 percent litter reduction has been achieved. In 1988, litter was reduced 32 percent and by 1989 litter was reduced by 76 percent.

Litter reduction remained the same for 1990 because vacant lots needed to be targeted, Foster said.

Area singers desiring to be backed by a full symphony orchestra can satisfy that urge by joining the SIU-C Choral Union.

The choir—which brings together college and community vocalists—will present Randall Thompson's "A Psalm of Thanksgiving" as its fall concert on Nov. 20.

Students wishing to join the choir must enroll in the Choral Union course offered by the School of Music, according to John Mochnick, associate professor of music.

Anytime this week, students may sign up for an audition on a list posted outside Room 115 in Altgeld Hall.

Prospective choir members from the community need not audition but should have some choral background.

Weekly rehearsals for the November performance are held each Monday night, beginning at 7:30 p.m. and lasting roughly until 9:45 p.m. Rehearsals get underway Monday, Aug. 27.

For more details, call Mochnick at 536-7505.

Food stamp participation rises in 1990

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Enrollment in the food stamp program, the nation's major anti-hunger plan, has surged to its highest level in five years, but there was no simple explanation Monday for the increase.

In the past, participation rose or fell depending on the unemployment rate.

But officials noted some months ago the linkage was not as direct as it once had been.

According to the government's most recent figures, about 20.1 million people were receiving food stamps, up 1.3 million from one year earlier.

By comparison, the administration forecast an average of 19.3 million people would receive benefits during the current fiscal year.

The food stamp program helps poor people improve their diets by their food-buying power.

Festival offers fun times, free samples

By Eric Reyes
Staff Writer

The Free Forum Area was cost-free Monday as students flocked to Campus Fest '90 for all kinds of freebies that ranged from Pepsi to Calvin Klein Cologne.

Campus Fest, continuing Tuesday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., features product sampling, games, free gifts and demonstrations by local and national advertisers.

The CBS display seemed to be one of the most popular. Students read from a one-minute script on a re-created set of the soap opera "The Young and the Restless," in front of a television camera and received a free videotape of their performance.

Carson Tang, who operates the camera and directs the on-screen action, said the students can win a walk-on role in the actual daytime soap opera.

Although there were no potential Emmy winners, some students had fun overacting for the camera.

"Things are going very good. There have been some hams. They're having a great time walking around the set and waving their arms," Tang said.

Carmen Meeks, a freshman in business administration, read the script with her friend Anita Thompson, a freshman in engineering.

"I just like to get on TV," Meeks said.

Joel Ginsberg, vice-president of college operations for Market Source Corporation, the creators of Campus Fest, said around 300 people attend the Campus Fest activities at any given time.

Ginsberg said there were more than 200 prizes being given away compliments of the sponsors and the University Bookstore.

One popular game at the Fest is IBM's basketball shoot.

Brian Madison, a pre-major freshman, who didn't say if he had been practicing, sank three hoops in a row and walked away with a prize of his choice.

"It's something to do, waiting for class. And you get free things,"

Madison said.

Brian Blackford from Barnes-Hines, a contact lens solution company, said there is a large amount of product loyalty from the college population when giving away samples.

"There is a lot of stuff to do. You gotta win something around here," said Chet Bernardes, a junior in computer information processing.

Tuesday is the last day of events at SIU-C. If everything goes well, Jim Skiersch, bookstore director, said students may see it again next year.

Baby items top in waste of products

WASHINGTON (SHNS)—Urging parents to pass the "environmental ethic" on to their children, an environmental coalition Monday bestowed its "Wastemaker Award" on 10 baby products.

From Huggies disposable diapers to Toss 'Em disposal diaper bags, the group WasteWatch criticized manufacturers for using excessive packaging.

"A number of surveys have indicated the baby boomers are more environmentally concerned than any other group of Americans," said Rep. Frank Pallone Jr., D-N.J. "We hope they will pass the environmental ethic along to their children."

But spokesmen for several of the companies cited by WasteWatch said they are concerned about the environment and are doing their part to conserve and recycle.

"We take a pro-active role in improving the environmental aspects of our packaging," said F. J. Ostendarp, a spokeswoman for Mott's U.S.A.

Six-packs of Mott's applesauce and of Gerber baby food cereal were among items receiving the Wastemaker award.

A Gerber spokesman said the six-pack had been discontinued in November 1989 because of poor sales.

Other baby-care products included Ultra Pampers, Dyprotex diaper rash pads and Wash-a-bye-Baby disposable wipes.

Microwavable foods on the list included Kid Cuisine, Tyson Looney Tunes frozen dinners and Micro Magic milkshakes.

Conagra Frozen Foods, maker of Kid Cuisine, said its packaging ensure tamper resistance and freshness.

Ms. Ostendarp of Mott's said her company "provides a variety of packaging to meet a variety of consumer needs."

But Robert Collins of Clean Water Action, a member of WasteWatch, said convenience is now scapegoat when the environment is concerned.

"These products are promoted under the guise of convenience," Collins said.

Key West wreck yields treasures

FLORIDA (UPI)—Treasure hunters off the Dry Tortugas have recovered six gold bars with markings that indicate they could be from a royal Spanish cargo fleet lost in a hurricane in 1622, a spokesman said Monday.

Dan Bagley, director of Tampa's Seahawk Deep Ocean Technology, said crews found six 1.5-pound bars during the last two weeks at the company's wreck site about 75 miles west of Key West and under about 1,500 feet of water.

They also recovered a gold and emerald ring and 15 intact Spanish olive jars at the site last week.

"We are delighted to be finding gold this early in the excavation," Bagley said. "Actual excavation of the wreck site has been going on for only about two weeks, and we've uncovered a very small portion of the wreck."

Three of the bars have "EN RADA" stamped into the metal. That Spanish tax stamp also was found on some of the gold bars from the ship Nuestra Senora de Atocha.

The Atocha was part of a royal Spanish fleet that sank in a 1622 hurricane with a load of treasure from the New World.

Staff members discuss Gulf crisis

By Brandl Tipps
Staff Writer

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein is a splinter of the thorn in the United States side, but the Persian Gulf crisis is more deeply rooted, University staff members said.

"We're not fighting one man, we're fighting the whole nation," said Vincent Lacey, director of Computer Assistance Instruction and Research Lab and adjunct graduate faculty in Political Science.

In view of Hussein's actions, the United States is on the verge of a major war, Lacey said.

"I think President Bush has overstepped his bounds by underestimating the enemy," said Lacey, who visited Iraq in 1988.

Their soldiers are used to fighting a prolonged war, he said.

"My views I feel are not typical of the average person in the Middle East," said a University professor, who wishes to remain anonymous for fear of safety of relatives in Iraq.

"I feel that this has been an act of aggression on Hussein's part and I think that it is important for the international community to unite," said the professor.

The professor was born in Iran, but has lived for many years in the United States.

A united action would be more effective and would reduce the chance of a war and if it is only the United States acting, it allows Hussein to manipulate the feelings or opinions of the masses in the Arab world, the professor said.

Hussein has said he will use the estimated 20,000 Westerners, including 3,000 Americans, trapped in Iraq and Kuwait as a human shield against possible attack until the West withdraws troops from Saudi Arabia and warships from the gulf.

Over the weekend, Iraq offered to release the Westerners if foreign troops left Saudi Arabia, where they were deployed after Iraq's August 2 invasion and subsequent annexation of Kuwait, United Press International reported.

"The best hope we have is the success of the economic sanctions," said William Hardenbergh, political science professor.

The sanctions should work because virtually everyone is united, he said.

"There is a rumor amongst the Saudi citizens that the Saudi government did not invite the American Government and that we are there against their will," said Judith Ceasar, lecturer in the English department.

It would be terrible if Allies were to initiate an attack on Iraq, Ceasar said.

College students can overcome anxiety from change

To Your Health

By Cheryl Presley
Wellness Center

Change has always been central to American life. More than a century ago, French Author Alexis De Tocqueville remarked, "The American has no time to tie himself to anything, he grows accustomed only to change and ends by regarding it as a natural state of man."

Now more than ever it seems individuals are encountering a growing number of changes during their life span.

Additionally, many people want to make changes in their lifestyle—become better looking, thinner, better educated, more assertive and less lonely—the list goes on. By coming to college, most students make a long-term commitment to change—to attain a career, to become competitive in the job market.

The college environment calls for students to adjust to new patterns of behaviors. Most times, students must often revise their perceptions of themselves and their environment.

No matter how exciting the prospects of these changes are, we often get in the middle of the adventure and discover that we are stressed, oppressed and anxious.

Fortunately, there are no guide books on how to master every aspect of change. Our lives are unique; therefore, how we respond to and cope with the challenges of putting it all together, how we grow and change, also will be unique.

There are, however, a number of suggestions that can be made to help maximize yourself and take responsibility towards self-reliance and personal growth.

Secondly, change in one area of your life usually affects many other areas of your existence. Changes don't occur in isolation. Perhaps this is why we feel overwhelmed when we make a change, and nothing seems the same again.

Following are some ideas to help you deal with the many changes you may soon encounter. While these ideas are not intended to be easy answers, they can help you internalize the process of change and regain a sense of balance in your life.

■ Take your time: Even though the outer forms of your life can change in an instant, inner re-orientation takes time. Don't panic.

■ Arrange for a good temporary support system. Get someone to talk to.

■ Don't act for the sake of action. Step back and discover what you need to learn for the next step of your life. Make lists of what you really want to have happen during and after the change. ■ Recognize that discomfort is apart of change: Discomfort is not necessarily a sign something is wrong, but that something is changing.

Find ways to relieve the stress of the change.

■ Take care of yourself: Change is an opportunity to learn something new about yourself.

If you need some assistance adjusting to and learning from the changes in your life there are several places on campus that you can get help.

Packers pull Majkowski offer

GREEN BAY, Wis. (UPI) — The Green Bay Packers have withdrawn a five-year, $8.5 million contract offer to holdout quarterback Don Majkowski and are getting close to naming second-year backup Anthony Dilweg as the team's starter.

Packer Vice President Tom Braatz said Monday the contract offer came off the table at 5 p.m. Friday when Majkowski and his agent failed to respond to it.

Braatz said he will contact agent Randy Vataha to find out what length of contract Majkowski is looking for before drawing up another proposal.

"I'm going to stay after them until I find some common ground," Braatz said.

He said he had to set a deadline on last week's offer because if Majkowski continues the holdout, his value diminishes, especially if he misses any regular season games.

A good performance by backup Dilweg in Green Bay's 27-13 exhibition win over New Orleans Saturday really has no impact on negotiations, Braatz said.

"We want to get Don in here," he said.

But Braatz also said Coach Lindy Infante was running out of time and cannot wait forever to name a starter.

At this point, Infante appears to be leaning toward going with Dilweg, he said.

"The team has got to have a quarterback they know is going to be there. I wouldn't be surprised if he (Infante) announces it pretty soon that he is going to go with Dilweg," Braatz said.

In other developments with Green Bay's holdouts, Braatz said guard Rich Moran arrived in Green Bay Monday morning for his physical and will join the afternoon practice after signing a new two-year agreement. Details of the contract were not revealed.

Braatz also said he made a new contract offer Monday to running back Herman Fontenot and is waiting for Fontenot's agent to respond.

Braatz said offensive lineman Ron Hallstrom, however, was remaining firm in his demand for $775,000 this year. "That is way out of sight," he said.

The only other holdout was nose tackle Jerry Boyarsky, but Braatz said the Packers assume he has retired.

Bears cut QB Pease; McMichael still AWOL

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (UPI) — The Chicago Bears Monday cut eight players, including free-agent quarterback Brent Pease.

Pease, 25, was signed by the Bears July 27 as an insurance policy while rookie QB Peter Tom Willis held out. Pease saw action in the Bears' first exhibition, the Hall of Fame Game against the Browns. But Willis came to terms the next week, and Pease has not played since.

The cuts reduced the Bears' roster to 72, including three quarterbacks: Willis, Mike Tomczak and Jim Harbaugh.

While those players cut were heading out of camp, holdout defensive tackle Steve McMichael and his agent Larry Bales were scheduled to meet with Bears finance director Tod Phillips Monday night at an undisclosed location. The two sides had not talked in 21 days.

Phillips has insisted the Bears have not changed their position regarding McMichael, who is under contract for the 1990 season at $500,000 and 1991 season at $600,000.

McMichael originally was seeking $800,000 each of the next two seasons.

Irish's Holtz hypes frosh as best ever

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UPI) — Notre Dame Coach Lou Holtz, typically one to downplay and reduce hype, pronounced the likely starter at split end for the second-ranked Fighting Irish the best freshman he has ever seen.

Holtz was especially anxious for 85 returning veterans' first practice Monday so the upperclassmen would see freshman Lake Dawson.

"With most freshman, you're anxious for the upperclassmen to come in so they can show the freshmen how to do things," said Holtz, whose team opens the season Sept. 15 against Michigan.

"With Lake Dawson, you're anxious for the upperclassmen to come in so he can show them how to do things."

Dawson, a 6-foot-1, 185-pound split end from Federal Way, Wash., impressed Holtz with dedication more than skill, but he has shown plenty of talent as well.

"He has an unbelievable work ethic, good hands and he picks up things well," Holtz said. "If you listed the six best catches we've seen this fall, Lake Dawson would have them all. He has good speed, not great speed. It's not his athletic ability that impresses you. It's his work habits."

"We came out of spring practice without anyone even close to winning the split end position. He has earned the right to be at that position. This young man has been outstanding," Holtz said.

New Irish starting quarterback Rick Mirer, a sophomore from nearby Goshen, knew Dawson was unique before even meeting him.

"Coach Holtz told us at our first meeting that he was the best freshman he had ever seen," Mirer said. "We knew he must be something special."

Dawson made 46 catches for 634 yards and 14 touchdowns as a high school senior. Two years earlier he was unable to play due to a fractured bone in his left leg. In track, he ran the 110-meter hurdles in 13.09 seconds and the 40-yard dash in 4.5 seconds.

Dawson credits his work ethic to his high school coach, former NFL player Tom McConaughy.

Yugoslavia beats Soviets to capture World title 92-75

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — There now is an additional reason for the United States to put NBA players on its teams for international competition.

Besides greatly improving U.S. chances for victory, NBA players may be the only ones capable of keeping Yugoslavia from becoming the international dynasty of the 1990s.

Yugoslavia began to justify such a label Sunday night with its 92-75 victory over the Soviet Union in the gold medal game of the 11th World Championships. The win was as easy as the score indicates—Yugoslavia led by 15 before the game was 10 minutes old and kept the Soviets at a safe distance the rest of the way.

As for the NBA challenge, which is likely to come in the 1992 Olympics in Barcelona, Yugoslavia's players welcome it. Curious and respectable they are, but they aren't scared.

"I would like to see how we would do in a series against one of the good NBA teams," said guard Drazen Petrovic who plays for the NBA's Portland Trailblazers, he scored a game-high 20 points against the Soviets after getting 31 in the 99-91 win over the United States in the semifinals.

Steinbrenner makes one last Yankee move

NEW YORK (UPI) — George Steinbrenner, in perhaps his final act as managing general partner of the New York Yankees, Monday named Gene Michael as Vice President and General Manager of the ballclub.

Steinbrenner, who under an agreement with Baseball Commissioner Fay Vincent has to resign as the team's general partner by midnight, named Michael to replace Pete Peterson as the team's general manager. Peterson will remain in the organization as a special advisor.

Meanwhile in Cleveland, a U.S. District Court judge denied a temporary restraining order sought by two of the team's minority owners, Daniel McCarthy and Harold Bowman, seeking to nullify Steinbrenner's July 30 agreement with Vincent that would end Steinbrenner's 17-year tenure as general partner of the Yankees.

Before introducing Michael, who served as the team's GM in 1980, Steinbrenner said he was "not in shock" and that he "was feeling very good about things."

Steinbrenner reiterated that he had nothing to do with the action filed in court in Cleveland and that he had told major league baseball that his letter of resignation was coming.

"I will be resigning as general partner sometime today," Steinbrenner told a crowded press conference in an auxiliary locker room at Yankee Stadium. "I've gotten all of my work done."

Sunday, Steinbrenner extended Manager Stump Merrill's contract for two seasons, the first time the owner has given a two-year extension during his 17 years.

Also returning next week is senior point guard Sterling Mahan.

more recognition." Jones, who has been the Saluki skipper for 21 seasons, says despite the suddenness of the offer, he has always been keeping an eye out for an opportunity to advance.

"I knew that I would leave Southern sometime if a great opportunity came along," Jones said. "This is a job that might fit into that category."

An added incentive for Jones to leave SIU-C would be the monetary opportunities and the retirement plan. Illinois reportedly paid Garrido more than six figures per year, considerably more than Jones' current salary of $56,172 per year.

In addition to the probable salary increase is the fact Illinois has a similar retirement plan to SIU-C's, meaning Jones could retire from coaching in the next decade. A plan he intends to sticking to.

"If I moved to Illinois I would coach for about eight to ten more years before retiring, I don't have another 20 years left in me," Jones said with a laugh.

A possible replacement for Jones if he decided to move on would be assistant coach Sam Riggelman. Athletics Director Jim Hart commented that Riggelman would get every consideration should there be a vacancy.

Another possibility for Riggelman is if Jones does become the head coach at Illinois, he could join Jones as his assistant. Riggelman said that he and Jones have discussed that possibility.

"That situation is premature right now," Riggelman said. "I've talked to Coach Jones about going, but it is not necessarily my preference. It depends on my status here."

Upon returning from the Illinois interview, Jones and the assistant coaches called a meeting with the players. Jones said the meeting was positive.

"We met and talked about the things going on," Jones said. "Their attitude coming out of the meeting was really good. The 1991 SIU baseball team is going to be very good and very exciting to watch."

"The players understood what is going on," Riggelman said. "It has always been Coach Jones to be up front with the players and they appreciated it. It was one of the better meetings we've had since I've been here."

In his years at SIU-C Jones said that the school and area have been great to him. He doesn't want fans to think his considering changing schools and areas a negative thing.

"SIU is truly an excellent baseball school," Jones said. "It gave me my education, my wife and children, and a great career. I'm a southern Illinois person."

Fighting Illini anticipated to take Big Ten crown

United Press International

Big Ten coaches agree that defense decides this conference, and even the rookie coach of two-time defending Michigan points to Illinois as the 1990 King of D.

"Illinois is the strongest team in the Big Ten," said Gary Moeller, taking over for Bo Schembechler after 20 years as a Wolverines assistant coach. "They're strong defensively. They're strong up the middle, and they're the team to beat."

Iowa's Hayden Fry goes a step further, saying Illinois "may be one of the better defensive teams in the nation."

The Fighting Illini, the 1989 Big Ten runners-up in Coach John Mackovic's second season, return 17 starters, including nine on defense. Returning defensive starters include nose tackle Moe Gardner, tackle Mel Agee and linebacker Darrick Brownlow, a two-time semifinalist for the Butkus Award.

Mackovic believes 1990 "could and should be our best chance at a Big Ten championship; and a shot

Mackovic optimistic about U of I quarterback replacement

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (UPI) — Illinois Coach John Mackovic, able to concentrate on Big Ten football after confronting the NCAA as athletic director over allegations against the basketball team, says he has few problems preparing the 1990 Florida Citrus Bowl winner for their 100th season.

"We've hadn't had any pads on yet, but we're encouraged," Mackovic said just prior to the start of summer workouts. "We're looking forward to the start of the season."

Despite the loss of quarterback Jeff George to the NFL, Mackovic pointed out the offensive and defensive lines and backfield are nearly intact from last year, with 1989 UPI All-American tackle Moe Gardner on hand to intimidate the opposing quarterback.

Illinois' leading quarterback, sophomore Jason Verduzco, is not intimidating. Measured by Illinois publicists at an optimistic 5-foot-9, he'll need the veteran Illini offensive line to help clear some space so he can see his receivers.

"His height is something you just accept," Mackovic said. "We don't want to change our style." Behind Verduzco are sophomore Jeff Kinney, who has seen limited action in practice earlier this year because of a rib injury, freshmen, Forty Wells and Duke Tobin and newcomer J.J. O'Laughlin.

"Unless something unusual happens, Jason will start," Mackovic said. "He has the most experience."

That experience, 16 of 26 pass attempts for 172 yards last season and one touchdown, and the backing of his coaches has made Verduzco an optimistic 20-year-old.

at the Rose Bowl."

All eyes already are looking ahead to Nov. 10, when Illinois plays at Michigan, which is seeking an unprecedented third consecutive outright Big Ten championship.

Illinois most likely would be favored to win the conference crown outright in 1990 if not for the defection of quarterback Jeff George to the NFL. George decided to enter the NFL draft with a year of eligibility remaining, and the move paid off after he was selected No. 1 overall.

The departure leaves Mackovic with unproven Jason Verduzco.

The 5-foot-9 sophomore attempted only 26 passes in 1989 and Mackovic said he will test his young quarterback in the non-conference part of the schedule. The Illini face the Arizona Wildcats and the Colorado Buffaloes to start the season.

But can a top-notch defense make up for a less-than-stellar offense?

"I remember Illinois not for their quarterback but how well their defense played," Ohio State Coach John Cooper said.

Moeller said the best defensive team in the Big Ten will win the conference "85 to 90 percent of the time."

"If you look back at the teams that won the conference championship a number of times, they always had good defensive teams," Moeller said. "Watch that statistic, and that will point to the team that's going to win the conference."

Most Big Ten coaches look to Michigan, Ohio State and possibly Michigan State to battle Illinois for the conference crown. The Wolverines must rebuild their offense. Ohio State needs to find a defense, and Michigan State's George Perles must adapt to his new dual role as coach and athletic director.

Moeller loses his starting quarterback, fullback, tailback, split end, flanker and tight end — just to name a few.

SWC gears up for final season with Arkansas

United Press International

The Southwest Conference will convene its football teams for the 76th time this season and the ongoing question within the state of Texas is how many more times such an event will take place.

One pillar that has helped hold up the SWC for all these years is gone and the league's entire foundation may be crumbling.

Before long, the best teams in the league may be scattered to the winds and the teams that aren't so good will be left to fend for themselves.

Arkansas is gone, at least it will be after this year. The Razorbacks will become an official member of the Southeastern Conference in 1991, though they still will play all the SWC teams next year. That is, they will unless those teams drop Arkansas from their schedules out of spite, which some are threatening to do.

Texas and Texas A&M are being courted heavily by the Pacific-10, though some members of the Texas Legislature say they will do everything in their power to see that doesn't happen. Houston is catching the fever as well, with hints appearing lately that the Cougars might be SEC-bound.

And in the midst of all this behind-the-scenes wrangling, the young men who help those schools finance athletic programs will go out and take part in a SWC season that already had the prospects of being fairly strange.

The season opens with Texas A&M in Hawaii and closes with Houston in Tokyo against Arizona State. The school that has won the league title the last two years has a new coach. And the squad that has the chance to again be the most entertaining in the league can't go to a bowl game.

Arkansas has a chance to leave the league with three consecutive titles but the Razorbacks will be hard-pressed to do so. To start with, the Hogs will be a marked team because of its decision to change leagues.

The Razorbacks also will be undergoing a coaching change, since Frank Broyles jumped ship to Clemson and was replaced by former assistant coach Jack Crowe.
