Students get caught in 'Woody shuffle'

Gus Bode

By Melissa Jakubowski
DE Features Editor

When Lori D. Clark received a notice from the University last week stating that all her classes had been dropped, she was a little shocked.

"I never got the Bursar bill in the mail," she said. "I thought maybe my scholarship and the little bit of financial aid I have covered the amount."

Clark, a senior in journalism from Pana; is one of the victims of what students at SIUC affectionately call, the payments for the fall semester are due on Aug. 8. If no contact is made with the University by Aug. 12 by students regarding late payments, the student's classes are dropped that evening.

Jim Carl, supervisor of Admissions and Records, said 1,113 students had classes dropped by the University. He said that number also includes students who did not properly withdraw from the University.

"Registered students get billed prior to the deadline," he said. "If bills, such as tuition, are coming, they need to keep track of their payments."

Clark said she did not change her address with the University because she was told that the dorms would forward her address. She said most of her classes are now closed, and she has to talk to professors to get back into them.

"I had 15 hours. Right now, I only have nine," she said. "At first I was upset, but it's pretty annoying to try to get in these classes."

Charles Bernardoni, University Bursar, said students need to keep a current address on file with the University.

"There is not much I can do," he said. "The mail goes to the address on record. The problem is not with billing. It's the responsibility of the student to keep track of where it goes."

Bernardoni said if there is a problem

Students find 'not-so-glamorous' jobs necessary, easy

By Tracy Taylor
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Desperate for a job, Erica Carter applied for a maintenance position in Brush Towers, a campus dorm building last year.

After one year of cleaning dorms, Carter threw out the cleaning supplies after landing a more "glamorous" job as secretary of maintenance for Mae Smith Hall.

"It's easier to get a job in maintenance because that is the type of job that will always need people," Carter, an unclassified graduate student from Chicago, said.

With fall semester starting, campus jobs are becoming limited, an SIUC financial aid official said. At the campus job fair Aug. 16, 1,400 students attended, 250 of whom put in job applications on the spot.

Even though jobs such as those in food service and maintenance are not the first choice of most students; a lot of students take these jobs because of the great demand for employees, Carter said.

Eric Weems, assistant director for SIUC Financial Aid, said there are large employers all over campus, but more appealing jobs at the Recreation Center and the Arena typically go first.

"Students look to find glamorous jobs — not jobs in areas like food service," he said. "Students usually prefer to work in departmental offices and the Recreation Center."

"But some students prefer the benefits of the not-so-glamorous jobs."

David Magnus, a sophomore in civil engineering from Chicago, has been working for Student Center maintenance for four semesters. "It's a good place to work," he said. "I get to see everybody, and the work is pretty easy."

Clarissa Cavitt, a sophomore in fashion merchandising from Chicago, began working with Brush Towers maintenance this week.

Cavitt said maintenance is just like cleaning up her own room. "They have other people working who really do the job," she said. "When I come in, I just tidy up a little, and I don't break a sweat."

While some students enjoy the perks of their jobs; others do not always feel the same.

Students who need work should not rule out any possibility, Weems said. "Students who work gain positive experiences, feel involved on campus and get a paycheck every two weeks," he said.

Women's Sports Info. director dies

By Michael DeFord
DE Sports Editor

Mitchell L. Parkinson, SIUC's first full-time Women's Sports Information director, died at his residence Tuesday, according to a statement released by the Methodist Funeral Home of Carbondale.

No details concerning the cause of death had been released as of Tuesday evening. Parkinson, 46, took over as director in 1978. For nearly 19 years, Parkinson played a major role in the expansion of women's media coverage at SIUC.

Among Parkinson's many achievements was, perhaps most notably, the establishment of the University's first press policy and sports hotline for women's sports.

Several of Parkinson's publications have been recognized by the College Sports Information Directors of America, of which he was a member.

His publication awards include Best in the Nation and Best in the District. His writing awards from the organization include Third in the Nation and numerous Best in the District awards.

In addition to his role at SIUC, Parkinson served 14 years as district coordinator in the GTE Academic All America program, which recognizes athletes for their academic achievements.

Parkinson also had served as liaison for Athletics to the SIUC Hall of Fame since 1990 while chairing the selection committee.

Memorial services are scheduled for 10 a.m. Thursday at the First United Methodist Church in Carbondale.

Parkinson's burial will be Saturday at the Hillside Cemetery in Cleveland, Tenn. Parkinson is

WASHINGTON

TWA explosion unlike a bomb's, sources say

WASHINGTON D.C.— The loud noise at the end of Trans World Airlines Flight 800's cockpit voice recorder is more consistent with a fuel explosion than with the sharp sound caused by the bomb that brought down Pan American Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, in 1988, sources close to the investigation said Tuesday.

But specialists who analyzed the recording have reluctantly concluded it probably will not tell them why the Boeing 747 plunged into the ocean off Long Island last month, killing all 230 people aboard. The sound could have been a fuel tank explosion, but it also could have been a bomb that was different from the Pan Am blast. It even could have been a rapid structural breakup, the sources said.

RUSSIA

Russian troops prepare for Chechnya offensive

MOSCOW—Russian troops Tuesday prepared to launch a risky new offensive against Chechen separatists in the capital of Grozny even as a high-stakes Kremlin power struggle escalated among top aides to an absent President Boris Yeltsin, who was said to have left Moscow for a vacation resort.

As thousands of frightened residents sought to flee Grozny and a hard-line Russian military commander was recalled to duty there, Yeltsin slipped away suddenly for what his spokesman described as a scouting trip to examine a vacation resort in the Valdai lake region, 220 miles northwest of Moscow.

The Russian president suffers from heart trouble and there was a new round of speculation Tuesday that surgery is imminent.

Yeltsin's spokesman denied the reports.

Yeltsin left behind a bizarre public brawl among his lieutenants about whether he had given permission for the latest Russian military moves in Chechnya, where rebels continue to hold large parts of Grozny.

F grades should indicate absences, prof says

By Melissa Vaughn
Daily Egyptian Reporter

One SIUC department chairman is still pushing for a University grading system that would indicate if students failed classes because they stopped attending classes, despite a vote against such a system by the Faculty Senate.

Daniel Chavez, chairman of the Department of Physics, one of the departments that requested the grade, said his department wants a grading system that the Faculty Senate turned down in July. Opponents within the senate claimed that the University computer system would have to be updated for such a change.

The absent grade (ABS) would be used for record keeping to show whether a student had failed a class because he or she did not attend classes.

"The grade was still considered an F, but it (the proposed grade) distinguished students who earned their F and the students who received an F by default," Chavez said.

Chavez said the absent grade suggestion was turned down

Two students nabbed on cocaine charges

By Brett Wilcoxson
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Two SIUC students were arrested Monday evening by University police on outstanding federal warrants stemming from previous drug charges.

Warrants were issued for Hasan S. Smith, 21, a sophomore in civil engineering from Rockford and Pierre Loving, 21, a junior in elementary education from Chicago, after they failed to appear in court. Michael C. Carr, chief of the Criminal Division of the U.S.

University cops recognize suspects in SIUC parking lot

Attorney's Office in Benton, said.

The two were indicted by a federal grand jury in Benton Aug. 7. Each suspect was indicted on one count of conspiracy to distribute and possession with intent to distribute crack cocaine, as well as one count of possession with intent to distribute crack cocaine.

Carr said the alleged violations occurred between April 1995 and July 1, 1996 in Carbondale.

Smith was apprehended at 6:54 p.m. Monday in lot 14, police said. Loving was apprehended at 7 p.m. on South Washington Street.

The arresting officers said they recognized each vehicle as belonging to the suspects, and the suspects were sitting in the parked vehicles when they were arrested.

Carr said Smith and Loving are in federal custody at an undisclosed location pending a detention hearing scheduled for 10:30 a.m. Friday. At that time, pre-trial and trial dates, as well as bond amount, will be determined.

Carr said that if convicted on all counts, Smith faces a minimum sentence of 10 years imprisonment, a maximum sentence of life imprisonment and a $4 million fine.

Loving faces five-to-40 years imprisonment and a $2 million fine.

Overcrowded dorm residents should be high on priority list

SOME STUDENTS FIND THE FIRST FEW WEEKS at college to be difficult because of the distance between them and their families. The stress associated with entering college for the first time is considerable because of the helplessness and loss of control they may feel about being in such new surroundings.

This year, however, that stress has been multiplied for some new and returning students. More than 100 students are currently living in allocated rooms set aside for overcrowded residence halls, some living three to a room in the Towers, and others living up to five in a basement room in residence halls at Thompson Point. These students are waiting to be assigned to permanent residences, where they will be taking the place of some students who decide to return home in the first couple of weeks.

HOW AND WHY THIS PROBLEM HAPPENED IS a major point of concern, but the first priority should be to focus on the students it directly affects.

The fact that this problem has occurred cannot be undone. About the best the University can do now is to learn from the situation and hope it doesn't happen again. But in the meantime there are students, some freshmen, who have to deal with this situation on a personal level. Not only do they have to deal with the typical problems, such as finding classes and budgeting time, but now they have to do it from an overcrowded room. Many may be on the verge of just giving up, and who can blame them for that.

The students who are living in these overcrowded spaces have been dealt a huge injustice. They were notified about the situation in advance, but to arrive at college only to find that some of them would have to share a room with four other people is something no one should have to face. But these students have accepted it as best they can and are currently being patient.

THE STUDENTS DESERVE TO BE COMMENDED for putting up with such a bizarre situation. If this had happened University-wide, the majority of students would probably be prone to just giving up, going home, and trying again later. But by doing that they would be giving up the chance to experience a great year at college during some of the best times of their lives. Even though the students living in overcrowded rooms have every right to be angry, they should not abandon all hope just yet.

The University is making amends for the situation, and they should continue to remedy it as swiftly as possible so the students do not have to live in this situation much longer.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

It is foolish to ignore politics

Although stemming from a considerably different ideological foundation than myself, I write to echo the main sentiment of my esteemed colleague Mr. Andrew Volpert. I continually read election turnout statistics with a sense of disbelief and wonder, as the collegiate voting rate ranks among the lowest of any group in the nation.

As almost all legislation either directly affects or will eventually affect us as students, our responsibility seems inherent to fight for the things most dear to us. Whether angry about the Republican slashing of financial aid to needy students, or the Democrats belief in providing national health care, the point remains that involvement is crucial.

As Mr. Volpert accurately described, joining a student political group not only allows students to make an impact on matters of both local and national importance, but grants access to many exciting and enjoyable activities. Aside from the various structured verbal boxing matches with our Republican foes, we also participate in a wide variety of social (always a plus with the college crowd). Finally, the networking opportunities are endless, with political events almost every week involving candidates from all levels of government. I personally have met officials ranging from local offices to Senator Paul Simon and President Clinton. I would encourage anyone concerned about the future and with a little energy to join either my organization or Mr. Volpert's.

With increasing number of students in college and around the country, our concerns are too important to remain on the sidelines. I ask anyone interested in joining the College Dems, to please call me at 351-1568, or if you're with the enemy, look up Andy's number in the soon-to-be-released student directory (It might be funny if everyone just got his address and ordered him a few pizzas once in a while too).

The election is right around the corner, and the outcome could prove classic to the college students. So no matter what party you may identify with, get involved, get active, and get to the Iroquois room in the Student Center next Wednesday at 5:00.

Group distorted herbicide toxicity

In a recent article (Daily Egyptian, Aug. 1), your reporter gave unchecked credence to the Journal of Pesticide Reform, a very biased newsletter produced by the Northwest Coalition for Alternatives to Pesticides (NCAP). The journal and its editor, Caroline Cox, have produced two extremely misleading and inaccurate attacks on glyphosate, the active ingredient in Roundup, the world's best-selling herbicide.

Our company has developed a point-by-point response to the attacks and has made Ms. Cox aware of our concern about her lack of objectivity.

Your reporter lifted several statements from the NCAP attack and ran them without challenge. Although the story clearly identifies Monsanto as the manufacturer of Roundup, your reporter did not call us in St. Louis for a comment.

NCAP, an unabashed opponent of pesticides, is very adept at taking a fact about glyphosate and reporting it out of context to reveal a distorted picture. For example, they report symptoms of exposure to Roundup, but they fail to say that those symptoms were seen only in laboratory animals exposed to very high doses.

They report that bird or insect populations "declined" after Roundup use, leaving the impression that toxicity was to blame when in fact the decline was due to the removal of their habitat. Any vegetation removal technique, even mechanical, would have had the same effect. The EPA classifies the Roundup formulation used in Thompson Woods as practically non-toxic to birds, fish, aquatic vertebrates and insects.

Roundup allows native habitat to return and flourish, benefiting wildlife. Roundup is used by many ecologists in fragile ecosystems, such as the Florida Everglades and Galapagos Islands, to restore native habitat.

NCAP reports that glyphosate was the third leading cause of pesticide illness in California, but they fail to report that millions of people use Roundup in California and that only 30 Roundup cases are confirmed via pesticide reporting program every year. Every injury has been reversible.

NCAP also reports that glyphosate's toxicity but fails to say the EPA requires pesticides to be tested until toxicity is observed. Doses of glyphosate that produced toxic effects are thousands or millions of times higher than any human or animal exposure.

Your reporter apparently assumed NCAP comments were incontrovertible and that there was no need to call us.

We deserved to be given an opportunity to respond, but more important, your readers deserved to be given the truth.

Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty members by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department. Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

Please kill all telemarketers

What is it about telemarketers that makes me want to spike their coffee with a mixture of salmonella bacteria, strychnine and the Ebola virus?

Yes, it irritates me to pay long distance rates to put my best friend on hold while I explain to another Army recruitment officer that I've found it possible to "be all I can be" right here on the couch with a box of Twinkies and the remote without ever attending boot camp.

But irritation does not begin to describe the sadistic visions that engulf my soul as soon as Bambi from Mega-Grunge Music begins listing all the albums I can get for the one-time introductory price of $19.95.

As I was hanging up on yet another politically-correct phone line representative the other day, I realized why I harbor such animosity toward telemarketers:

Telemarketing reminds me of nothing so much as a trip to the gynecologist — invasive, unwanted and misrepresented as a minor obstacle standing between me and true peace of mind.

The difference here is that while I can pencil in my next pap smear for a relatively convenient time, telemarketers invite themselves into my home, jerk my feet out from under me and shove them into the stirrups before I have time to realize what procedure is taking place.

PERSPECTIVES BY EMILY PRIDDY

And telemarketers apparently are trained to be clueless. The following is an actual conversation I had with a credit card company representative:

Me: Hello?
Plastic Rep: Congratulations! This is Mike with (some bank), and you've already been approved for a Visa or MasterCard with a $500 credit limit, no annual fee, and ...
Me: I've got enough plastic.

Mike: Well, you might want to keep our card to use in case of an emergency.

Me: I don't like to think about emergencies that daddy's gold card won't handle.

Mike: Well, we're also offering scholarships to students JUST LIKE YOU if ...

Me: I'm on a full ride.

Mike: Well, you might be interested in ...

Me: Mike, I gotta level with you here. I'm not interested.

Mike: Of course you're not. But wait until you hear about ...

Me: Mike, I tell you what. You've convinced me. I've been wondering how long I could get by with only two cards since I maxed out my Discover, and ...

Mike: Click.

Is it absolutely necessary for me to lie or just be flat rude in order to get rid of someone? As the saying goes, "No means no." I realize of Mike is required by his company to be pushy, but I told him I wasn't interested. And he kept on bothering me. Some women go to court and win big settlements and television movie contracts for similar scenarios.

Maybe if I claim emotional scarring due to unplugging the phone during "Brady Bunch" reruns, I can get a book deal. I wonder how many copies I could sell by phone?

Emily Priddy is a senior in education at SIUC.

Potato chips reflect capitalistic society

I was eating one of those tiny 1-ounce bags of Doritos recently when my mind slid into a cranky, trite mood usually reserved for when I'm in traffic and have decided it's everyone else's fault that I'm going to be late for something.

"Forty-five cents for this?" I thought. The bag had about 12 chips in it, maybe enough to satisfy a 3-year-old's munchies.

When I'm hungry and busy, however, I don't really care about getting ripped off. But when I was eating this particular bag, I decided paying almost a half dollar for a couple of mouthfuls of chips was an ugly exploitation of hungry, hurried students campus wide. I was beginning to feel like I had just sold my textbooks back — all over a few chips.

Other people share this sentiment with me, of course. Complaining about vending machine prices on campus is almost as popular as about parking services.

As it turns out, there's a sort of excise tax on what we buy out of vending machines at SIUC. In fact, 29.01 percent of the money we shell out for junk food goes to the University. I was told by Campus Vending supervisor Jeff Duke. That meant SIUC's cut on my chips raised the price about 13 cents. The cash then goes into something called the Student Welfare Development Fund that helps pay for student activities and the like.

Duke also told me that those really cheap soda machines at Wal-Mart don't really make money. He said the cheap machines are basically an attraction designed to make Wal-Mart a place people like to go to. Maybe the University could take the same approach to student recruitment and retention.

The vending machines illustrate that we're really living in a micro-socialist society at SIUC. We're taxed heavily on our junk food, but it all comes back to us when we get a free condom or go to see some band play on campus. That turns out to be quite a bad deal for virgins who don't like music. But then again, they can go to Wal-Mart to get cheap soda and chips. I think I'll just keep getting ripped off and quit writing when I feel trite and cranky.

with billing or dropped classes, the University will help fix the problem.

"We try to make it easy for the students," he said. "They are our best customers."

Ryan Stuart, a sophomore in business from Roscoe, said he did not know his classes were dropped until he went to get a new student identification card.

He said one of the student workers swiped the card to validate it, and a code 9 — not registered — came up. "I wasn't notified or anything," he said. "I had to pay a $330 prepayment to register for classes. I did not even know anything about it."

Ford sued nationwide over defect

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—Lawyers across the country have filed six lawsuits against Ford Motor Co., alleging that the auto maker hid a defect that can cause engines to suddenly quit in millions of cars and light trucks, exposing occupants to rear-end collisions and lethal failures of brakes and steering.

In court filings, the lawyers are asking for a recall of millions of vehicles with the alleged defect. They say that the problem has been implicated in at least two crashes that killed three people and seriously injured two others and that Ford has faced at least 14 lawsuits from people claiming injuries caused by failures of the allegedly defective part.

Ford calls the allegations "bunk" and says it corrected any such problems long ago.

The lawsuits allege that the Dearborn, Mich., auto maker knowingly manufactured faulty ignition systems that can cause stalling in vehicles sold under the Ford, Lincoln and Mercury names and produced for the 1983 through 1995 model years. The suits do not specify what models, or what years within a model class, might have the defect.

Pregnancy-related deaths rising, study says

The Washington Post

More women are dying from pregnancy-related diseases than previously thought, according to a new federal study that used improved data-collection techniques to examine maternal deaths.

With the new techniques, researchers at the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta examined records for the years 1987-90 and found that the pregnancy-related mortality ratio increased from 7.2 per 100,000 live births in 1987 to 10 per 100,000 live births in 1990.

Though the risks of pregnancy are still small compared with other causes of death for women, child birth is not a risk-free event.

"Pregnancy is more dangerous than the reported national statistics" would suggest, said Jeffrey King, vice chairman of the department of obstetrics and gynecology at Wright State University School of Medicine in Dayton, Ohio.

"The general population believes that medicine can cure all," King added. But "there is indeed a finite risk associated with even the simple process of giving birth. It's not said to scare people, but more to make them cognizant of the reality."

"We still do not have complete identification" of all maternal deaths brought on by pregnancy, said CDC medical epidemiologist Cynthia J. Berg, a lead investigator of the study. The true "numbers could be higher," she added.

The study's findings, reported in the August issue of the journal Obstetrics & Gynecology, showed that the increase in pregnancy-related deaths affected women of all ages and races and followed a period when the risk seemed to be declining.

The reported pregnancy-related mortality ratios for the United States declined from 10.7 in 1979 to 7.1 in 1986, then increased each year from 1987 through 1990," the study said. The increase appears to be due to the better data-collection techniques, Berg said. One of those techniques was expanding the post-birth time frame for counting pregnancy-related deaths.

Leading causes of maternal deaths were hemorrhage, embolism and pregnancy-induced high blood pressure. Other causes included infection and cardiomyopathy, a disease of the heart muscle that appears during pregnancy or after childbirth but whose exact cause is unclear.

King said he was not surprised by the findings because he and others in the field had long suspected that official statistics did not reflect reality.

because there were too many arguments against the proposal.

Stephen Foster, associate director of Records and Registration, said one of the reasons the senate turned down the idea was that the computer at Admissions and Records could not recognize the absent grade.

Foster said the computer system would have to be upgraded University-wide to recognize the absent grade. He said the absent grade was used from the 1966 summer semester until the 1978 summer semester.

Chavez said the Faculty Senate's Undergraduate Education Policy Committee recommended that the Math and Physics departments keep records of the students who fail because of poor attendance separate from records of those who fail because of academic insufficiency.

However, Rongjia Tao, chairman of the Department of Physics, said his department is determined to have the absent grade reinstated. He said the physics and math departments are willing to work out the complications in the computer system.

"If Admissions and Records needs help working out the bug, we could help," Tao said.

The math and physics departments were asked to reinstate the absent grading system after the professors in the two departments noticed an increase in the number of students receiving Fs for not formally withdrawing from a class, Parker said.

Natives question revolution as Cuban economy flounders

Los Angeles Times

President Fidel Castro's hometown of Biran is a collection of identical prefabricated duplexes with wooden-louvered doors and windows substituting for glass.

The only buildings different from the rest are the high school, with dormitories for boarding students, and the Red Dragon Inn, the local tavern and gathering place in this village without a town square or a park.

Four Chinese-style prints and a locally made wood carving are the sole decorations amid the card tables and folding chairs in the hot, stuffy room where men get bleary-eyed on rough rum laded from a tin pot at 5 pesos — 25 cents — a shot. Beer has not arrived today from the brewery 35 miles away in the state capital of Holguin. When it does, it will be an anonymous, flat-tasting draft, not the cans of Hatuey pilsener, dark Bucanero and Crystal brands sold in tourist hotels.

Even without beer or Havana Club rum, sentiment here remains strongly in favor of the socialist revolution that started in the nearby Sierra Maestra mountains and the man who led it — a man who turned 70 last week and has given no indication that he will retire any time soon.

"They say that Fidel is getting old, that we need new leaders," the tavern's bartender says. "Well, I say let those who burned their eyelashes (broke their backs) in the mountains stay in power."

Such unquestioning loyalty to revolutionary leaders is becoming increasingly rare.

As Cuba struggles to overcome economic disaster, the revolution itself is now being questioned from the left as well as the right, both on and off the island.

OBITUARY

SIU alumnus, inventor of Prozac, dies

By Christopher Miller
Daily Egyptian Reporter

" He was the kind of person that would not seek fame for himself..."

Julia Weistein, SIU Foundation

An SIUC graduate who was co-inventor of the antidepressant drug Prozac, died of leukemia Sunday in Greenwood, Ind. at the age of 60.

Ray Fuller, who was born in Dongola, graduated from the University in 1957 with a bachelor's degree in chemistry. One year later, he earned a master's degree in microbiology.

While attending SIUC, Fuller worked at the Anna State Hospital, which is now the Clyde L. Choate Mental Health and Development Center. The hospital deals primarily with mental health treatment.

Fuller's experience working with mental health patients led him to a career developing pharmacological treatments for the mentally ill, said Julia Weistein, of the SIU Foundation and personal friend of

"That is what drove him his whole life — to become an expert in brain chemistry," Weistein said.

Fuller worked for Eli Lilly & Co. of Indianapolis since 1963 researching antidepressant drugs. He and two other researchers developed Prozac, which has been used by millions.

This July, he was honored by Eli Lilly for his contributions to the field of mental pharmacology. Former Chancellor John Guyon said Fuller had published 600 publications related to the field.

"He was a brilliant scientist,"

Guyon said.

Weistein said Fuller's continuing research with Prozac may eventually lead to the development of other drugs that may be used to battle other mental illnesses, such as schizophrenia.

"It's going to be bigger than Prozac," Weistein said.

Despite the widespread use and popularity of Prozac, Fuller's notoriety has not matched that of the drug itself.

"He was the kind of person that would not seek fame for himself," said Weistein. "But he was certainly deserving of it."

PUBLIC NOTICE
DIRECTORY INFORMATION
SOUTHERN ILLINOIS UNIVERSITY AT CARBONDALE

Under the University policy on the release of Student Information and Public Law 93380 as amended, the University may make to any person external to the University "directory information" concerning the student, unless the student notifies the Office of Admissions and Records that he or she objects to the release of such information. Directory information is considered to be public in nature and will be released at any time upon request without prior approval from the student. Notice is therefore given that directory information listed below with respect to each student enrolled at Southern Illinois University at Carbondale will be available to any person unless the student filed in writing with the Office of Admissions and Records a request to restrict release of student directory information to external sources.

• Local address and local telephone number	• Date of birth	• Collegiate Unit	• Participation in officially recognized activity or sport and weight, height, and pictures of members of athletic teams.
• Home address and home telephone number	• Current term hours carried	• Major	• Student name
• Most previous educational agency or institution attended prior to enrollment at SIU at Carbondale	• Classification (freshman, sophomore, etc.)	• Dates of Attendance
	• Picture	• Degrees and honors earned and dates

Any student enrolled for the Fall Semester who does not wish to have any directory information released, must contact in person the Office of Admissions and Records, Woody Hall a-103 by Friday, September 6, 1996. Those students who elect to restrict the release of student information must sign a statement to that effect. The restriction on the release of student information will then be valid until September 1, 1997 and must be renewed annually each Fall Semester. Students wishing to verify or correct existing student directory information must also contact in person, the Office of Admissions and Records, Woody Hall, Wing A, Room 103.

High schoolers can't skip tests anymore

By Emily Priddy
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Under a new state education law, high school students who make a practice of "blowing off" state-mandated achievement tests may be hurting their chances of getting into the college of their choice, a local legislator says.

The Quality First education bill, signed into law Aug. 6, will — among other provisions — give the state superintendent of schools the option of including students' standardized test scores in their permanent records, State Rep. Mike Bost, R-Murphysboro, said.

Bost said the bill essentially will give state-mandated tests, such as the Illinois Goals Assessment Program test, more "teeth."

The bill requires high school seniors to take a basic skills competency test. Although students can graduate without passing the test, Bost said students' test results will be part of their permanent record and can be used by prospective employers and college admissions officials to evaluate students' potential.

The bill also calls for students to pass reading, writing and math tests at the end of the third and fifth grades. Students who do not pass these tests will be placed in remedial programs, which Bost said will be state funded.

Democratic candidate John Rendleman, who is running against Bost for the 115th District Illinois House seat, criticized the testing requirements.

"I think those tests are going to duplicate what the schools are already mandated to test, and it's going to focus more on paperwork than teaching," Rendleman said.

Bob Taylor, an English teacher at Carbondale Community High School, said he is glad students' performance on state tests can be placed in their permanent records because they will be more likely to take the tests seriously if they are held accountable for their results.

However, Taylor said he does not think IGAP and similar tests are an accurate measure of students' skills in certain subjects, such as writing.

Mental illness has warning signs, too.

Withdrawal from social activities. Excessive anger. These could be the first warning signs of a mental illness. Unfortunately, most of us don't recognize the signs. Which is tragic. Because mental illness can be treated. In fact, 2 out of 3 people who get help, get better.

essays written in isolation that are contextless, with little or no prewriting or pre-thinking," Taylor said. "Where in the real world or the classroom world do you write like that?"

The new funding policy that the law initiates also drew criticism from Rendleman and Taylor.

State funding for schools currently is based on local property values, Bost said. He said schools in districts where property values are high receive less funding because local property taxes are used to fund education.

Under the new law, state funding will be based on a block grant program that favors schools with higher student attendance — a policy Rendleman says also is unfair to Southern Illinois schools.

"The flat grants that are a part of the education bill fail to recognize the needs of this school district," Rendleman said.

Taylor said he thinks school funding should be based on income tax revenue rather than property value or attendance.

"Rich districts are going to have better attendance than poor districts," Taylor said. "If I'm in a poor, inner-city school, then by definition I have poor attendance. Then you're going to cut off my money for remediation (and) teacher training — it's kind of like punishing the victims."

But Bost said recent welfare reform plans address the issue of low attendance in poorer areas. By linking parents' public aid to their children's school attendance, Bost said the state encourages poor parents to send their kids to class.

Age a factor in resuscitation

The Washington Post

Doctors are much more likely to forgo resuscitation after cardiac arrest in patients over 75 than in younger ones, regardless of the patients' preference or life expectancy, a study of more than 6,800 seriously ill people reports.

In deciding whether to issue a Do Not Resuscitate order, which tells nurses and doctors not to attempt to restart a patient's heart in the event of cardiac arrest, doctors tend to rely unduly on a patient's age and short-term prognosis, giving those two factors a weight that goes beyond their actual ability to predict life expectancy and quality of life, the study found.

"Age by itself is not a good predictor of the outcome of a patient's care," said Juan M. Teno, associate director of the Center to Improve Care of the Dying at George Washington University Medical Center and a coauthor of the study. She said the findings suggest some doctors use age as a "simplistic proxy" instead of talking to patients about their preferences.

"One of the major factors associated with the underuse of DNR orders in our study was an apparent lack of communication among physicians, patients and families," the study concluded.

The study tracked 6,802 seriously ill patients with illnesses such as coma, heart failure and lung cancer and an average life expectancy of six months. The findings, part of the $28 million SUPPORT project, the largest study ever conducted of seriously ill and dying patients, were published last week in the Annals of Internal Medicine.

The analysis was based on interviews with the patients and their surrogates, family members who could make decisions if the patient were incapacitated. They were asked, among other things, about whether they wanted doctors to revive them with cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) if their heart stopped.

Some 55 percent said they would prefer CPR in the event of cardiac arrest, while 29 percent said they would prefer to forgo CPR.

But of those who said they would forgo CPR, barely half (52 percent) had a DNR order written during their hospitalization.

Successfest teaches students how to cope with college

By Dave Armstrong
Daily Egyptian Reporter

As an incoming freshman at SIUC, Cynthia Commarata has already experienced budget problems that can be associated with attending college.

"Money is a problem," Commarata, a freshman in education from Round Lake, said. "Books are expensive. I can't afford half of them. I've got a fiancée, and I really ran up the phone bill. My parents fully expect me to drop out."

Preventing SIUC students who experience similar problems from dropping out has become an important issue at SIUC this year, Mike Shanks, the coordinator of Residence Life, said.

In an effort to curb the problem, Residence Life employees, who work on projects for campus dorm residents, are implementing a new program titled Successfest.

Shanks said he is excited to add a program such as Successfest to help students adapt to college.

"I've been thinking about implementing this plan for six months to a year now," he said.

Sessions at Successfest will include such topics as managing money, staying safe, time management, test taking, finding a major, getting involved in organizations and handling aspects of sexuality. The informational sessions will be in each University Park residence hall.

As a trial program, all University Park students, regardless of their year in school, will be invited to participate. Shanks said if Successfest works, it may become a campuswide program and extend further than University Park.

Jarrett Moore, a sophomore in radio-television from St. Louis, said he probably will attend some of the events.

"I think it will help students who just got here. It helps them to blend in," he said.

Successfest will offer other activities such as free bowling, informative sessions concerning team sports and meetings with African-American officials from the University.

The event is scheduled to run from Thursday until Aug. 29. For specific times on each event, students can talk with the staff at their residence halls.

Back to school buying habits exclude clothing

The Washington Post

In television ads, the back-to-school shopping season is in full swing, with lively depictions of the nation's youth getting all dressed up in new outfits to go to class.

But in malls and stores, it's not so clear. While sales of school supplies such as notebooks and backpacks soar in August, returning to school is no longer a major impetus for students — and parents — to buy new fall wardrobes, retailers and analysts say.

Along with Christmas and Easter, the start of school used to round out a trinity of distinct selling seasons for retailers, but shopping for children and teenagers in recent years has become more of a year-round activity than a two-week to one-month buying frenzy, retail executives say, particularly when bargain-chasing consumers know they can save considerably by waiting for sales.

"We've noticed in the last few years that it's not a one-shot shopping deal, it's continuous," said Carolyn Moss, fashion director for Macy's East. That experience is reflected in government statistics that show children's clothing sales in July and August have slowed, while such sales later in the fall have increased.

Retail experts say many factors have combined to change people's buying habits including: More schools are requiring uniforms, limiting what children can wear — and what they and their parents buy. Schools are starting earlier. Many jurisdictions that used to open schools after Labor Day are welcoming students back in early or mid-August, when it's too warm for fall school clothes. Dress codes are more casual. With society in general becoming more casual, many students can wear to school the shorts and T-shirts they wore all summer. Students are more fashion-conscious.

With trends coming and going rapidly — and influenced by fall television shows — many children wait to see what their classmates are wearing before they commit to a look.

Retail analysts stress school is still a powerful motivator of retail sales.

Tactical Retail Solutions, an industry research firm in New York, estimates back-to-school-related business will reach $15 billion in annual sales this year.

but have a few outstanding sophomores and a junior," he said.

DeNoon said Illinois State University lost many of their key runners as well.

"Illinois State has a lot of gaps to fill since they graduated three of their top five runners," he said.

SIUC's roster boasts one senior, three juniors, four sophomores and seven freshmen.

DeNoon said he likes a lot of the question marks as to who will be the No. 1 runner in a meet because he wants any runner to be able to finish number one.

Kim Koerner, the lone senior and top runner from last year's squad, said she wants the team to look to place as high as they can in the NCAA District V meet Nov. 16 in Peoria.

This year, Koerner will be challenged for the top spot by junior Kelly French. DeNoon believes that French will be someone Koerner has trouble beating consistently because of French's talent as a runner.

Sophomore Colleen Bouck is known as "Miss Consistency" because no matter what the course is, she will run an 18:40 or 18:50.

DeNoon said Bouck also will be in the hunt for the top spot because she has gained more confidence in her running.

she has gained more confidence in her running.

Bouck said she has confidence in the team.

"We didn't lose many people," Bouck said. "This team is just awesome. With more experience and a good group of freshmen, we will succeed."

Along with Koerner, Bouck and French, junior Raina Larsen is expected also to contend for the top spot, DeNoon said.

Larsen said she wants the team to do well competitively and wants to improve on her previous time.

Freshman Jenny Monaco, SIUC's top distance running recruit, led Palatine High School to a state championship and knows what it takes to win, DeNoon said.

Monaco said she hopes to be one of the top seven Saluki runners this season and run her best 5K ever.

DeNoon is also looking to sophomore Sharlene Downing to have a major impact on the program.

"Sharlene finished 22nd in the MVC meet last year as a freshman — with a stress fracture," he said.

Downing said she wants to be one of the leaders on the team this season and see the Salukis become an imperial power in the MVC.

The Saluki women open their season Sept. 7 at the Memphis Invitational.

Chris Berman to join ABC Monday Night Football

The Hartford Courant

Chris Berman and ABC made it official Tuesday.

The popular ESPN personality will take over the halftime portion of ABC's "Monday Night Football".

The decision to replace the team of Brent Musburger and Peter King with Berman had been widely rumored since Steven M. Bornstein, the former president and CEO of ESPN, was named head of ABC Sports. The deal was completed last week, but a formal announcement was delayed after the sudden death of Berman's ESPN colleague, Tom Mees.

"I feel awkward and honored to follow Howard Cosell and Brent Musburger," Berman said. "Many people still remember the highlights Howard did in the 1970s and nobody has ever been close to Brent in his heyday at "The NFL Today" (on CBS)."

Berman said he will attempt to revive some of Cosell's impact when the highlights package returns to "Monday Night Football".

"We are going to use NFL Films material that no one will have seen, so I hope that compensates a bit for the fact that highlights are widely available these days," Berman said. "We'll feature three or four games the way Howard used to do it and I hope that will make it a little bit special."

Two new coaches join women's basketball staff

By Donna Colter
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Two fresh faces, each with impressive playing backgrounds, were added to veteran Saluki women's basketball coach Cindy Scott's crew of coaches this fall.

Scott and her staff will be joined this season by Lea Robinson and Kristi Kinne. Robinson, a 23-year-old graduate of Western Kentucky University, will replace Mary Helen Walker as Scott's second assistant. Kinne, 24, comes from Drake University and will be the new graduate assistant, replacing Susan Wellman.

Walker was offered a coaching position at Providence College in Rhode Island, while Wellman will head to the University of Tulsa as a full-time assistant.

Robinson, who spent her playing days as a forward, helped lead Western Kentucky University to a Final Four appearance in 1992. Because of her accomplishments at WKU, Scott said Robinson "knows commitment" and "couldn't be more pleased with her arrival."

"Lea is a sincere and as impressive as any young lady I've ever met," Scott said.

Robinson played in 127 games at WKU, which ranks her eighth among school leaders in games played. She also was an outstanding perimeter player, ranking 10th in all-time three pointers made and attempted.

"She will be working with the perimeter players," Scott said.

Robinson said her experience at the NCAA tournament level will be a definite plus for SIUC's program. "I feel that one of my assets is that I have been to an NCAA Final Four and learned quite a bit from my experience," she said.

Robinson received her master's degree in human services from Murray State University in Kentucky, where she was a graduate assistant. She brings tremendous ability as a player. Robinson said she is looking forward to beginning her coaching career at SIUC.

"I am very excited about working with the women's basketball program since this is my first opportunity as a coach," Robinson said.

Scott said Robinson knows the game and is eager to coach the Salukis.

"Our players are going to love working with her," she said.

Kinne hails from fellow Missouri Valley Conference member Drake University. While at Drake, Kinne was a post player, which will be her strong point as a coach. Kinne, who was the MVC's Most Valuable Player in 1995, led Drake to a 25-6 record, an MVC Tournament title and an NCAA bid.

Scott said Kinne also is "young, energetic, and enthusiastic."

Kinne said she feels her assets are that she comes from a school that focuses on post players and her post philosophies and fundamentals are keys to her ability.

Kinne is pursuing a master's degree in sports management at SIUC.

"As a player at Drake, Kristi was one of my all-time favorites," Scott said. "She was a clutch performer solid in fundamentals, as well as a tremendous role model. She is a winner in every sense of the word. We're fortunate to have both her and Lea."

Parkinson

has been at SIUC for 23 years, said Parkinson always took time out to give the athletes a handshake or a pat on the back.

"He always did my media guide and he always tried to get to know my players," Auld said. "Mitch was always there to congratulate them on good games."

Auld said Parkinson always was there to give her program a helping hand and to lend emotional support.

"The support he offered stuck out," she said. "He was always trying to get us as much coverage as possible and he was always a supportive and caring person."

INDIVIDUALIZED LEARNING PROGRAM

• All Individualized Learning Program courses carry full SIUC residential credit applicable toward a degree!

ILP courses have no enrollment limits, and students can register throughout the semester. Students use a study guide developed by an SIUC instructor as the course framework and study at a time and place of their choosing. To register in an ILP course, on-campus students need to bring a registration form signed by their advisor to our office at Washington Square "C." We must receive payment of $30 per credit hour when you register (Mastercard, Visa, American Express and Discover now accepted) or proof of financial aid. Call the Individualized Learning Program office at 536-7751 for further information.

Lafayette out for season with knee injury
Notre Dame freshman cornerback Lee Lafayette's season is over, and the season hasn't even started yet. Lafayette will miss the entire season after suffering an injury to his right knee.

Zorich to undergo surgery, out for season
Chris Zorich, defensive lineman for the Chicago Bears, injured his left knee and an MRI exam on Sunday showed a tear in his anterior cruciate ligament. Zorich, who led the Bear's linemen with 79 tackles, will have surgery in the next few weeks and is expected to miss the season. He played in 67 straight games since being drafted by the Bears.

Peete out two to four weeks with knee injury
Philadelphia Eagles quarterback Rodney Peete is expected to be sidelined two to four weeks with a sprained left knee suffered in an exhibition game lost to the New England Patriots last weekend.

Steelers announce Miller as starting QB
The Pittsburgh Steelers, the defending AFC champions, have announced Jim Miller as the team's starting quarterback for the season opener against Jacksonville. Miller, a 1994 sixth-round draft pick out of Michigan State, has never started an NFL game. Head coach Bill Cowher said Mike Tomczak will serve as backup QB and Kordell "Slash" Stewart will do his thing as quarterback, running back and receiver.

Dolphins trade Kirby to 49ers for draft pick
The Miami Dolphins have dealt running back Terry Kirby to the San Francisco 49ers for a conditional draft pick in 1997. The Dolphins, overstocked in the backfield, get a third-round pick if Kirby is on the field for 65 percent of San Francisco's offensive plays. If not, they receive a fourth-round pick.

Cardinals bump Simmons in favor of Swann
The Arizona Cardinals have cut veteran defensive lineman Clyde Simmons in order to make room under the salary cap for Eric Swann. Swann was second on the team in sacks behind Simmons. Phoenix radio stations say Swann's new contract is a two-year deal that includes a $3 million signing bonus.

Lions' new stadium to cost $225 million
The Detroit Lions football team will leave the Pontiac Silverdome and move back downtown to a 65,000-seat domed stadium that officials say will cost taxpayers about $225 million. Mayor Dennis Archer said the stadium will be financed partially through a proposed tax on new hotel rooms and car rentals. The stadium will be erected adjacent to a new Detroit Tigers baseball stadium. The two facilities are expected to share parking and other areas. Stadium construction will probably begin in 1999.

BASEBALL

Williams released after struggling in minors
Ex-Cub and Phillies reliever Mitch Williams was released after struggling in the Philadelphia minor league system. Williams, known as "The Wild Thing" in his playing days, took a year off from baseball after giving up a World Series losing home run to Joe Carter of the Toronto Bluejays in 1993.

Boston Garden Auction to feature artifacts Artifacts from the famous Boston Garden are scheduled to be auctioned Sept. 7. Highlights of The Boston Garden Auction will include the Boston Garden scoreboard, Bobby Orr's 1974 game jersey, the rim bent by Shaquille O'Neal, the Boston Bruins' bench, the Boston Garden organ and bench and the Boston Celtics baskets, among other things.

Athletic department will miss Parkinson

By Michael DeFord
DE Sports Editor

SIUC was dealt a devastating blow Tuesday with the death of Mitchell Parkinson, Women's Sports Information director.

Parkinson's death sent a shock wave through the athletic department, as well as the entire SIUC community.

But shock alone cannot fully describe the impact of Parkinson's passing.

His death will be felt for some time to come — especially among those who knew him best — the coaches.

"Mitch Parkinson was SIUC," women's volleyball coach Sonya Locke said. "He worked so hard and took a lot of pride in athletics."

Locke had the rare privilege of serving alongside Parkinson as a player and a coach. She said Parkinson always showed a genuine pride for his work

Mitch Parkinson

Parkinson took over the school's first-ever full-time position in 1978 — the same year coach Cindy Scott took over the coaching duties of the women's basketball team.

His passing hit Scott especially hard. Scott said neither she, nor anyone she knows, can even begin to think of women's basketball without thinking of Parkinson.

"He was so much a part of our program," Scott said. "He was just a great guy. Mitch was like a brother to me and one of the finest men I've ever known."

Parkinson pioneered the first radio coverage and first media days for Saluki women's basketball. He also served as color commentator on basketball broadcasts.

Softball coach Kay Brechtelsbauer also spent many years working alongside Parkinson. She said Parkinson had a tireless work ethic and will be missed as information director — but even more as a friend.

"We are all in a great deal of shock, not only from losing a colleague, but a dear friend as well," Brechtelsbauer said. "Mitch worked very hard, and he was always there when we needed him. He will be missed. It's a tremendous personal loss to many of us."

Cross country women hope to improve on last MVC finish

By Donna Colter
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The SIUC women's cross country team is looking to improve upon last year's fourth place finish in the Missouri Valley Conference by utilizing returning talent and incoming freshmen, coach Don DeNoon says.

This year, eight Salukis are returning to the 15-member squad, which pleases coach DeNoon.

"We have an exciting program," he said. "We have a super team and a solid group of kids."

DeNoon said he hopes to qualify for nationals, which won't be easy. He sees Indiana State University as his toughest competition within the MVC. Five of Indiana State's seven athletes from last year's team, which placed third in the Valley, have returned.

DeNoon looks for this year to be a time of rebuilding for Drake University, which finished first in the MVC the past two years.
