Governor approves financial aid bill

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

A bill providing an additional $900,000 in financial aid for both the Carbondale and Edwardsville campuses has been signed by Gov. James R. Thompson.

The money will be available to financial aid recipients who receive either the Monetary Award Program, the Illinois Veterans Grant, or is a member of the National Guard.

"Since the bill has been approved by the legislature, the money for the financial aid will come from general revenue," Barry Hickman, employee of the the governor's office, said.

"We're not sure how we are going to divide the money yet," Robert Clements, director of the Illinois State Scholarship Commission, said.

"Each school will submit a claim and we will divide the money according to how many financial aid recipients each school has. It may take weeks before the extra money actually gets to the schools."

The extra money will probably go to the students already receiving the aid to help pay for the tuition increase, Clements said.

"We don't know whether or not we will add any new students to the program," Clements said. "We'll decide that after we distribute the money to the students already receiving the aid."

"This is going to be a big help to the students," Pamela Britton, SIU-C financial aid director, said. "We're not sure when we are going to get the money, hopefully within a few weeks."

University students are both happy and relieved to be getting this extra money.

"I think that this money will

Pay raise rejected by Senate, 95-5

WASHINGTON (SHNS)—House Speaker Jim Wright unveiled a strategy Thursday that would let the House let the 50 percent pay raise go into effect, then vote to roll it back to 30 percent and ban all outside honoraria.

Opponents of the pay raise feared Wright's plan could give lawmakers the full 50 percent pay raise — from $89,500 to $135,000 — and let them keep their outside income.

Others, however, said the strategy could backfire, resulting in House members getting no raise at all and having to give up their lucrative outside honoraria.

The Senate, meanwhile, rejected the pay raise, 95-5. The lopsided vote was merely symbolic because federal law requires both houses of Congress to turn down the pay raise before it takes effect next week, and Wright has said the House will not vote before then.

Wright's plan would allow the raise for Cabinet members, federal judges, senior federal officials and Congress to kick in automatically at 12:01 a.m. Wednesday.

Then, on Thursday, Wright would have the House vote on whether to roll back the raise

Official: Pulliam renovation will be completed on time

By Scott Smith
Staff Writer

The $5 million Pulliam Hall renovation is 35 percent completed and will be occupied by January 1990, Allen Haake, supervising architect for Physical Plant, said.

The project was projected to be finished by this December and will be, Haake said.

The renovation in process includes: the roof, gutting and remodeling the second floor, replacing windows and doors and continuing the replacement of the heating and cooling systems. Pulliam will have central cooling instead of individual units, Haake said.

Because of the warm weather and the management ability of the general contractor, Kiefner Brothers Inc., the masonry and roof work is ahead of schedule, Haake said.

Haake said only two problems emerged from the project: late delivery of windows and restoring the weather vane.

The weather vane was

Bids revised to comply with law

By Mark Barnett
Staff Writer

Approximately 5,000 responses to a revised bidders application have been received by the Purchasing Office so the SIU System can identify minority- and female-owned businesses, determining whether or not the system will comply with a state law at the end of fiscal year 1990.

Donald Wilson, vice chancellor for financial affairs, said 10 percent of the SIU System's purchases must be from minority- or female-owned firms. The Minority and Female Enterprise Act requires active ownership by a minority or female and the firm must earn less than $14 million a year.

Neal Spilman, director of purchasing, said the identification process is underway, but responses from the firms are coming in slowly. Revision of the form was completed so the SIU System could identify minority- and female-owned businesses.

"We sent out 7,500 bidders applications in April or May 1988," Spilman said. "We have received just under 5,000 responses."

Bidders applications are sent to firms on the previous year's bidders list and to firms that have expressed an interest in doing business with SIU. Businesses throughout the nation have received the revised application.

Spilman said the University is at the mercy of the firms when it comes to receiving responses. The bidders have no deadline in which they have to respond to the application. He said he does not expect all the businesses will be identified because some firms have gone out of business or expressed no interest in doing business with the University.

Wilson said he expects to know whether or not the SIU System meets the requirement by the end of fiscal year 1990. Fiscal year 1990 begins July 1, 1989 and ends June 30, 1990.

"We hope to be in full compliance by the end of fiscal year 1991 or 1992," Wilson said. "We're doing everything humanly possible to meet the requirements."

Liquor license OK'd by advisory board

By Jackie Spinner
Staff Writer

The Liquor Advisory Board forwarded an approval of a Class A liquor license for Jimmyz Egyptian Polo Club, 315 S. Illinois, to the Liquor Commission despite a negative police report against issuing owner Jim Shulte a license.

The board voted 3-2 to recommend approval Thursday with Board President Jim Romano and member Sue Eberhart voting against the recommendation.

Romano indicated that Shulte's two prior misdemeanor convictions dating back to 1977 were sufficient to not allow him the license.

Member Joyce Hayes, voting for the approval, said, "I hate to see a person's past keep him from pursuing a business interest."

Board members John Grigas and Jim Sinnott agreed.

"Two convictions that are not in the recent past should not warrant denial," Grigas said.

Sinnott added that Shulte had obtained a sizeable loan from Landmark Bank in Carbondale, showing the bank's faith in Shulte.

"I'm not down here to open another night club on the Strip and move to Chicago," Shulte explained.

Romano said he was not sure that the club would "be in the best interest of the city of Carbondale."

The 15,000 square-foot night club would feature a semi-private club aimed toward horse lovers, a kitchen area with such menu items as pizza, hotdogs and nachos offered and a dance club "one step above" area Carbondale bars.

Four characters woven into one-woman show

'Our Sister's Keepers' portrays women's struggles, joys

By Wayne Wallace
Entertainment Editor

"Too often, women are viewed as victims rather than as survivors," actress Tami Spry observed.

"Our Sister's Keepers," Spry's solo performance piece, is a play about four survivors.

Spry will debut her one-woman show at 8 tonight on the Calipre Stage for one performance only. Admission is $1.

Immediately preceding the performance, at 7:45 p.m., For Healing Purposes Only, a female singing trio, will present feminist songs.

Without costume or makeup changes, Spry will intertwine the struggles and triumphs of four different women into the format of a one-act play.

"THESE WOMEN are strong," Spry said of her characters, all of whom hail from vastly different cultural backgrounds, but share some common discriminations against women.

Mildred, a white southerner, is the victim of spouse abuse. Mary is a Japanese-American who was forced to live in an internment camp during World War II.

Josephine is an elderly black woman who raised foster children in spite of her poverty. Irene is a native American who spent her childhood on Indian reservations.

All four characters are based on actual women.

SPRY FOUND their stories

Theater Review

Spry has never met any of these women, but by keeping their actual words intact, she will attempt to interpret each of them through the art of performance studies.

in "Dignity," a book in which author Fran Leeper Buss transcribed lengthy interviews with four American women on the subject of racial, economic and sexual discrimination.

Spry has never met any of these women, but by keeping their actual words intact, she will attempt to interpret each of them through the art of performance studies.

"I'm not presuming to speak for these women. I try to speak with them," Spry said.

"I see myself as a window pane through which the audience can learn about these women's experiences. But, of course, it's a filtered window because I can't totally divorce my cultural upbringing from my characterizations."

SPRY WILL switch back and forth between the four characters, rather than perform one woman's entire story and then move on to the next.

"Through juxtaposing the four narratives beside one another in an adapted script, the similarities and differences between these women can be brought out more."

Social change is one of Spry's ultimate goals through oral interpretation.

"I believe the woman's experience needs to become more publicized. We learn a lot of history, but not much herstory. The main thing I hope to achieve is understanding for these women's experience."

"THIS ISN'T a gloomy, woe-is-me, feel-sorry-for-women play, and it's not a political speech. It's about four courageous people. Personally, I'd like to sit down and have drinks with these women."

Spry likens the informal Calipre setting to a living room where these four women can sit and casually tell their stories.

"The Calipre has an intimacy that allows for a great deal more experimentation. The performer and the audience don't feel as separated from one another," she said.

Although switching back and forth between four different characters can be extremely confusing and difficult onstage, Spry said, she has developed a secret in keeping each of the women separate in her mind.

Parking game rules should be respected

TO PARK A car — the biggest challenge any SIU-C student ever faces.

There are new proposals and the same old complaints every semester.

Let's have a refresher on the brilliant solutions proposed:

■ Park at the Arena. This involves waiting for 20 minutes to get to class after 35 minutes has been spent circling for a spot. If you're lucky you can make it to your 9 o'clock.

■ Cover the entire campus with concrete, creating one giant parking lot. Forget the trees and all the cute little squirrels with tagged ears, the attraction for half of the students who come to SIU-C.

■ Build onto the parking garage until it reaches the height of the John Hancock Building.

■ Charge $500 for parking stickers so everyone but the faculty can afford them.

■ Put students' pictures on their parking stickers to ensure that only those who meet all 48 requirements are parking on campus.

■ Create additional eligibility requirements for getting a parking sticker, which includes having a parent on the board of trustees; advanced payment of tuition for a three-year period; a written statement promising to send all offspring to SIU-C.

■ Outlawing cars within a two-mile radius of campus.

As for complaints, there probably is no need to go into them since the majority of students have complained about the situation or know someone who has.

So what now. Follow the rules. No, not the rules that say you must have a rainbow sticker to be able to park anywhere within one mile of your class. The unwritten rules. Yes, there are informal rules created, yet never spoken, by students.

These scavengers, or vultures as some prefer, who sometimes drive around campus for as long as an hour before finding a space, have created a set of rules to make the game a little more challenging.

Rule of survival No. 1: Respect the stakeout.

WHEN SOMEONE has staked out a row and is sitting and waiting for a car to leave, it is not advisable to sneak into a space ahead of them in their row. You may come out after class and find your car has been pushed into a no parking zone.

Rule of survival No. 2: Don't be a fakeout.

Or a tease, or whatever those people are called who walk slowly to their cars, unlock the door, pretend to be leaving, take out more books and head back to class. Try this and you'll be the unfortunate victim of a hit and run.

RULE OF SURVIVAL No. 3: Don't be a row dodger.

These are the people who tease the vultures by weaving in and out and up and down rows on the way to their cars just to see how many people will follow them. They usually end up causing four-car pileups and being chased down by all those who didn't get their space.

Rule of survival NO. 4: Never assume anything.

A spot probably will not become available in time for you to get to class; the person you follow is probably a fakeout; and the people parked in the row you have staked out probably have class all day.

SO REMEMBER these helpful hints. They may not solve the parking problem, but they will make things more fun.

And for those of you who are missing out on the real parking game, the official SIU-C parking board game will be available soon from bureaucrats everywhere.

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors only. Unsigned editorials represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Editorial Board, whose members are the student editor-in-chief, the editorial page editor, the associate editorial page editor, a news staff member, the faculty managing editor and a School of Journalism faculty member.

Letters to the editor may be submitted by mail or directly to the editorial page editor, Room 1247, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten and double spaced. All letters are subject to editing and will be limited to 500 words. Letters of fewer than 250 words will be given preference for publication. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty members by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department.

Letters submitted by mail should include the author's address and telephone number. Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

Unborn children need chance, someone to speak for them

The issue of abortion is obviously fraught with emotion. On the one hand, the anti-abortionists claim that "abortion is murder." On the other hand, the pro-abortionists claim that "a woman has the right to do whatever she wants with her own body."

The salient reason for the difference of opinion, then, seems to be whether the fetus is indeed a separate life or not. In other words, if a person believes that the fetus is not a separate life, but rather "part of the woman's body," then abortion seems to be a reasonable procedure — like surgery to remove an appendix. (It is difficult to imagine that a person who believes the fetus is a separate human life could in any way, shape or form condone abortion. If this were the case, then such a person would also logically condone a woman killing her one-month- or one-year-old child.)

Thus, each side seems to have a reasonable argument, given what it believes to be the truth about the fetus.

The question, then, becomes: Is the fetus indeed a separate life or merely "part of the mother's body." Debate will undoubtedly rage for years, but there are some facts that are known:

■ Six-month fetuses have been successfully born and become healthy children.

■ Separate fetus brain development begins to occur within a few weeks of conception.

■ While the egg is "part of the woman's body," the sperm is "part of the man's body," so when they unite at conception, they do indeed form a brand new separate life. Since the sperm is not a part of the woman's body, the resulting fetus cannot be considered just part of the woman's body. The fetus is one-half of the man's body. The woman's body is simply providing protection and nourishment to this separate life.

Another argument pro-abortionists use to rationalize abortion is pointing to the kind of life that unwanted newborn babies may face. "Do you want children born that aren't wanted?" they ask. The follow-up is usually something to the effect that, "Abortion isn't murder anyway, because the fetus isn't really a human being. It may be almost human, but not quite."

On the surface, this argument seems to have some validity. The message seems to be: "Since we aren't sure that the fetus is fully human, and since the fetus is definitely inconvenient, then there seems to be no harm in eliminating it."

Interestingly enough, this logic has been used several times throughout history:

■ In the early days of our nation, slaveholders talked themselves into believing that blacks were "not quite human" and would be "inconvenient" if they were allowed to go free. Thus, they could rationalize holding them in slavery and lynching them. Their Christian consciences would not allow them to murder humans, so they had to talk themselves into believing that blacks "were kind of human, but not quite."

■ In the late 1800s, as America was pushing westward, settlers came upon Indians — our Native Americans. Naturally these people were "inconvenient." They got in the way of settlement. Thus, the Christian settlers, not wanting to murder humans, talked themselves into believing that the Indians were "subhuman savages" who could thus be exterminated — something like hunting buffalo or other wild game.

■ The logic raised itself again in the 1940s when Hitler successfully brainwashed a nation into believing that Jews were somehow "subhuman," and thus fair game for extermination in the concentration camps.

■ The new "subhumans," it seems, are our unborn children. They are "inconvenient" and thus transformed into "not quite human" entities in the minds of those who would rather not have to deal with them.

The only differences between these three races and the unborn children is that the former were intelligent adults who were finally able to get the message across to the world that they were fully human. Today's murdered minority — the unborn children — have no such opportunity to get the message across for themselves. They must rely on us to get the word out that they are, indeed, human beings, awaiting a chance to survive — to continue to live. — William Atkinson, Murphysboro.

Legal abortion would at least save the women

I'm not one to discuss with anyone the issue of abortion, much less the entire student body, but I have to respond to Anne Jurich when she asks for "a valid reason for its legalization." Before the pro-life hachles raise, let me say that I speak from perhaps an uncommon point of view.

For one, I don't approve of abortion for the sake of not wanting or not being able to properly care for a child. Adoption is a wonderful option.

I agree that there is more than one body to consider (the baby's), and that life begins at conception. But there's a fact of life that must be faced by pro-choicers and pro-lifers alike: Women have always, will always have abortions, regardless of what the law says about it. If a woman does not want a child, she will seek whatever means possible to terminate it. Just like in the old days, she'll go to Dr. Fraud on Back Alley Street and do it the unsafe way.

I don't have to reiterate the dangers of a less than hygienic abortion; there are plenty of women out there who know of them all too well. Why subject women to such dangers all over again? Yes, I know what the unborn child is subjected to, but no one can stop the practice of abortion. No one. So why not legalize it and at least save our women, if not our children?

— Barbara Brewer, graduate student, Journalism.

Survey: One in four in state say education is top problem

DEKALB (UPI) — Nearly one in four Illinoisans thinks education is the top problem facing the state, according to a new survey released Thursday by Northern Illinois University's Center for Governmental Studies.

Twenty-four percent of those surveyed named education as the state's top problem, followed by 18 percent who said taxes and spending were the top concern, with unemployment at 15 percent, other economic concerns at 8 percent and 26 percent named various other topics.

The survey showed most Illinoisans think state money for education should be increased and they are willing to pay more taxes for education. But the survey also showed 81 percent of the state's population has no idea whether their own state legislators favor or oppose an income tax increase for education.

"This is the second year in a row the Illinois Policy Survey has found that education tops the list of state problems," said Ellen Dran, a research associate at NIU. "It apparently reflects continuing concern over Chicago schools in particular and funding for state education in general."

Dran said 77 percent of the 805 Illinois adults surveyed said they think spending for public schools should be increased, 62 percent want spending for higher education increased and 61 percent also want increased spending for job training.

Those figures compare with 51 percent who said they support increased money for low-income families. Half of the individuals surveyed supported more spending for environmental protection, 48 percent wanted more funds for industrial development, 41 percent wanted more prison spending and 37 percent wanted more money for roads and highways.

When asked to list their spending priorities, 41 percent selected public schools as their first choice, with 8 percent naming higher education as their top priority.

A survey released earlier by the university showed 65 percent of individuals surveyed favor an income tax increase earmarked for education and another 24 percent said they would support a tax hike if convinced education quality would improve.

located in the clock tower. Haake said, "We're rebuilding all the structural elements of the weather vane and putting it back up since it's a kind of a landmark in Carbondale."

The project was funded in three year segments, 1986, 1987 and 1988, with state monies for capital development. The total cost of the project was $5,060,600. Cost for asbestos removal was $471,000, art work (sculptures) was $25,300, and the remaining $4,564,300 went to construction costs.

Spokeswoman for the Capital Development Board Mia Jazo said, "One half of one percent of public project's total budget goes toward art work." This program is referred to as the Percent for Art Program and is required for all board projects that exceed $200,000 in total cost.

Pulliam will have 22 classrooms and 108 offices, said Harlan Bohnsack, architect from the Carbondale firm Garrison-Jones Architects Inc.

"The project is moving along great," Haake said.

The Department of Vocational Education Studies, Department of Special Education, the Science Education Group of Department of Curriculum and Instruction, parts of Physical Education and the Department of Health Education - primarily graduate assistants - will move into Pulliam upon completion of the project.

"The proximity to other colleagues will be nice," Marilyn Juhlin, secretary for Vocational Education Studies, said.

The University had been requesting funding for renovation since 1979.

Offices and classes moved out of Pulliam by February 1988. Asbestos removal began in spring 1988 and construction followed. CDB requires asbestos abatement in areas where construction or renovation happens before work begins.

Pulliam Hall was built in 1951 and used as teacher-training school. It housed 15 classrooms, several offices, a gymnasium and a swimming pool.

Blood drive collects 690 pints

The Red Cross Blood Drive in the Student Center Ballrooms yielded a two-day total of 690 pints of blood.

According to Vivian Ugent, coordinator of Red Cross blood drives in Southern Illinois, 425 donations were made Thursday, up 60 percent over Wednesday's 265 donations.

Ugent said a total of 738 people showed up to donate during the two-day drive, but that 48 potential donors were deferred for medical reasons.

Eighty-five donors gave blood the gift of life for the first time.

For the remaining two days of the Carbondale blood drive, the Red Cross will set up in two different locations.

Today, donations can be made from 11:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at the Community Center, 607 E. Wall St.

Saturday, the Red Cross will be taking donations from 11:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at Lewis Park Apartments, 600 E. Grand Ave.

To make an appointment for donation, call 529-2151.

to 30 percent and ban all outside speaking fees.

That proposal would have to be considered under a special procedure that requires the approval of two-thirds of the House.

But House members who oppose any pay raise at all and those who want the full 50 percent hike hope to defeat Wright's plan.

While approval of a ban on outside honoraria would apply to the House immediately, the 30 percent pay raise would require Senate approval as well as the president's signature.

The Senate also would have the option of approving the House limit on outside income or ignoring it. The Senate, however, was expected late Thursday night to prohibit its members from accepting honoraria if the $135,000 salary goes through.

Wright had promised a vote if a majority of House members told him they wanted one before the Feb. 8 deadline, when the pay raise is to kick in. But according to survey results Wright released Thursday, 57 percent of the 326

House members who responded to his confidential questionnaire said they don't want to vote. Also, 54 percent said they'd support the 30 percent pay raise along with a strict ban on outside income.

The 30 percent hike would boost House pay from $89,500 to $116,350, about a dollar-for-dollar swap in return for doing away with the $26,850 in outside honoraria House members now are allowed to accept.

Wright said he couldn't be "absolutely certain" House members would support him on the 30 percent raise. "You can't hold a member to what they tell you," he said. "They can change their minds."

A spokesman for House Republican leader Bob Michel of Illinois said the GOP leadership is "on the same track" as Wright but is not yet on board. Michel, who has supported a smaller raise for lawmakers, wants reforms that would assure that sitting members of Congress can't vote to raise their own salaries.

"I'm relieved to know we're going to get some extra

Organization offers tax help to aid seniors, handicapped

By Daniel Wallenberg
Staff Writer

The Voluntary Income Tax Assistance program, a national organization which helps low-income people with their taxes, will be at the Student Center, starting Thursday Feb. 9, in Activity Room A.

Sonya Jacobs, Springfield district taxpayer education coordinator for the Internal Revenue Service, said the organization aids senior citizens, the handicapped and low-income people.

The sessions are free of charge and will be held from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. every Thursday until April 13.

Beta Alpha Psi, honorary society for accounting students, has been involved with the VITA program for the last several years and will fill out tax forms throughout the end of the tax season, Jeff Healy, graduate student in accounting, said.

Both Healy and Jacobs said the program is open to students and helps with the basic forms students are likely to have.

The program, in its 20th year

Community classes offered at local college

Community education classes to satisfy a wide range of interests are scheduled to begin this month in four area communities as well as on the Ina campus of Rend Lake College, according to Community Services Coordinator Lisa Payne.

In Benton, the late-starting classes include a new, eight-week course for individuals considering the selection and use of a firearm in a defensive role. The class is scheduled from 7 to 10 p.m. Thursdays beginning tonight at Benton Consolidated High School. Some sessions will be conducted at an indoor shooting range in Cartersville.

Other Benton classes (at the high school unless indicated otherwise) include: beginning hair braiding, cross-stitching and a gourmet cooking session.

COBA receives visit from gift-bearing alumnus

By Megan Hauck
Staff Writer

A visit by an alumnus from the College of Business and Administration has brought good things, with a promise of more to come.

Kenneth N. Pontikes, a 1963 graduate of SIU-C, donated 15 IBM personal computers to COBA after a visit to the University during internal accreditation reviews brought to his attention the college's deficiencies.

The computers are being used in faculty and administration offices, Thomas Gutteridge, COBA dean, said.

An additional 30 computers, to be donated by Pontikes during the next two years, will be divided between the student lab in the basement of Rehn Hall and COBA faculty and administration.

"SIU is at a disadvantage as a state-supported school,"

Pontikes said. "Budget crunches have caused a drop in investing in faculty and programs that larger schools that are better endowed can make."

Thomas Gutteridge, dean of COBA, said donations such as Pontikes' are byproducts of recruiting alumni — alumni that haven't been contacted by the University for over 20 years.

"First you have to find out who they are and establish contact," Gutteridge said. "You can't go out and say, 'Hi, I'm Tom Gutteridge. Can I have...?'"

"You have to get them down here and rekindle the Saluki in them."

Pontikes, president of Comdisco Inc., a computer leasing firm in Rosemont, was contacted by the University 21 years after he left Southern Illinois.

"We've been cultivating Ken for about four years," Gutteridge said. "It just doesn't happen overnight."

"In the last six years the college has worked hard to reach out to alumni. The byproduct of that is the willingness to donate their time and resources."

Pontikes is a member of the COBA Hall of Fame.

Illinois students offered legislative internships

By Daniel Wallenberg
Staff Writer

Sangamon State University is sponsoring the Illinois Legislative Staff Internship Program, offering Illinois students 20 internships, a spokeswoman for State Sen. Jim Rea, said.

"The program provides outstanding persons an opportunity to be actively involved with the policy-making and politics of the Illinois General Assembly," Rea, D-Christopher, said.

The program begins Oct. 1 and continues for 10 months, Cindy Hueber, Rea's spokeswoman said. Students must have completed a bachelor's degree before beginning an internship.

Interns will be assigned to the Senate Democrats, Senate Republicans, House Democrats, House Republicans and the Legislative Research Unit. Duties will include analyzing legislation, budgets and doing research.

The experience could lead to jobs in the Illinois Legislature, Congress and with staff of the various Illinois departments, Hueber said. Interns will be paid a monthly salary of $1,200.

Anyone having a bachelor's degree by fall 1989 and interested in the internship should write Kent Redfield, Illinois Legislative Staff Internship Program coordinator, Sangamon State University, Springfield, Illinois 62794-9243, or call (217) 786-6574.

Cold weather hits the U.S.

United Press International

The supercold arctic air that forced Alaskans into hibernation this week thundered deeper into the heart of the Lower 48 Thursday, bringing snow, ice, commuter woes and endangering livestock.

At least two deaths were attributed to the weather.

Snow hit the upper Mississippi Valley, the northern Plains, the northern Rockies across the Intermountain region to the Pacific Northwest, the National Weather Service said.

Below-zero temperatures and winds up to 40 mph produced ear-cracking wind chills over Montana and the Dakotas, forecasters said. Butte, Mont., reported winds of 29 mph, a temperature of 29 below and a wind chill of 91 below zero.

Other harsh wind chill readings: 74 below at Rapid City, S.D., and Missoula, Mont., 70 below at Jamestown, N.D., and 69 below at Cody, Wyo.

Monida, Mont., reported a low temperature of 36 below zero and it was 33 below at Great Falls, as it was at Fairbanks, Alaska. Readings of 20 below zero or colder were common in North and South Dakota, Montana and Wyoming.

Former president: Students appreciate education more

Sees no great shift from 1970's social conscience

By Phyllis Coon
Features Editor

In February 1972 the University's environment was volatile with student protests of the Vietnam War.

Amid the conflict David Derge became the University's eleventh president.

"During that era there was the element of civil rights activism in the late '60s that preceded anti-war activities," Derge said. "In the South people were demonstrating. People think this type of behavior became an art form."

A combination of several factors, including the war, the uncertain purpose of a Vietnamese studies center on campus and the remembrance of students killed at Kent State University in Ohio in 1969, led to demonstrations that closed SIU-C for seven days in May 1970.

A FREE SPEECH movement at the University of California at Berkeley in the early 1960s set the tone for demonstrators, Derge said.

"There was also a growing use of drugs, an aspect that contributed to the erosion in confidence in authority and institutions," Derge said. "People began to ridicule and question authority figures."

Various groups, including Marxism, used student movements to promote their ideas, he said.

"But the war was the main concern, and many of the students faced a future that included military service,"

Former University President David Derge at one time was a pollster for Richard Nixon. He is now a faculty member in the Department of Political Science.

Derge said.

DERGE, BORN Oct. 10, 1928, enlisted in the U.S. Army when he was 17. In 1952, he was commissioned an ensign in the Navy Reserve. He served as an officer until 1973, when he retired.

He received his bachelor's degree in political science from the University of Missouri and his master's and doctoral degrees from Northwestern University.

In 1956, Derge became a faculty member at Indiana University at Bloomington. He was named executive vice president of the institution in

DERGE, from Page 8

1968. That year he also was named the director of survey and research for Richard Nixon's presidential campaign. He did all the confidential polling for the White House.

IN 1974 DERGE left SIUC administration's higher ranks and joined the frontline as a political science professor.

Derge's Faner Hall office looks like a closet built of books. From a sandwich bag he dumps his lunch onto a paper plate.

He spends most of his days on the run, he said.

"Left over Chinese looks disgusting, but give it a few minutes in the microwave and it will be fine," Derge says carrying the plate out the door.

After 35 years of teaching, Derge has decided that students haven't changed too much.

DERGE SAID he is of the belief that from generation to generation there is not a rapid change.

"There's been no great shift in social consciousness, but there has been a shift in issues," Derge said. "Students today are probably more serious and just as aware of their environment as they have ever been."

Students have to work harder for an education because of the expensive tuition, he said.

"The increasing difficulty in getting an education has made people more appreciative," Derge said.

The University traditionally sought to open its doors to people who were not economically well off, he said.

"THE PURPOSE is still there," Derge said. "Scholarship distributions are aimed in that direction. Society bends over backwards for higher education."

Taxes are the key to getting more money for education and the key to taxes is politics, he said.

"There is an upcoming gubernatorial election and mayoral election in Chicago," Derge said. "Unless the legislature raises taxes this session they won't even address the issue again until 1991."

Without a substantial funding increase, tuition will continue to be increased or there will be great reductions in University activities, he said.

"THEN THE UNIVERSITY will be faced with stagnancy in programs, including larger classes and reduced research facilities at the library," Derge said. "Everyone knows that only hurts the students."

If the plans and policies the University has in place continue, more emphasis and resources will be dedicated to research and graduate training at the expense of the undergraduate program, he said.

"Undergraduate programs are over shadowed with this present preoccupation with research and graduate training and it shows a neglect for the quality of undergraduate instruction," Derge said.

DERGE SUFFERED with the University through a financial blow in 1973 and 1974 when Gov. George Walker cut the University's budget base by $2 million. Walker also told the University to reduce the size of its faculty.

The state gave universities everything they asked for in the 1960s, Derge said.

"The economic growth rate was good in the 1960s," Derge said. "There was more federal money at that time. There were also enormous enrollment increases and that provided a demonstrable need for more money."

But as anti-war demonstrations subsided, student concerns changed because "the days of plenty for higher education began to end in the mid 70s," Derge said.

ALSO DURING the era faculty and students began to demand a role in personnel selection, which brought the emergence of search committees, he said.

"Undergraduates, graduates and professionals, faculty, administration, civil service and alumni, everyone wants to be a representative," Derge said.

Affirmative Action also brought some changes to the hiring process, he said.

"If I was director of the School of Journalism, I could no longer pick up the phone and say to the director of the school of journalism at Columbia University, 'Do you have someone to teach journalism?'" Derge said. "I'm not saying the requirements are good or bad, but they do draw out the hiring process."

STUDENT GOVERN-

MENTS also were ways that some thought their opinions could be heard, he said.

"But what has to be remembered is that these organizations are probably poorly named," Derge said. "The important issues to students go on immune from these organizations."

Academic requirements, grades, financial aid, where students are allowed to live and cost of room and board are some major concerns that the student government has no say in, he said.

"IN GENERAL THE things that a student government does are largely trivial," Derge said. "A majority of students don't concern themselves with student government."

Lincoln Home vandalized, no leads

SPRINGFIELD (UPI)— Celebrations honoring Abraham Lincoln's 180th birthday later this month have been scarred by vandals who spray painted graffiti on two buildings on the Lincoln Home national historic site.

"People are concerned about what happens to the president's home," said Gentry Davis, site superintendent. "This gives them a worry during the celebration."

Springfield Police said there are no leads in the case and have teamed up with the FBI to investigate the crime. The FBI is involved because defacing the site is a federal crime.

Racial slurs and obscenities sprayed in neon-colored blue and pink paint were discovered earlier this week on two buildings and the fence behind Lincoln's home. The graffiti was quickly removed. The damage was estimated at $500.

Neil Williamson, a police spokesman, said the vandals made their mark at several locations in the city and are hoping someone saw the culprits in action.

"For a crime like this, you need to catch the person in the act. Without a citizen's tip, it's really hard to get any good leads," Williamson said. A tip helped solve a similar crime last year involving Lincoln's tomb. Five teenagers and an adult were arrested for spray painting graffiti at the burial site. But Williamson said police do not believe the cases are related.

Crimestoppers, a private citizens' group, is offering a $1,000 reward for information leading to arrests in the crime.

"We intend to prosecute the culprits to the fullest extent of the law, because defacing historic property is a federal offense," Gentry said.

Drinking alcohol at Springfest concerns organizing officials

By Miguel Albe
Staff Writer

A larger police force and fewer people drinking early in the morning at the Cardboard Boat Regatta are changes that will result from the new Springfest format, Brian Wood, Student Programming Council executive chairperson, said.

The separation of the regatta and Springfest activities has raised concerns about alcohol consumption at the events.

"There will be a bigger police force patrolling the area and there will not be people who have started drinking early on in the morning at the regatta," Wood said.

"We're concerned about alcohol consumption during the cardboard boat regatta," Terry Mathias, University relations project director, said. "We must assure the event is run in a safe manner." Mathias said alcohol consumption was prohibited for participating boat crews before and during the event last year.

"We are examining whether or not alcohol is compatible with the event," he said.

A Springfest retreat over the weekend attended by University administrators and students discussed many issues concerning the event, including alcohol consumption.

Wood said the retreat was not an attempt to decide anything in particular, but to bring up new ideas on how to handle the event.

"There have been no alcohol policy changes for Springfest," Wood said. "SPC will review the ideas and suggestions made."

Wood said SPC is focusing on positive issues, like providing entertainment and making the event an active one.

Clarence Dougherty, vice president for campus services, said a great deal of consideration was given to the alcohol situation at the retreat, but that there was some disagreement as to a decision.

"Until there is a final concurrence, it's going to be hard to say," he said. Lawrence Juhlin, assistant to the president for student affairs, said the bottom line was controlling the University party image.

"We're battling the SIU party image," he said. "We are getting away from the wild behavior."

Juhlin said he personally doubts there will be a total alcohol ban, but that people are taking on more responsibility in return.

"People are coming down hard on drinking and driving," he said. "It's something people are now dealing with."

Mathias said meetings for regatta organizers will begin Monday with any decisions concerning alcohol consumption being made in the future.

Punxsutawney Phil sees shadow, six more weeks of winter weather

PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa. (UPI) — Punxsutawney Phil, apparently aware of the Alaskan cold front working its way across the nation, made his annual Groundhog Day appearance Thursday and reported in "groundhogese" that he had seen his shadow, meaning six more weeks of winter.

Other animal kingdom weather forecasters — such as Nigel the clam in Rhode Island — had different predictions elsewhere around the country but Punxsutawney Phil had the biggest crowds on hand to see his act.

Authorities estimated that 2,000 to 3,500 people — some dressed in shorts and wearing no shirts — made the trek to Phil's Gobbler's Knob hangout on the outskirts of Punxsutawney to witness the forecast of "The Great Seer or Seers."

Shortly after sunrise, a reluctant Phil was removed from the man-made burrow where he had been sleeping. The groundhog then "whispered" to James Meane, Groundhog Club president who was dressed in top hat and tails.

"He has spotted a long dark shadow," Meane told the crowd, who responded with boos.

Phil's prediction came despite what has been an unseasonable warm winter in Punxsutawney, a community of 7,500 in northwest Pennsylvania. The thermometer outside Hunger's Office Supply on the main thoroughfare in Punxsutawney hit 62 degrees under sunny skies Wednesday, but the weather was more seasonable Thursday morning with the temperature in the 30s.

An Alaskan cold front has been pushing across the country this week, chasing away spring-like temperatures.

Phil has seen his shadow all but nine times in the 102 years of the Groundhog Day tradition, according to Bill Null, secretary of the Punxsutawney Groundhog Club. Legend has it that no shadow means an early spring.

Residents of Punxsutawney say Phil has never misforecast the end of winter.

"According to us, he's never been wrong," Null said. "Of course, we wouldn't admit that he was wrong any time."

Musical tribute remembers early rock 'n' roll great Holly

Singer honors his mentor with 30th year memorial concert

United Press International

A high school sophomore who turned the tragic death of Buddy Holly into a rock 'n' roll career that rocketed to the top of the record charts in the 1960s plans weekend concerts in Fargo, N.D. and Clear Lake, Iowa, to honor his mentor.

"It is sort of a tribute," said Bobby Vee. "The tie is obvious. 30 years later and what turned out to be the beginning of my career. We're revisiting the route to Fargo from Clear Lake."

IN A TELEPHONE interview from his home at St. Cloud, Minn., Vee said the 30th anniversary of the Feb. 3, 1959 plane crash that killed Holly, Richie Valens and Big Bopper J.P. Richards brings back a lot of memories.

The crash happened shortly after the plane took off following a concert in Clear Lake, Iowa. When the crash was discovered the next day it sent the music industry into shock and Holly, Valens and Richards into history as musical legends.

Holly's backup group, the Crickets, had taken an earlier bus to the group's next concert destination, the North Dakota-Minnesota border cities of Fargo-Moorhead, where the group was booked at the Moorhead National Guard Armory.

"I WAS A sophomore at Fargo Central High School and had a little band with my older brother and two other guys," Vee said.

He said when concert sponsor KVOX-AM in Moorhead heard about the crash, it immediately put out an announcement over the air for any local talent that could substitute for Holly.

"We agreed to do what we could," he said. "There we were with our little group on stage. The announcer turned around and asked what was the name of the band. We didn't have one."

Vee said he had been thinking all afternoon before the concert about a name. "I was afraid he was going to ask," he said. "So I said the Shadows, you know, sort of with a question mark in my voice. So the announcer turned around and said 'ladies and gentlemen, the Shadows.'"

WITH THAT APPEARANCE Vee's career emerged from the shadows and into the record industry limelight from 1960 to 1962. "Take Good Care of My Baby" went to No. 1 and other hits included "Devil or Angel."

Vee's career stalled in the mid 1960s but he made a brief comeback in 1967 with the hit "Come Back When You Grow Up."

Vee said he planned on singing his own songs and the original Crickets would perform all of the Buddy Holly hits Friday in Fargo. It is not the first time the two have teamed up.

"I toured England last year with the Crickets, singing my songs and Buddy Holly songs, and fulfilling the dream of 25 years," he said. "We have a lot of time in common, a lot of music in common."

VEE SAID said he had wanted to do the show at the Moorhead Armory, but the building was being torn down. The concert then was booked at the historic Art Deco Fargo Theatre, a former opera house known for its acoustics.

"It's unbelievable how many things are going on this year for the anniversary," he said.

This weekend in Beaumont, Texas, fans of the Big Bopper are expected to unveil a statue in remembrance of Richards.

Dick Johnson, operations director at KVOX, said it is ironic the plane crash that launched Vee's career also did the same for Buddy Holly after his death.

"Holly was an artist with regional hits," Johnson said. "He really fought his way out of the South. Southern artists had to fight a little bit more because they were not in the media centers of New York and Philadelphia."

HOLLY'S BIGGEST hit was "Peggy Sue," although it only went to No. 3 on the record charts when it was released, Johnson said.

Logan holds gospel concert for Martin Luther King fund

A gospel concert to benefit the Martin Luther King, Jr. Memorial Fund will be held Saturday, Feb. 4 at John A. Logan College's Humanities Center Theater.

The concert will feature the music of the gospel groups Rapture and Blessed.

The Martin Luther King, Jr. Memorial Fund awards a minority student scholarship, a humanitarian student scholarship and a community service award in memory of the slain civil rights activist to students living within the college's district.

Following the concert, a reception will be held for Debra Johnson-Jones, an artist whose work is on display at the college. Twenty percent of the sales of her art work also will be donated to the fund.

The concert will begin at 7 p.m. and the reception will follow at 9 p.m.

Ticket prices are $3 in advance ($4 at the door) for students and $5 in advance ($6 at the door) for the general public. Tickets may be ordered by calling 549-7335.

Strategic Games Society tournament includes prizes

The Strategic Games Society will host "The Egyptian Campaign," a tournament of role playing games, board games and miniature painting, with $1,000 in prizes this weekend at the Student Center.

Michael Murrell, convention director, said players will be judged on acting and role playing in games such as Dungeons and Dragons. There also will be a supremacy tournament that will include board games like Risk, he said.

The last area of competition is in the painting of miniature lead figures. Prizes will be gift certificates from gaming companies, Murrell said.

Games will be held from 9 a.m. to midnight on Saturday and from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. on Sunday at the Student Center Renaissance and Roman Rooms. Admission is $5 per day at the door.

GOOD NEWS and BAD NEWS

Everyone is familiar with the messenger with good news and bad news. Some choose to hear the good news first—to soften the blow. Others opt for the bad news first—reserving the good news to hopefully speed recovery from the shock of the bad news. Characteristically, the two, quite different in the impact they have on the hearer, will have some humorous correlation.

Occasionally a rather unique situation presents itself. Not as entertaining but much more realistic, the good news and the bad news are the same news. The obvious question is how so. Simply, different individuals perceive the same message in quite opposite ways. While one finds the information to be pleasing and later shows gratitude toward the messenger, the other takes the news badly having only animosity for the communicator.

So it is with the story of Jesus, rather the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Interestingly, today's English Version Bible actually translates the earlier Anglo-Saxon word gospel, good news. For some, hearing the good news of Jesus is good news. For others, the gospel is bad news. Commonly for the latter, like all other bad news, they would prefer not to hear it. Historically, this has been the case for Christ and his message. Beginning with the days that he, himself, was the messenger, the good news was both accepted with "thanksgiving" and rejected with "scorn". Matthew's Gospel (Matt. 12:9-14) reports of an incident where a simple act of Jesus was both applauded and derided.

Those offended took Christ's action as an assault on their own imagined goodness, value and self-sufficiency. They perceived any hint of the need for change in their lives and characters as being degrading and insulting. So defensive were they that they attempted to cut the messenger "off" short of delivering the news.

There were, however, many that heard the story to its conclusion. Likewise, they were told of their need, their shortcomings and even that there was someone far greater and of more importance than themselves. But, along with being made aware of their shortcomings (sin) and their deficiencies (need), they learned that Jesus was the key—the solution—to all of their problems and needs. They learned that Jesus has "come not to destroy men's (women's) lives, but to save them" (Luke 9:56 KJV). It was truly good news—this gospel of Jesus Christ. YOU are welcome to celebrate the GOOD NEWS of JESUS CHRIST at the American Baptist Campus Ministry.

Scientists hoping to rewrite rules of diffraction

By Keay Davidson
San Francisco Examiner

On the TV show "Star Trek," Capt. Kirk of the starship Enterprise often commanded, "Fire the photon torpedoes!" "Yes captain!" responded the trusted Mr. Sulu. He pressed a button, and the Enterprise shot two sparkling blobs of pure light at the evil Klingons, blowing them to bits.

Now, centuries ahead of Kirk's schedule, Lawrence Livermore Lab scientists hope to turn photon torpedoes — or something like them — from science fiction into fact.

Technologies ranging from medical imaging to energy transmission might be revolutionized if they succeed, they say.

THE SCIENTISTS' research has raised eyebrows among their colleagues because it seems to violate a basic principle of physics.

Here's the problem: On "Star Trek" the photon torpedoes — hot blobs of photons (particles of light) — remain exactly the same size as they slide across space toward their targets. But a beam of light spreads out as it travels. Try it with a flashlight: The beam leaving the flashlight swells into a big glow on a wall.

The underlying principle is that any form of energy — light, sound, radio waves — gradually spreads apart — or diffracts — and loses energy. That's why, for example, it's harder to talk to someone 100 feet away than to someone 10 feet away (the sound waves quickly spread apart and lose intensity).

EVEN THE famed "narrow" beam of a laser gradually expands. For example, a pencil-thick laser beam fired from Earth will expand as it crosses outer space, until it hits the moon and forms a faint red circle thousands of feet across.

So Star Trek's non-diffracting photon torpedoes are just science fiction, right?

Not exactly, say physicist Richard W. Ziolkowski and mechanical engineer D. Kent Lewis.

They're testing a way to transmit sound waves through water with much less diffraction than ever before possible, they recently reported in Physical Review Letters, a prestigious scientific journal. Their article was co-authored with mechanical engineer Bill D. Cook of the University of Houston.

AND IF they can slash the diffraction rate of sound waves moving through water, then a similar technique could be used to create astonishingly narrow beams of light moving through space, Ziolkowski said in an interview. (Although light and sound seem different, both propagate in the form of waves, so the underlying principles are the same.)

Their findings "violate most of mine and everybody else's physics training, equations that have been around since physics started," Ziolkowski acknowledged.

THEIR TECHNIQUE stems from studies initially funded by the Star Wars space-based missile defense system, but Ziolkowski is also excited about possible peaceful applications including:

• Space satellites that would collect solar energy and transmit it to Earth in tight beams of microwaves.

• Medical scanners that could "see" the human body up close with a minimum of distortion caused by the diffraction of light.

• Radio transmissions that would be totally private. Now radio transmissions fan out and can be intercepted by snipers. But future transmissions might be sent over tight beams of radio waves that would be virtually undetectable.

Family wants calves at home, others say it smells

BULL VALLEY (UPI) — If Timothy Adams is unable to win a zoning variance from the village board, his cows will just have to go home.

Well, calves, actually. Adams, 30, his wife, Missy, 28, and their children, Franklin, 6, Lisa, 4, and Rosemary, 4 months, live on a 5-acre estate a mile down the road from their McHenry County dairy farm. They have been keeping eight calves on the estate but village officials have ordered them to move the animals off their land.

"They don't really have a current ordinance about this," Missy Adams said Thursday. "People keep horses up here, so why not cows?"

Missy Adams said the village began beefing about the calves after one of their neighbors apparently complained about the smell of manure.

"You won't see big piles of manure stacked up outside my barn," Timothy Adams said. He also said he doesn't think cow manure smells any worse than horse manure.

He and his wife both say the calves are more like pets than commercial livestock.

"I know each one's mother and father. We work very closely with them," he said.

The family has a 600-acre dairy farm and 100 dairy cows. Timothy Adams has lived in the area all his life and the estate the family lives on was once part of a farm owned by his cousin. He said he was unaware the land was no longer zoned for agricultural purposes when he bought it.

"We've been taking petitions around to get a zoning change to allow us to keep 10 cows on our property," Missy said. "The one neighbor who refused to sign it is trying to sell his house and he's afraid he won't be able to sell because of the smell. But he told us he would sign once the house is sold."

The village has sent Adams a letter ordering him to move his calves or face a $500 fine.

"The thing that bothers me most is the people who come out here and try to turn (Bull Valley) into a city," he said.

Pupils saved from injury by teacher

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI) — A high school chemistry teacher who raced from his classroom with a vial of flaming chemicals to save his students may have been permanently blinded when the vial exploded, doctors fear.

But the quick action by Suryanarayana Chittilla saved the students in his class at Durham High School from being severely injured, Durham City School system officials said Wednesday.

The accident damaged the teacher's eyes and doctors are not sure how extensive the damage is. The Durham Morning Herald reported Thursday doctors have told Chittilla he has been blinded and they are not sure if he will regain his sight.

George Wylie, assistant superintendent for city schools, said the medical center has not released any word about Chittilla's eyes.

"They will remain bandaged for a couple of days and then the doctors will give us some statement," Wylie said.

The accident occurred Tuesday morning when students were arranging chemicals in a laboratory when water accidentally mixed with a vial of sodium metal. Such a mixture turns into lye and can explode.

Chittilla told the newspaper his only thought was getting the vial out of the classroom. The windows were closed, so he grabbed the vial and ran from the classroom and tried to leave the building, Chittilla said.

"I didn't want the vial to explode in the school," Chittilla said. "I ran down the steps with flames coming out of the container. I reached the door and had my hand out to push the door open when the vial exploded."

Alleys: Playground for kids, or a racetrack for old folks?

Parents say it's good for children, elderly say it's illegal

By Elaine Viets

St. Louis Post-Dispatch

City kids play in alleys. Alleys make them tough. Grass is for suburban softies. When city kids fall, they hit the bricks. It builds character. And neat-looking scabs. Alleys make them quick. You learn to hear cars coming and get out of the way. Alleys make them smart. That's where city kids get their sex education. Alleys stimulate young minds. You might find an old couch with the stuffing sticking out. Or a broken TV or typewriter to take apart. A stray cat could follow you home.

ALLEYS ARE also good for roller-skating, skate-boarding and bike-riding.

City kids know you don't play in the alley between 4 and 6 at night, when people come home from work.

But now this sacred city custom is threatened. Barbara called with the awful news.

"I ask you, as a city person, do kids have the right to play in the alley?"

Absolutely. There is no finer environment for a growing child.

"We have 30 children on our street," she said. "They can't play in the alley because of the speeders."

TEEN-AGERS are so thoughtless.

"These aren't teen-agers," Barbara said. "These speeders are old people. Retirees. They barrel down the alley so fast the kids don't have time to get away."

"The worst is this guy who just retired. When he goes to the grocery store in the morning, he races down the alley." Barbara said the senior speeders are mean. "One yelled at a 3-year-old riding her tricycle. We put SLOW CHILDREN on the dumpsters to remind the old people to slow down. Now they laugh that our kids are dumb."

"I asked one speeder if he'd drive more carefully. He said it was illegal to play in the alley."

"I SAID it was also illegal to exceed the speed limit. He's going a lot faster than 15 miles an hour."

"He told me I should keep my child in my yard — his kids never played in the alley. That's not true. His son used to roller skate there. He told me."

"The children can't play in the park. It's too far away. The yards around here are too small. When my son rides his bike in the alley, he's always supervised. I go out with him."

Have you tried the standard city remedy? You could send an anonymous note, threatening to sic the police on him.

"It wouldn't do any good," she said. "He knows the police have better things to do. Besides, he could call the city inspector on me."

"THIS MAN spreads stories about our children. He says they run wild. They don't even play near the old jerk's house. He lives at the top of alley. He doesn't have to come down this way. He just likes to speed." Barbara has an interesting problem. Speeding in an alley is illegal. But so is playing in one. The city bans a host of alley and street activities. It even outlawed kite-flying in alleys.

There is an unspoken agreement between the old and young. City kids don't ride bikes on the sidewalk, because they might run over the old people out for a quiet walk.

In return, the old people have always driven slowly down the alley, to give the kids time to clear out.

BUT TODAY'S retirees are a livelier bunch. They stay out dancing till all hours. They take exotic vacations. They join militant organizations for the elderly. And they don't creep around in their cars like old duffers. They speed.

So the deal is off. Modern city parents are going to the barricades. They borrow Day-Glo cones from a popular utility to block off part of the alley. This temporarily stops the cars and gives the kids a chance to escape.

"We did set up barricades," Barbara said. "One parent is a carpenter. He made us sawhorses for our alley. A couple of parents act as spotters. They take lawn chairs and a cooler, and sit at the top of the alley. They let us know when cars are coming."

"BY THE time we've moved the barricades, the kids have had time to get out of the way."

You've found the solution. Why do you need my advice? "The old people don't like to wait. They get so mad. What should I do?"

Tell them to fly a kite.

Researchers learning more about youngsters with aid from beepers

CHAMPAIGN (UPI) — Researchers say they are gaining new insight into the life of teenagers by having students carry beepers and jot down their activities, feelings and hopes every time they are signalled by the beeper.

Researchers said Thursday the findings are surprising, showing for example that whether parents are divorced makes no difference when it comes to moodiness and that teenage girls actually enjoy talking to their parents.

The Youth and Adolescence Study, now in its fourth year, is using beepers to track 483 kids, aged 10 to 15, for six years, giving a picture of the teens' moods and activities at various times throughout a week.

Reed Larson, professor of human development at the University of Illinois, and Marvay Richards, a psychology professor at Loyola University in Chicago, gave the beepers to children in grades five through nine in two Chicago suburbs — one blue-collar and one middle-class.

When the youngsters hear the beep, they open a logbook and record what they were just doing, how it felt, why they were doing it, what they would rather be doing and what they were thinking about when they did it.

"The idea is to get a snapshot of their lives," Larson said. "We get 40 to 50 snapshots a week to see what their lives are like: What do they feel like when they're watching TV, in class, or while doing their homework? We forget what it's like to be an adolescent."

Larson said the beeper approach gave a more spontaneous reading on teen life. "It catches them unaware," he said.

Each participant wears the beeper for a full week every two years, with as many as 30 teens being beeped in a given week. The devices may go off seven or eight times a day. Larson said some teens were bored by the end of their beeper weeks while others said it had been a source of humor or embarrassment.

The study, funded in part by the National Institute of Mental Health, will be completed after 1993. Results obtained so far show:

● There was no difference in moods between children of divorced parents and children of two-parent families.

● Girls experience a wider range of moods than boys.

● Despite reduced contact with their folks, girls still feel good when talking to them.

● When talking with their parents, their moods were very positive, Larson said. "They actually like it."

● The amount of time boys and girls spend with their families decreases dramatically between the ages of 10 and 15. "In fact, it's cut in half," Larson said.

● TV viewing decreases in that same age span, but listening to music increases dramatically. Fifteen-year-olds, for example, spend 3 percent of their waking hours listening to radio or tapes but may have background music on more than 6 percent of their time.

● Girls spend quite a bit of time on the telephone. "The amount of time girls spend just talking increases dramatically from 9 percent to 18 percent" of their waking hours between ages 10 and 15, Larson said.

● Many girls — as many as 25 percent — became obsessed with dieting and weight and these adolescents show other signs of psychological difficulties.

● Romantic problems, "unrequited love and other disappointments," become a major source of low points in life, starting in junior high school, Larson said. For both boys and girls, romantic problems cause about 10 percent of life's woes — about on a par with family problems. But home life is a steady source of trouble, Larson said, while romance is "a new area of pain."

"I expressed my concerns about how I would like the program to continue growing to Jim (Hart) and Charlotte (West), and they were good listeners," Locke said.

So far, Locke's time has been occupied with continuing recruiting and completing the schedule.

Locke, who has a bachelor's degree in journalism from SIU-C, has been an assistant coach for six years. As a player, she was a 1981 All-America middle blocker for the Salukis. She is a member of the SIU Sports Hall of Fame.

Erbe, who will be interviewed Tuesday, resigned last week as the Lady Trojans' head coach. Southern California's sports information department reported. Southern California had a 18-16 record last season and lost in the first round of the NCAA tournament, finishing with a No. 17 ranking.

Erbe coached the Trojans from 1976 to 1988, compiling a

The new assistants could probably persuade our borderline recruits to come to SIU-C for what the University has to offer, if they even know. There is no stability in our football program, the strategic philosophies of our football team change like the seasons and the coaches won't be around for your entire stint as a college athlete.

If that can't convince today's high school seniors, I don't know what will.

Stability is always a good tool to use, but the football program threw its chances of stability out the window when they hired Smith. If there was a concern for continuity, Athletics Director Jim Hart would have thought about hiring defensive coordinator Jim Tompkins.

Saluki fans were high on this Southern brand of football. The wishbone offense and a renewed commitment had the people of Southern Illinois believing.

Now they don't know what to believe. They don't want to get their hopes up for fear that Smith will pull a Rick Rhoades' move. Will the Saluki football program forever remain a revolving door for coaches around the nation?

310-121-3 career record and a 106-51 mark in the Pacific 10 Conference. He has the distinction of having won more national titles (4) than Pac 10 championships (3).

Olson, who has an interview scheduled tentatively for Monday, has been at North Dakota State two seasons and took the Bison to the NCAA Division II finals both times.

Olson, who was this season's Division II Coach of the Year, led North Dakota State to a third-place finish with a 43-3 record. In 1987, the Bison were fifth at 44-8.

Olson, who also coached the Sports Performers junior national team in 1986, was a four-year letterwinner at Illinois State from 1981-1984.

Hagemeyer, who will be interviewed Monday, has been an assistant at Notre Dame since 1986. Notre Dame, coached by Art Lambert, has quickly risen in the national scene in just three seasons.

The search committee is composed of Carney, assistant basketball coach Bob McCullum, head softball coach Kay Brechtelsbauer, faculty member Duwayne Englert, graduate student Terry Stratta, and volleyball team member Lori Simpson.

"I was just told that we were not going to be together," Riley said. "I cleaned out my office (Wednesday) night."

McMahon said he began job hunting the minute he learned Rhoades was leaving.

"I knew I was a long shot ever since Rhoades left," McMahon said. "Coach Smith called me (Wednesday) night and said he was going in another direction."

Offensive line coach Rod Sherrill said he has received no official word from Smith, but is expecting the worst.

"I knew who was going to be on staff," Sherrill said. "Ralph and Phil are both line coaches, and with three around, someone has to go."

McMahon said defensive backs coach Stanley King will be retained as a member of Smith's staff.

The only question mark is Rhoades' defensive coordinator Jim Tompkins. Tompkins said he and Smith are still talking, but no definite plans have been reached. Sherrill and Riley expressed their concern over the number of open positions in the college football market.

"Right now is a tough time to find a job," Riley said. "I hope there will be something happening right after the signing date. I am talking to all the people I know in coaching who have influence"

Despite having been involved with the Salukis' coaching staff for eight years, Sherrill said the dream of being able to stay in one place is hardly a reality.

"You would like to be able to stay in one place your whole life, but you're fooling yourself if you think you can," Sherrill said. "I was actively seeking a job the day Rhoades was hired. There are really no jobs out there right now. My immediate plans are just to take off for the weekend."

Today's press conference is expected to yield news of contract obligations between the University and the football program's departing coaches.

Riley, who makes $26,950, said he will be paid until he finds another position.

"My contract says I will be paid until June 30," Riley said. "When I get a job with someone else, my contract with SIU is terminated."

The remainder of the coaching staff are operating under 12-month contracts. Tompkins is making $31,008, McMahon $16,008 and Sherrill $18,420.

Runners preparing for MVC

Men's track uses Indiana Invitational to improve times

By Paul Pabst
Staff Writer

The Saluki men's indoor track squad continues its preparation for the late February Missouri Valley Conference championships Saturday at the Indiana Invitational in Bloomington, Ind.

The runners are coming off a third-place finish at the seven-team Missouri Invitational last week. The Salukis finished just 16.5

points behind conference rival Illinois State.

The Salukis will count on strong outings from shot-putter Eric Bomball, triple jumper Leonard Vance, and sprinter Billie King.

Bomball holds the MVC season high for the shot put, with a toss of 52 feet 8½ inches.

Vance's triple jump of 50-9½ leads the conference at this point in the season. King is at the top in the 55-meter dash.

The past few weeks, the flu and a few injuries have kept the Salukis from competing at a top level. That trend seems to be coming to a halt.

Only pole vaulter Mike

Michels is injured with a bad shoulder, and he should be back as soon as Friday.

"I think the flu has run its course," Coach Bill Cornell said. "We're back to health, except now my assistant coach has it."

"We should start to progress each week," Cornell said. "The competition will really be there this weekend."

Cornell has entered 22 Salukis in the meet. There should be over 20 teams competing in the non-scored invitational. Top teams include Indiana, Florida, West Virginia, and Georgia Tech.

The meet begins at 3:30 p.m. Friday and 9 a.m. Saturday

Women's track can't beat flu bug

By Paul Pabst
Staff Writer

Unlike the Saluki men's team, the past week hasn't healed the wounds of the Saluki women's indoor track squad.

"We're worse than we were last week," coach Don DeNoon said. "This flu thing is a sad situation."

Added to the list of casualties is Traci Davis, who has contracted pneumonia. Dora Kyriacou is still battling the flu and Angie Nunn, who seemed to be getting better, is also down with the flu.

"We are losing a lot of key athletes," DeNoon said. "The worst part is that it is getting worse instead of better."

The Salukis will have to hobble in to Saturday's Iowa Invitational which includes Iowa, Iowa State, and a number of conference opponents.

DeNoon said about the drive to Iowa City, "One van for the healthy people, one for the sick people." With the conference championship meet just three weeks away, the main concern of DeNoon is not to win this weekend, but to get healthy for the conference meet.

"We have to get healthy eventually," DeNoon said. "Unlike injuries, you can't rehabilitate people with the flu."

"All we can do is our best and wait for this to blow over," DeNoon added. "It seems like I have to say that every week."

THIRD, from Page 24

"If we are not real careful, we could look by them," Herrin said. "If you check their scores at home, they are only having five or six point defeats. There is no way we can take them for granted."

Despite carrying an 11-game MVC losing streak, the Sycamores lead the conference in free throw shooting at 79 percent, also good for third in the country.

"They are such a great shooting team," Herrin said. "They are probably the best college team I have ever coached against from the line.

It is something you can't defend, so it is important that we do not put them on the line."

Point production has been Indiana State's biggest downfall. The Sycamores are averaging 62.5 points per contest as a team, last in the MVC, while allowing their opponents an average of 75.0.

Indiana State is shooting a dismal 39.8 percent from the field as a team.

Individually, the Sycamores are led by sophomore Eddie Brid'a 13.9 points per game. Sophomore Jeff Lauritzen is the only other Sycamore in double figures at 12.0.

Freddie McSwain continues to lead the Salukis with 368 points, although his average has slipped from a season high of 23.3 to a current low of 17.5 as a result of his ongoing bout with the flu.

Herrin said the junior is 100 percent now, and will be more than ready for action Saturday night.

Senior Kai Nurnberger has turned things around considerably from the season's start.

Saluki Invitational showcases three seniors in home meet

By Tricia Jording
Staff Writer

Three SIU-C senior swimmers will show off their talents to local fans for the last time at the Saluki Invitational today through Sunday.

Scott Roberts, Lee Carry and Bruce Brockschmidt have contributed a great deal to Saluki swimming. With their help, SIU-C has placed in the national rankings the past four years. The Saluki men are currently ranked 13th in the nation.

The seniors will be honored at a ceremony at 7 pm tonight at the Recreation Center Pool.

"The state of our program is a tribute to these young men," Coach Doug Ingram said. "We are not suddenly great this year. It's been a four-year project and our 9-2 record and high ranking is a tribute to their hard work and tremendous leadership."

The 21st Annual Saluki Invitational will be held in conjunction with the first women's Saluki Invitational. Competition starts at 6 p.m. tonight. The meet will continue Saturday at 6 p.m. and Sunday at 4.

The team as a whole is still swimming hard with good heavy training. Sprint swimmers are presently resting for the championships, Ingram said.

Mark Canterbury, Chris Gally, Harri Garmendia, Tim Kelly, Eric Broech, Brockschmidt and Roberts are the men to watch according to Ingram.

"Lee Carry swam well last weekend and I think he's ready to swim well again," Ingram said.

"Kelly Wire has tried a few new events because we're down a few swimmers in some areas and she is doing well," Ingram said in reference to the women's competition.

Other Saluki women to watch will be freshmen Janet Patrick, Laine Owen and Tonia Mahaira.

The weekend's competitors will be Indiana University, Western Illinois and Western Kentucky.

"Indiana's men add a lot of class to this field," Ingram said. "They are the best single team in the meet over the last five years."

"There should be a lot of excitement over our inaugural Saluki Invitational for the ladies. We're hoping the meet can become comparable to that of our men's invite."

Wall of Fame honors former SIU-C leader

By Tricia Jording
Staff Writer

The icing on the cake at the Saluki Invitational this weekend will be the unveiling of the Ralph Casey Swimming-Diving Wall of Fame Saturday.

The unveiling will be at 7:30 p.m. at the Recreation Center Pool.

Casey is credited as being the one person responsible for SIU-C's swimming program although he is not the founder of the program.

A swimming coach from 1968-73, Casey led SIU-C to its highest national finish ever, ninth in 1969 and also to 12 NCAA top 20 finishes.

Casey coached SIU-C's first all-American, Walt Rodgers; first national champion, Norbert Rumpke; and first American record-holder, Ray Padovan.

"The Wall of Fame will include pictures, highlights through the years about SIU Swimming, and over 100 All-American certificates," swimming Coach Doug Ingram said.

"There will also be plaques commemorating significant events and also a trophy case. It really does complement an already outstanding facility."

"This is a uniquely significant Saluki Invitational because of the Ralph Casey Swimming-Diving Wall of Fame," Ingram said. "This is a fitting memorial to a great individual."

Purdue hands Illinois second league loss, 76-72

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) — Tony Jones scored 22 points, including a pair of free throws with 27 seconds remaining Thursday night, to help Purdue stun No. 2 Illinois 76-72.

The Illini fell to 10-2 overall and 5-2 in the Big Ten with their second loss in four road games this season. Illinois has not beaten Purdue since 1986.

Purdue snapped a four-game losing streak, rising to 10-11 and 3-5. The Boilermakers, who have not had a losing season since 1986, snapped a three-game home losing skid, their longest since 1983.

Neither team led by more than four points after the first 4:12 of the game, but Purdue took the lead for good with 7:45 to play on a basket by Jones that gave the Boilermakers a 62-60 advantage.

Illinois pulled within a point three times, the last coming when Carbondale native Steve Bardo sank a three-point shot with 32 seconds remaining to cut Purdue's lead to 73-72.

After two free throws by

Jones, Nick Anderson and Steve Bardo missed three-point shots for Illinois. Purdue's Loren Clyburn fouled Anderson while battling for the rebound of the second miss. But Anderson missed a free throw with 10 seconds remaining and Steve Scheffler rebounded for Purdue. Scheffler sank a final free throw with seven seconds remaining.

Melvin McCants added 16 points for Purdue. Lowell Hamilton led Illinois with 18 points while Anderson added 14.

Kenny Battle slammed in a fast-break dunk off a steal with seven seconds remaining in the first half.

Smith selects coaches today 2 from Rhoades' staff leaving

By David Gallanetti
Staff Writer

Phil Meyer, a former assistant coach at Southeast Missouri State under new Saluki football coach Bob Smith, will be named as one of Smith's SIU-C assistants today at a 2 p.m. press conference, the Daily Egyptian has learned.

A football official at Northern Arizona said Meyer quit his job at the university Tuesday, Jan. 31, to accept a position at SIU-C.

Meyer declined comment on the matter, saying he would discuss anything with the press at length following today's announcement.

"I would rather not say anything until it is official," Meyer said.

Smith, hired by the University Jan. 30, was out of town Thursday and unavailable for comment. Athletics Director Jim Hart could not be reached for comment.

Meyer was a part-time assistant on the offensive line at the University of Illinois in 1962 and 1963 under Smith. Meyer left his offensive coordinator's position at SEMO shortly after Christmas to accept the offensive line job at Northern Arizona.

Another of Smith's assistants at SEMO, Ralph Young, was at the Saluki football office all day Thursday, but said he had not been officially hired.

"I don't know what the proceedings are, I've just been interviewing," Young said. "It is all in a holding pattern for everyone. Everyone is low key, because no one wants to step on anyone's toes."

Young said if Smith did offer him a position he would take it, but would not say if he had been offered a job.

In addition to the news of Meyer's impending appointment, the Daily Egyptian has learned that two of the Salukis' five assistant coaches will not be retained, one is not expecting to return, one has been retained and the fifth is still a question mark.

Fred Riley, offensive coordinator under former coach Rick Rhoades, and Greg McMahon, Rhoades' wide receiver coach, will be seeking other coaching positions as a result of Smith's decision.

Riley and McMahon both said Smith called them Wednesday night informing them they would not be rehired.

Big football changes hurtling new program

See ya, bye. That's what new head football coach Bob Smith told two of Rhoades' assistants Wednesday night.

Nice to meet you Coach Riley, Coach McMahon, you no longer have jobs.

But Rhoades' assistants, including Jeff McInerney who left for a job at the University of Texas El Paso, who spent the entire recruiting season selling the University, aren't going to be here to reap the benefits of their labors.

Maybe there won't be any benefits when SIU-C has no recruits because they have no familiar faces in the football office. The coaches' names have already been taken off the office doors. Smith isn't wasting any time.

But he is wasting the chance to salvage any hopes he has of bringing in a strong recruiting class. Unless of course, the new coaches change their sales pitch.

The strongest selling point for football players around the state is this. Southern Illinois has a variety.

If you come to Carbondale and find out you don't like the coaches, stick around a year, there will be a new coach with a new philosophy and new Rich Herrin and his Salukis are preparing for the first stop of their 1989 Indiana tour. Herrin is just hoping the first stop won't be the last.

SIU-C will put its two-game winning streak on the line at 6:30 p.m. Saturday in Terre Haute, Ind. as they take on Missouri Valley foe Indiana State.

After a date with the Sycamores, the Salukis head north in the Hoosier state to battle the Evansville Aces Feb. 6 before returning home Feb. 9 to again face Indiana State.

Ron Greene's Sycamores enter Saturday's contest with an 0-6 league mark, 4-14 overall. Herrin said there

SOUTHERN ILLINOIS AT INDIANA STATE
Tipoff: Hulman Center (10,200), Terre Haute, Ind., 8:30 p.m.
Records: Southern Illinois (4-3, 15-6), Indiana State (0-0, 4-14).
Want to watch: The Salukis try to continue their recent Missouri Valley success, riding the crest of wire over Bradley and Illinois State. The Sycamores look to claim their first league victory.
Last meeting: Southern Illinois 90, Indiana State 87 (OT), Feb. 24, 1988 in Terre Haute.
Series: Indiana State leads 36-28.
On the air: WBOC-FM (89.9), Carbondale.

is a potential for the Salukis putting the game in the win column prematurely.

Volleyball candidates released

Although the national signing date of Feb. 8 fast approaches, it seems unlikely SIU-C will have filled its vacant head volleyball coaching position by then.

Gary Carney, assistant athletics director and head of the six-person search committee, said naming a coach by the start of the period when the top high school players sign "was something we would like to do. But we felt that a quality search was more important than the timing."

The possibility of naming a head coach late next Wednesday (Feb. 8) still remains, but Feb. 9 is more probable.

The search committee did move quickly Thursday, though, as it announced the names of four candidates and held its first interview with Saluki assistant Sonya Locke. Locke applied immediately after former coach Debbie Hunter resigned Jan. 4 to head a coaching accreditation program with the U.S. Volleyball Association.

The other candidates are Chuck Erbe, formerly head coach at University of Southern California; Cathy Olson, head coach at North Dakota State; and Patti Hagmeyer, assistant coach at Notre Dame.

"We're extremely pleased with the field of finalists," said Carney, whose search committee met three times in the past week to narrow the selection from 27 applicants.

"I'm not surprised by the number of candidates, but I am pleased with the quality."

Locke, 27, met in one-on-one interview sessions with Athletics Director Jim Hart and Associate Athletics Director Charlotte West, then fielded questions from a panel consisting of members of the Saluki Athletics staff, the search committee and players.

"I was happy to receive head coaching-type questions, both from the staff and the player," Locke said. "If I'm going to be looked at as a potential head coach then people have to hear me as a head coach."

Locke, who has been guaranteed her assistant coaching position by the University in the event she is not hired as head coach, said she felt comfortable in the interview sessions.

Women's team rolls over Northern Iowa, 79-59

By Troy Taylor

The women's basketball team took great care to preserve its second-place standing in the Gateway Conference as the Salukis defeated the Northern Iowa Panthers 79-59 Thursday night in Cedar Falls, Iowa.

"I was pleased with the team effort," Saluki coach Cindy Scott said. "We showed some mental toughness to beat them by 20 points."

The Salukis are 10-4 overall and 6-3 in the Gateway, while Northern Iowa suffered its fourth straight defeat and fell to 4-13 overall, 1-9 conference.

In other Gateway action, Drake beat Eastern Illinois 93-

74 in Des Moines, Iowa to take sole possession of third place. The Salukis play Drake Saturday.

The 79 points scored by SIU-C was a season-high, as was the 31 field goals and 56.3 shooting percentage. Northern Iowa, which shot 39.7 percent, was the sixth team this season the Salukis' man-to-man defense held under 40 percent.

"I thought our defense in the first half was particularly good," Scott said.

But it was an offensive spurt that got the Salukis running in the first half. Northern Iowa opened the scoring, but the Salukis then ran off 10 straight points, ending with an Amy Rakers layin at 13:59.

Rakers, a 6-2 sophomore forward, and Cathy Kampwerth, a 6-4 senior center, dominated play from the lane from the start.

"Offensively, Kampwerth and Rakers did the job inside," Scott said.

Rakers led the Salukis with a career-high 17 points and 9 rebounds. Kampwerth had 15 points, 11 coming in the first half, and 9 rebounds.

Northern Iowa's top scorer was Jill Jameson, a freshman guard who scored 12 of her 14 points in the second half.

Cindy Harms added 13 points and Sandy Grabowski 10 for the Panthers. Both Harms and Grabowski fouled out.

Northern Iowa did close within four points, 22-18, with 6:37 to go in the first half. But
