President reveals $1.4 trillion budget

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush sent Congress a $1.4 trillion 1992 budget Monday that had record deficits, lower Pentagon spending despite the war, a $3 billion Medicare cut and more money for children, education, highways and parks.

The budget for the federal fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, was released with the country at war for the first time in a generation and with the U.S. economy mired in recession for the ninth time since World War II.

Administration budget director Richard Darman said the new budget proposal contained no specific anti-recession measures, such as federal jobs or retraining programs, because the recession is projected to be short-term and mild and is expected to end before the new budget takes effect in President George Bush unveiled a $1.4 trillion budget to Congress Monday, and Illinois politicians unveiled their concerns about education and health care.

The proposed 1992 budget would raise funding for the Health and Human Services Department, but would cut Medicare by $20 billion over five years—$3 billion in 1992.

that were unknown when the more than 2,000-page, 7-pound document went to press last month.

With war costs set to be handled separately, Pentagon spending for military functions was cut in the Bush budget by $4.5 billion, from $287.5 billion this year to $283 billion next year.

Some weapons systems, like the radar-evading but budget-busting B-2 stealth bomber, were slated for reductions. But Bush urged a roughly $2 billion spending boost, to $4.5 billion, for the Strategic Defense Initiative anti-missile program, known as "Star Wars."

New budget lifts Shawnee clearcut ban

By John Patterson
Staff Writer

A 1991 federal budget ban on clearcutting in the Shawnee National Forest has been lifted in the proposed 1992 budget.

In a budget presented to Congress Monday, President George Bush withdrew the prohibiting of clearcutting in the Shawnee.

U.S. Rep. Glenn Poshard, D-Cartersville, said Congress would take action to reinstate the ban.

"The president has lifted the ban on clearcutting, so we'll have to go back and do something," Poshard said.

Joe Glisson, member of the Regional Association of Concerned Environmentalists said the threat of clearcutting is not likely, although the lifting of the ban has been proposed.

"I was aware that he has recommended dropping the clear-cutting restraint," Glisson said. "It's not that significant, only a flag they run up."

Postal rate hike could pinch University

SIUC may spend $200,000 more on postage yearly

By Leslie Colp
Staff Writer

New postal rates could put a pinch on the University.

The new rates could cost the University an extra $150,000 to $200,000 a year, said Harry D. Wirth, director of Service Enterprises.

Postal rates went up Feb. 3 from 25 cents to 29 cents for first-class mail. The increase in all rates averages 18 percent, including 22 percent for second-class mail, 25 percent for third-class mail, 19 percent for priority mail and 15 percent for express mail.

The University spends about $1.1 million in postage each year, Wirth said.

About $500,000 is spent on first-class mail, he said. The increase could cost the University about $75,000 for first-class mailing.

From a study of SIUC mailing done in 1985, it was determined about 50 percent of all mail sent by the University is from a small number of departments, Wirth said.

These offices include the Bursar's Office, student affairs, housing, admissions and records and Morris Library, he said. The University sends out approximately two million pieces of mail each year, Wirth said.

The Bursar's Office sends 30,000 to 35,000 pieces of first-class mail in monthly billings alone, said Charles Bernardoni, SIUC bursar. There is no way to reduce the amount of mail sent.

"It (increase in postal rates) has quite a financial impact on (the Bursar's Office)," Bernardoni said. The Bursar's Office is looking for ways to save money, such as new sorting techniques, he said.

Cathy Hunter, assistant director of housing, said the housing office

USS Missouri shells Iraqi positions in Kuwait

United Press International

The battleship USS Missouri fired its 16-inch guns Monday at Iraqi positions in occupied Kuwait, and shots were fired at a bus carrying U.S. soldiers in the Saudi city of Jeddah, military officials said.

The State Department, meanwhile, warned all U.S. citizens to leave Jordan because of the heightened risk caused by the outbreak of war and U.S. forces engaged in ground skirmishes with Iraqi troops. Iran offered to speak both with U.S. and Iraqi officials in an effort to end the fighting.

The Missouri, stationed in the Persian Gulf, fired its guns for the first time since the Korean War, targeting prefabricated, concrete-reinforced bunkers set up by Iraqi troops in unspecified areas of Kuwait, the U.S. Central Command said in Riyadh, the Saudi capital. There was no estimate of damage to enemy positions.

The Missouri, one of only four battleships in the Navy, has nine 16-inch guns, the largest guns on any ship in the world. Each gun can hurl a 2,000-pound shell more than 20 miles.

Shots were fired shortly before midnight Sunday at a civilian shuttle bus carrying three U.S. soldiers, a Saudi guard and an Egyptian driver in the Red Sea port city of Jeddah, but the reason for the attack was unclear, U.S. military sources said in Dhahran.

No one was wounded by the gunfire but there were some injuries from flying glass, Saudi Col. Ahmed Al-Robayan, a spokesman for the Joint Arab Forces, said at a briefing in Riyadh. U.S. military sources said 9mm shell casings were found in a junkyard near the scene of the shooting.

Allied officials played down the bus attack. Al-Robayan said, "It was a small act and could happen anywhere. ... I would characterize it as a small incident ... a minor incident."

In Washington, the State Department warned all Americans to leave Jordan and urged U.S.

Pete Rose banned from Hall of Fame

NEW YORK (UPI) — Pete Rose, baseball's all-time hit leader, was denied entry to the Hall of Fame Monday as long as he remains banned from the game because of his gambling scandal.

In an expected move, 12 members of Baseball Hall of Fame's board of directors voted unanimously to uphold last month's recommendation from a special committee of the hall. Four board members did not attend Monday's meeting.

"We feel the rules of election need to be modified to bring them into the current day," said Ed Stack, president of the Baseball Hall of Fame and chairman of the board. "Election rules are changed just as the Constitution is changed from time to time. We felt the time had come." Stack said Monday's vote was not directed at Rose, but at those on baseball's ineligible list. Aside from Rose, there are eight other members of the 1919 Chicago White Sox, including "Shoeshoe" Joe Jackson, and New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner.

"I don't remember his name being specifically mentioned," Stack said. "Pete Rose was not the subject of our discussion. It was a rule change that affects baseball and the Hall of Fame."

"We're cleaning up our rules of election. This is making the rules much better. It's probably something that should have been done years ago. It was never done."

Rose was banned from baseball in 1989 by A. Bartlett Giamatti, then the commissioner, for gambling on baseball, a charge Rose denies. Rose was released from prison in Marion, Ill., Jan. 7 after a five-month stay for tax fraud. He is now working as a teacher's assistant in Cincinnati as part of his sentence.

"There's not much I can do about it," Rose said of the vote while getting into a car in Cincinnati. "I did my part."

Rose was allowed to apply for reinstatement to baseball on Aug. 23—one year after the suspension was imposed—but has not done so. He would have been eligible to be on the Hall of Fame ballot this past December.

SIUC baseball players want Pete Rose in Hall of Fame

If it were up to some Saluki baseball players and coaches, Pete Rose would still have a shot at the Hall of Fame.

In a recommendation made last month by a special committee of the Hall of Fame it was suggested that anyone who is on baseball's ineligible list be denied admission into the hall.

Monday, 12 members of Baseball's Hall of Fame board of directors voted to uphold the recommendation and ban Rose. The vote was unanimous that the all-time hit leader not be admitted.

The Saluki baseball coaches and athletes think it is unfair that such a great player be banned from the Hall of Fame.

Guyton halts hiring of additional athletic advisor

By Eric Bugger
Staff Writer

SIUC President John C. Guyton told the athletics department last week there was no available funds for a third academic advisor.

The athletics department was searching for another advisor to help with the load of more than 400 student-athletes. The search had been narrowed from 55 applicants to five candidates, before Guyton gave the word to abort the search.

Guyton said with asking all departments to make cutbacks it wasn't appropriate to create a new position in the athletics department.

The search could continue next fiscal year if the University can allocate the funds for the position.

The athletics department was looking for a person who would serve as a role model to the student-athletes. No other qualifications were released, but the Intercollegiate Athletic Advisory Committee suggested hiring an advisor to help black male athletes, who were pinpointed as having academic difficulties in a study released by the athletics department.

Athletics Director Jim Hart said the search was not a direct result of the IAAC's recommendation. He said it had been considered before the study was ever done.

Assistant Athletics Director Nancy Bandy chaired the search committee. She said the National Association of Academic Advisors recommends one advisor for every 100 student-athletes. SIUC has two advisors to serve about 400 student-athletes.

Hart said another advisor is not desperately needed, but it would be easier for students to seek help.

"It would make it much easier to get an appointment," Hart said. "If you can only give a student 30 minutes and they need an hour, you've slighted them. You can always use more advisors, but we're not firmly convinced that one is absolutely necessary."

Guyton said another advisor is necessary, but he believes SIUC does as much for the student-athletes as anyone it competes against.

Hart said the main problem is with the students using the services the athletics department offers.

"I think we do as much or more than most institutions as far as providing services for the young people," Hart said. "The fact that they don't take advantage of the services is the problem. Is hiring another advisor going to make them want to use the system any more?"

SIUC basketball forward Kelvin

Lawrence said the two advisors at SIUC have been doing a great job and it is nobody's fault but the students if they can't get the job done academically.

The search was all but over, Bandy said. She had met with the members of the search committee three times and was about to conduct interviews with the five finalists when the decision was made.

"I think it's unfortunate that we spent that much time for nothing," Bandy said. "I did not enjoy calling people and asking them to interview one day and the next day calling them to tell the we couldn't do it. It just was not very professional."

Marriage hasn't slowed down high-flying aerial attack of junior forward Kelvan Lawrence this season.

Lawrence was married Dec. 27, 1989 and has been able to find time to stay in school and still contribute to the Saluki basketball team.

"It gives me more responsibility and I'm more grown-up about everything," Lawrence said. "I think it helps me work harder at everything I do."

Senior teammate Rick Shipley has noticed a definite change in Lawrence on and off the court.

"I think it has helped him a lot," Shipley said. "When he first got here he was very quiet, but he seems a lot more outgoing now. It seems like his wife, Cassie, has really opened him up a lot and that has helped him on the court with his confidence also."

Last year, SIUC coach Rich Herrin often referred to Lawrence as the best sixth man in the (Missouri) Valley, but Lawrence's hard work has paid off this season in the means of a starting spot in the Saluki lineup. From there, Lawrence has run with the Saluki running game to average 9.3 points and 6 rebounds a game.

"Getting married was probably the best thing that has happened to him," Herrin said. "His wife is really a good person and really has helped him become a better student and player."

"There's a lot more to life than playing basketball and I think he has his life going in the right direction. He knows what it takes to get things done academically."

Herrin's admiration for Lawrence goes beyond the court.

He appreciates how Lawrence has taken advantage of every opportunity SIUC has offered.

"I think he appreciates that Southern Illinois University has given him an opportunity to be successful, not only on the basketball floor but in the classroom as well," Herrin said. "I would say Kelvan Lawrence is an overachiever student and an overachiever basketball player. I think he has to work hard to get the results. He's my type of basketball player. He's a tough competitor and works hard at the game."

If Lawrence has learned anything since getting married, it's that basketball isn't everything.

"If I get a chance to further my basketball career I'll stay with that," Lawrence said, "but I plan to be able to fall back on my degree (consumer economics) to earn a living. One of my main goals is to get my degree in the next year or two."

On the court, Lawrence hopes the Salukis can pick it up for the rest of this season and carry the momentum over for a big season in 1991-92.

In the stands to witness that big season will be his wife, Cassie, a sophomore majoring in accounting at SIUC. She tries to attend every Saluki basketball game.

"I enjoy it," she said. "We've been dating since the ninth grade so I'm used to it. I love it. It's not as stressful as people might think."

The sixth-man billing Lawrence got last year didn't bother him because he knew he would get a chance to strut his stuff.

"There were some great players in the starting lineup last year, so I didn't mind coming off the bench,"

Salukis excel at own Invite

Two Saluki divers have split the waters and surfaced with a treasure more valued than gold. They earned the right to compete in the NCAA zones.

The qualifying scores came during the Saluki Invitational this weekend in which the women's swimming team won by a wide margin, while the men's team barely inched by for the title.

Freshman Rob Siracusano and freshman Donnell DuBois qualified for the nationals during the Saluki Invitational at the Recreation Center. The Saluki men's team edged out the University of Nebraska by a slim margin of 23.5 points. The women's swimming team coasted to its win over Drury College by a margin of 228 points.

Siracusano qualified for the NCAA zones in both the 1-meter and 3-meter dives. His score in the 3-meter was 543.7. A score of 480 was needed to qualify. He scored 482.25 in the preliminary 1-meter dive. A score of 465 was needed to qualify.

DuBois qualified for the NCAA zones in the 1-meter dive with a score of 391.50. A score of 375 was needed to qualify.

Trials of Chinese dissidents 'fall far short of standards'

LONDON (UPI) — The human-rights group Amnesty International accused China of holding unfair trials and called for the immediate release of imprisoned dissidents involved in the 1989 pro-democracy movement. The London-based group, in a report prepared for release Tuesday, said at least 19 activists, including student leaders and intellectuals, have been tried since trials began in November. Twelve have been sentenced to prison terms ranging from two to 12 years for "counterrevolutionary" offenses, Amnesty said. The human rights monitoring group said the trials fell "far short of international standards."

Bush proposes killing of 238 domestic programs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush proposed Monday in the fiscal 1992 budget the killing of 238 domestic programs and a reduction in 109 others to save a combined $12.9 billion, making room for increased spending in other areas. Bush also submitted a list of programs that cost $20 billion that can be consolidated and turned over to the states, and he asked Congress to choose $15 billion in programs for transfer. Budget Director Richard Darman, noting the fixed spending caps in the budget agreement reached late last year, said, "There will be no room for emerging priorities if the programs of old remain immortal."

Additional funds proposed for food programs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House proposed putting an additional $2 billion into public feeding programs Monday for fiscal 1992, including enough money to add 175,000 people to the WIC program that provides extra food for poor women and young children. The increase in funding also would allow the government to meet increased demand for food stamps, the nation's major anti-hunger program. Participation was forecast to climb further due to a projected increase in jobless rates. Overall, the Department of Agriculture would see only a $259 million increase in funding, to $55.7 billion.

NTSB begins investigation of runway collision

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Investigators swarmed through an International Airport hangar Monday, documenting chunks of wreckage that might tell them more about the disastrous runway collision between a jetliner and a commuter plane that took 33 lives. National Transportation Safety Board investigators believe that a non-functioning ground radar system coupled with a hurried and possibly confused air traffic controller contributed to the fiery crash Friday evening. The controller cleared a USAir jet to landing on the same runway where she had directed the SkyWest commuter plane to wait for takeoff.

State funds better protected, gaining more interest—audit

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — More state deposits in banks and savings and loans were insured and collateralized last year and a higher percentage of state funds gained interest, a state audit released Monday showed. The report from Auditor General Robert Cronson said the Illinois treasurer's office had $19.3 million in uninsured and uncollateralized deposits on the final day of fiscal year 1990 (June 30), a significant improvement over the $56.5 million in unsupported deposits on the same day of 1989.

Edgar: States should handle own federal funds

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Illinois Gov. Jim Edgar said Monday President Bush should loosen up the requirements the federal government makes on states so governors can better handle their own financial problems. Edgar, appearing with Gov. Booth Gardner of Washington on NBC's "Today" show, also said he supports a Bush plan to give the governors responsibility for $15 billion in domestic programs. "We'll be happy to have the control," Edgar said.

Linkage of soybean disease, gene studied in joint effort

By Brandi Tipps
Staff Writer

Three SIUC scientists are researching a link between a gene and an increased susceptibility to soybean Sudden Death Syndrome.

Paul Gibson, assistant professor of plant and soil science; Oval Myers, professor of plant and soil science; and Mike Schmidt, assistant scientist in plant and soil science are working jointly with Levi Mansur, assistant professor of agronomy at Iowa State University. SDS is a disease that is in the soil and attacks soybeans through the roots, causing yellow and brown spots on the leaves of the plants, Gibson said.

Gibson said the disease doesn't actually appear until the soybeans start to fill out in the pods.

"If it (SDS) is severe it can cause the pods to drop off or the beans to shrivel inside the pods," he said. At times it can cause the whole plant to die.

Gibson said SDS doesn't harm the safety of using the beans, but it does reduce production by up to 60 percent in severe cases.

By transferring a gene that is resistant to Phytophthora root rot, another soybean killing disease, into already developed varieties of soybean, the plant becomes resistant to the root rot, Gibson said.

In some cases when the gene was transferred, the plants had a greater susceptibility to SDS, he said.

Gibson said the latest research involves the study of a variety of soybeans that showed greater SDS after transferring the gene, he said.

The variety will be tested for genetic linkage between the gene resistant to the root rot and increased susceptibility to SDS, he said.

"We've not specifically figured out how close the linkage is but we have considerable evidence that it is linked," Gibson said.

Iowa State University isolated the particular gene resistant to root rot, Mansur said.

Gibson said researchers at ISU accomplished this task by using newly developed biotechnology techniques.

Gibson said researchers at ISU accomplished this task by using newly developed biotechnology techniques.

"They are techniques using specific enzymes to chop up the chromosomes into small pieces and by doing so they found a certain piece carried the root rot resistance," he said.

The reason the research is necessary is to make it easier to breed varieties that have resistance to both SDS and Phytophthora root rot, Gibson said.

"If we discover where the gene is, it will be easier to breed varieties that are resistant to both diseases," he said.

The project began in 1987, but the researchers have recently accumulated enough evidence to launch a more involved effort, Gibson said.

The money then goes to the promotion and research of soybeans, Gibson said.

It's funded by the Soybean Checkoff Program, Gibson said.

Chancellor to receive report card

By Amy Cooper
Staff Writer

The Illinois Education Association is asking SIU staff members to evaluate the performance of Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit, said David Vitoff, IEA organizer.

The evaluation, sponsored by the IEA chapters at SIUC and SIUE, is designed to reveal faculty and staff feelings about the Office of the Chancellor and discover whether it is an effective part of the administration.

Thomas Britton, vice chancellor for administration, said the IEA has the option to take any kind of survey.

"I'm not sure the survey has the same rigorous structure or analysis as the surveys undertaken by our faculty and staff," he said.

Vitoff said the association has questioned the effectiveness of the Office of the Chancellor for many years.

He said the evaluations allow people to express opinions on if the University resources are well spent.

Hindersman's career rich in student care

AFTER RUNNING THE GAMUT OF JOBS at SIUC for the past 31 years, Charles Hindersman will walk away from his latest one at the end of the month.

A need to help the university when he was called on surpassed the personal gratification of holding only the jobs he liked.

From teaching marketing in 1960 to serving as the vice president for financial affairs in 1991, Hindersman cared more about the work behind the positions than the positions themselves.

And he also cared about the students.

HINDERSMAN'S FIRST LOVE WAS TEACHING, which gave him face-to-face contact with students

But even serving in positions such as head of the Office of Regional Research and Service in 1982 and acting vice president of University Relations, he looked beyond the position to the people he served.

Hindersman remains an example for faculty and administration who want to reach beyond their job requirements. His influence will be felt for years to come.

Opinions from Elsewhere

War buried in absurdities

By dumping millions of barrels of Kuwait's oil into the Persian Gulf, accused war criminal Saddam Hussein has been booked by the United States on an additional charge of "environmental terrorism."

It is one of the absurdities of war for the United States to suggest that threatening the gulf's wildlife is somehow more heinous than killing people with bombs.

It also is absurd to single out the Iraqi tyrant's Scud missile a "terrorist weapon" simply because it is inaccurate and therefore kills innocents.

All weapons of war terrify. None of them has yet been programmed to distinguish between good and evil human targets.

It is fatuous to talk of "surgical strikes," impossibly neat operations that somehow remove only combatants and never kill babies.

Like all wars, this one is rife with such absurdities.

For example, Saddam raped, pillaged and virtually destroyed Kuwait because he coveted the oil-rich emirate. The completion of the destruction of Kuwait could coincide with the forcible expulsion of the invaders by a massive allied force.

The tragedy of Kuwait is reminiscent of the conclusion of the American colonel whose soldiers leveled a Cambodian village. "We had to destroy the village to save it," the colonel explained absurdly.

In this war, some particularly bizarre absurdities abound.

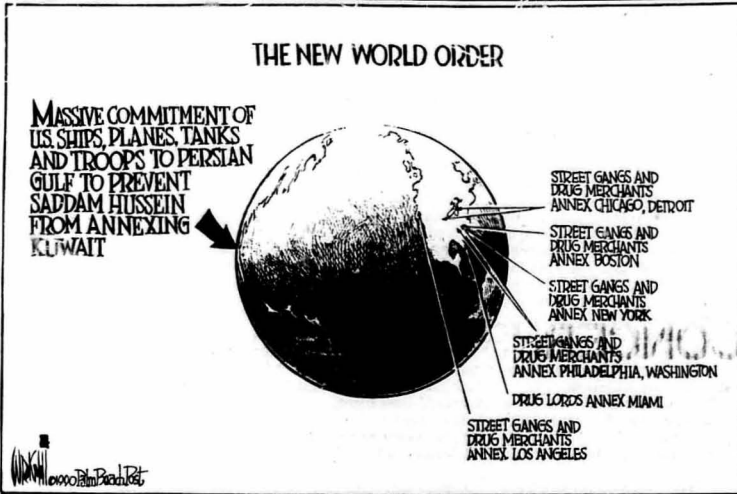

American women are digging fighting holes in a desert kingdom that treats females like chattel.

Some youngsters who may soon die have only the foggiest notion of why they are here.

One grunt indicated he was in the desert because Saddam "has a bad-ass attitude."

One of the more disgusting absurdities of the Gulf War is the way the Bush administration manages the news coverage of it. The Pentagon uses the media as just another weapon in its arsenal.

With an elaborate system of media pools and censorship, the brass has the potential to make itself look good and cover up its mistakes.

Stranger turns war into reality

MY MOTHER always told me never to accept rides from strangers. Until last week, that was easy advice to follow. In all my 22 years, a stranger never offered.

But I remember that cold Tuesday morning. I was walking to my 8 a.m. class, trying not to flit. It was icy. I slipped a letter in a mailbox not too far from where I live, and I heard a horn beep.

When I turned around, he was there. The first stranger that ever rolled down his window to talk to me.

"Do you need a ride?" he asked me, peering out the window. "Are you going to campus? It's way too cold to be walking."

He was right. It had also started to drizzle. Rain or snow, or something. I am almost surprised at how quickly I jumped into his car.

In a matter of seconds, mother's advice was stuffed away, just like the letter in the dark mailbox.

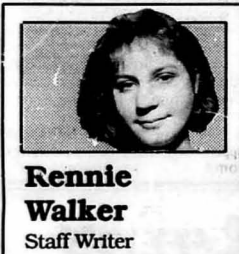

We talked a little. Mostly, he was quiet, and I was suspicious, wondering what this stranger's true intentions were.

WE FOUND out we were neighbors. We live two houses away from each other. I asked his name, he told me and then he said I would probably never see him again.

"I was put on active duty a couple days ago. I have to leave tomorrow," he said.

This was the first stranger, and also the first soldier I have actually talked to who will defend our nation in the Persian Gulf.

The pragmatist in me wanted to know more

Rennie Walker
Staff Writer

WHEN I asked him what city he was going to be stationed, he laughed at my silly question.

"You mean overseas. No city. I'm going to be on the front line, wherever that is," he said.

I am glad I asked the question. I had to hear his answer. I had to let the reality sink in.

We have seen the newscasts. We have read the newspapers. We know there are families out there crying because a son, daughter, mother or father is leaving to fight the Persian Gulf War.

There are many Americans like me without friends or relatives in the Persian Gulf.

But now I know a stranger. I was not watching television or reading a newspaper. A face with a name was sitting beside me, driving me to class.

TODAY the brim of a metal helmet is shielding that face from the hot desert sun.

And the stranger is probably toting a heavy weapon of some sort. Or maybe, the weapon is pointed, aiming for the enemy and firing.

THOUSANDS of miles away Ron is fighting in a war. He does not realize how I was moved, shaken, touched. For me, the war in the Persian Gulf has just been declared.

For those of you without a human connection to the war our country is fighting, you will have one. I promise you. There is no escape.

Perhaps it will be a stranger, offering you a ride, just trying to make the most of his last days in the states. Perhaps it will be a stranger forced to do some living, a person packing up a suitcase of last day memories, before he will be forced to kill the enemy.

The pace of this world is so quick that it will not take long for all of us to have a personal stake in the Persian Gulf War.

Americans are expressing their wishes for a fast, easy war. Get in and get out. A tiny scrape on the knee of our country.

LET US quit hoping for the impossible because it is time to face the truth. This war is about the soldiers we have sent to fight. And it is about every one of us who hugged and kissed them goodbye before they were shipped off to the desert.

In the midst of life going on in America, each of us will be thrown into the painful reality we delivers. We will suffer more than a minor scrape before the battle boiling over in the heat of the desert comes to a close.

Go to classes. Talk to friends. Read newspapers. Business as usual. But there is no escape.

New bar trades drinking for dancing; offers atmosphere instead of attitude

The times they are a-changin'! This Saturday, after a night of wall-to-wall, smoke-filled bar hopping, I had the opportunity of going to a new place in Carbondale.

Instead of the usual warm-beer-slobbering-drunk visits to after-hours parties, I was coerced by a friend to go to the Funky Pickle. Being a pessimist at heart, I certainly didn't think that the Funky Pickle had anything to offer me. I was wrong.

The music was live, the atmosphere was jumpin', yet there weren't any "attitudes" or racial tensions that one might expect from an all-night hip-hop dance club. Everyone had one thing in mind—to have a good time.

Finally, there's an alternative to the drunken hum-drum that Carbondale and college in general seem to revolve around.—Mike Moyer, senior, speech communication

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors. The letters space will be a forum for discussion of issues of public interest. Open, civil dialogue is the aim. Letters may be edited for length and content. Letters of fewer than 250 words will be given preference for publication. Letters will be limited to 300 words. Letters that the editors deem objectionable because of potential libelous material or because extraordinary bad taste will not be published. Access to the letters space may be afforded to as many writers as possible to encourage diversity of points of view. Editors may impose, at their discretion, a limit on the frequency of publication of letters by an author. When a multitude of letters on the same subject are received, editors may select a few letters that are representative of those letters for publication.

Every letter must be signed by its author. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department, others by address and occupation or position appropriate to the nature of their letters. Letters for which authorship cannot be verified will not be published.

citizens to defer travel to the Middle East nation, which has officially maintained neutrality in the war but remains strongly aligned with Iraq. Jordan has been the scene of anti-American demonstrations.

The United States, which already has evacuated all embassy dependents and most of its diplomatic staff from the Amman mission, said increased tensions had heightened the risk to U.S. citizens.

There are now about 6,000 Americans in Jordan, 4,700 of them in Amman, the State Department said. Many have dual citizenship and are married to Jordanian spouses.

In northeastern Saudi Arabia, elements of the 1st Marine Division attacked targets inside

Kuwait with air and artillery bombardments Monday and exchanged fire with Iraqi troops across the border in separate engagements, staff officers said. No U.S. casualties were reported.

In the largest engagement, a battalion-sized task force — about 600 troops — operating close to the border attacked Iraqi ground radar and infantry positions with 155mm artillery near the Umm Gudair oil field in southwestern Kuwait.

At the same time, an Iraqi multiple-launch rocket battery opened fire on targets in Saudi Arabia and was attacked in turn by U.S. Marine aircraft.

The Iraqi rocket site was destroyed with bombs dropped by two FA-18 fighter-bombers. There was no estimate of damage to the radar or infantry positions. The attacks took place about 4 a.m.

Earlier, Marine light armored vehicles exchanged cannon and small-arms fire with Iraqi troops in Kuwait. No casualties were reported.

No U.S. ground troops crossed into Kuwait during the attacks and there were no reports of Iraqi troops or equipment crossing into Saudi Arabia.

"It was a good night. A quiet night," said a 1st Marine Division staff officer.

Marine Maj. Gen. Robert Johnston of the U.S. Central Command in Riyadh said allied warplanes have conducted a total of more than 44,000 air sorties against Iraqi positions since the war began.

state Rep. David Phelps, D-El Dorado, unsatisfied.

"It's no secret where we need to target financial assistance," Phelps said, referring to the growing needs of education and health care.

"It's a conservative increase when you look at the long term, you either pay now or pay later," he said.

Health care has been of major importance for Southern Illinois, and Phelps said it will become a big issue with the proposed cuts to Medicare.

U.S. Rep. Glenn Poshard, D-Carterville, also expressed his concerns because Medicare seems to be the annual target of budget cuts.

"We can't continue to cut Medicare; it's been cut enough," Poshard said. "I think we need to look at other places for cuts rather than going back to Medicare year after year."

Poshard said the proposed $20 billion cut might not turn out the way Bush expects.

"The president proposed even a deeper cut last year, and we were able to cut it back through the budgeting process," he said. "That cut was substantial enough, but if the proposed cut would have gone through it would have hurt a lot more."

Poshard and Phelps both said it was time for education to be on the receiving end of increased funding.

"We've fallen behind at the federal level on education," Poshard said. "The need for funding on education is critical."

Phelps said the inability of federal spending to keep up with educational needs endangers the United States' position in the world market.

"Unless we invest in educational opportunities, we won't be able to compete in the international market," he said.

One of the more controversial proposals in Bush's 1992 budget is turning over several billion dollars in federal programs, such as public aid and education grants, to the states. Without federal support the programs will not work, Poshard said.

"It may not be a bad idea if the money is sent along with the programs," he said. "If the money is missing we've got problems. You can't pass one more thing down to the states."

Dan Egler, spokesman for Gov. Jim Edgar, said the proposal has caught a lot of attention in the governor's office.

"The governor feels it is a good idea, it adds a lot of flexibility," Egler said. "But the flip side is if the state has to continue to monitor Congress to continue future funding. There will not be a mandate without federal dollars."

administration expects to get the full amount for the SDI. And he said it was "a little disingenous" to cite the success of the Patriot missile in the gulf war as justification for the SDI. Foley said the Patriot was not designed as an anti-missile weapon, but was modified for that purpose.

Overall defense spending for military and other functions, such as nuclear production plant cleanup, was lowered by $3.7 billion, from $298.9 billion this year to $295.2 billion next year.

Bush's budget proposed total federal spending of $1.44 trillion and would limit the growth of federal spending to 2.6 percent — below the rate of inflation.

But the budget also contained a record deficit of $318.1 billion for this fiscal year, and projected a deficit of $280.9 billion in fiscal 1992 — assuming spending caps imposed in the 1990 budget accord are adhered to.

The survey asks 12 questions to be rated on a five-point scale regarding the effectiveness of the chancellor's office.

Questions ask if Chancellor Pettit's office consistently has demonstrated independent judgement in dealing with the SIU board of Trustees and if the office has been sensitive and responsive to the ongoing needs of SIU students.

The final question is a fill in the blank, saying "I believe the function of the Chancellor's Office is..."

The evaluation will not affect Pettit's job as chancellor, said Donald Castle, assistant university program coordinator at the University Programming Office.

"It's an awareness kind of thing," he said.

Vitoff said the evaluation provides SIU employees a mechanism to evaluate a top administrator.

"There is no evaluation instrument now that can do that," Vitoff said.

"I think the extent to which the university community makes known its feelings about the performance of the chancellor's office should indicate to that office whether it is fulfilling the true missions of this university," he said.

Completed evaluations are due Feb. 8, and a final report with results from both the SIUE and SIUC surveys will be available by the middle of February, Vitoff said.

He said faculty and staff at SIUE showed a large response to the evaluation.

Pettit could not be reached for comment.

recently has sent out less mail. She could not give specifics on how much mail has been sent in the past and how much will be sent in the future.

She did say that sending fewer pieces of mail should help off-set the increased postal rates.

Hunter said the decrease in mail is because fewer freshmen and sophomores are enrolling and looking for University housing.

Tom McGinnis, associate director of New Student Admission Services, could not give an estimate on the amount of mail his office sends out. The mail is sent by a combination of first-class and bulk rates, he said.

The amount of bulk rate mailings may have to be increased to save money, he said. Bulk rate is cheaper than first-class postage.

Glisson said he was confident the proposal would be reversed by Congress primarily because of public support.

"There's no way they'll continue, the people won't allow it," he said. "That's what is crucial, the people will not allow it."

Glisson said 1992 still is a long way away, and a lot of things proposed in Bush's budget will be changed before it is approved.

"He's just throwing a bone to Congress," Glisson said. "It's not 1992 yet."

NASA budget soaring high despite embarrassing upsets

WASHINGTON (UPI) — NASA, which struggled through a series of setbacks last year, should get an extra $1.8 billion to develop a new launch system, study Earth's environment, explore the solar system and pursue a space station, the White House said Monday.

In his 1992 budget request to Congress, President Bush sought $15.7 billion for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, a 13 percent increase over the nearly $13.9 billion the agency received for 1991.

The White House last year requested $15.2 billion, which represented an increase of $2.9 billion over 1990, a 24 percent hike and the largest proposed dollar increase of any major government agency.

But Congress pared the budget in the mid-1980s of a series of embarrassing setbacks at the agency, including the discovery of the Hubble Space Telescope's defect and the grounding of the space shuttle fleet by fuel leaks.

The problems prompted a special panel of experts led by Norman Augustine to study the future of the agency and make recommendations. The budget proposal makes reference to many of the panel's widely hailed recommendations, including:

- seeking $350 million for the development of a so-called heavy-lift vehicle to take over many of the duties of the space shuttle, which the panel concluded was too unreliable and risky. The cost would be split between NASA and the Department of Defense.

■ the controversial space station Freedom, which is being redesigned to focus on life sciences and microgravity research, would get $2.2 billion, a modest 8 percent increase from last year.

■ a request for $6.4 billion for nine space shuttle missions and money to develop "newer, more capable, more reliable and safer generation of solid rockets" as well as other improvements.

Magazine: Birthright richest womens' asset

LONDON (UPI) — Just one of the world's 20 richest women gained her wealth through her own entrepreneurial skills, with the others gaining their wealth by virtue of being the daughters or widows of very rich men, a British magazine said Monday.

The self-made billionaire is Grete Schickedanz, 78, the German owner of the Quelle mail-order chain. With $1.77 billion, she ranks No. 10 among the richest women, a survey by Harpers and Queen magazine said.

Queen Elizabeth II once again heads the list of wealthy women, with $1.3 billion — a fortune or, which she pays no taxes. Harpers and Queen said that her personal wealth rose by 25 percent last year, to which Buckingham Palace had no comment.

Many of the queen's assets are not hers to sell, so all crown assets were left out of the magazine's calculations. A similar representation was made on behalf of Queen Beatrix of the Netherlands, who would have been ranked third on the list of richest women with $4.9 billion if her crown assets were counted.

The world's 20 richest women, whose average age is 62, are:

1. Queen Elizabeth — $1.3 billion.
2. Johanna Quandt, widow of BMW car magnate — $5.1 billion.
3. Imelda Marcos, widow of deposed Philippines president — $3 billion.
4. Anne Cox Chambers and Barbara Cox Anthony, American publisher's daughters — $2.76 Lillion each.

6. Liliane Bettencourt, French daughter of L'Oreal cosmetics entrepreneur — $2.56 billion.

7. Jacqueline Mars Vogel, American daughter of Mars Inc. candy magnate — $2.36 billion.

8. Alice L. Walton, daughter of American discount retailer Sam Walton — $1.97 billion.

9. Heidi Horton, widow of German department store founder — $1.87 billion.

10. Schickedanz, German mail-order entrepreneur — $1.77 billion.

11. Idina Gardini, daughter of wealthy Italian businessman, wife of another — $1.67 billion.

12. Madeleine Dassault, widow of French aviation magnate — $1.48 billion.

13. Margaret Cargill, American daughter of grain trader — $1.28 billion.

14. Alicia Koplowitz and Esther Koplowitz, daughters of Spanish-based property tycoon — $1.18 billion each.

16. Margaret Hunt Hill, eldest daughter of oil baron — $1.08 billion.

17. Princess Melinda Esterhazy, widow of Austrian prince — $1.06 billion.

18. Chantal Grundig, widow of electronics magnate — $1.04 billion.

19. Jean B. Kroc, widow of McDonald's Corp. founder — $985 million.

20. Mumeno Matsushita, widow of Japanese entrepreneur — $965 million.

Visual messages, product design focus of art exhibit

An exhibit of visual communications and product design works will on displayed at 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., today through Feb. 9 at the Associated Artists Gallery.

Design Initiative, a student design organization, is sponsoring the exhibit.

Mark Arends, Barton Blankenburg and Martha Cropper will judge the students' work. They also will be guest lecturers in the design classrooms during the week.

The exhibit will include visual communications, such as drawing, illustrations and posters, and product designs, such as models and technical works, said Tony Zander, senior from Springfield in art and design.

More than 20 students have entered work in the show, he said.

The gallery is located at 213 S. FINNONS AVE.

Mykola Saporoschenko, professor of physics and astronomy at SIUC, shows equipment at Neckers to Igor V. Gavrilin, a Soviet scientist touring the University.

Soviet dean visits University to start research exchange

By Tiffany Youther
Staff Writer

A VISITOR FROM Vladimir, USSR said the recent changes toward a free enterprise system in the Soviet Union have given him the chance to work toward fulfilling his dreams.

Igor V. Gavrilin, who was invited to SIUC by the Materials Technology Center, is the dean of Vladimir Polytechnic and director of the Institute of Mechanical and Technological Materials in Vladimir. His graduate assistant, Ivan Lendrushevich Andriassian, accompanied him.

ROBERT EDWARDS, assistant professor of foreign languages and literature, served as translator.

Gavrilin was invited to SIUC in an effort to establish a research exchange between SIUC and institutions in the USSR.

He said he hopes to establish contacts with students and professors at SIUC and discuss an exchange of materials research during his stay.

THE PURPOSE OF the Materials Technology Center at SIUC is to support and create high technology jobs in Illinois in the materials industry. The center sponsors faculty research projects in materials technology areas that have potential for rapid and sustained growth.

The SIUC Materials Technology Center supports three types of research. The first is catalysis, which is the study of substances that make reactions faster or more economical.

THE OTHER TWO TYPES of research involve composite materials made from very small fibers such as carbon and graphite and coal-derived materials. Most of the research is done in the colleges of science and engineering.

Gavrilin said the institutions already have made a few faculty and student exchanges, but he would like more opportunities to be offered.

GAVRILIN SAID the situation in Russia is changing very quickly toward a free market economy, and U.S. businessmen have a good chance of finding a job there.

He said the economic changes in the USSR have had a favorable effect on his work. He welcomes the changes and is looking forward to studying business.

He said he has started two research firms in Russia during the last two years, and his big dream is to make enough money from the firms to buy a plane to help conduct business.

"TWO YEARS AGO I was not permitted to sell on the private market," Gavrilin said. "Just now this possibility exists."

He said he was surprised to find that the policy of secrecy surrounding new products in the United States is stricter than that of the USSR, now that changes have been implemented there.

MARGARET GENISIO, industrial/government liaison for the Materials Technology Center, said the visitors will meet with SIUC department heads and professors in many different materials technology fields, such as chemistry, physics, and mechanical engineering.

Gavrilin said Russian and U.S. students are so much alike that he cannot tell the difference until they talk.

HE SAID THE material technology research SIUC is doing also is similar to his, so a good possibility exists for a mutually beneficial relationship between his institutions and SIUC.

Kuwaitis presented inaccurately by media as not caring about war

By Tiffany Youther
Staff Writer

News coverage portraying young Kuwaiti men as indifferent to the Persian Gulf war misrepresents Kuwaiti people, says a Kuwaiti citizen residing in Carbondale.

Adel, a member of Solidarity International for Kuwait, said he wonders why the media focuses on the small percentage of Kuwaitis who are behaving irresponsibly and overlook the thousands who are fighting in the gulf and taking part in organizations working toward the liberation of Kuwait.

"The Kuwaiti students are working very hard to regain their country with whatever means they have," he said.

Solidarity International for Kuwait is one of several public organizations established by people from a number of countries to propagate the cause of Kuwait.

Adel preferred not to give his last name because of threats his family and friends have received.

The "CBS Evening News" and ABC's "Prime Time" Jan. 31 showed coverage of Kuwaiti men dancing in Egyptian night clubs.

One of these men was quoted as saying, "We don't care about politics, I only care for disco."

According to Solidarity International for Kuwait, thousands of Kuwaiti pilots and soldiers are fighting in the gulf with the allied forces.

"One should wonder why some television programs are currently trying to distort the respectful picture of Kuwaitis in this critical time," a report from the solidarity stated. "The media should have covered the daily pain, difficulties and the sufferings of those Kuwaitis imprisoned and made homeless because of the Iraqi occupation and oppression."

Adel said 300 to 400 Kuwaiti refugees are living in Egypt, and 30,000 are stationed in Saudi Arabia, prepared to fight. He said almost all young Kuwaiti men with military training are stationed in the gulf.

"The irresponsible people are really few and they don't represent the Kuwaitis," he said.

Lowering infant death rate top priority on new budget

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Child health and disease prevention are leading priorities of President Bush's proposed 1992 budget that boosts Health and Human Services Department spending by 8 percent, officials said Monday.

However, Bush's new budget contained proposals to cut Medicare by about $20 billion over five years and by about $3 billion next year. The reductions would be made by limiting payments to doctors and hospitals, as well as substantially hiking premiums for senior citizens with annual incomes exceeding $125,000.

Health and Human Service Secretary Louis Sullivan said he was optimistic that the Medicare cuts would not meet the same fate in Congress as the catastrophic health insurance plan, which was repealed after wealthier senior citizens objected to subsidizing care for those with less money.

"We cannot leave a mountain of debt for our grandchildren to pay for," Sullivan said at a news conference.

Unlike most of the 1980s, when allocations for AIDS research, treatment and prevention shot up dramatically, the 1992 budget plan calls for AIDS-related funding simply to keep pace with inflation, rising $120 million to about $2 billion.

Tim McFeeley, executive director of the Human Rights Campaign Fund, an AIDS lobbying group, charged that the administration "is running away from the reality of AIDS," which has killed more than 100,000 Americans since it was first recognized in 1981.

"We believe every dollar spent today on fighting AIDS will save millions of dollars later in productivity, spiraling medical and insurance costs and, most importantly, tens of thousands of human lives," McFeeley said in a statement.

The $525.3 billion spending plan for HHS — which makes up more than one-third of the total federal budget of $1.4 trillion — calls for an increase of about $450 million for programs targeted at reducing infant deaths. The United States has one of the highest infant death rates among industrialized nations, with about 10 deaths per 1,000 live births.

About $171 million of that money would be directed at 10 cities with exceptionally high rates of infant mortality, and to get an early start on this new initiative HHS plans to devote $1 million to the effort from current appropriations, officials said. Sullivan said it has not been decided exactly which 10 cities will get the money.

The budget also proposes to relax income requirements for pregnant women and young children seeking Medicaid — a move expected to increase federal expenditures by $5 million in 1992 and $160 million from 1992 to 1996. "With greater access to health care delivery system, these pregnant women are more likely to deliver healthier babies," the budget request said.

Also part of the drive to lower infant mortality is a $223 million increase for the Agriculture Department to expand the Women, Infants and Children feeding program.

Under the new budget, the HHS allocation for child immunization efforts would rise to $258 million, an increase of $40 million or nearly 19 percent from 1991.

Troops' music mellows out

NORTHERN SAUDI ARABIA (UPI) — War has had a profound effect on soldiers' musical tastes. In the hazy days of the pre-war buildup, songs were loud and up-tempo, a sort of musical companion to the macho blustering of the times.

But workers at the U.S. military's Desert Shield Radio say one of the most requested songs nowadays is Bette Midler's "From a Distance," a tune that deplors all wars.

Since the start of Operation Desert Storm, soldiers also have been asking for slower, more sentimental or reflective tunes.

Occasionally something will prompt the soldiers to demand music that struts. Each time a U.S. Patriot missile takes out an Iraqi Scud over Saudi Arabia, the switchboard at Desert Shield radio lights up with requests.

The tunes in greatest demand? Queen's "Another One Bites the Dust" and Pat Benatar's "Hit Me With Your Best Shot."

War spawns interest in sperm for soldiers

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — With war raging in the Persian Gulf, sperm banks in California are reporting an increase in deposits from military men who fear they may be killed or maimed in battle, it was reported Monday.

"In the past four months we have gotten about 200 to 300 calls from soldiers," Sharon Coe, director of the San Diego office of the Fertility Center of California, told the Los Angeles Times.

She said 100 military men — hoping to preserve their blood lines — have shown up for appointments.

Before the outbreak of war, there were about two appointments a month from military personnel, she said.

The gulf war marks the first time that sperm banking has been widely available to U.S. troops, the Times said.

"Vietnam soldiers didn't have the same options," said Dr. Cappy Rothman, chief of urology at Century City Hospital and co-founder of the California Cryobank.

The California Cryobank is offering a special rate to military men — semen testing and six-month storage for $90 instead of the usual $300.

Most calls to sperm banks are from young couples who have not yet started families, the Times said. About 50 percent of the military calls are from men.

One Marine wife said she made an appointment without telling her husband, who was due to leave for the Middle East.

"I wanted him to (donate sperm) because I don't want to have an only child," said the 26-year-old mother of a 14-month-old son. "I went home and said, 'Guess what?' And he said, 'I don't think so.' I was really disappointed and still am. His first reaction was, 'Men don't do that.'"

Financial woes plague Iraq; debts build up to $80 billion

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — Whatever the outcome of the Persian Gulf war, potentially super-rich Iraq is broke and cannot even afford to pay a dwindling number of suppliers defying U.N. sanctions, Arab officials and economists say.

With debts of more than $80 billion, post-war Iraq also will have to face war reparations claims by the government of Kuwait.

Many hundreds of thousands of Kuwaitis as well as Palestinians, Egyptians, Indians, Pakistanis and other Asians who have suffered as a result of Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait also are preparing to make claims against post-war Iraq.

During the 1980-1988 Iran-Iraq war, Arab states such as Kuwait, Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates picked up the tab for multibillion-dollar Iraqi arms purchases. But no such Arab aid appears forthcoming after this war.

And the Kuwaitis and Saudis are resurrecting old debts that probably would have been written off if Baghdad had not invaded Kuwait.

"Iraq owes Kuwait a total of $64 billion," Kuwaiti Cabinet Affairs Minister and former Health Minister Abdel Rahman al Wadi said recently in Taif, Saudi Arabia.

Al Wadi said $50 billion represented compensation for property stolen or damaged by the Iraqi invasion, including $2 billion in equipment looted from 12 hospitals and $500 million in goods stolen from Kuwaiti oil refineries.

Al Wadi said Iraq's debts to Kuwait before the invasion amounted to $14 billion.

He said Iraq was unable to pay even the dwindling number of companies still shipping goods to Baghdad despite U.N. sanctions imposed after the invasion.

Kuwait also has accused Iraq of causing $5 billion in damage to Kuwait's oil industry. Iraqis had looted or destroyed Kuwaiti oil and storage facilities.

Israel to lay low for now—Shamir

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Israel will maintain its "low profile" in the Persian Gulf war for now and rely on U.S. and allied forces to pound Iraq despite Israel's belief its military could inflict a "harsh blow" against Baghdad, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said Monday.

Shamir, in his first major policy statement since the beginning of the war to the Israeli Knesset, or Parliament, also said Palestinian support for Saddam demonstrated "their ambition ... to destroy Israel" and ruled out any international conference to find a solution to the Palestinian problem.

Shamir's policy of restraint against the missile attacks has been popular at home and abroad but has drawn criticism from right-wing members of his coalition.

Netters 2-1 after first meet

By Cyndi Oberle
Staff Writer

The SIUC men's tennis team is now 2-1 after competing in its first meet of the season this weekend.

The Salukis beat Miami of Ohio 9-0 and University of Maryland 6-5 and lost to host Indiana 6-0.

"That was the best we have ever done in that tournament," men's tennis coach Dick LeFevre said. "Indiana is a really tough team. They were second in the Big 10 last year and this year they have the same line up."

Indiana won all six singles matches and SIUC declined to play doubles due to some injuries it was experiencing, but the Salukis won all their singles and doubles matches against Miami of Ohio.

"I think this is the first time we have beat Miami in many years," LeFevre said. "All my players look really good this year even though we have four new athletes. I didn't know how we'd do considering it was the first meet of the year. It was some pretty brutal competition."

No. 1 seeded player senior Joe Demeterco said he was surprised the team did so well.

"I thought beating Miami and University of Maryland would be tougher than it was," Demeterco said. "Winning those meets gave me and the rest of the team confidence. I guess the best way to get the team in shape is to play tough teams right from the beginning."

Demeterco won two of his three singles matches, only losing to Dave Fagan from Indiana, and Demeterco and his doubles partner No. 3 player sophomore Tim Derouin won one of their doubles matches.

The newest addition to the team is

No. 4 seeded player Jay Merchant. This is his first semester at SIUC after transferring here from American University in Washington, D.C. LeFevre said Merchant played well, even though he hadn't played in six weeks.

Merchant won one singles match and both doubles matches. Merchant's doubles partner is No. 5 seeded player freshman Danny Gonzalez.

"This meet was an experimental meet in terms of our doubles teams," LeFevre said. "But now after having seen them play, I think we'll stick with what we've got."

SIUC's other doubles team consists of No. 2 player sophomore Richard Stenstrom and No. 6 player freshman Kai Kramer.

The Salukis are traveling to Ohio State this weekend for their third meet of the season.

Lawrence said. "Sure, everyone wants to start and show people how they can play, but I just did the best I could for whoever I came for."

"My first year I was just getting into the system and mainly was used for defense. My sophomore year I became a little more of an offensive player and this year I've just tried to combine both of them."

At George County High School in Lucedale, Miss., Lawrence and his late-cousin, Kevy Mcinnia, dominated all who entered the Rebels' gymnasium.

"I guess you could say those were the wonder years," Lawrence said. "Those were probably the best years I've ever had. My cousin played the point and I played the post and together I thought we were unstoppable."

The duo help produce a 75-17 record in Lawrence's last three years in a Rebels' uniform. Lawrence was honored as the best offensive player, best rebounder, and best free throw shooter on the team. He was also named Most Valuable Player on the all-district team.

In his first two seasons in a Saluki uniform, Lawrence has had to make the adjustment to the small forward position. His first year he averaged 3 points and 1.4 rebounds a game. Last season, Lawrence improved those marks to 6 points and 3 rebounds a game and continues to improve.

"Kelvan is a very intense player," Shipley said. "He always gives 110 percent. I think he plays so hard that sometimes he might make a mistake, but not because he messed up, it's because he plays so hard."

Heading into his senior year, Lawrence will be looked upon to lead the young Saluki team.

"He's becoming more vocal all the time and will be a great leader for us next year," Herrin said. "He will definitely be one of our team's co-captains for next season."

Magic OK, back against Clippers

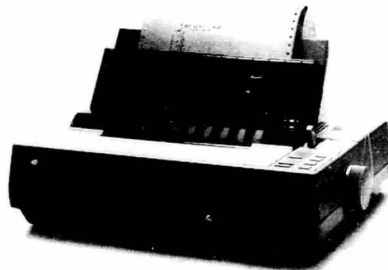

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — Magic Johnson, who suffered a concussion Sunday against the Chicago Bulls, has been released from the hospital after spending the night for observation.

The club announced Monday the three-time NBA MVP will rejoin the team for Tuesday night's game against the Los Angeles Clippers at the Forum.

"All tests were negative and he has permission to resume practice and playing," team doctor Stephen Lombardo said.

Johnson was knocked unconscious and suffered a mild case of amnesia when he was kicked in the head by Chicago's Horace Grant in the third quarter of the Lakers' 99-86 victory.

Baseball cards shuffle to troops in gulf

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In World War II, chocolate and cigarettes were hot trading items among American GIs.

Today, U.S. troops in the Persian Gulf could very well be swapping baseball cards—those covered cardboard rectangles that may rekindle a soldier's childhood memory of the neat sound they made when clipped onto bicycle spokes with mom's clothespins.

Topps, the industry leader in baseball trading cards, stamped the first 5 million cards it printed for the 1991 season with a gold "Operation Desert Shield" logo. The special-edition cards were sent to the Defense Department for shipment to U.S. troops overseas.

The cards, which will not be distributed in the United States, were shipped to the gulf nearly two months before the Pentagon changed the name to "Operation Desert Storm," when allied forces opened its attack on Iraq.

"Several months ago, we thought it would be a good idea to keep the forces in Saudi Arabia in touch with a bit of home and America," said Norman Liss, a spokesman for the Brooklyn, N.Y., company. "Several people at a meeting said it would be a good thing to do and management said let's do it.

"The response has been terrific," said Liss. "We got letters from Defense Secretary (Dick) Cheney and General (Colin) Powell (chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff)."

Liss read from Powell's letter. "Thank you for such a thoughtful and patriotic gesture. I'm sure the cards will become an interesting memento of a very tense and historical period of time in the international affairs of the United States."

The cards were wrapped in their traditional waxpaper packaging, 15 to a pack. But what about that flat stick of pink chewing gum, the object of much scorn over the decades for being brittle and unappealing?

Liss did confirm the gum was shipped with the cards as well—"beautiful, chewy gum," he said with a laugh, acknowledging the dubious reputation of the sweet treat.

Not surprising, the "Operation Desert Shield" cards will be the subject of envy among collectors back in the United States, particularly considering their distribution is limited to the troops.

Also, while there may be 5 million of these cards, that total is small when compared to the 1 billion or more cards Topps plans to print for retail sale this year. And it's almost a sure bet not all the cards sent to the gulf will find their way back to the United States.

"It certainly will be a collector's item for those people who are in the card business or who might want to remember something about the war," said Jay Cox, who works at Jeff's Baseball Corner in Springfield, Va., which specializes in baseball cards.

"With that many made, it's not going to be a rare card, but it will create interest among collectors to get one of each ... in the complete 1991 Topps baseball set," said the 61-year-old Cox, who saw front-line service in the Army during the Korean War.

"It would have more impact on the collectors to know this card was sent to this particular spot and came back," Cox said.

the ineligible list by a baseball commissioner, he would again be eligible to be placed on the ballot for entry into the Hall of Fame. Seventy-five percent of 10-year members of the Baseball Writers Association of America then would have to approve his election.

Last month, the special committee voted 7-3 against Rose. Stack cast one of the dissenting votes, and changed his position Monday.

"We had a lot of discussion this morning, and the discussion convinced me the rules of election should be changed," he said. "If a person is on the ineligible list ... the Hall of Fame is baseball, and I think it should follow suit."

Added Dr. Bobby Brown, president of the American League: "It just didn't make sense to me that baseball could consider giving its highest honor to someone on the ineligible list. It boiled down to that.

"The offenses weren't really part of the process, merely the fact his name is on the ineligible list. Why he was on the list didn't make that much of a difference."

The board considered the rules change for more than an hour during its mid-winter meeting, and then cast its unanimous voice vote. Stack said there was some mention that a unanimous vote would be desirable, but there was no move to follow through on this.

"Tonight (Saturday) was probably the most competition we've had all year," Siracusano said. "I chose to do harder dives for more points, even though I was already in first place. I knew somebody else could do harder dives."

DuBois had a stress fracture in her foot that kept her out of the water for seven weeks. She said she thought it would take more time to qualify for the NCAA's.

"I'm coming off of a broken foot and I've only been back in the water for two weeks," she said. "Coming over the (qualifying) score by 25 points, I feel I've done really well."

The NCAA zones are a step before the NCAA nationals. If Siracusano and DuBois make zones, they will compete in NCAA finals which will take place March 28 through 30 in Austin, Texas for the men and March 21 through 23 in Indianapolis, Ind., for the women.

The men's team edged out the University of Nebraska by a score of 1068 to 1044.5. At the end of action Saturday night, the men's team had a deficit of 188.5 points to overcome for the win.

Events that put the team ahead were the 100 freestyle won by sophomore Brian Gargan, the 200 breaststroke (freshman Matt Hollingsworth placed second), the 1-meter diving won by Siracusano and the 400 free relay won by Gargan, senior Chris Gally, senior David Morovitz and junior Deryl Leubner.

The women's team led the Invite all the way. At the end of action Friday evening, the women's team led Drury College 218 to 170 and at the end of play Saturday night 591 to 456. SIUC beat out Drury College by 228 points. The final score was 952 to 724.

In addition to the University of Nebraska, the men competed against Ball State, Western Kentucky and the University of Cincinnati. The women's team competed against Vanderbilt and the University of Cincinnati, in addition to Drury.

In the men's meet, Ball State came in third with a score of 730.5; Western Kentucky, fourth at 431; and the University of Cincinnati, fifth with a score of 100.

In the women's contest, Vanderbilt came in third with a score of 615 and the University of Cincinnati, fourth with a score of 68.

"We were real proud of it," said coach Doug Ingram. "It's important for us to swim well at home when we face tough competition."

Junior Tony Mahaira set a new record of :52.31 winning the 100-yard freestyle.

The women had 19 first and second-place times. Junior Julie Hosier placed first in the 100 butterfly. Junior Nancy Schmidtkofer won the 50 freestyle. Schmidtkofer, Mahaira, Hosier and senior Janet Patrick won the 800 free relay finals and the 400 and 200 medley finals, setting a new meet record in the 200 of 1:50.50.

The men tallied 11 first and second-place times. Senior Eric Bradac won first in the 1650-yard finals. Gally placed first in the 100 butterfly (:50.07) and 200 butterfly (1:54.68). V-Meng Tan also placed first in the 200 butterfly.

catcher Darrin Barton said. "He has given so much to the game of baseball, the game should give something back to him. Rose deserves to be in the Hall of Fame."

Assistant coach Ken Henderson said Rose is his all-time favorite player and players should be judged on their performance on the field and what they do while they are playing, not what they do after.

"He is one of the greatest players ever to play the game," Henderson said. "He shouldn't be denied. He certainly has Hall of Fame credentials."

Senior pitcher Dale Meyer also agreed it isn't fair for the board of directors to ban Rose for something that happened off the playing field.

"It is not justifiable to take away his status in the Hall of Fame," Meyer said. "He is one of the best players, some even say he is the best player that ever lived, and for him not to be admitted into the Hall of Fame just isn't fair."

Assistant coach Frank Hunsaker said they are just using Rose as an example for the rest of the baseball world and the reason for his denial is the Hall of Fame does not want such a black mark in its history.

"He was the leading player in his and deserves a spot in the Hall of Fame," Hunsaker said. "It is as simple as that. They should not have to bring up his gambling to determine if he gets in or not."

Sophomore right fielder Mark Grace said he strongly disagrees with the action.

"He was not betting when he was getting the record-breaking hits," Grace said. "So I think what happens after his career is over, is his business and it should not affect whether or not he gets admitted into the Hall of Fame."

Rose will be denied admittance into the Hall of Fame as long as he is banned from the game of baseball. Rose was allowed to apply for reinstatement Aug. 23 but has not done so yet.
