SIUC employee contracts meningitis

By Christy Gutowski
General Assignment Writer

A 56-year-old SIUC employee at Grinnell Hall was diagnosed with bacterial meningitis Wednesday and is being treated at Memorial Hospital of Carbondale, officials said.

The kitchen employee last reported to work Saturday and is listed in critical condition.

Meningitis, the inflammation of the membranes covering the brain and spinal cord, may be caused by several bacteria, viruses or other microscopic organisms.

Only individuals who came in "very" close contact with the employee are at risk of catching the illness, said Mary Pehlmann, interim chief of staff at SIUC's Student Health Program.

"Meningitis is not easy to get," she said. "It is not food born."

Though the employee worked in food service, Pohlmann said he did not actually handle or prepare the food.

The bacteria enters the body through the nose and mouth and can be spread by sneezing and coughing or by direct contact.

"Close contact is defined as someone who has spent four to five hours per day for the past week with the ill person," Pohlmann said.

SIUC has interviewed 18 employees and 24 student workers who have been in close contact with the employee in the past 10 days.

Symptoms of Meningitis

- severe headaches
- at least 101-degree fever
- stiffness in neck, back and shoulders
- confusion
- sleepiness

Source: Illinois Department of Public Health

Health officials said they are confident the employee did not infect co-workers.

"The most obvious answer is that he acquired it from an asymptomatic carrier," Pohlmann said.

The bacteria can live in a person's nose or throat without ever causing illness, she said.

The bacteria normally stay in the nose and throat for a few days and then disappear without causing illness.

Most patients recover from the illness when caught in an early stage, through antibiotics treatment.

But the meningococcus bacteria, when reaching the brain or spinal cord, can cause severe inflammation or meningitis.

The disease is fatal in almost half the cases left untreated.

The illness becomes increasingly serious when it becomes evasive and enters the blood stream, John Ottolini, director of public health for Region V in Marion.

"There were no cases of bacterial meningitis reported in the region last year," Ottolini said.

Survivors may be left with disabilities such as deafness and paralysis if the illness is not treated promptly.

Meningitis is particularly dangerous on college campuses because it is a communicable disease. The bacteria can be transmitted more easily in crowded quarters.

"There seems to be a connection between meningitis and the age group of college students," Ottolini said.

U.S. boosts aid plan for former USSR

By Todd Welvaert
Politics Writer

One year after the Persian Gulf War ended, the United States will undertake Operation Provide Hope which will deliver airlifts of surplus food, medicine and goods from Operation Desert Storm to problem spots in the Commonwealth of Independent States.

Secretary of State James Baker said detailed plans for aid to the newly formed states will begin Monday.

The six point plan targets cities and regions in the 12 state Independent Commonwealth where food, shelter and medical shortages are rampant.

"In our meetings, 47 nations and seven international organizations have rolled up their sleeves," Baker said in a press release. "They have gotten down to work and have produced some tangible results."

The first part of the plan entails United States Air Force C-5s flying over 54 missions out of the Rhein-Main Air Base in Frankfurt, delivering excess Department of

New alliance

Teamsters side with Democrats to attempt to defeat Bush

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Newly elected Teamsters President Ronald Carey said Wednesday the nation's second-largest labor union will break its allegiance to the Republican Party and join most other unions in seeking a Democrat to defeat President Bush.

Speaking to reporters for the first time since his inauguration Saturday, Carey called an endorsement of Bush "absolutely out."

He said the Teamsters will try to join their efforts with other labor organizations. He said he hoped his union could back a particular Democrat by the end of February.

"We have to pool all of our resources on a consistent basis, network back and get behind a candidate who is going to treat labor fair," said Carey.

Killer fire causes delay in Tyson trial

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — A deadly fire at the hotel housing jurors in the Mike Tyson rape trial forced cancellation of Wednesday's court session. The trial is to resume Thursday amid speculation the former heavyweight champion might then testify in his own defense.

The fire at the downtown Athletic Club, which left three dead and 10 injured, two critically, came just hours after the prosecution rested its case and defense attorneys began calling witnesses.

Marion County Superior Judge Patricia Gi.Torc and defense and prosecution attorneys will interview each the jurors individually Thursday to determine if the fire affected their ability to consider the case, court spokesman Joe Champion said. Champion said no motions for mistrial have yet been filed.

Tyson, 25, is on trial for rape and deviate criminal conduct in the July 19 incident. A Miss Black America contestant says Tyson raped her in his suite at the Canterbury Hotel. Gifford Tuesday threw out a charge of confinement against Tyson. If convicted, Tyson faces up to 60 years in prison.

The fire provided defense attorneys with a reason to seek a mistrial. Local television stations reported residents of a nearby apartment building shouted their support for Tyson as jurors huddled outside the burning hotel.

Bailiffs and a Marion County sheriff's deputy kept the jurors together and away from other people on a sidewalk outside the Athletic Club.

The 12 jurors and three alternates were allowed to sleep late Wednesday after they were taken to other quarters. They returned to the Athletic Club to retrieve their clothes around midday.

Security was heightened at the City-County Building, although court officials denied the fire caused it. Court spokesman Mark Shaw said a bomb-sniffing dog made a sweep of the court area and a metal detector was placed near the entrance to the courtroom.

Dawgs strive to stay No. 1, stop losses

By James T. Rendulich
Sports Writer

With hopes of remaining in a first place tie in the Missouri Valley Conference and preventing a three-game skid, SIUC's men's basketball will travel to Indiana State to battle the Sycamores Thursday.

The Dawgs, who are coming off of two consecutive losses to Northern Iowa and Southwest Missouri State, are 14-4 overall, 7-2 in the conference and in a tie with Tulsa.

Despite beating Indiana State earlier this year 74-57 and holding a career record of 45-25 against the Sycamores, head coach Rich Herrin said he is wary of the Sycamores.

"This year's and last year's squads are the two best teams they have had since I've been here," Herrin said. "They are probably the best shooting team that we will see all year."

The Sycamores, who are in a second place tie with Illinois State at 6-3 in MVC play, are coming off two straight road victories. On Saturday they edged Drake 61-59 and on Monday they downed Northern Iowa 65-54.

"Right now, they are playing the best ball they have played all year," Herrin said.

Despite the two straight losses and the Saluki's 61 points per game average the last three games, Herrin said he sees no need for changing his game plan.

"We are still playing good ball but we are having some lapses and are not measuring up to the yardstick we need to," Herrin said.

Germany to stand united: Chancellor: Athletes to set standards of modesty in Olympic team's first unification after 28 years

BONN, Germany (UPI) — Chancellor Helmut Kohl says Germany has reason to celebrate its first united Olympic team in 28 years, but it should do so with all modesty.

"For the first time since 1964 German athletes join together in one team. This is the result of unification, and I believe that the team will be carried by this feeling of solidarity," Kohl said in a report by the German news agency DPA.

"I am optimistic that the athletes will prove their world class during the Games.

"But despite the high expectations on the sporting sector modesty suits us well."

Bjorn Engholm, who will run for chancellor for the Social democrats at the next elections, shared Kohl's views.

"The appearance of an all-German team demonstrates the normality of unification," he said.

"The athletes actively take part in shaping Germany's image in the world. The can set new standards with persistence and modesty, with fairness and cheerfulness."

Berlin's mayor Eberhard Diepgen hopes the team's appearance in Albertville also helps his city's bid for the 2000 Summer Games.

"The appearance of the first united team since 1964 is excellent publicity for the new Germany — and of course for Berlin's bid."

The old and new German soccer coaches, Franz Beckenbauer and Bertl Vogts, stressed the importance of a light-hearted approach.

"We should not put too much pressure on the athletes in Albertville," Vogts told DPA. "One can also be happy with a fourth place."

Added Beckenbauer: "I hope for nice and joyful Games because too much seriousness often does such big events no good."

Meanwhile, sprinter Katrin Krabbe, a double gold medalist at the 1991 World Championships in Tokyo, can hardly wait for the Barcelona Olympics this summer.

"I will watch everything on television," said the former East German.

"And it gives me the shivers knowing that it will be my turn at the Olympics in half a year."

Simmons has been director of player development for the St.

The SIUC women's basketball team will hit the road in a tough territory—Iowa.

The Salukis, 13-4, return to the road with a five-game win streak on their dates to Cedar Falls to play Northern Iowa, 1-16, and in Des Moines to play Drake, 7-10.

Northern Iowa has not beaten SIUC in 17 games but the Panthers played the Salukis to a 6-point game Jan. 11 at the Arena losing 67-59. The Salukis smashed Drake Jan. 9, 74-47, but the Bulldogs have the homecourt advantage. SIUC's career record at Des Moines is 3-9, and the Salukis are 13-14 overall against Drake.

Both teams are at the bottom of the Gateway this season, but coach Cindy Scott said she expects them to be fierce competition.

Council approves request; zone widened for Wal-Mart

By Teri Lynn Carlock
City Writer

The Carbondale City Council voted Tuesday night to approve the four-acre technical correction of the Enterprise Zone, which helps pave the way for a new Wal-Mart on Carbondale's east side.

Jim Sachs, a representative of Leo Eisenberg and Associates of St. Louis, said the boundary change would alleviate the parking problems of the store.

"We do not want to be boxed in and have parking problems like the present store does," he said.

But Richard Parrish, owner of a portion of the land under consideration for the future site of the Wal-Mart, said he does not approve of the boundary change.

Parrish said David Hocker and Associates of Kentucky, the other developer considering building a Wal-Mart, already own enough land in the area.

Parrish said maybe this time the developer should be turned down.

"The four-acre expansion will cost about $1.5 to 2 million to the effective tax agencies involved," he said. "There is a great deal of Enterprise Zone property available, why should the City expand more?"

Councilman John Yow said it would be a mistake to turn down the request made by Wal-Mart.

"It is hard for me not to support the expansion and risk losing a $3-million investment in Carbondale," he said.

Sangamon State University workers agree on Board of Regents contract

By Brandi Tipps
Administration Writer

Negotiators for Sangamon State University and the university chapters of the faculty, clerical and service workers union reached a tentative agreement on wages and benefits at noon Wednesday, postponing indefinitely a strike.

Details of the agreement could not be discussed because the agreement is subject to ratification by the union, said Cheryl Peck, assistant to Illinois Board of Regents' Chancellor Roderick Groves.

The Illinois Board of Regents is the governing board for SSU, Illinois State in Normal and Northern Illinois University in Dekalb.

Funding for the wage and benefits increases will be raised by internal reallocation through delayed benefit payments, unfilled vacant positions, limitations on travel expenditures and further restrictions on equipment purchases, according to a statement released by the university Wednesday.

"I do not know all the terms of the agreement but some elements probably will be retroactive," said Ron Ettinger, legislative director for University Professionals of Illinois.

An internal reallocation for fiscal year 1993 will be undertaken in consultation with the University Budget Advisory Committee, the statement said.

Ettinger said Tuesday that the "logjam" in the negotiations had broken.

The faculty at SSU has been working without a contract since last August, Peck said. When negotiations started the union sought a salary increase of 5 percent, she said.

A dozen SSU faculty members protested at last week's BOR meeting at Normal after

IT WOULD BE NICE to think our student leaders know what is going on and will inform students of both positive and negative happenings that will affect them. However, student representatives were left in la-la land when yet another rescission slipped in and took up to $140 worth of credit away from students receiving financial aid.

THE CUTS SEEM TO BE A LAST-MINUTE decision that the Illinois Student Assistance Commission threw in to solve a problem. Voting in an emergency meeting, ISAC notified universities Jan. 29 of the meeting and potential reductions and then voted two days later. Administrators learned of the decisions the day of the vote, but the commission did not release any public information until Feb. 3.

ALTHOUGH THE CUTS by the ISAC do not seem fair, and the commission deserves much of the blame, one must question where the SIUC student leaders were during these decisions.

Why didn't SIUC's outspoken leaders challenge the cuts and create public outrage, or at least inform students so they could plan and budget for the impending cuts? At the University level, administrators give the college deans time to prepare a reduced budget.

ISAC CLAIMS TO HAVE SENT notification to the University about the meeting. USG leaders say they do not receive agenda notices. So the question remains as to who knew about these cuts, and who should have known. Pamela Britton, financial aid director, was the first person to be notified of the cuts and she didn't know until the vote already had been taken. The two days forewarning was at least better than the early 1980s incident when ISAC voted a similar cut which was not announced until May.

THE ILLINOIS STUDENT ASSOCIATION is the watchdog agency monitoring critical decisions affecting Illinois students. USG President Jack Sullivan said ISA "didn't tell us crap" about the MAP cuts. Our leaders claim to have been left out in the cold while state bureaucrats decided students' fate.

On the homefront, Graduate and Professional Student Council and Undergraduate Student Government leaders have been arguing whether undergraduates should receive 66.6 percent or 84 percent of representation in ISA, the organization that left students unrepresented when the MAP funds were cut.

ISAC VOTED JAN. 31 for the MAP cuts. USG considered a resolution concerning the cuts Wednesday. This type of after-the-fact response will do nothing but whimper disapproval—a disapproval already being voiced much louder among students in the loan lines at Woody Hall.

Where is the public criticism of this policy? Where are the emergency sessions to propose legislative attacks on the decision? Student leaders need to ensure students that they are doing all in their power to improve financial shortfalls and protect costs from getting any higher. Students are tired of having money taken out of their pockets; student leaders should be wary not to make the students tired of them.

TRUE, THERE HAVE been positive accomplishments by student leaders. Sullivan proclaimed the battle that ended in the abolition of fall break a major victory for students—too bad the financial war is being lost.

Letters to the Editor

GPSC refuses to practice art of compromise

Ideally, all people would respect what they asked for. However, college students today realize that "you can't always get what you want." Unfortunately, the leadership of the Graduate and Professional Student Council has yet to learn this basic lesson of life.

The continuing conflict between the GPSC and the Illinois Student Association illustrates certain student government leaders' unwillingness to compromise in a situation where compromise is necessary.

Students in Illinois higher education are losing the funding battle in the state legislature. It is through organizations such as ISA that university students have an avenue to voice their opinions and concerns on higher education funding. With SIUC facing a 5 to 10 percent tuition increase and a 3 percent rescission of state funding, it is time to set aside personal and organizational interests and practice the democratic art of compromise.

In GPSC's "request" for a separate vote in ISA, GPSC is perpetuating factionalism of student government and statewide student activism, and is causing SIUC to lose representation on the ISA board. During the present recessionary times, with continuing cuts being made in higher education funding, it is imperative that student government have a united, strong leadership that is willing to work together for a common cause.

In the end, it is each individual student that suffers. When personal motives of student government leaders are placed before the interests of their constituents, intra-organizational bickering only prevents concentration on the issues at hand; those being securing the greatest percent for higher education funding possible and capping tuition increases before a college education is out of reach to all but a select few.—Jill Hein, senior, speech communication.

Quebec separation would ease tensions

Jackie Spinner's column on Quebec was interesting but misleading. First, she is simply wrong in asserting that French-Canadians live in a society in which "the French must learn English to participate in their own economy." The official language of the Quebec government is French. All communications with that government must be in French. In practice, it is impossible to find employment in Quebec unless one is fluent in French. By law, most children of immigrants to Quebec must be educated in French.

Most of the remaining English speakers in Quebec would like, in Ms. Spinner's words, "to be full participants in [a Quebec] in which linguistic diversity and equality is fostered." That desire is often thwarted by what one observer recently described as an "increasingly intolerant and xenophobic government that is busily tightening its autocratic powers in every sphere."

While the Quebec government has pursued a French-only course, the rest of Canada has moved toward bilingualism. The Canadian government itself is officially bilingual. All government documents are printed in both French and English.

Ms. Spinner suggests that

The real definition of 'recycled'

I am glad to see the DE is using recycled newsprint to lower the environmental impact of its paper use, but the story confused important issues about recycling.

The words recyclable and recycled are used interchangeably. It is important that people realize the difference. Recycled products are made of materials that have been used before. Recyclable is a claim that manufacturers will make of almost any product, no matter how difficult it might be to recycle.

There was no mention made of the post-consumer content of the recycled paper that was not purchased. Usually if it is not Canada would suffer a "stunning loss with the departure of its French province." However, many English-speaking Canadians are willing to suffer that loss because they are fed up with what they see as Quebec's hypocrisy and endless demands. (Contrary to the implications in Ms. Spinner's column, Canadians as a whole did not vote in a referendum on Quebec secession. Rather, Quebecers voted in 1980 on a vaguely worded referendum on something called sovereignty association. That referendum was defeated by a 60 percent no vote.) Ms. Spinner contends that cultural diversity breeds acceptance. However, as recent events in the former Soviet Union demonstrate, linguistic diversity within a single nation often leads to strife.

Independence for Quebec could end centuries of strife over language and culture. Perhaps the rest of Canada will never, as Ms. Spinner states, be "forced to learn French culture, to understand the language of its people." But forcing things on people generally breeds resentment, resistance, and strife, not tolerance, acceptance, and understanding as Ms. Spinner suggests.—William A. Schroeder, professor of law.

The University is required by law to recycle 40 percent of its waste stream by the year 2000, and will have to do better with easily recyclable materials to meet that goal. If the University wants a market for its own recycling goals, 60 to 80 percent post-consumer content should be required for all paper products the University buys.—Jackie C. MENINGITIS, from Page 1

Meningitis patients suffer from severe headaches, fever, and stiffness in the neck, back and shoulders. Other symptoms include nausea, vomiting, aversion to bright light, confusion and sleepiness. A skin rash of tiny bright red spots frequently occurs.

As the disease progresses, patients may have seizures and decreased alertness, eventually leading to coma.

The University of Illinois had an outbreak of meningitis cases last year, including two deaths last February.

Four other students had meningitis last semester, but have since recovered.

The most recent outbreak of meningitis was U of I student David Tunstall, who was diagnosed with a meningitis-related blood infection on Jan. 29. Now he is listed in serious but stable condition.

The outbreak of meningitis at U of I caused several SIUC students to express concern at an information meeting Wednesday night held at Grinnell Hall.

"Panicking will only make the problem worse," said Corey Bond, a SIUC freshman from Decatur.

"With all the information the university is providing, hopefully students will react responsible," he said.

Information will be available at the Student Health Assessment Center and dormitory health advocate offices. Students are encouraged to contact John Otolini's office at 997-4371, the Jackson County Health Department at 684-3143, and SIUC Student Health Service at 453-3311 for more information

The Teamsters, with 1.5 million members, the largest union in the nation behind the National Education Association, has been one of the few unions in the past several decades to support Republican presidential candidates including Richard Nixon, Ronald Reagan and Bush.

"We've supported some folks during the Reagan-Bush era, and let me ask you, 'What have we gotten,'" Carey said.

"That's why we have to get behind a candidate, a Democratic candidate," he stated.

Carey said he met Tuesday night with AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland, who the Teamsters have often been at odds with in the past, to discuss a presidential endorsement among other issues.

A former president of a local representing 6,600 United Parcel Service employees in New York City and Long Island, Carey, 55, was elected in December to head the International Brotherhood of Teamsters in the 88-year-old organization's first rank-and-file election.

Defense food and medical supplies. The DOD will deliver 38.4 million pounds of food from Operation Desert Storm.

These stocks will help alleviate some of the food shortages in Donbass, Volga, Urals and Kuzbass and industrial regions like St. Petersburg, Moscow Arkhangelsk, Murmansk and Petrazavodsk.

The United States already has pledged more than $165 million in immediate relief, with additional food grants to protect the new market pending.

The air lifts of food and medical supplies are the first part of Operation Provide Hope, technical assistance, investment plans will follow. Within the next five years Operation Provide Hope also will supply low-cost food storage and U.S. Department of Agriculture extension services to teach farmers advanced techniques in food production. In addition to the technical aid, the Department of Commerce will offer incentives to American businessmen for investment in the Commonwealth of Independent States.

The United States also will initiate a program offering technical assistance in public policy and training at all levels of the government. The program will provide training for newly elected state, regional and local government officials.

The U.S. Coal industry, the AFL-CIO and several members of the railroad system will help relieve logistical bottlenecks, help solve distribution problems and increase mine safety.

"The immediate aid will allow them to live through this winter, if they can make it to April the reforms will catch on," said Ikua Chou, SIUC retired political science professor. "The technical assistance and teaching programs may be more important to them in the long run. They have labored under a failing system for 70 years that was very unproductive; now they must relearn."

Chou said for the new states to succeed, the industrialized nations of the world must develop a plan similar to the Marshall Plan that helped the European nations recover after World War II.

"Their whole system broke down," Chou said. "We cannot comprehend the sweeping changes going on right now."

"We now have a chance for true peace," he said. This will allow disputes to be settled in the World Court. These changes will also affect us, it may mean the price for maintaining peace will cost more than being constantly prepared for war."

taking the position, Hoffner said.

"I have nothing but good things to say about progress in Carbondale," he said. "I have received overwhelming support from this community which made our accomplishments possible."

Clayton's executive recruitment firm notified Hoffner of the job opening last November. He was offered the position last Wednesday and formally accepted it Sunday.

"It was a very difficult decision because there's a lot going on in Carbondale," Hoffner said. "There's a lot of activity in this community, and I expect that level of activity will continue."

"But I haven't had any second thoughts or regrets," he said. "I am glad the decision was made, and I am very excited about the opportunity because the city of Clayton is the type of community that really often comes along only once in one's career."

Clayton, the county-seat of St. Louis County, is consistently ranked as the No. 1 community in the region in overall quality of life, Hoffner said.

Hoffner was selected unanimously by the Clayton Board of Aldermen from a pool of 145 applicants, said Anthony Cuneo, Clayton's mayor pro tem.

"We chose Steve because of his experience in economic development and budgetary controls, preparation and presentation," he said.

Hoffner also was chosen for his development of the I-Team, a participatory management technique that enables employees to have a say about their job, Cuneo said.

The city of Clayton was looking for a city manager who would be comfortable with citizens' comments and have a high level of citizen involvement, and Hoffner meets that criteria, Cuneo said.

"He is a very bright fellow and quickly picked up on the central issues in our city," he said. "We look forward to him coming in April."

Hoffner views his decision of going to Clayton as a "career advancement" and does not feel he is leaving Carbondale in a bad time, he said.

"There is never a good time for a city manager to leave the city—there is always some issue or some major project that needs to be worked on," he said. "But I don't feel I'm leaving the city in a lurch."

Carbondale Mayor Neil Dillard said Hoffner is a very hard-working and dedicated city manager, and city officials will be sad to see him go.

"We have been well-served for the past three years by Steve Hoffner and are certainly sorry to see him go, but this is a wonderful opportunity for him and his family," he said. "Clayton is getting an outstanding and talented individual."

Hoffner has provided a solid base on which the city can continue to build after he leaves, Dillard said.

Carbondale Councilman John Yow said Hoffner's decision to leave was not a surprise.

"He is a young man and the type of person who looks for challenges," he said. "I didn't think he would stay in Carbondale over four years."

Hoffner has made many contributions to Carbondale since he became city manager, Yow said.

"He has done things for Carbondale that other city managers have not," he said. "I am sure he will be successful in Clayton as well."

Campus drive for blood falling short of goal

Low turnout for the SIUC blood drive this week is jeopardizing the region's blood supply level, according to the coordinator for Southern Illinois Red Cross blood drives.

Vivian Ugent said four days into the drive only 718 units of blood have been collected, but 2,000 units are needed to restore the area's supply.

The drive continues Thursday and Friday from 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in the Student Center Ballroom and Friday from 2:30 to 7:30 p.m. at the Student Recreation Center.

Scientists find defect that causes MD

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A genetic defect causing the most common adult form of muscular dystrophy has been pinpointed, advancing research toward a treatment and making earlier diagnosis possible, scientists said Wednesday.

A team of researchers from the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory and four other institutions said myotonic dystrophy, which causes muscle weakness and wasting, cataracts, heart disease and other complications, results from an abnormally large segment of DNA.

Persons with the disease often have difficulty relaxing muscles, such as unclenching a fist.

Linking a specific genetic defect makes possible a relatively simple blood test for a disease that can have no clinical symptoms, the researchers said. In turn, patients can be counseled about chances of having a baby with myotonic dystrophy.

Even though this form of muscular dystrophy has widely variable symptoms and in many cases none that are noticeable, the scientists said the genetic defect was found in all cases of myotonic dystrophy they studied.

"This has narrowed the defect down — now there are more accurate diagnoses. It allows us to learn how the expression of the gene might be interrupted (with drugs or genetic therapy)," said Anthony Carrano, director of the Human Genome Center at Lawrence Livermore.

Molecular geneticist Pieter de Jong said it appeared that the disease was more severe in persons whose abnormal DNA segment was longer, suggesting a predictive capability.

"Maybe we can predict how severe the disease will be and drugs could be administered early on," he said.

The discovery also enables doctors to identify persons who have the genetic defect but had not developed symptoms. Such information could be helpful to couples considering having children.

"If it can be detected (before any symptoms appear,) a family can be counseled about bearing children," De Jong said.

Researchers now can reproduce the genetic material linked with myotonic dystrophy, enabling many other scientists to join the search for treatments.

"They can make it by gallons," said Dr. James Mason, assistant secretary of the Health and Human Services Department.

Spike Lee leads new group of black directors with films

By Ronn Byrd
Entertainment Writer

Film director Spike Lee has forced society to re-examine its color lines—but the messages he sends through his films are not always as clear as black and white.

Mark Canton, executive vice president at Warner Bros., said Lee has made his mark in the film industry.

"Spike put this trend in vogue," he said. "His talent opened the door for others."

Since Lee made his first film, "She's Gotta have It," the film industry and the public have opened their eyes to the messages—messages from the heart of the leading African-American film director.

Mario Van Peebles, director of "New Jack City," said Lee led the way for him.

"If it weren't for Spike Lee," Peebles said, "I wouldn't be here."

While earning a living at a film distribution company, Lee worked on his first film, "She's Gotta have It." The budget, mostly in deferred payments, totaled $175,000.

"She's Gotta Have It" drew criticism for its portrayal of a young black woman who juggles relationships with three different men.

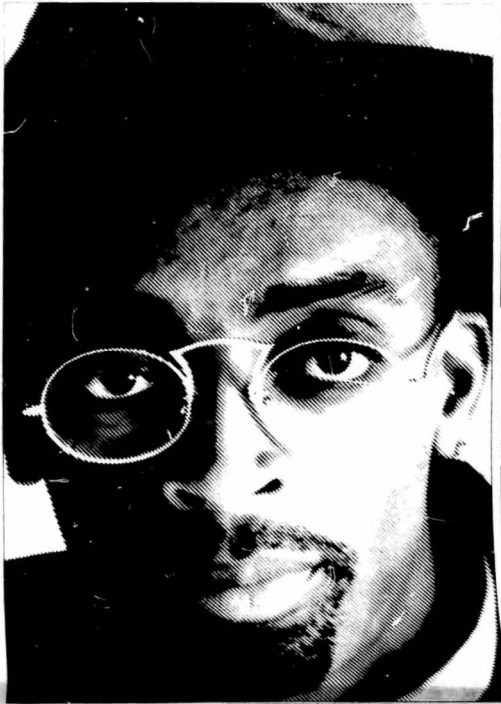

"I wanted to tell the story of a black woman who was living her life as a man. Except that she was honest about it," Lee said in an interview with Time magazine.

But Chicago Tribune film critic Dave Kehr said Lee's status may not be deserved.

"I think he's a bit over-rated," Kehr said. "He's a little bit irresponsible. His work is stylistically shallow and somewhat hollow."

Lee began his film career in his senior year at Morehouse College in Atlanta, Georgia. After graduation in 1979 Lee was admitted to New York University Graduate Film School.

Lee generated the first of many controversies to come at the film school. He turned in "The Answer," a 20-minute parody in which a black screenwriter is hired to rewrite D. W. Griffith's classic "Birth of a Nation." He almost was not asked to return to the film school.

Spike Lee

Lee's master film thesis was his short "Joe's Bed-Sty Barber Shop: We Cut Heads," for which he received the Student Academy Award.

Lee's follow-up to "She's Gotta Have It" was "School Daze," which was inspired by his experiences at Morehouse. Again, Lee received criticism for his satire of social climbing at a black college.

"You hear stuff about the oil or people holding us back," Lee said. "But it's often our own black folk that get down on us."

"School Daze" recently was shown on the FOX Network, but the commercials used had little to do with the actual film.

"What interested me was the promotion FOX used," said SIUC

Student Development Director Harriet Wilson Barlow. "The main focus was on black pledging. That's not what it is about."

"Do the Right Thing" came next and it was this film that brought Lee into the public eye. In his review of "Do the Right Thing" for the New York Times, Vincent Canby said, "In all of the earnest, solemn, humorless discussions about the social and political implications of (the film), an essential fact tends to be overlooked: it is one terrific movie."

"Moonstruck" Screenwriter John Patrick Shanley said people responded to "Do the Right Thing" so strongly because it "dramatized

SIUC lab recycles hazardous photo chemicals

By Kara Grover
General Assignment Writer

The SIUC Department of Cinema and Photography is recycling chemicals used in the photography developing process.

Lyle Fuchs, manager of the Cinema and Photography lab, said "silver has made black and white photography what it is today" but it also has potential to be "hazardous" to the environment if it is not recycled properly.

"Silver poses a threat to the environment because it is a heavy metal," he said.

"Any high concentrations of heavy metals can be dangerous. That's why you want to recover it," he said.

Mike Nechvatal, manager of the solid waste management section at the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency, said silver can be detrimental, like any other heavy metal, if it is ingested.

"You wouldn't want it in your drinking water," Nechvatal said.

The volume of silver accumulates during a period of two to three years in the photo lab and is stored in silver recovery cartridges. The cartridges are set up to remove the silver from the fixer, which is used in all photographic processes in the lab, Fuchs said.

"Silver is the worst chemical to send to the environment. Plus, you can use it again and make paper or film," Fuchs said.

Other lab chemicals, such as C-41, used to process color negative film, and E6, used for slides, are saved for Pollution Control, Fuchs said.

"Pollution Control removes it from cinema and photography and holds it until a waste disposal contractor picks it up," he said.

Erik Talley, safety officer at Pollution Control, said chemicals are disposed according to their danger potential.

"The chemicals are analyzed for their hazardous characteristics. It's disposed of in different manners depending on the hazard of the chemical," he said.

After the waste disposal contractor takes the chemicals, they are incinerated, Fuchs said.

"This causes the byproduct of carbon dioxide and water," Fuchs said. "But incineration is much less harmful than if you pour it down the drain."

Black and white developer can be poured down the drain "when diluted with the proper amount of water" without causing danger to the environment, Fuchs said.

Even developer, however, can be a potential danger if improperly released into the environment, Fuchs said.

"It's not so much that we recycle," he said. "But it's more important that everything else in this lab is disposed properly."

Survey : Students trail other nations in math, science

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Elementary and Junior High school students in the United States watch more television, spend less time on homework and possess lower mathematics and science skills than most of their counterparts abroad, the Education Testing Service said in a survey released Wednesday.

In its test of 110 million 9-year-old and 13-year-old students from 20 nations, the ETS found that junior-high-school age children in America only scored higher on the science test than students from Ireland and Jordan. In mathematics, only Jordanian pupils fared poorer than the Americans.

Only Slovenian 9-year-olds performed worse than their American counterparts in mathematics, according to ETS's International Assessment of Educational Progress.

In science, however, U.S. 9-year-olds placed third behind Koreans and Taiwanese.

The 13-year-olds from Korea, Taiwan and Switzerland scored highest in mathematics and science.

In the 9-year-old group, students from Korea, Taiwan and the United States registered the highest scores in science, and pupils from Korea, Hungary and Taiwan led in mathematics.

The ETS, which claims to be the largest U.S. private educational measurement institution, is a non-profit educational research organization with headquarters in Princeton, N.J.

ETS President Gregory F. Anrig said Germany and Japan elected not to participate in the international test.

Although Anrig cautioned that it was difficult to draw conclusions from the survey, he said certain cultural habits affected student performance.

For example, he said, the survey showed that more U.S. 13-year-olds watch television for five hours daily than those in any country participating in the study except Scotland.

Switzerland, Portugal, England, Scotland, Canada, Slovenia were the only countries participating in the survey where a smaller percentage of 13-year-olds spend two or more hours a day on homework.

U.S. education officials, although not pleased with the results, hailed the survey as the "best international comparison of student abilities in 25 years."

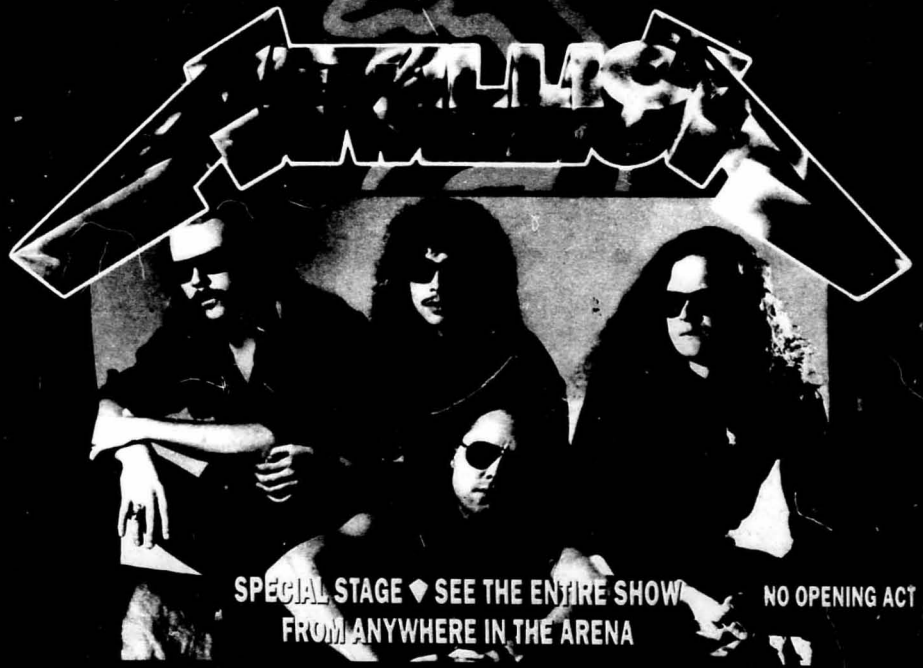

"This is not the kind of report that an America that likes to be first should be happy about," said Secretary of Education Lamar Alexander.

"This means that many children with families that care, in communities with 'good' schools, aren't learning what they should. Our education system needs radical change," he said.

Shuttle radar enables discovery of lost city

SAN MARINO, Calif. (UPI) — Members of a team led by an Emmy-award winning documentary maker described Wednesday how they used radar scans from the space shuttle to unearth the lost city of Ubar — called the "the Atlantis of the sands" by Lawrence of Arabia — in the nation of Oman.

Nicholas Clapp and his colleagues of adventurers, archaeologists and radar specialists, held a news conference at the Huntington Memorial Library, a day after they announced they had found the fabled Middle East city six weeks ago.

Clapp began his 10-year search for the 5,000-year-old city — celebrated in both the Koran and "A Thousand and One Arabian Nights" as the center of the ancient frankincense trade — after stumbling on a book written in 1932 by the British explorer Bertram Thomas.

Although Thomas gave coordinates of a road he believed led to Ubar — a city some believed was mythical — previous teams of explorers had been unable to locate it.

But then Clapp read in a magazine about a special radar system that was flown on the last successful mission of the space shuttle Challenger, and approached members of the imaging team at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

Ronald Blom, one of the JPL scientists, said that after determining Clapp and his team were serious, scientists scanned more than 50 images of the area where Ubar was described by ancient maps and books as being located.

"The key clues were the old caravan routes," Clapp said, referring to the series of submerged desert roads carved out by teams of hundreds of thousands of camels that converged on a single site.

"As little as six weeks ago, we were on the brink of total failure," he said.

But then Clapp and his team began gingerly digging at the site where the caravan routes converged — and within days found walls of the ancient city "within a couple of feet" below the surface.

The digging led to the remains of an eight-sided fortress, with 10 foot to 12 foot walls. It is believed to have served as the home of the king at the center of what was the tent city of Ubar.

State nuclear site put on watch list COUNCIL, from Page 3

ROCKVILLE, Md. (UPI) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission Wednesday added two nuclear power generating plants to its "close watch" list — Dresden in Illinois and Fitzpatrick in New York — because of operational problems at the facilities.

The NRC action removed the Calvert Cliffs (Md.) from the list, leaving the Dresden, Fitzpatrick, Browns Ferry (Ala.) and Zion (Ill.) power plants as the only four of the nation's 113 nuclear power plants under intensified scrutiny, NRC spokesman Russ Marabito said.

"Close watch means we have heightened our own activities. We will devote more of our resources ... have more frequent inspections," Marabito said. "We're scrutinizing them more than plants not on the list." Dresden was put on the watch list for the second time, the last period being from June 1987 to December 1988.

"Our inspections and overview actions have shown that Dresden's performance has declined and this indicates actions that were taken to improve performance in 1987 and 1988 were only partially effective," Marabito said.

Problems cited at the power plant near Morris, Ill., were employees inattention to detail, failure to follow procedures, using inexperienced personnel and lack of supervisory involvement.

The most recent case, citing problems with testing equipment, prompted the NRC to propose a $187,500 fine against the facility owned by Commonwealth Edison.

Problems cited at the Fitzpatrick plant included a decline in performance of operation, control of radioactive material and human errors.

"They had a high number of reactor scrams, or automatic shutdowns they had surveillance testing problems. They had personnel contamination events, some degraded or failed equipment," Marabito said.

The commission, based on management's recommendation, decided to keep the Zion plant, also owned by Commonwealth Edison, on the list another six months, despite improvements.

Wal-Mart has committed to creating 75 new jobs in Carbondale.

The $3-million facility will appear in the property tax revenues of local governments in five years.

The city's other revenues, such as sales tax, will be enhanced until then.

Developers have approached the city since the summer of 1991 with hopes of building a major retail store in Carbondale.

Two different sites have been considered, one on the northeast corner of the intersection of Main Street and Giant City Road, and the other on the southeast side of the same intersection.

Wal-Mart representatives have expressed an interest in the site on the southeast side, but the B-PL preliminary plan shows only three-fourths of the land is in the Enterprise Zone.

Because the majority of the proposed Wal-Mart site is in the Enterprise Zone, Wal-Mart representatives requested the additional four acres to be placed in the zone.

The technical correction must pass through four more boards before being administered.

after five months of negotiating failed to produce an agreement.

They carried signs asking for a salary increase that would amount to about $800 per educator.

The board was offering only $150 per year increase, union officials said.

The union (University Professionals of Illinois, Local 4100) had threatened to file an intent to strike last Friday with the Illinois Educational Labor Relations Board.

But it later decided not to file because the members felt there was hope for an agreement, she said.

"There's no more possibility of a strike," Peck said.

The union involved is expected to vote on the agreement next week.

BAC brings Dr. King, Malcolm X play to life

By William Ragan
Entertainment Writer

"The Meeting," a play about a conversation between Martin Luther King Jr. and Black Muslim leader Malcolm X, will be featured at 8 tonight in the Student Center Ballrooms.

The play will be performed by Pin Points Theatre, a musical theater group that takes subjects such as biology, history and math and puts them into theatrical formats that educate, as well as entertain.

Antonio Washington, coordinator of the Black Affairs Council, said the group approached him with the idea of performing "The Meeting" at SIUC.

Ersky Freeman, who portrays Malcolm X in "The Meeting," founded the group in Washington, D.C., in 1975.

Pin Points Theatre's contemporary and historic adaptations have been praised by the Smithsonian Institute and the D.C. Commission on the Arts.

Freeman has written and performed a long string of successful plays, including "Mind Over Matter," a play about African-American women's contributions to science and technology, and "Love and Abuse," a play/workshop about adolescent sexuality and drugs.

Freeman also wrote "1001 Black Inventions," a play about the vastness of African-American contributions to science, now in its ninth touring season.

The play is sponsored by the Black Affairs Council and is free.

City Council votes to install new railroad track downtown

By Teri Lynn Carlock
City Writer

The Carbondale City Council voted Tuesday night to approve the installation of a new railroad track in downtown Carbondale.

Members of the Station Carbondale Restoration Committee asked the city to permit the installation of a railroad track in the former track bed located just east of the former railroad depot building.

Committee members asked the Illinois Central Railroad to donate the track and the installation labor.

Committee Chairman Gilbert Bolen said the city should take the railroad up on its offer because Illinois Central Railroad is furnishing the track at no cost.

"We have the opportunity to get the track for nothing," he said. "The railroad will supply the ties, tracks, spikes and install it for us."

Declining Illinois Central's offer would be a mistake, Bolen said.

"I don't see any reason why the city would not approve the track installation," he said. "This would be another part of Carbondale's railroad history."

The track's length will be about 200 to 250 feet.

The city will have to remove some dirt and possibly add some rock bedding to prepare the area for installation. This cost will be about $2,000, which includes labor and equipment costs. Funding will be taken from the city's public works budget, said City Manager Steve Hoffner.

If additional rock is needed the cost could increase to $5,000 to $7,000 but it is too early to tell whether the extra bedding will be needed, Hoffner said.

"If our assessment is correct we can install it for $2,000," he said. "If the cost goes beyond that we will look at transferring funds from our contingency budget."

City officials also might ask the committee to help fund the railroad project if the costs go beyond $2,000, Hoffner said.

In the future the committee would like to place a restored railroad car or cars on the track. No such cars have been acquired or located yet but Bolen said he has ideas for the cars.

"We want a steam engine, dining car and caboose to work where we could rent it out to businesses and clubs for parties and meetings," he said.

The City Council does not support placing anything on the new track until the future use of the depot is determined, Hoffner said.

"We have spent a lot of money on restoring the building," he said. "We want to be sure that what goes on outside of the building is compatible with the building itself."

Landmark hotel crumbles to ground in Central Illinois

BEARDSTOWN (UPI) — Preservationists Wednesday salvaged fixtures from an historic hotel where Al Capone reportedly stayed during a duck hunting trip and where Abraham Lincoln also spent the night.

The east wall of the Park House Hotel, which is on the National Register of Historic Places, collapsed late Monday.

Structural engineers Tuesday determined it would be extremely expensive and nearly impossible to restore the 13-year-old Beardstown landmark.

Jacksonville engineer Dick Rawlins attributed the collapse of the wall to age and deterioration. He said expansion and contraction of the wall during a recent flurry of mild weather, might have also contributed to the crumbling.

The president of the Beardstown Restoration Society said she feels like a death has occurred.

"The society has spent about $6,000 over the past two years in replacing support," Marcia Howren said. "As for the levels that fell, we have no control over its foundation but there was nothing unsafe about the building to our knowledge."

Members of Howren's group and other supporters removed tables, chairs and other parts of the interior of the house Wednesday. She estimated the effort would last a few days.

the confusion, and conflicts that surround being a black man in America today."

Born Shelton Jackson Lee in 1957, Lee was nicknamed "Spike" by his mother, art teacher Jaquelyn Lee. When Spike was two his father, jazz bassist and composer Bill Lee, moved his family to Brooklyn where Spike grew up.

"Jungle Fever," which Lee describes as "two people who came together because of sexual mythology" pushed racial tensions once again. It openly explored the romance between a white woman, Annabella Sciorra, and a black man, Wesley Snipes.

Lee has begun work on his next film, a depiction of the life of Malcolm X, and already protest and controversy have begun. But unlike his previous films, the tensions are centered more in the right to tell the tale than racially motivated.

Amira Baraka, spokesman for the United Front to Preserve the Legacy of Malcolm X, said in a Newsweek interview "I'm horrified of seeing Spike Lee make Malcolm X. We will not let Malcolm X's life be trashed to make middle-class Negroes sleep easier."

Derrick Faulkner, student adviser for the SIUC Black Affairs Council, said Lee's movie does not have to be the definitive vision of Malcolm X.

"Just because Spike Lee does a movie on Malcolm X, doesn't mean that nobody else can," Faulkner said. "It's very good that Spike is doing this movie, but it's just one version of Malcolm X."

Kehr said Lee is up to the task of directing "Malcolm X."

"Actually, I dread it," Kehr said. "I think he's painted himself into a corner. He's just not enough of an intellectual to decipher someone as complicated as Malcolm X. There's a lot of good black film makers out there, but he's not one of them."

Tony Shaw, an SIUC graduate student in cinema and photography, said the Malcolm X movie may be historic.

"America is general is not exposed to African American culture," Shaw said. "Malcolm had some really viable ideas for all Americans. It's a historical thing in respect to that."

Barlow said seeing the movie is not enough.

"I think it's inappropriate for us as movie-goers to assume that any portrayal of someone's life is 100 percent accurate," she said.

Spike Lee tends to receive the most attention because of the subjects he tackles and the controversy he generates.

Movies such as John Singleton's "Boyz n the Hood" and Matty Rich's "Straight Out of Brooklyn" portray lives of drugs and poverty, but are less stereotypical because of their directors' perspective.

Shaw, who said he goes out of his way to see movies with black directors, believes the films have a positive image.

"It's a more accurate reflection of African-American culture because they are in it," Shaw said. "(Before black directors) the image of the African American had been bastardized. The popular misconception is that drug users are black and they tend to use blacks in stories about crime."

Garrett faces death sentence after board denies clemency

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (UPI) — The Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles Wednesday voted 17-0 against commuting the death sentence for a man slated to be executed Tuesday for the 1981 rape and murder of an elderly nun.

Johnny Frank Garrett had been scheduled to die Jan. 6, but Gov. Ann Richards granted him a temporary reprieve at the request of Pope John Paul II and several Texas bishops.

Board members refused to comment on their decision after the clemency hearing. One member of the 18-member panel abstained from voting on whether the death sentence should be upheld against Garrett, 28.

The death row inmate is slated to die by injection early Tuesday. Defense attorney Warren Clark said he would ask the Supreme Court for a stay of execution within 48 hours, but added he expects Garrett will be executed.

"Oh yes, they do it all the time," Clark told reporters when questioned about the chances of the execution taking place.

This was the first time in six years that the 18-member pardons and parole board has heard a petition for executive clemency, said Rebecca Tinkey, head of the board's clemency division.

Garrett was convicted of capital murder and sentenced to death by injection for the Oct. 31, 1981, rape and slaying of Sister Tadea Benz, 76, at her room in an Amarillo convent.

His supporters claim his death sentence should be commuted to life in prison since he is mentally disturbed because of a childhood marred by poverty, abuse and neglect.

Earlier in the day, Dr. Collin Ross of Dallas said Garrett was diagnosed with multiple personality disorder just three weeks ago.

Ross said Garrett has at least four personalities and probably several more that have yet to be identified.

Child abuse prompted Garrett throughout his childhood to "experience pain as though it were happening to someone else," Ross said.

If Garrett's multiple personality disorder had been discussed at his original trial, he would have been found guilty of a lesser offense or sentenced to life instead of the death penalty, Ross said.

Bishop Leroy Matthiesen, the head of the Catholic Diocese of Amarillo, also testified.

Psychologists say Dahmer offers them chance to study necrophilia

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Psychologists have documented only 14 cases similar to admitted serial killer Jeffrey L. Dahmer's and studying him would provide a wealth of information on his mental disease, a forensic psychologist said Wednesday.

Dr. Judith Becker of the University of Arizona testified for the defense at the sanity trial of the former chocolate factory worker who has admitted killing 17 young men and boys and pleaded guilty but insane to 15 of those slayings.

Becker and another expert have diagnosed Dahmer as a necrophiliac.

"Jeffrey Dahmer asked me if there was anybody else in the world like him because he has no real understanding of why he's done this," Becker told a news conference after she finished testifying.

"I told him that there are a few other cases in the literature of people who have engaged in activity similar to his," she said.

"This is one, at least in terms of the reported literature, one of 15 people that has ever been reported, and that mental health people have ever seen, or people in other countries have ever seen," Becker said. "We need to learn from this case."

Dahmer told police he drugged, killed and dismembered his victims.

In some cases he ate parts of them.

The night Dahmer was arrested, police found a head in his refrigerator next to an open box of baking soda.

Two heads were in the freezer. Hands and a genital organ were in a kettle and three skulls and bones were found in a filing cabinet.

In testimony Tuesday, Becker described how Dahmer slit open his victims and had sex with the corpses.

"He doesn't have a clear understanding as to why he did this," Becker said.

"He certainly could not control what it was he was doing," she said. If Dahmer is declared insane by the jury that began hearing evidence last Thursday, he will probably spend the rest of his life in a maximum-security mental institution.

If declared sane, he would go to prison for life.

If the jury declares Dahmer insane on at least one, but not all, of the 15 murder counts, he would go to the hospital until he is judged to be no longer dangerous.

If that day ever came, he would go to prison for the rest of his life.

Becker said Dahmer should be studied to help doctors determine whether his disease has a biological foundation.

"I hope that Jeffrey Dahmer would be willing to do that (undergo study)," Becker said. "He's a very private person."

Becker said Dahmer does want to know what was wrong with him.

"He wants to know why," Becker said.

'Dr. Death' faces murder charges for aid in suicides

PONTIAC, Mich. (UPI) — Dr. Jack Kevorkian, the mercy killing advocate known as "Doctor Death," was arrested Wednesday and taken to court in handcuffs to face charges of murdering two women who died with his help in a remote cabin last October.

Kevorkian, 62, was freed on $1,000 cash bond late Wednesday pending a preliminary hearing Feb. 11 before District Judge James P. Sheehy in Rochester.

"The one thing that is forgotten in all of this is the welfare of suffering humanity and that is the only thing I think of," Kevorkian said as he left the Oakland County jail. "There are humans out there suffering. This (being jailed) is not suffering."

But Kevorkian, taken before Circuit Judge Richard D. Kuhn dressed in "jailhouse blues," said being picked up on the street, shackled and dressed in prison garb was "degrading." His attorneys said Kevorkian was deliberately treated as a criminal "to humiliate him," since they had told the prosecutor he would surrender voluntarily.

Kuhn set bond at $5,000 each on two murder counts and $5,000 on a charge of delivering a controlled substance and permitted his release on 10 percent of the $10,000 total on the homicide charges.

Police arrested Kevorkian at mid-morning on a downtown Royal Oak street a short distance from his modest apartment. He was indicted Tuesday by a county citizen's grand jury.

The retired pathologist, a vocal advocate of euthanasia in books, magazines and nationwide talk shows, stood mute while the judge entered an innocent plea for him.

"He murdered them" said Oakland County Prosecutor Richard Thompson.

Thompson said Kevorkian, who had a murder charge dismissed in an earlier death, had started "down the slippery slope" from assisting in the deaths of the terminally ill to those of people "who do not like their quality of life."

The panel lodged murder counts in the deaths of Marjorie Wantz, 58, of Sodus, and Sherry Miller, 43, of Roseville.

Order stops authorities from melting 5,000 guns

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Hennepin County officials were just about to dump 5,000 guns into a smelter Wednesday when they were stopped by a temporary restraining order obtained by two people who say their guns were stolen and may be in the pile.

Hennepin County Attorney Mike Freeman said he will fight the attempt to prevent authorities from melting the guns, which citizens turned in for $50 each under a 5-day-old, no-questions-asked amnesty program. "In this country anybody can file a lawsuit. They did," Freeman said. "A temporary restraining order often is not hard to get. They got one. We plan to go back to court to have the injunction lifted.

"The smelter was cooking. We were ready to dump them into the smelter. Legally, we're entitled to do that. There is no statute or requirement that we do what they are asking."

Freeman said it's not that he and other officials are unsympathetic to people who have their property stolen but that a greater responsibility is to get as many guns as possible off the streets. He said most theft victims have already been reimbursed by their insurance companies.

Freeman also said that in St. Louis, where a similar gun buy-back program was conducted, a check of one-third of the 7,500 weapons surrendered turned up only about two dozen that had been stolen.

"We're in the business of trying to make the streets safe. That's what we're doing and what we're trying to do. So we're going to go forward," Freeman said.

He said Minneapolis Police Chief John Laux came up with the best line about the situation when he said, "I've heard of 'Save the Children' and 'Save the Whales' but I've never heard of 'Save the Guns.'"

Freeman said it is "not on my list of priorities" to go through all of the weapons to check for serial numbers.

"It would take us a year and we don't have the resources. If we have to do that, the program ends."

Freeman had temporarily halted the buy-back program Tuesday because it had run out of money. He is seeking another $50,000 to $100,000 to resume the project as early as next week.

He originally had budgeted $150,000 obtained through seizure of property in criminal cases and through donations. He had expected only 500 to 1,000 guns to be surrendered.

"We never thought we would get this number," Freeman said Tuesday. "It's great. We're ecstatic about the number of guns that have come in."

Freeman said between 50 percent and 60 percent of the weapons were handguns.

The program is aimed at young people in an attempt to reduce the level of armament on the streets, particularly Minneapolis — Minnesota's most dangerous city, which endured a record 64 homicides in 1991. Freeman said those turning in weapons have ranged from an 11-year-old boy to a grandfather who found a sawed-off shotgun under his granddaughter's bed.

Freeman said authorities want to incorporate an educational campaign in the schools to try to convince more teenagers to turn away from guns.

Mob witness explains 'trunk music'

CHICAGO (UPI) — A witness used chilling terms to explain the gangland phrase "trunk music" during an ongoing trial of five reputed mobsters accused of using murder and intimidation to run a Lake County-based gambling operation.

"Trunk music," Robert Hildebrandt testified Tuesday in the federal racketeering trial of Ernest Rocco Infelise and four others, is the sound of the flesh of a slaying victim decomposing in the trunk of a car.

Hildebrandt said he was at an Arlington Heights restaurant in 1983 or 1984 when defendant Salvatore DeLaurentis told Hal C. Smith, "You are trunk music, my friend."

Smith, Hildebrandt's boss, was an independent bookie who later was killed and his body found stuffed in the trunk of a car.

Hildebrandt testified the argument started when DeLaurentis demanded that Smith pay $6,000 a month in protection. Smith countered with an offer of $3,500.

Supreme Court overturns Dowaliby conviction

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — The Illinois Supreme Court Wednesday ended more than three years of uncertainty for David Dowaliby when it upheld an appellate court decision overturning his conviction in the slaying of his 7-year-old adopted daughter.

The former Midlothian man had been sentenced to 45 years in prison in the September 1988 strangulation death but the appellate court found in October that — as a matter of law — there was not enough evidence to convict Dowaliby of the killing. It said the trial judge should have set aside the jury verdict.

The high court Wednesday issued a one-sentence decision in overturning the May 1990 conviction and made no further comment.

"That means the Dowaliby's legal battle is over," attorney Bob Byman said.

"The highest court in the state has decided not to review this case, and, consequently, it is over," Cook County State's Attorney Jack O'Malley said.

O'Malley said it was his duty to appeal the case, given the disagreement between a 12-person jury and the appeals court.

"While we believe the Appellate Court decision sets a bad precedent, which could adversely affect the standard of review in future appeals, we nonetheless must accept the Supreme Court's decision," O'Malley said.

Dowaliby had been free on $400,000 bond since November, which Byman said should be rescinded "in a few days."

He and his wife, Cynthia, had been accused of killing their daughter, Jaclyn, 7, whose nightgown-clad body was found in a Blue Island drainage ditch. Cook County Judge Richard Neville acquitted the mother before the case went to the jury but allowed the panel to deliberate the father's case.

HIV infected prostitute jailed after being freed by governor

ROCKFORD, Ill. (UPI) — Prosecutors and assistants to Gov. Jim Edgar launched an all-out effort Wednesday to keep an AIDS-infected prostitute from getting out of jail.

Tracy Eichman, 34, was arrested Tuesday for allegedly offering to perform sexual acts for a police detective for $20. However, most officials were surprised she was ever back on the streets since Edgar granted her clemency and she was released from prison in September 1991 based on pleas that she was dying of AIDS.

After Tuesday's arrest, bail was set at $25,000 and she was held at the Winnebago County jail. However, Winnebago County Assistant State's Attorney Rolf Thincemann said he would ask a judge Thursday to increase bond. He would not say how high that request would be.

Meanwhile, the governor's office was monitoring the situation.

"One of the possibilities we've looked into is the possibility of revoking the executive clemency that she was granted," said Edgar's spokesman Mike Lawrence. "Such a revocation would be unprecedented given the facts of this case."

After her arrest, Eichman was charged with attempting to transmit the HIV-virus and prostitution. She appeared in court Wednesday but her arraignment will not be until Feb. 26.

Eichman faces one to three years in prison if convicted on the attempted criminal transmission of AIDS charge, a Class 4 felony.

In jail Wednesday, Eichman was not isolated from other inmates because there are other residents who have tested positive for AIDS, said Winnebago County Sheriff's Police Lt. Mike Cram.

Eichman had been living at a Rockford nursing home at the time of her arrest. Officials there said they did not know how the incident would affect her residency.

Gov. Edgar had no reason to believe Eichman would ever be walking around on the streets of Rockford, considering her condition, Lawrence said.

"He granted it (clemency) only after being informed by medical professionals that death was imminent," Lawrence said. "That prognosis did not prove to be correct. It was a solid, undisputed prognosis at the time. The governor was informed she was expected to die within days, so as a humanitarian gesture, he granted clemency so she would not die in prison."

Eichman had turned to religion after she was freed by Edgar but a church pastor said he doubted members would raise her bail money. Rev. John Aker of the First Evangelical Free Church said "society needs to be protected" from Eichman.

City battles rising cocaine problem with federal grant

By Scott Wuerz
General Assignment Writer

Carbondale law enforcement agencies have teamed up in the battle against crack with a grant by the federal government.

Southern Illinois Narcotics Enforcement Group Field Supervisor Curt Graff said his organization, the Carbondale Police and the Jackson County Housing Authority have named crack cocaine as their primary enemy in the war on drugs.

"Two years ago we never saw crack in Carbondale," Graff said. "But in the last six weeks alone we've executed six search warrants against homes that are allegedly operating as crack houses."

He estimated in the last six months the SINEG has investigated 60 leads related to crack, resulting in approximately 25 arrests.

Carbondale Police Lt. Jerry Reno said local police found controlled substances in 22 investigations during 1991.

"Most drug investigations in Carbondale are carried out by the SINEG," Reno said. "So most of the contact we have with crack comes from evidence that turns up during other investigations."

"Still, we run into crack enough to know that there's more of it on the street."

The Carbondale Police, and the Jackson County Housing Authority have teamed up with federal help in Carbondale.

Weather clears for Olympics, training to begin immediately

ALBERTVILLE, France (UPI) — Olympic organizers, fearing snarled traffic and unpassable mountain roads, received good news from the heavens Wednesday when the weather improved dramatically across the French Alps three days before the Winter Games.

Tuesday saw the the heaviest snowfall in the region for over a month. And with the Games spread across 13 sites over 640 square miles, any prolonged spell of bad weather could make for a logistical nightmare.

But the heavy snow abated by Wednesday morning, allowing the men's downhill run at Val D'Isere to be cleared. Training is to begin Thursday for the glamour event Sunday, one day after the Opening Ceremony in which 64 countries are to take part.

Men's luge and ski jumping practice both got underway, while American football star-turned bobsledder Herschel Walker convinced everyone within earshot that the U.S. team was a real medal shot.

Germany's Georg Hackl dominated the luge training, winning two of three morning sessions, which had some of the German coaching squad doing a preliminary medal count.

"We can pick up three (luge) medals, maybe even four," Coach Josef Linz said.

A German newspaper had said the track at La Plagne was breaking up, but this report was scotched Wednesday when the course was complimented by several competitors.

"The snow from yesterday is gone and it's just how we like it — hard and icy," said one of the American coaches.

Added World Cup winner Markus Prock: "With the relatively big curves and their wide radius it is a lot like my home course at Igls (Austria)."

Practice started for the men on the 90-meter ski jumping hill at Courchevel, with several of the leading competitors absent, including the formidable Czechoslovaks, who have chosen to practice in the High Tatras mountains, a move that may have backfired.

"I am not that confident for the Games," said leading Czechoslovak ski jumper Frantisek Jez. "At the camp I could not practice because of the weather."

The International Olympic Committee ratified its decision to re-admit the three Baltic states of Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia to full IOC status during the second day of its 98th Session.

South Africa was also formally welcomed back into the fold and will compete at the Summer Games in Barcelona, although what flag and anthem it will use has yet to be agreed upon.

The IOC said Slovenia and Croatia were officially granted provisional recognition, which is to be upgraded once they fulfill all aspects of the Olympic Charter.

The official number of countries represented at the Games is 64, following the late withdrawal of the lone Portuguese skier, who is injured. On the plus side, Swaziland's one-man team is still expected to show.

The expectations for the Swaziland team are certainly not high back home, but the same could not be said of Walker.

Walker, a star running back with the Minnesota Vikings, has had all of one official bobsled race. But he has qualified as pusher for the 2-man and 4-man sleds and he has made it clear he is not in France for the novelty of the experience.

"When I came to this sport I came to compete and I didn't come all the way over here just to wear a uniform," he said. "I want to win."

Pins prove a passion at Olympics

ALBERTVILLE, France (UPI) — The most popular sport at the Winter Olympics will have nothing to do with snow, skis, skates or sleds.

While the Games are played and attract their loyal fans, for the hundreds of thousands of visitors to Albertville and environs in February, the big passion will involve pins.

The collecting and trading of Olympic pins has gone from fad to frenzy during the last decade, with the value of some pins escalating into the thousands of dollars.

Pin passion will be an around-the-clock activity for the three-week run of the Games, and virtually everyone in attendance will return home with at least one souvenir pin.

"The trading of pins has really taken hold over the last two

"Pin collectors are a breed unto themselves, and I can assure you there will be people trying to obtain every pin they possibly can in every way they possibly can."

—Phil Mooney

Olympic Games," said Phil Mooney, archivist for Coca-Cola, which will be represented by some 50 different pins at the Winter Games. "The strong movement in pins really began in Los Angeles

(1984) and gained steam in Calgary (1988), where it really took off."

Corporations now produce pins, National Olympic Committees and individual teams all produce pins. And for every pin there's a collector.

"Collectors are a breed unto themselves and I can assure you there will be people trying to obtain every pin they possibly can in every way they possibly can," Mooney said.

"If I walk down the streets of Atlanta with pins on me, I am stopped by people offering to buy or trade.

"These collectors call themselves pinheads."

On the streets of Albertville, as well as at the other venues of these Games, there will be impromptu stands set up by individual collectors for the dealing of pins.

game is that we shot terrible in the second half from the free throw line and they hit 12 of 13."

Indiana State is also a team that converts from line, as it is shot more than 75 percent this season to lead the Valley.

Herrin said a key for the Dawgs success will be controlling the long range shooting abilities of Indiana State.

The Sycamores are leading the Gateway in 3-point shooting percentage with a 43 percent mark.

Forward Travis Inman and guard Greg Thomas are the Sycamores' two main threats from long range.

Inman is leading his team in scoring with 12.1 points a game and is shooting more than 44 percent from three-point range.

Second to Inman in scoring is Thomas who is averaging 11.5 points per game and is over 48 percent from three-point land.

Although Indiana State appears to have a number of offensive tools, Indiana State head coach Tates Locke said he worries about his team's defense.

"We are still not a very good defensive team," Locke said. "We are improving, and that is important."

Herrin said the key for his team is simply execution.

"What we need is to do the things we do best and to make sure that our heads are ready to play," Herrin said.

Jordan fined, suspended after Bulls upset by the Jazz

NEW YORK (UPI) — Michael Jordan of the Chicago Bulls has been fined $5,000 and suspended without pay for one game for bumping a referee during Monday night's game against the Jazz in Utah.

Jordan, the NBA's leading scorer, was to sit out Wednesday night's game against the Suns in Phoenix.

Jordan bumped referee Tommie Wood while arguing a foul call with a half second left to play in the third overtime period of the game against Utah. The Jazz won the game 126-123.

After Jordan tied the score 123-123 on an off-balance jumper with 4.9 seconds remaining, Jeff Malone of Utah dribbled up the court and was stripped of the ball by Jordan as he went up for a shot. Jordan, though, was called for a foul. He protested the call and was ejected after bumping Wood.

Malone converted the technical foul shot and added two more from the line for the final margin.

The fine and suspension were announced by Rod Thorn, NBA Vice President, Operations.

manager and I thank the Pirates for giving me the opportunity."

Simmons, a switch-hitting catcher for St. Louis, Milwaukee and Atlanta, retired in 1988. He had a career average of .285.

While a player, Simmons was a leader of the Major League Baseball Players Association. He was the Cardinals' representative from 1975-1980, served on the union's executive committee from 1980-1988 and was the National League representative on the association's pension committee from 1983-1986.

"Ted possesses all of the qualities we were looking for in someone to head the baseball operations of the Pittsburgh Pirates," Sauer said. "In a relatively short period of time, he has shown himself to be an outstanding evaluator of young talent."

"He not only helped develop a fine group of major league players, but was also heavily involved in retooling the Cardinals from a last-place veteran team in 1990 to a youthful and competitive club in 1991.

"Ted is also a man of very strong character and is an outstanding communicator. I think he is the best man to guide the Pirates through the difficult economics of baseball while maintaining a competitive team."

Assistant GM Cameron Bonifay was named interim GM at the time of Doughty's firing. He was a finalist for the permanent job, along with Simmons and former Detroit Tigers GM Bill Lajoie.

our defense and played us tough earlier this season, and that will give them confidence coming into the game."

Drake will try to break a four-game losing streak when they play Eastern Illinois tonight. Last Thursday, the Bulldogs fell short of ambushing Southwest Missouri State 64-60. Southern, 8-1 in the conference, shares the top spot in the Gateway with Southwest. The Bears, 16-2, are ranked 16th nationally on the USA Today Poll.

Drake coach Lisa Bluder said Southwest was not playing well against them.

"Southern's playing very well right now," Bluder said. "We had a close game with Southwest, but they just weren't shooting well. Southern's a tough team to play against because they have balanced scorers. They have (junior center Kelly) Firth who can shoot the ball inside, and they also have outside shooters. You can't concentrate on just one player."

Scott said the Drake Fieldhouse has given SIUC trouble in the past.

"Drake plays with more confidence at home," she said. "We beat them earlier this season, but their team shoots the ball well."

The powerful duo of Saluki shooters senior guard Karrie Redeker and sophomore Karen Powell gave the Salukis the edge in outside shots. SIUC leads the Gateway in 3-point shooting—just ahead of Drake—making 38.7 percent of their treys. SIUC also leads the league in field goal defense and are No. 2 in scoring defense, giving up about 65 points a game.

Redeker and juniors Anita Scott, Firth and Angie Rougeau continue to average in double figures for SIUC.

Firth, the Gateway's No. 2 rebounder and No. 3 field goal shooter, has shot 60.8 percent from the field for SIUC in conference play. Anita Scott, who is No. 3 in assists, No. 7 in field goal shooting and No. 8 in steals in the Gateway, leads the Salukis in scoring, assists, steals and minutes.

SIUC plays Northern Iowa at 7:35 tonight and Drake at 2 p.m. Saturday. The games will be broadcasted on 103.5 WUEZ-FM.

Sheriff's deputies also were assigned to the court area although Maj. Jack Smith said the court had received no threats Wednesday.

Tyson is expected to testify because of the strength of the case brought by prosecutors.

The defense is trying to show sex between Tyson and his accuser was consensual and the accuser is after the fighter's money.

The prosecution ended its case Tuesday with dramatic testimony from the accuser's mother, who cried as she said her daughter still has nightmares about Tyson and the attack.

Also Tuesday, the defense lost a bid to call three surprise witnesses who say they saw Tyson and his accuser kissing in the back of his limousine.
