PARITY FOR SOUTHERN

FACULTY MEMBERS VOICE OPINIONS ON LEGALITY OF STUDENT COUNCIL ACTION

Wright, Chairman of Faculty Advisory Committee, Believes Group Plays on Technicality

The members of the faculty advisory committee of the Student Council have voted their opinion in the current controversy over the legality of the Council's withholding the referendum concerning the publishing of votes on all issues from the student body.

Mr. John A. Wright, chairman of the committee, asserted, "I think the whole matter of the referendum is a question of policy and that the Council is simply playing on a technicality." When asked whether he thought the Council action was constitutional, Mr. Wright replied that he did not know enough about constitutional law.

Believes Stand Illegal

Mr. George B. Watson, member of the political sciences department and sponsor of the Council, in answer to the same question, declared that in his opinion the stand taken by the Council was absolutely illegal. "I still hold to my opinion, as previously expressed to Mr. Helms, president of the Council," said Mr. Watson, "that the proposed publishing of votes would not involve a constitutional amendment and that the petition asking for a referendum on the question must legally be submitted to students."

Mr. William Schneider, also a member of the advisory board, disagreed with Mr. Watson. He said, "It seems to me that the stand taken by the Council is taking it to the limit of the law beyond question, but that the wisdom of its policy may perhaps be questioned." He went on to say that these words referred specifically to the Council's refusal to publish the referendum to the students, and not to the Council's stand on the question of publishing votes.

Holds With Council

Mr. Schneider holds with the Student Council, which declares a constitutional amendment is necessary to modify the by-laws, which contain provisions for a secret ballot.

An amendment to the constitution must first be passed by the Council before it can be submitted to student body, and since the Council has voted down the petition asking that a referendum be taken on the question of publishing votes, Mr. Schneider is in accord with the Council.

Mr. Watson believes that by-laws are separate from a constitution and that a constitutional amendment is not necessary to change them. He is supported in this claim by Mr. Orville Alexander, also a member of the political sciences department.

These two men contend that the subject of the petition MUST be referred to the students, if the strictest interpretation is put on the constitution.

Criticizes Constitution

Mr. Watson said that especially in this constitution was this true. He bases his belief on the fact that the article number series in the Student

S. I. N. U.'S LONG AWAITED NEW TRAINING SCHOOL

Above is an architect's drawing of S. I. N. U.'s new training school which will be erected on the tract of land between Grand avenue and Mill street. The wing to the right is the auditorium. The gymnasium is located in a large wing which is behind the building when seen from this angle.

MATH. FIELD DAY WILL BE FEBRUARY 15

Latest Plans For Southern's New Training School Now In Hands Of Phillips And Merwin

The latest plans for the new training school at Southern Illinois Normal University were received recently by Mr. Bruce W. Merwin and Mr. Roscoe Pulliam at a meeting with the state architect and the landscape architect, Mr. Chance Hill, in Chicago.

The laboratory school is planned for organization into four units, the academic system including twenty-seven industrial, artistic, the shop, the auditorium, and the gymnasium and athletic fields because of financial limitations, construction of the shops has been postponed; however, the Normal schools board has allotted fifty thousand of the next appropriation for this purpose.

The building, to be constructed of red brick, will not be dissimilar to other buildings on the campus. The clock tower with a balcony copied from one of the old mansions in Williamsburg, Virginia, lends to the whole structure the feeling of solidity so characteristic of the Georgian colonial architecture. The building will have no fire-escapes other than the regular entrances which are especially designed to prohibit the spreading of fire and are fire-proof.

Drive Eliminated

The grounds for the building as laid out according to revised plans promise to be very satisfactory for the needs of the school. The drive

The annual Mathematics Field Day sponsored by the Southern Illinois Council of Mathematics Teachers will be held on the campus Saturday, February 15. Twenty high schools in this region have already indicated that they plan to send students.

A new feature of Field Day this year will be displays arranged by various departments of the college related to math, such as chemistry, commerce, and physics.

The usual high school exhibits of mathematical constructions and notebooks will be on display in the Old Science gymnasium. Tests in high school math subjects will also be given as usual.

Raymond Tuck of Centralia, president of the Southern Illinois Council of Mathematics Teachers, and Carolyn Holting of West Frankfort, secretary, are supervising general plans for Field Day. Delta Kapsa, headed by Marshall Striebelle, and the members of the college mathematics department are in charge of arrangements on the campus.

Twenty-year-old Note Tells Age of Equipment

With the students at S. I. N. U. in 1920 by using the furniture and equipment now on the campus?

Possibly, for today's classes are still occupying classes bought nearly twenty years ago, according to a note found in the commerce room.

The furniture and assistants in the Main building, which recently taking up some class room furniture preparatory to refurnishing it, found under a chair a yellowed sheet of Palmer Method paper. On one side are scrawled the words, in pencil, "These seats were set Sept. 6, 1922 by W. H. Toedler."

The sheet had been used for an exercise in handwriting by Miss Cecelia Williams, and discarded. Mr. Toedler, then a janitor, evidently picked up the paper while installing the seats and decided to record his name and the occasion for writing.

The incident is a pointed example of the need of the college for new equipment to replace the worn, and in some cases antiquated, furnishings being used now.

LITTLE THEATRE TO PRESENT ORSON WELLES ABBREVIATED VERSION OF JULIUS CAESAR

The Little Theatre's choice of Shakespeare's Julius Caesar for their winter production, February 21, marks the advent of Shakespearean poetry to the S. I. N. U. stage for the first time in many years. The last appearance of a Shakespearean company took place about six years ago when a traveling group of professionals presented Romeo and Juliet to the college students.

Little Theatre's production will be the first collegiate attempt to bring the work of the world's most famous dramatist within the experience of Southern Illinois theatre patrons.

It will be a 1940 abbreviated version as prepared by Orson Welles of Broadway, and ran for a season—while Little Theatre plans for presentation. The most famous lines, the best-known scenes, the same renowned characters will all remain to thrill a local audience as they have thrilled thousands of audiences for centuries. It is the technical aspect of the production rather than the cutting which will contribute most to streamlining the Little Theatre performance of the great tragedy.

The fact that the play, retaining the original vivid structure, will be done in a new set of modern conception, one contained and lighted in a fashion that is a definite departure from the traditional may be somewhat startling to some few patrons steeped in conventional Shakespearean theatre. However, the Little Theatre members believe that the majority of the audience will welcome the modern treatment of a famous classic

IS COUNCIL JUSTIFIED IN WITHHOLDING REFERENDUM?

The current Student Council controversy has outgrown the original struggle. The issue of publishing votes on personalities has been lost sight of in the larger issue of whether the Council is justified in its withholding of a student referendum, when that referendum has been duly requested by a petition drawn up in accordance with the Council's own constitution.

SPORT CANDIDS

Even if Rumors Will Be Rumors There is something comforting about them because you can well know that where there's a basketball fight through the air, there was someone around to throw it. At any rate, the latest thing I have heard, and from authentic source, the boys here at this school will be getting a layout of forms with a gym to go with it. That leaves the women with the old gym, and for what more could any major ask?

But up the whole when one considers the space that we do have and the activities offered us, I think that we have no dress coming and of course we cannot forget that heretofore the department managed to give us no more than a minor.

During some of the happier moments at the gym, you would not help but land into some of the "people who do things" over there. And when you meet "people who do things" they always have something marked about them like figure, or figure of speech, or circle in which they keep their followers. But in drawing around I have noticed some personal parties concerning those that I have reference to, and methods would do you soul good to recognize something for a change.

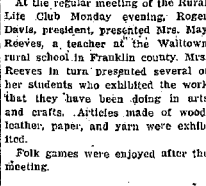

Mercur: Take two, they're small; take three, the price is right. Clements: We're in this together. Kutzler: Son of a gun cook! Korky: I can't stand it; you're drivin' me crazy (some improvement here, however). Brooks: Henry, you see it's this way—

Sutton: I have a question to ask. Ratz: Hey we come a little bit!

Mrs. Reeves' Walltown Students Exhibit Crafts

At the regular meeting of the Rural Life Club Monday evening, Roger Davis, president, presented Mrs. Betsy Reeves, a teacher at the Walltown rural school in Franklin county, Mrs. Reeves in turn presented several of her students who exhibited the work that they have been doing in arts and crafts. Articles made of wood, leather, paper, and yarn were exhibited. Folk games were enjoyed after the meeting.

A Diving Queen With Wings

In a bathing suit, soaring from a springboard, you'd recognize this beautiful miss as Helen Clienok, former national women's diving champion. She makes an equally appealing picture twirling propeller of training plane preparatory to solo flight at San Francisco airport.

Freshmen Classes Are Still Tripping

(And I do mean trippies) the light flashed, but suddenly from out of no where into the approximately 100 somewhere came an air of great apprehension. What is am trying to say is that a test on this stuff we call folk dancing will soon be here.

In roaming around the gym, I found some valuable information through the weekly papers you can use if you are advantageous. Never wear darned socks when taking a course in folk dancing, particularly if the darning is an example of your own fine arts. If you can't remember the step just jog along and follow the next fellow—she probably knows you can use it.

When test-time comes memorize one routine; forget it and then announce yesterday. "It All Comes Back to Me Now". Good luck.

Schneider to Be Group Chairman at Conference

Dr. William B. Schneider of the English department will be chairman of the English and Modern Language group at one of the ten regional conferences of the Committee on Teacher Training in Liberal Arts Colleges of the North-Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. These conferences will be held within the next few months.

The committee has recently examined twelve Liberal Arts colleges, studying their teacher training facilities and practices. The ten conferences will discuss for a day and a half the chief problems raised by this examination and will endeavor to formulate policies and suggest practices that may improve teacher training in small colleges.

Plans were made for these conferences at a meeting of a committee on teacher training in Chicago last Saturday, which Dr. Schneider attended.

The ten regional conferences will be held at ten different places in the middle west, the nearest one being at Knox College at Galesburg. Dr. Schneider helped in the investigation made by the committee at Lindenwood College.

SCHOOL BOARDS MEET TO ENCOURAGE MORE INTEREST IN RURAL EDUCATION

The Southern Illinois Association of School Boards met at West Frankfort Wednesday of this week. This was one of the series of meetings to help get rural school board members to take a more active interest in rural school problems.

The meeting lasted all day and was divided into three sessions, morning, afternoon, and evening. The morning session was devoted to a round table discussion about reorganization of schools, increasing the enrollment, minimum salary for teachers, and financing of schools.

WALTER HEINZ WILL TAKE TEACHING JOB IN CHESTER HIGH SCHOOL

Walter Heinz, a senior from Staunton, will begin teaching next week in the high school at Chester. It was announced yesterday. He will teach general science and algebra.

Lacking only fourteen hours to graduate, Heinz plans to finish requirements for the B. Ed. degree next summer. At the present time he is president of the Student Council, a member of Kappa Phi Kappa, Chemica, and Delta Rho.

Interested in the growth of cooperatives at S. I. N. U., Heinz has served as president of the Inter-cooperative Council and also as head of Harwood Hall, the original campus co-op.

Industrial Arts Meeting Held on Campus Saturday

THE HISTORICAL DIORAMAS

By BILL REYNOLDS.

A series of dioramas depicting the growth of the public school system in being planned by Dr. Sina McVicker of the Allyn Training School, and Mr. F. O. Warren, head of the Education department. They hope to have the dioramas completed by the History Museum division of the Museum Extension Project of the W. P. A.

The series will probably consist of nine or ten replicas in miniature of the schoolrooms of all periods, from the individual school to the schools of today. Two of the dioramas are already under construction, representations of the Dame schools and the Lancaster Monotrial schools. The former is the type preached over by a woman, who simply teaches the neighborhood children, the rudiments of reading, writing and arithmetic, as in our modern nursery schools.

The Lancaster system is a school in which a large number of children listen to a lecture by one professor, and then retire to groups to a monitor assigned to them. Some features of this method of teaching were used extensively in Southern Illinois at one time. With the older children acting as monitors to the younger. It still survives to a certain extent.

Broughton Old School in Illinois. Research work underway for the history of the school, which was covered a large school house near Broughton, built in 1838 and still standing, that is without a doubt the oldest school in Southern Illinois, according to Mr. Allen. He has in his possession a brochure that was used by the school in 1838. The history of the logs that went into its construction. A pincheon seat-and-desk such as used in school rooms of that period has also been found.

The study is well in keeping with the major objective of the Museum Extension Project, supervised by Mr. Emerson Maxwell, which is the preparation of materials for the educational program of the college museum. This entails the construction of new research aids to visualize the actual physical environment of the people of early Southern Illinois.

The chief way in which this is done is the construction of dioramas, which contain miniature replicas of artifacts discovered in historical research. The dioramas hitherto completed are on display in the first floor corridor of Old Main.

Project Making Historical Maps. The History Museum division of this project is also working on a series of historical maps of every county in Egypt, showing the old roads and buildings and other spots of historical interest. These maps are completely accurate in detail, and are being used by the Museum Extension Project in the early history of the section. Historical maps of 1841, furnished by the U. S. postoffice department, are being used to obtain the road system of that time. So far, Jackson and Williamson counties are the only ones completed.

An interesting fact about the post office maps is that two old wooden bridges, which are now gone but whose sites are known were found to be on the roads represented in the map.

The Museum Extension division of the W. P. A. is working with the state geologist at St. Louis. Their work is made possible by the aid of Mr. John L. Wright and Mr. Richard Meyer of the history department, who are serving as consultants.

STIFF LEATHER, HARD WOOD, SOFT HEART

By MELVIN APPLEBAUM.

I blinked my eyes to keep back the moisture that was beginning to form around the rims and invited Jim up to my room for a drink. "You're a little out of your mind, aren't you?" he asked, and the town "yes" couldn't hate each other like poison. So he was sorta funny for me to be inviting him up to my room for a drink. It wasn't so I could gloat over him or even console him. I just had to tell him what I thought of him. He was the toughest basketball coach in the state, that night.

"Sit down, Jim, and take a load off your feet."

"Thanks, Steve. It was pitiful."

"What do you mean, Steve? She's fine."

"Want some soda in it or take it straight?"

"Straight, Steve. It was hard for me to get started, but you Steve looked, so hurt and disappointed. I knew he must be thinking about the way the new team handed his boys, but it's hard to let a man you're sorry when you should be tickled to death.

"Nice, game your boys played to night, Jim."

"Can I have it. It was pitiful."

"I got mean basketball, and was the Game your boys played."

"Oh! Hell, Jim. It was awful. They couldn't shoot and they couldn't pass and they bounced the ball like a bunch of girls."

"Yeah, I have to admit it was pretty shabby playing."

"Pity."

"But those kids are still raw, Jim. I had five alternates. Bingham and Hadley are all-state. You know you didn't have a chance."

"Hell's fire, not. But I don't want to coach a bunch of scrubbs."

Nonsense

By JOHN J. WHITESIDE.

The Wheeler library is used for more things than any building on the campus. From opening till closing it is used for all purposes which include everything from studying to sleeping.

The people who use the library early in the morning are there for studying. These people usually get in a little later than they had contemplated the night before, and have to catch up on their work before going to class. Also in the same class of early birds are the commuters, who would rather pretend to study in the library than freeze in the car.

Along in the morning is found the student who "puts in time." He has not yet heard about the usual regimen, he will tell you how much time he spends in the library. His time there is usually spent in reading the funnies. He can tell you anything you want to know about Little Bigger, or Poppers, but just ask him a question about any of the subjects he was supposed to have studied, and listen to the silence.

Around the Encyclopedia.

Around the encyclopedia is the fellow who has to make a special report on South Africa—bug bugs. He copies his report from word from his book, and when he gets to give his report he finds that he has all the words about North American Lounging Lizards. After his improvised report, he will tell his friends of the incompetency of the library.

The hour after lunch is observed as the multitude of sleeping people. At this time of day more sleeping takes place in the library than does in Mexico at siesta. Some of these dozing dudes come to the library intending to study, but after a few minutes find the point running together, and drop off into a restful sleep.

Dating at Three.

Informal dating starts about three and a half—seven. The shy Romeo and Juliettes see, their intentions are blundered, and they enjoy themselves as much as they could if they were at the table. All of the dots are not intentional. For example: male and female studying math; two heads are better than one. Many romances have started over "The French Revolution" and "Sociology in the South Party."

Also at three is the Esquire, Saturday Evening Post, and Life reading period. Some of these magazine addicts really want to read the papers, but find that the Tribune and Globe have merged, and that Walter Winchell's column continued on page four, is the recipe for making a perfunctory pie.

From five in the afternoon until closing time, the library is filled with an assortment of these different types. No wonder the librarian is in favor of a student lounge.

Warren Reports on Rural Education

Professor F. G. Warren, head of the education department, reported on the work in rural education of the Emerson Hall at the January 15 meeting of the Illinois State Steering committee held at Normal.

Mr. Charles C. Sweeney, chairman, reported that every county has received sufficient copies of the mathematics bulletin to supply all rural and village school teachers. A suggestion was made that a few teachers in each county be asked to try out the bulletin and report on each item therein.

It was also suggested that a few counties might be organized on an experimental basis and hold meetings under the direction of a leader such as Mr. W. B. Storm of Northern Illinois State Teachers College who directed the production of the bulletin.

The members of the committee voted that the production committees of the five areas, namely, language arts, social studies, natural science, mathematics, and fine and applied arts be discharged upon the printing of their bulletins. The policy of revising the mimeographed bulletins by obtaining suggestions from all sources was approved.

A recommendation was made that Mr. Sadtman call the committee on rural education together at an early date.

Delegate Assembly Held January 16

The second Delegate Assembly of the Southern Division of the Illinois Education Association was held Thursday, January 16, at Shroveton and Ardmore.

With practically a 100% attendance the Delegate Assembly got under way with the discussion of the practicability of using rural, elementary, and high school conference to replace the customary county institutes. This motion was met with no definite action by the Delegate Assembly although several county representatives did express the opinion that such conferences would be valuable, and that they would cooperate to make any conference sponsored by the Illinois Education Association a success.

The spring meeting of the IEA for which plans have just been completed, is to be held March 21, at Carbondale, Harrisburg and West Frankfort.

ART CLASS VISITS HANDICRAFTS PROJECT AT NEW SHAWNEETOWN

By EDITH LLOYD.

With cloudy skies above and yellow mud under foot, and no few yeltinges as to the outcome of their mission, the historic decorating art class arrived at the Handicrafts Training Center of the W. P. A. project at New Shawneetown last Friday. The members of the class, engaged at present on the problem of planning an economical redecoration for the historic Hall house and decorating individual interior projects as well, could see little appeal in the rainy morning.

Various Crafts Are Carried On. The Handicrafts Training Center proved to be a building much smaller for the job than it being accomplished there. Mrs. Lucille Bass, who is in charge of the women's section of the center, took the class first to a group busy putting case seats in chairs which had been made by the men in the wood-working section. In another center two women were weaving reed baskets. Further on a young woman was engaged in knotting a cotton rug. Mrs. Earl explained that this was an experiment with the Persian rug knep in a cotton material.

Next were two women combing raw, washed wool. This is done by hand with two wire brushes, long or short-toothed brushes drawn back and forth across each other with the wool between. The wool is then drawn into heavy thread by a machine called a "siver."

Weaving of a linen table cloth on a two-harness loom was shown. The girls were given a chance at treadling the loom. It was a professional when it was first day, but she looked like a professional when at the invitation of Mrs. Earl, a member of the class tried the ancient art. In the same room was a six-harness loom, more complicated in its function than the two-harness, with their limited facilities, the group can produce a variety of fabrics in a variety of weaves and colors.

Two unpolished divans, modern in structure were stacked in one corner of the same room. The upholstery material, a handsome heavy wool in natural color, had been made on the looms in this same room. The class learned that these and others in the store room were a part of a project for furnishing a Girl Scout cabin in Benton.

S. I. N. U. Alumni in Charge of Project. John Garrison, a graduate of S. I. N. U. '23, is in charge of this Handicrafts Center. His territory includes sixteen counties through which he travels to find jobs for the Shawneetown Center.

The project, a part of the location of Shawneetown, is authorized to undertake the building and weaving of cloth for any state-supported or non-profit organization. This material is used in the wood-working shop where

Strikes Down, Despite Spotlight

Despite the recent spotlighting of strikes in defense industries, the number of labor shutdowns is actually on the decline. The figure for 1940, at 2450 strikes, was far below those for the somewhat comparable period of national emergency in 1916 and 1917. Chart traces number of strikes and number of workers involved during past 25 years.
