University School may close next year

GSC asks U Center fund study

By Paula Musto
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The University School, once the core of the teacher training program at SIU, may close its doors after this year.

John Q. Clark, dean of the college of education and Chancellor Robert G. Lyster, are now in correspondence with the SIU Board of Trustees, concerning the question of closing the school. The Board of Trustees will make the final decision.

William Mathias, principal of the school, cited budget cutbacks by the Illinois State Board of Higher Education as one of the main reasons for the proposal.

"The Board is looking at places to cut back the budget, and the laboratory school is an easy target," Mathias said.

Mathias also said there is growing feeling among educators that the concept of a university school is obsolete. "Laboratory schools do not always present a realistic teaching situation," he said.

Small classes, large teaching staffs, and above average students often separate laboratory schools from public schools.

"It is sometimes thought that things that might work in a laboratory school would not work in the public schools," Mathias said.

Mathias said in the past few years the University School has been trying to get away from public schools.

The recommendations are part of a long list of fee revisions proposed by the GSC. The GSC also recommended a voluntary athletic fee for graduate students and abolishment of the $10.50 activity fee for graduate students in favor of a $2 graduate fee.

The GSC based its recommendations on a study of the University fee structure by its finance committee and has asked Chancellor Robert G. Lyster to convene a special committee to review the University Center, according to Lonnie Johns, a member of the finance committee.

Johns is also a member of the Student Fee Study Committee, a University-wide committee called for by Lyster last fall. Johns said the University committee should complete its study by Jan. 20. The GSC committee made its recommendation at a Tuesday night meeting of the GSC and were passed after some modifications.

Johns said the University Center committee should look into all areas involving financing, programming and funding of the University Center.

Horsley report hits home, dope

By Steve Brown
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Drugs, police and broken homes were among the major areas which drew recommendations from the Joint Legislative Committee on Campus Unrest.

State Sen. G. William Horsley, R-Springfield, who served as chairman of the committee, termed the report, which was released Tuesday, "fair, but complete."

Horsley said the committee, which spent several months investigating campus unrest in Illinois, has made many recommendations. Horsley estimated that 75-80 bills will probably be introduced into the General Assembly as a result of the committee report.

Horsley said the report cites the breakdown of the family as a major cause of unrest. He said that children from broken homes are not often able to cope with various problems they encounter in college.

The committee also recommends that higher education in the state look towards commuter campuses to take the burden off larger residential schools, like SIU-Carbondale.

The report praises SIU's Saluki Patrol and urge other universities to examine the system. The Saluki Patrol is composed of students enrolled in Corrections and Law Enforcement.

"I think students enforcing the law for students is good," Horsley said.

Horsley said the Democrats on the committee filed a separate concurring minority report disagreeing with recommendations dealing with the use of injunctions and several other areas.

There was also a supplementary report filed with the main report. Horsley said he wrote the additional material, intending to submit it personally but that a majority of the members on the committee signed the document.

Horsley said that local police should request the assistance of the Illinois Bureau of Investigation to aid in controlling drug problems on campus. But he added "they shouldn't wait for the FBI to handle their problems."

Horsley said the committee does recommend a review of the law on possession of marijuana. Horsley said it may be determined that the law is too strict.

In other findings, the committee recommended:

- Use of ex-parte injunctions to control campus unrest.
- Classification of rocks and bottles as dangerous weapons.
- Use of curfews and non-student bans from campuses in emergency situations.
- Review of discipline procedures and the use of students as hearing officers.
- Literature distributed on campus should identify the sponsor of the material.
- Full disclosure of financial background of all campus groups.

Reacting to initial reports calling the group's findings "mild," Horsley said the committee tried to be fair, but in certain cases tension surrounding the state-wide hearings put a different light on the matter.

"We affirm the right to dissent and protest," Horsley said, "but we are determined to stop the 3-4 per cent of the students who want to close the state's universities down."

U.S. to end Viet combat role by next summer

PARIS (AP) — Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird said Wednesday the U.S. combat role in South Vietnam will end after the middle of next summer, when the South Vietnamese will take over the military burden.

"We will have an air support role and the combat forces which will be assigned to the logistics, support and artillery roles will not be a combat mission but will be a security mission," he told a news conference.

"They will be there to protect and support the forces that are assigned these roles . . . We will be in a position where the American combat responsibility will be removed as far as South Vietnam is concerned."

Laird praised the Vietnamization program, under which the South Vietnamese are trained to take over combat missions, saying there had been "substantial progress."

Laird declared the South Vietnamese forces are "much better equipped, much better trained, and leadership has improved to the point where they are able to take over the military burden."

Laird's statement did not mean that U.S. soldiers no longer will be engaged in combat, although their role will be to protect logistics, air and artillery bases.

An aide explained: "We will always have American troops protecting the remaining forces." Thus if the enemy attacks the bases, U.S. troops will be drawn into battle.

Laird's statement on ending the U.S. combat role reflected hopes expressed by the Nixon administration previously.

Laird gave no indication of when he thought the last American troops could all be out of Vietnam.

Laird's statement did not mean that U.S. soldiers no longer will be engaged in combat, although their role will be to protect logistics, air and artillery bases.

Pilots scan Malaysian flood devastation

KUALA LUMPUR (AP) — British pilots flying relief missions over flood-stricken central Malaysia reported Wednesday they saw wide areas of total devastation with thousands of rural homes under water.

The government has mobilized relief operations for the entire peninsula but bad weather delayed the airlift of food to the Temerloh area on the east coast, where 50,000 villagers have been cut off without communication for eight days.

Rising waters flooded the historic town of Malacca, 70 miles south of Kuala Lumpur, badly damaging buildings hundreds of years old.

An estimated 115,000 persons were forced to flee their homes on the Malayan peninsula during the flooding. The sun shone Monday after a week of unseasonable heavy rains.

Officials placed the death toll at 35.

The entire center of Malacca was submerged, including colonial buildings erected by Portuguese, Dutch and English settlers.

Water has subsided in Kuala Lumpur and residents walked wearily through mud and debris to assess the millions of dollars in damage.

The United States had offered six helicopters and a plane load of relief supplies in response to a Malaysian appeal. The helicopters were to be flown from Tan Son Nhut airport in Saigon.

Policy changes require higher grade standards

University News Services

SIU students can expect to face more demanding standards of scholarship during the coming year.

New policies going into effect during the winter and summer quarters will limit the options of students on warning or probation status and will take most of the chance of "forgiveness" away from anyone who fails a course.

Registrar Robert McGrath said as of this quarter, a student issued scholastic warning or a probation notice must immediately show progressive improvement in the form of a higher overall grade point average as he accumulates hours. Otherwise he will face continued probation or suspension from school.

In the past, students on warning could get back in good standing by posting a "C" average in the following quarter. Probationary students could be eased to the warning level by doing the same thing.

McGrath said the new policy means that "Once a student is on warning or probation he must improve or he is going to be suspended." Students on suspension can be re-admitted only by special permission of his dean.

Another policy change will take away most of the latitude accorded students who repeat a course they have failed.

As of now, only the repeat grade is figured into the overall grade point average, although the flunking grade does go into the student's transcript with a special footnote.

Beginning this summer, and based on spring term performance, the failure will be counted as well as the repeat grade on the grade-point record.

"It should make students aware of the fact that there's less forgiveness for poor performance and that it behooves them to do their best the first time through," McGrath said.

"If we're providing instruction at less than cost for Illinois residents, there's no reason why the public should pay so someone can take the same course several times."

Legislature should tighten income laws

Controversy still hangs over the estate of the late Secretary of State Paul Powell, who left a startlingly large hoard of cash and securities when he died in October.

The public is asking questions about Powell's estate and rightly so. Where did the initial $800,000 in cash—stuffed in shoe boxes and envelopes in Powell's hotel room—come from? Was it savings or money for "emergencies," as he is said to have told Edwardsville Chancellor John S. Rendleman, executor of the Powell estate? Was it legally acquired or was it possibly acquired through deals using his powerful position? Was it campaign funds or kickbacks paid to Powell by his employees? Did Powell report the $800,000 in filing his income tax?

These are questions which have been raised and which must be answered.

Some state officials have said Rendleman acted properly in handling the estate but some Illinoisans have questioned his actions. Answers to these questions also should be provided by the investigation being made by the Illinois Bureau of Investigation (IBI).

Part of the blame for the controversy must rest on Illinois' weak income disclosure law for elected state officials.

The present state law doesn't adequately protect against conflict of interests and should be strengthened to require that all state officials disclose the amounts and sources of outside income. This would be a step toward preventing conflict of interest questions and controversies like the Powell estate has provoked.

If Illinois had a stronger law, the controversy over Powell's surprising cache might have been avoided and the $800,000 accounted for.

For the good of all involved—the state, the public, the record Powell left as a public office holder and also for SIU and Rendleman—the IBI investigation must be thorough, answering all questions.

And the General Assembly must act to strengthen Illinois' income disclosure law.

Stash cache with students

Student workers who picked up paychecks before Christmas now have a long wait for their next checks because it takes about a month of work before the first checks for the quarter are issued.

Since no one seems to know where Paul Powell's hoard came from anyway and since a costly and time consuming investigation seems necessary to unveil the source, the student workers of SIU could do the state a service by suggesting that some of Powell's stash be distributed among them.

That way John Rendleman would become a real public servant, the IBI could cancel its investigation and Atty. Gen. Scott and Gov. Ogilvie wouldn't need to worry about those press conferences—which are "misunderstood" anyway.

Letters to the editor

Anti-AID sincerity is hard to swallow

To the Daily Egyptian:

Late this summer the Daily Egyptian published my letter concerning the Vietnamese Studies Center, in which I questioned the sincerity of those "students" active in last spring's May Festival. It was followed several days later by a letter which countered this view, using such effective rhetorical techniques as "I was there, I should know" and "vagueness is next to godliness."

I still maintain that the majority of students involved in attacking the VSC and ROTC offices did so for reasons other than a sincere interest in clarifying the time worn issues, particularly the AID-VSC relationship. Of the many people actively involved in last spring's fiasco, only 13 attended the local subcommittee hearings on "campus unrest." Perhaps the others dropped out or have accepted $25,000 positions as nuclear physicists.

More recently 13 individuals accepted an offer by the SIU "Blue Ribbon Committee" to testify at its ROTC program hearing. Where were all the "sincere students" who earlier were so concerned about "academic freedom and rational discourse"? Why haven't they utilized the very organs which can effect the changes they so rabidly sought last spring?

A further, more specific example concerns one Jeffrey Long. Long an active and vociferous critic of the Center's AID funding, Mr. Long was photographed carrying a poster in broken Vietnamese which is probably trying to say, among other things, "Off AID." Right on! Horray for free dissent! Unfortunately, Mr. Long was also regularly receiving a comfortable stipend from the Vietnamese Studies Center, thoughtfully provided by the Agency for International Development.

To continue blanket acceptance of the sincerity gambit at this point seems ridiculous. If the anti-AID movement could be shorn of its show business element, perhaps the remaining critics (13?) could operate more effectively. At least then they could be criticized on only one minor consideration—trying to modify U.S. foreign policy on Southeast Asia at SIU.

What does society think of cigarette vendors?

To the Daily Egyptian:

In an article Dec. 10 on vending machines, Ken Albertini, Carbondale area manager of ARA, assures us that "we have one of the finest kitchens to handle all our sandwiches...there has never been a complaint about sanitary conditions. We take utmost care to insure that the kitchen is spotless." From the article we can assume that ARA, Auxiliary Services of SIU and the Jackson County Board of Health are practically sweaty with concern for our health, right?

Wrong! Suppose a tainted sandwich slipped past the watchful eyes of Mr. Albertini, the A.S. and the Board of Health, what then? You would get a fierce stomach ache for a day or so. You could possibly get hepatitis and be sick for half a year. There is a slight chance you would die. Imagine the furor if a case of food poisoning were ever traced to an ARA sandwich. But a few food poisoning deaths are not really such a big deal.

ARA sells cigarettes. Cigarettes kill a thousand Americans every day at an average of eight years prematurely. Ninety percent of the lung cancer deaths and thirty percent of the deaths from heart disease are traceable to cigarettes. Mr. Albertini (a recreation major who should therefore know better), the ARA, Mr. Rasche, the Auxiliary Services division of SIU and the Board of Health don't see anything wrong with selling cigarettes. SIU even sells them in the Life Science Building!

Daily highway deaths, Viet Nam war deaths, deaths from alcohol, drugs and poisoned food combined together do not equal the daily death toll from cigarettes.

What does society think of dope peddlers, Mr. Albertini? What does society think of people who sell tainted sandwiches, Mr. Rasche? What does society think of people who sell cigarettes?

Barmaid's work taxes mind, body

By Kathy Evans
Student Writer

The hours are terrible, the pay is low and the customers are unruly.

During an evening's work a person is likely to 1) get drenched, 2) collect several cigarette burns on her clothing, 3) run another pair of nylons, 4) develop another bun-ion and 5) lose her temper.

What is this noble profession by which some SIU coeds earn pin money and/or rent? Whatever the title — barmaid, cocktail waitress or nightclub slave — the work is more difficult than one might imagine.

This reporter's experience as a Carbondale waitress has taught her a few lessons, among them the value of a dollar and the desirability of being a Woolworth heiress or owning large chunks of Las Vegas.

The nightclub waitress is generally thought to earn her wages through salary and tips. Personal experience teaches that she is likely to earn more ignoring customers and duties and instead scanning the floor for money.

Customers, often slightly inebriated and therefore uncoordinated, are prone to drop change and bills in the dimly lit bar. Any waitress with fair night vision, swift hands and greedy nature can make out quite nicely. She may appear terribly downcast and cause frequent collisions, but she can laugh all the way to her piggy bank after work.

The waitress' job is basically simple. She is responsible for a certain section of the bar, through which she must casually run (if business is heavy) or jog (if it's a slow night) to wait on tables. Personally, I have considered switching from low-heeled shoes to All-Star Conversees or orthopedic jobs after many marathon nights.

The waitress is expected to smile even when a customer exuberantly bounces past, spilling a full tray of drinks and skipping the apology, or when the aisles are solidly blocked with noisy students, clapping to the beat of a rock band equipped with the world's most powerful amplifiers.

Besides serving drinks, the waitress picks up empty glasses, mugs and pitchers, an activity which is responsible for some of Carbondale's largest gest female biceps. Perhaps the height of savoir-fare for this reporter was reached the night she learned to juggle four empty pitchers, six mixed drink glasses and eight mugs. The elation was shortlived along with the glassware.

When the happy, bolsterous customers have heard the last throbbing beats from the rock band, the lights come on, and behold — Mardi Gras was never like this.

The floor of the nightclub is littered with empty cigarette packs, plastic cups, straws, spilled ashes, broken glassware, abandoned mugs and pitchers, someone's shoe, alcoholic rivers, a lost ID and shredded paper. The tables bear similar witness to a hard night of drinking and the wastebaskets overflow.

As the last of the customers walks, weaves or stumbles out the door, the waitress is still hard at work, cleaning tables, righting chairs, emptying ashtrays and still looking for money on the floor.

With grime under her fingernails, hair hanging in strings, ashes on her skirt, runs in her nylons and her eyes somewhat crossed, she turns in her money changer after subtracting tips and ponders the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

Now if only she could lose that habit of looking for money on the sidewalk after work...

GOP top job hanging

WASHINGTON (AP)— Sen. Robert J. Dole of Kansas says he still hasn't received word from President Nixon naming him chairman of the Republican National Committee — but he is saying what he will do when he gets the job.

The re-election of Richard Nixon in 1972, he said, will be his primary role in the post.

Dole spoke to newsmen Wednesday about his plans for the national committee as it gears up for the next presidential election.

He said he has also been busy this week mending political fences with a group of Republican senators who have actively opposed his appointment, including Senate Minority leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania.

"I will be the Republican chairman, not any ideological chairman," Dole said, minimizing opposition to his appointment from some liberal and moderate Republican senators.

At the western White House in San Clemente, Calif., White House press secretary Ronald Ziegler would neither confirm nor deny that Dole is the President's choice. He said Nixon had not talked to Dole about the matter.

Volunteer service attempts suicide prevention by phone

Suicide attempts have become a serious problem for many people in the United States, and the need for service to head off their efforts is growing proportionately, according to Cook Rollo, volunteer member of a newly established crisis telephone service.

The challenge has been taken up locally by a group of psychologists and other interested people who are initiating the service Jan. 8 for any person who feels he is at the end of his rope, who is isolated and lonely and who believes his problems have become desperate.

This service will attempt to provide an instant source of support to callers who dial 457-3366 with problems by essentially listening, helping them explore alternatives and to refer callers to places where their problems can be adequately dealt with. The telephone service will also coordinate emergency services to persons who are contemplating suicide.

The personnel manning the phones will all be experienced volunteers or graduate students in psychology, Rollo said.

Thomas Schill, chairman of the program, is a member of the psychology department at SIU and the coordinator of the training program for the service workers. The training, he said, has been organized since October and it involved the volunteers with a variety of possible incidents which they might face in their work.

The crisis telephone service will supplement other services in the area which are open only during the day, Rollo said. The important reason for the 8 p.m. - 2 a.m. night service has been shown by statistics compounded by another phone service in Champaign. According to this center, 75 per cent of the calls come at night.

The Champaign center, known as the Champaign County Suicide Prevention Service, is one of three such centers in Illinois. The other two are the Charles F. Read Zone Center in Chicago and the Peoria Suicide Prevention Service. There are now more than 60 such services based in 22 states, Rollo said.

In this area, the service will be involved to some degree with related psychological service centers. These include the Clinical Services Center at SIU and the Jackson County Mental Health Clinic in Murphysboro. Funds will be contributed by the Clinical Services Center and the Counseling and Testing Center. The Illinois Department of Mental Health will aid the phone service by providing volunteers.

Grand ceremonies highlight Penney's Carbondale complex

J.C. Penney Company's new Carbondale shopping complex on Route 13 will open Feb. 11, according to Edward D. Keyes, the store manager. Keyes said the day will be highlighted by grand opening ceremonies, with local officials and Penney Company executives in attendance.

Keyes said the 113,000 square-foot complex will include a department store, food supermarket, beauty salon, coffee shop, free-standing auto center and outdoor shop. Parking space will be available for 800 cars.

He said the new store will be 13 times larger than the Penney's store in Murphysboro which will close Jan. 31 after 50 years of operation.

Catalog service will also be provided at the new store. Keyes said the new building will also feature a 1,200 square-foot community room which will be available for free use by local organizations.

Director speaks here

Student government criticizes IBI

By Chuck Hutchcraft
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Student government officials, while welcoming Mitchell Ware, director of the Illinois Bureau of Investigation (IBI), at SIU Wednesday, said that students should "fully realize the serious reservations" many persons have concerning the IBI.

In a statement released Wednesday, Tom Scherschel, student body president, and John McCaffrey, student body vice-president, criticized the IBI saying it was more concerned with "headline hunting" than seeking "honest crime control."

Ware, former superintendent of the Illinois Division of Narcotics Control, will be guest speaker at an open meeting of the SIU College Republicans at 9 p.m. Thursday in the Morris Library Auditorium.

Testifying in the November hearings at Carbondale, before the Joint Legislative Committee on Campus Unrest, headed by G. William Horsley, R-Springfield, Ware maintained that many "drug pushers" had active parts in "the police-student confrontation" last May.

Ware said that drugs were not the "major reason" for campus disorders.

The statement, also signed by Nick Fera and Tom Bayirt, administrative assistants, said: "Far too often, the IBI has engaged itself in headline hunting persecutions instead of honest crime control."

The IBI, the statement said, has alienated the youth of Illinois by its persecution of marijuana users. The IBI has ignored the "big, rich criminals" to make "spectacular raids on poor, small-time users of 'pot,'" the statement said.

"Couple these facts with IBI's refusal to engage in activities that help to protect the rights of citizens against the abuses of other law enforcement agencies in Illinois," the statement said.

Foreign students must file registration forms

January is the month for all international students and other aliens to file alien registration, according to the International Student Services.

A special form, called the Alien Registration Form, is available at any post office, including the Campus Post Office. Aliens failing to register in January may be subject to deportation.

Mitchell Ware

Council urges study of Center funding

He said all students pay a $5 per quarter fee to help retire University Center debt service requirements and make up deficits in the Center's operations.

He said the $5 fee may be doubled or tripled after the University completes its study of fees, depending on the University committee's recommendations.

Johns said tuition fees are also used to help retire debts and make up deficits for the Center. The amount in fees used has jumped from $195,000 in 1968-69 to almost $1.6 million in 1970-71, he said, because the Center's debt service requirement has tripled with construction of Phase II of the Center.

Johns said one reason for looking into the way funds are raised for the Center is because non-students pay the same amount for using Center facilities, such as the Ballrooms, that students do.

The GSC's recommendation to establish a separate $6.15 mandatory health service fee is to "improve the present Health Service, which is insufficiently funded," Johns said.

Presently, $4.15 goes to the Health Service out of the Activity Fee.

This would increase the Health Service funds by almost 50 percent, Johns said. Joe Vinovich, GSC president, said the money would be used to hire two more doctors, provide a seven per cent raise for health service employees, and to purchase another ambulance.

The GSC recommendations also call for a voluntary athletic fee for graduate students. Presently all students pay a $10 athletic fee.

Johns said graduate students should not be required to pay the $10 since they are "not eligible to receive NCAA awards and cannot participate in intercollegiate athletics." He said the Graduate Council, composed of graduate faculty, agrees.

Johns said the GSC wants the Activity fee for graduate students abolished in favor of the $2 graduate fee and administered by the GSC for several reasons.

He said presently all activity fees are administered by the undergraduate Student Senate. "By paying a direct $2 fee, graduate students would be able to hold the GSC accountable for it, and the fee would make graduate students more aware of graduate student-oriented activities," Johns said.

The GSC recommendations are apparently made with the anticipation that revisions will be made in the present fee structure by the University committee. Johns indicated the University committee would make some revisions.

He said the Board of Trustees is expected to act on fee revisions in February or March.

Many think laboratory schools obsolete

from the white-middleclass-bright student image that has been associated with it in the past.

However, there are other arguments for closing the school, which has 200 students from nursery school through grade six. For one thing, many of the activities which are the purpose for the existence of the laboratory school are being taken over by the public schools. For example, most student teaching is now handled by the public schools. Matthias said there are both pros and cons for closing the school. On one side, he said, much difficult research and experimental work is done by the laboratory school.

"Parents of public school students might object to experimental teaching programs. At the laboratory school, experimental programs are expected," he said.

If an experimental program does not work at a laboratory school, the students can easily recover, but students in a public school might not have as many opportunities to correct the situation.

Matthias also pointed out that students from college education courses would not be able to observe students in public school classes as they do in the laboratory school classes. Some educators consider this observation a vital part of teacher training.

Despite these apparently needed functions of the laboratory school, the number of such schools is decreasing in Illinois. Laboratory schools, with their large teaching staffs and innovative programs, have proven to be expensive.

With this in mind, Matthias said there is a good chance the school will close. The final decision will be made later this month.

Layer says 'no' to water raise plea

Chancellor Robert G. Layer has rejected the SIU water rate increase placed by the Carbondale City Council as of Jan. 1.

Layer stated three reasons for the University's rejection of the increase in a letter to the city.

Layer said that according to the existing contract, rate increases can be made subject to negotiations, but that no negotiations have taken place.

City Manager William Schmidt said the city and SIU did negotiate, but the city was forced to raise the rates when agreement was not reached.

Layer said the present ordinance gives the city manager arbitrary power to put water users into classifications. Schmidt said changing SIU from the commercial to residential rate was not arbitrary because most of SIU's water use was residential.

Layer said the water rate increase was retroactive since it was put into effect Jan. 1. Schmidt said he did not agree with this.

Shooting hearing set for Jan. 18

The hearing for the six defendants in the Nov. 13 Carbondale shootings, scheduled for 9 a.m. Thursday in Murphysboro, has been postponed until 10 a.m. Jan. 18.

Flint Taylor, a representative for the defendants, said the buses that were scheduled to take people to the hearing will be rescheduled for the later date.

Jerry Maxwell, assistant city manager, said the Council did not imply that the increase would be retroactive, but "if this is the case, it only involves a few days and I am sure this can be negotiated."

Layer said the University is ready to negotiate the rate increase. Schmidt said the city is also ready but said the three questions have been sufficiently answered and that talks should center on other concerns.

Trolley route charms

Americans in Finland

Trolley cars following route 3-T, in Helsinki, Finland, have special charm for American tourists, according to National Geographic. Three-T makes a figure eight through the city, passing many points of interest such as the cathedral, the parliament house and several colorful markets. At each stop, a well modulated taped voice coming over the streetcar's sound system tells the traveler exactly what he is seeing -- in English.

Schmidt said the former rate discriminated against the small user and the rate increase would help restore the balance.

Maxwell said the new rate will involve an increase of 33 percent. "The University will pay $1.11 per 1,000 gallons of water, whereas it used to pay $.81 per 1,000 gallons."

Music proficiency exam set Jan. 16

The proficiency examination for Music 200 will be given at 10 a.m. Jan. 16 in Altgeld Hall, Room 248.

The examination will include music terminology, fundamentals of notation, including scale and chord construction. A practical examination demonstrating keyboard facility is also included.

Black Arts Festival seeking entrants for Saturday show

The Kappa Alpha Psi Black Arts Festival scheduled for Saturday is still open for participants, according to Ralph Moore, fraternity president. Moore said that anyone interested in showing or performing is invited to enter.

Information can be obtained by calling Moore, Marvin Evans or Cavour McClain at 453-2451. Moore said they would like to hear from participants by Friday evening.

but added that people can drop in at the festival.

The Black Arts Festival will feature sculpture and painting displays, arts and crafts exhibits, African dancers, poets and musicians. Moore said most of the participants are students, and all members of the University and community are invited to attend.

Exact times for the free festival are undecided.

ICC closes the Red Wagon Lines

By Pat Silha
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Carbondale Transit Company, Inc., (The Little Red Wagon Lines) was ordered off the streets Wednesday by the Illinois Commerce Commission, according to Richard Bramen, owner of the lines.

Bramen said he was notified by the ICC Wednesday morning to immediately cease operation because the lines had not been certified as a public carrier by the commission.

Charles Janulis, supervisor of the Motorbus division of the ICC, said during a telephone interview, that all transit systems which are not controlled by municipalities are required by law to be certified by the ICC. He said Bramen had not even started to make an application.

Janulis said "several" complaints had been received against Bramen, but it made no difference whether or not complaints had been registered since he "was in violation of the law anyway." He declined to name the persons who had complained.

Bramen said he did not know that an ICC certification was needed since he had been granted a franchise by the Carbondale City Council. "It is my fault, I didn't get proper permission, but I didn't know I needed it," he said.

Bramen said that everyone who bought a winter quarter bus ticket will be completely refunded after turning in the ticket to the company, which is located on Rt. 1 in Carbondale.

Trial of 9 Jews ends in Moscow Wednesday

MOSCOW (AP) — The trial of nine Jews in Leningrad was halted Wednesday 10 minutes after it opened. Reports circulated that the Soviet government has decided to cancel any further prosecution of Jews.

Jewish informants said relatives of the Leningrad defendants had been told by court officials that the trial had been postponed because one of the defendants was ill with influenza.

But the Moscow correspondent of the French Communist newspaper L'Humanite, reported there will be no further trials of Jews. The Italian Communist paper L'Unita carried a similar report.

Correspondents of Western Communist papers are frequently used by the Soviet government to leak information. This was the case Dec. 30 when Communist journalists here reported in advance that the Russian Supreme Court would commute the death sentences of two of the defendants of the first Leningrad hijack trial.

The following day, the court granted reprieves to the condemned men.

There was no confirmation from official sources of the Communist newspaper reports, and there has been no indication what the fate of the Jewish defendants will be.

In addition to the second Leningrad trial, two more had been reportedly scheduled; one in Riga, the capital of Soviet Latvia, and the other in Kishinev, the capital of Soviet Moldavia. The reports said all 12 defendants in those trials are Jews.

Monotony, isolation

Plight of POW is agonizingly routine

By Jules Lob
AP Newsfeature Writer

Day after day after day the routine is the same; the gongs, the guards, the propaganda broadcasts.

For the American prisoner of war in North Vietnam, life is enforced inactivity, isolation and monotony that surpasses physical beatings.

Air Force Col. Norris M. Overly spent five months as a prisoner of the North Vietnamese. He spent time in each of three prisons which make up the "Hanoi Hilton." All were nearly identical and all were at separate locations in downtown Hanoi.

The routine was the same at each, he said, and went like this:

Triangle gong, similar to a ranch hand's dinner bell, awakens prisoners at 5:30 a.m. Prisoners arise, fold mosquito netting, fold two thin brown blankets, wait. Loudspeakers in cells bring 30-minute propaganda broadcast. Guard opens the first cell door. Prisoner takes honey-bucket to cesspool, empties it, returns to cell. Guard opens second cell. Third. Fourth... 20th.

Guard goes back and starts again at first cell. Prisoner goes to wash room. Allowed five minutes at concrete trough. Returns to cell. Guard opens second cell, second prisoner washes. Third... fourth. Twice a week prisoners allowed to shave. Guard inspects razor after each man to see that blade is not stolen.

Gong at 10:30 a.m. announces first meal. Guard opens first cell... second... third. Prisoners go in turn to room at end of cell block and pick up bowl of soup and piece of bread, return to cells to eat. Guard unlocks cells and prisoners return empty dishes, one at a time.

Gong announces noontime nap. Gong at 2 p.m. announces end of nap. Loudspeakers unload more propaganda. Gong at 4:30 announces second meal. Cell doors unlocked one at a time. More propaganda. Gong at 8:30 p.m. announces end of day. Prisoners unroll blankets. He down, await gong at 5:30 a.m.

Navajos elect new chairman; first college-educated leader

WINDOW ROCK, Ariz. (AP) —The affairs of the 128,000-member Navajo nation, the world's most populous Indian tribe, passed Tuesday into the hands of Peter MacDonald, 42, a one-time electronics expert.

MacDonald, vice chairman Wilson Skeet, 44, and 74 tribal council members were inaugurated in a ceremony at the Navajo Tribal Fairgrounds despite near-zero weather.

The light bulb was kept burning in each cell 24 hours a day," Overly, who is now attending the National War College in Washington, D.C., recalled. "There was never any sense of day or night and never any feeling of more fatigue at one time than at another. I never really slept, not soundly, and never really felt awake either."

Overly said the enforced inactivity and the isolation caused the most agony.

Navy Lt. Robert Frishman, a prisoner for 21 months now recuperating in San Diego, and Air Force Capt. Wesley Rumble, who spent 15 months as a prisoner and who is now at George Air Force Base, Calif., agree.

Overly, Frishman and Rumble are three of nine American prisoners released by Hanoi so far. The United States believes that 378 men, perhaps as many as 500, and possibly many more, are being held captive among approximately 1,500 listed as missing in Indochina since 1964.

Frishman, whose right elbow was shattered when he was shot down Oct. 24, 1967 and is still unhealed, said of his prison experience:

"The actual physical thing isn't so bad. I was struck with rocks and had knives jabbed at me and I was slapped around and tied up with ropes on my bad arm. But it's the isolation, the extended isolation, that gets you. The weeks turn into months and the months turn into years... You think about all kinds of things."

Rumble said his time as a prisoner was "the worst thing I've ever lived through." He added: "The worst thing about it was the forced boredom and the deliberate cutting of communication with the outside and among prisoners."

Overly said some men were not allowed to write at all, others could write but did not receive mail and didn't know whether their letters—limited to six lines—ever got out. "I once asked an interrogator why they let some men write home and not others," Overly said, "and he quite frankly said, 'to confuse the enemy."

The propaganda broadcasts, Overly said, were dubbed Hanoi Hannah and consisted of repeated assertions that the United States would eventually withdraw from Vietnam because the American people were opposed to the war.

He said the broadcasts were by the same three persons—two women and a man. "I'd know their voices as well as I know my mother's," Overly added. Occasionally, he said, there were broadcasts by persons with American Negro accents telling of racial troubles.

The men were held from one to three per cell. They took turns pacing the floor for exercise. They had to take turns, Overly said, because there was only room between the bunks for one man to walk.

What about the idea of escape?

"We talked about it often," Overly said.

"We figured we could get out of prison—but then where would we be. In downtown Hanoi, that's where. Six-foot-tall men with blue eyes wearing red and white striped pajamas."

Newspaper says Army kept nerve gas loss undisclosed

WASHINGTON (AP)—Two hundred cylinders of deadly nerve gas were lost for three years after the Army stored them on a frozen Alaskan lake and they sank unnoticed during a spring thaw, the Washington Post reported.

The lethal gas, one drop of which could kill a person, had been scheduled for destruction and fused for demolition, the Post reported.

However, the explanation for destroying the cylinders was never given and the stockpile eventually sank in the lake, located in a remote portion of the Army's Gerstle River test area of the Fort Greely military reservation. The Post said the submerged munitions were recovered sometime between May 6 and Aug. 27, 1969, after a new commander heard rumors of the loss and ordered the lake drained.

The Army reported a post-recovery investigation of the cylinders disclosed no evidence the gas had leaked. It said it could not say when the munitions were recovered since "no formal document was executed."

The Army said it did not warn residents of the area because the fenced-off region was so remote from populated areas and tests after the cylinders were recovered showed no leaks.

The Post said the first admission of the error came when an Army memo detailing the problem reportedly was slipped under doors on Capitol Hill marked "Information for members of Congress."

Cure for acne, scurvy, bad breath, snakebite?

Mint, peppermint and spearmint, in the United States and Europe, is one of man's most popular, if not always proven, panaceas, according to the National Geographic Society. In England of 1640, the King's herbalist catalogued the uses of mint in the management or cure of snakebite, acne, bleary eyes, headaches, roughness of tongue, mad dog bites, kidney stones, bad memory, ill-favored breath, dandruff and scurvy.

Natural success

Fred Rohe started handling organic produce in his own little store five years ago. Now, he's chairman of the board of New Age Natural Foods, Inc., a million-dollar operation that recently opened the world's first organic supermarket in Palo Alto, Calif. (Copley News Service Photo)

Speculative venture achieves success

By Copley News Service

SAN FRANCISCO—If there's any doubt that an organic food revolution is beginning it can be dispelled first by the appearance of the world's only natural foods supermarket in nearby Palo Alto and second, by the success of the man who opened it.

Ever since the New Age Natural Foods supermarket put up its no smoking signs, stocked its shelves and flung open its doors as the first of its kind, it has had a surge of customers, both young and old.

Natural or organic foods are those grown and produced without any artificial treatments or additives. Insecticides, herbicides, plant hormones, artificial coloring and so on are taboo.

Organic food also is more inclusive than the traditional fare found in "health food" stores, which are usually small shops that concentrate on oils, lotions, vitamin pills, grains and ointments.

Fred Rohe, 33, is president and chairman of the board of New Age Natural Foods, Inc.

Rohe charges higher prices for most things but he believes people are fed up with modern, nutritionless sugar-coated foods. Rohe is convinced that people will choose organic food every time if just given the opportunity. It's a matter of personal ecology, he says.

"Our job has to be education and information," Rohe says. "We're selling the new age and food is the medium. It's an opportunity to change the quality of life."

Rohe has cause to be optimistic. Five years ago Rohe left a career as a starving writer of fiction to try an organic food business venture. He borrowed $5,000 and bought a health foods store.

But he wanted to stock it with more than just the usual health foods fare. So he added fresh produce, animal products, baked goods.

After the first slow year young people discovered him. His business doubled each year until 1970. Business was so good that he annexed a shop across the street and used it for a granary.

Meanwhile, the trend toward eating naturally was growing in the East as well as throughout the San Francisco Bay Area. In order to have uniform standards, Rohe organized a dozen growers, retailers and restaurateurs in Northern California into a group called Organic Merchants. All agreed not to handle any artificially treated foods and to try to educate the public to the values of natural food.

The group membership now is over 50 and ranges to Hawaii and Alaska.

In San Francisco alone, the number of natural foods stores and restaurants has tripled (from 4 to 12) in one year. And Rohe's little one-man operation five years ago is long gone.

Now, New Age is a million-dollar corporation that employs 50 people in four stores in four towns. It has a burgeoning produce subsidiary that distributes to 55 other stores as well.

All this hasn't gone unnoticed by Wall Street either. A year ago Dun & Bradstreet reported New Age receipts would total about $340,000 for all of 1969. Rohe estimates he'll make that much in the month of December.

"The biggest problem," Rohe says, "is keeping the shelves stocked with good organic food. A good day can wipe them clean."

A New Age vice president recently returned from a 11,000-mile trip around the nation to line up farmers to supply the subsidiary. It has about 130 farmers selling to it now. A year ago there were only a dozen.

New Age supermarket prices are high. Eggs are 84 cents a dozen. But with increased volume the price will drop, Rohe tells his customers. Indeed, a few months ago they were 98 cents.

Rohe says he isn't interested in making a lot of money.

"The only thing I want to see," he says, "is commodious, natural foods stores all over the nation. It doesn't make any difference to me whether New Age does it or its imitators."

The players watch the ball and the fans watch both...

Some fans involve themselves in prayer like gestures.

Basketball fans style -- they play and pray too

An electrical tension seems to fire up the crowd at SIU basketball games in the SIU Arena. Part of it, of course, is the fact that the people of Southern Illinois are basketball crazy.

The other part is somewhat undefinable. Nobody quite knows why people display the emotions they do at a ballgame.

At the SIU-St. Louis University game, the Arena fans were out in force and, while foiled in their team's pursuit—a win—they played their own unique part as individual commentators. These photos were taken Tuesday night but the tensions are seen at all games.

Ball State gets No. 2, dumps Dubuque 95-70

Ball State got back on the winning trail Tuesday night by romping over Dubuque, 95-70, in a non-conference basketball game.

The win broke an eight-game losing streak for the Cardinals who won the season opener, 86-75, against Wisconsin State-Whitewater. Ball State is still 0-1 in Midwestern Conference play.

Jim Regenold, a 6-3 forward from Anderson, Ind., sparked the Cardinal offense with 25 points, followed by sophomore Jon Canine, who scored 20 points in his debut as a starter.

Both teams used a zone defense, but the Cardinals were forced to rely on outside shots to win the game. Ball State jumped off to an early 6-0 lead and kept ahead of Dubuque the rest of the game by outbounding the Spartans 63 to 48. The Cardinals led 41-36 at halftime.

Dubuque came within three points of Ball State early in the second half, but the Cardinals pulled away in the fourth quarter after gaining a 64-57 lead.

Ball State returns to Midwestern Conference action Saturday when it travels to Terre Haute to face cross-state rival Indiana State. The Sycamores are on top of the league with a 2-0 mark in conference play and 8-3 overall.

Towers hosts prep grid stars

Three area griders from within 20 miles and an All-Stater from Peoria were hosted by the Saluki football coaching staff at Tuesday night's basketball game.

They are, Mark Congiardo of Murphysboro, Sam Lioacone of DuQuoin, Fred Heinz of Carbondale Community High and Mark Ruff of Peoria Richwoods High.

Intramural cage games scheduled

The following basketball games have been scheduled by the intramural office for Thursday on the SIU Arena courts.

8:15 p.m.: Abbott Universal Lifers vs. Allen Blues, court one; Cardinal's Commandos vs. Pierce First, court two; Allen I Golds vs. Wright I Heads, court three; Allen I Reds vs. Schneider Rebels, court four.

9:15 p.m.: T.P. North Stars vs. Dohr's Pains, court one; Boomer III Celtics vs. Warren Peace, court two; Death Dealers vs. Warren Wizards, court three; Wright Bros. vs. Southern Comforters, court four.

Congiardo is an All-Southwest Egyptian selection and also first team All-Southern Illinois. The 6-3, 205-pounder started three varsity seasons at offensive and defensive tackle while handling the placekicking duties.

Lioacone is another All-Southwest Egyptian selection, a 5-11, 195-pound fullback and linebacker from DuQuoin. He was voted the honorary All-Southwest team captain and second team All-Southern Illinois.

Although Heinz received no post-season honors, coach Dick Towers is very high on him as a potential split receiver, defensive back or quarterback. Heinz was the starting quarterback for the Terriers this past season.

The best of the four may be Ruff, an All-Stater from Peoria Richwoods. Ruff was also named Mid-State Nine and All-Illini.

His major experience has been at linebacker but Ruff has also seen some time at defensive end and tackle.

Towers said Illinois State and Northern Illinois from the Midwestern Conference are also interested in Ruff in addition to teams from the Big Eight and Big Ten conferences.

Michigan, SIU swimmers race tonight in dual meet action

By Ernest J. Schweit
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

Coach Ray Essick and his SIU swimmers will find out exactly how valuable his intensive training program has been tonight when the University of Michigan invades University School pool at 8 p.m. for a dual meet.

Last year the Wolverines stopped the Salukis, 38-66, on the way to a 5th place finish in the NCAA and to look at their squad this year you have to like their chances to move up.

The Wolverines, who Essick calls "one of the super swimming powers in the country," boast a team of tremendous balance.

"To give you an idea of how balanced Michigan's team is, they split their squad, sending half to the Michigan Relays and the other half to Purdue.

Sonny Liston found dead

Las Vegas, (AP) -- Former world heavyweight boxing champion Charles "Sonny" Liston was found dead by his wife in their luxurious desert home Tuesday night. Authorities said he may have been dead a week.

Geraldine Liston found the body of 38-year old husband in the master bedroom of their $60,000 home.

You know what happened? They won both meets," Essick said.

Essick's marveling of the Wolverines' squad is not unfounded. As of Christmas Stew Teasca had the fastest time in the nation for the 200-year breast stroke and Larry Day was first in the nation in the 200-yard butterfly.

The balance Essick was referring to comes mainly from returning lettermen Byron Macdonald, 200-yard butterfly; Don Peterson, individual medley and Roy McCoullough, 100-yard free style.

The Wolverines also boast a promising group of freshmen headed by Chris Hansen of Chicago. Hansen holds the second fastest time in the nation in the 200-yard backstroke.

In looking forward to the meet Essick had nothing but praise for the Wolverines. "They have one of the greatest swimming traditions in the country. The meet should pit our talent against their excellent balance.

"I don't want to predict an outcome, but I will say that we will be competitive and we will definitely be ready to race with them."

SIU women meet K-State next Tuesday

SIU's women's basketball team opens up against Kansas State next Tuesday in Women's Gym at 7 p.m. in a pre-season contest open to the public.

The ladies started practice Wednesday night with only two starters returning from the squad that won the Women's National Invitational Tournament consolation championship in Boston last season. Robin Watson, who averaged in double figures last year, returns at guard and 5-10 Marie Ballard will probably start at center.

Head coach Charlotte West said that two of last year's reserves who made the trip to Boston are back and she expects to build around the four.

Judy Auld is a 5-3 guard from Decatur Illinois who is "very fast" according to coach West. Also returning is Cathy Rowlett.

"I'll build around those four if I don't see anything better between now and the first game," said Coach West.

"And I don't want to apologize," she added, "but we may look as disgruntled as the boys did Tuesday night. The girls scrimmaged before Christmas but I haven't seen them since," she said Wednesday afternoon.

Kansas State was eliminated early in last year's NIT but they return four starters from last year's squad led by center Karen Sigel. Coach West said that she didn't have a chance to see the Jayhawks play at the tourney last year because they were in different brackets.

The Salukis open their regular season against Eastern Illinois Jan. 23 with a two-game series at Eastern Illinois University in Charleston.

Although the entire schedule is not confirmed yet, the women will play in the Illinois State College tournament Feb. 20 at Illinois State University in Normal.

The tourney includes Northern Illinois, Eastern Illinois, Western Illinois, Illinois State, the University of Illinois and SIU with other teams selected on the basis of their records to fill out the bracket. Southern is the defending champion of the tourney and has won the two-year-old event both times.

Auto Club to hold autocross Sunday

The Grand Touring Auto Club will hold an autocross Sunday at the SIU Arena. Registration begins at noon and the first car will be off at 1 p.m.

Registration fee for members is $1.50 and $2.50 for non-members. Memberships will also be available for $5.

Lambert: holiday layoff hurt Salukis

By Fred Weinberg
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

Paul Lambert strode into a small room in the SIU Arena Tuesday night with a soft drink in one hand and a pair of box scores clutched firmly in the other.

"Okay fellows," he asks of the assembled writers and broadcasters, "Are you all here to bury the corpse?" And the question is put in only partial jest.

The corpse, of course, being the SIU basketball team and season. The team had just dropped only its 12th home game in six years to a classy St. Louis University team, 84-70. And it marked—in Lambert's opinion—the beginning of a second, distinct season.

It was not the kind of mark a coach would want to have any kind of season begin with. Especially a season which includes the likes of Georgia Tech, Kentucky Wesleyan and Creighton. Not to mention an Indiana State team which has come from nowhere to win the last six of its games and the title of the Las Vegas Invitational over Christmas.

If anyone is now in a position to say such things as "bah" and "humbly" about the holiday on Dec. 25, it is Lambert.

He didn't go that far but he did make it very clear that, come next Jan. 5, his Salukis will have played considerable more than six games.

"It's like dividing the season into two separate seasons," he said of the long layoff which SIU has had over the break.

"There are two things you have to worry about when you have a layoff like this," said Lambert. "Physical and mental condition."

"We felt we were up to it. And defensively, I think we did a fair job. Look at Irving (St. Louis' Jim). If I read these statistics right, he was six for 12 from the field and here's a kid who averages 20 shots a game."

Irving is not a bad ball player. He ended up with 19 points—which is not too far below his 22 point per game average but, it can be assumed, he has had better nights. The one against Notre Dame when he got 31 for instance.

The SIU defense managed to keep the Billikens outside until the last few minutes of the game but it didn't really matter.

St. Louis was hitting so well from the outside that the Salukis couldn't present an adequate defense against the bombardment at any time during the game.

That, coupled with a shooting percentage of 36, and a poor offensive rebounding game spelled a 3-3 record for SIU.

And then there was a guard by the name of Carlos Martinez. He plays for St. Louis. Lambert didn't say much about him. Just a silent nod when a writer suggested that "Martinez killed you."

Martinez ended up with 22 points for the evening. He was five of six from the field in the first half and four for Salukis have been scheduled four in the second. That adds into the Las Vegas Invitational up to nine of 10 for the game next Christmas (which is the — most of them from well same journey Indiana State outside the 15 foot mark. won this year).

Was there a psychological problem involved in going against a Missouri Valley Conference team? "I don't think so," said Lambert, sloshing the ice around in his now empty cup.

"What I was fighting was what happened last year when we had the same layoff and were beaten so badly by Georgia Tech. The players felt that the layoff was what did it to them and I didn't want to get too negative about it."

Which brought the talk of the not-so-happy little gathering back to the subject of the layoff.

And Lambert said that the Walt Frazier—the best going

Not so long ago (1967) SIU had it's greatest basketball team, compilers of a 24-2 record and National Invitational Tournament champions.

On that team was a short-haired, clean-shaven young man whom former Boston Celtics' great Bill Russell recently said is destined to become the greatest guard the National Basketball Association has ever seen.

His name is Walt Frazier, "Clyde" to his New York Knickerbocker teammates and Howard Cosell, ex-lawyer turned sports expert.

Next Tuesday night, Frazier will be in the starting lineup for the East squad in the annual NBA All-Star game, held in San Diego this year.

It will be the second All-Star appearance for the Atlanta, Ga., native who now dons a set of bushy sideburns and moustache. The first was last year, a game in which Frazier didn't shine, scoring just a couple of points.

But that's one of the rare times Jack Hartman's former pupil hasn't distinguished himself. Twice, 1969 and 1970, he has been named the league's Most Valuable Defensive Player.

Perhaps it is appropriate that Frazier "stole" the award from one of his kindest critics: Russell. The 6-9 center held claim to it in 13 of 15 NBA seasons and had a string of 11 straight snapped in his final year, 1968-69.

Frazier has been to the Knicks just what he was to the '67 NIT team—court general. His presence or absence has played a major role in the Knicks' destiny over the past three years.

He was there last spring when the Knicks rushed to the NBA crown. But in 1969, it was a different story as an injured Frazier watched the Celtics eliminate his teammates 4-2 in the playoffs.

When Frazier entered his fourth season as a pro this year, he carried a 15.9 scoring average that has increased every season since his rookie campaign of 1967-68.

The Knicks top 1967 draft choice, even though he had one season of collegiate eligibility remaining, he averaged nine points per game as a rookie. The next season it soared to 17.5 and hit a 20.9 pace in the Knicks' championship campaign.

Th slender 6-4 former College Division All-American is currently averaging 21.8 and shooting at a .491 percentage, just off his lifetime professional mark of .499.

Oddly, Frazier shot .518 last year, the same as Lew Alcindor of the Milwaukee Bucks, who is exactly one foot taller.

An unselfish offensive performer, Frazier is well on his way to setting a Knicks' all-time assists record. Before Wednesday night's game with the Cleveland Cavaliers, he was fourth on the Knicks' all-time list with 1,857. Dick McGuire, Knicks' head scout, had 2,930 in eight seasons.

Sometime next season, he should surpass current Atlanta Hawks' coach Richie Guerin who had 2,752, also in eight seasons. In second place is Carl Braun with 2,821 in 12 seasons.

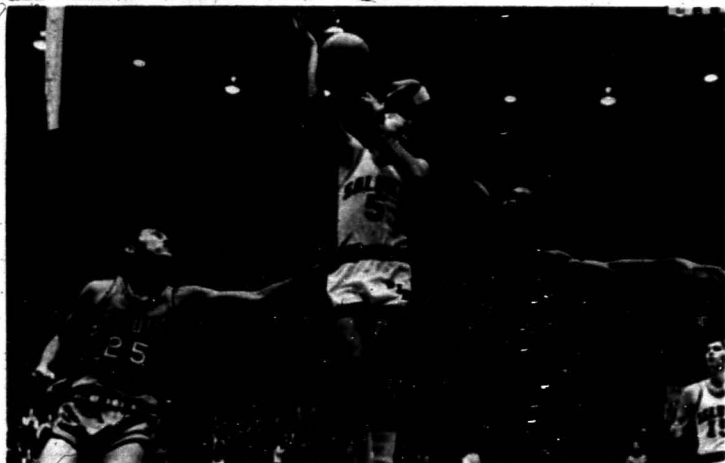

Walt Frazier is a great basketball player. Ask Bill Russell, Look at Clyde's records. Among the elite of the NBA, he is destined to be the best.

And this is the same man who shows up only once in the SIU record books. As a 1964 freshman, he dished in 318 points, third behind Bruce Butchko and John Garrett.

'Totally unexpected'

Winner canned by Big Red

By Fred Weinberg
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

The St. Louis football Cardinals announced Wednesday that head coach Charley Winner, coach of the Big Red for the past five seasons, will not be rehired when his contract runs out in the middle of January.

"It was totally unexpected," said Winner in a telephone interview Wednesday afternoon. "I took some chances in getting rid of a few players last year and we had a chance at our division title right up to the last week and it just took me by complete surprise."

Winner said that he was informed of the action Wednesday noon and his reaction was one of "complete and total shock."

He said that he didn't think the fact that he made some controversial trades last season had worked against him.

"I think we had a hell of a lot better team after I was done than before," he said.

The text of the news release offered no other clue as to why Winner was fired other than quoting owner Stormy Bidwill as saying, "We felt the action had to be taken in the interest of the team and the organization."

Winner has an overall coaching record of 35-30-5 with the Cards in five seasons. This last season's record was 8-5-1 and the team was in contention for the Eastern Division National Football Conference championship until a loss to the Dallas Cowboys eliminated them.

Winner said he had made no immediate plans for the future.

"This whole thing just happened this noon and I've been busy with the press and radio and TV people so I haven't really had a chance to sit down and think about the whole thing."

He said that he didn't know if he would continue coaching at all and that he has not been approached by any other professional organization.
