Campus job openings scarce

Availability of university jobs for students seeking employment is a bleak situation, Jean Penn, student work counselor, tells Jill Saracine, senior in English and linguistics. (Photo by Chuck Fishman)

Ten students apply for every student job, Raymond P. DeJarnett, assistant director of Student Work and Financial Assistance, reported Wednesday.

"I'd say probably a hundred or more students were in here looking for jobs Tuesday," he said, but the number of jobs is "very limited." The number of openings remaining cannot be estimated, he continued, because of delays in confirming that a specific job has been filled.

The lack of jobs is due to scarcity of funds and the low turnover of workers DeJarnett said.

Students are holding onto their jobs because there are no others, he said.

Money is allocated to the various departments from the budget, DeJarnett explained, and the number of student jobs depends on the amount of funds available in the departments.

The wage increase has been the culprit, he said. The ten-cent raise will add up to about $5,000 every pay day.

"It will make a difference," he added.

DeJarnett believes the ten cents, coupled with the 30 cent raise last May is the biggest reason why the number of student jobs has dropped by nearly 1,000 over the past three years.

"By and large," he said, "We feel that probably there will not have to be any severe cutbacks on student work by the end of the semester."

The few openings that are available are primarily clerical jobs and maybe a couple in food service, he said. The number of jobs may increase slightly by Friday with the possibility of some students not returning to school after semester break, DeJarnett said.

There has also been an increase in requests for short term loans, DeJarnett said, and the picture here is no better.

"It's getting to the point where we're just about out again," he said. "We'll probably run out Friday."

Added to the financial woes of student workers is the fact that the next pay day will not be until February 17. This is a wait of eight weeks between pay checks for those who did not work over break.

De Jarnett said that only about a quarter of the student work force were here over break.

"We couldn't afford to keep them here," he said.

The Student Work and Financial Assistance office has been trying to maintain a position to help as many students as possible, he said.

"It will be a challenge," he added.

Discussions in progress

Students may get free dental work

By Ray Urchel
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

SIU students may get free dental care next fall if discussions already in progress recommend extending present health care coverage to include routine and emergency dental care.

Bruce R. Swinburne, vice president for Student Affairs, said Wednesday he is "optimistic" that some type of dental coverage will be implemented by the University by early fall semester.

Swinburne said Sam McVay, administrative director of the Health Service and the Student Health Advisory commission (SHAC) are active in discussing the plans.

"We're not saying we're going to do it," Swinburne cautioned. "We're looking into it now. But it's within the realm of the possible that something may be implemented by early fall term."

The vice president for Student Affairs said he hopes a dental plan, if adopted, would cover students needing "regular" dental care as well as emergencies—such as tooth extractions—when required.

"We're looking at the possibility of adding it (dental care) at no extra cost to students," Swinburne said.

It depends on whether the University could use dental personnel currently at the School of Technical Careers (STC) off-campus facility and dental interns from SIU Edwardsville's school of dentistry.

Students are paying an estimated $1.2 million in fees toward Health Service operation, he said. The SIU Board of Trustees last May allocated $15 of the $22.50 Student Welfare and Recreation Fund (SWARF) for improved health coverage.

Full-time students now pay $32.25 per semester, including $17.25 in Student Medical Benefits.

The state of Illinois also allocates an estimated $220,000 for operation of the Health Service, he said.

The vice president said he is unsure how much money Health Service will have remaining in its budget to finance the dental care. He explained that SIU contracts for some service, while the cost of other services are dependent on the amount of usage.

He estimated, however, that a dental program in operation would cost SIU $60,000 annually, although costs the first year might double because of needed equipment and supplies.

Swinburne said he does not expect a decision to be made until the end of spring semester. He added that any dental plan must be "economically feasible" before it can be adopted.

SHAC is preparing a report for Swinburne on the feasibility of adding the dental service, he said. "They have not set a date for the report to be presented," Swinburne said. "But I'm sure they will be coming to me with a report before too long."

The vice president, who said last Friday that a dental plan is one of his goals, said student constituencies would be consulted before any final plan is approved.

Bursar lifts holds on paychecks

By Dave Ibatu
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The University has lifted holds on paychecks for student workers owing money to SIU, Controller Jack Simmons said Wednesday.

"This is a procedure we are trying,"

Simmons said. SIU will analyze response to the experiment to determine its effectiveness, he added. Instead of impounding paychecks, the Bursar now attaches to payments a note informing students that debts are owed, Simmons explained. "If the procedure works," and if students pay up, "beautiful," he said.

Bursar Thomas Watson said the University lifted holds Jan. 13, 1975. The decision affects student workers owing money on returned checks and overdue loans, Watson said. However,

Job market glut for teachers could ease, educator predicts

By Jim Murphy
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A brighter forecast for education majors was predicted Wednesday by Billy G. Dixon, chairman of the Department of Professional Educational Experiences.

Commenting on recent trends in the tight job market for teachers, Dixon said decreased enrollments in education programs and a pending state retirement law may trigger a change that will open up the job market for teachers in the next several years.

Pointing to the current number of students enrolled in the College of Education, Dixon said, "The fact that the job market is overflowing right now has had an effect on enrollment." He said current enrollment figures show a significant decline from last year.

As the chairman of the school's placement office for student teachers, Dixon said that 400 students are currently engaged in their field work at one of 15 different locations spread across Illinois. Their chances for finding full-time employment may not be as grim in five years as they are now, he said.

Adding to the new sense of optimism, according to Dixon, is the likelihood of a proposed state retirement law that could permit teachers to retire prior to the age of 65. "In another five years, we may have recycled things to the point where there will be a shortage of teachers. I'm concerned that this will happen," he said.

As a bit of advice to those students interested in a teaching career but still undecided about what field to concentrate in, Dixon recommended a vocational area. "It's a booming field," he said of the one teaching area that offers a guarantee to someone desiring to teach immediately after finishing school.

As for other academic disciplines, Dixon said, "There's always more requests for home economics teachers than we have graduates. Health education also promises to expand due to a new Health, Education and Welfare act that requires the teaching of health ed in elementary schools."

He also stressed that for those wishing to teach in crowded areas such as the social sciences, the potential changes will increase their job opportunities.

"There is always going to be a place for that teacher education student who has outstanding credentials and for those who volunteer to do more than is required."

"They will continue to be employed," he said.

Student loan funds nearly exhausted

The fund set aside for the SIU short-term student loan has been nearly exhausted by unexpectedly heavy demand according to an official of the office of Student Work and Financial Assistance.

Raymond DeJarnett, Assistant to the Program Director of the financial aid office, said that chances for securing any money from the fund would be virtually impossible in the immediate future.

"The onslaught this week has sapped us," he said.

DeJarnett explained that $160,000 was set aside for the short-term loan fund prior to the start of fall semester.

"We used $145,000 of that for loans taken out last semester."

As of Monday, he said that 130 new applications were taken out for the remaining $15,000.

"For the time being," he said, "loans will not be easy to get until some of that money comes back. So far, most of it hasn't." He explained that his office grants a period of 60 days in which to pay back the loan.

Under the guidelines established for taking out a loan, freshmen and sophomores can borrow up to $50, while juniors and seniors have a ceiling of $100. DeJarnett said that graduate students may borrow up to $150.

He said the money can only be used for "regular school expenses. You can't use the loan money to put a down payment on a new car," he said. Most students use the money to pay food and utility bills, he explained.

"It's a revolving fund. If a student doesn't pay it back, he's only denying another student the chance to get some money for himself."

As for the immediate future, he said, "It's pretty tight—for three or four weeks at least."

Officials urge voter sign up for city elections

Students wishing to vote in either the Carbondale primary or the general election must register by Tues., Jan. 28.

Voter registration will not be conducted anywhere on campus prior to city elections, John Hardt, executive assistant to the student body president, said Wednesday.

The primary will be held Tues., Feb. 25, and the general election will be held Tues., April 15.

To register, students must be 18 years old, must have lived in the precinct for 30 days and must not be registered anywhere else.

Students meeting the requirements may register at either the County Clerk's office in Murphysboro or at the City Clerk's office at 602 E. College, Carbondale. Both offices are open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Students who fail to register by the Jan. 28 deadline for the primary election can still register for the general election beginning Thurs., Feb. 27, until Tues., March 18.

'Elmer' has eye on city budget

By Mary Whittier
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

"Elmer" has the last say in keeping the City of Carbondale within its budget.

Elmer is an IBM general ledger system capable of giving the city complete fiscal information monthly. Previously, the city received complete reports only on a quarterly basis, according to City Manager Carroll Fry.

Fry said Elmer is "without question the best system in Southern Illinois." The city rents Elmer from IBM for $2,700 a month. Parts of the system were first introduced to the city in the early part of 1972. Since then the capacity and ability of the system has been gradually increased.

The system is now capable of printing lists of expenditures and revenues within minutes. Fry termed this ability "a tremendous help in budgeting."

Paul Sorgen, director of finance, said that the system's ability to daily provide the amount of money on hand has led to better investment of surplus funds.

Walker to accelerate building program

CHICAGO (AP)—Not waiting for the federal government which he said is too far removed to give immediate relief, Gov. Daniel Walker announced Wednesday an accelerated $1.9 billion state building program to insure jobs for 60,000 persons.

Walker, considered a fiscal conservative, said he was taking advantage of the state's excellent bond rating and low indebtedness in hopes of stopping the state's growing unemployment rate.

Gary steel mills closure criticized

PITTSBURGH (AP)—A citizen's group says a claim by U.S. Steel Corp. that 2,500 jobs will be lost at its Gary, Ind., works because of pollution restrictions is an attempt to discredit the environmental movement.

"The whole story, upon further investigation, was grossly untrue and was a misrepresentation of the facts," says

If his proposals are passed by a special session of the General Assembly he intends to summon, Walker said work could begin immediately to begin priming an economy in the "worst recession since World War II."

Using formulas of private industry, the projects directly will employ 30,000 persons in the private sector and another 30,000 persons as a spinoff effect supporting the massive construction program, Walker said.

Arthur R. Gorr, who heads the Group Against Smog and Pollution—GASP.

Gorr contended that U.S. Steel "grossly exaggerated" the number of workers affected by the Dec. 31 closings of 10 open hearths at Gary. He also said U.S. Steel intended to close the furnaces anyway because they were obsolete.

Language discrimination solution sought

WASHINGTON (AP)—In an unusual move, the government asked top school officials in 26 states Wednesday for assistance in identifying and ending suspected language discrimination against more than one million minority children.

Peter Holmes, director of the U.S. Office for Civil Rights, said he has "strong indication" that 1.1 million Indian and Spanish- and Asian-American children are illegally being denied bilingual education in 333 school districts across the nation.

GM predicts auto price increase

WASHINGTON (AP)—General Motors said today the tighter auto emission regulations scheduled to go into effect in 1977 would increase the purchase price of new cars by $35 to $50 and cause mileage to drop by an average 16 per cent.

GM made the estimates during the second day of hearings called by the Environmental Protection Agency to discuss proposals by the auto makers to suspend those emission standards for one year and by President Ford to freeze standards for five years at a slightly lower level than now.

The GM testimony was similar to that Tuesday by Chrysler Corp. However, it differed sharply—as did the Chrysler estimates—from what the Federal Energy Administration has estimated the auto makers could do.

Daley's son named judiciary head

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP)—Sen. Richard M. Daley, the 32-year-old son of Chicago's mayor, was named Wednesday as chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Daley's appointment, despite his relatively low seniority after only two years in the Senate, was approved unanimously by the Senate's 10-member Committee on Committees.

Other Democrats were named to head the Senate's 14 other standing committees. The full Senate was expected to ratify the appointments later in the day.

Democrats captured a 34 to 25 majority in the Senate in the November general election.

Treasury must borrow to fight recession

WASHINGTON (AP)—Treasury officials said Wednesday that they will need to borrow an estimated $28 billion over the next six months to finance the administration's anti-recession program.

They said that amounts to seven times the maximum borrowing during comparable periods over the last five years, and represents the federal government's heaviest financing operation since World War II.

Jack F. Bennett, assistant secretary of Treasury for monetary affairs, said the borrowing will require "a substantial increase in the debt ceiling."

But Bennett declined to specify how much the ceiling would have to be raised.

The ceiling is temporarily set at $495 billion, and the nation's debt is only $1.3 billion shy of that limit.

Simon not concerned with seniority

By Laura Coleman
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Paul Simon, the 24th Congressional District's newest representative in 20 years, is of the new school of congressmen who are discounting seniority as the major factor in selecting chairmen of key House committees.

Congressional District's newest representative in 20 years, is of the new school of congressmen who are discounting seniority as the major factor in selecting chairmen of key House committees.

In the past, too much attention has been played on the amount of years a congressman has been in office, Simon said Wednesday. He pointed out that four key chairmanships in the Armed Services, Agriculture, Bank and Currency and House Administration Committees, have been ousted.

"Today we approved the nomination of Henry Royce as chairman of the Bank and Currency Committee," Simon said, adding that he was fourth in seniority for the post.

Simon was appointed to the Education and Labor Committee, a spot he had wanted, and to the Post Office and Civil Service Committee. He is also on seven sub-committees, and said he has "the heaviest workload in the House."

Through his work on the Education and Labor Committee, which he said includes "the whole gamut" of education, Simon said he'll work to achieve his goal of obtaining more research grants for SIU, something about which he conferred with President Warren W. Brandt before going to Washington.

"The University of Illinois gets 60 times as many grants as SIU," he said, while not condemning U of I, he thinks SIU is entitled to more than it receives.

After reports were confirmed that the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) and Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) have been investigating congressmen, Simon joined 44 other Democrats in caucus and voted for the formation of a special committee to investigate the investigations.

He said he wasn't surprised by the surveillance. "One thing Watergate showed us was that government has been too insensitive to Civil Liberties," he said.

Simon took issue with President Gerald Ford's ideas set forth in his State of the Union message last week. However, he said Ford's proposals regarding energy conservation and inflation in general were "better than nothing." "It's an expensive way to do it," he added.

Simon suggested "closing days" for service stations as an alternative to Ford's plan of adding a 20 cent hike in gasoline prices, and said he does not favor gas rationing.

Since Congress convened early this month, Simon said it's been primarily concerned with organizing the committees and voting on committee chairmanships.

Although he said his Washington schedule is hectic, Simon makes it back to Carbondale on weekends. He said he's been to 16 of the 22 counties he represents since he took office Jan. 3. His Carbondale office is at 107 N. Glenview Drive, and constituents may write to him in Washington at 1724 Longworth Building, Washington.

In addition to his committee and sub-committee activity, Simon said he'll "aggressively push" to help individuals of his district.

Here's a backhand smash!

Try to return that one!

Oh, oh. Missed the table.

Brandishing her ping-pong paddle, secretary forfeits lunch for game

By Ken Temkin
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Many people use their lunch hour as a time to relax, sit back and sometimes even eat lunch in the middle of a busy day.

But that's not how Jennie Calonne, secretary in the history department, spends her noon lunch hour.

As often as she can, Jennie walks from her office in Woody Hall to the fourth floor of the SIU Student Center, whips out her paddle and engages the competition in a fast game of ping-pong. Jennie began playing the game at the Student Center in the fall of 1972 because she thought it would be a great way to exercise.

"I'm pretty good," Jennie said. "If I win at pool it's because of luck, but in ping-pong it's skill."

Jennie, who is a young 50 years old, started playing ping-pong in high school and has maintained her skills with the help of a ping-pong table at home.

"I've got a ping-pong table at home but there's only my husband to play me, and he's not very good," Jennie said. "So I do most of my playing at the Student Center."

Jennie's only dip in the tournament circuit came in the fall of 1972 when she entered the Women's Intramural Ping-Pong Tournament, but "because of technicalities, came in third."

Jennie said she is always willing to take on new people, so if you're a ping-pong player with a free lunch hour, try her out.

Supreme Court supports student rights

Suspended pupils may answer to charges

WASHINGTON (AP)—A sharply divided Supreme Court ruled Wednesday that pupils suspended from public schools have a constitutional right to know and answer the charges against them.

Dealing specifically with suspensions of from one to 10 days, the court said the pupils must be given notice of the charges and "at least an informal give-and-take between student and disciplinarian."

The court withheld judgment on how much of a hearing is required for longer suspensions or for expulsions, but suggested that these "may require more formal procedures."

It also said that "something more than the rudimentary procedures" might be required for short suspensions in unusual cases.

Dissenting in the 5-4 decision were all of the justices appointed to the court by former President Richard M. Nixon: Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices Harry A. Blackmun, William H. Rehnquist and Lewis F. Powell Jr.

The court said the informal hearing—which need only be a discussion with the student immediately after the alleged misbehavior—should generally be held before the student is sent home.

If the student's presence in the school would be dangerous or disruptive, however, he could be sent home immediately and given a hearing as soon as possible afterward.

The decision is expected to have a major impact on schools. Statistics presented to the court showed that at least 10 per cent of junior and senior high school students in a five-state survey were suspended one or more times in the 1972-73 school year.

In another decision, the court ruled 6 to 3 that the Constitution's guarantee of due process of law protects business firms which are being sued for debt from having their assets garnished without notice or hearing.

The school decision extends to public school pupils essentially the kind of procedural rights which the court has granted in recent years to prisoners, parolees and welfare recipients.

Powell, in the dissent, said the relationship of teachers and pupils is "manifestly different" from those involved in those situations.

"The court ignores the experience of mankind, as well as the long history of our law, recognizing that there are differences which must be accommodated in determining the rights and duties of children as compared with those of adults," Powell said.

Justice Byron R. White, speaking for the majority, said even a brief suspension from school "is a serious event in the life of the suspended child" which could damage his reputation and make it harder for him to get a job after he graduates.

It's no defeat

Clyde Choate's unsuccessful bid for the Illinois House speakership is not a crucial defeat for the people of Southern Illinois or its University. Although it is always reassuring to have friends in high places, it would be foolhardy to assume that only a Speaker from Southern Illinois could do something for the region.

Higher education budgeting has been greatly institutionalized since the creation of the Illinois Board of Higher Education (IBHE) and its bureaucratic procedures. Budgets for all university systems in the state are packaged into one IBHE recommendation, subject to legislative consent and approval by the governor.

To be sure, the speakership is the most influential post in Illinois' lower house; but it is doubtful any one man could wield enough power to make a dramatic difference to SIU. Add to that the peculiar nature of the SIU System, with its rural campus in Carbondale and its primarily urban campus across the river from St. Louis, and it becomes readily apparent that Clyde Choate would not have made the ultimate difference between sink or swim for us.

William Redmond, the newly elected Speaker, pledged his word Tuesday to Rep. Vincent Birchler, D-Chester, that he will work to improve SIU and other institutions across the state. SIU will surely hold Redmond to his word.

The fact that Redmond hails from the 40th legislative district, that staunchly Republican slice of DuPage County, should not impinge but rather strengthen his ability to get strong bills through the politicking mire that is Springfield.

It can also be regarded as a breath of fresh air, if only slight, having Redmond—who has never been a House leader, in favor of Choate—described by many as the late Paul Powell's protege. Choate's dubious association with Powell may have been part of those underlying forces which killed his speakership bid, and it would certainly have left him less than credible with the voters.

If any foreboding of doom is to be ascertained from the House's leadership selection, it is that all of the majority and minority leaders of the state (with the possible exception of State Treasurer Alan J. Dixon) are from the Chicago area. Some cynics have quipped that the southern portion of our state would do just as well to secede and announce its own sovereignty.

Choate was originally the early choice of Chicago Mayor Richard Daely and his machine, while Gov. Dan Walker had previously backed Rep. Gerald Bradley, D-Bloomington. Redmond became the compromise candidate to both party bosses; but it took minority Republicans and 93 ballots to elect a Speaker. That historic feud and subsequent party-line crossing which brought salvation from an eternal stalemate led one Democratic Party official in Springfield to comment Tuesday night, "the only real winners in this are the 76 Republicans (in the House)".

We cannot agree with that estimation. The struggle may have split the Illinois Democratic Party enough to effectively block any Presidential hopes Gov. Walker may have had, which we applaud; but the Republicans in the 177-member House were definitely not the only winners.

The fight for a Speaker is over, and our elected government can now get down to the pressing task of straightening out our problems. While they may not have won yet, the voters cannot be counted among the losers with the election of Speaker Redmond. Neither here in Southern Illinois nor in the rest of the state.

"HI HO, HI HO, IT'S OFF TO WORK WE GO....."

There's gotta be

...a better way

By Bob Springer

It has been too much lamented already, but we do live in an age of categorization. We are defined by the labels attached to our haphazard modes of behavior. How many of us would be willing to be labeled according to the local lounge we most frequent?

For the benefit of those new students not familiar with the drinking establishments along South Illinois Avenue, let me elaborate with a brief categorization of the nine bars associated with "the strip."

Southernmost, closest to the high-rise dorms, is Gatsby's. Nice place. Under the guise of a "Roaring Twenties" atmosphere, Gatsby's reaches for a sedated kind of crowd—darkly-dressed, sweated males and confidant girls who seem to have grown weary of the strip's frantic northern end.

One-half block up from Gatsby's and a few steps east on College Street is Buffalo Bob's. Bob's might as well not be there. The place seems to be closed at every opportunity; and even when it is open, its few patrons appear more dead than alive.

Until the opening of Gatsby's a few months ago, the strip really began just north of College Street, at the American Tap and Jim's Pub. The Tap settles for a wierd crowd with a mixed bag. It is a safe place; the guys are all looking for girls naturally, but will not become too aggressive or obnoxious because of it. The Tap, like Gatsby's, offers up folksingers with its drinks.

Jim's Pub is a close-knit group. Rather than a place to go and meet people, Jim's is more a place where one is taken to be introduced to an established circle of friends.

Das Fass, the new bar with the Bavarian touch right next to Jim's, is a great place to show visiting relatives. Das Fass is not any more expensive than its competitors, but, alas, I'm afraid it has too much class for Carbondale.

Tucked away in the middle of the Varsity Theater block is The Club. Most first reactions to The Club are expressed with a deep, disbelieving, "whew." Walt Frazier used to drink there, and today The Club seems controlled by Vets trying to drink themselves into a forgetful stupor. But the ladies force one's memory.

Moving north one block we come to the strip's eyecore where the infamous street take-overs invariably originate.

On the west side of the street is the degenerate's kingdom of Carbondale: PK's.

PK's still manages to sell draught beer for 25 cents, which is quite a feat in this inflationary prone college town. It has no atmosphere, unless one likes naked light bulbs dangling from a dilapidated ceiling. But most patrons are too loaded to care; and, besides, the challenge of wrestling through an outrageous mob for a lousy 25 cent cup of Old Milwaukee far outweighs the dingy surroundings.

Then there is Merlin's across the street. Some would say Merlin's captures the bogging set; but I don't know. Merlin's is macabre.

If you have recently turned 19 or have fake I.D.'s, Merlin's should fulfill all your fantasies of what a college-town bar should be. Glitter people abound at Merlin's, so do gays, hustlers, charlatans left over from the '70 riots and schizoids.

The electric aura, loud bands and better-than-even chance of finding a mate for the night make up for the ridiculously over-priced drinks. Or so it must be, judging by the crowds Merlin's consistently lures.

The last place associated with the strip is the Peppermint Lounge. Because it flouts bikini'd go-go girls, the Peppermint Lounge seduces a very horny crowd. Guys and girls. A couple of the go-go girls bounce their breasts provocatively enough, but others dance as though they were performing last-rites over deceased horses.

I don't know if it is the lounge's girls or the "oldies-but-moldies" tunes blaring from the jukebox, but its clientele regularly includes some of this city's finest.

Most students frequently pay homage to several or more of these watering holes, so the labels I have attached are, of course, silly. But that is not to claim the atmosphere of each bistro is not pervasive enough to cause certain behavioral changes in some customers.

For those wondering why I did not include Bonaparte's Retreat and Up Your Alley in this non-sensational survey, the reason is simple. Those two "night-clubs" are too Greek for me. I never go to either.

By John Cunniff
AP Business Analyst

The President's proposed 12 per cent income tax rebate and his determination to "turn the country in a new direction" probably will relieve the pervasive feeling among Americans that they are economically adrift.

Nobody really knows for certain just what the characters and needs are of so varied a people as Americans, but polls show they are upset over what they feel is an inability of leaders to tug hard on the reins.

Now that President Ford has promised to take a firm hold, they have reason to wonder if the horse is to be tugged in the right direction by the tax on imported crude oil.

As does any industrial society, America runs on energy, and to a greater extent than may be evident. It dines on energy, communicates via energy, travels on it, heats its home with it, is entertained by it.

In short, it lives on energy. If prices are to be higher for imported crude oil, then prices are likely to be higher for the refined, consumer product. Conceivably, the tax could lead to generally higher prices, not just for oil.

What the tax might do is provide a supportive argument for utilities and others already disposed to use more domestic coal at the expense of clean air and tidy landscapes. It could be a spur to and excuse for the changeover.

While the increased costs to industry would be ameliorated by raising the investment tax credit to 12 per cent from 7 per cent, a question remains about the possible impact on particular industries.

Utilities, for instance, already are suffering sharply higher costs and a reluctance on the part of consumers to approve more rate increases. It remains to be seen if and how they will be helped or hurt by the proposals.

The automotive industry is depressed, and it could become even more depressed by higher prices for gasoline. Americans awakened suddenly this past year to realization of the high cost of running a car. They might be further discouraged.

The total impact really cannot be measured yet. To the extent that higher energy prices discourage frivolous use of energy, there will probably be a gain. But most energy usage is considered essential and probably cannot be cut much.

If the program spurs development of domestic supplies it also will be a plus.

But a disquieting factor is the cost of the Ford proposals. A budget deficit of $30 billion is possible for fiscal 1975, to end this June, and an even larger deficit is possible in the following year.

In other words, a tremendous impetus to inflation may be sown with the proposal.

All the world's wealthy need oil potentate

By Hugh A. Mulligan
AP Special Correspondent

TEHRAN, Iran (AP)—Since oil prices quadrupled, Iran's Imperial Court calendar exudes the excitement of a giant TV give-away game, with the waiting players, back in the hotel lobbies, keeping score on pocket calculators.

Italy's President Giovanni Leone dropped by to see Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi just before Christmas and came away with deals worth $4 billion for joint ventures in steel, shipyards, aluminum, textiles and petrochemicals.

Next in line at the Niavaran Palace in the snowy hills above this capital, Premier Jacques Chirac of France clinched economic agreements reportedly worth nearly $7 billion. They included projects to build a subway in Tehran, install a color TV network, construct nuclear power stations, a steel factory and 200,000 housing units and help finance Eurodif, a French-controlled European consortium that will supply Iran with enriched uranium.

An Indonesian delegation which didn't even get to see the shah, came away with a multi-million-dollar deal for an aluminum plant back home.

The Germans, supplying two atomic reactors and building a half billion barrel-a-day oil refinery at Bushehr, near the Kharg Island supertanker terminal, began the new year by opening an Iran-German Chamber of Commerce to compete with the Iran American Chamber of Commerce, which already has more than 200 members. Iran's German connection includes a recently acquired 25.4 per cent equity share and management voice in the Krupp steel firm.

The procession of world leaders and finance ministers calling at the Imperial Court resembles the friezes in the ruins of Darius the Great's Palace at Persepolis showing envoys with flower offerings climbing a great staircase to pay homage to the ancient king. It must provide some element of sweet revenge for the current ruler.

Three years ago, before the new oil prices began pumping $2 billion a month into Iran's treasury, the Shah invited world leaders to a $100 million birthday party in the ruins of Persepolis to celebrate the 2,500th anniversary of the Persian Empire.

Quite a few of the invited failed to show up. French President Georges Pompidou gave it a miss out of pique at the royal protocol which put him below the salt or at least the Grand Duke of Luxembourg. The Queen of England, who never sits below another monarch, like the since-deposed Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia, sent her husband, Prince Philip, instead. President Richard M. Nixon sent Spiro Agnew. Danish newspapers called on King Frederick and Queen Ingrid to develop "a quick case of diplomatic flu." The German president dropped out at the last moment for an eye retina operation.

The Communist bloc, playing a different game from royal chairs, assured detente and a flow of natural gas from Iran by sending along the presidents of the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Romania.

"The Shah swallowed his pride, but he never forgot," said an American banker who is convinced that past humiliations, suffered at the hands of the West, provide part of his drive to make Iran not only industrially self-sufficient but the fifth economic power in the world, after Japan, before the oil begins running out in 1990.

"Unlike Kuwait, which has nobody to spend its oil money on, you won't find the Shah buying London restaurants and islands off South Carolina. He wants to diversify the economy into mining, big-time agriculture, nuclear energy, textiles and synthetic fibers against the day when the underground bonanza runs dry."

Amid the tumult of the arms dealers, agronomists, bankers, industrialists and representatives from the multinationals waiting around the hotel lobbies for their call to the palace, everything seems to be going on at once from almost everywhere all over Iran.

The United States, Australia, Denmark, India, Britain and other nations are cooperating to bring about "The Great Civilization" which the Shah envisages for his $2 billion subjects by the end of the century. The projects range from race tracks to space satellites.

Although the $36 billion budget just announced for the new Iranian year beginning March 21, allocates 10 per cent for overseas loans and foreign aid, the Shah is far more interested in buying than he is in lending.

"Recycling," cracked a British investment banker, "is an Arabic word meaning 'what the hell do we do with all this money?'"

The Shah, who is not an Arab, knows better than any other potentate what he wants to do with Iran's wealth. For years he has been insisting that oil is too valuable to be squandered on energy. He always tells visiting industrialists he looks to the day when he will be selling aspirins from his own petrochemical industries instead of oil from his wells. He can also sell Iran's caviar and copper.

Last year under the heading of foreign investment, aid and loans, Iran allocated $1 billion to the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank, $78 million to Sudan, $150 million to Syria, $30 million to Morocco and lesser millions to Afghanistan, Jordan, Senegal, Tunisia and Lesotho.

Apart from short term Treasury notes of under 90 days duration, the United States does not share in Iran's recycling activities, but last year the Shah bought $3.5 billion worth of arms from America and this year his agricultural buying will exceed $500 million from the United States.

Out at the Tehran airport, near where the new U.S. Phantom jets and helicopters are being delivered, two jumbo-jet loads of cows arrive twice a week from Harrisburg, Pa., the advanced party of a $3 million deal to upgrade Iran's beef and dairy herds.

"Spiro Agnew in his new role of fertilizer salesman is a frequent visitor to Iran," said a U.S. Agriculture adviser.

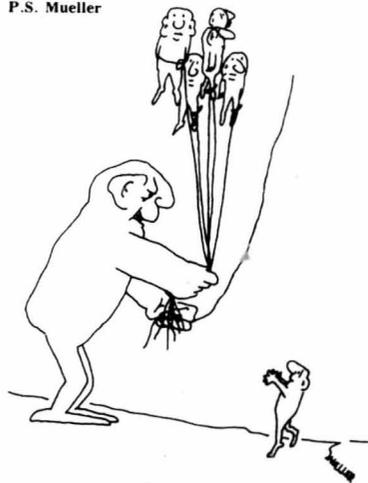

Since the Shah endowed a million dollar petroleum professorship at the University of California, an American diplomat complains that the hotels have been "overrun with educational carpet-baggers from some of America's biggest universities trying to peddle schemes to reduce the country's 60 per cent illiteracy rate."

In an interview, the Shah spoke of plans to buy a share in Shell Oil Service stations in the United States and invest in troubled Pan Am.

But only four years ago the Western world looked upon the Shah as an amiable playboy who spent his time skiing at St. Moritz.

Convocation to begin season with tribute for Schweitzer

By Deborah Singer
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

SIU will be joining the nation in a tribute commemorating the 100th birthday of Albert Schweitzer, Saturday at 8 p.m. in Shryock Auditorium.

The free program, first of the 1975 Convocation Series, titled "A Schweitzer Celebration," will feature the American Kantorei chorus and orchestra, and an organ recital by Marianne Webb, associate professor in the SIU School of Music. Schweitzer, the 1952 Nobel Peace Prize winner, was widely acclaimed throughout his life for contributions he made in the areas of theology, philosophy and medicine. But music seems to have been a launching point for many of Schweitzer's later endeavors.

He wrote a highly respected two-volume biography of Johann Sebastian Bach, and at the age of 30, Schweitzer was already an accomplished musician specializing in playing Bach's music for the organ. The money he received from organ concerts Schweitzer used to finance the hospital he founded in 1906 at Lambarene, Gabon.

Hypertension meeting slated

There will be a meeting of physicians and health care planners Thursday at the Student Center to discuss the establishment and maintenance of a hypertension registry in southern Illinois. The luncheon meeting is scheduled from noon till 1:30 p.m.

Approximately 12 people are expected to attend, said Kay Schade, secretary to Eli L. Borkon, assistant dean for professional development at the School of Medicine. Schade said the meeting will be closed to the public.

Robert Bergt, professor in the school of music, and conductor of both the SIU Symphony and the Kantorei, said, "This program will be to celebrate the gift of Albert Schweitzer to the world."

The celebration will also feature a talk about Schweitzer's philosophy by Paul A. Schilpp, distinguished professor of philosophy, who had the honor of meeting Schweitzer twice. Schilpp considers Schweitzer one of the outstanding men of the twentieth century, and conceived the idea for the celebration.

John F. Hayward, professor of religious studies will read selections of Schweitzer's work during the concert.

This first program in the 1975 Convocation Series is being sponsored in collaboration with the Humanities Council of the College of Liberal Arts and the College of Communications and Fine Arts.

Decreasing membership plagues Veterans Affairs

By Ken Temkin
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer
Although veterans comprise more than 10 per cent of the SIU student population, they never have had an effectual organization in Carbondale.

With the ever spiraling costs of inflation, benefits given to veterans can often mean the difference between getting along and ruin, "and so many vets just aren't aware of the benefits they can receive," said Larry Crouse, public relations manager for the Office of Veterans Affairs.

"I know vets here in Carbondale who are getting $175 a month assistance and should be getting $270. They just aren't aware that there have been two separate benefit increases since the $175 level," Crouse said.

To help veterans with this and other problems, Crouse and about a dozen other members of the SIU Veterans Club maintain an office at 611 S. Washington St. Their purpose is not only to help veterans, but also to assist the community in any way they can.

Tomb reopened

NEW YORK (AP)—Dr. William Hendrickson, superintendent of the New York Group of the National Park Service sites, has announced the reopening of the General Grant National Memorial.

The memorial had been closed for two months, while the National Park Service initiated a restoration of the interior dome of the site, where Gen. Grant is entombed and memorialized, with his wife by his side.

The work on the dome including a complete cleaning, repairing and painting.

The Grant Memorial is located at Riverside Drive and 122nd St. here. Visiting hours are from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. daily, except Monday and Tuesday, when the memorial is closed.

But the Office of Veterans Affairs, formerly the Outreach Office, has fallen into hard times from dwindling membership.

Crouse forseees the membership problem as the biggest obstacle toward making the SIU Veterans Club a viable organization.

"We've got a wealth of information here but we just can't afford to get it out, and the only way we can afford to is if we gain more members," Crouse said.

"We get no monetary support from SIU so the only money we have to work with is procured from a $5.00 membership fee."

Crouse tried to dispel misconceptions that discourage SIU veterans from joining the club.

"In the past the club was seen by most as just a bunch of guys getting together for parties. But a couple of years ago a group of us got together to try and organize the club so that it would help the veteran with his many different problems," he said.

"In the past the club had tried to stay within the boundaries of the university but now we want to expand to the adjoining community so that we can help non-student veterans also."

"Crouse is also hoping to count black veterans among new membership. "At the moment we have no black members but we're hoping to have several in the near future. We're here to serve all veterans."

Those who are interested in joining the club or using their services should call 536-2081 or stop by the Office of Veterans Affairs, which is open 8-5 weekdays.

Utilities increase rates

By Mitchell R. Hadler
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

SIU students will find rate increases in their first utility bills of the near year.

On Jan. 16, the Illinois Commerce Commission (ICC) approved an additional rate increase permitting the Central Illinois Public Service Co. (CIPS), to charge 4.1 per cent more for electric service and 1.82 per cent for gas service.

The increases, effectively immediately, will tack an additional 75 cents for electricity and 35 cents for gas onto an average $18 utility bill.

In addition the Egyptian Electric Co-Op Association, which serves rural areas around Carbondale, raised the price of electricity 15 per cent effective Jan. 1.

CIPS requested a 9 per cent rate increase April 1, 1974, and the ICC subsequently approved interim increases of 5 per cent for electricity and 4.8 per cent for gas, according to Sam Poe, vice president and public relations director for CIPS.

CIPS has increased utility rates 20 per cent in the last two years.

When CIPS first applied for a rate increase last April, SIU challenged the request asking the ICC not to approve the rate increase.

The last rate increase prompted a lowering of thermostat temperatures in buildings and turned out many lights above streets, walkways and parking lots on the SIU campus.

The ICC awarded an interim increase to CIPS in June, 1974. John Huffman, SIU legal council, said that until CIPS was awarded the interim increase, SIU's efforts to block the higher rates was saving the University about $10,000 a month.

SIU fought the increase until the ICC finally approved the full rate hike. The continued fight saved the University $5,000 a month, continued Huffman.

Gene Peebles, manager of business operations at SIU, said he was not prepared to comment on the effect of the latest utility price increases.

Richard Birkey, manager of Rates and Research at CIPS in Springfield, said that if everything keeps going up (materials and costs), further rate increases could be expected.

Birkey also stated that the latest utility price hikes did not reflect the higher cost of coals which was mined after the settlement of last year's coal miner strike.

Lesar lauds Levy

President Ford "couldn't have done better" in nominating Edward Levy, president of the University of Chicago, as U.S. Attorney General.

That's the opinion of Hiram H. Lesar, dean of the SIU Law School, who has known Levy for 35 years.

"He is a very able person, able lawyer, and an able administrator," said Lesar.

Lesar served on an inspection committee of the American Bar Association which visited the University of Chicago in the early 1960's when Levy was dean of the Chicago law school.

Levy is considered to be a-political, and has not disclosed a political affiliation.

"This is a major factor which led to his nomination," said Lesar. "He is not subject to complaints of lack of honesty, and he will carry out the law," he continued.

Lesar labeled Levy middle-of-the-road to moderate in the area of civil rights legislation.

Levy, who was nominated Jan. 14, has been associated with the University of Chicago for the past 36 years, where he has served as president since 1968.

Levy served in the antitrust division of the Justice Department during World War II.

"Inferno" actors turn flick chilly

By Michael Hawley
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

In days of old, it was chic to leave a movie theater espousing one's evaluation of the male and female leads with a simple statement like, "Loved her. Hated him," or vice versa.

In "disaster" films such as "The Towering Inferno," however, an entire cast of superstars are forced to share the bill with an overpowering, destructive force of nature. Fine actors are reduced to struggling with an imbecilic script as compared to the tour de force written for the disaster.

You end up hating them, and loving 'em.

"The Towering Inferno," now playing at the Varsity I, 'It' is a fire which destroys the world's tallest skyscraper on the night of dedication. Faulty wiring used to cut construction costs causes a fire in a cluttered storeroom on the 81st floor, while there is a heavily-attended dedication party on the 138th.

A Review

Filming the holocaust cost Twentieth Century Fox and Warner Brothers studios $14 million. Fifty-seven movie sets were constructed, only nine of which remained intact after filming, and more than 200 acts of cinematic danger were reportedly filmed before the camera.

"The Towering Inferno" is the first motion picture ever filmed which was the combined effort of two major studios. Both had purchased rights to different books on the same subject, "The Glass Inferno" (Fox) and "The Tower" (Warners). Rather than both studios filming and releasing similar pictures, they combined novels, money, know-how and stars, and will split the lavish profits the film is making.

Turning terror into profit is nothing new to producer and director Irwin Allen, who also directed the action sequences of "The Poseidon Adventure." In "The Towering Inferno", staircases crumble, people barbecue, rooms explode, glass shatters, a scenic elevator full of trapped women dangles, and movie stars get dirty. The filming of the fire, its effects, and the escape is extremely impressive.

So impressive, in fact, that you care about little else. So what if magazine writer Faye Dunaway is doubtful about leaving the glamour of San Francisco to live elsewhere with skyscraper architect Paul Newman. Or that con man Fred Astaire has the hots for art dealer Jennifer Jones. Or that construction tycoon William Holden despises his despicable electrical engineer son-in-law Richard Chamberlain. The fire is the film.

The cast of "The Towering Inferno," which also stars Steve McQueen as the fire chief, Robert Wagner, O.J. Simpson and Robert Vaughn, could have been replaced without much artistic loss by soap opera actors.

The famous actors simply add glamour to the film, not substance to the characters. It's Steve McQueen who's coming to save the day and Jennifer Jones who's shimmying down the blown-out stairwell in her evening gown, not Jane and John Q. Public.

Dedicated to the firemen of the world, "The Towering Inferno" carries a message which scolds skyscraper architects like a Mama smacking little Jimmy's hand for playing with matches. At the film's end, fire fighter McQueen urges architect Newman to please consult firemen before designing another skyscraper.

But effective fire fighting and safe skyscraper design are hardly the inspiration for this film. Hollywood knows, as does Alfred Hitchcock, that people love being scared to death. When you throw in "survival of the fittest" for background, and relationships and romances for decoration, you have an entertaining, sure-fire money-making 'disaster' film.

Just as 1974 was the year of the disaster film, 1975 is expected to be the year of the sequel film. With Hollywood's readiness to latch onto the vogue, we will probably be seeing a sequel to "Earthquake" and "The Towering Inferno" titled "Shake and Bake."

Money squeeze hurting community credit union

The University and Community Federal Credit Union is in poor financial shape and needs volunteers to keep track of records, according to Forest Lightle, administrative assistant to SIU student body president Dennis Sullivan.

Despite its poor condition, the credit union will stay in operation. "When the economy gets better," Lightle said, "the credit union will be in better shape."

He said the credit union gets the money for its operation from business loans and from selling 55 shares in the union.

"At the present time, more money is going out than coming in," Lightle said.

The credit union can loan out a maximum of $200 to each member of the union with the interest rate being one percent per month on the unpaid balance, or 12 percent annually, Lightle said.

A membership fee of 50 cents is required to become a lifetime member of the union, Lightle said.

About 95 percent of the 120 members of the union are students, he said. He added, "We've had a poor response from the community."

Lightle said the union needs volunteers to help keep track of the records, and that volunteers may be able to earn some class credit by helping out.

"By volunteering, this would be a good way for an accounting major to get some practical experience in addition to possibly getting some class credit," he said.

Persons who wish to volunteer or want more information may contact the credit union at the student government offices on the third floor of the University Student Center

Leaders appointed in House

SPRINGFIELD (AP)—Illinois House speaker William Redmond today selected Rep. Gerald Shea, D-Riverside, chief House spokesman of Mayor Richard J. Daley, as majority leader for the 1975-76 General Assembly.

Named as assistant majority leaders were two other Chicago Democrats, Cornelia Davis and Michael Madigan, and E.J. "Zeke" Giorgi, D-Rockford.

The Democratic whips will be Rep. Don Brummet of Vandalia and Gerald A. Bradley of Bloomington.

Republican leader James Washburn of Morris selected as assistant minority leaders Reps. Arthur Teleser of Chicago, William D. Walsh of LaGrange Park and Celeste Stiehl of Belleville.

WSIU-FM-TV

Programs scheduled for Thursday on WSIU-TV channel 8 are:

3:30 p.m.—Book Beat (c); 6:30 p.m.—Consumer Survival Kit (c).

7 p.m.—Bill Moyer's Journal Foreign Report (c) Bill Moyers returns to public television as host of the "Foreign Report." This international public affairs series is the first since the late Edward R. Murrow's "Small World." The series will include issue forums on the economy, the environment and human rights.

8 p.m.—The Japanese Film (c) "Harp of Burma." At the close of World War II, a soldier adopts the robes of a Burmese Buddhist priest and vows to bury those slain in battle in Kon Ichikawa's 1956 haunting film of guilt and spiritual redemption. Host: Edwin Reischauer.

10:30 p.m.—The Golden Century Movie "Doctor Bull" (1933) Will Rogers in the title role, as a small town doctor. Typical character for Rogers, who knew his limits as an actor, and made excellent use of his combination of humility and perceptive wit.

Programs scheduled for Thursday on WSIU-FM (91.9) are:

6 a.m.—Today's the Day!; 9 a.m.—Take a Music Break; 12:30 p.m.—WSIU Expanded Report; 1 p.m.—Afternoon Concert—Handel, Schubert and Khachaturian.

Code committee will revise report

By Ray Urchel
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

the report "that may be confusing to someone who is not familiar with the jargon being used."

Busch said that the Conduct Code is "very close" to being completed by the seven member panel.

Busch said the next Conduct Code meeting is scheduled for Thursday, Jan. 30. The panel is expected to discuss a proposed draft of who can file charges against students and the manner in which complaints will be adjudicated.

Upon completion of the report, the Conduct Code committee will submit copies of the document to the Graduate Student Council, Student Senate, Faculty Senate and publish the report in the Daily Egyptian for student input, Busch said.

Troops refused

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP)—When the Civil War began, Arkansas Gov. Henry M. Rector refused to provide troops for the Union army

A Secession Convention adopted an Ordinance of Secession on May 6, 1861.

The group will wait two weeks for public response and then examine the comments and make necessary alterations to the report before submitting the paper to President Warren W. Brandt and the SIU Board of Trustees, hopefully by April or May, Busch said.

Group seeks more minority teachers

By Mitch Hadler
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A call for the hiring of more minority teachers and other school personnel has been issued by the Carbondale Human Relations Committee.

In action Tuesday night, the committee voted to send a letter recommending more minority hiring in Carbondale elementary schools.

The action stems from a complaint voiced in a meeting held last November when black parents claimed that not enough black and other minority professionals were employed by the district.

Elsie Speck, chairperson of the CHRC said the letter would be sent to Lawrence W. Martin, superintendent of Carbondale Elementary School District, informing him of the low black teacher - black student ratio, and thus "encourage the district to actively recruit minority professional personnel.

Some 30 per cent of the students enrolled in Carbondale elementary schools are blacks, while only 8 per cent of the teachers employed in the system are blacks, Speck said.

Martin said he wasn't aware of the action of the CHRC, but said "we set that complaint every time we turn around."

When asked whether he would actively recruit minority professional employees and recommend their being hired, Martin said the school district had 2,000 applications on file, and there was no need to do any recruiting.

"We recommend the most qualified people to fill vacant positions," said Martin. "I give special attention to all applications, and I look at every one individually," he continued.

NFL drug ring exposed

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Commissioners of the National Football League and American Basketball Association acknowledged Wednesday that an investigation is being made into allegations that a drug ring supplied narcotics to players from both leagues.

"We have been aware of the investigation since its inception," a spokesman for NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle said. "We have cooperated fully with all law enforcement authorities. We have no further comment at this time."

Tedd Munchak, commissioner of the ABA, said: "I, along with our security director, Bud Olson, have known about the situation for 10 days. There are no circumstances at the moment which demand immediate action. We are cooperating with the St. Louis police and drug control units."

Police officials and spokesmen for a number of NFL teams also have refused to comment on the report made public Tuesday in which a 19-year-old St. Louis woman is alleged to have given St. Louis police a detailed statement concerning her activities as a courier for an apparent drug ring.

L. Col. John Doherty, chief of detectives for the St. Louis Police Department, would say only that Roxie Ann Rice had been arrested Jan. 4 on charges of defrauding an innkeeper and of fraudulently using a credit card.

"Anything other than that I cannot verify or substantiate," Doherty said.

The 39-page intra-departmental memo leaked to the press Tuesday quoted Miss Rice as saying that she had been recruited to transport briefcases containing what she believed to be narcotics to many NFL cities.

She told officers that she posed as a Ghanaian Adiza Juzang, as she became familiar with players and took orders and delivered narcotics.

A spokesman for the Kansas City Chiefs, one of the teams mentioned in the report, said the team would not comment on the matter.

The Kansas City Star, however, published a photograph Wednesday of a Dr. Juzang who was allegedly in Kansas City for a game between the Chiefs and the Minnesota Vikings. St. Louis police identified the woman in the photograph as being Roxie Ann Rice.

Miss Rice said she had obtained press passes in Kansas City and other cities in order to go onto the playing field to become better acquainted with the players.

Representatives of the St. Louis Cardinals, San Diego Chargers and Washington Redskins all had the same basic response to questions about the report. They said they had referred the matter to the league security division and would not comment further. A spokesman for the Redskins said the story was "unbelievable, fantastic."

Salukis rank high in MVC statistics

Many of the basketball races in several conferences across the country are beginning to take some form. Action most significant to SIU is the Missouri Valley schedule.

Although the Salukis are not competing for the conference championship this season, they are members of the Valley, and the team's overall statistics are being recorded by the conference.

The latest release from the conference office finds SIU with impressive credentials that might be a warning for other Valley teams.

As a team, the Salukis lead the league in scoring margin. Coach Paul Lambert's troops have been beating opponents by an average of 8.4 points per game. Their 77.8 points an outing rank the team second in the conference. Wichita State leads with 79.9 points per game.

SIU's yield of 69.4 points per game places them third. Louisville, league leader, has been the stingiest, allowing opponents just 63.2 points.

In the only other team rankings, the Salukis are second to Bradley in marksmanship from the field. SIU has been hitting the hoop at a .517 clip.

All-America hopeful Joe C. Meriweather is hovering around the top of the league in three individual statistics.

The senior center is second in scoring behind Tulsa's Ken Smith with a 21.6 average. In the rebounding department, big Joe has been hauling in an average of 11.1 caroms a game to rank him fourth in the Valley. His .649 field goal shooting places him second.

Sophomore guard Mike Glenn is the only other Saluki mentioned in the Valley's latest statistics. Glenn has pumped in 37-42 freethrows for an .881 average, seventh best in the league.

Individual records sharp for wrestlers

By Dave Wiczorek
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

Eastern qualifying rounds for the NCAA wrestling championships are still more than a month away, but it would seem like the Saluki grapplers are already headed in the right direction.

After winning six straight matches on the road, coach Linn Long said Wednesday morning that everyone is healthy for Saturday's home opener against the University of Indiana. The match is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. in the Arena.

The Salukis not only are healthy physically, but they are also sporting a fine 9-3-1 dual meet record and boast some excellent individual statistics.

Leading the squad at this point is Mark Wiesen in the 177-pound class with a 13-4-0 mark, including six consecutive wins on the recent road trip.

"I just try to take them one at a time," says Wiesen about his matches. He does like to do one thing the same in all his matches. "I always worry about wrestling with good technique," he said. "I hate to wrestle a match sloppily."

Right behind Wiesen is Clyde Ruffin with a 12-4-1 record. Ruffin had his ups and downs on the road trip but Long explained, "Clyde wrestled a good youngster from Parkside. He did a maneuver he shouldn't have, the guy scored five points against him, and Clyde lost the match."

Long said Ruffin made good later when he beat "a guy who had beaten the wrestler from Parkside after Ruffin lost to him."

Joe Goldsmith, 118, and Jim Horvath, 158, also carry respectable records of 9-3-0 and 11-6-0, respectively.

"On the road trip, everyone started wrestling with the potential that each individual has shown thus far," remarked Long.

"They all started wrestling real well. I hope this is a phase they have passed into."

Long points to consistency as the key to the season so far.

"The whole team is being more consistent," he said. "The errors of execution have been less, also."

"Many times in wrestling it's not so much what the opponent does to you, but rather what you allow him to do," Long commented.

In wrestling, the coach doesn't really look for his team to peak, Long said. "It's more of an individual thing," he observed. "It's up to each guy to get going in a pretty good rhythm."

As for the freshmen on the squad the coach says, "They still have a long ways to go. That's only because they have a wider margin of improvement to make than some of the older guys."

Women cagers to open

By Martha Sanford
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

A game strategy intended to capitalize on inside height and strength will be the bill of fare as the Saluki women's basketball teams make their debut this weekend according to head coach Charlotte West.

The Salukis will meet the University of Illinois and Southeast Missouri State (SEMO) Friday and Saturday at Davies Gym.

"We'll play two girls at post position, two wings and a point player," West said.

The Salukis will be starting the season with basically the same lineup as last year. West said, "We did lose our best guard, but we have some fine replacements."

"One player to watch, West said, is Jan Winkler, a transfer student from junior college. "Jan is a strong player and a good addition to the team," she said.

Winkler will be on the starting five in this Friday's game along with Kathy Vondrasek, the tallest girl on the team at 6-foot-1 and Vicki King who has three years of experience at SIU.

Rounding out the starting five will be right wing Kay Anderson and point player Nancy Rist.

West said she anticipates giving both schools good games.

Illinois will be coming in Southern with two wins and two losses already under its belt. The Illini recently played in a Big 10 tournament under the direction of a new coach and beat Minnesota. The Salukis defeated Illinois both times the team met last year.

SIU will play Illinois at 6 and 8 p.m. Friday and at 12 and 2 p.m. Saturday. Illinois and SEMO will play Saturday morning.

Sutton Death

By Ron Sutton
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

Mike Glenn...Bob Elliot...Adrian Dantley...Cliff Pondexter...and Ernie Grunfeld.

What do they have in common? They were the starting members of Basketball Weekly's 1974 Freshman All-America team.

What else? All except Pondexter play for teams either rated or mentioned in the latest Associated Press basketball poll. Pondexter went one step better (That's debatable) — signing as a hardship case with the Chicago Bulls.

The other four play for SIU, Arizona, Notre Dame and Tennessee, respectively.

Going one step further, the situation holds for four of the five second team members. Walter Davis stars for North Carolina, Wes Cox for Louisville, Bo Ellis for Marquette and Eddie Johnson for Auburn. The fifth, Tree Rollins (That's what the magazine said!)

played for Clemson, a credible team in the incredible Atlantic Coast Conference.

A closer inspection of the first unit's schools shows three of the four to be former nobodies. SIU certainly avoided the limelight deftly between the Frazier and Meriweather years, and the only round ball Arizona was known for was cowhide. Tennessee almost averaged more points in football than basketball in the past.

With the rise of these new powers, and the balance shown by constant shuffling of teams in the polls this season, the effect of the relatively new "freshman rule" seems apparent. SIU coach Paul Lambert agrees.

"The freshman kids — the good players — are more aware of who loses what from their programs," he said Wednesday. "We talked to five or six outstanding pivots this year, but they said, 'Coach, why would I want to sit on the bench behind Meriweather?' "I couldn't give them that stuff about being able to learn from Joe," he added. "I couldn't say, 'You'll get to play against him every day in practice.' Practice isn't where it's at."

Just as the Salukis face the possibility of falling from their present status because hot prospects wouldn't ride the bench, greater powerhouses are running into the problem even more frequently. The exception, Indiana, is deservedly ranked number one because of its superb bench, which somehow includes a truckful of underclassmen who were willing to ride the pine.

Opposite examples include third-ranked UCLA, left without a pro center for only the second time in eight years when Bill Walton graduated. Defending champion North Carolina State is in the same boat, one which began to sink after the Wolfpack failed to lure junior college All-American Tommy Barker to replace Tom Burleson.

"Naturally, we wanted to start, but we weren't promised that at Southern," he points out. "Some schools promised us, though—the ones that were really desperate."

The effects have been all good. Adding the pressures of athletics to the sudden changes in academic and social environments for freshmen has canned a few potential stars. One who has recovered is Dantley.

"A year ago, Dantley went through a tremendous change," Lambert recalled. "He had a case of nervous exhaustion and was in the hospital for a week. He admitted that it was the pressure."

"That's one reason I have a great deal of admiration for Mike and Corky (starters last year as freshmen) as individuals," he remarked. "They made the adjustment."

Despite that one drawback, the rule has to be considered a big plus for college basketball. Anything that gives UCLA foes a prayer or, perhaps, some day removes USC and Ohio State from the Rose Bowl has to be good.

Now if they'd just change the dunk rule!
