Storm ravages area again

It's bottoms up and time to move out for Odell Wyatt, a resident of Carbondale Mobile Homes for only three weeks.

A thunderstorm with winds whipping up to more than 100 mph dealt Southern Illinois its second severe weather blow in four days Wednesday, injuring at least 30 people in Carbondale and causing millions of dollars in damage to buildings, trailer homes, power lines and aircraft.

A 7-year-old girl reportedly was drowned at Lake Kincaid, northwest of Murphysboro, when the high winds capsized a boat.

Late Wednesday, Gov. James Thompson declared the six counties of Jackson, Williamson, Franklin, Saline, Randolph and Perry a disaster area. Some estimates placed the total damage at $15 million to $25 million. Almost all the area was blacked out, mainly due to loss of a major power trunk at Grand Tower. More than 200 Central Illinois Power Co. workers began restoring electricity on an area-by-area basis.

The storm swept out of the west in the late afternoon, hitting Murphysboro, Carbondale, Anna-Jonesboro, Carterville, Energy, Herrin, Zeigler, Benton, West Frankfort, Marion and Harrisburg as

It rumbled eastward, toppling trees and electric power poles, unroofing houses and tumbling trailer homes in its path. At least 40 mobile homes at Carbondale Mobile Homes were destroyed or damaged and a number of people were injured there.

"There ain't nothin' left," said Evelyn Sanders, whose trailer was overturned at Carbondale Mobile Homes. "I'm just sitting and waiting. I don't know what to do," said Mrs. Sanders at the emergency room of Doctors Memorial Hospital. She accompanied her daughter and granddaughter, who were injured by flying glass, to the hospital.

At least 10 persons were injured in Murphysboro, according to reports from St. Joseph's Hospital.

Southern Illinois Airport, where 13 planes were damaged in storms last weekend, was again hard hit—15 planes destroyed or damaged and three buildings damaged. The damage estimate topped $500,000.

Windows were blown out in a number of SIU-C buildings but the campus miraculously escaped major damage.

A large section of the roof and a 12-by-2 foot section of brick wall were ripped off the south

Over 30 trailers destroyed at Carbondale Mobile Homes

Carbondale Mobile Homes appeared to be one of the areas hardest hit by the storm that hit unexpectedly Wednesday afternoon, with 30 to 40 trailers ruined and scores of people homeless.

Several trailers were overturned in the storm, others were flattened and many more were knocked off their underpinnings. Residents were asked to leave their trailers and take shelter in a building at the entrance of the park.

It could not be determined if anyone was injured in the overturned trailers, or if anyone had been inside them when the storm hit.

The Red Cross reportedly is setting up temporary housing, possibly in on-campus dormitories, for people whose trailers were demolished.

At least one large gas pipe, ripped up by an overturned trailer, leaked gas, and several water pipes formerly connected to trailers spouted fountain-like streams of water.

Walls and roofs were peeled off of trailers, making them look like matchboxes soaked in water.

The overturned trailers were generally in isolated areas, often surrounded by unscathed trailers. In some areas, however, they apparently had rolled into each other as the 75 mph winds ripped through the trailer court.

Couches, stereos, barbells and Teddy bears were strewn around the wreckage.

Two residents of one of the overturned trailers returned to retrieve some of their possessions. Eddy Simmons, from Randler, N.C., and Odell Wyatt, from Waynesville, N.C., said they feared looters would ransack trailers during the night.

Both came to Carbondale just three weeks ago.

Wyatt crawled into the trailer, which was lying on its roof, and handed Simmons a television, a camera and other valuables.

Simmons threw out a first aid kit and remarked, "Here, we may need this tonight."

Widespread power outage plagues city

By Tony Gordon

Mayor Hans Fischer asked Carbondale residents to remain in their homes Wednesday night to avoid contact with live power lines in the wake of the storms that hit Carbondale in the afternoon.

The mayor also asked the local liquor stores to close no later than midnight Wednesday.

All of Carbondale serviced by the Central Illinois Public Service Co. was without electric power after the storm, but parts of town with Rural Electric Cooperative service, Lewis Park included, had power. Power was restored on the campus shortly after 9 p.m.

The mayor said the city cleanup efforts had been dealt a serious setback by Wednesday's storm. "I wouldn't say we were back to square one, but we are certainly at square two," he said.

City Manager Carrol Fry said residents were being asked to conserve water while power was out, because the parts of town serviced by sewer lift stations would not be able to function with power out and the possibility of sewer back-up.

CIPS was trying to arrange a switch of power supply from Kentucky because the Grand Tower switch station was knocked out in the storm.

Fry also said that residents would probably notice a change in the taste of their water while the power was out, because the pumps at Cedar Lake could not bring water into town without power. Fry said the city will be drawing its water from the reservoir until power was restored.

According to Randy Jackson, Emergency Services Coordinator, the city had enough generators and fuel to last until power was fully restored, and that city facilities would be high on the list of CIPS repair projects.

Storm pounds Murphysboro; girl drowns in Kincaid Lake

By Michael Monson
Staff Writer

Violent thunderstorms pounded Murphysboro again Wednesday, causing the drowning death of a young girl at Kincaid Lake and considerable damage to property.

According to several eyewitnesses, the girl drowned when the boat she was riding in with her family capsized during the storm. The girl, whose name is being withheld until her relatives can be notified, was reported to be wearing a life preserver but was overcome by waves generated by the storm's high winds. Four members of the girl's family reportedly survived.

Dick Gould, owner of Kincaid Village Marina, said the girl was about 10 years old. "They (the family) weren't very far from the marina when their boat overturned," he said.

Several other people on the lake suffered minor injuries, Dave Nicholas, a deputy sheriff for Jackson County, said. The Jackson County Sheriff's Department used a helicopter to search the lake for bodies and stranded persons in the storm's aftermath, but found nothing. Gould's Kincaid Village Marina was severely battered by the storm's high winds, which were reported to have reached more than 100 mph. He estimated that over 100 boats were damaged by the storm and said that the marina, which houses the boats, is almost a total loss.

The city of Murphysboro fared little better during the storm. High winds battered the city, knocking out recently replaced power and phone lines. According to Raymond Graff, coordinator of Jackson County emergency services, Murphysboro suffered more property damage Wednesday than it did last Sunday. Murphysboro Mayor Michael Bowers had estimated that Sunday's storm caused over $2 million worth of damage.

A total curfew was in effect Wednesday evening in Murphysboro. The western section of town appeared to be hit the worst. Mr. B's, a bar on the outskirts of Murphysboro on Rt. 149, had a third of its roof torn off by the high winds.

Red Cross to aid victims of storm

By Tony Garden
Staff Writer

The Carbondale chapter of the American Red Cross will interview people hardest hit by Wednesday's storm to determine what type of aid the Red Cross can provide for them. The interviews begin at noon today at the First Presbyterian Church, 310 S. Mill St.

By 9:30 Wednesday night, the Red Cross had found temporary housing for residents of the 30 to 40 trailers at Carbondale Mobile Homes that were reported destroyed or badly damaged by the high winds.

Frank Gumm, volunteer executive for the Red Cross, said his organization would also open, probably Thursday, a temporary office in Murphysboro to provide aid for that community and the rest of the county. Gumm said details had not been finalized yet, but the office would most likely be located in the Senior Citizens Center, 17 N. 14th St., or the Chamber of Commerce, 21 N. 11th St.

The residents of Carbondale Mobile Homes were able to find temporary housing.

The Red Cross will not be able to replace anything lost in the storm, Gumm said, but will provide any emergency relief.

side of the J.C. Penney store at the University Mall. The store was apparently flooded with rain and a pump was brought in to remove the water. The windows of at least 10 cars parked in the rear lot were damaged by the falling debris.

A security guard at the mall said the J.C. Penney store was the only store to sustain much damage. He said most people remained calm when the power went out.

University Four Theater manager Dennis Mason said about 100 people were in the theater when the storm hit and they were easily escorted to the center of the mall.

Telephone poles along the west side of Giant City Road near Carbondale Community High School-East were snapped off at the base.

Roofing was torn off the roofs of three buildings in the Georgetown Apartment complex at Grand Avenue and Lewis Lane. The roof of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints on Lewis Lane was damaged.

The entire city of Carbondale lost electric power for 4½ hours when the first of two storms hit the area and parts of the city still were without power late Wednesday. A severe thunderstorm watch was issued for Carbondale effective at 3 p.m. and the Emergency Services Office was opened and staffed at 2:50 because of advance warning issued by Southern Illinois Airport. A tornado was reported in the Chester area between 4 p.m. and 4:15. A report of winds in excess of 75 mph at Gorham prompted the sounding of Carbondale's warning siren at about 4:30.

Roofs were reported blown off Air Illinois offices, Westridge apartments and apartment buildings in the area of Wall and College streets.

There were unconfirmed reports of a funnel cloud touching down at Carbondale Mobile Homes Park, at the north edge of town.

Four trailers were overturned at the Tan-Tara Mobile Home Park. One additional trailer was severely damaged when the neighboring trailer overturned into its side.

There was one reported injury.

The main office of Royal Rentals, located at Tan-Tara and owned by Gale Williams, was also severely damaged during the storm. It houses Archie Williams Fertilizer and Gale Williams Insurance.

There was no estimate of the damage to the park and the office building.

The wife and one-month old baby of the owner of one of the overturned trailers barely missed severe injury.

Robin Nance, 20, said she had left with her mother-in-law

Sandy Nance, just 15 minutes before the storm hit and her trailer overturned.

Her husband, Robert, returned home from work to find the trailer demolished.

Nance, 22, is a mechanic at the Davis Auto Center of Ura Kanda.

The two, with the help of their in-laws, picked salvagable furniture, baby toys, record albums and dishes from under fallen beams, aluminum siding and overturned sofas and chairs loaded them into their trucks. Nance said he had no insurance on his trailer. He estimated the loss of his trailer and the damage to his belongings to be at least $8,000.

"I was planning to move the trailer to Cobden this summer. I guess I won't be moving anything, now," he said.

There were overturned trailers at the Green Acres Mobile Home Park across the road from Tan-Tara.

There was one reported injury. Neighbors said that Viengxay Laysoulvong was taken to Doctor's Memorial Hospital for cuts on her leg. The trailer she shares with another woman was overturned.

At least one other trailer was overturned in the park during the storm. Frank Stonemark, the landlord of the trailers said he did not estimate the damage as severe.

Police were stationed throughout the city to protect stores left without power following the storm. They were also stationed at the intersection of Rt. 13 and New Era Road diverting in-coming traffic.

An Illinois Central Gulf train stopped enroute through Carbondale by hanging branches and by other debris blocking the tracks through the city.

Police were called to at least two Carbondale liquor stores to control crowds during the following storm. Pick's Liquors in Lewis Park Mall, which operated with its own generator, was swamped with customers. Police also had to restore order at TJ's Liquors, 1224 W. Main St.

Southern Illinois airport sustained an estimated $500,000 in damage to buildings and aircraft from winds clocked in excess of 82 mph. At least 15 planes, the roof of a new terminal addition, a terminal supporting wall and a hanger were heavily damaged.

Assistant Airport Manager Gary Shafer said his crew clocked the storm at 82 mph before leaving the control tower for safety.

"Once I saw the winds reach that speed, I told the men to look for cover. The wind ripped out the runway ramplights and they are built to withstand wind up to 100 miles or better. I would safely say the wind reached 110-115 mph."

At least six private planes were damaged by flying debris or from being overturned. One small private plane flew 20-feet in the air landing on a twin engine private plane.

A DC-3 belonging to Southeast Missouri State was picked up by the wind and thrown into the wall of a nearby hangar, damaging the tail and breaking the wing.

Woodruff Aviation, which lost four planes in the earlier storm, sustained damage to six more aircraft, leaving the company with only four planes.

According to Shafer, the airport's power went out at 4:45 p.m. and went on auxiliary power immediately.

"Our generators were damaged in the first storm, so they'll only last about four hours or so," he said. The airport was closed at dusk.

He said an effort would be made to resume operations Thursday morning. Air Illinois facilities escaped major damage during the storm and the airline should resume normal operation Thursday, according to Shafer.

Shafer said he would conservatively estimate the damage at more than $500,000, twice the amount of damage the first storm inflicted. "We were just lucky no one was injured, because we had the airport working at full capacity," Shafer said. "It's going to take some time to clean up all these airplanes and damage."

City officials were trying to round up diesel fuel and gasoline to keep generators running for emergency services.

Registration for draft an unnecessary step ...

Barring unseen occurrences, 20-year-old men will begin registering for a military draft on July 21, with 19-year-olds scheduled to start registering a week later. This will be the first time for peacetime draft registration since 1975.

Unfortunately, it is possible that an actual draft will follow. The purpose of registration is to reduce the amount of time required to begin drafting and training young men for military duty.

A draft, and draft registration, should be opposed for a number of reasons.

The vast majority of Americans are of European descent, and many of their ancestors left Europe in the 18th and 19th centuries to escape war and mandatory military service.

If draft registration—and remember, with registration an actual draft can be resumed within weeks—young Americans will be deprived of the freedom of choice their ancestors sought decades ago.

A draft historically has been used only during time of war or when there is an imminent danger of war, and this should remain the case.

Sure, it's true that the Soviet Union has shown aggression by invading Afghanistan, an American ally. This move caused tensions between the Soviets and Americans to increase to their highest point since the Cuban missile crisis of 1962. But the USSR recently has been more passive in Afghanistan, and never at any point have the Soviets, through words or actions, seriously threatened the United States.

So there is no war, or even an imminent danger of one. But defenders of the draft and registration point out that the military is understrength, with a high turnover rate. A draft, they insist, will go a long way toward solving these problems.

There's no denying that the problems exist, but a draft is not the only solution. A better way to restore the strength of the military forces would be to make the military an attractive career alternative.

Benefits to military personnel should be increased greatly. For instance, an electronics technician in the Navy currently earns about $12,000 after eight years of service—about 75 percent of what his civilian counterpart earns. Equalizing pay and fringe benefits would make a military career viable to many young American men.

Increasing benefits would cost the government billions of dollars, but strengthening the military without a draft would be worth it.

Congress recently approved the 1981 federal budget, and included in this is a record peacetime budget increase. Our major European allies also have increased their defense budgets. This should show the Soviets that we are committed to having strong military forces, quashing the arguments of those who say draft registration would prove that we "mean business."

At any rate, the draft and registration should be opposed by all 19- and 20-year-olds, especially those in college. For those of you so inclined, the Coalition Against Registration and the Draft will hold a rally Friday outside the Federal Building in Carbondale. An even better way to show opposition would be to vote against lawmakers who supported draft registration when the November elections are held.—Scott Stahmer, Editorial Page Editor

... but American military forces dangerously weak

When West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt visited the United States in March, he made the rather oblique observation that "there's a difference between a country that has a military service obligation...and a country which has abolished the draft."

Schmidt's diplomatic comment was a friend's way of saying that the time has come to end our experiment with the volunteer army. It is a luxury that the United States and the free world can no longer afford. We need the draft.

We need it because of two cold realities which have been plainly evident for years. 1)The volunteer army is not working. 2)The Soviet Union is moving boldly to gain control of the Persian Gulf's oil supplies—oil upon which Western Europe and Japan, and to a lesser degree, the United States, are heavily dependent.

One reason the volunteer army is almost universally judged to be incompetent is discipline—or more precisely, a lack of discipline.

The need to meet growing recruitment shortfalls each year has led to the institution of programs like the Trainee Discharge Program and the Expeditious Discharge Program, both of which were instituted in 1976. Under these programs a soldier can leave the army for any reason at any time up to three years after enlistment, and get an honorable discharge to boot.

While these programs have helped the armed services come close to meeting their recruitment quotas each year, the costs on discipline are self-evident. How can a drill instructor push his unit that extra mile in 100-degree heat that it may take to get them in top shape when his men can pack up and leave any time they feel like it? Over one-third of the army's recruits leave before their three-year term is up. Military service has become a job.

Another problem with the volunteer army is education—or more precisely, a lack of education. The figures are startling. In 1980, only 58 percent of the enlistees without prior military service had high school diplomas. A whole 3.2 percent of the servicemen in the army have college diplomas. More than 60 percent of the enlistees fall into the bottom two categories of intelligence testing, categories III and IV.

What are the consequences of having of having an army with an extremely low intelligence rate operating the most sophisticated military equipment in the world? Again, the answer is self-evident. Sen. Sam Nunn summed it aptly in a recent interview in Time magazine. "Talk to West Germans off the record and ask what they think of the United States' ability to fight a war. It's very, very low."

The decline of America's military under the volunteer army becomes significant when one examines the magnitude of the Soviet military buildup over the past two decades and their increasing willingness to use military force throughout the third world. Like it or not, this is still an essentially bipolar world and the United States is the only credible deterrent to Soviet worldwide domination.

A few quick comparisons are in order. The Soviet Union has a 4.3 million-man army with 1.5 million combat troops divided into 164 divisions. The Soviets have compulsory military service, an extensive civil defense system, and can mobilize 20 million people within days. Military spending consumes between 13 to 15 percent of the Soviet Union's gross national product and their military spending this year will be 50 percent higher than the American total.

America has a 2.1 million-man army with 220,000 combat troops divided into 17 divisions, no compulsory military service, and until recently, not even registration for the draft. Military spending consumes 5.2 percent of the U.S. GNP and the civil defense program has been dormant since the early 1960s.

A bit frightening? Consider how the Soviet Union's leaders have utilized their military might over the past five years. In 1975, it financed the introduction of Cuban proxy troops into Angola. In 1977, a massive Soviet airlift of $1 billion in military equipment into Ethiopia won them a client state at the entrance to the Red Sea. In 1978, a Soviet-assisted Marxist coup won them a client state named Afghanistan. In 1979, Marxist-satellite South Yemen attacked the pro-Western state of North Yemen, although Arab League mediation eventually ended the conflict. Last December, as we all know, came the invasion of Afghanistan.

The purpose of these moves is transparent. The CIA has projected that the Soviet Union will become a net importer of oil within at least two years. The Soviets are currently net exporters of oil, from which they obtain almost all their hard currency to pay for imports.

Western Europe, Japan, and the United States, on the other hand, are net importers of oil. Most of this imported oil comes from the Persian Gulf and North Africa.

Get the connection? How can the Soviet Union obtain enough oil to meet its needs, and, at the same time, control Western Europe and Japan without firing a shot?

Through the judicious use of proxy troops, internal subversion (the PLO is useful here), and Soviet forces when necessary, the Soviet Union is moving to replace the remaining pro-Western Arab regimes throughout Southwest Asia. Iran is next on the hit list. If successful, and it is well on its way, the Soviet Union will gain de facto control of most of the Western world! Nuclear weapons will be of no help.

The answer? Build up the United States' conventional capabilities so that they are once again a credible deterrent to Soviet expansionism. Reinstating the draft would be a major component of such a buildup. To not do so is to rely on Soviet good intentions. We need the draft.—Mike Monson, Staff Writer

Building program takes time

As Ms. Cuevas so clearly makes the point for Men's Athletics . . . It does take time and money to build a good program. To ask women's athletics to produce income-generating sports immediately is not reasonable, but neither is it reasonable that they expend in ratio to men's athletics immediately.—Gale Sayers, Director, Men's Intercollegiate Athletics

Campus police actions confusing

Once again I find myself totally confused by the actions of the campus police. I am one of the several students who yesterday had his bicycle ticketed outside the northeast entrance of the Communications Building. I admit that my bike was chained to a pole and not to the rack. However, during this time of gas shortage and economic blight, I would think that bicycle use might be promoted and citations for petty offenses decreased.

Another point that puzzled me was why an officer was clear on the other side of campus giving away citations, when the Security Office, Parking Division, Washington Square, Building D, was surrounded by unattended two-wheelers just waiting for his services.

Now, you may be thinking that all these bicycle owners were waiting in line to buy a license or talk to the hearing officer. Not so. I checked. I even waited for nearly a half hour to see if any tickets were issued. There weren't.

It may be argued that my bicycle impeded the flow of pedestrian traffic and caused a safety hazard. I personally have heard of no injuries sustained from an illegally parked bike. As for harpiping pedestrian flow, people would have to walk almost six abreast before my bike would become a nuisance.

I feel that many man-hours are being wasted by the campus police. I do realize that because of the summer months and reduced enrollment, many of the hard-core criminals have left the area, allowing the police plenty of spare time. I would hate to think that we bicycle riders will be used to pick up the slack.—Richard Gue, Junior, Radio-Television

Hospital swamped with injured

By Ed Dougherty and Jacqui Koszczuk Staff Writers

The emergency room staff at Carbondale Memorial Hospital was swamped with a steady stream of injuries just after Wednesday's storms, and reported the most severely injured was a priest who suffered lacerations after being trapped under his overturned houseboat on Crab Orchard Lake.

The Rev. Bill Rensing, pastor of Our Lady of Assumption Church in Fairview Heights near Belleville, was knocked unconscious and trapped for at least a half hour during the storm. He was reported resting comfortably late Wednesday.

More than 30 people were treated between 4:30 and 10 p.m., and one hospital employee said doctors and staff were even busier than they were last weekend after the area's first bout with crippling thunderstorms.

St. Joseph Memorial Hospital in Murphysboro estimated 12 storm-related injuries and treated six people for chest pains, possibly attributable to the panic during the storm, said a spokesperson.

A partial list of the injured from Carbondale Memorial:

The nine-month-old grandchild of Evelyn Sanders, Carbondale, underwent surgery after being hit by shattered glass in an overturned trailer.

Mrs. Sanders' teenage daughter, Gladys, was also treated for glass injuries.

Gary Yates, Carbondale, with neck and back injuries from a falling tree.

Viengxay Laysouilvong,

Carbondale, treated for glass cuts.

Joe Krump, Waterloo, with back injuries.

Craig Ardagh, Carbondale, treated for cuts.

Linda Sue Embry, Henderson, Ky., treated for cuts and a sprained wrist.

Bob Brown, 24, Herrin, with cuts and a possible concussion. Brown was injured in a fall from a motorcycle after he struck a tree lying in the middle of the road. A friend who discovered Brown in the road said Brown misjudged the size of the tree while attempting to bypass it.

One man brought into the emergency room had put his fist, wrapped in a T-shirt, through his landlord's basement window so trailer residents could find shelter. The resident of Bel Air Trailer Court said the landlord was nowhere to be found and people were screaming for help.

Ardagh was also injured while helping others in the storm, cutting his hand on window glass while attempting to pull his neighbors from their home that was crushed by a fallen tree.

Krump, 17, was water skiing with two friends at Crab Orchard Lake when the storm hit. A tree fell on his back as the group attempted to save camping gear and the boat.

The campgrounds were "wiped out" with tents blown all over, he said.

A friend with Krump at the hospital said, "We sat in the 'john' for about an hour waiting. There were about 10 scared little kids in there with us."

Yates was working on a house in Cartersville when the storm hit. As he hurried to gather his tools and move inside, he was hit on the neck and back by a falling tree.

Elderly Decatur man is killed; apparently fell off freight train

ALTON CITY (AP)—An elderly Decatur man fell beneath a freight train and was killed Wednesday morning, authorities said.

Investigators said Theopis Perkins, about 70, apparently was riding on the train and fell off, or was trying to board the train when the accident happened.

His body was found along the Illinois Central Gulf tracks by a railroad track foreman after the train passed through Dalton City.

Supreme Court agrees to review Chicago high school racial quotas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court on Wednesday agreed to review racial quotas being used to preserve integration in two Chicago high schools.

The justices said they will hear arguments by black parents that the quotas should be outlawed because they "place the entire burden of integration on blacks and none on whites."

As part of its voluntary desegregation plan called Access to Excellence, the Chicago Board of Education in 1975 and 1976 imposed racial quotas for Gage Park and Morgan Park high schools in the city's Far South Side.

The quotas were an attempt to maintain each school's racial balance in the face of rapidly changing racial composition — from white to black — within the neighborhoods served by the schools.

The quotas, which in effect placed ceilings on the number of black students who could attend each school, were intended to prevent "white flight." The Gage Park quota, adopted by the school board in early 1975, established a 48 percent black, 42 percent white, 8 percent Hispanic and 2 percent "principal's option" attendance level.

The Morgan Park quota, adopted in 1976, established a 50 percent black and 50 percent white composition for each entering class. As of last school year, Gage Park High was 45.4 percent black and 41.9 percent white; Morgan Park High was 59 percent black and 41 percent white.

Black parents sued the school board in federal court in 1976, charging that the quotas were unconstitutional and illegal.

U.S. District Judge Hubert Will upheld the quota systems after the school board modified the plans to give black students excluded from the two schools in their neighborhoods an opportunity to attend some integrated high school within the city.

The 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals also upheld the quotas in a ruling last Aug. 13.

"We perceive no invidious discrimination in the board's modified stabilization quota plans," the appeals court said.

"We conclude that the board was entitled to consider the probability of white flight in formulating a remedial plan to prevent de facto segregation in the public schools," the court said.

In seeking Supreme Court review, lawyers for the parents of excluded black students attacked the quota systems on several fronts.

They said the "option" of attending other integrated schools in Chicago usually meant one-way bus rides of 90 minutes, and that less drastic options were not fully considered.

They argued also that the quota systems excluded only blacks — never whites — from their neighborhood schools.

Woman pleads innocent to ERA bribery charges

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — A Chicago businesswoman pleaded innocent Wednesday to bribery charges stemming from an alleged attempt to buy an Illinois legislator's vote for the ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment.

Wanda E. Brandstetter, 55, a pro-ERA volunteer, was charged with bribery and soliciting a lawmaker to commit official misconduct in the wake of a heated, bitter ERA battle in the Illinois General Assembly's spring session.

Rep. Nord L. Swanstrom, R-Pecatonica, said the $1,000 offer was hand-written on the back of a business card and handed to him May 14 as pro-ERA forces lobbied in preparation for a planned vote in the Illinois House.

Numerous other allegations of wrongdoing swirled throughout the State Capitol at the time.

That planned vote was postponed until June 19, when ERA ratification fell five votes shy of the 107 votes needed for approval in the House. Swanstrom voted "No."

State Law Enforcement Director Dan K. Webb and Sangamon County States Attorney William Roberts said they felt the Swanstrom allegation was the only one warranting prosecution.

The ERA repeatedly has failed in the Illinois General Assembly since 1972. As the only unratified major industrial state in the North, Illinois has become a crucial ERA battleground.

The trial was scheduled Aug. 18.

New director picked to prompt economic development of city

By Diana Penner
Staff Writer

Franklyn Moreno has been selected as Carbondale's new director of economic development. City Manager Carroll Fry announced Wednesday.

Moreno, director of the Greater Egypt Regional Planning and Development Commission for 12 years, replaces Jack Hanley, who resigned recently.

Moreno, 32, said his first priority will be to assess programs already in progress in the city and look for opportunities for further development. He said he will not have specific plans until he has evaluated the current situation.

Moreno was director of the Task Force on the Future of Illinois, which published its final report last spring. He said his work with the task force gave him a picture of the statewide economic development into which Carbondale's development must fit.

He said Carbondale's position as a hub of transportation and business in Southern Illinois makes it an important community.

"For a town of population 27,000, Carbondale has transportation linkages that many communities of 100,000 to 200,000 do not have," Moreno said. He said he will work to build upon the city's current status and continue plans such as the Railroad Relocation Project underway on South Illinois Avenue.

The city's efforts to revitalize the downtown area are necessary, Moreno said, and he will support projects such as the planned convention center.

Fry said Moreno was chosen from 40 applicants for the position. He said Moreno's experience with Greater Egypt gives him a necessary background of Carbondale's position in economic development in the area.

"Moreno is coming from a knowledge of Carbondale's position," Fry said. "He has developed many contacts he will be able to draw upon."

Fry said most of the applicants were from Illinois, although a few were from Missouri, Michigan and New York.

Moreno, who lives in Carbondale, has been a resident of Southern Illinois since 1967. He was director of Greater Egypt from 1966 to 1978, and has an academic background in design and community development, with emphasis on urban planning and economic development.

Couple found murdered following drug hearing

MONEE, Ill. (AP) — A Crete, Ill., man and his wife apparently were shot to death in their car Wednesday while driving home from a hearing on drug charges in Joliet, according to Will County authorities.

Will County Coroner Robert J. Tezak identified the couple as William E. Dauber, 45, and his wife, Charlotte, about 35.

He said the couple was last seen alive at 11:30 a.m. when they left Circuit Court in Joliet after a hearing on drug charges. It is believed they were shot while driving on the Manhattan-Monee Road about 15 minutes later by someone who pulled up in a car next to theirs on the road and opened fire, Tezak said.

The couple was found in their car which had smashed into a tree in the front yard of some farm property, Tezak said. He said evidence taken at the scene led authorities to believe someone shot at the couple, forcing them off the road and into the yard. After the collision, the assailant or assailants drove into the yard and opened fire again.

Dauber was believed headed home after a court appearance at the time of the shootings, Tezak said. The couple had been in court for a hearing on charges of possession of cocaine.

Authorities said Dauber was also facing charges of obstructing justice for allegedly concealing the serial number on a reportedly stolen car.

Tezak said an autopsy is scheduled for Thursday morning to determine the type of weapon used in the slayings. He said the victims appear to have sustained several wounds each.

Court supports affirmative action as one remedy for racial injustice

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Supreme Court expanded its support of affirmative action Wednesday by upholding Congress' right to guarantee minority businesses 10 percent of federal public works grants.

Although there was a mixed series of opinions, six justices agreed on the fundamental point: that Congress acted within its constitutional rights in 1977 when it set aside 10 percent of a $4 billion public works program for minority-owned businesses.

Opponents had argued that the quotas constituted "reverse discrimination."

The nation's high court also extended the constitutional guarantees of a free press to news-gathering, saying the public and the news media have a right to attend criminal trials except under extreme circumstances.

A 7-1 majority said the Constitution's free speech guarantee requires public trials, telling trial judges they can conduct trials in secret only as a last resort to ensure fairness to a defendant.

Justice John Paul Stevens called the decision a watershed in free press law, adding: "Until today, the court has accorded virtually absolute protection to the dissemination of information or ideas."

In the affirmative action case, the court upheld congressional authority to use racial quotas in awarding public works grants as a means of remedying past inequities.

Wednesday's ruling follows the court's 1978 Bakke decision, which allowed the University of California Medical School to use race as a factor in its affirmative action program. In a related decision last year, the court ruled that private employers may voluntarily establish affirmative action programs to remedy shortages of minority and women workers.

The majority opinion in this latest decision, delivered by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and joined by Justices Byron R. White and Lewis F. Powell, said:

"Any preference based on racial or ethnic criteria must necessarily receive a most searching examination to make sure that it does not conflict with constitutional guarantees.

This case is one which requires, and which has received, that kind of examination."

In other actions on the final day of its 1979-80 term, the court:

—Agreed to review racial quotas being used to preserve integration in two Chicago high schools.

—Said it will study an affirmative action plan aimed at increasing the number of women and minorities working in California prisons.

—Agreed to judge the constitutionality of Wisconsin's open primary law, which allows presidential primary voters to cross party lines.

—Dismissed the appeal of Texas death row inmate William Hammett who no longer wants to challenge his murder conviction or his death sentence.

Suit says Dan Walker took illegal donations

CHICAGO (AP) — Former Gov. Dan Walker and two of his campaign aides accepted $48,300 in illegal contributions to pay off debts from Walker's 1972 campaign, says Attorney General William J. Scott.

In a civil suit filed Tuesday, Scott alleges the three violated state election laws by accepting anonymous donations rather than forwarding them to the state. The election law prohibits anonymous campaign contributions.

The suit asks that the three be ordered to return these and any other anonymous donations to the state, to be placed in a court-supervised trust fund.

Named in the suit are

Walker; Victor de Grazia, his former campaign manager, and James R. Sneider, his former campaign treasurer.

No criminal charges will be filed against the trio because the two-year statute of limitations on election law violations has expired, according to first assistant attorney general Herbert L. Caplan.

According to the suit, the campaign accepted the donations in De Grazia's name. A hearing by the State Board of Elections later revealed that De Grazia could not have made the donations because they were greater than his net worth.

Legislative session ends in bill spree

SPRINGFIELD (AP)—Illinois lawmakers have gone home for the summer, but the legislation they approved before leaving could reduce your sales and income taxes, allow you to buy insurance to pay for a lawyer, and raise the interest you pay on an auto loan.

Hundreds of bills that could have a dramatic impact on your life were passed during the spring legislative session, which wound up early Wednesday.

If you quit your job for personal reasons, you'd find it more difficult to collect unemployment benefits, under one bill.

If you have a savings account, the first $5,000 you earn in interest would be exempted from the state income tax, under another.

If you're a farmer, you would no longer pay a sales tax on most farm machinery and there would be a lid on increases in your property assessments, under other bills.

If you attend a state university, legislators approved raising your tuition $48 a year.

If you're injured during a company softball game you could no longer collect benefits under the workers' compensation program.

And if you're a senior citizen or handicapped, lawmakers passed legislation making it more likely you could qualify for state "circuit breaker" property tax rebates.

The Legislature also passed bills cracking down on child abusers and habitual criminals, softening state air pollution standards, and restricting import into Illinois of spent nuclear waste.

All the bills go to Gov. James R. Thompson, who has the power to sign them into law or veto them, or he can rewrite portions and send them back to the Legislature for further consideration next fall.

Many of the tax relief bills were approved by lawmakers in a fit of election-year generosity.

But Thompson already has indicated he is likely to veto most of them. And, instead of tax relief, he's talking about changing the state gasoline tax from a flat 7½-cents-a-gallon to a percentage basis — which could add at least 5 cents-a-gallon to the price you pay for gasoline.

But the 1980 spring legislative session can be measured as much by what lawmakers refused to do to affect your life as by what they did.

The Legislature refused to make the dramatic changes sought by business in the state's workers' compensation laws, under which you are compensated for an injury suffered on the job. Business wanted extensive curbs on those benefits, but lawmakers instead passed more modest changes aimed primarily at curbing abuses in the program.

Lawmakers also refused to pass legislation to restrict industry from leaving Illinois, require that utilities burn Illinois coal when it costs no more than imported western coal, and clearly define when government employees have the right to strike.

And they rejected the proposed federal Equal Rights

General Assembly approves budget reflecting governor's views

SPRINGFIELD (AP)—Gov. James R. Thompson and the Illinois Legislature, frequently at loggerheads in the past over the state budget, emerged more like fiscal country cousins this year.

Spending authorized by the General Assembly for the fiscal year that began Tuesday reflects closely the level sought by the governor.

Thompson said he endorses much of the higher spending of general state tax revenues authorized by the Legislature, which adjourned its spring 1980 session early Wednesday.

"I was pleased with this session overall," Thompson said of the Legislature's final budget plan. "It's the best I've seen in four years as governor."

Thompson in March proposed a $14.46 billion budget for the fiscal year that began Tuesday. The proposed legislative budget sent him hovers at $14.7 billion — only 1½ percent higher.

"I think we were very conscientious in the sending we sent the governor," said Sen. Howard Carroll, D-Chicago, a Senate Appropriations Committee chairman.

"A little fine-tuning this summer and I think it'll be pretty good," the governor said, alluding to his power to reduce proposed state spending authority through vetoes.

But the budget's key—the part that most touches Illinois'

11.3 million citizens—is general state tax revenues planned to be spent.

Citizens supply the money for that spending through taxes every time they shop, with every paycheck they earn and whenever they pay rent, utility or real estate bills.

In the category of general state taxes, Thompson proposed General Revenue Fund spending of $7.63 billion. The General Revenue Fund is the basic all-purpose state treasury account and draws most of its money from the state sales and income taxes.

Lawmakers authorized nearly $7.8 billion proposed general revenue spending—$160 million, or 2 percent, above Thompson.

Thompson said he has agreed to about $117 million of the increases.

Here's a guide to highlights of the increases authorized in the budget plan sent Thompson by the Legislature:

—Over $32 million in increased spending was for education, most of which Thompson indicated today that he supported.

About $20 million would be in general state aid to more than 1,000 local school districts. That would provide guaranteed expenditures of at least $1,463 on each student, $9 over Thompson's proposed budget.

Another nearly $6 million would be in state grants to local school districts for transportation and special educational program costs.

The remaining $6.5 million would provide 1 percent higher pay raises for university faculty and staff—to 9 percent instead of Thompson's suggested 8 percent—a level to which the governor hasn't yet agreed.

—About $63 million in increased welfare spending, Thompson said he'll approve $24.5 million of that to finance 5 percent cost of living increases, starting Jan. 1, in monthly benefits to the poor.

Another $12 million—also okayed by Thompson—would care for 16,000 Cuban refugees expected to settle in Illinois from the "freedom flotilla" that brought over 110,000 people to U.S. shores.

And $25 million would go toward increased caseloads in general assistance and Aid to Families with Dependent Children programs

Professor says U.S. schools take faculty more seriously

By Dennis Moran
Student Writer

Hans Rudnick's accent is a curious mixture of his native German and the British he learned as a child. His neatly combed-back hair, graying slightly on the sides, adds to the continental appearance of the SIU English professor.

Herr Rudnick has been here since 1966, the year he received his Ph.D. from the University of Freiburg. He left that German school with three job offers in the United States, and chose SIU-C.

"I was rather impressed with the place," he said, explaining his choice. "It was an enthusiastic place, and the University Press had, as it still has, a very good reputation."

Rudnick has made good use of the press, often translating and editing books from German to English. His latest work, a revision of Immanuel Kant's "Anthropology of a Pragmatic Point of View," was published in 1978.

It was his obvious ambition that attracted him to America in the first place. In a European university, Rudnick said, "it takes a long time to be taken seriously."

"The typical full professor over there is in his late 50s or 60s," Rudnick explained.

"People who were more enterprising just didn't want to get into that. Once you knew how it was in America, you began to wonder why you should subject yourself to what one may call the backbone-breaking system that they had over there."

That situation has changed over the years, Rudnick added, and the average age of a professor in Europe has gone down. Because of steadily declining funds for higher education in America, Rudnick also feels many of his European contemporaries enjoy a higher standard of living than their stateside counterparts.

Hans Rudnick

But the 45-year-old associate professor does not regret his choice. He admires American universities for their superior facilities and the individualized attention paid to students.

"The American student has much more contact with his professor," Rudnick said. "The German student hardly has a chance to ever talk with him. A teacher will lecture to a large group, then have a seminar for more advanced students."

Personable and always neatly attired, Rudnick indeed appears content where he is. His immediate career goal is to become a full professor. And eventually, he would like to find the time to get involved in some local theater productions.

"I have always played in the theater, as a student in Germany and in Texas, where I worked as a visiting lecturer for awhile. One of these days, if I can find the time, I would like to participate in some productions here," he said gesturing dramatically. "I miss the theater. I really do."

'Bible-based' courses to be offered

By Mike Ritzman
Student Writer

Beginning this fall, SIU-C students and other interested persons in the area will be able to take Bible-based, college-credit courses at the Baptist Student Center.

The program is arranged with Judson College in Elgin and the Illinois Baptist State Association in Springfield.

The center is staffed and operated by the IBSA, a Southern Baptist organization, which will cover any cost of the extension program beyond tuition.

SIU-C students and others will be able to enroll for the courses through Judson College with earned credits transferring, on request, to SIU-C as electives.

In the fall of 1980, the course "Life and Meaning of Jesus" will be offered for three credit hours. In the spring of 1981, the course "Paul and His Interpreters" will be taught, also for three credit hours.

Both courses will be taught by Myron Dillow, pastor of University Baptist Church in Carbondale. The courses will meet for two 90-minute sessions per week. As of now, the times are undecided.

Plans call for more courses to be added in future semesters. Tuition for each course will be $88 per semester hour.

Survey shows Vietnam vets would serve again if asked

WASHINGTON (AP)—The most comprehensive survey ever made of Vietnam veterans finds that a majority of them say they would serve again if asked.

But most, like members of the public at large, say the United States should have stayed out of Vietnam.

Among veterans who had served in Vietnam, Cambodia, Laos, Thailand or the South China Sea, 55 percent disagree with the statement, "If I were asked to serve again, I would refuse."

Almost all the rest agreed with that statement to a greater or lesser degree.

Twenty percent said the statement matched their sentiments very closely, 10 percent said it matched "somewhat," 11 percent said it matched their feelings "not too closely" and 4 percent were unsure or did not answer.

Those findings emerged from a $484,000 survey conducted for the Veterans Administration by Louis Harris and Associates of 2,484 Vietnam era veterans, 510 educators and 1,000 business executives. The VA released the results Tuesday.

Nearly three-fourths of the veterans said they were glad they served their country and 60 percent disagreed with the statement, "The United States took unfair advantage of me."

Max Cleland, VA administrator, took encouragement from the results. "I think this indicates that Vietnam veterans are not the sunshine patriots that Thomas Paine warned us about," Cleland said.

An earlier part of the survey, released last November showed that 63 percent of Americans feel GIs in Vietnam "were made suckers, having to risk their lives in the wrong war in the wrong place at the wrong time."

Forty-nine percent of the Vietnam era veterans and 47 percent of those who actually served in the war zone felt the United States should have stayed out of the war.

In other results: 51-45 percent, Vietnam era veterans gave the VA a negative rating on the job it does in serving their needs. But when asked about specific programs, veterans generally rated them higher. The public was even more critical of VA programs.

About a third of the veterans agreed with this statement: "It is shameful what my country did to the Vietnamese people."

O'Hare's air traffic control system back to normal after 13 day outage

CHICAGO (AP) — The air traffic control system at the nation's busiest airport was returned to normal service after 13 days without its primary guidance computer, federal authorities said Wednesday.

The computer at O'Hare International Airport has been down since June 20, when it "froze" for about 15 seconds while tracking the 2,200 daily flights. Its job is to pick up aircraft about 40 miles away and project to radar screen information on flight numbers, speed, altitude, type of plane and collision avoidance and low-altitude warnings.

During the outage, controllers had guided air traffic by radar, radio communication and by manual identification, said Marjorie Kriz, a spokeswoman for the FAA.

The system was shut down after a computer failed to function whenever an aircraft formed a particular configuration, Kriz said.

Last week officials discovered the source of the problem, a programming error, and for the past four days, technical teams from O'Hare, and FAA teams from Washington and Atlantic City, N.J., tested a corrected program. Kriz said the outage caused only minor flight delays.

AFL-CIO willing to back Carter in order to stop Reagan candidacy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Alarmed by the prospect of a Ronald Reagan presidency, the AFL-CIO is ready to swallow its deep reservations over President Carter's economics and mount an all-out drive to prevent a mass defection of blue-collar workers to the former California governor.

"Reagan is just anathema to us," Alexander E. Barkan, the AFL-CIO's national political director said in an interview Wednesday. "I don't know of a single labor leader supporting him."

Without waiting for the political parties to choose nominees or for its own leaders to make a formal endorsement, the labor federation is wasting no time trying to convince its 13.6 million members and their families that Reagan is no friend of workers.

To keep Reagan out of the White House, the AFL-CIO is prepared to campaign for Carter's re-election despite its unhappiness with him, assuming — as it now appears — he is the Democratic nominee.

Barkan, who heads the AFL-CIO's Committee on Political Education (COPE), said the federation will not formally endorse a candidate until September, but that the selection will certainly be a Democrat.

The leaders of more than two dozen unions are backing Sen. Edward M. Kennedy for the Democratic nomination, but in nearly every case they appear ready to work for Carter if the president is renominated.

Because some of its unions are backing Carter and others are backing Kennedy, the AFL-CIO is remaining strictly neutral in the Democratic contest until after the party's August convention, Barkan said, adding, however, that the numbers clearly favor Carter.

Labor leaders fear that millions of working people will vote for Reagan out of frustration over high inflation and Carter's handling of an uncertain economic situation.

Professor wins prize for film on Carbondale

By Donna Hopkins
Student Writer

Michael D. Covell, assistant professor in the Department of Cinema and Photography, has won a recognition award for his 22-minute film "Helinnerigen" which has Carbondale as its subject. He received the award at Vanderbilt University's annual film festival during the school's Sinking Creek Celebration June 3-6.

The title, which is German for "remembrances," relates to the five years Covell spent filming in Carbondale.

Covell then converted his work into a 22-minute prize-winning film over a four-month period.

Explaining his film, Covell said, "I wasn't interested in doing the standard novel film. Instead I wanted to make a visual poem that would be different in structure."

In shooting the scenes around Carbondale, Covell looked for static movements and colors that related to one another.

"I wanted my film to be a mental process for the viewer. Subtle movement plus a color in one shot and how it relates to a color in the next shot makes people get more out of the film mentally."

Another process that gets the viewers to think is to incorporate written words into images by the use of subtitles under each shot, Covell said.

Covell, who has been making films since 1970, described his type of film as a "minority" since most filmmakers are more inclined to shoot the standard "Hollywood" film.

Although Covell said that he doesn't make films to compete for awards, he has entered other film festivals, such as the San Francisco Art Institute Film Festival. "I just make films for my own satisfaction," he said.

But at the Sinking Creek Celebration, Covell wasn't the only person satisfied with his work. Out of the 200-300 films entered in the festival, Covell's was one of 12 to win an award.

Not all of Covell's time is occupied with filmmaking. He recently discovered glass blowing and metal shaping. "I am constantly finding new interests to satisfy me," he said.

State of emergency declared in Carterville, Energy, Herrin

By Charity Gould and Robin Saponar Staff Writers

Carterville, Energy and Herrin were damaged more severely from Wednesday night's storm than the weekend storm, officials estimated.

All three towns declared a state of emergency and issued a curfew Wednesday night.

Damages consisted mostly of downed trees and power lines.

There were no serious injuries reported.

At John A. Logan College in Carterville, a few small buildings including a parking booth were leveled, said security officer Art Otey. Although classes were in session, the only injury occurring was to a student who tried to leave the area on his motorcycle during the storm. He suffered superficial cuts and bruises, Otey said.

The Shawnee Library System, along with several Carterville homes, had substantial roof damage.

A new water boil warning might be issued, said Carterville Mayor Frank Samuel, because of dropping water pressure. Residents are urged to conserve water.

Trailers in the Rolling Homes Trailer Sales lot, located on Illinois Route 148 south of Energy, were severely damaged. One trailer was tipped on its side, roofs were torn off of others, while the rest received minimal damages.

The east side of Energy received the most damage, as two or three houses and a house trailer were severely damaged, said Energy trooper Evans.

"One house looked like it exploded," he said. "The wind blew off the roof of my house, but there are many isolated incidents like this."

Evans said the damages were caused by winds that had no "twisting motions," but were "just straight winds."

Energy Mayor Bob Jeralds said the roof of the Mattingly Health Care Nursing Home blew off, but all of the beds were dry and the residents were doing all right.

The major damages in downtown Herrin were broken store windows, said Patrolman Dan Cox.

"There has been no looting yet because a lot of the store owners have stayed in their stores," Cox said.

He said that Mayor Mario "Moochie" Ottolini was trying to get the National Guard to come to Herrin and help protect the stores from vandalism.

"It doesn't look like we have too much damage to buildings," Cox said. "It's just going to be a hassle to clean it all up."

"We hardly got touched by the other storm, this one was much worse," he added.

Storm causes wreckage, death

Southern Illinois was just beginning to recover from a barrage of storms that struck the area over the weekend when a second onslaught hit unexpectedly at about 4:30 Wednesday, ripping through the area with winds of more than 80 mph.

Dozens were injured during the storm, and there was one confirmed death, a young girl who drowned at Lake Kinkaid. One woman was reportedly injured by a garbage dumpster rolling over. Others were injured by falling trees and debris.

Scores of residents of Carbondale Mobile Homes were left homeless by the storm. Thirty to forty trailers were destroyed, and several others were severely damaged.

Curfews were issued in Murphysboro, Carterville and all of Williamson County. Downtown Carbondale also was closed off.

Trees felled by the winds blocked streets everywhere and knocked down power lines, leaving much of Southern Illinois in the dark again.
