Officials study bar renewal process

By Shawna Donovan
City Writer

Carbondale city officials are considering a new liquor license renewal procedure which will examine bars with underage drinking violations more closely. The Carbondale Liquor Control Commission has renewed all 57 liquor license applications despite the 231 underage drinking violations of eight local bars.

American Tap, Checkers, Frankies, Gatsbys, Hangar 9, Sidetracks, Six and T-Birds had 231 violations combined last year. American Tap, 518 S. Illinois Ave., had 62.

In the past, the Carbondale Liquor Advisory Board has reviewed liquor licenses based on their safety and health inspection records.

John Yow, a Liquor Control Commission member, said the violations are predictable.

"You are going to have violations because Carbondale is a college town," Yow said.

In April, the Liquor Advisory Board reviewed the amount of underage drinking violations at an earlier meeting to debate the city's bar entry age which they will recommend to the commission later this year.

The board ruled the number of underage drinking violations was small compared to the total amount of underage patronage the bars encountered over the entire year.

Maggie Flanagan, a commission member, said she would support looking at each applicant closely.

Computer network proves costly WSIU broadcaster ends 50-year career

By Sean L. N. Hao
General Assignment Writer

SIUC is continuing development on a $40 million computer network despite the fact that many University departments cannot afford to use it.

The Department of Computing Affairs is continuing a two-year-old project to install a fiber-optic network between the University's mainframe computer and all personal computers on campus.

Charles Campbell, associate director of Computing Affairs, said a fiber optic link to the Campus Area Network allows departmental computers to interface with the mainframe at a faster rate.

"Computers using the older telephone dial-in method to connect with the mainframe operate at substantially lower speeds, and aren't able to utilize their full capabilities," he said.

Campbell said each department must pay for individual installation once the fiber-optic line has been run into the building.

SIUC to sponsor Field Day for local farmers

By Tracy Moss
General Assignment Writer

SIUC agricultural scientists at the University sponsored Farmer's Field Day which will educate area farmers about technologies that could eliminate the need for harmful insecticides.

The 27th annual field day, sponsored by SIUC July 7, is a training session for area farmers that updates them on current farming technologies.

George Kapusta, SIUC professor of plant and soil science, said biotechnological developments of corn and soybean seeds through genetic engineering will have a profound effect on pest control and plant and animal production.

"When and if these developments are completed, the use of insecticides will no longer be necessary," he said. "If the rootworm-resistant corn hybrids come on the market, this could put out of business all the insecticides used for rootworm right now."

Sampras swings past critics for win

The Washington Post

WIMBLEDON, England—The predictions—good and bad—all came true for Pete Sampras Sunday. His sledgehammer serve again carried him to victory. He fulfilled three-time Wimbledon champion Fred Perry's prophecy that he'd win Wimbledon one day. He silenced critics who questioned the No. 1 ranking he achieved without making the final in either of the year's first two Grand Slam tournaments. He even made the London tabloids look prescient for running headlines such as "Bored on the Fourth of July" atop their advance stories about Sunday's all-American men's final against Jim Courier.

At times, Sunday's match was akin to watching two men yank a tree saw back and forth. But as Sampras likes to say, style doesn't count—results do.

His 7-6 (7-3), 7-6 (8-6), 3-6, 6-3 victory was something of an anticlimax. Sampras's straight-set semifinal victory over three-time Wimbledon champion Boris Becker on Friday was flawless, and his five-set quarterfinal thriller against defending champion Andre Agassi held more artistry.

But Sampras, who plays tennis as mutely as a mime, couldn't care less.

Against Courier, one of the toughest competitors in the business, Sampras proved just as mentally resilient. He survived the most rigorous gauntlet of any seed in the tournament to get to his first Wimbledon final, and he won the first Wimbledon men's championship between a world No. 1 and No. 2 player in 12 years.

Sampras also may come to look back on this day—only his second Grand Slam title—as the coming-of-age achievement that announced him as tennis's top man. His first Slam victory, after all, came at the 1990 U.S. Open. He was 19 then, the youngest man ever to win it. He played without the pressure of being among the hunted ones. He didn't know, in his words, "how much it takes to win a Grand Slam." And he did it despite an inflamed tendon in his right shoulder that almost forced him to

Summer swing

Two American Legion baseball teams, Carbondale vs. Du Quoin, play baseball in the summer heat. The game was played early Sunday morning on the 4th of July. The Carbondale team beat Du Quoin in the favorite regular summer pastime sport with a score of 7-6.

Summer heat has expected effect on golf center

By Dan Leahy
Sports Writer

Hard-core golf fans braved the heat this past weekend to check out Carbondale's first public golf course.

The Hickory Ridge Family Golf Center opened its doors to the public Friday and has been doing good business despite the heat.

Damon Soper, manager of golf operations and a PGA professional, said the attendance was about what he had expected.

"The mornings were full 'till noon, but the afternoon heat caused things to slow down a little," Soper said. "Then also there are a fair amount of players that start late in the afternoon or early evening."

The brutal heat of 90 degree temperatures can be tough on young golf courses, but Soper said Hickory Ridge is holding up well.

"The heat and golf carts are causing some rough areas around the tees and the greens, but that is unavoidable," Soper said. "I think this course has held up extremely well."

Soper said they have not cut the greens to the length they want, but it has not made them unplayable.

Greens on new golf courses are sometimes left a little longer in height to protect against being worn away.

"Cutting them any shorter in this weather could certainly do some damage," Soper said. "But even at the length they are now, they have been getting better every day."

Wimbledon appeal more than just tennis

The Washington Post

WIMBLEDON, England—Let me say right up front that Wimbledon is without a doubt the greatest tennis tournament in the world. A real treat. A symphony of sights and sounds. Two thumbs up! Book your reservations for next year now! But be forewarned: Even at Wimbledon, watching too many tennis matches can feel like being locked in the dryer by your kid brother and fluffed for 20 minutes on SPIN.

When preparing for Wimbledon, everyone tells you to brace yourself for three things: the tabloids, which are ferreting; the

Commentary

Royal Family, whose duties, to the uninitiated American, seem to consist of nothing more than waving like white-gloved homecoming queens in parade convertibles; and the tennis, which is usually outstanding by the end.

But attending Wimbledon from wire-to-wire also can pose the philosophical question: How much tennis is too much tennis before dementia sets in?

I don't remember precisely when this first Wimbledon of mine became a blur, but I think it was sometime between the first week of the fortnight—when hundreds of match results fall on your head like bricks—and the mid-round dog days when stories began floating up about the sportswriter who swears he met a witch at some pub called the Slug and Lettuce, the nauseating tabloid rundown of Andre Agassi's decision to shave off his body hair and the wise guy who was going around the press room after Jana Novotna's collapse guffawing, "What'd everyone expect from a woman born in Chokoslovakia?"

It was so funny, we wrapped

Navratilova regains tennis crown after three-year lapse

The Baltimore Sun

WIMBLEDON, England—Martina Navratilova didn't get her 10th Wimbledon women's title.

But she did collect her 18th overall Wimbledon crown Sunday and inched closer to Billie Jean King's record of 20.

Navratilova joined with Mark Woodforde to win the mixed doubles crown with a 6-3, 6-4 victory over Tom Nijssen and Manon Bollegraf.

It was Navratilova's first Wimbledon crown since her last singles title three years ago.

"I guess I'm within striking distance now," Navratilova said. "But I just haven't won here for a while, so it was nice to win one."

Navratilova said she was less nervous than she expected.

"It felt good, I was surprised at how unnerved I was throughout the whole match."

JAPAN CRISIS MAY HAMPER TRADE TALKS

Political turmoil in Japan, expected to end the majority status of the ruling Liberal Democratic Party, is dimming hopes for a breakthrough in U.S.-Japanese relations at this week's Tokyo summit of the Group of Seven nations. Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa had his political legs cut out from under him when 45 members of his party joined the opposition in a no-confidence vote June 18.

EGYPT REQUESTS PREACHER'S EXTRADITION

Egypt formally asked the United States on Sunday to extradite Muslim preacher Sheik Omar Abdel Rahman, some of whose followers have been charged with the New York World Trade Center bombing. The request by Egyptian Foreign Minister Amre Moussa for the man regarded as "spiritual leader" of the Egyptian militant movement Islamic Group came in a meeting with U.S. Ambassador Robert Pelletreau.

SARAJEVO FACES WATER SHORTAGE THREAT

Tens of thousands of Sarajevo residents are playing parts in a nasty game between Sarajevo's Slavic Muslim-led defenders and powerful Serb siege forces bent on bringing the city to its knees. This ancient capital has withstood a battering by thousands of Serb artillery and mortar shells over the course of Bosnia's 15-month-old factional war, but the city now faces an even more serious threat to its survival: It is running out of water.

BLIMP CRASHES ON NEW YORK BUILDING

With a gaping hole in its side, a 160-foot blimp spun out of control and fell from the sky over Manhattan Sunday afternoon, crash-landing on the roof of an apartment building. Hundreds of stunned witnesses watched as the airship Bigfoot, bound for an airfield in Linden, N.J., deflated as it flew south over the Hudson River about 3 p.m. EDT and began losing altitude as it drifted over the Manhattan skyline.

COMPUTERS AID SEARCH FOR SERIAL KILLERS

A crime-linking notion has become workable by the 1980s computer revolution, and was a driving force behind the FBI's Violent Criminal Apprehension Program and many analogous state systems, that came on line in the mid-1980s. The Albany, N.Y.-based HALT system is being used to connect alleged New York serial killer Joel Rifkin with other unsolved murder cases around the state.

WOMEN, MINORITIES CHANGE CAPITOL HILL

More than any other event, last Wednesday's debate over Medicaid funding for abortion crystallized a transformation occurring on Capitol Hill with this term's addition of 23 women and 16 minority members to the House of Representatives. No longer is the House chamber a sea of blue suits and white faces. For the first time, women and minorities have numbers great enough to force Congress to consider viewpoints often ignored in the past.

CONSERVATIVE COURT MAY OUTLAST CLINTON

The final weeks of this year's Supreme Court term showed that conservatives may be able to control many decisions, even if President Clinton replaces several aging justices. In a year when moderate conservatives, who appeared to be shifting to the center during the court's previous term, largely re-established themselves as part of a conservative majority, the dissent often came from those justices most likely to leave the court during Clinton's term.

CLINTON DEFENDS TAX PLAN IN FLOOD AREA

En route to his rendezvous Tuesday with the other leaders of the world's major industrial powers, President Clinton stopped here for what White House aides had planned as a campaign-style tour of Mississippi River flood damage. But a discussion with local farmers turned quickly from such arcane subjects as crop insurance and anti-deficiency payments to a topic far more familiar to the president—his proposal to cut the federal deficit by raising taxes.

Alumni recollect memories

By Patti Dulik
General Assignment Writer

More than 500 former high school students from SIUC's University High School, once a model school for the teacher training program, reunited Saturday.

Alumni from the classes of 1920 through 1967 gathered at the Student Center on Saturday for a dinner and dance, and an indoor picnic on Independence Day.

Jane Phelps, member of the class of '63, said because the school averaged a total of about 250 students, there were many reunions in one.

"Best friends were not in one grade level," she said. "We were so close knit, everyone was friends with everyone."

Phelps said the first reunion in '88 drew alumni from Hong Kong, Brazil, France, and Canada.

Most of the students were the children of SIUC professors. As a result, graduates have scattered to many different parts of the world, Phelps said.

Graduates toured Pulliam Hall, one of the former school buildings, and got the chance to see the changes in their alma mater.

Ann Phelps Soderstrom, from the class of '61, traveled from Wharton, Texas to only to find that her locker and home economics room had disappeared.

She said she was amazed that the physical education locker rooms, her most disliked place in the school, still looked the same. She said she was really glad that the building and facilities are still being used.

Barbara Harris Zinn, member of the class of '61 came from Toledo, Ohio to meet with friends from Washington, Chicago, and Houston. They met at the University school in second grade.

"When you graduate in a class of 63 people, their more than classmates," she said. "They are a family."

Soderstrom said the reunion was a time for refueling.

"I'm really pleased to see that all of my friends have found their niche," she said. "We have all gone in such diverse directions yet we are still very close."

The University School had a long and bumpy history until it permanently closed with the graduating class of 1967.

When Dr. Allyn was creating the Southern Illinois Normal University curriculum in 1874, he envisioned a Model school that would allow observation and practice required to raise the standard of teaching of the newly trained graduates of SINU.

The school had 61 students until it closed in 1877 when the first director, Julia F. Mason, left to get married.

It reopened in 1882 when Professor John Hull organized the Teacher Training department and divided the school into two parts, the model school for teacher certification curriculum and the preparatory school, which roughly relates to current high schools.

By 1890, the prep school had been re-organized as a high school with a principal and more teachers were added to teach the increasing enrollment.

The school eventually moved to the building that is now called Pulliam Hall.

In 1914, students had class choices such as physical and biological sciences, manual training, agriculture and business.

The senior high school closed in 1967.

Nursery school through sixth grade and Special Education classes were offered until 1971.

Interfaith Center threatened with closure

By Adam Broad
General Assignment Writer

The Interfaith Center, a center open to people of all denominations for worship, may close within the year if it fails to receive additional support.

University Christian Ministries, which owns and operates the center, said the center is faced with a shrinking budget.

UCM is supported by four Protestant denominations: United Church of Christ, Presbyterian Church USA, Church of the Brethren, and Christian Church Disciples.

Karen Knodt, a UCM minister, said the Presbyterian Church enacted a 13 percent cut in funding this year, plans a 20 percent cut next year and 17 percent the following year.

"The Presbyterian Church, as with other mainline denominations, is suffering a decline of membership and giving," Knodt said. "It's not that they are re-dividing how the pie is cut, the pie is getting smaller."

Knodt said the ministry is looking at every possible opportunity to keep the Interfaith Center open.

"I have colleagues in other campus ministries who were very successful raising 10 to 30 thousand dollars from individuals in local churches," she said. "Another thing we've explored is writing grants for specific programs that we do."

UCM has worked on campus to promote programs such as Habitat For Humanity, which encourages volunteers to build homes for homeless people, AIDS awareness, and multi-denominational understanding.

Kevin Hopkins, director of the Wesley Foundation, said the Interfaith Center reaches out to

State government remains inefficient

JUST WHEN IT FINALLY APPEARED STATE lawmakers were going to reach an agreement for fiscal year 1993 on the June 30 deadline, something unfortunately familiar happened.

So familiar that it really should have come as no surprise. Once again a state budget remains undecided and Illinois has no authority to spend money or pay new bills because state lawmakers failed to overcome partisan politics.

Although the House and Senate could not agree on pressing issues such as the "granny tax," the cigarette tax and how to address the state's fiscal crisis, perhaps it should come as no surprise that the General Assembly did agree to adjourn until Wednesday so that lawmakers could enjoy a holiday weekend.

THIS EXTENSION OF PARTISAN BICKERING makes it even more difficult for legislators to build a coalition. Because they have missed the deadline, legislation will have to be adopted by a three-fifths majority in both chambers.

Taxpayers are caught in the middle as lawmakers continue a gridlock that is reminiscent of the Republican filibuster President Bill Clinton encountered when he attempted to pass his national economic package.

At the state level, however, Senate Democrats were unable to muster enough votes in their caucus to bring what was agreed upon as the compromised plan to a vote.

Regardless of which party is holding out, both sides could have avoided the stalemate if the last-minute budget work had been planned more efficiently.

MEANWHILE, IMPORTANT ISSUES REMAIN up in the air. A controversial cigarette tax increase has come under fire from both parties, especially lawmakers in Southern Illinois.

The compromised plan worked out by Gov. Jim Edgar and legislative leaders Wednesday night would raise the state's cigarette tax by 14 cents a pack to help pay Medicaid bills for the poor.

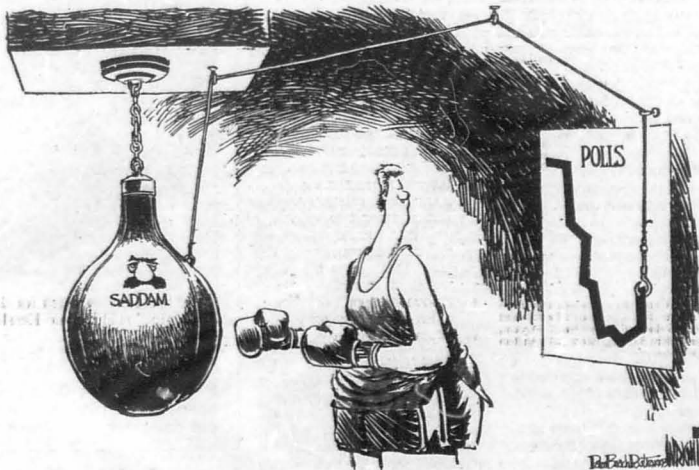

Such an increase was proposed to replace the "granny tax," but downstaters are reluctant to embrace the increase because they fear it will increase bootlegging, according to Rep. Kurt Granberg, D-Carlyle.

A bill that would make the .25 percent income tax surcharge permanent was also agreed upon in the tentative plan, which would give 75 percent of the revenue to the state and 25 percent to local governments. But the Senate obliterated that plan as members continued to be divided by party.

GRANTED, ISSUES SUCH AS THE ONES BEING decided carry considerable impact for the state, and lawmakers should weigh them carefully.

But not inefficiently. The General Assembly adjourned on time only once in the past 10 years. This year was supposed to be different as state budget issues were to be decided early.

Something's never change. Unfortunately, failing to address a state budget on time is one of them.

U.S. condemning assassination ploy contradiction to recent actions with Iraq

Newsday

In the early days of the Persian Gulf war, when the United States was bombing Iraq, officials of the Bush administration maintained a studied—almost a smirking—ambiguity when asked if they were attempting to kill Iraq's president, Saddam Hussein. Repeatedly, they said they weren't targeting him, but suggested by hints and winks that it would be a fine thing if he turned up dead, anyway. An answer given by Secretary of Defense Richard Cheney on the McNeil-Lehrer NewsHour at the time was characteristic. Asked about assassinating Hussein, he answered, "Saddam Hussein obviously is at the center of that and I'm not sure anybody would lose a lot of sleep over a situation in which he happened to be in a facility and it was struck. But the notion we would go after him individually or try to target him in some fashion is something that we simply don't do."

It sounded like a distinction without a difference, leaving full leeway for an attempt to kill him by an inadvertence that was only barely apparent. That impression was strengthened when, after 288 Iraqis were killed in the bombing of a bomb shelter in Baghdad, a U.S. military official remarked, "There's always the hope that (Hussein) will be in one of these command and control centers. Obviously he was not there on Wednesday (when the bomb shelter was hit)."

Asked whether it would be legal to kill Hussein, administration officials answered that it would be. The commander of the allied forces, Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, said, "Even if we wanted to go after Saddam, I don't think that's an achievable objective. That's not the way we fight wars anyway. We don't go out and kill one person." It was a comment that, like all the others made by administration and military spokesmen at the time, left the door wide open for attempts on Hussein's life.

The legal justification offered for the claim of this right was that although international law forbids the assassination of heads of state, it "allows the targeting of military leaders," in the words of a Pentagon lawyer interviewed by the Globe. To some, this seemed provocative reasoning, considering that the president of the United States, who under the Constitution is commander-in-chief of the armed forces, is another head of state who at the same time is a military leader. Some experts alleged that Hussein, who holds the rank of field marshal, is more firmly planted in military ranks than the American president, but that seems a feeble distinction on which to found the legal basis for the safety of our president.

Recently, we learned of the allegations that Hussein did in fact try to retaliate, by ordering an assassination attempt against Bush during his recent visit to Kuwait. The truth of the charge is impossible for an independent observer to judge, yet the news should scarcely come as a shock to a country whose spokesmen were recently saying that the only reason the United States hadn't killed Hussein was that we could not find him. Of course, it would also be foolish to suppose that if Hussein were bent on assassinating American officials, he would wait for the United States to set a precedent. He proved himself capable of any outrage long before the United States ever went to war against him. Nor, of course, does the Bush administration's claim of a right to kill Hussein during the gulf war justify an attempt by Hussein now to assassinate Bush. What it does mean is that whatever protection against assassination custom and law may have given to heads of state, including our own, is weakened. It means that, henceforth, we Americans accept living in the kind of world in which heads of state are fair game.

Now President Clinton, has retaliated against Hussein's alleged retaliation by firing 23 cruise missiles at the command center of Iraqi intelligence in Baghdad. A great majority of observers have found this attack fully justified. Another question to ask, however, is whether it was wise. The destruction of that building follows by months the bombing of the World Trade Center, and by one week the arrest of alleged terrorists from the Middle East for planning to bomb other targets in the city. No one has found evidence of Iraqi involvement, but the makings of a new kind of international warfare, pitting high-technology attacks by the United States abroad against low-technology attacks by terrorists here at home, have been placed on view for all to see. It's a competition that almost in its very nature is bound to increase the likelihood of assassination—a technique that the words of the American government condemn but its recent actions have tended to approve.

Kapusta said these hybrids are not available to farmers yet.

"By '95 or '96, farmers could have these varieties of seeds available to them," he said. "This is a new area of technology, so they have to deal with regulatory agencies before the hybrids can be put on the market."

Farmers will also be informed of the Sudden Death Syndrome, a fungal disease that wiped out many crops last year and cyst nematodes, a destructive worm that destroys soybeans.

SIUC agronomists, Oval Myers, Paul Gibson and Michael Schmidt, have developed a soybean hybrid that is resistant to cyst nematodes and also seems to better resist the Sudden Death Syndrome for which there are no known cures.

Schmidt said the hybrid is highly resistant to the most prevalent race of soybean cyst nematodes in the North-Central United States.

"It also has good yield performance in the Southern Illinois region, particularly in the northern portion of that region," Schmidt said.

Kapusta said the syndrome is a relatively new disease that has developed within the last five to six years and can virtually devastate an entire crop.

"It is really not a widespread problem, but it is of great concern to farmers," he said.

Gibson said last year was the worst year for the syndrome.

"I saw a farmer down in Brookport whose entire crop was zapped," he said.

Kapusta said the field day, to be held at SIUC's Belleville Research Center, will draw approximately 400 area farmers.

"We go on the basis that if they learn at least one thing then we've accomplished something," he said.

personality, said William Hedden, art and publishing director of Broadcasting Services.

"Erv was always quite a character and one of the best announcers Southern Illinois has ever seen," he said.

Coppi, the host of "Movie Theater" which ran from 1976-1986, aired feature films with legends John Wayne and Spencer Tracy to horror greats Bela Lugosi and Lon Chaney.

Coppi said the success of his show was possible by his love for film and television that he wanted to share with his audience.

"At first, I was excited to find out we were reaching 6-to-16 year old kids, but then I found out we were reaching all of the college kids, too," he said. "That's what the college kids would do on a Friday night — it was pizza, beer and Uncle Erv."

Hedden said his easy-going personality endeared him to the viewers.

Coppi, who grew up in nearby Royalton, lived in Southern Illinois for his entire 50 year career. His career started in radio and led him to bump elbows with famous personalities long before his television start, Coppi said.

"I was at the Du Quoin State Fair in 1951 and I met this little man doing James Cagney impersonations," Coppi said. "Come to find out, it was Sammy Davis Jr."

But tragedy also found its way into Coppi's career. Coppi said he had the unfortunate experience of broadcasting from a makeshift morgue after a coal mining accident killed 120 men in West Frankfort.

"A roller coaster ride would be a good way to describe my career," he said. "But my love for the community and the job have been worth any ups and downs I've encountered."

But Coppi said the pinnacle of his career was receiving an award for community and university service.

"The proudest moment I ever had was when I received the Lindel Sturgis Award for community service. I've never been so honored in my life," Coppi said.

"Erv has done so much for the community," said Corinne Kessler of Broadcasting Services.

Jerry Kline, chief broadcasting engineer at Broadcasting Service said Coppi brought recognition to WSIU-TV.

"He'll be missed and I don't think anyone could replace him," he said. "He's one-of-a-kind and you only run across someone as talented as Erv once in a lifetime. It's been a real opportunity to work with someone of his caliber."

violations," she said. "I think next time we should look at each bar's license application individually."

City Attorney Michael Wepsiec said the violations are not very high.

"If you think about it the numbers are not that big when you consider how many people go into the bars and how many of them are underage," he said. "People who are caught end up in circuit court and it usually does not amount to much because there is not enough evidence to prove it one way or the other."

John Budstick, owner of the American Tap, said he is proud that his employees try to control underage drinking but it is difficult.

"We have a mass amount of people who come into the bar and our employees try to the best they can as far as catching underage drinkers," Budstick said. "We do a good job and we are proud of that."

Mike Spiwak, Undergraduate Student Government president, said Carbondale bars should not have to close down because of a small number of violations but the law should be enforced more.

"I am not in favor of shutting a place down or taking their liquor license away from them if they have underage possession violations," he said. "I am in favor of keeping that business open and having the law enforced better."

The commission will have until the next licensing deadline to decide how to review applicants.

of machines needed," he said.

Tao Rongjia, associate professor in the physics department, said the physics department still is unable to use the fiber-optic lines installed in Neckers over two-years-ago.

Alan Woolf, Director of the Wildlife Conservation Coop in I life Science II, one of the 14 buildings with the new fiber-optic line, said his department has yet to make the direct connection to CAN because of costs.

Michael Grenda, at the computer-assisted instruction and research laboratory, said he heard the project to update the Campus Area Networks lines with fiber-optics is estimated to cost $40 million.

Woody Hall, Wheeler Hall and the Engineering and Technology building will be connected to the new line this summer, increasing the number of buildings able to access the University's mainframe directly to 17.

students by demonstrating the unity of different faiths working for social justice and environmental concerns.

The Hillel foundation, Jewish campus ministry, rents an office from UCM in the Interfaith Center.

Robin Gross, director of the Hillel foundation, said the Interfaith Center is a clearinghouse of information concerning what people are doing to help the community and how to get involved.

CARBONDALE COMMUNIQUÉ

JULY - AUGUST, 1993

City of Carbondale

City Hall/Civic Center Moves Closer To Reality

Imagine a new business with 70 employees Downtown that attracts hundreds of people into the area. Imagine a community meeting facility that accommodates groups from 2 to 300. Imagine a beautiful building occupying the vacant City owned property at the corner of Walnut Street and Illinois Avenue. The City Hall/Civic Center will make those dreams for our Downtown come true.

The City Hall/Civic Center's Master Design Plan has been completed and has been available for public review and comments at City Hall since it was presented to the City Council on May 18. Written comments on the plan have been encouraged by the City. City Manager Jeff Doherty said "The City Hall/Civic Center will serve as a cornerstone to downtown redevelopment and it's important that Carbondale citizens have an opportunity to provide input into the design of this community facility."

The 44,198 square foot facility will be located on City owned property, commonly known as Parcel A and bounded by Walnut Street on the south, Illinois Avenue on the east, Monroe Street on the north, and the Walnut Street Baptist Church on the southwest. City offices that will be relocated from the present City complex on East College street are the Mayor and City Council, City Manager, City Clerk, Human Resources, Finance - including the Water Office, City Attorney, Engineering and Public Works Administration, Development Services - including Planning and Building and Neighborhood Services, and Fire Chief - including Emergency Management Services. The City Hall portion of the new building will consist of two floors with a basement and will be constructed to allow for two additional floors in the future.

The Civic Center will be about 7,000 square feet and is designed to be both flexible and functional. With the use of movable walls, the Civic Center will include the City Council Chambers and four smaller meeting rooms of approximately 1,070 square feet. The walls can be removed which will enable combinations of various room sizes. The removal of all walls will provide seating in a banquet style arrangement for approximately 300 people.

A catering kitchen will allow groups to make their own arrangements for food service. While the Civic Center portion will contain only one floor, the ceiling height requirements will cause the height of the building to be consistent with the other two story buildings in the area.

The estimated construction cost for the City Hall/Civic Center is $4.8 million and the total project cost, including design, is about $5.3 million. A decision to proceed with the project's final design is expected to be made in August by the City Council. The project's schedule calls for construction to begin in the Spring of 1994 and completion being in 1995. Bonds would be issued for the project with the annual debt service paid from the City's General Fund, including the assumption of a portion of the current Library Building property tax levy due to expire in 1997.

The City Hall/Civic Center project has its roots with the two Downtown Retreats held in 1983 and 1990. Each retreat, attended by over 100 persons, placed the City Hall/Civic Center project as a top priority for Downtown redevelopment. The Downtown Development Plan, 1990-2000, includes a City Hall/Civic Center at the proposed site. The 1990 effort to obtain a State grant to pay for a portion of the larger and costlier project proposed at that time received widespread community support.

The City Hall/Civic Center project continues the City's commitment to Downtown Redevelopment. Recent City investments that are returning dividends include the Town Square, IC Railroad Freight Office Pavilion, IC Railroad Passenger Depot, public parking expansion and improvements and the Facade Loan Program. City Manager Jeff Doherty thinks the public investment has led to private investments. "There is growing confidence in the private sector about Downtown. Our community feels good about Downtown once again. I believe we'll see more and more businesses moving into the area."

GTE building option studied

Building would serve as alternative for a City Hall/Civic Center

During the past several months, informal discussions between the City and GTE have centered on the idea of the City purchasing the west half of the GTE building complex on West Monroe Street. The GTE building would serve as an alternative for a City Hall/Civic Center. GTE has received corporate approval to enter into formal negotiations with the City.

The next phase of these discussions will be to determine a purchase price and the cost to renovate the building for a City Hall/Civic Center. The City will utilize the project architect to determine the feasibility of renovating the building to City purposes as well as the cost estimate.

It is expected that in August, the City will have adequate information to determine the desirability of purchasing the GTE building and compare it to the proposal to construct a new City Hall/Civic Center.

Only a portion of the GTE property is in question. The tall structure and the single story building on the west half of the property are being negotiated. GTE will retain the newer east half of the building complex for its employees and operating equipment.

On the grow

The first half of 1993 has continued to be a time of busy construction activity. The cold, wet Spring weather held up some projects involving outside construction, but many remodeling projects were undertaken.

Remodeling has been underway at two motels on East Main Street - the Bestway Inn and the recently opened Relax Inn. Other improvements have been made along East Main Street. Heilig-Meyers completely renovated the property at 715 E. Main for a new furniture store. Several changes are occurring in the food and beverage establishments along East Main Street. El Bajio, a Mexican restaurant, has moved into the former Arby's site, Hunan Village did some remodeling, the former Rax restaurant will be remodeled and a Fazoli's restaurant (fast food Italian) will open in its place, the east-side McDonald's is reworking its drive-thru facility, a site plan has been approved for a new Taco Bell in front of the soon to be completed Wal-Mart, Pizza Hut is expanding its facility, and Paff's Sports Bar opened in the place of the former Notsos's Food and Spirits.

University Place has seen the addition and expansion of tenants. The largest in the area is a Goody's clothing store that will occupy the space vacated last year by Watson's at University Place. A.C.C. Truck/Auto/Van Accessories opened a new store. Pearle Vision Center relocated from University Mall to University Place. Health South relocated and substantially increased its space at University Place. Gospeland Bookstore opened a new store. Cellular One is improving its facility at University Place.

The University Mall has also seen changes. Boot Country (a western apparel store) opened and Better Homes and Bargains expanded its store. First Cellular is installing a facility in the Mall.

The Downtown area continues to show strength. Memorial Hospital is building an addition to its cancer treatment center. White and Borgognoni architects are remodeling the former auto parts store at 212 N. Illinois Ave. into professional offices. Gusto's moved from West College Street onto S. Illinois Ave. and Wise Guys Pizza opened in the space vacated by Gusto's. A new video store opened at 803 S. Illinois Ave. Mind Trek has opened at 606 S. Illinois. C'est La Guerre, a paint ball shooting facility, has opened at the former T.J.'s bar. Kahala Fast Foods and Club Paradise are also doing remodeling. Design work continues on the proposed new Civic Center/City Hall, and the City acquired the former A&P building site to be used for the Center's parking.

Carbondale's latest financial institution is open at the Murdale Shopping Center. Banterra Bank is occupying the building that formerly housed Dr. Valdez who has relocated his office to a new building constructed in the Bent Tree development on Striegel Rd. This is an interesting recycling of a building. The structure being occupied by Banterra was originally built as a bank building for a bank that merged with another in the city. Carbondale now has 9 banks and savings and loan associations and a major credit union.

Permits were issued for 9 new houses to be built. Many permits have been issued for additions to or remodeling of existing homes and apartments in the City the first half of the year.

Plans have been approved by the City for 20 apartment units. A 4-unit apartment building is to be built at 500 S. Poplar St. Another 4-unit building is being constructed on Wood River Drive. This is the second phase of a development specifically intended for senior citizen housing. Two triplex and one duplex buildings are being developed on South Illinois Avenue near the south city limits. A 4-unit building is being built in the 3000 block of West Sunset Drive.

Of long term significance is the growth of the City to the west. The Pine Lake Subdivision at the corner of Lake Road and Main St. (Route 13) has been annexed into the City and is being connected to the City sanitary sewer system. The sewer being installed is designed to be able to serve a larger area on the west side of the City.

The Carbondale Clinic is continuing to improve its operations in the City. Plans have been approved for a 1.2 million dollar addition to the Clinic at its principal facility on West Main St. The Clinic is also improving the facilities it occupies in the building that houses the Dialysis Center on S. Lewis Lane.

Carbondale Brick and Block is expanding its building in the Carbondale Industrial Park.

Plans are proceeding for the construction of the new tessa truck inc. (tti) factory in the Bicentennial industrial Park. The ground breaking ceremony has been set for July 7, 1993. The tti factory will occupy a substantial part of the Bicentennial Industrial Park. The Carbondale Business Development Corporation has acquired an option to purchase land adjacent to the Industrial Park so that space will be available for further industrial sites.

Celebrate the 10th Annual National Night Out

On Tuesday, August 3, 1993 neighbors throughout Carbondale are being asked to join forces with thousands of communities nationwide for the 10th Annual National Night Out, a crime/drug prevention event. National Night Out is sponsored by the Carbondale Police Department and the Early Bird Kiwanis Club, and will involve over 8,500 communities from all over the United States, Canada, and U.S. military bases around the world. Over 26 million people are expected to participate in America's Night Out.

National Night Out is designed to heighten crime and drug awareness, generate support and participation in local anti-crime efforts, strengthen neighborhood spirit and police community relations, and send a message to criminals letting them know neighborhoods are organized and fighting back.

Carbondale Police Chief Don Strom invites everyone to join us on Tuesday August 3, 1993 at 7:00 p.m. for the festivities. The Southern Illinois Concert Band will be performing and refreshments will be served. Crime prevention and lock displays will be set up with representatives to answer your questions. McGruff the Crime Dog will be on hand and there will be a giveaway of McGruff dolls for the kids (children must be present to win.) City officials will also be on hand. Plan to bring your neighbors and, especially kids, to Turley Park and help us take a bite out of crime."

On Wednesday, August 4, 1993 Carbondale residents are asked to lock their doors, turn on their outside lights and visit with their neighbors. McGruff the Crime Dog will try to visit as many neighborhoods as possible between 8 and 10 p.m.

For additional information contact the Carbondale Police Department's Community Resources Office at 457-3200, extension 428.

City employees receive diversity training

One of Carbondale's many strengths is the diversity of its population. Carbondale's citizens include people from all around the world and people who have never traveled beyond the immediate Carbondale area; well educated professionals and those who never completed their basic education; high income and low income; and people whose backgrounds vary in many ways. City of Carbondale employees are representative of diversity in the citizens they serve.

Recently, all employees outside the Police and Fire Departments received diversity training during a day long workshop. Participants learned more about others and themselves through several exercises designed to promote diversity awareness. Police and Fire employees will receive diversity training in the near future.

City Manager Jeff Doherty scheduled the diversity training in order for City employees to better serve citizens and work with fellow employees. "It is essential we recognize diversity comes in many ways and that we must be aware of differences among people. Appreciating diversity allows us to better understand the needs and expectations of Carbondale citizens and co-workers," Doherty said.

Rental licensing task force tours city

"The good, the bad and the ugly" was used to describe rental housing units viewed by the Rental Licensing Task Force during its tour of rental properties in Carbondale on June 21. The task force, comprised of City, Chamber of Commerce, SIUC Administration, SIUC students, rental property owners and citizen representatives, is studying the desirability and need for a rental property licensing program in Carbondale.

The tour included rental properties of all shapes and sizes including trailers, apartment buildings, duplexes, government subsidized units and houses throughout the community. These properties all rented to all age groups and family sizes. While many feel a licensing program would only target SIU student housing, rental housing makes up over 70% of Carbondale's housing units and such a program would apply to all rental housing units in Carbondale.

The task force was formed last Spring and has been presented with considerable information ranging from the problems encountered by the City in the enforcement of housing codes, a survey of other communities with licensing programs, census information and problems experienced by landlords to sample ordinances for a rental licensing program and a mandatory inspection program.

Rental property licensing programs vary from one community to another. Variables in a program include the time length of a license, penalties for renting without a license, the appeal process, and the cost of a license.

Many rental properties in Carbondale are well kept and meet the minimum housing codes. There are also many rental properties in the City that do not meet the minimum codes and, in some cases, could be a threat to the health, safety and welfare of the residents. Current City ordinances do not provide for mandatory inspections of housing units; inspectors must obtain permission from the owner or the residents to enter the housing unit to perform inspections to assure electrical, plumbing and building codes are being met.

During the next meeting of the task force, plans will be made to hold a public hearing on the rental property licensing issue in September. It is expected the task force will complete its work and make a recommendation to the City Council in the Fall.

New U2 album leaves listener numb

Record Review

By William Ragan
Entertainment Editor

U2 is one of the most popular bands of the past decade, an arena staple whose rock anthems scream out for justice in a world gone insane.

However, when listening to the group's new CD "Zooropa," released today by Island records, the phrase "has-been" comes to mind. "Zooropa" bears little resemblance to the U2 of old. Gone is the Edge's trademark guitar sound, replaced by synthesizer washes and cliched riffs.

The once-powerful rhythm section of Adam Clayton and Larry Mullen, Jr. is reduced to predictable patterns devoid of dynamics.

Bono's impassioned vocal delivery is also strangely absent — throughout most of "Zooropa" he

'Zooropa' lacks impressive rock edge of previous records seems as bored as the rest of the band.

The change is most apparent on the first single "Numb." Over a synthesized backbeat, featuring a heavily processed guitar drone and Space Invaders sound effects, the Edge speaks in a dull monotone, "Don't pass/ Don't press/ Don't try/ Don't feel/ I feel numb."

It is almost as if U2 has become desensitized to the brutality that once spurred the band to create angry anthems of social change such as "Sunday Bloody Sunday" and "Pride (In the Name of Love)."

Instead, the band accepts its status as a cult of personality, becomes cool and detached, and creates songs that come off like an Orwellian nightmare. The lyric: "Just play another chord/ If you feel you're getting bored" says it all.

Producer Flood is partially to blame for the neutered sound of "Zooropa." Flood rarely highlights the rock elements, concentrating instead on a techno arrangement that rarely breaks from mediocrity.

"Babyface" sounds like "Low," era David Bowie, and the influence of Brian Eno, who performs on the track, is more than apparent.

"Daddy's Gonna Pay for Your Crashed Car" is a failed foray into industrial music. Bono's lame falsetto on "Lemon" is backed by a techno track and a hollow, electronic sounding choir.

Bono's lyrics are at times simply awful. "Some Days Are Better Than Others" features such stinkers as "Some days are slippy, other days sloppy/ Some days you can't stand the sight of a puppy."

Listening to "Zooropa," it is hard to believe that this is the same band that produced such classic songs as "I Still Haven't Found What I'm Looking For," "I Will Follow" and "New Year's Day."

But a few tracks offer brief glimmers of hope. "Stay" shows that U2 is at its best when creating music of stripped-down simplicity.

Although Bono sounds uninspired on the ballad "The First Time," the rest of the band does, interweaving melodies between the piano and the guitar.

Stylistically, the song recalls "Running to Stand Still" and "With or Without You" from the album "The Joshua Tree."

"Some Days" shows that U2 can merge a techno sound with a harder rock sound; however, this idea is never followed through on the rest of "Zooropa."

"Zooropa" lacks the impassioned rock edge that made U2 a household name, replacing guitar choruses with synth loops.

While "Zooropa" is the logical extension of last year's "Achtung Baby," U2's change of musical direction sounds more like an identity crisis than a genuine attempt to do something new.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING POLICY

Please Be Sure To Check Your Classified Advertisement For Errors On The First Day Of Publication

The Daily Egyptian cannot be responsible for more than one day's incorrect insertion. Advertisers are responsible for checking their advertisements for errors on the first day they appear. Errors not the fault of the advertiser which lessen the value of the advertisement will be adjusted. All classified advertising must be processed before 12:00 Noon to appear in the next day's publication. Any processing after 12:00 Noon will go in the following day's publication. Classified advertising must be paid in advance except for those accounts with established credit. A 29¢ charge will be added to billed classified advertising. A service charge of $7.50 will be added to the advertiser's account for every check returned to the Daily Egyptian unpaid by the advertiser's bank. Early cancellation of a classified advertisement will be charged a $2.00 service fee. Any refund under $2.00 will be forfeited due to the cost of processing. All advertising submitted to the Daily Egyptian is subject to approval and may be revised, rejected, or cancelled at any time. The Daily Egyptian assumes no liability if for any reason it becomes necessary to omit an advertisement. A sample of all mail-order items must be submitted and approved prior to deadline for publication. No ads will be mis-classified.

him in masking tape and left instructions to let him out of the closet only after we're gone.

The point is, working Wimbledon and watching Wimbledon as a fan are two entirely different things. Fans get to work on their tans, sit in the open-air cafes swilling champagne or Pimms and nibbling on those famous strawberries and cream. Fans get to soak in the majesty of the grounds, the aroma of the blooming flowers, and — if I haven't said this already — the best tennis you'll ever see.

But we press grunts? We have all that precious backstage access, all right — it consists of a windowless interview room that 100 journalists sardine into for each post-match session. We get a free pass into the grounds each day, and a cubicle in a workroom along with the rest of the international press. Which is wonderful.

When we approach the millionaire players after practice and lob up some tremulous approach shot like, "Could I please bother you for a few minutes with a couple of questions?", what we get back is a look that says, "Unless you've got a Nike contract in that notebook, drop dead, serf."

There's glamour in this international-correspondent business, all right.

But that's the glory of jock journalism — testing yourself just like the athletes do, pushing yourself to do better, straining to find another word for "forehand" with every fiber of your body.

Wimbledon challenges you in other ways too.

Like when you're lapsing in and out of consciousness after hours of watching a string of hypnotic matches that consist of nothing more than a little yellow ball going back and forth, back and forth, like a swinging watch. It takes mental toughness to avoid succumbing to thoughts like this:

If I had carpal tunnel syndrome, would I know it?

Soper said while people agree the course needs time to mature, it has been getting great reviews, and great reviews lead to repeat business, Soper said.

"We had a real good turnout and have already seen a lot of the same people come back to play it again," Soper said.

"It is important to develop a kind of loyalty," he said.

Len Wisniewski, assistant golf professional, said the course has proven to be a worthy challenge to any golfer.

"From the intermediate to the expert golfer, it is a very challenging course," Wisniewski said.

Only one person has been able to play a round under par at the 18-hole, 72 par course. Len Wisniewski shot a 1-under par 71 which currently stands as all three records.

"That was set during the second round of a chamber of commerce tournament with 16 other pros playing," Wisniewski said. "So it has been played by pros."

Wisniewski said the best thing about the course is the unusual layout.

"The design is great in that the course was designed to go with the flow of hills and valleys," he said.

Wisniewski said he thought turnout could have been better, but said they are picking up.

"I think the heat and the fact that people are spending time with their families this weekend made for a lighter turnout than I expected," Wisniewski said. "But we're packed right now."

This victory, Sampras said, felt like a validation.

"I know there's been a lot of controversy over the computer rankings," he said, referring to Courier's appearance in all three Grand Slam finals this year, including a win at the Australian Open.

"But this is the biggest tournament that we have and no one can take this away from me."

Sampras said he is proud of his young age and ability.

It's important to remember that he also won, besides Wimbledon, he won the U.S. Open.

"I've won the U.S. Open and I've won Wimbledon now in my career. There aren't too many guys that have done that. And I've done it at a young age."

Of everything that Sunday's victory signified, Sampras's age might indeed be the most riveting aspect.

At 21, he's the youngest player among Courier, Andre Agassi, and Michael Chang — America's pack of major champions.

While Courier is vaunted for his hissing groundstrokes, Agassi for his return of service and Chang for his tenacity, Sampras is a blend of all three traits.

But he also volleys better than the others and covers the court from corner to corner like a gazelle. He's capable of playing serve-and-volley tennis as well as doing a passable imitation of a baseliner. That makes him a threat to win on any surface, save perhaps slow clay.

Sometimes, one solitary facet of Sampras's game overrides even all of that: In the men's version of tennis — where games often are reduced to nothing but one man's serve against another man's ability to knock it back over the net — Sampras is blessed with one of the most formidable serves in the game.

Sunday he had a whopping 22-9 edge in aces, and that was the only statistic that really mattered.

After serving Becker off the court in the semifinals, Becker had said jokingly: "Sometimes I thought he didn't know the difference between the first and second serve because he was really hitting them (both) hard."

As tense as it was, Sampras hardly went berserk when it was over.

He didn't fall to his knees or scream or tear around court like a jackrabbit.

He simply lifted his fists in the air and took a few long strides, smiling broadly.

Then he spun around once, as if to soak in the Centre Court scene.

And that was it.

When asked to remember what he felt in those first few moments of victory, Sampras laughed and said, "I don't know — it was really like a blur."

"You can't really describe it, it's just something you have to go through. It all happens so fast and the next thing you know, you've won Wimbledon."
