University cracks down on drug use

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

In order to keep a steady stream of state funding, the University is enforcing strict guidelines keeping drugs out of the workplace.

According to Richard Higgerson, employee of the University legal counsel, federal grants and contracts nearing $15 million come in to the University each year.

The University must follow the guidelines named in the Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1988 to keep state funding alive, Higgerson said.

The Act maintains that every University employee or student not manufacture, distribute, consume or possess drugs anywhere University duties are being performed.

If any employee is in violation of this act, disciplinary action will follow, according to the guidelines.

Penalties for drug abusing employees may include participation in a rehabilitation program or termination of employees.

The University has always had strict drug policies, but it has never been put together in one package like the Drug-Free Workplace Guidelines, Jack Dyer, director of University Relations, said.

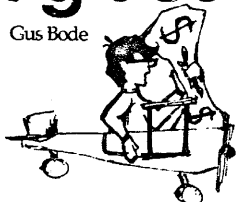

In light of this act, the personnel office will administer a drug free awareness program to University employees, according to the guidelines.

According to Angie Bruns, personnel officer, the program will tentatively begin around the first of July.

Drug specialists will be brought in to discuss the dangers of drugs in the workplace, Bruns said.

Bridge repairs ending

By Richard Goldstein
Staff Writer

Driving on Route 13 between Carbondale and Carterville has been an adventure since bridge construction began there March 1.

But the final stage of the $31,361 construction project that has given motorists a winding ride, taking west-bound traffic into the east bound lane, has reached its final stage with yesterday's pouring of concrete on the easternmost bridge.

Bob Zieba, Illinois Department of Transportation construction engineer, said the construction work on the two bridges, which span Crab Orchard Lake three miles east of Carbondale, should be finished by Aug. 1, but the construction firm of J.A.T. Simonds is ahead of schedule.

Zieba said the 1939 bridges had to be replaced because the steel beams were rusting and salt poured during the winter by road crews was contributing to the bridges' deterioration.

The new bridges also will be wider by about eight feet to better accommodate the estimated 20,000 vehicles which pass over them every day, Zieba said.

Zieba said the rain that has plagued the area over the last week and a-half has hampered construction, but there have been few problems otherwise.

Since the end of the University's spring semester, he said, traffic has decreased substantially.

House favors veto of minimum wage

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House failed Wednesday to override President Bush's veto of a $4.55-an-hour minimum wage plan and Democrats began working toward a compromise to boost the base pay rate that has not changed since 1981.

The vote of 247-178 was short of the two-thirds tally needed to overturn Bush's rejection of the legislation. No vote in the Senate was necessary once the House failed to reverse Bush.

House Speaker Thomas Foley of Washington, acknowledging in advance that chances of beating the veto were slim, said, "We'll be getting ready to send another bill to the White House."

It was the first veto confrontation of the Bush presidency and was not unexpected. From the outset, Bush said he would veto anything that differed from his initial plan for an increase from the current $3.35 an hour to $4.25, coupled with a six-month subminimum "training wage" for newly hired workers, regardless of previous work experience.

The bill adopted by the Democratic-led Congress called for an increase to $4.55 by 1991 and a 60-day "training wage" for those getting their first job.

The minimum wage was last raised in 1981, when it went up 25 cents from $3.10.

Among the possible avenues for compromise under discussion were making Bush's figure of $4.25 effective in two years rather than three, with a 60-day training wage for first-time workers, or adjusting the earned income tax credit to benefit low-income heads of households.

House Labor Committee Chairman Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., said Bush's proposal was "a Chicken Little approach to a very serious problem." Since 1981, Hawkins said, the purchasing power of the minimum wage "has fallen to a $2.50-an-hour value. Can anyone in good conscience vote to continue such unfairness and injustice?"

Rep. Steve Gunderson, R-Wis., a promoter of expanding the earned income tax credit, said 65 percent of those earning minimum wage are single, work part time and go to school.

Chinese officials expel two American journalists

BEIJING (UPI) — China accused the United States of violating Chinese sovereignty by harboring a leading dissident and expelled two American journalists Wednesday in the harshest moves of an intensifying diplomatic row with Washington.

The United States said it will formally protest the expulsions, but the State Department said there were no immediate plans to take similar action against Chinese reporters.

Amid a stiffening crackdown on democracy movement activists and foreign reporting of the recent turmoil in China, state-run television said a nationwide hunt netted at least 63 new fugitives.

The arrests boosted to more than 900 the number of people swept up since the Chinese army massacre of peaceful demonstrators in Beijing 10 days ago.

The television said the detainees included two men whose names were included in a most-wanted list of 21 student leaders of the democracy demonstrations, the largest outpouring of anti-government sentiment in nearly 40 years of communist rule. One of the pair was reportedly turned in by his sister.

The arrests of Zhou Fengsu, 22, a Qinghua University physics major, and Xiong Yan, 25, a Beijing University law student, were made within hours of the Tuesday night broadcast of the list, the television said Wednesday.

The government had claimed 300 people, including 100 soldiers, died in the Chinese army's bloody crackdown June 3-5 on the protesters but on Wednesday, the official death toll was reduced to about 200. A Japanese official said a Chinese Red Cross source put the death toll at 2,600.

In a new move to unearth fugitive dissidents, the Health official says landfill contaminates water

By Richard Goldstein
Staff Writer

An Allen, Waste Management landfill site in Jackson County is contaminating ground water and has "fairly serious" environmental violations, according to a Jackson County Health Department official.

Jim Bloom, director of environmental health, said after a county board meeting Wednesday that the landfill had five or six violations including contaminating "bodies of waters and lakes back there."

The landfill is located about six miles northwest of De Soto. Bloom's statements came after the board passed a 30-cent fee for each cubic yard of waste collected by landfill operators.

Everett Allen, owner of the landfill site, was out of town and could not be reached for comment.

Bloom would not elaborate on what he called "citable" violations because he and the state's attorney had not decided how to address the problems at the landfill. Bloom said more information would be released next week.

The fee is expected to raise more than $100,000 a year to pay for the Jackson County health inspections as well as reserve funds for any waste cleanup that might be necessary in the future. Bloom said his department will make surprise inspections of the waste site several times a month and enforce health standards in accordance with EPA regulations.

Board members speculated that the fee could be an excuse for Allen to raise disposal rates that could in turn be passed on to consumers through waste pickup, but according to Bloom and State's Attorney

Underground group plans release of Belgian hostage

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — An underground group said Wednesday it will release a Belgian doctor, kidnapped in southern Lebanon 13 months ago, as a goodwill gesture after a request by Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi. The announcement was made in a statement signed by the Soldiers of Truth Organization and delivered to the west Beirut offices of an international news agency.

Syria warns Lebanon against use of missiles

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Syrian President Hafez Assad warned Wednesday his troops may strike into Christian-held territories in Lebanon if Lebanese Christians threaten his country with Iraqi-supplied missiles. The published warning was Syria's strongest since Iraq began supporting Christian army commander Michel Aoun, who has vowed to oust Syria's 35,000 troops from Lebanon.

U.S.: High-level shakeup suspected in Cuba

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The dismissal of two top officials in Cuba and a mysterious refusal to allow a U.S. plane to land suggests a shakeup may be under way in Fidel Castro's communist government, officials said Wednesday. U.S. officials who have been monitoring events in the island nation, and spoke on the basis of no further identification, said Transportation Minister Diocles Torralba Gonzalez was dismissed Wednesday for "improper conduct."

House opens debate on savings and loan bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House began debate Wednesday on a plan backed by President Bush and costing taxpayers more than $150 billion to salvage savings and loan associations killed or crippled by fraud and mismanagement. The plan, based on an administration proposal that was amended by several House committees, is the largest federal bailout in history.

Judge rejects North demands for a new trial

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The judge in Oliver North's Iran-Contra case rejected the ex-White House aide's bid Wednesday for a new trial or acquittal of his conviction on felony charges arising from the foreign policy scandal. Nine days before North is to be sentenced, U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell refused "each and every" plea the retired Marine lieutenant colonel made for a new trial or acquittal.

Schoolboy urges revision of the Pledge of Allegiance

CHICAGO (UPI) — Ricky Sherman, 7, believes God is "make-believe" and Wednesday urged the schoolchildren of the United States to boycott the Pledge of Allegiance until reference to the deity is removed from it. "I want all the kids in the schools of the United States of America to stop saying the Pledge of Allegiance until they take 'under God' out of the Pledge of Allegiance," Ricky said.

Two masters of fine arts thesis exhibits opened Tuesday at the University Museum.

A collection of "Spirit Houses," which are created from a combination of different architectural styles, is the work of artist Robert "Brad" Martin.

The structures reflect Martin's interest in fibers, architecture, sculpture and the philosophy of tribal cultures.

Visually impaired get a helping hand

By Irene Opiop
Staff Writer

Anyone who has taken biology, chemistry or other required science courses knows the difficulty, not to mention aggravation, involved in memorization of terms that will probably never come up later in life, a Benton High School teacher said.

For visually impaired students, the process is even more difficult, if not impossible. Even the simple task of reading a graduated cylinder becomes painstakingly difficult, according to Susan Woodfin, a science instructor at the high school.

But thanks to Woodfin, who is also a University graduate student in educational administration and higher education, students who are blind or visually impaired can participate in the lab and enjoy the benefits of a full academic education.

Woodfin was chosen as one of three in Illinois to participate in the 1989-90 Christa McAuliffe Fellowship Program for her work with visually impaired students.

The fellowship, which is named after the teacher who died in the 1986 Challenger Disaster, enables teachers to continue their education, develop innovative new programs and engage in a variety of educational opportunities, according to a news release from the office of Jim Rea.

Woodfin is developing a packet that will provide teachers with instructions on how to modify their classrooms and accommodate visually impaired students.

This past year Woodfin taught two students who were visually impaired and one student who was totally blind. "I didn't know where to turn," Woodfin said. "Teachers are not trained to deal with these students."

Molding a ball of clay was one way in which she illustrated class material to visually impaired students.

"For seeing students, things such as the construction of the flower are as simple as they appear in a picture, but for the visually impaired, grasping spatial construction can be a monumental task," Woodfin said.

A majority of the ideas contained in the packet were developed from creativity in the classroom, she said.

Students helped develop some of the procedures like the one used to measure liquid in a graduated cylinder. The student waved a piece of paper back and forth until it reached the liquid. Next, the student poked a hole in the top of the paper and measured the paper in a shoe box marked in Braille.

Braille, a system of printing for the blind, is comprised of raised dots which are felt with the fingers.

Woodfin also wants to make a video tape to include in the packet that will be disseminated through special education departments to teachers who need help.

Document approval slows search for dean of SIU-C's School of Law

By Jackie Lay
Staff Writer

Although a year has passed since the dean of SIU-C's School of Law resigned, a nationwide search has not been officially started because some basic documents must be cleared first, according to Patrick Kelley, law professor and chairman of the dean search committee.

"Once the planning document has been approved by the faculty, we will send it to the central administration for information and approval," he said.

A planning document sets the priorities for the law school for the next few years, Kelley said.

The position description has not yet been disclosed because it is being revised, he said.

"I think the school is looking for an excellent and outstanding dean, and we expect to get one," he said.

Kelley said the search should be completed by January or February of next year.

According to Kelley, Bernard Strickland, who had been at the University for about 3 years, left the law school as dean about a year ago.

Strickland is now a professor of law at the University of Wisconsin.

Peter Goplerud, a law professor, is currently the interim dean. He has been at the law school since 1981.

The law school was founded by Hiram Lesar in 1973.

Presently, there are about 300 students enrolled.

Democracy taught by Chinese students

IT ALMOST goes without saying we are in opposition to the methods the Chinese government used to suppress the non-violent protests of students voicing their views on political reform and freedom in their country.

We are in support of students, both in China and other foreign countries, who are struggling to bring about democratic reforms.

Chinese students throughout the United States have been showing support for their fellow students in China by conducting fund-raisers and distributing information asking for aid for the families of those killed in the massacre and for those who were injured in China.

THEIR EFFORTS may seem insignificant compared to the efforts of students in China.

The Chinese students here in the United States may be comparably small in number but they are teaching us all an important lesson in the fight for freedom.

Students protesting here have an advantage over those in China: We don't shoot peaceful demonstrators in this country.

STUDENTS HERE are able to gather and to say what they please, without fear of tanks and rifle fire.

The estimated 115 Chinese students at the University have gathered and appealed to local politicians for U.S. government actions against the government in China as well as establishing funds for those in China.

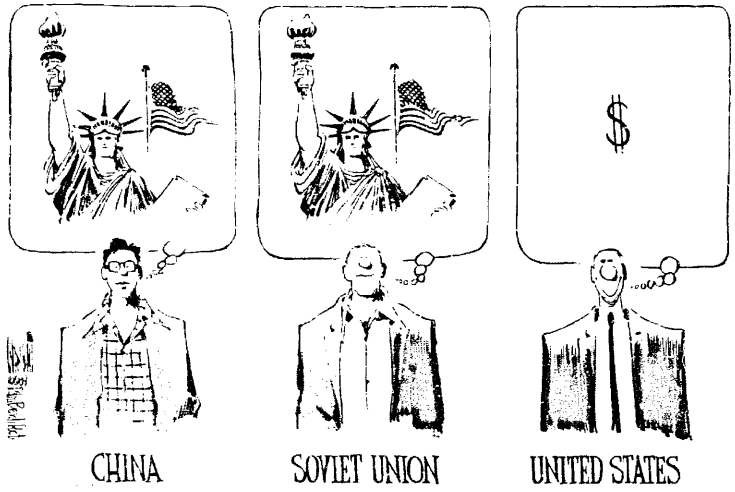

But they have done more than that. They have brought before our eyes the spirit that has formed countries such as ours. They have illustrated what it means to be part of a democratic society with the rights to express opinions and conduct a free press.

Stepping back and looking at the big picture, we can see that Americans have been in a situation similar to that of the Chinese students. Unfortunately though, most of us have forgotten the battles waged in the past.

SOME CHINESE students being educated in the West will ultimately return to their homeland and live under Communist leaders. But they will take with them new hopes and ideologies.

Whether or not the Chinese government will be able to suppress the demonstrations of the students and people of China is not clear.

But once bitten by the democratic bug, the wound is hard to heal.

Designer labels worth the investigation

I'm not fashion-conscious, but while sitting around a backyard party, I couldn't help notice the young man's fashionably rumpled and baggy black trousers.

It wasn't that they were shaped like the trousers that we called zoot suits during my youth — wide in the knees and narrow at the ankle.

In those days, zoot suits were worn by street toughs and sissies who wanted to be mistaken for street toughs. Now they're popular among yuppies. I guess this is known as cultural evolution.

But what caught my eye was something on the front of the trousers.

At first, I thought he had dribbled some food on himself. Then I realized it was some sort of white label, about an inch long and half an inch wide.

So I said: "Excuse me, but you seem to have some sort of label there on the front of your trousers."

"Yes," he said, "it's the designer label."

"But it is on the fly of your pants. On the crotch. Why do you have the name of the designer on your crotch?"

"With the clear logic I admire in yuppie creatures, he said: "Because that's where the designer put it."

Of course, how stupid of me.

However, my curiosity had not been satisfied. I said: "What is the name of the designer?"

He said: "Why don't you take a look?"

I prefer not to study anyone's fly at close range. Republican National Chairman Lee Atwater might spread rumors. But the young man's wife was standing nearby, and she did the honors.

"It says: 'Girbaud,'" she told me. That figured — a Frenchman. You won't find anybody named O'Malley or

Mike Royko
Tribune Media Services

Szamanski sticking their names on somebody's fly.

I'm familiar with the practice of clothing makers putting their names on garments, although it is usually on the hind end. I refuse to buy such products. My position is that if Calvin Klein or Mr. Levi or the others want to use my bottom for advertising purposes they should pay me just as they'd pay for a billboard.

But this was the first time I had seen a designer's name on someone's crotch.

To determine why they do this, I contacted the New York office of this Girbaud outfit.

A spokeswoman named Joni Fiori said the designer-crotch pants have become quite popular among people ranging from their teens to their 50s, but they've hit it biggest among people in their 30s.

Joni did concede that the crotch is an unusual location for a designer label.

In fact, she said, "I'm like fixated. I find myself staring at people's crotches."

An interesting fixation. I'm sure some people think it strange. On the other hand, this fixation might also help her make the acquaintance of many lonely young men.

"Hi, miss, I notice that you're staring at my crotch. Would you care to come home for dinner and meet my wom?"

As a loyal employee, Ms. Fiori wears the company's product, and she says: "People do look at you kind of askew, and I have to explain to them that I work for the company that puts the label on the fly."

This confused her mother. "I remember the first time I wore them, my mother said they made a mistake and I should take them back."

But the question remains: What is the logic of putting the name of the product on the crotch?

The answer was provided by Girbaud publicist Richard King.

"It's just a little difference, and that subtly can make all the difference in the world. Like a tie, as the fashion changes, so does its length."

True, but I have yet to see anyone dangling a tie from his fly.

King said Francois (Girbaud's first name; why aren't any designers named Wally?) put the label in front to be different. But he conceded that it could be suggestive.

"Francois said he has a particular preference for something unique, but there may be something subliminal about putting a label right over the crotch. Maybe it's like an open invitation."

An open invitation? A rather bold fashion statement, I'd say. But what does the guy do who doesn't have a Girbaud crotch label? I suppose he could just drop his trousers, although that would be less than tres chic.

However, this fashion trend has given me an idea. I might take a few pair of trousers to a tailor and have little labels sewn on the fly.

Then when someone stares, they will read:

"This is my fly. Don't you feel silly looking?"

Israeli warplanes launch raid on Syrian bases near Beirut

BCHAMOUN, Lebanon (UPI) — Israeli warplanes defying anti-aircraft fire raided Palestinian bases near Syrian army positions outside Beirut Wednesday, killing at least three guerrillas and wounding 10 others, witnesses and military sources said.

Four aircraft fired 10 air-to-ground rockets at the hilltop bases on the outskirts of the village of Bchamoun, sending black smoke into the skies. The sound of the exploding rockets thundered across the countryside as heard in Beirut.

Bchamoun, 7 miles southeast of Beirut, is under the control of the pro-Syrian Progressive Socialist Party militia. Syrian troops and Palestinian guerrillas maintain positions and bases in the area surrounding the village.

Lebanese military sources said three Palestinian guerrillas were killed and 10 others wounded in the attack.

Witnesses said Palestinian anti-aircraft batteries opened fire as the warplanes appeared over the targeted area.

The Syrians, deployed 500 yards from the Palestinian bases, did not fire at the attacking Israeli aircraft, they said.

Lebanese military sources said three Palestinian guerrillas were killed and 10 others wounded in the attack.

An Israeli military statement described the targets as "terrorist bases" and said "all our planes returned safely and the targets were destroyed."

The statement said "the objects attacked are situated south of Beirut and were used as training bases for the terrorist organization."

It did not identify the organization, but Israeli military sources said the targeted bases belonged to the Damascus-based Palestinian Liberation Front, whose members participated in an infiltration attempt against Israel May 28.

Wednesday's air raid was the sixth by Israel on Lebanon this year. At least 24 people were killed and 67 others wounded in the previous attacks.

The last time Israeli jets ventured so close to Beirut was Feb. 28, when bases of the Damascus-based Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine were struck, also killing three people.

Angered by the attack, a guerrilla near Bchamoun fired over the heads of reporters who tried to approach one of the hilltop buildings — used as a base — that was hit and destroyed by the attacking Israeli planes. No one was hurt.

Angered by the attack, a guerrilla near Bchamoun fired over the heads of reporters who tried to approach one of the hilltop buildings hit and destroyed by the attacking planes.

"The building up there was flattened with direct hits," said a young Lebanese Druze militiaman near the scene, who asked to remain anonymous. "The guerrillas are pulling their wounded comrades from under the rubble."

While reporters were touring the area, a jeep carrying a badly wounded Palestinian guerrilla raced down the hill and headed to a hospital in the coastal town of Sidon. The young fighter, whose military fatigues were stained with blood, appeared to be unconscious.

television issued a wanted notice for three leaders of an outlawed independent workers union, flashing their mug shots and short biographies across China and ordering border police to ensure they do not flee the country.

Despite the error generated in Beijing by the sweep and the grip of military rule, tiny sprouts of defiance blossomed.

Black graffiti inscriptions on an overpass road read: "Someone should take the lead and speak openly with the (Communist) party" and "What can we do? The government is unreasonable."

Near central Tiananmen Square, a slogan written in English on the back of a traffic police box said, "All these things must be answered for." The harboring by the U.S. Embassy of China's leading dissident, astrophysicist Fang Lizhi, and his wife, Li Shuxian, brought the toughest anti-American blast from China.

"The American Embassy's offer of protection to Fang and Li is an invasion of Chinese sovereignty," said the People's Daily, official organ of the Communist Party. "It is a violation of international law."

The United States has refused to surrender Fang and Li, who are wanted on charges of "counter-revolutionary" crimes, which are tantamount to treason and punishable by death.

The U.S. decision to harbor the pair fueled a diplomatic row with China first fired by President Bush's suspension of military sales contracts to protest the bloody suppression of the student-led democracy movement.

Fang and his wife sought refuge in the U.S. Embassy after the government blamed them for an uprising by tens of thousands of Beijing residents against armor-backed troops who ruthlessly enforced martial law and ended a peaceful 22-day occupation of Tiananmen Square by pro-democracy protesters.

The dispute with the United States was further heightened Wednesday when authorities summoned the Beijing bureau chief of the Voice of America and a Beijing-based correspondent for The Associated Press and ordered them to leave China within 72 hours.

VOA's Alan W. Pessin, 33, and the AP's John Pomfret, 30, were accused of violating rigid restrictions imposed on news coverage of pro-democracy demonstrations when martial law was declared May 20.

Pomfret, of Brooklyn, N.Y., was accused of "having frequent contacts with illegal organization leaders, passing on information to and providing shelter for them" and "obtaining state secrets through illegal means," said the official Xinhua News Agency.

The Washington-based association, The Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, also protested the expulsions in a telegram to the Beijing Foreign Affairs Office, saying the order "is an attempt to censor, intimidate and harass foreign news media, violating the rights of your citizens and those of all democratic nationals to monitor critical events in your country."

The program will also deal with rehabilitation, the availability of drug counseling and the penalties University employees could face for violations of the law, Bruns said.

Students may suffer financially if caught using illegal drugs on campus, according to the guidelines.

Students are required to sign a statement certifying that they are not using drugs before they are eligible to receive the Pell Grant.

The guidelines also said that students may be dropped from the Pell Grant if they are convicted of a drug offense while receiving the grant.

The Wellness Center administers a drug prevention program for students wanting to learn more about drugs, Sheryl Presley, program coordinator, said.

Drug abuse is a growing problem on college campuses across the nation and knowledge about the harmful effects of drugs is sometimes the best prevention there is, Presley said.

The program is open to all students and it may become available to employees as well in the near future, Presley said.

Charles Grace, added costs to Allen would be "negligible."

This is not the first scrape Allen has had with sanctions. In March 1982 he was fined $3,000 by the Illinois Pollution Control Board for violations dating back to 1980. The most critical of these was for failing to cover four acres of exposed garbage with the required six inches of soil.

Study shows AIDS spending totals $5.5 billion since 1982

Some observers contend amounts have fallen short

BOSTON (UPI) — Federal spending on AIDS has totaled $5.5 billion since 1982, researchers said Wednesday in a study termed the first overall accounting of federal efforts to combat the deadly disease.

Federal AIDS expenditures will be about $2.2 billion for 1989, tripling state expenditures on the disease, and are expected to reach $4.3 billion in 1992, the researchers said.

"Although sizable, this will be just 1.8 percent of all 1992 health dollars," said the researchers, whose study appears in The New England Journal of Medicine.

The figures reported are for federal fiscal years, Oct. 1 to Sept. 30. The total spending figure of $5.5 billion includes the $2.2 billion expected to be spent in the current fiscal year.

"Some observers contend that the amounts have been inadequate, but until now there has been no overall accounting of federal activities and spending to combat the epidemic," the study said.

An accompanying editorial in the medical journal says the "well-balanced" study, which draws no conclusions on the adequacy of federal AIDS funding, will be "gobbled up avidly and used vigorously" by both sides in the debate.

The number of reported cases of AIDS exceeds 90,000 and is projected by federal officials to reach 365,000 by the end of 1992. Between 1 million and 1.5 million Americans are believed infected with the AIDS virus.

The number of reported cases of AIDS exceeds 90,000.

The Department of Health and Human Services has provided $4.3 billion or nearly 90 percent of all AIDS funding since 1982, including $3.2 billion spent by agencies of the Public Health Service and $938 million by the Centers for Disease Control, the study said.

Federal spending on AIDS research has totaled $2.2 billion, double the $1.1 billion spent on education and prevention. The report says the discrepancy is "notable" because AIDS infection "is almost entirely preventable" through behavioral changes.

Federal spending on medical care totaled $1.9 billion, including $1.3 billion in federal Medicaid costs.

The researchers compare projected 1989 federal spending of $1.3 billion on AIDS research and prevention to the $1.5 billion in similar spending on cancer.

"But cancer is expected to cause nearly 500,000 deaths in 1989, whereas fewer than 35,000 deaths from AIDS are expected," the study says. "Similarly, 770,000 people are projected to die from heart disease in 1989, but federal spending in 1989 to combat heart disease ($1 billion) is less than that to combat AIDS."

Comparisons with other diseases, however, "may not be entirely fair since (AIDS) is an infectious disease that continues to spread," the researchers said. "Furthermore, spending money on AIDS research will bring benefits for the understanding of other diseases, particularly cancer."

The report was written by an official in the HHS Office of Planning and Evaluation, a former federal AIDS official and a health policy fellow at the Wharton School at the University of Pennsylvania.

Outspoken campaign used to combat AIDS

NEW YORK (UPI) — City Health Commissioner Stephen Joseph unveiled Wednesday a candid anti-AIDS ad campaign urging men having sex with other men to "Rubber Up For Safety" to reduce their chances of contracting the deadly disease.

"We know full well that the campaign, which is entitled 'Rubber Up For Safety,' will be viewed as controversial and that it will engender powerful responses," Joseph said of the graphic television, radio and print ads and subway posters. "But we would rather risk public objection than lives."

The posters, which began appearing in subway cars and on train platforms Wednesday, include one that in large block letters advocates a "Man on Man Defense" in which the letter

"o" is represented by a picture of a latex condom.

The campaign is designed to reach not only men who identify themselves as homosexual, "but all men who have sex with men, however occasionally, infrequently or secretly, whether they self-identify as gay or not," Joseph said.

The HIV-virus, which causes AIDS, is transmitted primarily through sexual contact or the sharing of needles by intravenous drug users.

In three 30-second TV spots, which feature actors of varied racial backgrounds speaking in English and Spanish, a man describes a romantic candlelit dinner.

"Later, we had coffee by the fire and talked long into the night," says the actor, looking into the camera. "Finally we kissed."

AIDS virus at 'alarming' rate among peacetime soldiers

BOSTON (UPI) — New infections with the AIDS virus are occurring at an "alarming" rate of 600 per year in the Army, likely making the disease the No. 1 killer of peacetime U.S. soldiers, researchers said Wednesday.

The incidence of new AIDS virus infection in black and Hispanic soldiers was 2.33 times higher than the incidence in white soldiers, they said.

"New infections are continuing to occur at an alarming rate," said Dr. John G. McNeil of the Walter Reed Army Institute of Research in Washington.

"I found it alarming that the epidemic is as focused as it is in minorities in the Army," McNeil said. "The Army tends to be somewhat homogenized, so to speak, in that socioeconomic differences are minimized."

Aldermen trying to put limitations on 'happy hour'

CHICAGO (UPI) — Two Chicago aldermen are trying to put a cork in "happy hour" tavern promotions.

Aldermen Edward M. Burke and Patrick J. O'Connor introduced an ordinance Wednesday that would severely limit such deals as two-for-one drinks, jumbo sized drinks or discounted drinks during specific time periods.

The proposal, similar to one under consideration in the state legislature, would require bars to post their regular drink prices and stick to them. It also would outlaw drinking games and games which offer drinks as prizes.

The sponsors said the goal is to remove incentives to intoxication, primarily during after-work "happy hour."

Some tavern owners, however, said the proposal would threaten their business. "It would hurt a real lot," said Jim Dziubla, owner of Govnor's Pub on Chicago's State Street Mall. He estimated 20 percent of his revenue comes from "happy hour" promotions.

The proposal was referred to the City Council License Committee.

NASA announces new space shuttle schedule

Revisions reduce one mission from 1989 flight schedule

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — NASA unveiled a revised shuttle launch schedule Wednesday, formally pushing the launch of the Hubble Space Telescope into 1990 and cutting the 1989 flight schedule by one mission.

As expected, the new shuttle schedule lists six flights in 1989, nine flights in 1990, eight in 1991, 12 in 1992, including the first flight of the new shuttle Endeavour, and 14 in 1993.

The manifest, which covers 72 missions through the fall of 1995, also lists the first three space station construction flights starting March 2, 1995.

Of the 72 flights listed, only six are classified military missions, reflecting the Pentagon's post-Challenger push to end its reliance on the shuttle in favor of unmanned, throw-away rockets.

As if to drive home the point, the first of at least 23 powerful Titan 4 rockets, capable of carrying shuttle-class payloads, was successfully launched Wednesday from the Cape Canaveral Air Force Station adjacent to the Kennedy Space Center.

The Titan 4 is the centerpiece of an unprecedented $14 billion military space buildup, one designed to guarantee access to space for high-priority national security payloads.

Before the Challenger disaster, one third of all shuttle flights were expected to be booked by the Pentagon. In the new manifest, the figure is less than 10 percent.

But of the remaining DOD flights, four are scheduled before the end of next year. Here is the revised launch schedule through the end of 1990:

—July 31: Columbia blasts off on a classified military mission; this is the veteran spaceplane's first flight since Jan. 12, 1986.

—Oct. 12: Atlantis takes off to deploy the $1.4 billion nuclear-powered Galileo Jupiter probe.

—Nov. 19: Discovery returns to space for another classified military mission.

—Dec. 18: The crew of Columbia deploys a military communications satellite and retrieves a science satellite dropped off in orbit in 1984 to expose a variety of materials to the harsh space environment.

—Feb. 1, 1990: Atlantis takes off on another military mission.

—March 26: Discovery carries the $1.4 billion Hubble Space Telescope into orbit. The telescope, the most advanced optical instrument ever to be deployed in orbit, is expected to revolutionize optical astronomy.

—April 26: Columbia returns to space for a Spacelab "Astro" astronomy mission, the first such science flight of the post-Challenger era.

—June 4: The crew of Atlantis deploys NASA's Gamma Ray Observatory, a giant satellite that will complement the Hubble Space Telescope by studying high-energy radiation from deep space.

—July 9: Discovery blasts off on another military mission.

—Aug. 16: Columbia carries a Spacelab module into space for a series of life sciences experiments.

—Oct. 5: The crew of Atlantis launches the Ulysses sun-study probe, a joint NASA-European Space Agency robot craft built to fly over the poles of the sun.

—Nov. 1: Discovery carries an unclassified package of military sensors and other equipment into space.

—Dec. 6: Columbia carries a Spacelab module into space for a series of experiments.

Compared to the most recent previous manifest, only three upcoming flights stayed on schedule: Atlantis's October mission to launch Galileo, its February DOD flight and its 1990 flight to launch Ulysses. One flight, the December 1990 Spacelab mission, moved up two months.

The new shuttle Endeavour is scheduled to blast off on a 10-day maiden flight Feb. 6, 1992, and the first space station construction mission is on tap for March 2, 1995. NASA hopes to build the permanently manned orbital outpost by the end of the century.

Six of the 72 flights listed have no payloads. NASA said in a statement that such "flight opportunities" were added to the manifest to provide launch slots for payloads that might be delayed. In this fashion, the agency said, major revisions to the flight schedule can be avoided.

Navy submarine sinks boat; crewman reported missing

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A nuclear-powered Navy submarine Wednesday struck an underwater cable being used by a tugboat towing a barge, sinking the tug and leaving one of its crewmen missing, authorities said.

The Coast Guard and Navy launched an air and sea search for the crewman 10 miles southwest of Los Angeles Harbor, Coast Guard Petty Officer Elizabeth Neely said.

Two other crew members aboard the tug, the Barcona, were rescued, Neely said.

The San Diego-based USS Houston, with approximately 140 crew members and officers aboard, struck the submerged cable at 4:43 a.m., Navy Petty Officer Steven Thompson said.

None of the sub's crew was hurt and there was "no apparent damage" to the Los Angeles-class nuclear-powered attack submarine, he said.

The Navy notified the Coast Guard at 5:52 a.m. that its submarine had struck the cable, Neely said.

About five minutes later, the Coast Guard received a call from the crew of a second tugboat, the My Way, who reported that they had plucked two of the Barcona's crew from the water, she said.

The third crew member was reported missing and the Coast Guard dispatched two cutters, a patrol boat, a buoy tender and two helicopters for the search, Neely said.

The Navy assisted in the search with two vessels, including the Houston, which measures 360 feet long, 33 feet wide and displaces 6,900 tons, Thompson said.

The Barcona, owned by the Connolly Pacific Co. and based in Long Beach, was towing an unmanned barge laden with rocks to Santa Catalina Island at the time of the collision, he said.

EPA chief: Public must lower expectations for Superfund

WASHINGTON (UPI) — EPA Administrator William Reilly Wednesday acknowledged "frustrating" delays in the Superfund program, but said Americans must lower their expectations and recognize effective toxic waste cleanup will take decades to achieve.

In a report to Congress, Reilly also outlined a new strategy for the troubled program, including a crash effort to address immediate public health threats at the worst dumps, increased pressure on polluters to pay for cleanup and greater use of new cleanup methods that detoxify or immobilize wastes.

At a news conference, Reilly said that, with the nation facing a minimum $30 billion bill for toxic waste cleanup, the Environmental Protection Agency would begin taking much tougher legal action to force corporate polluters to clean up the messes they create.

He said it has become apparent that many polluters have refused to voluntarily shoulder their responsibilities because they don't think the EPA will ever get around to cracking down.

"What appears to be lacking (among polluters) is a sense that enforcement is certain, sure and onerous," Reilly told reporters. "As a result, (out-of-court) settlements have looked less attractive to them."

"The first prerequisite for a strong Superfund is a clenched fist," he declared.

Reilly also revealed he will shift $75 million in 1990 and 1991 agency funds to put an additional 500 legal and technical experts in EPA field offices to oversee the extra cleanups to be conducted by polluters. EPA officials said the $75 million would come out of accounts now used to hire private contractors to perform cleanups paid for with federal money.

In regard to public perceptions of Superfund, Reilly disputed suggestions his report was asking Americans to lower their expectations for the program.

Rather, he said the report called for Americans to "clarify" their expectations to recognize Superfund would be "longer-term program" than previously expected.

Reilly's report said the public had not to accept that the EPA will not be able to completely clean up some badly polluted sites for years to come, due to "incomplete knowledge, immature technology and relentless pressure on a limited pool of resources."

Reilly said that while only 26 of the nation's 1,200 most dangerous toxic waste dumps have been cleaned up by his agency since Superfund was created by Congress in 1980, the $8.5 billion effort could not be judged on that basis alone.

Rather, he said the EPA should be evaluated in terms of its success over the long haul in learning how to cope with the huge and unprecedented technical challenges posed by the "complex soups of pollutants" found at many of estimated 30,000 toxic waste dumps nationwide.

"If Superfund is perceived so far to have been a high-cost disappointment, it is largely because program performance has not met high and perhaps unrealistic expectations," said the report, which was written by EPA staff and endorsed by Reilly.

"Superfund is succeeding, however, in its no less vital obligation to make steady progress in defining the nature and scope of the task, and to discover, test, and carry out the most efficient methods of achieving lasting and satisfactory cleanups."

"After nine years of experience," the report added, "the most important lesson may be that the Superfund program faces a workload stretching well into the next century, and would do so even if everything had gone right from the start."

The report fulfilled a promise Reilly made to lawmakers at his confirmation hearings earlier this year that he would complete a comprehensive review of Superfund within three months of taking office.

Reilly's study follows a barrage of criticism from environmentalists and congressional experts over the last year that EPA is mishandling the program.

In his own personal preface to the report, Reilly said he believed the most important finding of the study was "the need to set fair and realistic expectations for a program of the relative novelty and scope of Superfund."

Winning design unveiled for memorial of 'Forgotten War'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush, saying it was time to remember veterans of "The Forgotten War," unveiled the winning design Wednesday for a Korean War Veterans Memorial.

In a sun-drenched Flag Day ceremony in the White House Rose Garden, Bush told scores of veterans that the $6 million memorial, expected to be built within two years, would be "a lasting tribute" to their fight for freedom.

Selected from 543 entries, the winning design was developed by four professors of architecture at Penn State University. It is highlighted by 38 statues depicting an infantry platoon moving down a path toward a U.S. flag.

For years there was talk in Washington of building a monument to veterans of the Korean War, an undeclared 38-month-old conflict that often has been referred to as "The Forgotten War."

The memorial drive gained momentum after Vietnam veterans built and dedicated their own memorial in 1983.

On Oct. 28, 1986, President Reagan signed a measure authorizing a monument and last fall Congress selected a site — on the city's mall, across the reflecting pool from the Vietnam Veterans Memorial.

Like the Vietnam Veterans Memorial, the Korean monument is to be built exclusively with private contributions. To date, about $3.2 million has been raised.

Bush, who served as a teenage bomber pilot during World War II, addressed the Korean War vets as "fellow veterans" and said that their monument will be "a symbol of liberty."

"There are, of course, many such symbols in this great capital of ours. Memorials which rightly hail veterans from Bunker Hill to Gettysburg to the rice paddies of Vietnam," Bush said.

"But until recently," Bush said, "the Korean War was not formally remembered. Nor were the over 5.7 million American servicemen and women who were directly and indirectly involved."

Senate passes gas deregulation bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate approved legislation Wednesday removing price and other controls on all natural gas still under federal regulations by Jan. 1, 1993, despite warnings that the cost to the consumers will increase.

The Senate passed the bill 82-17. The House previously approved a similar measure by voice vote and negotiators will have to work out a compromise.

About 40 percent of the current domestic production is under federal regulation, but the bill primarily affects the 6 percent of natural gas sold at less than market prices. All other natural was deregulated under terms of a 1978 bill.

The American Gas Association, which represents about 250 of the nation's natural gas distribution and transmission companies, hailed the Senate action, saying it "will permit the marketplace to stimulate exploration and orderly development of America's huge natural gas resource base."

The Senate approved the bill after rejecting an amendment by Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., which would have given the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission clear authority to require any interstate pipeline to transport natural gas. The vote was 55-44.

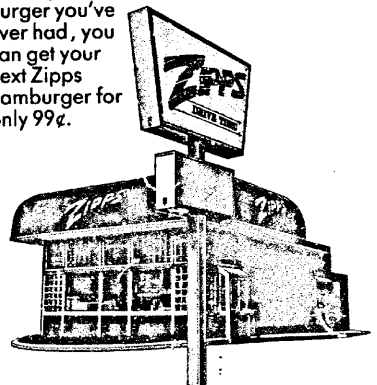

Earlier in the deliberations, the Senate killed a series of amendments by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, designed to guard consumers against price increases in natural gas.

Summing up, Metzenbaum conceded prices have not increased since the 1978 legislation but said that was due to a period of less costly oil, which now appears to be ending.

"Gas prices are going up," Metzenbaum predicted. "You are going to be able to look back and say I helped prices go up. There is no cushion, no protection, no solace for the consumers."

Chinese government reduces official death toll to about 200

BEIJING (UPI) — The Chinese government, which claimed 300 people died in the military assault on student-led democracy protesters in Beijing last week, Wednesday reduced the death toll to about 200 in its latest account of the bloodshed.

But a Japanese official, however, has said a Chinese Red Cross source put the number of civilian dead at 2,600.

The latest official version of events, distributed by the official Xinhua News Agency, said the violence was started by democracy movement activists who "ensnared hooligans, local ruffians and people with a deep-seated hatred of the Communist Party" in a plot "to arrest party and state leaders, and seize political power in a Bastille-style attack."

Officials initially claimed 300 people died in the bloody June 3-5 military movement that crushed the largest outpouring of anti-government sentiment in nearly 40 years of communist rule.

The official chronology said troops endured numerous beatings and attacks.

But in its most detailed version of the bloodshed to date, the government reduced the toll to 200 civilians and security personnel.

Contrary to the accounts of a multitude of Chinese witnesses and foreign correspondents, the official chronology said troops endured numerous beatings and attacks and only began using their weapons on the morning of June 4, hours after they first moved toward Tiananmen Square.

"Nearly 100 soldiers and policemen died and thousand-of soldiers and policemen were wounded. The Chinese people will always cherish the memory of their contribution to defending the republic, the constitution and the people," Xinhua quoted the government as saying.

In its report on civilian casualties, the government said, "The martial law troops were finally forced to fire on rioters. The result was that some 100 civilians were killed and nearly 1,000 were injured. The government and the martial law troops share the grief of the families of those killed and injured in this unavoidable tragedy."

Hospital officials, before they stopped giving casualty figures when troops took over their facilities, confirmed the deaths of at least 321 civilians and injuries were believed to be in the thousands.

North talk on China, drugs nets $25,000

SAN CARLOS, Calif. (UPI) — Former Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North told a Flag Day crowd Wednesday that the Chinese leaders who put down the student revolt were "butchers."

Some 2,000 people paid $17.50 apiece to hear North deliver a speech and answer questions from the audience. Outside, some 75 people protested his appearance, but there was no trouble.

"The butchers in Beijing showed the world what happens when their world is threatened," he said. "The blood flowed in rivers. Our media masters say the government in Beijing has lost its moral authority."

"Dear friends, it never had moral authority."

In his 45-minute speech North also said the two most serious problems facing America were drugs and the "alien, goddess philosophy of communism." He said they threatened the future of the United States.

He said there were three solutions to the drug problem. They were, he said, prevention, better law enforcement and rehabilitation and the halt of the flow of narcotics entering America.

On Russian leader Mikhail Gorbachev, the former White House aide said, "I would like to see more action and hear fewer words."

North, to be sentenced June 23 on his May 4 felony conviction on three charges arising from the Iran-Contra scandal, was reportedly paid $25,000 for his appearance at the Circle Star Theater.

The dingy in-the-round theater in an industrial area between San Francisco and San Jose is normally reserved for shows by pop crooners and stand-up comedians.

North, 45, was convicted by a jury in Washington of destroying government documents, aiding and abetting the drafting of a false chronology for the Iran-Contra affair and for accepting an illegal gift of a $13,800 home security system. North's lawyers have vowed to appeal the convictions.

Quayle ends four-day tour of Central American countries

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (UPI) — Vice President Dan Quayle ended a whirlwind tour Wednesday of U.S. allies in Central America during which he repeatedly accused Panama's Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega and Nicaragua of obstructing democracy in the region.

Before boarding the vice presidential jet at 1:00 p.m. EDT for Washington, Quayle repeated the familiar themes and also told reporters that the United States is concerned about the formation of a possible power axis between Cuba, Nicaragua and Panama.

Quayle said such an alliance will affect the development of democracy in Central America.

The vice president said his meetings with the presidents of Costa Rica, Guatemala, Honduras and El Salvador in their countries showed that there was consensus on complying with the Central American peace plan signed by the region's five presidents in 1987, also known as Esquipulas II.

Quayle said his tour reaffirmed the renewed U.S. commitment to Esquipulas II plan and Washington's policy of peace and democracy in the region.

Throughout his four-nation tour that began Sunday night, Quayle repeatedly assailed the governments of Nicaragua and Panama.

"We know that Nicaragua has not complied with the peace accord," which calls for democratization of the region and prohibits outside aid to rebels, he said.

Quayle again called the ouster of Noriega, Panama's de-facto ruler, and expressed hope that the Organization of American States would find a solution to a political crisis caused by the annulment of May 7 national elections which opposition claims to have won by a wide margin. A four-member OAS negotiating team is currently in Panama to seek a negotiated solution.

"U.S. position is very clear on Panama. Noriega must leave and respect the May elections... We hope that OAS commission succeeds," Quayle said.

He said there is consensus among the presidents of Guatemala, Honduras, El Salvador and Costa Rica that Noriega must respect popular will of the Panamanian people.

"We have found a consensus. It is important that the will of Panamanian people is respected and that Noriega's will does not prevail," Quayle said.

Quayle also praised El Salvador's newly-inaugurated President Alfredo Cristiani.

"I believe Cristiani is not only a man who is entirely dedicated to the cause of democracy, but is also very sensitive to the issue of human rights," Quayle said.

In El Salvador Tuesday, Quayle reaffirmed U.S. support for the government of Cristiani, who assumed office June 1, and condemned the recent slaying of a senior government official as an "attempt to assassinate democracy."

Quayle also pledged continued U.S. military and economic aid for El Salvador.

SIU student to work as missionary

By Christine Broda
Staff Writer

Scott D. Nelsen, who was selected as a recipient of a MAP — Reader's Digest International Fellowship, said he has always been interested in missionary work and views medicine as an opportunity to help people in underdeveloped areas.

Nelsen, a senior at the University's School of Medicine, said he will be fulfilling his lifetime goals by serving as a medical missionary in Haiti.

"There are a lot of distractions in the U.S. and it would be easy to lose contact with my ideals," Nelsen said, explaining his reasons for applying for the fellowship.

Nelsen is the first SIU student selected for the fellowship.

Nelsen said he looks forward to the opportunity to help some of the most poverty-stricken people in the world.

"I'll be working under two doctors at the Hospital of the Good Samaritan in Limbe. The clinic serves right around 40,000 people. I'm very excited that my wife and two sons will also be going," Nelsen said.

"Right now I'm working on developing some skills in the language, Creole. I've made flash cards, but I'll have to study intensely once I get there," Nelsen said.

Nelsen is the first SIU student selected for the fellowship and is one of 19 students named from medical students throughout the United States and Canada.

The students were chosen on the basis of academic excellence, ability to adapt to a new culture and an interest in health in developing countries.

Nelsen will graduate from the SIU School of Medicine in May 1990, when he will go on for advanced training in a specific specialty area of medicine before beginning practice.

Graduate students to exhibit artwork at University Museum

By Carrie Pomeroy
Staff Writer

"Art talks about possibilities...and creating options."

That's how Jan Litvene, graduate student in fine arts, describes her approach to art. Her statement could just as easily describe the attitude her fellow candidate, Susan Anderson, brings to her work.

Both artists' thesis exhibits will open June 16 at the Mitchell Gallery in the University Museum at Faner Hall.

SUSAN ANDERSON, who creates fiber sculpture from wood veneer, oriental paper, natural dyes, and bast fibers, will exhibit her work under the title "Rites of Passage."

The title "Rites of Passage" holds a great deal of meaning for Anderson. In one of her favorite books, J.E. Cirlot's "A Dictionary of Symbols," a rite is defined as a creative act, "a coming-to-be, causing an awareness in the participant..."

Anderson's research into numerology and astrology has helped shape her interest in time, space, structure and physical form. She frequently uses occult symbols such as spirals and scrolls.

Anderson not only uses the traditions and symbols of cultural rites in her art, but also sees her own art as a kind of modern rite.

"PASSAGE" IS a significant word as well. To Anderson, her graduate career has been a series of passages. She says that "passage" implies movement and travel and it is also a word for a section in a book. Motion and books are two of Anderson's most common subjects.

"The sheer beauty of the materials...(and) the way they reflect subtle colors is something I'll always admire," she said.

Anderson draws inspiration from an eclectic variety of sources. A big influence is the traditional craftmaking of New Guinea, Africa and Japan, which she admires for its ingenious designs, innovative use of materials, and general usefulness.

ANOTHER INFLUENCE is Anderson's study of the occult. Her research into numerology and astrology has helped shape her interest in time, space, structure and physical form. She frequently uses occult symbols such as spirals and scrolls in her work because of their innate beauty and rich history, she said.

In the future, Anderson plans to become more involved with traditional book-making. She hopes to incorporate concepts she has learned as a mixed-media artist into book-making, such as pop-up pages, innovative bindings and designs which "interact with people."

"I THINK people owe it to themselves to go into some craft...so they always have that foundation," she said.

Painter Jan Litvene is concerned not with tradition, but with confronting the viewer with themes of distance, intimacy, sexuality, and violence. Her primary subject is human interaction, both positive and negative.

Litvene, who received her Masters of Social Work from the University of Chicago in 1982, feels that social work and art are closely related.

"Both social work and art deal with the idea of creativity...empowerment...and positive change," she said.

HER SUBJECTS are sometimes disturbing, difficult to understand, and unusual. They range from a portrait of a bulimic to depictions of "figures encountering each other in unreal backgrounds."

She often tries to challenge conventional views of gender and relationships.

"I look carefully at ideas of gender...I try to look at the idea of figurative art," she explained.

According to Litvene, women are usually portrayed

Litvene's subjects are sometimes disturbing, difficult to understand and unusual. They range from a portrait of a bulimic to depictions of "figures encountering each other in unreal backgrounds."

as men see them. Her goal is to infuse her female figures with a feminine perspective, rather than the traditional masculine perspective, she said.

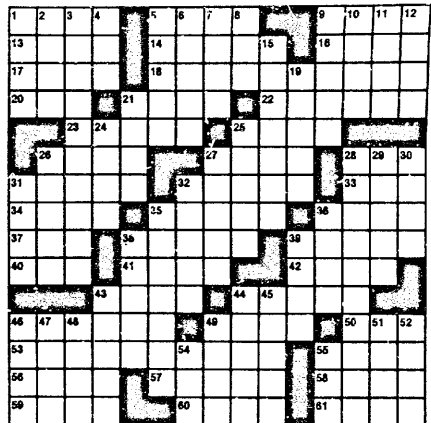

LITVENE, WHO has been painting since she was 14, has been influenced by concepts in art and social therapy. She named expressionism and environmental and performance art as important artistic inspirations, citing their use of motion and the human body.

After graduation, Litvene plans to continue working in art.

The Master of Fine Arts thesis exhibits for Litvene and Anderson will open June 16-20 at the University Museum.

A PUBLIC opening reception for the two artists and their fellow thesis candidate exhibitors, Reiko Watanabe and Robert "Brad" Martin, will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. June 16.

The University Museum is open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. and on Sundays from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. when classes are in session. Admission is free.

NIU, Akron join AMCU conference

CHICAGO (UPI) — Northern Illinois University and the University of Akron Wednesday joined the Association of Mid-Continent Universities, expanding the NCAA Division I conference to 10 teams.

The two schools will begin participating in the conference's championships during the 1989-90 season for most sports, but will not begin play in basketball or soccer until the 1990-91 season and have no plans to compete in football.

"We are delighted to have these two quality academic and athletic programs as new members," said Jerry A. Ippoliti, AMCU commissioner. "Akron and Northern Illinois will definitely enhance the overall future of the AMCU."

"The location of these two universities will broaden our marketing base for the total conference and their addition to the league is a major step in the continuing progress for the AMCU."

NIU Vice President Thomas Montiegl said in DeKalb, Ill., Northern will pay a $100,000 initiation fee to the AMCU. He said the university views the fee as "an investment" and the money will not come from academic funds.

He also said the league required Northern to resume playing men's baseball, which was dropped several years ago for financial reasons.

Akron, which became a Division I school in 1979 when it joined the Ohio Valley Conference, plans to compete in AMCU basketball, baseball, cross country, golf, tennis, soccer and indoor and outdoor track.

Akron's football program will remain independent, a spokesman said, refusing to elaborate.

NIU, which became a Division I school in 1967 and participated in the Mid-

American Conference from 1975 to 1986, plans to compete in AMCU basketball, soccer, tennis, golf and swimming.

"This Division I conference affiliation is something we've been working toward the past 18 months," NIU athletic director Gerald O'Dell said. "The AMCU offers various arenas of major-college competition that our many publics have wanted for years."

"At the same time, the league allows us flexibility." NIU's football program will remain independent and its women's athletics will not come under AMCU auspices, O'Dell said.

Other AMCU members are Cleveland State University, Eastern Illinois University, University of Illinois-Chicago, University of Northern Iowa, Southwest Missouri State University, Valparaiso (Ind.) University, Western Illinois University and University of Wisconsin-Green Bay.

Mock was a two-time state champion in the 400 meters winning it her junior and senior years, DeNoon said. She also won the 200 meters the two previous years and finished second this season. She was also third in the 100.

■Nicolaia Moore from Georgetown. Moore placed in the 100 and 200 meter runs at state and also the long jump. "She was outstanding in basketball and volleyball also," DeNoon said. "Now that she will be just concentrating on one sport, it will help her future."

■Lesley Tynes from Benton, Ky. Tynes finished second in the state in the two-mile run and was a fifth place finisher in the cross country championships, DeNoon said.

■Shaarae Winfield from Harvey. DeNoon said he feels that Winfield along with King, Mock, and Lee could help the team in long sprints. She competed in the 400 and 800 meter events last spring. "She was part of a state champion two-mile relay team her junior year," said DeNoon. "Shaarae could provide help in the 400 and 800."

■Amy Bollinger from Seymour, Ind. Bollinger, an SIU-C academic scholarsh.p award winner, is outstanding in the 300 meter hurdles, the 400 meter run and 100 hurdles, DeNoon said. "Amy will be a good boost for us," DeNoon said. "She, along with Lee will add depth in the hurdles in addition to our returners."

Even if some of these athletes do not improve on their high school marks, they could still place in the conference according to DeNoon. "If they maintain what they did in high school, we could still pick up 30-40 points," said DeNoon. "With these recruits along with our returners, we should have a team equal to anyone else's in the conference."

King, Navratilova eliminated from tourney

BIRMINGHAM, England (UPI) — Billie Jean King's temporary comeback with Martina Navratilova lasted just two matches before the doubles team was eliminated Wednesday in the second round of the Women's Grass Court Championships.

King, 45, who last teamed with Navratilova to win the U.S. Open in 1980, was again her partner as well as her coach this week at the $150,000 tournament. She had played just two matches in five years before Wednesday.

"I feel great now. But I'll probably need paracetamol in the morning to scrape me off the sheets," King said.

Rain threatens start of U.S. Open golf tourney

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (UPI) — The golfing championship of the United States begins Thursday with an international cast trying to master a diabolical course made more difficult by capricious and potentially disruptive weather.

A field of 156 players — those who remained from an original field of 5,786 hopefuls — was set to take on the pressures of the 89th U.S. Open.

They will compete over the 6,902-yard, par-70 Oak Hill Country Club course, a scenic plot of land filled with trees and manicured to typical United States Golf Association specifications.

That means high rough, slick greens and devilish pin placements which will test the patience of even the most seasoned professional. And, this year, it also means rain — possibly lots of it.

Rains drenched the Oak Hill course Wednesday afternoon and there was a 70 percent chance of more rains Thursday. Forecasters said the rain could continue through Saturday.

"The condition of the course is that it is very wet," said defending British Open champion Seve Ballesteros. "The course is very close to being unplayable. If we get much more rain, I think it will be unplayable tomorrow (Thursday)."

USGA executive director P.J. Boatwright reluctantly agreed.

"As much rain as we've already had, it might take just one heavy shower Thursday and we'd be out of business,"

Boatwright said. "The greens would puddle up pretty quickly."

"If we lost Thursday's round, we would probably play 36 holes on Sunday."

Boatwright said members of the USGA's championship committee and the course superintendent would meet well before dawn Thursday to determine course conditions and whether the first round could proceed as scheduled.

The weather, however, could cast a pall on what has the potential to be the most competitive U.S. Open ever. Selecting a favorite is impossible and just whittling down the list of potential winners is difficult.

Masters champion Nick Faldo will come under considerable scrutiny since he has played well all season and has a chance to become the first player in 17 years to win the first two legs of the professional Grand Slam — the Masters, U.S. Open, British Open and PGA.

Fourth golf tournament remembers Solverson

By Kevin Sampson
Staff Writer

Barbara Blancher shot a 76 and came from behind Wednesday to win the Fourth Annual Signe Solverson Memorial Golf tournament with a two day total of 153.

Blancher, 21, from Columbia, Mo., is a senior at the University of Missouri. She finished the first round Tuesday with a score of 77, just one shot behind Justi Rae Miller after the first round of action Wednesday. Miller finished second at 154.

The tournament, held at the Jackson Country Club, is in remembrance of Signe Solverson, an SIU-C women's golf team member who was killed in an automobile accident in September of 1985.

The tournament was open to women golfers between the ages of 14 and 25. Awards were given for the first through 10th place overall and medals for the first through third place high school participants.

Lieschen Eller, of Centralia, shot a 170 to win the high school division.

"The purpose of this tournament is to enshrine the memory of Signe and to encourage young female golfers to strive for the goals of excellence that were synonymous to Solverson," Mickey Jackson, president of Jackson Country Club announced in a press release.

Solverson worked in the pro shop of the Jackson Country Club and competed in many local, state, and national tournaments, winning several in Southern Illinois. She was a four year letter winner at Carbondale Community High School and was beginning her sophomore year at SIU-C before her fatal accident.

Some of the proceeds from the tournament will go to the CCHS women's golf team and to the SIU-C women's golf team.

Ginny Solverson, Signe's mother, said she would like to eventually set up a scholarship fund in her daughter's honor. "We would like to promote women's golf in the area. Supporting SIU is just one way of helping out," she said.

Wheelchair-bound coach's case considered by panel

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — A closed hearing was conducted Wednesday by the IHSAA, which has been asked to reverse its ruling barring a girls softball coach from taking her motorized cart onto the playing field.

A ruling is expected within two weeks by the executive committee of the Indiana High School Athletic Association in the case of Sandra Childers, who has been a paraplegic since a spinal operation three years ago.

She serves as an assistant coach for the girls softball program at Sheridan High School.

The IHSAA this spring ruled Childers could not have her cart on the field while she coached first base because there was a danger of a player running into the vehicle and being injured.

Childers went to court and won an injunction last month from Judge Donald E. Foulke of Hamilton Superior Court. The order allowed her to continue coaching until the IHSAA issued a final decision.

Childers was represented by her own attorney but also got help during Wednesday's hearing from Richard Darko, an attorney for the Indiana State Teachers Association.

Darko said the IHSAA's earlier ruling was "a clear case of discrimination — something a just society must not tolerate."

ISTA officials said they would pursue the case if the athletic association again rules against Childers.

Childers and others testified during a hearing before Foulke that she has never been involved in a collision with a player while in the coaching box with her car.

pick in April. He outweights Tyson by nearly 100 pounds.

When asked about the possible bout, the heavyweight champion said, "I'd like that a lot. I find that very stimulating."

Tyson is training at King's Orwell farm for a July 21 title defense against Carl "The Truth" Williams in Atlantic City, N.J.

Tyson looking toward Mandarich bout

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Heavyweight champion Mike Tyson Wednesday said he is looking beyond his next fight to a showdown with Tony Mandarich, and his promoter Don King met with the football player's agent to open negotiations.

Mandarich, a 305-pound offensive tackle out of Michigan State, was the Green Bay Packers' first-round draft

WCIL contracted to broadcast Salukis

By Kevin Simpson
Staff Writer

Athletic Director Jim Hart announced Wednesday that the University has reached an agreement with Carbondale radio station WCIL for broadcasting rights to Saluki home games.

The agreement is hinged upon an open-door policy that the University has reverted back to since the termination of a contract with Turner Communications and WEBQ-FM. The policy allows any station to broadcast Saluki home games and pay for them on a per-game basis.

Before the contract with WEBQ, which was signed in fall 1988, any station wishing to broadcast a Saluki home game would pay $100 for the broadcast rights.

The athletic department has raised the broadcast fees to $200 per game. The contract with WCIL calls for the coverage of five football and 15 basketball games in the upcoming season for a total of $4000.

The agreement, which is unexclusive, allows any other radio station to initiate broadcasts by paying the same rights fee to the athletic department.

Turner Communications was paying annual rights fee of $13,000, leaving a $9,000 deficit in the sports budget. Hart has said the deficit could be less if more than one station buys broadcast rights for the games.

Hart said: "We are elated over today's transaction with Paul McRoy and WCIL. We have great respect for WCIL's overall operation and are confident it will report our athletic activities accurately to our fans throughout Southern Illinois."

Mike Reis, sports director for WCIL, will be the announcer for the Saluki broadcasts. Hart said he was pleased that Reis will be covering the games, "Mike is well recognized throughout the area," Hart said.

The contract with Turner Communications was terminated June 7. O.L. Turner, chief executive officer of Turner Communications, based his actions on what he called "inappropriate and threatening actions taken on the part of Hart."

DeNoon signs 15 freshmen

Lineup of high school all-stars to run on women's track team

By Greg Scott
Staff Writer

SIU-C women's track coach Don DeNoon believes that his upcoming freshman class may make up the best recruiting group he has had in his six years here.

Usually, DeNoon recruits just six team members out of high school, however this season he more than doubled that total and has signed 15. "Any six of the 15 kids our staff signed could make up the best recruiting season I have ever had," he said.

Of the 15teen, DeNoon will have some power next year for his discus and shot put squad, recruiting three of the top four throwers in the state. He also has the state's top runner in the 400-meter, plus many other high placing runners.

This was a big season for the Saluki women's track team, which won the Gateway Conference indoor and outdoor championships. However, the team lost seven of its 10 strongest members either by graduation or other departure.

"It is almost like having two and a half recruiting classes," said DeNoon. "They have some hefty shoes to step into."

Here is a complete list of DeNoon's recruits for the upcoming season and some of his comments on each of them:

■ Dawn Barefoot from Hoffman Estates. "Dawn is an outstanding distance runner and the last two years she has ran a 5:09 mile," DeNoon said. "She has finished very high up in the cross country state championships also and was all-state in the sport the last two years."

■ Laura Batsie from Mahomet. "Laura finished high in the cross country state championships and was competitive in the 800 meter run at the state level as well," said DeNoon. "We will probably use her more in the mile than the half, she has good leg speed and a good academic record."

■ Jennifer Bozue from Gardener. Bozue, the state's No. 1 discus thrower and No. 2 shot putter, is 6-feet and weighs about 200 pounds, DeNoon said. "Her last throw in the shot put broke the state record. However, her teammate is also a fine shot put thrower and she broke Jennifer's record and ended up winning it."

■ Leeann Conway from Overland Park, Kan. Conway won the state championship in the mile, but some bad luck has kept Conway from winning even more state titles, DeNoon said. "Leeann was rated first going into the cross country state meet but then her foot was ran over," he said. "She ran barefoot and still finished sixth in the meet."

■ (Conway) is a gutsy athlete that has the assets that one is looking for," said DeNoon. "I usually do not expect freshmen to be an instant success. I could see Conway and Bozue being competitive from the first day they step on campus."

■ Cheryl Evers from Merrionette Park. Evers is the state's No. 3 discus thrower, and DeNoon said she "has been a consistent top piece finisher in the state since her sophomore year and is an outstanding student." At 5-feet-6-inches and 185 pounds, Evers also is a national powerlifting champion, he said.

■ Christina Gabler from Memphis, Tenn. Gabler was one of the best middle distance runners in the state, DeNoon said. She finished in the top four in the 800 and 1600 at the state level. "Christina's school did not have cross country," said DeNoon. "We are excited about expanding her horizons because a full-year program may improve her."

■ Cynthia Grammer from Mahomet. Another shot put and discus thrower, Grammer is in the six-foot and 200 pound range and is among the top four in the state, DeNoon said.

■ Jeni King from Jefferson City, Mo. King is one of the better sprinters in Missouri as she finished in the top three in the 100 and 200 meter runs her junior year, DeNoon said.

■ Annette Klett from Washington. "Annette is one of the best high jumpers in the state and we want her to be a multiple event athlete," said DeNoon.

■ Denise Lee from West Frankfort. Lee finished second in the 300 hurdles at the state level and she was a finalist in the 100 hurdles. "We are really excited about having Denise on the team for next season," said DeNoon. Her father is the principal, athletic director and coach at West Frankfort High School. He also was a member of the Saluki basketball team that won the National Invitational Tournament in the 1970s.

Phillies ink 17-year-old outfielder from Chicago

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The Philadelphia Phillies signed Jeff Jackson of Chicago-Simeon, their No. 1 selection in this year's amateur draft, the team announced Wednesday.

The team would not disclose the terms of the deal for the 17-year-old outfielder. Jackson was the fourth overall pick in the draft.

Jackson graduates from high school on Monday. He is scheduled to start his professional career the following day by reporting to Philadelphia's rookie league team in Martinsville, Va., which plays in the Appalachian League.

Jackson batted .504 with 16 home runs and 72 RBIs in 35 games for Simeon High School. He stole 52 bases without being caught.

"I'm excited. I've never been to Philadelphia but, from what I hear, it's a great city to live in," Jackson said in a prepared statement released by the Phillies. "The Phillies are going through a rebuilding process. With a little hard work, I think I can be up there by the time I'm 19."

Lewis lauds Johnson confession

HOUSTON (UPI) — Carl Lewis, who finished second to Ben Johnson in the 100 meters at the Seoul Olympics, said the Canadian sprinter's testimony that he used steroids was long overdue.

"It's about time," Lewis said.

Johnson won last September's race in 9.79 seconds, but three days later failed his drug test and the gold medal was awarded to Lewis.

Johnson admitted in Toronto Tuesday he took anabolic steroids less than four weeks before failing his drug test at Seoul. He also admitted taking steroid injections before the 1987 World Championships in Rome.

Lewis ran a 9.92 at Seoul, which stands as the American record. Lewis declined to say whether Johnson's record should be removed.

"They've already talked about it and I'm going to stay out of it," he said. "He (Johnson) said he was on drugs. If the IAAF (International Amateur Athletic Federation) is 100 percent for fighting drugs, they'll take it away. If they're not, they'll leave it. I'm going to stay out of that crossfire."

Frank Greenberg, president of The Athletics Congress, the governing body of American track, said he wants Lewis to get the record.

"We'll do what we can to get him the record," he said. "It's a bit premature because we want to see what Canada does first."

Ollan Cassell, TAC executive director and a vice president of the IAAF, said he feels Johnson's world record should be deleted. But, in speaking for the IAAF, he said he would wait until the Canadian hearings are over to determine the position of the sport's world governing body.

Lewis said he could tell Johnson was using steroids before the 1988 Games.

"I could barely bench press 200 pounds," Lewis said. "He was over 450 and he could squat 600. You're talking about a weightlifter on the track. It was men against boys."

But Lewis said he saw a different Johnson on television recently.

"Have you been following it (Canadian hearings) on television?" Lewis asked. "He's a lot smaller."
