Democrats question budget plan

Senators rip cutbacks : Meeting focuses on cuts that may cripple local hospital care.

By Rob Neff
DE Government/Politics Editor

The Memorial Hospital of Carbondale, which is the only hospital south of the Metro East area that provides health care for premature babies, may be forced to discontinue that service due to the $1.9 million decrease in state funding it will receive this year, according to a Central Illinois state senator.

Sen. Penny Sevens, D—Decatur, said the cuts in the hospital's budget are just part of a $330 million hit hospitals all over the state during the budget negotiations in Springfield this year.

Sevens brought up the issue at a town meeting-style forum in the Ohio Room at the Student Center Wednesday night, which the first in a series of ten meetings scheduled state-wide to bring the Democratic Party's view of the new state budget to the people of Illinois.

"What we're trying to do is get out the truth about the budget and the consequences of the budget," Sevens, an SIUC graduate, said before the meeting. "We expect administrators from different fields to testify about the impact the budget has made on them."

Also attending the meeting were state senators Jim Rea, D—

Christopher, and Evelyn Bowles, D—Edwardsville.

Rea criticized the Republicans in Springfield for locking democrats in both houses out of the budget negotiation process.

"Not only did we, the Democrats, not have a chance for input, but you, the people of Illinois, did not have a chance for input," he said. "This budget was single handedly crafted, debated, and decided by the Republican Party."

Rea said members of the state senate did not have enough time to review the budget because they were given the six-inch thick document hours before they were scheduled to vote on it.

"We got the budget the morning of the day we were supposed to vote on it," he said. "Not only did we not know what was in it, but I would say there are a lot of rank and file Republicans who still do not know what they voted for."

'Sculpture' causes stir at Pulliam

By Aaron Butler
DE Associate Editor

A nasty surprise awaited anyone climbing the northeast steps to Pulliam Hall Wednesday, where a prankster placed a "sculpture" displaying the body of a hawk impaled on a clay platter.

SIUC police Sergeant Frank Eovaldi said the sculpture was reported by a passer-by yesterday afternoon, and the police notified the Department of Conservation.

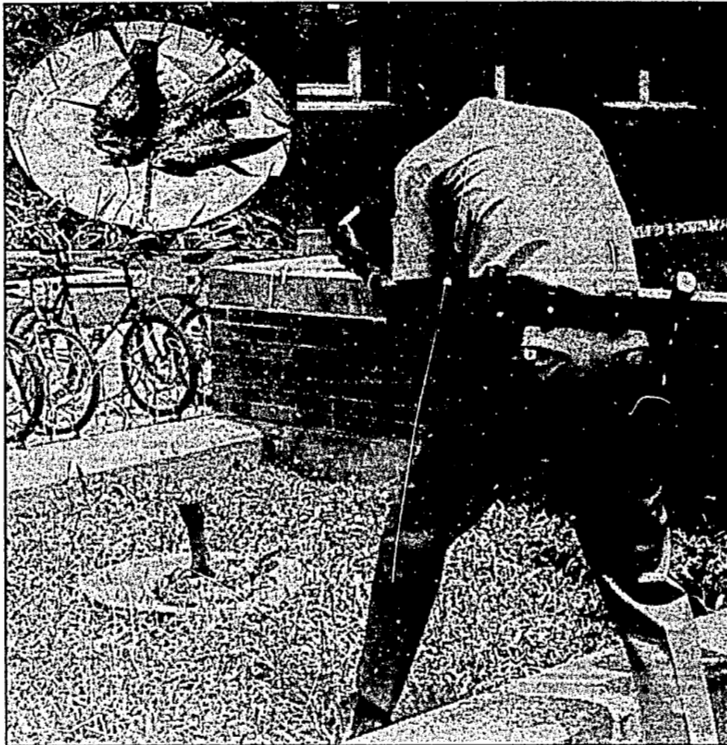

"We notified the DOC and will meet with them tomorrow (Thursday) to make them aware of what we know," Eovaldi said. "(The case) remains open and pending investigation."

Possession of a non-game species is against Illinois law, according to Bob Catt, Department of Conservation site superintendent at Lake Murphysboro.

"Whether the animal is alive or dead does not matter, it is still illegal," he said.

Eovaldi said police were told the hawk has been dead for some time, and was probably a roadkill.

The sculpture materials, including the hawk, were probably removed from a garbage container outside the blacksmithing program's sculpting area, said Brent Kingston, professor of Art and Design.

Women's progress to be discussed in Beijing, China at U.N. conference

By Christi C. Harber
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Three university officials may gain an international perspective on SIUC women's issues when they travel to Beijing, China this summer for conferences sponsored by the United Nations.

Two of the women, Naseem Ahmed, coordinator of women for International Programs and Services, and Beth Frestein, coordinator of Women's Services will attend a Non-Governmental Organizational Forum Aug. 30-Sept. 8.

The UN sponsored NGO Forum is intended to give representatives of non-governmental organizations an opportunity to review the international progress of women.

Olga Weidner, associate director of User Services at Information Technology, will attend the fourth World Conference on Women, Sept. 4-15.

Unlike the NGO forum, the conference is an inter-governmental body, representing 45 United Nations member states. Representatives meet annually to formulate guidelines on actions to improve women's status in the economic, political, social, cultural and educational fields.

Ahmed attended the NGO Forum in 1985 and is looking forward to

Tuition hike slated for BOT approval

Trustees will also consider new bachelor and master degrees

By Donita Polly
Daily Egyptian Reporter

If the SIUC Board of Trustees approves a four-year tuition plan to be discussed at today's meeting, tuition will increase above the board's projected inflation rate all four years.

The plan includes tuition, fees and housing for fiscal years 1997 through 2000.

According to the plan, undergraduate and graduate SIUC tuition rates would increase annually $5 per semester credit hour for the next four years. Students taking 15 hours per semester could expect an increase of $150 per academic year.

Fees and housing rates will mirror the projected annual inflation rate of 3.5 percent.

SIUC Law students will pay tuition for an additional hour of classes each fiscal year through 1999, bringing the maximum hours paid for at that time to 15. In 2000, tuition will increase with inflation.

The SIUC School of Medicine will increase its tuition rate by 8.8 percent in fiscal year 1997 and incrementally decrease to 7.7 percent in fiscal year 2000.

SIUC Chancellor James Brown said the tuition plan was first discussed at May's BOT meeting and will be up for adoption in July.

Jack Dyer of University Relations said trustees normally discuss issues at only one meeting before voting on them, but this issue will come before the board three times.

SIUC Chancellor Brown said the issue's importance to students is the reason for the delay.

"Anything the students pay for, our board looks at twice," Brown said.

SIUC President John Guyon said the tuition plan was a statewide recommendation made by the Illinois Board of Higher Education.

Duane Sherman, president of the Undergraduate Student Government, said the purpose of the IBHE proposal was to get a plan for incoming students.

"It's good to have a plan but a lot could happen in four years," Sherman said.

Trustees also will discuss the approval of two new programs: a Bachelor of Science in primary care medicine and a Master of Arts Degree in interactive multimedia.

The proposed Bachelor of Science in primary care medicine would provide primary care for people in rural areas of Central and Southern Illinois with a shortage of CANADIANS APPROVE SWEEPING GUN CONTROL — TORONTO—Canada's House of Commons has approved sweeping new legislation requiring this country's 3 million gun owners to register firearms. The legislation, whose quick approval by the Canadian Senate is expected, also mandates minimum four-year prison terms for anyone convicted of using a firearm in the commission of a serious crime. Arms-bearing Canadian citizens will have until 2003 to register an estimated 7 million firearms.

CZECH PRESIDENT BREAKS BREAD WITH OLD PAL — WASHINGTON—It was a very private, very informal dinner for eight Friday night for Czech President Vaclav Havel at the Georgetown home of his old friend, the Czech-born U.N. Ambassador Madeleine K. Albright. Just the Clintons, the Panettas and Czech Ambassador Michael Zantovsky and his wife, Kristina. Havel addressed Harvard's commencement Thursday, denouncing isolationism and appeasement, saying the United States could not escape its responsibilities "as the most powerful country in the world." He said politicians should "think ahead boldly" about the future of the world: The dinner at Albright's, while friendly and low key, touched on Bosnia, with Havel giving his views on the situation.

MORE HURRICANE ACTIVITY PROJECTED IN '95 — FORT COLLINS, COLO.—A university hurricane forecaster is predicting an above-average hurricane season this year with three major hurricanes forming. William Gray, a professor of atmospheric science at Colorado State University in Fort Collins, said last week that 12 named storms are expected to develop this year in the area he studies — the Atlantic Ocean, Caribbean Sea and Gulf of Mexico — with eight of those storms becoming hurricanes. "This year, the factors we use to issue our forecast definitely point to a more active hurricane season than any since the late 1980s," Gray said. "The last four hurricane seasons have seen very light activity except for Hurricane Andrew in 1992." Tropical cyclones are given names when their sustained wind speed exceeds 39 mph. They become hurricanes when wind speed exceeds 74 mph.

GOP RENEWING ATTACK ON ABORTION RIGHTS — WASHINGTON—House Republicans this week are debating a series of measures that opponents are calling the kickoff to a GOP campaign to roll back abortion rights. The measures include proposals to ban abortions on military bases overseas, to outlaw an abortion procedure used in late-term pregnancies and to ensure that no medical accreditation board could mandate that residency programs teach or pay for instruction in abortion techniques.

FED WORKERS WORRY OVER BENEFIT CHANGES — WASHINGTON—President Clinton's entry into the balanced-budget derby adds one more potential worry for federal workers already feeling hunger pangs from two years of diet raises, and facing a Republican effort to make them pay more for reduced pensions. But the new Clinton plan is mild compared to some benefit cuts that top aides proposed during the cut-and-paste operation leading up to this week's announcement. Clinton's 10-year program would force health plans that participate in the Federal Employee Health Benefits Program to provide the same benefits and premiums to workers in small firms that don't offer coverage. That would help millions of uninsured Americans. But it could force federal health plans to jack up premiums and/or lower benefits to compensate for losses in giving small-firm workers benefits of the big federal group plan.

SIUC teaches politics to Soviet educators

By Rebecca Hutchings
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Eighteen teachers and government officials from the Commonwealth of Independent States will visit SIUC July 1 through Aug. 11 to learn more about the American political system so they can teach it in their own countries.

The teachers and officials, who are from different regions of the Commonwealth, were chosen by the American Embassy in Moscow through competitive interviews and applications.

The U. S. Information Agency funded the cost of bringing the teacher-students to SIUC.

Linz C. Brown, social director of SIUC's International Programs and Services, said the program is designed to enhance democracy in the former communist republics.

"Congress set aside money after the fall of the [Berlin] wall to help Russia and other parts of the world to better understand the American political system, so they can learn democratic principles and go back and teach this," Brown said.

Scott Hays, assistant professor of political science, said there are many opportunities for both the SIUC faculty and the visiting teachers and officials.

"Most of the faculty are assigned one visiting student as a mentor. Not only are there cultural and social opportunities, but we are able to exchange methods and ideas of teaching," Hays said. "We learn from each other."

"...we are able to exchange methods and ideas of teaching"

Scott Hays,
assistant professor of political science

The summer institute involves lectures that will be taught five days a week for six weeks with different teachers from the political science and law faculty speaking on specific subjects in their specialty. Lectures will cover American interest groups, political parties, federalism, Congress, and various other topics.

The University has not yet decided whether the lectures will be open to SIUC students due to scheduling problems, John Jackson, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, said.

Jackson, also a political science professor, said the main focus of the program is to facilitate a good relationship between the former rival states.

"This is an attempt at mutual understanding. Anything that increases [the Russians'] understanding of our world and our understanding of their world is beneficial," Jackson said. "It contributes to peaceful relationships between the two countries."

Thumbs up and down on variety of Hollywood's summer movies

You are so happy. You have been waiting since you were 10 years old to see Casper, the Friendly Ghost get the attention he deserves and make it to the big screen. Convinced it will be great, you ignore both a best friend who says he has seen better acting in a grade school play and a real aversion to sitting in an audience with a majority populace of fifth graders and head for the theater. Forking over hard earned cash, you grab the popcorn, take a seat and ten minutes later find yourself wishing you had stayed home to clean your belly button.

Avoid this trauma. Listen to your friends. Heed your conscience. Cr at the very least, read a review. I am not Gene Siskel, but I do know that Charlie Sheen must not be allowed to make more action films and Drew Barrymore is annoying.

Granted, it is difficult to take someone's word for something when you don't know what she likes in the first place. So since I'm writing movie reviews for the Daily Egyptian, here is a quick wrap-up of some recent releases; perhaps this will demonstrate my cinematic tastes.

As you might have guessed, "Casper" was hardly the cinematic success I had hoped. Starring Bill Pullman and Christina Ricci, and based on a character from a children's book, the movie is short on plot but long on merchandising opportunities. This movie can not decide whether to appeal to children or adults; in the end, it appeals to neither. Skip it.

Switching from poltergeists to Paris provides a little more entertainment. In "Forget Paris," Billy Crystal and Debra Winger explore the funny side of a romance gone awry. But Winger and Crystal have no chemistry, and the only amusing parts of this film are Crystal's portrayal of an NBA referee and Winger's brief stint as an adhesive. Wait for video.

Meg Ryan and Kevin Kline fare better in France. "French Kiss" is a comedy that works, and not only because of Kline's silly mustache. Ryan is an anal-retentive ex-American with a cheating boyfriend and a fear of flying. Kline is a French thief who has no staying power — for commitment or otherwise. He steals a necklace, she steals his heart. Rush, nish, rush to the theater — and bring a date.

Yearning for more exotic locales than France? Try "Congo" — but be warned: this film contains some annoying creatures, and not all of them are wild animals. Laura Linney, Dylan Walsh and Ernie Hudson star in this complex story of greed, nature and remarkably ugly fake gorillas. "Congo" is not horrible, but much of the acting is stiff and stilted. The plot, which is either a search for diamonds or a sort of "Jungle Book" in reverse, is never clear enough to be truly engaging. It is worth seeing, but go to the mall.

The gory jaunt through Africa may leave you feeling slightly disoriented, so opt for more comfortable ground in Iowa with two actors who rarely disappoint — Clint Eastwood and Meryl Streep. "Bridges of Madison County" is based on the story by Robert James Waller. Although it varies slightly from the book, it still will leave you weepy. The premise might sound overdone — housewife and free spirit are star-crossed lovers — but thanks to Streep's lovely Italian accent and Eastwood's icy blue eyes, enough emotion is flying around to engage even the cynical. Bring Kleenex.

More detailed reviews will follow in the coming weeks.

Pinch Penny aims for microbrewery

By Alan Schnepf
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Connoisseurs of microbrewed beers may have a treat in store if Pinch Penny Pub follows through with its plan to install an on-site brewery.

Ann Karayiannis, part-owner of Pinch Penny Pub, 700 E. Grand Ave., said they intend to have the brewery built if the Carbondale liquor control commission approves the owners' request to produce and sell beer to customers at the pub. Karayiannis said the pub's application had already been endorsed by the city's Liquor Advisory Board.

She said she hopes that the pub will be brewing their own beer by next spring. The estimated cost of the microbrewery is $450,000.

Ann and her husband, Tony, thought of brewing and selling their own beer several years ago, but the idea never materialized until recently.

Ann said a surge in the popularity of microbrews made the project feasible.

She said there were less than 20 brew pubs, pubs making their own beer, in the country 10 years ago. A figure which is estimated to be at 800 by the end of this year.

If the brewery plan becomes reality, Pinch Penny will build a 30 foot addition on the east side of their existing building Ann said.

The Karayiannis' son, James, a junior at SIUC in marketing, plans to attend the Seibel Institute for Brewing in Chicago next January. The program at Seibel includes about four months of classes along with various fieldwork duties, Ann said.

"It's basically math and science classes," James said.

James said he intends to eventually brew beer for Pinch Penny.

While the younger Karayiannis is attending brewing school, the pub plans to hire a professional brewmaster to handle beer production, Ann said.

She said they intend to keep the Carbondale transit system set to roll

WELL, AFTER SEVERAL YEARS OF WAITING, years filled with dashed hopes, the SIUC Board of Trustees has finally approved the elusive mass transit system. The system is scheduled to begin operating on Aug. 15.

The system is perhaps the best news students at SIUC have heard in a while. Too often students receive news about tuition hikes or athletic fee increases. Students have waited to hear about the approval of the transit system for years. In 1986 and again in 1988, students approved a $20 fee that would fund a transit service. Students showed their support for a similar referendum in 1993. Once again planners failed to get the wheels turning.

Although the mass transit system does require a $25 fee hike, the advantages of the transit system outweigh the disadvantages.

THE MASS TRANSIT SYSTEM WILL GREATLY enhance the lives of students who do not have their own transportation and find it difficult to get around Carbondale. No longer will a student have to sit around the dorm on a Saturday afternoon with nothing to do. No longer will they have to spend money on taxi fares just to get to University Mall.

This system will also alleviate the on-going parking problem on campus. Each semester several letters to the editor are submitted to the DE by students voicing their opinion on not being able to get a parking spot. The transit system will allow students the opportunity to take the bus to campus rather than drive, virtually eliminating the parking dilemma by lessening the amount of traffic.

And what about the issue of personal safety? Buses are scheduled to run on South Illinois Avenue until 2:30 a.m. on the weekends. Students living in areas such as Thompson Point can return safely by riding the bus without having to walk a great distance. In addition, the service will reduce the number of traffic incidents involving intoxicated drivers.

YES, THE NEW MASS TRANSIT SYSTEM WILL improve the lives of all students by offering them a new mode of transportation they can utilize all semester, at a very low cost. However, it is a shame that such a system took so long to implement. The controversy surrounding the mass transit system has a long history.

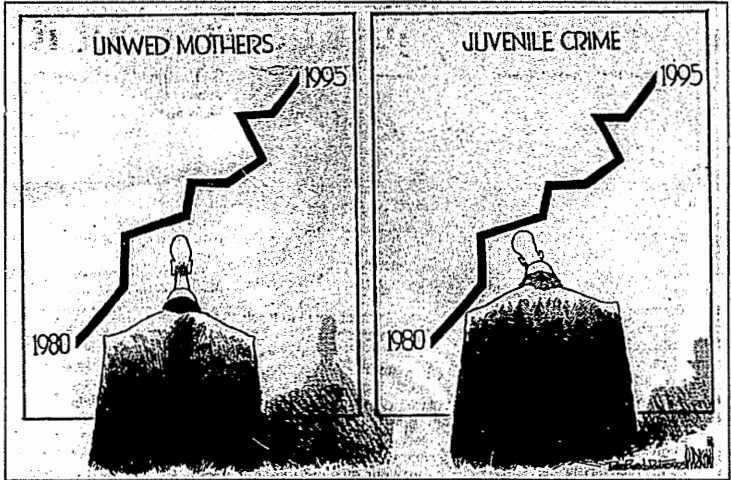

SIUC President John Guyon said the evaluation process by University and city officials was the main reason for the delay of a mass transit system. Guyon said it was crucial for planners to evaluate whether SIUC needed a mass transit system.

IT SHOULD HAVE BEEN CLEAR TO UNIVERSITY officials years ago that a mass transit system is crucial for the students at SIUC, and for the city of Carbondale as well. It took six years to reach a decision on the issue — six years of prodding and pushing by students and student government members.

After all this time the wheels of the mass transit system are finally in motion and will soon make their mark on the streets of Carbondale. It is critical that the students of SIUC take advantage of this system, and prove to SIUC administrators its significance to this campus.

Discriminating federal drug laws give blacks stiffer prison sentences

By Jerome H. Skolnick
Special to the Los Angeles Times

With all the hoopla about affirmative action, the public is scarcely aware of a federal program that discriminates against blacks. You could look it up—but not under the "affirmative action" heading. Instead, check out the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1986, which mandates a minimum 10-year sentence for anyone convicted of selling 50 grams or more of crack cocaine or possessing that amount with the intent to sell. By contrast, dealers in powder cocaine have to be convicted of selling 100 times the amount of crack to trigger the same penalty.

Crack is nearly pure cocaine, suitable for smoking. Absorbed across the pulmonary vascular bed, crack produces a quicker, more intense but shorter high than nasally inhaled powder cocaine. (If injected, powder cocaine has an effect similar to crack.)

Those who trade in cocaine, whether crack or powder, are profit-seeking entrepreneurs. Some use, most don't, not even most street dealers. Present penalties punish mostly lower-level crack dealers, who are easier to catch and convict. The higher one's position in the marketing chain, the less vulnerable one is to detection and arrest.

Powder cocaine is preferred by middle- and upper-class users, most of them white. Crack is marketed more heavily in minority, especially black, communities. By being 100 times tougher on crack dealers, we jam our prisons with small-time vendors and addicts, offer big-time powder cocaine merchants a break and produce exceptional racial disparity. Does that make sense?

A study for the Bureau of Justice Statistics by Douglas C. McDonald and Kenneth E. Carlson looked at sentences for crack cocaine dealing between Jan. 20, 1989, and June 20, 1990, after full implementation of the federal sentencing guidelines. The average sentence of blacks and whites differed substantially: 102 months vs. 74 months—a 37 percent spread. The maximum sentences for blacks were 41 percent longer than those for whites: an average 71 months vs. 50 months. The authors do not blame the difference on discrimination by trial judges, but attribute it largely to the 100-to-1 sentencing distinction between crack and powder cocaine.

The law mandating this ratio is absurd, foolish and outrageous. It is absurd because it punishes retail crack dealers with far longer sentences than apply to the wholesalers who supply them with the same amount of the drug. It is foolish because it is hardest on the lowliest dealers who are most easily replaceable. And it is outrageous because the federal circuit courts have rejected equal protection, due process or any other constitutional arguments challenging the law.

The courts say that despite the association between black and crack and white and powder, and the disproportionately adverse impact of the law on blacks, Congress showed no racial animus in passing the law. Perhaps Congress didn't understand the disparate impact of the law in 1986. Now Congress should know, and if attempts to give the law more balance are voted down, black defendants will have a stronger constitutional argument.

After extensive study, the U.S. Sentencing Commission published a report in February strongly criticizing the congressional approach to sentencing cocaine offenders. It points out the anomaly in the 100-to-1 ratio: Retail crack dealers are given longer sentences than the wholesale distributors who supply them with the powder cocaine to produce their crack.

Recognizing that crack and powder cocaine are pharmacologically the same, the report advises that the 100-to-1 ratio cannot withstand scientific scrutiny and concludes that it has had a disparate, prejudicial impact on blacks.

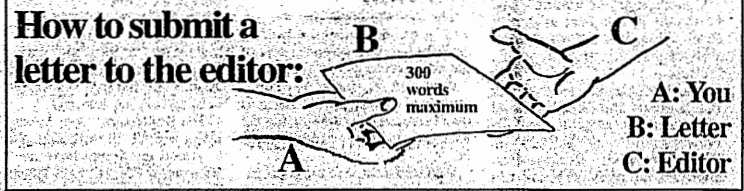

Despite the commission's report, the U.S. Justice Department is urging Congress to maintain these disparate sentencing practices. U.S. Attorney General Janet Reno says that equalizing penalties for equal amounts of crack and powder cocaine would "fail to reflect the harsh and terrible impact of crack on communities across America." The attorney general, an ex-officio member of the Sentencing Commission, attended some of the hearings. One has to wonder how she could have reached that conclusion. Might it have to do with an election scheduled for 1996, and an administration that needs to show that it is tough on drugs?

How to submit a letter to the editor:

Preparing to leave class a couple minutes early just doesn't cut it

Classes have begun, and a strange phenomenon is still occurring that burns me up every time it happens.

I call it the "two minute shuffle."
The "two minute shuffle" occurs during the final two minutes of each class period.

Students look at the clock and decide that at the two minute mark before the end of class they have their right to close their texts, notebooks, and various sundry items needed for the period. They shuffle through the class handouts, unzip their book bags and clear their desks in the hopes of getting out of class two minutes early.

This is all going on while the instructor is summing up the lecture for the day.

For many people, this ritual is used to give the instructor a "hint" that the instructor is just about to venture into the student's own personal time.

Or, it is the "hint" that the student has decided, using his or her own judgement, that the instructor has given out all of the pertinent testable information, and is ready for either something new, like going to another class, or simply to go home and pursue something the student has been thinking about during the entire lecture anyway.

Sean J. Walker
Perspectives

This disturbs me, so I will spell it out.

The instructors are paid to teach students. Students pay the University to pay the instructors to educate a student in a particular field, which the student chose in the first place.

Here is where the problem lies. If we as students are paying for an education, then we are paying for the entire hour or more to learn something that will help us succeed in the future.

If that is true, then why do some students insist on taking away that two minutes at the end of a lecture? If you think that two minutes does not mean anything, let me run this by you: How many times has an instructor given you an assignment at the end of a lecture?

During many lectures at SIUC, the instructor takes the first 20 or so minutes of the lecture to explain the ideas and vocabulary the students need to get through the daily course load.

This is learning. Then the instructor uses the rest of the period to relate the new vocabulary and new ideas to the particular topic of discussion that day.

This knowledge comes to a head during the final five minutes of the lecture; when the instructors take that time to convey the ideas they have been jumping around through the entire class period and turn them into a whole new thought.

Again this is learning. If this is true, then it is not fair for me or any other student in the class to disrupt the instructor or the student, who is there to learn, by going through the "two minute shuffle."

Showing a little courtesy for the instructors as well as your fellow students will help us all graduate on time.

So let the "two minute shuffle" die like the Halloween celebration, because it only takes one person to start a movement and sooner or later people will follow. Be a leader and do your "shuffling" elsewhere.

attending this year to continue networking with other women from other countries who have the same interests.

"During the conference in Nairobi, the International Network Against Violence on Women (INAVW) was founded.

I would like to meet with women and see what they have done or what they can do together." Ahmad said.

Firestein is attending as a delegate for the Association of Women in Psychology.

"I want to go because of my long history of involvement in feminist and womanist issues, and to visit my brother, who works at the U.S. Embassy in Beijing," Firestein said.

Weidner will attend as a member of the American Association of University Women (AAUW), to articulate the association's goals, improve access to formal education and non-formal education and increase women in society.

"I envision the international dimension of how the nurturing of educational equity for women and girls can have an impact on global problems," Weidner said.

The conference and forum will happen once every 10 years.

The first conference in Mexico City in 1975 led to the declaration of the United Nations Decade for Women (1976-1985).

The second conference took place in Copenhagen, Sweden in 1980, and the third conference was in Nairobi, Kenya in 1985.

The purpose of the conference is to mobilize women and men at both the policy making and grassroots levels to achieve their objectives.

In 1985 it established goals for women such as equal rights legislation, increased life expectancy, higher literacy and expanded employment opportunities.

During this year's meeting, the advancement of women since the last conference will be reviewed.

The Carbondale Chapter of US-China Peoples Friendship Association hosted a reception in the Illinois Room in the Student Center last Monday night.

During the reception, the association collected $150, in addition to a small donation from the USCPFA, to assist with conference expenses.

At the reception Chinese women described improvements in the role of women in China, including greater equality in education.

Kitty Trescott, USCPFA member, gave the women attending the conferences a package of information about China and an honorary membership in the association.

For more information on the Conference, contact Trescott at 549-1555.

If approved, the new degree program would be offered by the College of Technical Careers at SIUC, in collaboration with the School of Medicine.

The proposed Master of Arts Degree in interactive multimedia was designed to develop skills necessary to use new media technologies. It also would provide a training environment for media developers, develop interactive multimedia processes and ensure the role of multimedia in education.

If approved, the new degree program would be offered by the College of Mass Communication and Media Arts at SIUC.

The board also will discuss the renovation of Quigley Hall and the renovation of three parking lots at SIUC.

Budget

Other cuts in this year's budget that will affect Southern Illinois include a $111,912 cut in primary and secondary education in Carbondale, as well as an overall funding loss of $4 million funding loss to Southern Illinois Hospitals, Severns said.

"Admittedly, the downstate districts rely more heavily on the state (education) aid formula; than they do up north," she said. "When we take a hit, we take it twice as hard."

Abortion measures debated in House

The Washington Post WASHINGTON—House Republicans this week are debating a series of measures that opponents are calling the kickoff to a GOP campaign to roll back abortion rights.

The measures include proposals to ban abortions on military bases overseas, to outlaw an abortion procedure used in late-term pregnancies and to ensure that no medical accreditation board could mandate that residency programs teach or pay for instruction in abortion techniques.

"There is a different majority in control," said Rep. Charles T. Canady, R-Fla. "There are issues that in the past never would have received a hearing, but now will receive a hearing."

"This is a bad week for women," said Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., an abortion rights advocate. "This is the week the guns go off."

Only the proposal to prohibit servicewomen from paying for and receiving abortions at military hospitals abroad will reach the floor this week.

brewmaster for about a year after which James will hopefully take over the operation.

The pub plans to produce a variety of brews including pale ale, weizen, stout, porter, red ale and various seasonal brews.

James said the craft is more complex than people might think.

"It's not just mixing stuff up in a bucket," he said.

Tony said the brewing process can last from two to over eight weeks. Brewers must add ingredients at the right stage or risk ruining a whole batch. Water, grain, malt and hops all go into the mix. James said just a little bad yeast in the equipment will spoil a batch. Pinch Penny already offers 16 beers on tap, according to general manager Erik Jensen.

In addition to the microbrewery plans, Pinch Penny is in the process of remodeling its beer garden and added an eight-foot-tall fire-breathing dragon. The copper dragon, that also works as a fountain, was built by Mike Page, an arc welder.

Page also designed and built an ornate copper gate leading into the garden.

Other features of the remodeling include an extra outdoor bar for busier nights and an outside stage for bands.

Tony said business usually increases during summer.

"People are more energetic in the summer and this place has a lot of energy," said. "It draws them in."

Comet reservoir located beyond Neptune

The Baltimore Sun

PITTSBURGH—Pushing the Hubble Space Telescope to its limits, astronomers have detected what they say are more than two dozen Halley-sized comets in a great comet reservoir beyond the orbit of Neptune.

If they're right, it provides important evidence for the existence of the Kuiper Belt, a vast region beyond Neptune long suspected as the source of many familiar comets that periodically swing by the inner planets and around the sun.

It also represents a remarkable performance by Hubble: The comets are incredibly small and dim to be seen from such a distance. It's the equivalent of a detecting a 100-watt light bulb at a distance of 4.3 million miles.

"For the first time, we have a direct handle on the population of comets in this outer region. The solar system just got a lot more interesting," said University of Texas astronomer Dr. Anita L. Cochran.

Cochran headed the space telescope's Kuiper Belt Search Team, with Dr. Harold F. Levison and Dr.

Alan Stern, of the Southwest Research Institute in Boulder, Colo., and Dr. Martin Duncan, of Queens University, Ontario.

They reported their findings Wednesday to the 186th meeting of the American Astronomical Society.

The existence of the Kuiper Belt was first theorized in 1951 by Dutch astronomer Gerard Kuiper. It remained only theory until 1992, when astronomers at Stanford University reported finding a 61-mile-wide object just beyond Neptune's orbit.

House Speaker conciliatory in budget reaction

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON—House Speaker Newt Gingrich, striking a conciliatory tone in marked contrast to the initial reactions of most congressional Republicans, on Wednesday promised he will shepherd President Clinton's balanced budget proposal to the House floor for a vote by the Republican-dominated chamber.

Although most of the specifics of the president's spending plan will certainly be defeated, the speaker praised the president for taking "a very encouraging first step" and vowed "to find every good idea" in the proposal "and absorb them" into the GOP's own budget-balancing effort.

Meanwhile, as congressional Democrats continued their harsh and open criticism of the president's efforts at conciliation, it was the Republican leadership—the chairmen of the House and Senate Budget Committees—who met with White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta and Office of Management and Budget Director Alice Rivlin to discuss Clinton's plan.

Emerging from that meeting Wednesday, Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M., who on Tuesday had pronounced himself a "skeptic" of Clinton's plan, told reporters, "we have concluded that this is a serious proposal." Domenici directed congressional staffs to pore over the blueprint and report back within the next day or two.

Just three days after Gingrich, R-Ga., won high marks for engaging in a remarkably civil debate in New Hampshire with the president, the normally combative House speaker muted his clear opposition to the president's budget package.

Police Blotter

• Carbondale police said Gary Lee, 27, of 404 N. Marion St. in Carbondale was arrested about 9:45 a.m. at 404 E. Oak St. in connection with an aggravated robbery that occurred at the ATM machine at Magna Bank, 601 E. Main St. Police said Lee was positively identified as the offender in the incident by the victim. Lee was taken to Jackson County Jail, and was still in jail Wednesday afternoon.

• A fire alarm in Neckers went off at 3 p.m. June 13. Police believe the alarm was activated because of flames emitted from a torch that was being used in the area.

Many congressional newcomers millionaires

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—Many of the freshmen Republicans who rode to victory on a wave of anti-Washington populism last November arrived in Congress with considerable wealth earned through business ventures, lucrative professional practices or profitable investments, according to their financial disclosure statements for 1994.

Nearly one-fourth of the GOP newcomers to the House and Senate reported holdings worth at least $1 million, based on reports released Wednesday. They show that wealthy Republicans in the Class of 1994 owned businesses ranging from an Iowa seed company to a specialized car manufacturer in Michigan—although not all their enterprising colleagues did as well. Others became affluent from work as doctors or professional athletes and from successful investments in real estate and the stock market. The financial statements indicate that the Senate probably boasts the wealthiest freshman, Bill Frist, R-Tenn., a heart and lung surgeon who comes from a prominent Nashville family that owns the nation's largest chain of for-profit hospitals. He has assets valued between $17.2 million and $26.5 million. At least three of 11 first-term Republicans in the Senate and 15 of 73 in the House disclosed assets exceeding $1 million. Besides Frist, the wealthy freshman senators are Michael DeWine, R-Ohio, and James M. Inhofe, R-Okla., who have considerable financial investments. A similar proportion of the freshmen House Democrats who managed to prevail amid the Republican onslaught—three of 13—were similarly wealthy. Millionaires are usually defined by their net worth rather than total assets, but such a precise calculation cannot be made from a disclosure form that groups assets into broad categories of value. The House Republican Class of 1994 includes more wealthy members than the large class of Democratic freshmen in 1992. Most of those Democrats had been public officials in state and local government and their congressional salaries represented their highest annual earnings ever. Former public officials among the new Republicans reported similarly modest incomes, but most of the new Republicans had not served as elected officials and were more likely to have been business owners. Rep. Dick Chrysler, R-Mich., for example, founded a company and accumulated holdings worth at least $4 million.

NFL owners have decided they no longer need insurance of tested back-up QBs

By Bill Plaschke
The Sporting News

For one year they have a clean record. One year.

The start is safe. The fast, expensive cars don't crack up. Nobody drops out, nobody limps away. The champion finishes without a scratch. So what happens? Well, owners decide they no longer need insurance.

If this sounds crazy, understand we are talking about the NFL, where the last truly original idea was the helmet.

After watching Steve Young lead the San Francisco 49ers to the Super Bowl without being seriously injured, many teams have decided their starting quarterbacks can survive next season.

Who needs to spend money on backups? Buy one for pennies, and give the extra money to a nickel back.

Who cares if that backup hasn't thrown an NFL pass in two years? He's not going to be needed anyway, right?

"Every year it's the same, everybody copies the Super Bowl champion," St. Louis Rams General Manager Steve Ortmyer says. "Last year, in terms of Steve Young, the 49ers dodged the bullet. So this year everybody thinks they can be bulletproof."

The results: Seven of the NFL's 30 current backups have not thrown a pass in more than a year.

If something happens to Vinny

Testaverde, the Cleveland Browns' championship-caliber offense could be run by Brad Goebel, a fellow who hasn't thrown an NFL pass in nearly three years.

The New Orleans Saints are supporting Jim Everett with a player who hasn't even been in the league in two seasons, Timm Rosenbach.

If the Buffalo Bills hope to return to the playoffs, either aging Jim Kelly stays sound or they do it with Todd Collins, a rookie second-round draft choice. The same thing is happening in Minnesota, where 38-year-old Warren Moon is supported by Brad Johnson, whose best credentials in three years have been gained overseas against weak competition in this year's World League.

and the rough, Shinnecock presents absolutely no problems.

Ernie Els, who won the U.S. Open last year at Oakmont, played Shinnecock for the first time Sunday. That was enough for him to form an opinion of the place.

"It was really very hard," Els said.

Faldo and Norman arrived last week to begin preparations for their assault on the title neither has won.

U.S. Open

Open notion.

"Obviously this one is more attuned to a European style or more like a links," Faldo said. "I feel comfortable out there."

It was pretty hard to feel too comfortable out there Wednesday. Rain hit Shinnecock for the fourth consecutive day and turned the spectators' walking areas into ankle-deep muck.

Workers dumped 30 truckloads of sand and gravel on the worst spots. The golf course drains well, but there is a chance that soft fairways could make Shinnecock play even longer than its 6,927 yards.

"No one wanted this type of weather, I know that," Ben Crenshaw said. "You want to have it dry and firm. This is going to take a while to dry out."

There is every indication it's also going to take a while to play. The U.S. Golf Association changed tactics for this U.S. Open, mowing the rough around the greens in favor of emphasizing run-off areas.

Raymond Floyd, who won the 1986 Open the last time it was played at Shinnecock, said it's a huge difference in philosophy.

"They have made the slopes where the ball will in fact run off away from the green," he said. "That is going to test some skills."

"Instead of having the high rough just right up to the edge of the green, which helps the player because the rough will catch (golf balls), now you are going to have balls that will run away seven, eight, 10 (feet).

"That is something that is pretty unusual in a U.S. Open setup." But it's entirely in keeping with a links-style setup.

Montgomerie arrived at Shinnecock with a new putter and, once he took a look around, some new confidence.

"I think it does favor the Europeans in that there is no real rough around the greens as it usually is in U.S. Open tournaments," he said.

"There (are) run-offs and so forth and it possibly gives us more opportunity than it has in the past."

As always, Shinnecock boasts wide fairways and small, firm greens, but the rain may have softened the greens a bit. And the biggest factor might well prove to be the wind blowing in from who knows where and generally disrupting all that it touches.

Crenshaw said wind isn't all that bad.

"It is wonderful to have such a golf course that is so exposed to the elements," he said. "You are tested on every conceivable shot during the round."

So other than the rain, the wind, the run-off areas, the small greens

Catcher in the Why

SIUC's Tim Kratochvil ponders mystery of draft-day dreams gone up in smoke

By Erik Helbig
Daily Egyptian Reporter

It looked like a sure thing for SIUC catcher Ken Kratochvil.

Kratochvil, named at the end of the '95 season to the All-Missouri Valley Conference team for the second consecutive year, had been projected by the sports tabloid newspaper Collegiate Baseball as one of three catchers who could possibly be chosen in the first two rounds of this year's Major League Baseball amateur draft.

But in a time when big-league ballplayers are back on the field and the industry is recovering from money disputes, Kratochvil is on the sidelines and trying to recover from the shock of not being drafted at all — and wondering why.

Kratochvil, who says he had contact with both the Chicago White Sox and the Baltimore Orioles this year, was originally listed as the White Sox No. 18 pick, but they backed off when their regional scout deemed him as being unsignable.

It was thought Kratochvil, with a year of eligibility left, was signable only if drafted in the first 10 rounds, Roger Kratochvil, Tim's father said.

Indications are that more than questions about Kratochvil's ability entered into his not being drafted.

"Some people felt like Tim and his father were demanding top-round money," Saluki Head Baseball Coach Dan Callahan said.

Kratochvil denies he set the price of his talents too high, and says he only wanted to be paid commensurate with players with similar talent and draft standing.

"Somehow there was a misunderstanding," Kratochvil said. "I only said that if got drafted in the 10th round I wanted to get paid like others in the 10th round."

Roger Kratochvil, who is a scout with the St. Louis Cardinals, denied playing any part in his son's affairs.

"The only thing that I was involved with was answering the phone and taking down numbers to pass on to Tim," he said.

Kratochvil batted .354 with six home runs this year to follow up his 349, 10-home-run performance in 1995. Kratochvil said some of his numbers will need to improve in order to raise his stock for next year's draft.

"If I could improve on my power numbers and my defense, I can get my stock to go up next year," Kratochvil said.

Both Kratochvil's father and coach Callahan would like to see Tim improve on his defense, too.

"I would like to see him pick up the pace defensively," Callahan said. "He needs to be more consistent on defense to be considered a top-round pick."

While seeing his son ignored in the draft this year was a disappointment, his dad remained optimistic about next year.

"The harder you work, the luckier you get. He's always had to prove himself," Roger Kratochvil said.

MICHAEL J. DIXON — The Daily Egyptian

Tim Kratochvil, a senior from Mt. Olive, works out at Abe Martin Field Wednesday afternoon. After being passed up in pro baseball's amateur draft this year, Kratochvil says he'll return to the baseball Salukis and try to improve his defensive skills before next year's pick session.

Devil's Kitchen top spot to relax, hook a bluegill

Students favor secluded areas

By Jason E. Coyne
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Devil's Kitchen Lake, located in the Crab Orchard Wildlife Refuge, offers camping, fishing and boating opportunities to the public, and Devil's Kitchen Boat Dock and Campground, owned by Steve and Lisa Timcak, plays a central role in those activities.

The Timcaks bought the facility in December of 1990 and have resided at the lake ever since.

"I tend to be protective of the area around the lake," Steve Timcak said. "Occasionally we get people four-wheeling or target shooting in the area."

Both activities are illegal, although hunting is permitted seasonally, Steve Timcak said.

"We run a quiet campground because it is relatively small and we live on the premises," Steve Timcak said. "We let younger people know that this isn't the place to start up their night after 10 p.m."

"Because it's small here, there is a need for quiet from everyone after 10 p.m. or everyone is disturbed, so we try to emphasize that," Lisa Timcak added.

The lake itself has a series of inlets reachable by drives which allow easy access for anglers looking to cast from shore, and earlier this year one woman caught a 1 1/3-pound bluegill while bank fishing.

"This refuge [Crab Orchard] in general is very accessible to visitors. There is about a 50/50 ratio of accessible areas, and trails to inaccessible ones," Steve Timcak said.

"Others throughout the nation may have a 99-percent inaccessibility rate."

The lake hosted the Little Egypt Open earlier this year, Lisa Timcak said, but added fishing has been affected so far this season by the weather.

"Bass fishing has been excellent, though," she added.

"There was a lake-record bass (10 lbs., 13 oz.) dragged out of the lake in May," she said.

Richard Kunz of Marion said he has been fishing Devil's Kitchen Lake for the past five or six years and is spending the week camping.

"The trout bring me out here normally, but we're bass fishing tonight," Kunz said.

"We fished here Saturday and didn't do too well, but normally we do."

Roxanne Minkus, a graduate student in physical education, said she enjoys the serene setting around the lake.

"It's a pretty secluded area and you can hang out or lay out on the rocks at the water's edge," Minkus said. "We don't swim there, though, because it's not permitted."

The mixture of people coming to Devil's Kitchen is split evenly among St. Louisans, Chicagoans and those who live in the Southern Illinois area, Lisa Timcak said.

Shinnecock should test Open field

Los Angeles Times

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y.—As he walked in out of the rain pelting Shinnecock Hills Golf Club, Nick Faldo had to agree he is one of the favorites to win the U.S. Open.

Yes, there was something oddly familiar about this cold rain.

"Well, this is a typically British summer's day," Faldo said. "This U.S. Open is more British than the British Open."

That may not be your cup of tea, but America's national golf championship begins Thursday at storied Shinnecock, a long, virtually treeless, European-links style in/out on wind-swept and, so far, this week, wet patch of grass and sand on Long Island.

It might as well be in Scotland or England. Many believe the layout gives an edge to players such as Faldo, Bernhard Langer, Nick Price, Greg Norman and Colin Montgomerie.

Faldo, a three-time British Open champion, didn't dispute this U.S. OPEN, page 11

$15 athletic fee increase approved

Hike to begin in 1996: Athletic fee increase allows students to enter home games for free.

By Donita Pally
Daily Egyptian Reporter

SIUC students will be paying higher athletic fees this fall despite voting two to one against the increase in a referendum last spring. The SIU Board of Trustees approved an $8 per semester increase for fiscal year 1996 at its May 11 meeting. Students taking 12 or more hours this fall will pay $46 instead of $38 in athletic fees. The increase will total $15 over two years starting with the $8 increase in fiscal year 1996 and a $7 increase in fiscal year 1997.

Part-time students' athletic fee increases will depend on the number of credit hours they are taking. Students will pay more in fees but will receive free admission to home games.

Duane Sherman, president of the SIUC Undergraduate Student Government, said he is disappointed with the increase, especially after the referendum.

"We spoke up and said what we had to say. We were hurt, but we don't always get what we want," he said.

The increase is SIUC's response to a recommendation by the Illinois Board of Higher Education to stop state funding for University sports programs.

IBHE is expected to vote on a resolution to rescind the recommendation in July, but SIUC President John Guyon said SIU will retain the fee increase regardless of the board's decision.

"The school had to take a position and it did. We have to stand by that decision," Guyon said.

SIUC associate athletic director Chariotte West has said in the past if the IBHE resolution were passed, she would ask Guyon to reduce the student athletic fee increase.

West could not be reached for comment on Guyon's statement.

SIUC assistant athletic director Nancy Bandy said even with the fee increase, the athletics budget will not increase significantly. She also said the increase does not compensate for all the losses.

"People have the wrong impression that this is going to be a significant increase. It's not an increase, only a way to remain status quo," Bandy said.

The money generated from the fee increase will be added to the athletic fund to compensate for the transfer of state funds.

State funds removed from athletics will be used in the area of technology support, Guyon said.

Gus Bode

Gus says A winning football season may also increase attendance at games.

BOT passes new degree programs

By Aaron Butler
DE Associate Editor

Two new degree programs at SIUC may be available as early as 1996, and a new computer center will arrive by the end of this year.

The SIU Board of Trustees approved the programs and the center at its regular meeting Thursday in St. Louis, and found time to take a second look at a proposed four-year tuition and fee plan.

The master of arts degree in interactive media and a bachelor of science degree in primary care medicine now await funding requested from the Illinois Board of Higher Education.

The $1 million computer center, to be funded with revenues from telephone and data service, will be open by the end of the year.

Overcrowding causes fight at Pinch

Lack of bouncers, power outage cause of problems patrons say

By Carey Jane Atherton

Due to havoc and mayhem at Pinch Penny Pub's reggae night, Wednesday, the 21 and under crowd who were in attendance will have to find another form of Wednesday night entertainment.

Ann Karayiannis, part owner of Pinch Penny Pub, 700 E. Grand Ave., said the bar had a much larger crowd than expected, which created crowd control problems. However Karayiannis said only five percent of Wednesday's crowd were under the age of 21.

"We really had no definite idea of what our capacity was and they (doormen) let too many people in," Karayiannis said.

According to Karayiannis part of the problem was because the city had not been out to assess the capacity.

Jimmy Karayiannis, assistant manager of Pinch Penny Pub, said the police had to disperse a crowd that had gathered outside of the bar, because they did not want to pay the $3 cover charge.

Eric Brenco, a senior in philosophy from Crystal Lake, said he thought there was a definite shortage of bouncers. He said he saw two fights first hand and the bouncer's reaction time left enough room for people to get seriously hurt.

"The reggae band said it was a peace and love atmosphere, but all the violence didn't even promote a friendly atmosphere," Brenco said.

Scott Fogg, of Carbondale, said he found it interesting that not a single bouncer showed up during a fight he saw which lasted four or five minutes.

Pinch Penny Pub also experienced power failure for a few minutes during the night which added

Purdue professor discusses dangers of CFC's

by Alan Schnepf

The solution to halting the depletion of the ozone layer is not as simple as removing the infamous chlorofluorocarbons that caused the problem, a Purdue professor said during a lecture at Lawson Hall Thursday.

Joseph S. Francisco, a professor of chemistry and earth and atmospheric sciences at Purdue University, told an audience of about 60 people that the implications of CFC replacement compounds must be explored before they are considered safe.

CFCs, a group of compounds that were widely used for refrigeration and many other things since their discovery in the 40s, are being phased out because of their ozone-destroying properties, he said.

Francisco said one CFC molecule could destroy a million ozone molecules.

Ozone, a molecule made up of three oxygen atoms, makes up a layer in the stratosphere that filters out ultra-violet light which can cause bond rupturing in DNA, Francisco said. The rupturing can lead to skin cancer, he said.

He said the hole noticed in this protective layer several years ago is a serious environmental concern.

"We've introduced 500 kilotons of the stuff in the atmosphere," he said.

There is a lot of research being done to find replacements for CFCs that do not destroy ozone, Francisco said.

These substances are tested to determine their "ozone depletion
