ISSC under budget gun

By John Baldwin
Staff Writer

The Illinois State Scholarship Commission will need to eliminate one of its financial aid programs and cut back on others if it doesn't receive more funding than it would under Gov. James Thompson's proposed budget.

Thompson's budget is based on not having a tax increase next fiscal year. Under that scenario, Thompson has proposed that higher education receive the same amount of funding in 1989 as it did this year.

ISSC spokesman Robert Clement said that the Merit Recognition Scholarship program, in which $500 awards are given to college freshmen and sophomores for high academic achievement, would need to be eliminated under Thompson's proposed budget. This could affect as many as 25,000 1987 and 1988 high school graduates.

Clement also said that between 5,000 and 6,000 students might not receive funds from the Monetary Award Program, which provides awards for needy students. He attributed this partly to the need to move the application deadline up three months, which would eliminate students who start college late in the year and apply later than other students.

The National Guard-Naval Militia Grant and Illinois Veteran Grant programs also would lose $500,000. Clement said the money would need to be provided by the individual universities because the people who receive awards are entitled to them by law.

"Students are going to have to be looking for other forms of financial aid" if the ISSC doesn't receive more money, Clement said.

Local legislators have said they support a 0.5-percent increase in the state income tax to increase funding for higher education.

The chancellor's office is supporting a tax increase, but it is not designating a specific amount.

Simon hits home in Illinois primary

By Dana DeBeaumont
Staff Writer

Sen. Paul Simon will return to his stomping grounds to kick off his Illinois presidential campaign at 9 a.m. Friday in the Marion Holldome.

Simon will give a speech, then answer questions from the crowd for 45 minutes, Tom Sweet, campaign coordinator for the 22nd district, said. Simon has a 10 a.m. plane to Chicago to catch, Sweet added.

Delegate candidates for Simon, including political science professor Barbara Brown, will be introduced at the rally. Simon is the only scheduled speaker, Sweet said.

A victory in the March 15 Illinois primary could give Simon the momentum he needs to win the Democratic nomination, Glenn Richardson, president of Southern for Simon, said.

Simon is scheduled to spend today in his Makanda home before hunting for voters in every "corner, nick and crannie" of Illinois, Michael Daly, a Simon spokesman in Chicago, said.

Daly said Simon is starting his homestate campaign in his home district because it's tradition. Simon also will be campaigning in the Carbondale area on March 14, the day before the Illinois primary, he added.

Simon plans to leave Illinois only once in the next two weeks — to be introduced to a joint session of the Wisconsin Legislature in Madison, Daly said.

Simon announced Feb. 24 that he would skip Super Tuesday campaigning to devote his time and money campaigning in Illinois and other major industrial states, such as Wisconsin, Michigan and New York, whose

State department suspends payment of canal revenues

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department, in another step to force the ouster of Panama's leader, Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, moved Wednesday to suspend payments to the troubled country of revenues generated by the Panama Canal.

The action follows a proclamation by Eric Arturo Delvalle, who Noriega ousted last week as Panama's figurehead president, for a freeze on all Panamanian assets outside of the country.

Tuesday, the State Department said the request was "a legitimate action of the constitutional government" of Panama. Delvalle is in hiding in his country, but his representatives in Washington have asked the United States for help in suspending payments to Noriega's government that are generated by fees paid by ships using the Panama Canal.

"We have a request from the Delvalle government to put the canal payments in escrow," department spokesman Phyllis Oakley said. "We are consulting with the Treasury and the Canal Commission on how to proceed with this request."

NATO calls for cuts in Soviet bloc forces

BRUSSELS, Belgium (UPI) — NATO embraced a new strategy Wednesday for military security in Europe, demanding lopsided cuts in Soviet bloc tanks and artillery to end a threatening imbalance in conventional forces. President Reagan hailed the move as "a major step forward."

In a declaration issued at the midpoint of a two-day summit at the sprawling NATO headquarters, leaders of the 16-nation alliance, meeting for the first time since 1982, reaffirmed their arms control agenda and gave impetus to a new formula for East-West parity "from the Atlantic to the Urals."

Reagan, seeking to assure allies abroad and conservatives at home that European security is not endangered by the superpower treaty eliminating intermediate-range Nuclear Forces, welcomed the statement as "a major step forward."

"We're determined to ensure that the alliance's defenses remain strong," he told reporters. "We'll continue to cooperate on better and more efficient ways to maintain our defenses. Second, we also seek to strengthen stability through effective and verifiable conventional arms reductions."

Geopolitics, rather than grand military strategy, was the heart of the NATO declaration. It mostly ducked sensitive decisions about allied defense needs in a bid instead to send strong signals to Moscow and to Western constituencies at home.

The intent was not only to project a united Western front

Khomeini urges faith, unity after Iraqi missile strikes

MANAMA, Bahrain (UPI) — Iranian spiritual leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini appealed for "faith and unity" Wednesday in the face of a deadly Iraqi missile blitz in which four more missiles slammed into Tehran. Iraq also struck the Iranian holy city of Qom Wednesday, while Iran fired two missiles into Baghdad. Iraqi radio said several people were killed and wounded and homes and shops destroyed in the attacks — the seventh and eighth by Iran on Baghdad this week.

Britain admits military will never crush IRA

BELFAST, Ireland (UPI) — Britain acknowledged Wednesday it will never defeat the Irish Republican Army by military means alone and announced new proposals to combat discrimination against Catholics in Northern Ireland. Tom King, Britain's cabinet minister in charge of mostly Protestant Northern Ireland, announced proposals designed to combat anti-Catholic job discrimination in the province, where Catholics have 2 ½ times the unemployment rate of Protestants.

Captors of West German seek prisoner swap

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — The captors of a West German industrial engineer said Wednesday that negotiations aided by Syria might enable them to trade their hostage for two Shiite Moslem activists jailed in West Germany. The captors, in a statement, also threatened to strike at West German targets if Bonn failed to meet its commitments in the negotiations. The announcement came a day after two Scandinavian U.N. employees were released by the previously unknown terrorist group.

West German raids net 4 neo-Nazi leaders

STUTTGART, West Germany (UPI) — Six hundred West German police raided 92 homes in 61 cities Wednesday in a crackdown on neo-Nazis, a police spokesman said. The police spokesman said four ringleaders were arrested and a large amount of incriminating material was confiscated during the raids. The raids, directed against members of the banned National Socialist Action Front, came a day after the front's charismatic leader was released from jail after three years behind bars.

Reagan to veto civil rights bill if it stays same

BRUSSELS, Belgium (UPI) — President Reagan said Wednesday he will veto a bill before Congress that would restore broad civil rights protections, if it comes to his desk in its present form. Reagan said his administration has supported efforts to end discrimination against women in American society, but denounced the legislation. He said it would interfere with the free exercise of religion by failing to protect the religious tenets of schools closely identified with religious organizations.

Illinois wants super collider, competes hard

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Illinois has the most to lose if another state lands the $4.4 billion superconducting super collider and offers the government a tidy savings if it is the winner, civic leaders said Wednesday. The super collider, which would be the world's largest atom smasher, faces pivotal decisions this year. Congress must decide whether to build the project and whether to appropriate the $363 million requested to begin construction.

FDIC: For banks it was a forgettable year

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Commercial banks in 1987 suffered their worst year since the Great Depression with a record 184 failures and a 80 percent plunge in earnings, the government said Wednesday. L. William Seidman, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., said banks had a forgettable year. Seidman said the banking industry's poorest performance since 1934 was because large banks set aside huge amounts of reserves to cover potential losses from loans to Latin American nations.

Nuns for abortion reject order, face dismissal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two nuns, facing dismissal from their order for supporting access to legal abortion, rejected a last appeal Wednesday by their superiors to bow to church teaching and end their public activities on the issue. The rejection of the second and final canonical warning issued to the Sisters Barbara Ferraro and Patricia Hussey begins procedures to expel them from the religious order to which they have belonged for more than two decades.

Homosexuality, murder probe key factors

By Curtis Winston
Staff Writer

Former SIU-C cinema and photography chairperson Timc'hy Lyons has resigned as dean of Youngstown State University's School of Fine and Performing Arts amid a murder case in which his former homosexual lover is a suspect.

Brian Scott Blevins, 22, was arrested as a suspect in the Feb. 12 murder of YSU senior Kenmore B. Drake in Lyons' Austintown, Ohio home. An article in the Youngstown Vindicator Feb. 21, one day after Blevins' arrest, reported that police alleged Blevins had been Lyons' lover.

Information about the murder and Lyons' resignation was provided by Youngstown Vindicator staff member Tricia McChesney, formerly a reporter with the Daily Egyptian.

AUSTINTOWN POLICE wouldn't release any information about the case.

Lyons said his resignation, which was announced Tuesday, came about because he feared public reaction to his homosexuality would prevent him from doing a "good job in his position as dean."

At a news conference

Wednesday, Lyons said that while his sexuality "was essential to the police case," in relationship to his job it was "damned irrelevant."

Lyons denied that YSU officials pressured him into resigning. "I don't resent the university," he said. "I resent the fact that people are allowing homosexuality issues to get in the way of my job."

LYONS SAID he had a six-week romance with Blevins, who is not a YSU student, and that he broke off the relationship because Blevins showed violent tendencies.

Lyons said he and Drake "were not lovers, but just friends." He said he would not have a relationship with a student.

He said he was uncertain whether he would stay in academics, but added he would leave the Youngstown area after the murder trial was over.

Blevins is being held in the Mahoning County jail, with bond set at $250,000. A preliminary hearing is set for March 8.

At the time of the murder, Lyons was in Los Angeles visiting his daughters. Drake had been employed by Lyons as a "house sitter."

DRAKE, 21, a secondary business major, was acquainted with Lyons because of word-processing work he had done in Lyons' office. He is said to have learned of the house-sitting job through an advertisement in the YSU student newspaper.

Police reports said Drake's body was found Feb. 16 in a second floor bedroom with more than 50 stab wounds to the head, face, neck, chest and an arm. The wounds were inflicted by a pair of scissors found in the home. The body was clothed but barefoot, the reports said.

The Mahoning County coroner's office has set the time of death at sometime during the evening of Feb. 12. Lyons' had left for Los Angeles earlier that afternoon.

Lyons was chairperson of the SIU-C Department of Cinema and Photography from summer 1980 until summer 1985, when he accepted the dean's post at YSU.

By Professor: Poet explores identity, two worlds

By Richard Nunez
Entertainment Editor

Derek Walcott is a poet divided between two identities.

A professor of creative writing at Boston University, Walcott also is a native of the West Indies. His feeling of alienation from both the first and third worlds he lives in is a major force in a lot of his poetry.

Walcott will read from his works at 8 tonight in the Student Center Ballroom B.

Walcott explores his identity as an exiled black writer who recognizes and appreciates the differences between his two worlds, said Rodney Jones, associate professor in English. He often has taken this personal vision and applied it to the grandeur history of Black people.

"His themes are very much the individual in a complex social structure," Jones, said. Walcott applies his dilemma to involve a much more universal struggle.

Jones said Walcott's poetry is at times intensely focused on personal subjects, but that the reader can still see the plight of a whole generation of people being involved.

"He's very objective when he analyzes himself," Jones said. "You don't feel his poetry issues from the self."

Jones also said Walcott "loves the language and he seems to delight in what words can do for him," Jones said. "There is a very, very specialized attention to language in his poetry."

"He brings to poetry a new sense of what language can do — there is a specialized way in which he uses words. But more important is his ability to bring together the individual and social orders," Jones said.

"He should be a pleasure to listen to," Jones said. "There is a wonderful cadence in his voice, as well as his poetry."

Police get tough on domestic violence

THE HARD-LINE STANCE Carbondale police are taking toward domestic violence is an overdue step toward checking this horrendous situation.

This new policy replaces a more lenient policy that had been in effect since 1983. Now, rather than viewing domestic violence as a family matter, police will approach it as a violation of state law.

Although it's encouraging to see the police adopt this new perspective, it's also baffling as to why it took so long.

The Illinois Domestic Violence Act of 1983 classifies criminal violence between family or household members, including altercations between unmarried, divorced or separated couples, as domestic violence. Aggressive enforcement will act as a deterrent to criminals who in the past may have gotten off with nothing more than a lecture.

STATISTICS HAVE PROVEN that arrest is a powerful deterrent to the cowardly crimes of wife beating and child abuse. A study in Minneapolis showed only 19 percent of people prosecuted for domestic violence repeated their offenses within six months. Unpunished subjects became repeat offenders in 35 percent of the cases.

But statistics alone cannot convey the terror that accompanies domestic violence. Too many victims have shouldered their grim burdens alone, fearful of further physical or mental abuse, or both, for reporting the crimes committed against them. The fear of involving outside parties in domestic violence has kept the lid on many homes boiling with tension so dense the household threatens to explode.

WHATEVER THE REASONS for allowing such despicable behavior to go unpunished, victims have to realize that in order to help themselves, they may have to hurt someone they care about or once cared about.

Although they procrastinated for nearly five years before assuming this new toughness, Carbondale police finally have adopted the right policy. Perhaps those hesitant to report an abuser will be encouraged by the firmness of the police stance on this issue. It may be painful to turn someone in, but sacrifices sometimes are necessary to bring about justice.

In spite of the turbulent atmospheres some victims may have grown accustomed to, every human being has an undeniable right to come home to an environment where fear of abuse doesn't permeate every nook and cranny with the intensity of a private nuclear threat.

Carbondale police have made it clear they will defend this right.

Opinions from elsewhere

The Idaho Statesman (Boise)

Push is quickly coming to shove for democracy in Panama. The question for the United States is what, if anything, should be done.

Military strongman Gen. Manuel Noriega, under indictment in Florida for drug trafficking and related offenses, isn't about to let loose of power. His military cronies in the National Assembly ousted President Eric Delvalle after he tried and failed to fire Gen. Noriega.

Gen. Noriega has turned the isthmus into a Central American clearinghouse for narcotics being shipped from South America to the United States...

Having focused on Nicaragua for seven years, the Reagan Administration apparently has left a sleazy drug dealer free to purvey poison. To plug that rat hole, and to protect the strategic import of the canal, the United States should act at once to leverage this low-life from office.

Letters

Letter's critics misinterpreted it; welfare recipients need incentive

I am responding to Vicki Aponte's letter that appeared in the Feb. 24 Daily Egyptian.

Once again, a few people have completely misinterpreted a minor reference to be the principal meaning of my previous letter regarding abortion and why it should not be subsidized by the federal government. The expression I employed regarding the poor in America — "pigs" — is not at all my personal perception of the impoverished in this country, but the belief of those in Congress who consistently approve welfare programs as a solution: liberals (one only has to peruse the voting record of Congress to find this assertion to be true).

Why do those liberals who attempt to pass themselves off as compassionate believe the poor in this country are "pigs?" Among the views of these politicians is the assumption that the condition of the destitute in America is hopeless.

This assumption can be inferred because the liberals traditionally have addressed social programs as impecunious by creating more welfare programs and appropriating more money, rather than attempting to adopt a novel solution: motivation through incentive. When people on welfare are content that, regardless of whether they attempt to improve their lives, a check will still arrive every month, what is the incentive to seek a new way of life? Simply, there isn't one.

Motivation through incentive is an alternative solution espoused by most conservatives, whereby the impoverished are supported by local and state government, hence reducing the burden on the federal government. This can be accomplished by reducing crime and improving education by encouraging genuinely qualified educators, who also are allowed to instill some kind of values or morals in students, to teach in inner-city schools (which will occur only when crime is ameliorated).

Of course, these are only two methods of bettering the lives of the poor, but they have not been attempted seriously or successfully because liberals in Congress have poor track records of decreasing crime, and will not allow values or morals to be taught in public schools. It is imperative that formal institutions pave the way for informal institutions to effect change in the poor community's view regarding its own true potential, thereby creating new incentive (self-sufficiency) which will inevitably result in new motivation.

Contrary to that which Ms. Aponte asserts, I certainly would not "...rather see people starve." I am, however, very reluctant to allow money from the federal government to act as a panacea for the financial quandaries experienced by America's impoverished. If we throw money at the poor, the only incentive we create is the incentive to wait for next month's welfare check, and that is not acceptable. — Brian J. Anderson, junior, political science

Registration stickers not just for parking

As a member of the Parking and Traffic Appeals Board, I've seen many cases of students getting parking tickets for having no decal. The main excuse is: "I only drive to campus once or twice a semester and do not feel the need to pay $15 when I can feed the meter."

The problem is that the decals aren't for parking, but for registration. The parking regulations state that anyone affiliated with the University must display a registration decal to operate a motor vehicle on campus. This allows you to park, but the main emphasis is registration.

The Feb. 23 Daily Egyptian article entitled "Hogan defends tight parking policy" continues the myth that these decals are for parking. I hope that this letter will inform students who may fall into this confusion of terms. Even more, I hope the name of registration decal will be used more readily in the future. But in the meantime, don't park on campus without a registration sticker. — Chuck Hagerman, vice-president of the Undergraduate Student Organization

One coconut too many has fallen on the heads of the Reaganites

By Toby Eckert
Staff Writer

On television shows, amnesia usually is induced by a hard blow to the head by a heavy object, often a coconut. Judging by the statements that have poured forth from Reagan administration officials in the past year, it's obvious President Reagan brought a few palm trees with him when he settled in Washington.

Besides the palm tree that must tower over the entrance to the White House Rose Garden, palm trees apparently are blooming outside the Pentagon, the Justice Department and the State Department. And the heavy fruit borne by these trees seems to be dropping daily on the heads of officials at said departments.

The first instance of collective amnesia came after the disclosure of secret arms sales to Iran and the subsequent diversion of the profits to the Nicaraguan Contras. No one could remember whether Reagan had approved the arms sale or, indeed, if he had been told about it at all. Reagan wasn't talking, but his perplexing statements about the affair (It was an arms-for-hostages deal. Then, several days later it was not a means of getting American hostages in Lebanon free.) made it apparent that a 50 pounder had recently visited the president from on high.

Then came the trial of former presidential aide Michael Deaver. Deaver was found guilty of illegally peddling his political influence on behalf of clients of his public relations firm. But, lo and behold, he could not recall meetings with high-ranking government officials during which he dropped names and twisted influential arms. Nor could he remember the subject matter of phone calls to these officials.

Deaver tried to blame his memory lapse on his quart-a-day Scotch habit. No go, said the judge. Deaver should have stuck to the coconut defense.

Then came revelations about Attorney General Edwin Meese's knowledge of a scheme to pay the Israelis off so they wouldn't attack a planned Iraqi oil pipeline. Some acquaintances of acquaintances of Meese were underwriting the project and made their plans to bribe Israeli officials known to the attorney general.

Meese should have ordered an investigation of the scheme. But he doesn't remember seeing the "for your eyes only" memo sent to him by a key player in the scheme. I suppose blows to the head can cause blurred vision as well as memory loss.

Judging by the number of conflict-of-interest cases Meese currently is involved in, the president must have had an extra-large palm tree planted right over Meese's desk.

The Noriega scandal also seems to be a product of the coconut theory — in reverse. That is, administration of-officials had suffered amnesia known for years that Gen. Noriega's shady dealings until a bonk on the head brought them to their senses.

The State Department has known for years that Gen. Noriega, the de facto ruler of Panama, is a two-bit dictator. But he was America's two-bit dictator. He allowed Panama to be a weigh station for supplies to the Contras. At the behest of Vice President George Bush, Noriega warned Cuban dictator Fidel Castro not to take the invasion of Grenada personally.

Noriega also gladly kept tabs on visiting congressmen for the CIA. It is highly unlikely agency officials weren't aware of Noriega's illegal dealings. But the officials recalled little about the general's drug running until recently. Obviously the one tried-and-true cure for amnesia — another blow to the head — was behind this sudden total recall.

By and large, the press and the public have accepted the Reagan administration's amnesia diagnosis. After all, who could be expected to remember so much information of such vital importance to the nation? But there's one thing the press and the public is forgetting: Palm trees don't grow well in the Northeast.

Perhaps Gary Hart should have taken a cue from the administration when he ran into problems with Donna Rice. After all, palm trees are profuse on Bimini.

Why should students be flunked just because of a little illiteracy?

It figured that Grace Dawson would back down. Her idea was just too radical and harsh.

Ms. Dawson is the principal of a Chicago elementary school who shocked the city and received national news coverage by demoting students who couldn't read.

When she did this to 250 children, almost a third of the students at the Beethoven elementary school, their parents were outraged.

They picketed. They kept their kids home from school. They demanded that the principal be replaced. And, of course, they told the TV crews how terrible and unjust it was.

Who can blame them? Sure, it's unfortunate that a kid isn't learning to read. But is that any reason to flunk him?

And why should their kids be singled out? For years, many of Chicago's elementary and high schools have routinely graduated students who could barely read their diplomas.

So the indignation of the parents at the Beethoven school seems justified. Why, out of the blue, should a principal suddenly single out their kids with the demand that they learn to read?

Sure, reading can be a handy skill. If you can't read the TV listings, you waste a lot of time flipping through the channels.

But is illiteracy really a justification to demote or flunk someone? Doesn't showing up for class most of the time count for anything?

Mike Royko

Tribune Media Services

It seems even more unfair if you consider that most of these angry parents apparently didn't know that their kids weren't learning to read. I assume they were unaware of the problem, since few of them had come to the school to ask: "Hey, why can't my kid read and what can I do about it?"

And when they were warned months ago that their kids were slouches, barely 10 percent of them showed up for a meeting with the principal.

Not that this is a parental responsibility. Absolutely not. As we all know, it's the job of the schools to make sure a child learns to read. The job of the parent is to make sure the kid gets up in the morning, puts on some clothing, and goes to school.

There are some educational radicals — and I suspect Principal Dawson might be one of them — who actually believe that parents should do more than shove the kid out the door in the morning and provide him with a functioning TV set in the evening.

If the radicals had their way, parents would be expected to sit down with their children and ask them to read aloud from a textbook, or show them whatever homework they've done.

In other words, the radicals want the parents to harass their own children and do the teachers' work for them.

And that's not the worst of it. There are some principals and teachers, and once again I suspect that Miss Dawson is one of them, who would want parents to come to the school and discuss learning problems their children might be having.

That, of course, is a trap. It could lead to the ultimate imposition — asking the parents to use discipline, accept responsibilities, and actually get involved in the child's education.

So I'm pleased that the parents at the Beethoven School didn't give in to the tyrannical tactics of the principal. They stood their ground and now most of the kids who were demoted aren't going to be demoted after all.

They will probably be promoted right on skeddy! Then they'll awl gradyate and go on to hyskool. An liv haply evr after.

but to counter a Soviet peace offensive that has put pressure on the alliance in general and the coalition government of West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl in particular. West Germany is on the front line facing Soviet-led Warsaw Pact forces.

Dutch Prime Minister Ruud Lubbers said the NATO statement would show the Kremlin "that the European countries give high priority to conventional arms control."

The principles adopted by the summit mirrored those adopted a year ago by NATO foreign ministers and reflected European concern about security in the post-INF era.

"The Soviet Union's military presence in Europe, at a level far in excess of its needs for self-defense, directly challenges our security as well as our hopes for change in the political situation in Europe," they said. "Thus, the conventional imbalance in Europe remains at the core of Europe's security concerns."

The document drew on what U.S. officials regard as two key precedents of the INF treaty in demanding "highly asymmetrical reductions" in Soviet bloc tanks and artillery — the weaponry that would spearhead an invasion of Western Europe — and on-site inspection of deployed forces.

In this context, "asymmetry" means the Soviets would have to carry out far more reductions in conventional forces than NATO.

In the INF accord, the Soviets for the first time agreed to dismantle more weapons and at a faster rate than the United States. The provisions for unprecedented on-site verification to guard against cheating were considered a model for future agreements.

Moreover, the allies renewed their proposal for talks on conventional forces to be held under the umbrella of the 35-nation Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe so they would assume a broader political dimension than the moribund 14-year-old Vienna negotiations on Mutually Balanced Force Reductions.

"Our aim," the leaders said, "will be to establish a situation in Europe in which force postures as well as the numbers and deployments of weapon systems no longer make surprise attack and large-scale offensive action a feasible option."

primaries, or caucuses will take place after March 15.

A carpool to the Marion rally, sponsored by Southern for Simon, will leave from the Student Center at 8:30 a.m. Friday, Richardson said.

Anyone who has a car or is interested in going is welcome, he added. Some of the cars will be decorated and it will be a "pretty spirited event," Richardson said.

"Simon has staked a lot of his campaign in Illinois," he said.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, a native of Chicago, most likely will be Simon's toughest competitor in the Illinois primary. Jackson has had impressive finishes in Minnesota, Iowa, Maine and Vermont. An ABC-Washington Post poll of the Super Tuesday states shows Jackson in a tie for the lead with Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis with 25 percent.

In New York, U.S. District Court Judge Lloyd McMahon issued a temporary restraining order Wednesday blocking the Republic National Bank from transferring Panamanian government funds into Noriega's control.

The order, to be followed by a hearing Monday, came in response to a suit filed by Juan Soza, Panama's ambassador to the United States, who said Noriega had planned to transfer $10 million from the bank Wednesday.

Noriega denies the charges and vows to stay in power.

It is estimated that Panama may have $50 million in assets in U.S. financial institutions and is to receive a payment of $7 million next month from the Panama Canal Commission.

Don Giovanni (left), played by Clay Hulsey, threatens his servant, Leporello, played by Bruce Baumer, in a scene from the opera "Don Giovanni."

McLeod treats 'Giovanni' well

Best local opera done in long time

By Richard Nunez
Entertainment Editor

McLeod Theater's production of "Don Giovanni" is a sublime rendition of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart's classic opera.

From the opening swells of Mozart's music to Don Giovanni's spectacular fall to hell, "Don Giovanni" may be the best opera production to hit the Southern Illinois area in a

Times & Tickets

Leporello may deliberately be portraying a victim makes him all the more appealing.

Throughout the opera scenes range from the powerfully dramatic to the very humorous.

In one scene Leporello shows Donna Elvira, who had been seduced by Don Giovanni, a lengthy book containing all of Don Giovanni's conquests. When Donna Elvira grabs the book, the pages unfold to nearly the whole length of the stage.

Choosing to sing the opera mostly in Italian may have been a wise decision on Best's part, because it seems to capture the spirit of the opera. The singers do a wonderful job. There are powerful arias sung by Paul Asfour (Don Ottavio), L'Anne Goodson (Donna Elvira) and Denise Finneran (Donna Anna).

About two-thirds of the opera is sung in Italian and the recitatives, accompanied by a harpsichord, are sung in English, allowing the audience to follow the story line.

But the story line probably would not be too hard to follow if it were sung entirely in Italian, because all the actors do a good job of illustrating the events through their passionate singing and acting.

vant Leporello along, flees his home to escape certain punishment and continue his exploits.

Clay Hulsey is a powerful and commanding presence as Don Giovanni. His rich voice and gallant acting seem perfect for the role of the relentless seducer.

Bruce Baumer's portrayal of the servant Leporello also is very good. Baumer's looks and gestures are perfect for the bumping, but very funny Leporello.

Leporello is a sympathetic character who is ordered by Don Giovanni to aid him in his exploits. But the idea that

A Review

Directed by Richard Best, professor of music, the production is a brilliant, fine-tuned handling of a complex work of art.

Based on the legendary Spanish lover Don Juan, the opera follows the exploits of treachery and seduction of Don Giovanni.

After slaying Il Commendatore, who had rushed in to defend the honor of his daughter Donna Anna, Don Giovanni, dragging his ser-

Journalism school to dedicate Master Editors Hall of Fame

Master Editors expected to attend display unveiling

By Curtis Winston
Staff Writer

Finishing touches are being put on the new Master Editors Hall of Fame as it awaits its dedication at 11 a.m. on March 11 in the School of Journalism wing of the Communications Building.

The Hall of Fame display case contains photos of the 77 editors who have been awarded the Master Editor-Golden em award. The "em" was a metal slug used by newspaper typesetters to put a space in a type line.

EMERITUS PROFESSOR Howard R. Long, as journalism department chairperson, established the Master Editor award in 1964.

W. Manion Rice, project chairperson, said most of the Master Editors were — and some still are — editor-publishers of small town newspapers in Southern Illinois.

"A lot of them grew up as kids in a print shop," Rice said.

Rice said editors from central Illinois and southeastern Missouri newspapers also have been recipients of the award.

Forty-four of the Master Editors are still living. Rice said about 20 have confirmed that they will attend the dedication. About 10 family members and other representatives of deceased Master Editors also are expected to attend, he said.

"THERE WILL probably be more," Rice said. "Some will never say a word and not show, some will never say a word and show up."

The Hall of Fame pays tribute to 77 Master Editors, most of which were editor-publishers of small town newspapers in Southern Illinois.

After the Hall of Fame is completed, it will be veiled until the dedication ceremony. The hall will be veiled with front pages from the newspapers the members worked on, Rice said.

Rice said he began working on the Hall of Fame project last May. Most of the work involved finding the pictures and buying the materials for the display case, he said.

The Hall of Fame "should have been done in the seventies," Rice said. "It'll be easier to keep it going now."

THE DISPLAY case has room for 27 more pictures. Usually, three master editor awards are given each year, so the hall will take about about nine years to fill, Rice said. "I don't want to worry about (building another display case) right now," he said.

The dedication ceremony will be held in conjunction with the 11th annual Howard K. Long lecture. Long served as journalism department chairperson from 1954 to 1970, and School of Journalism director from 1970 to 1972.

In 1961, Long was instrumental in changing the Egyptian from a weekly to a daily paper. Long served as the Daily Egyptian's fiscal sponsor until 1974.

The lecture will take place about 1:15 p.m., following a 12:30 p.m. luncheon in Ballroom B of the Student Center. Students wishing to attend the lecture are welcome to show up after lunch, Rice said.

THE LECTURE is free. Tickets for the luncheon are $5 per person and are available from Rice at the Journalism Service Center, 1201 Communications.

Kelly "Red" Leiter, dean of the College of Communications at the University of Tennessee at Knoxville, will deliver the lecture. Leiter holds graduate degrees from SIU-C and is former managing editor of the Daily Egyptian.

The winner of the 1988 Master Editor-Golden em award will be announced on April 15.

Liman: Bush not part of scandal

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — Arthur Liman, special counsel to the Senate committee that investigated the Iran-Contra affair, said he does not believe Vice President George Bush played a key role in the scandal. "He wasn't a major player," Liman said following a Tuesday night speech at Brown University. "We know what his position is now, and the only reason that's fallen into doubt is because he's left some question on what advice he gave to the president." "He supported him. We know that," Liman told United Press International. "But he didn't side with the secretary of defense or state. What else can we ask?" In deciding to approve the secret arms sales to Iran aimed at winning freedom for American hostages, President Reagan overruled vehement objections from both Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger and Secretary of State George Shultz. Like Reagan, Bush testified to the presidentially appointed Tower Commission and was invited by the joint congressional Iran-Contra committees to answer further questions about his role.

Police Blotter

A Carbondale man was charged with battery after police saw him push his girlfriend out of a stationary car at 205 N. Marion St. Tuesday night, Carbondale police said. Willie James Dodds, 28, of 703 N. Barn St., was processed and taken to Jackson County Jail after failing to post bond, police said. The victim, Yolanda J. Barber, 29, who lived with Dodds, was not injured. Dodds is to appear in court at 10:30 a.m. March 16 at the Jackson County Courthouse, police said. An officer saw Dodds enter the car driven by Barber as it stopped on North Marion Street at 10:27 p.m. Dodds then pushed Barber out of the car and drove away, police said. He was apprehended by pursuing police.

Two University students were arrested after a fight in the lobby of First National Bank and Trust, 509 S. University, Wednesday afternoon, Carbondale police said. Mark Besser, 23, and Robert Ellis, 39, were charged with disorderly conduct and fighting by agreement by Carbondale police. They were released on notices to appear in city court at a date unknown to police. The fight apparently stemmed from a disagreement that occurred in a class attended earlier by both students. Carbondale police suspect a University student's former roommate stole merchandise valued at $225 from the student's home at 622 N. Almond St. Tuesday.

The victim, Michael C. Botkin, 30, reported the burglary occurred some time between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. No signs of forced entry were found at the residence, police said. The suspect is a 23-year-old white male, 5 feet 6 inches in height and weighing 130 pounds. He has blond hair and blue eyes, and drives a green Volkswagen, police said. Police are withholding the suspect's name. A University student reported her motorcycle vandalized in a parking lot under an overpass at University Park Tuesday, Campus Security police said.

Women's Center plans activities

By Phyllis Coon
Staff Writer

The Women's Center plans to reacquaint the community with its services through fund raising and an open house, a center director said.

"A lot of times people don't feel comfortable referring people here when they haven't seen the facility," Director Genevieve Houghton said. "They need a better feel of what we do here."

The Women's Center located at 408 W. Freeman St. in Carbondale is a sanctuary that offers counseling or friendship for women and their children who flee from family pressures, including domestic violence.

The fund raising will help finance center operations or the purchase of a computer, Houghton said.

The fund raising committee hopes to raise $3,000 by raffling a tapestry. The 3-by-5 tapestry was woven by Claribel McDaniel of Carbondale. Houghton said McDaniel has been connected with the Women's Center many years and once gave the center a portion of the proceeds from art she sold.

McDaniel has weaved tapestries that have appeared in the Smithsonian Institution and galleries in cities including Chicago, New York and San Francisco. Tickets for the tapestry are available at the Women's Center.

The tapestry will be raffled is currently on display at the SIU Credit Union, 1217 W. Main Street in Carbondale. The drawing for the tapestry will be during the Women's Center Open House between 1 and 4 p.m. March 27.

Another reason the center is holding an open house is to show off two additions built through grants from Hands Across America and the Illinois Coalition Against Domestic Violence combined with a refinancing of the center and a loan.

The first addition includes office spaces, bedrooms and a handicap accessible bathroom. The second addition includes a conference room and a storage room.

The additions have increased the number of families the center is able to service by four to 17, she said.

"We want supporters to see how we've expanded and that we are not as crowded as we used to be," Houghton said.

'Klan' rape victim hides from media, her lawyer

NEW YORK (UPI) — A black teenager who refuses to cooperate with a grand jury investigating her claim she was raped by six whites has been taken into seclusion by a maverick minister who said Wednesday he wants to hide her from the media.

Rev. Al Sharpton denied the move was intended to keep Tawana Brawley, 16, of Wappingers Falls, N.Y., away from the grand jury empaneled Monday or from Attorney General Robert Abrams, appointed by the governor to be the special prosecutor in the case.

"They (investigators) can find her whenever they want. We're not trying to hide her from them, but we are trying to give Tawana as normal a life as possible under these circumstances," said the minister from Brooklyn who has assumed the role of spokesman for the Brawley family.

Sharpton said the girl was taken Tuesday night from her uncle's Monticello, N.Y., home where she had been staying and said that "ain't nobody gonna find her."

Sharpton, who called the move "a collective decision" made by her parents and attorneys, said Brawley would continue to attend classes at Monticello High School.

Brawley's uncle, Matthew Strong, a police officer in Fishkill, N.Y., has said he wanted the teenager to cooperate with Abrams, but there was no indication he objected to moving her.

Brawley was found Nov. 28 wrapped in a plastic bag, her hair chopped, her body smeared with feces and the words, "nigger" and "KKK," written on her torso.

Brawley told local authorities she had been abducted four days earlier by a man wearing a police badge and holster, then repeatedly sexually attacked by the man and five other whites.

New method of vision discovered

Crabs and spiders use a method of seeing unlike any of the eight ways previously identified in animals and researchers believe the complex process may help answer questions concerning the evolution of the eye, scientists said Wednesday.

Dr. D.E. Nilsson of Lund University in Sweden discovered the ninth way of seeing after studying the eyes of arthropods such as crabs, insects and spiders, but he said the process is so complex that it has taken him three years to explain it.

Dr. Michael Land of Sussex University in England said the newly identified optical system is "quite the most complicated optical system known in biology, and reasonably difficult to understand."

Nilsson said the principle difference between the arthropod visual system and that of other animals is the manner in which it handles light.

"Imaging is accomplished by a remarkable combination of ordinary lenses, cylindrical lenses, parabolic mirrors and light-guides," he said.

The researcher said the lens-mirror combination is equivalent to the lens structure in a classical telescope. But added to that, the compound eyes of arthropods are made up of hundreds of separate units that construct an image much like a television picture made of dots.

The arthropod visual system does not experience the world much differently than humans, he said, but the resolution is much worse.

"This new type of optical works can be interpreted as an intermediate type of eye," Nilsson said.

House approves civil rights bill despite promise of Reagan veto

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House, ignoring President Reagan's veto threat, passed and sent to the White House Wednesday a bill to restore broad civil rights protections for women, minorities, the elderly and disabled.

The bill, approve 315-98, would overturn a 1984 Supreme Court decision, Grove City College vs. Bell, that restricted the coverage of federal anti-discrimination laws to the individual programs or activities receiving aid. The bill would restore the application on an institution-wide basis.

Because it is identical to a bill that the Senate adopted 75-14 in January, the measure goes directly to the president.

Reagan has vowed to veto it on the grounds that it does not adequately protect religious freedom for church-affiliated schools and would create too much paperwork for state and local governments as well as the private sector.

Opponents complained the bill was being railroaded through the House with no chance for hearings, adequate debate or alteration. The House used the Senate bill rather than writing its own version to speed up the process.

Only one amendment, offered by Rep. Jim Sensenbrenner, R-Wis., to address some of the Reagan ad-

"No one, including this member, is against having anti-discrimination laws. But we are opposed to a gag rule and a railroad job that prevents the unintended consequences from being debated."

—Rep. Jim Sensenbrenner

ministration's concerns, was permitted. It failed 266-146.

"No one, including this member, is against having anti-discrimination laws," Sensenbrenner said. "But we are opposed to a gag rule and a railroad job that prevents the unintended consequences from being debated."

However, House Education and Labor Committee Chairman Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., said: "This is the time to stop a lot of talking and to act to restore the civil rights laws to their previous scope and effectiveness. We have waited four long years to restore simple justice."

Sensenbrenner argued his amendment would protect church-affiliated schools by allowing them to qualify for a religious exemption.

In the case involving Grove City College in Pennsylvania, the high court ruled that only the school's financial assistance department, which received federal funds — not the entire institution — was subject to federal sex discrimination regulations.

Proponents of the Civil Rights Restoration Act argue the bill would reinstate pre-Grove City laws by prohibiting discrimination throughout an entire institution or agency if any part of the institution or agency received federal financial assistance.

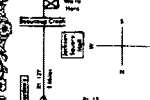

Opponents complain the bill is so broadly written it would expand federal anti-discrimination laws by requiring any entity that receives federal aid to comply with the statutes, including a grocery store that accepts food stamps or a Catholic university-affiliated hospital that refuses to perform abortions.

To address the abortion controversy, which has stymied passage of similar civil rights legislation over the past four years, the bill specifies that educational institutions receiving federal aid are not required to provide or pay for abortions.

Students end protest at university

AMHERST, Mass. (UPI) — Minority students ended Wednesday an eight-day occupation of a campus building after they and Hampshire College officials signed an agreement providing more funding for campus minority programs.

"I think (the agreement) is a very strong statement of commitment on the part of students and the institution," college president Adele Simmons said. "The institution is the winner."

The agreement, signed in front of a crowd of about 200 mostly white student supporters, ended a student occupation of Dakin House that began Feb. 23.

Simmons, the dean of faculty and the dean of students signed the document along with eight of the original 50 minority protesters who occupied the building that serves as a dormitory and Third World student center.

There are about 100 minority students at Hampshire, a liberal arts college attended by 1,100 students.

"I have to say, our entire group is extremely pleased," Anita Fearman, a freshman from Los Angeles and one of the protesters, said. "It must be recognized things don't end here."

Fearman praised a core group of white students who held nightly vigils outside Dakin House in a show of support. Many of the students gathered around a burning barrel each night, while others huddled inside makeshift tents outside the building.

The agreement calls for the college to hire a current faculty member to serve as the school's first dean of multicultural affairs.

Study makes highest guess of babies born with AIDS

BOSTON (UPI) — As many as 5,000 babies infected with the AIDS virus may be born each year in the United States, it was reported Wednesday.

In one of the highest estimates and perhaps the most accurate to date, researchers from the Massachusetts Department of Public Health made the projection based on blood samples from more than 30,000 Massachusetts newborns.

"It's terrible for one reason," Dr. George F. Grady, a state epidemiologist who headed the study, said. "When and if these children get sick, they require tremendous compassion and special handling."

Grady and his colleagues tested blood samples from 30,708 babies born in 58 Massachusetts hospitals from December 1986 to June 1987 to see if the babies contained antibodies to the AIDS virus.

A positive test result indicates the babies are infected with the AIDS virus, and that they got it from their mothers, who contracted the virus through needle sharing in illicit drug use or sexual contact with infected males.

Between 1,620 and 4,860 AIDS-infected babies may be born yearly in the United States.

The tests were conducted anonymously on blood samples taken routinely from newborn babies to check for other health problems.

Overall, two of every 1,000 women were infected with the AIDS virus, the researchers reported in The New England Journal of Medicine.

Previous studies had estimated that only between 20 percent and 60 percent of babies that test positive for antibodies to the virus are actually infected. Based on those estimates, the resea-chers estimated that between 32 and 97 infected babies would be born each year in the state.

Because the prevalence of AIDS in Massachusetts is nearly identical to the national average, the researchers multiplied those numbers by 50 to estimate the total number of AIDS-virus infected babies that may be born each year nationally — between 1,620 and 4,860 babies.

Only a percentage of these — some say 30 percent to 60 percent — would develop symptoms of AIDS. The Centers for Disease Control has predicted that by 1991, 3,000 babies and children will be reported as having AIDS.

The estimate of the number of women infected is much higher than that found in tests conducted on female blood donors and military recruits. Previous studies found one in every 25,000 female blood donors and two in every 2,029 female military recruits tested positive for the virus in the state.

Man sold AIDS-tainted blood; acquitted

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A male prostitute originally charged with attempted murder for selling his AIDS-tainted blood to a plasma center was acquitted Wednesday of two counts of trying to poison a pharmaceutical product.

Jurors said they found Joseph Markowski's conduct inexcusable, but said they had no choice other than to acquit him because the prosecution failed to prove he intended to harm anyone when he sold his blood last June.

"The prosecution had to prove that he had specific intent," juror Bill Ferguson said. "But they failed to prove that because his only reason for being there was to sell his blood and get money."

"I feel that he did a very bad thing. What he did was inexcusable. It was morally wrong. But we're not judging it on that. We have set guidelines to go by. It's up to the prosecution to prove beyond a shadow of a doubt, and they didn't do that."

Markowski, 29, who has been in custody since last June, was to be freed later Wednesday. He appeared nervous before the verdicts were read, but showed little visible emotion when he was acquitted.

If he had been convicted, Markowski could have been sentenced to state prison for up to three years and two months.

Markowski had been charged with attempted murder in the case, but Superior Court Judge Ronald Coen in December dismissed the charges on grounds Markowski never intended to kill anyone when he sold his blood.

Markowski is infected with the AIDS virus, but has not developed a full-blown case of the deadly disease.

Fans could see Reds for 1988

"Play ball."

It's almost time for those familiar words to start ringing out in big league parks and living rooms across the country.

Major leaguers have reported to spring training in Florida and Arizona, and in about a month another chapter of the big league baseball saga will begin.

There may never again be a season to rival the likes of the 1987 campaign, which ended with the Minnesota Twins capturing the World Series, but one can hope.

Die-hards and amateurs alike already are making their predictions. Some will be correct; most will not.

Baseball experts are again predicting the obvious:

The Cincinnati Reds will finally do what they should have done last year, win the National League West. The New York Mets are a shoo-in for the NL East, just as they have been for three years. The Toronto Blue Jays have the talent to win the AL East, and no one is ever quite sure what will happen in the AL West.

It is never easy to predict the outcome of an upcoming season. Teams that shine in spring training usually fade into anonymity by mid-June. A single injury can sink the best teams and the late acquisition of an out-of-work player often propels a team ahead of its competitors.

Here are a few words to live by for this season:

The St. Louis Cardinals will repeat as NL East champs. Whitey Herzog is undoubtedly the best skipper in the game. He again will surround a power hitter with his speedy, switch-hitters.

This year the power hitter will be Bob Horner, a former Atlanta Brave. No matter, the results will be the same. The pitching is nothing spectacular, but the addition of Jose DeLeon from the Chicago White Sox is a step in the right direction.

The Reds should sneak past defending champ San Francisco and much improved Los Angeles to take the NL West.

The Reds' pitching is improved. Eric Davis is arguably the best all-around player in the game, and Barry Larkin and Nick Esasky will have banner years.

In the AL East, the best division in baseball, the Blue Jays will win the pennant they gave away last year.

The Detroit Tigers and Boston Red Sox will contend strongly, but the Yankees will fall short.

All the Jack Clarks in the world can't make up for such a deficient pitching staff as the Yankees have.

The Blue Jays secret? Solid pitching, led by super lefthander Jimmy Key, and a strong offensive attack, headed by 1987 MVP George Bell.

The AL West should be a lock. The Oakland A's played 500 last season and will greatly improve this year. The addition of Dave Parker gives the team one of the most powerful outfielders in recent history.

It should be another great summer of baseball.

Hernandez pours ice water over columnist's head

LAKELAND, Fla. (UPI) — Detroit Tigers reliever Willie Hernandez, angered by a column last June he thought turned the fans against him, Wednesday dumped a bucket of ice water over the head of Detroit Free Press columnist Mitch Albom.

"For myself, and speaking for Sparky (Anderson), we don't condone this type of protest to you," Detroit General Manager Bill Lajoie told Albom. "But as far as we're concerned, this is between you and the player. I doubt it very much that there will be any disciplinary action."

Albom said: "I was just standing there, talking about the Olympics with Frank Tanana, and the next thing I knew I was soaked. I told Willie, 'That was a class thing to do.'"

Members of the Detroit chapter of the Baseball Writers' Association of America met with Lajoie and Anderson, the team's manager, at the conclusion of the workout. The BBWAA members voiced their concern the incident would serve as a signal to other players if left to pass without comment.

"I've talked to Willie and will talk to Willie again tomorrow (Thursday)," Lajoie said. "I said if Albom felt he had been harmed 'then I say you know what to do, in that case. I don't condone it, it's a lousy way to do it.'"

Hernandez is trying to come back from the worst season he has had in Detroit. He was 3-4 with a 3.67 ERA and only eight saves in 45 games. Plus he was booed viciously at Tiger Stadium when he even began to warm up.

Albom visited Hernandez while he was on the disabled list last June and wrote a column quoting the reliever as saying, 'Bleep the fans.'

Anderson made an impassioned plea for fans to let up on Hernandez during last year's American League playoffs and the pitcher had received a standing ovation Tuesday after throwing well in batting practice.

Injury won't stop softball pitchers

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

Softball pitching coach Gary Buckles said his staff is ready to go for Saturday's season opening doubleheader at Austin Peay, even though one hurler is injured.

Freshman righthander Traci Furlow has a pulled muscle in her upper right leg.

"At this point, though, it looks pretty minor," Buckles said at Tuesday's practice at IAW Field.

Furlow isn't the only one having to cope with an injury. Buckles, in his third year as an assistant, will be on crutches for a few weeks because of a foot injury.

Furlow, who holds the all-time Missouri large high school record of 58 career wins, led Hazelwood Central High School of Florissant to two state championships.

She had one win, a shutout of Indiana State, and two losses in the fall exhibition season.

The other pitchers are senior ace Lisa Peterson, a 20-game winner last season who holds 14 school pitching records, and freshman Lisa Robinson, a righthander from Bethel Park, Pa., who had 637 strikeouts during her prep career.

"The pitching situation is very good," Buckles said. "We have three pitchers who are capable of getting the job done. They are all stoppers, any three can win the big games."

Peterson and Robinson are the starters in Saturday's games in Clarksville, Tenn. The first game begins at 2 p.m.

Bonds, Berghuis selected to Gateway second team

The women's basketball team, which finished the season with a 16-11 overall record and 12-6 Gateway Conference mark, had two players selected to the 1987-88 conference second team.

Senior forwards Bridgett Bonds and Mary Berghuis were named to the second team. Bonds was Player of the Year and Berghuis was an honorable mention choice on the 1986-87 team.

Illinois State's Susan Wellman, a 5-foot-10 senior center, was the Gateway Player of the Year. Indiana State's Andrea Myers was Coach of the Year and Western Illinois' Robin Hasemann was Freshman of the Year.

Joining Wellman on the first team were Eastern Illinois' Barb Perkes, Drake's Julie Fitzpatrick, Southwest Missouri's Kelly Mago and

Bridgett Bonds

Bradley's Shelli Braud.

Mary Berghuis

Wichita State's Dawna Weber and Indiana State's Amy Vanderkolk and Toneko Kayzer were on the second team. The honorable mention selections were Indiana State's Lori Castetter, Illinois State's Pam Tanner, Northern Iowa's Kris Huffman and Hasemann.

dication or not" of his abilities as a head coach.

Before coming to SIU-C, McDaniel was head coach at Fairmont (West Virginia) State College in 1983.

Former inside linebacker Mike Carbonaro, who was recruited by McDaniel, said, "If I had another year to play, I'd feel confident to play under him as head coach."

Carbonaro, a senior, is seeking free-agent status. He recently was tested by the Los Angeles Raiders.

"I came here in '85 after he (McDaniel) recruited me from New York," Carbonaro said. "He was my defensive coordinator and linebacker coach for two years. Seems to know his stuff real well. If he could throw his defensive tactics to the offensive side, I feel Coach Mac would be a real good coach."

McDaniel also was involved in recruiting other standout players, including defensive tackle Brad Crouse, defensive end Shannon Ferbrache, starting quarterback Kevin Brown (who was out last season because of injuries) and starting cornerback Willie Davis.

Senior Rob Howell, who played his four years for the Salukis, said, "I think Coach Mac is a great coach, the best of all the coaches left to take the position."

"He wants to put in his own system, but he would be similar to Dorr," Howell said.

McDaniel said that some of this season's 31 recruits will have to pick up where graduating seniors have left off. Top linebackers Ezell Shelton and Carbonaro are among the graduates.

"We're going to put eight new starters on the field defensively so it's going to be an interesting situation," McDaniel said. "We went heavily with junior colleges (to recruit) because we felt we needed immediate help."

As for last season's disappointing 3-8 record, McDaniel says there is a lot to consider.

"I think everyone is looking for an easy answer and there are no easy answers in this business," he said. "Anytime you put people on the field in a competitive situation and it comes down to a tight ball game, it could go either way."

"When I came into the league we had great players," Donewald said. "You had Antoine Carr and Xavier McDaniel. You had the great Bradley team that won the NIT (in 1982). We've always had good basketball here. I don't think people have always been cognizant and aware of it."

"I don't think we're playing basketball better than we did five or six years ago. The media have such a significant impact on the awareness of the league. What we're seeing is more of an awareness as a result of television."

In his three years as commissioner, Haney has increased the number of televised Valley games from three to 41. This season, SportsVision, based in Chicago, contracted 14 games. Cable stations FNN-Score, ESPN, USA and WGN picked up the rest with the exception of a nationally televised Tulsa-Memphis State shown on CBS.

"Jim Haney has done a tremendous job," Albeck said. "I'm excited because under Jim Haney the conference has made giant strides. Now, all of a sudden we're getting incredible television exposure."

With more people watching Valley games, Haney is optimistic about the conference's future.

"We're among the top 10 conferences," he said. "I think we can compete to try to get in the top six or seven. Right now, I'd say we're eighth or ninth."

If the conference is to reach Haney's goal, attendance around the league will need to improve. Wichita State, Bradley, Illinois State and Tulsa traditionally draw good crowds at home. It's no coincidence that they are the teams that have won MVC championships in the 1980s.

"It's (difference in attendance) not a uniqueness 'o the Valley," Barnett said. "There are programs around the country that draw well. Then there's some programs that don't draw. It's a catch-22 situation. Which comes first—the crowd or the horses."

Herrin says it's the horses. "The attendance could begin to improve in the Valley," he said. "The people like ourselves definitely have to improve. If we get better, people will come to see us. SIU has a decent basketball name. We just have to get better."

Ultimately, it will take more than an increase in exposure or attendance for the Valley to gain an increased respect around the country.

"You can promote and you can get exposure, but to maintain and develop a history of success, you need to produce," Haney said. "The growth of this league has come to a point where we just need to do well in the NCAA tournament. We need to beat good non-conference opponents."

Haney: I want my MVC to be tops

By Dave Miller
Staff Writer

The Missouri Valley will throw its postseason bash this weekend and for the first time in three seasons, all members will be able to celebrate with a clear conscience.

"The history of the league unfortunately has been one of problems with the violations," MVC Commissioner Jim Haney said.

In the 1980s, Wichita State, SIU-C and Bradley each have had their turn on probation.

This season, the Valley teams have cleaned up their acts. With the attention focused back on the court, the players can make headlines for the conference, not because of scandals.

"The image of the league has

Tournament tickets still available

About 1,400 tickets are left for the men's basketball team's first round MVC tournament game against Creighton at 8:20 p.m. Saturday at Carver Arena in Peoria.

Only 37 tickets remain and can be purchased by calling (309) 673-3200 between 10 a.m. and 8 p.m.

The ticket also is good for the Bradley-Illinois State game, which begins at 8:07 p.m.

changed," Haney said. "The academic institutions have not changed. The quality is still the same but there is an acceptance that the athletic programs are being run in an honest fashion."

The coaches have been a major factor in the Valley's improved image.

Not one present coach has been involved with any wrongdoing.

Former NBA coach Stan Albeck brought immediate credibility back to a Bradley program that was on probation. Eddie Fogler, who was an assistant for 15 years under Dean Smith at North Carolina, has kept Wichita State on the winning track after Gene Smithson left. Rich Herrin has returned respectability to the SIU-C program after a payoff scandal involving basketball player Kenny Perry occurred under Allen Van Winkle.

Tony Barone's enthusiasm has improved Creighton's recruiting. Tulsa has won 22 or more games in two out of three seasons under J.D. Barnett. Gary Garner is in his seventh year at Drake. Ron Greene, owner of more than 300 collegiate victories, is trying to rebuild a struggling Indiana State program.

Through all of the changes, Bob Donewald, the dean of Valley coaches, has built Illinois State into a consistent winner during the last 10 years.

Region 8 swim meet at Rec pool

By Steven Welsh

Members of the swimming and diving teams will get another shot at qualifying for the NCAA Championships at the USS Region 8 Championships today through Sunday at the Recreation Center pool.

This will be the final chance for members of the women's team to qualify for the NCAAs as individuals since entries must be mailed out by Monday, Coach Doug Ingram said.

Two women have qualified for the NCAAs. They are senior co-captain Lori Rea in the 100-yard butterfly and senior diver Celia Gales on the one-meter springboard.

None of the women met the qualifying standards last weekend at the Midwest Independent Championships in Chicago. Several were close, however, and Ingram remained optimistic after the meet.

"We were real close to qualifying in several events," Ingram said. "The women are feeling pretty confident. We'll be ready."

This will be the first time the men's team has competed since they won the Saluki Invitational almost three weeks ago.

The men will have another chance to qualify during the Ozark Seniors Invitational March 12.

"The men are well rested and I think they're feeling pretty confident," assistant coach Jim Tierney said. "This is the time of year when their work's been cut down, so they're feeling a little restless. They're ready to cut loose."

The men have two individual NCAA qualifiers so far. Junior Scott Roberts qualified in the 200-yard backstroke, and sophomore Harri Garmendia qualified in the 200-yard butterfly.

The men's 400-yard freestyle relay team of Sean Morrissey, Roberts, Jeff Goetz and Kevin Nagy also has qualified. It is the top-ranked 400 freestyle team in the nation.

One event, the 1,000-yard freestyle, will be held at 6:45 tonight. Preliminaries will be held at 9:30 a.m. and finals at 5:30 p.m. Friday through Sunday.

Anthony B. "Popeye" Woods

'Popeye' Woods to play football in Great Britain

By Kimberly Clarke
Student Writer

Anthony B. "Popeye" Woods is getting the opportunity of a lifetime. A chance that most football players only dream about; a chance to play professional football.

Only it's not in the National Football League, it's overseas.

"I'm getting more and more nervous thinking about it," Woods said. "I definitely want to take advantage of the opportunity. I've never been overseas, so it's double excitement."

Getting a round-trip ticket, salary and room and board, Woods will be leaving March 5 for England to play European professional football for the Birmingham Bulls.

Rod Sherrill, defensive line coach for the Salukis, found out about the Birmingham Bulls while reading a magazine, and wrote for more information. The owner, Clifford Parr, wrote back not only with information, but also requested a list of players that he might recruit.

"Only four Americans are allowed on the team, and after I sent my list of players, the owner called back wanting Anthony," Sherrill said. After that, Woods sent the Bulls a resume and a video tape.

Woods, who is from South Haven, Miss., played for Northwest Mississippi Junior College before coming to SIU-C.

A defensive end, Woods had 39 tackles and two sacks his first season for SIU-C. He sat out five games because of a thumb injury last season.

Woods will be gone for about 4½ months. The season starts in mid-April.

"During that time he will be playing for the England team as linebacker and tight end, and will also be an assistant to the offensive line coach," Sherrill said.

The competition will be other international teams from Sweden, France, Italy, England and West Germany. All the Birmingham home games will be played on artificial turf. It will probably be like playing in major college competition, Woods said.

If given the opportunity to play NFL football as a career, Woods said he definitely would, but he is not banking on it.

Woods has a golden opportunity. "I'm going to go for it."

McDaniel defends his football experience

By Greg Huber
Staff Writer

If it's not broken, don't fix it.

This is what interim head football coach Larry McDaniel is saying about SIU-C's football program.

McDaniel, a candidate for the job left open by Ray Dorr who went to the University of Southern California, says he'd only like to see one major change.

"I'm very strong in the belief of a hands-on head coach," McDaniel said.

Dorr, who signed as SIU-C's 13th head football coach Jan. 6, 1984, was touted as one of Southern Illinois' most recognizable personalities. He made more than 250 personal appearances at events ranging from parades to nursing home socials.

Interim Athletics Director Charlotte West said Monday that more than 20 offers for the head coaching job have been received. A 10-member search committee has been named to evaluate the candidates.

McDaniel said that if he is selected for the job, he wants to be on the field with the players.

"I want to be in the huddle with the players," he said. "I want to go out there and get dirty. That approach fits my personality."

McDaniel, a 17-year coaching veteran, was the Salukis' defensive coordinator for four seasons. He also was the strength and conditioning coach.

"I feel like, from what I've had control over, we've been among one of the top defenses in the conference," he said.

"We have played good defense for four years. That's the only aspect I've had control over."

Defensive line coach Rod Sherrill said, "Mac was a good defensive coordinator, but I don't know if that's any in-
