USG to consider broader health plan

MORE FOR LESS: USG executive says other schools pay less for more health care.

TRAVIS DeNEAL
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The Undergraduate Student Government should support implementing a University insurance plan that would cover SIUC students' spouses and children, a USG member says.

"We're the only state school this large that does not have an insurance plan that will cover dependents," Kristie Ayres, USG non-traditional advocate, said.

Ayres said University of Illinois has a dependent insurance program with Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Illinois, and its student insurance rate per semester is cheaper than SIUC's student insurance fee.

At the University of Illinois, she said, the student insurance fee is $56 per semester, which covers health care for students and their spouses and children.

The SIUC student insurance fee is $84 per semester and covers students' visits to Student Health Service. It does not cover health care for students' spouses or children.

Ayres said she will present her findings to USG at its meeting tonight to increase support for creating an insurance program to cover dependents.

She said she also will be distributing pamphlets to campus housing areas where students with families live, including Evergreen Terrace and Southern Hills.

Jake Baggott, student medical benefits and business manager, said SIUC had an insurance program for students' dependents until 1993, when the cost of the program became too expensive.

"The death spiral started when more money was taken out of the fund to pay for claims than was put in from student fees," Baggott said. "Every year the same phenomenon occurred."

The student fee increased to pay for the rising cost of the program, he said, until it was cheaper for a student who needed dependent coverage to get a policy with a commercial insurance carrier.

Baggott said the University examines the matter at least once a year.

"We have explored other options and ran into obstacles," he said. "If we can't come up with something cheaper than a commercial carrier will provide, we won't be able offer a dependent health care plan."

At its meeting tonight, the Senate also will vote on a proposal that supports a $4 decrease in the Mass Transit fee, which is $25.

In addition, the Senate will vote on funding proposals for the Caribbean Student Association, Financial Management Association, Bowling Club, Friendship Association of Chinese Students and Scholars and Iota Phi Theta.

USG meets at 7 tonight in the Student Center Ballrooms

'Back to her people'

HERITAGE: Women becomes Cherokee chief, promises to preserve culture.

JULIE RENDLEMAN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Joyce Dugan was not taught the language or culture of her Cherokee tribe as a child, but she became the first female chief of the Eastern Cherokee Indians by promising to bring her culture back to her people.

Dugan, principal chief of the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians, spoke to about 30 people Monday evening in the Lesar Law Building. The lecture was sponsored by the American Indian Association of SIUC.

On Sept. 7, 1995, Dugan became the first woman in her tribe's history to become chief. She will be in the position until 2000. The tribe's reservation is located on the Qualla Boundary in North Carolina.

"I did not want to run at all," she said. "But people kept on telling me to run, and so I ran on the platform to preserve our culture and language."

Dugan said she has lived up to her platform by putting culture back into the Cherokee school system.

"Every time a new textbook arrives, the teachers sit down and decide how our culture can be implemented into the curriculum, even in math and science books," she said.

Dugan said she dreams of a future program teaching preschool children the Cherokee language.

"We have talked about it for the future," she said. "We need to saturate the children with our language at an early age so they can learn it easier."

Trying to convince a high school near her reservation to change the name of the women's basketball team is Dugan's latest activity as chief.

"They are called the Squabs," she said. "They did not know that meant 'whore' in our language. I wrote them a nice letter informing them, but there has been no change."

Dugan, a descendant of a band of 1,000 Cherokees who refused to go on the Trail of Tears, said people need to understand how important it is to preserve the culture of her people because it almost was lost.

As a child, Dugan said she was not taught about her culture because her mother was brought up in a boarding

New students will get more acquainted in less time

SETTLING IN: Administrator says reducing orientation to three days will aid retention.

WILLIAM HATFIELD
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Condensing orientation for new SIUC students will aid retention by allowing more students to attend events and providing more support services, administrators say.

Harvey Welch, vice chancellor of Student Affairs, said the University will condense new student orientation into three days from five, beginning it on the Friday before classes start rather than two days earlier.

"Many of our students are not rich, and they work to support themselves," Welch said. "Many students' parents also work, and more people will be able to come if the activities take place towards the end of the week."

He said University services will be available to new students during the orientation weekend, so they can register for classes, obtain student identification cards, receive advisement and apply for financial aid.

He said the University also is planning a gathering for new students in Shryock Auditorium during the orientation, where Chancellor Donald Beggs will talk to students about SIUC traditions and his expectations of its students.

He said a job fair and a University-wide picnic also are being planned for the orientation.

Vincent Carilli, assistant director of the Student Center, said the current five-day orientation program is too long and was not well-attended.

"Some of our programs were grossly under-attended," Carilli said. "So we have asked ourselves, 'How do we make it more convenient for students to participate?'"

Molly Uhe, a freshman in pre-medicine from Pittsfield, said she attended orientation in August, but it took too long.

"I believe the change will be better," Uhe said. "There was too much time to do absolutely nothing."

Heather DeLay, an undecided freshman from Elgin, said her job at home made it difficult to attend the orientation.

"I think this will be better than having to rush down here for the orientation," DeLay said.

Carilli said orientation is important for retention because most students decide if they will obtain their degrees from SIUC during the first six weeks of classes.

"Orientation has always been considered a retention effort," Carilli said. "A comprehensive orientation will aid in retention and help students decide if they are to stay at SIUC."

Making a grand entrance

ACTING UP: Stage company teaches slapstick, making an entrance.

TRACY TAYLOR
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Two chairs are set in the middle of an empty gymnasium. An actor walks up through the middle of the chairs and crosses an invisible line to greet the audience.

"Go Back," Felicity Jones says to the actor. "This time, notice your audience and make sure there is a difference between the way you were before you stepped on stage."

The actor walks back to the end of the gym and starts again, this time taking notice of the entrance to the imaginary stage.

Most people think of entering a room and saying, "Hello" as an everyday occurrence, but with The Acting Company, it is much more than that — it is the very foundation of a play.

The Acting Company of New York came to the Pulliam Hall gymnasium Tuesday to give two hour-long workshops on slapstick comedy and making an entrance. The group also was in town to perform "The Glass Menagerie" Tuesday as part of the Shryock Celebrity Series.

Jones, the educational director for The Acting Company, said the entrance is the most important part of a play.

"You need to give the audience as much information as possible when you cross that line," she said to the audience of about 20 students and community members.

Jones said entrances give a simplicity and clarity to a performance.

"The more the audience can figure out what you are there for from the moment they see you, the easier your job will be," she said. "There has to be a real connection sending a message out to the audience."

Jones said the entrance exercises were developed to get performers thinking about the actor-audience relationship to create a size of performance that is large and theatrical.

Jones said an actor has to take notice of the audience

Visiting the United States for the first time last week, Ruben Rodriguez said the U.S. embargo placed on Cuba has caused problems there, but there is no difference between the people of Cuba and the United States.

"The people of the two countries can work together well," he said. "The people do care for one another. It is the governments that are hostile."

Rodriguez works at the Martin Luther King Jr. Memorial Center in Havana. He is a deacon in the Ebenezer Baptist Church in Havana and visited Carbondale from Feb. 24 to Sunday as part of an ongoing relationship between the Church of the Good Shepherd, located at Orchard Drive and Schwartz Street, and Ebenezer Baptist Church.

Look out, Heloise: Writer offers helpful cleaning hints

Spring Break is finally upon us, and at a university as diverse as ours, it only goes without saying that we will all be enjoying our week off in various ways.

Some of us will be taking a trek even farther south to participate in that month-long party that takes place every year along the coast of Florida's beaches. Others will prefer an alternate route and will spend their week hiking in the backwoods or playing hacky sack next to a roaring bonfire. Still others might opt to use this week to catch up on their studies or write that novel that has been on the back burner for so long.

However we choose to spend our week off, we need to remember that before Spring Break comes Spring Cleaning.

Now, I know what you're saying. "Hector, do we really need to clean our living area before we enjoy our week long sabbatical from the grueling semester workload?"

Yes, Ringo, you do. Don't worry about it, though. I have some quick spring cleaning tips that will allow you to finish the job swiftly and easily and even give you time to enjoy your week of freedom.

You see, living with college males while simultaneously being a college male will undoubtedly produce two constants: Jenny McCarthy posters and a living area that resembles a warped biological experiment gone amok. Fitting into these two categories, I also suffer the consequences of the latter two results. I am here today to pass on my wisdom to you, the peon, so you can enjoy a clean living environment — or at least one that won't attack you as you bathe.

Now, understand, this is no Martha Stewart set of suggestions, but I think they'll do.

1. Paper plates should not be used as ash trays. Sounds silly, I realize, but some ashes are actually still on fire and will burn through the plate and into the carpet below. Also, you can't "wipe away" a burn mark with a wet towel. I've tried.

2. Liquid dishwashing soap should not be used as carpet cleaner. Just because it makes suds doesn't mean it will benefit your life, or your carpet.

After spilling a beverage, an out-of-town guest of ours tried to correct the situation by squeezing a grotesque amount of dishwashing soap onto the stain. The carpet remained stained, and the soap bleached a line in our carpet that resembled a dying snake.

3. Carpet cleaner should not be used as dishwashing soap. I don't have an anecdote, but I believe this is a fairly accurate statement.

4. If you open the refrigerator door and overhear the tail end of a conversation, either call an exorcist or throw away the rotten cheese. After all, good dairy products only speak when spoken to.

5. Mold is not a color. I realize that the patches of blue-green on the ceiling above the shower might add a bit of flair to the otherwise mundane off-white surrounding of the bathroom, but that isn't paint, son, that's a living organism with little patience for humans, and it needs to be taken care of immediately!

6. Dusting is not a "girl" job. If you have trouble making out the picture on your television set because of the excess topsoil, swallow your pride, get a cloth of some sort and clean the dust off the screen. It's 1997. They don't even need us to reproduce any more. I suggest we find a socially redeemable skill, and quickly.

And, finally, there is no such thing as a "See how much garbage you can stuff into the trash can" contest. This game is a myth created by the crafty city garbage collectors so they can enjoy the satisfaction of watching someone else get just as messy taking out the garbage as they do picking it up. If the trash bag is full, pick it up, walk it to the garbage bin and throw it in. You've done your part of recycling, now it's time for 6 billion years of biodegradation to do its part.

In conclusion, it is possible to get your deposit back at the end of the year (providing you aren't one of my roommates) if you do the simple things, like: picking up after yourself, cleaning out the refrigerator once in a while and refraining from creating bizarre pictograms in the carpet via a generic liquid bleaching agent.

Our Word

Saluki pride

University has more to offer than negative images suggest

SOME STUDENTS AT SOUTHERN HAVE come to believe that there are only negative images associated with our University. Images of fall riots on CNN come to mind, and an SIU Law student who is the worldwide leader of a white supremacist church also enters the picture.

However, many fail to notice the plethora of attention given the school for its quality students and programs.

THE SALUKI TEAMS ARE NOT EXACTLY mentioned in Sports Illustrated on a regular basis, yet individuals have brought excellence to the University. The odds against making it to the pro ranks in sports are astronomical. However, a few Salukis go on to make their mark:

- Damon Jones, a former Saluki football tightend, has a good chance to end up a professional football player in the NFL.

- Chris Carr, a former Saluki basketball forward, plays for the Minnesota Timberwolves.

- Kasia McClendon, who just played her last game with the Saluki basketball team, has a pro shot at the American Basketball League or the newly formed Women's Basketball Association.

- A few days ago the men's swimming team took first place in the National Independent Championship, competing against the best teams in the nation.

SPORTS ARE NOT THE ONLY THING TO grab a state or national spotlight:

- SIUC's debate team was ranked No. 1 in the nation in 1996, surpassing debate teams for UCLA, U of I and Harvard. The team also was named to the All-American Debate Team. This season, the team is third in the nation.

- Radio and Television senior Andrew Ensor won an Academy Award this year for a documentary he made for the WSIU-TV "River Region" spotlight program.

- The Daily Egyptian received 20 awards last month at the Illinois College Press Association, including a first-place award for news coverage of the October riots, beating The Daily Illini and the Daily Northwestern. The DE also received honorable mention in the General Excellence category.

- The SIU School of Law's relations clinic will be the first law school clinic in the country to be a mediator for the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The University was chosen because of the excellent reputation of the School of Law and the College of Agriculture.

- The Graduate and Professional Student Council received the 1996 Graduate/Professional Student Organization of the Year award for the leadership the council provides in the name of the students.

- U.S. News and World Report ranked the SIU School of Medicine 12th out of 79 schools in training physicians who practice primary care medicine.

OF COURSE, THIS IS ONLY A SMALL representation of the excellence that SIUC has bred. We should take a look around before we begin to believe that riots, a white supremacist church and Jenny McCarthy are the only things that are recognizable about our University.

Column on cloning shows women as shallow as men

Dear Editor:

My feelings come after reading your March 3 paper. In this issue of the Daily Egyptian, Emily Priddy wrote an article entitled "I think I'm a clone now: Xeroxed men have potential."

I was outraged after reading this feminist's egotistical article.

My emotions were crushed after hearing that women want to use the highly developed research on DNA cloning to increase their sexual activity.

She talks about stars such as Denzel Washington and Sean Connery being cloned to purchase for her "very own" so they can supply her with "instant gratification."

Well, obviously she doesn't know Denzel Washington or Sean Connery; how does she know if they have a nice personality?

Is the male body all that is important any more? What ever happened to love and sharing emotions?

I was heartbroken to hear all women want today are clones of the perfect male image. This degrades the male population to nothing more than a piece of meat.

I think the male race needs to bond together and take a stand against women using men just as sex objects.

Men have feelings too, you know.

I sat down with a few friends of mine, and we had a good cry about how cruel females are to us. All they want to do is use us for our bodies and leave us...

Okay, enough of the bull about emotions. It's time to come back to reality — guys don't have feelings.

I was heartbroken to hear all women want today are clones of the perfect male image.

This degrades the male population to nothing more than a piece of meat.

For all the women reading this, doesn't it sound like a ridiculous attempt to gain attention, much like many of you use?

Guys, the next time a lady tries to pull the "you have no feelings" line, remember Emily Priddy's article. The only feelings they really want are orgasmic — just like us.

Museum needs better funding

Dear Editor:

In contrast to Baylor University, where I received my bachelor's degree, I was startled at the amount of student fees we pay at SIU. After briefly investigating, I realized that our money is earmarked for many worthy programs: the Rec Center, Student Center, medical benefits, activities and clubs, campus safety, mass transit, the students' attorney and an athletic fund. I have no problem supporting these programs, but I do believe that one department was overlooked when the money was distributed: the University Museum.

Up until now, you may not have given a second thought as to what goes on in the museum. Consider this letter your cue to find it (north end of Finner) and see what it has to offer. Exhibits range from student and faculty art shows to the present collection being shown, titled "African-American Hairitage," and ... they're free! Consider for a moment how many SIUC programs, games, films and activities require you to pay an entrance fee. Most of them, you say?

... I do believe that one department was overlooked when the (student fee) money was distributed: the University Museum.

Museum could really use your support, I would like to make evident our obvious need for more funding. At present, we employ only half of the necessary staff because of budget cuts. Money is also required for the preservation and upkeep of our artifacts and treasures, and trust me, there are some treasures — e.g., Picasso's "Le Fumeur." The expense of exhibiting and offering educational programs is also costly.

A group who receives 10.9 percent of your student fees would receive $53 from an undergrad taking 12 hours. Let's just say that there are 15,000 undergrads ... that's $795,000 for one program, but the museum receives nothing yet. If the student body were willing to reallocate $1.00 from other programs and create a new fund for the museum, we would make a whopping $15,000!

If you believe the museum is deserving of your financial support, drop a note to: Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs, SIUC, Carbondale, Illinois 62901 or an e-mail to lwelch@notes.siu.edu or call 453-2461.

Love can conquer extreme hate

Dear Editor:

Your recent article on the World Church of the Creator has certainly given us something to think about. I quite agree with the notion that the seeds of fear and hatred which are central to this group are the seeds of its destruction. Extreme white pride, extreme black pride or any extreme pride tends to be unhealthy for all of us.

Although these issues are intense, contrary to what Josh Robison (DE Feb. 17) has said, there is a middle ground. (Matt) Hale and (Jonathan) Viktor and their followers were not born with hate in their hearts. People do move from one position to another, even one extreme position to another, and they usually go through middle ground in the process. One way to help in this process was in Audrey B. Chapman's Ten Commandments of Love, listed in the same DE. These are far more powerful than the 16 Commandments of Hale's group.

I hope that the awareness of hatred and fear in our midst can only be a help to each of us in moving toward being better individuals in the way we treat our fellow humans.

Decent people trying to end racism

Dear Editor:

Sorry to keep this topic on debate when there is only one obvious stand. Matt Hale, it is good that you accept your racism. I understand and agree that there is much racism in this country. If there wasn't then there wouldn't be any need for certain amendments to the Constitution based on sexism and racism. The majority of decent people of all races are not ignoring the racism, but rather are mature enough to understand that humankind has its differences, and instead of separating ourselves, we embrace our similarities as individuals or as a whole.

Also, we are not hiding our racism, but merely trying to overcome it. This battle is tougher for some than for others. And I believe, just as you believe the opposite, that racism will someday disappear, perhaps not in my lifetime, but someday. And you can be sure that in my lifetime, I will never hinder the inevitable forward progress of humankind.

Theater professor accepts position at Yale University

CAREER CHANGE:

Teacher will head undergraduate theater studies at Yale.

As the head of the Master of Fine Arts Directing Program, David Krasner says SIUC's Theater Department has prepared him for a position at Yale University.

Krasner, an acting and directing professor, said in early December he decided to take on the position as the director of undergraduate theater studies at Yale University in New Haven, Conn., beginning Sept. 1.

He said his experience from SIUC's Theater Department contributed to his new position at Yale.

"Because I have no administration experience, I didn't think I'd get it," he said. "But all the directing experience I had must have done it for me."

Yale University, Krasner said, is a prestigious institution with a well-known reputation for its Drama Department.

Krasner, who has taught at SIUC for two years, said he has enjoyed it, but Yale has given him a position that never may have been offered at SIUC.

Sarah Blackstone, chairwoman of the Theater Department, said Krasner has the skills it takes to be part of the Yale faculty. She said he is a scholar as well as a director and actor.

"If Yale hired him, then he must have the right stuff," she said.

Blackstone said Krasner is a person who is willing to help the department and its students, and he has directed some of the best plays in the department.

"He has brought a new audience into our theater with 'Angels in America' and 'End of the Woods,'" she said.

In 1993, when he began teaching at SIUC, Krasner said his position as the head of the MFA Directing program gave him the chance to change the program around by creating excellence in performance and directing.

"I am thankful that the department gave me the opportunity to teach and direct, especially 'Angels in America,'" Krasner said.

Students in Krasner's play-directing class said he is a professor who has an authoritative presence and will match well with Yale's Theater Department.

Chris Pelant, a senior in theater from Ventura, Calif., said Krasner's resignation will be a loss to the department.

"David is a teacher who will get the job done because he is competitive and has several aspects of wisdom," Pelant said.

Krasner said he is not only furthering his career at Yale because of its quality in education but also to be closer to his home in New York. Carbondale does not have enough theater, he said.

"I've been away from New York for four years, and I miss it," Krasner said.

"I have to go to the theater continually."

of the Good Shepherd, translated his statements for the interview.

Rodriguez said people in the United States have an abundance of possessions that the people in his country do not have.

One of the reasons for that, he said, is an embargo the U.S. government has placed on the nation of Cuba.

"The U.S. blockade is the real problem," he said. "The blockade has made it difficult to get medicine, food, oil and the basic stuff of life. Eighty-six percent of all our goods are imported."

He said the Helms/Burton Law has caused many problems for Cuba.

The law, which was signed by President Clinton in March 1996, establishes measures to bring political pressure against Cuba. The law states that all private properties seized by the socialist state of Cuba from the beginning of 1959 must be returned to their former owners.

It also forces other countries to recognize the embargo against Cuba. If countries refuse to put a blockade against Cuba, then the United States will refuse to trade in part or in whole with those countries.

A former Latin-American Studies professor, William Garner, a professor emeritus in political science, said the problems in Cuba were created by the United States when it took control of Cuba in 1898.

He said the United States has been forming policy in Cuba under the assumption of two basic myths. He said the idea of restoring a democracy in Cuba is a myth because there never has been one in Cuba, and the notion of returning Cuba to a nation state also is false.

Garner said Cuba has been ruled by Spain, the United States and until recently, Russia. He said Cuba is now a nation state because it no longer is controlled by Russia, but it is the first time Cuba has ruled itself.

The problems in Cuba, Garner said, are the United States' own doing, but the government is not handling the problem well with such laws.

"The mess in our backyard (Cuba) is largely our mess," he said. "Is it too unreasonable for us to see our responsibility as cleaning it up in such a way that problems there do not mushroom and represent an even greater threat, causing us even more harm?"

Since Cuba is no longer a threat, Garner said the United States should join the rest of the world in friendly trade and relations with the country. He said because there is no clear and present danger, the Helms/Burton Law is bad for the United States and Cuba.

While Rodriguez enjoyed his stay in the United States, he said the people should fight against the blockade.

"This law is not good for Cuba, and it is not good for the United States," he said. "Cuba is not a threat militarily, politically or economically."

Despite the problems he has with the U.S. government, he said he is impressed with Carbondale and especially the University.

"There are so many books here, and that is a great advantage," he said. "It seems that it is an important place."

Although Rodriguez said he admired the University, he said there are many things in Carbondale that can detract people from learning.

"There are so many distractions here," he said. "With things like television, it means people have to use great effort to get to the library."

Rodriguez stayed with two Carbondale residents, Hugh Muldoon and his wife, Judy Ashby.

After spending a week with Rodriguez, Muldoon said he was struck with the sense of pride the Cuban people have despite the adverse living conditions.

every time he or she steps on stage. "The audience must know from the moment they see you on stage that you know they are there," she said.

Bill Hulings, an actor from the company, said when actors play a character, it gets intricate and developed, but the first thing to work on is the entrance.

"Anytime a new actor comes on stage, the physical space should change," he said. "The audience should actually feel the difference."

Kevin Kelly, an actor who joined the company in December, said if an actor makes an impression with an entrance, the performance remains with people longer.

"We almost always sabotage ourselves with timidity and not realizing how many options or parts of ourselves to use," he said.

Jones said although only two workshops were offered here, they do up to 10.

"We do maybe two a week," she said. "The other workshop we did was a slapstick where we introduced a group of students to various elements of physical comedy like slapping, kicking and falling."

Jones said making an entrance is like shooting a bow and arrow.

"You don't succeed until you hit the target, which is your audience," she said.

school run by the federal government.

"The children in those schools were not allowed to speak our language," she said. "Most were taken against their will from their families. Our language and heritage was almost lost."

Dugan said she has been teaching in the Cherokee educational system since 1966 and became director of education on June 1991.

About 10,114 eastern Cherokee lived on or near the North Carolina reservation in 1990, according to a census.

Dugan said it has never been unusual for a woman to hold a position of authority in her tribe.

"When the settlers first came, they made the comment, 'These Cherokee men are lazy. They let the women do all the work,'" she said. "Women even decided divorce. If they did not want to be married anymore, they put the man's clothes outside."

Mark Pritchard, a second-year law student from Colorado and a member of the American Indian Association, said he understands the lost culture of the Cherokee Indians.

"I am one-half Cherokee," he said. "There was a lot of lost culture in my family by my parents not speaking the native language."

Pritchard said his mother also was in a boarding school.

"It really effects parenting skills when your parents were taught they were worth nothing in boarding schools," he said.

WIDB still lacks funding

SELF-SUFFICIENT:

Student hopes radio station can become independent.

DAVE ARMSTRONG
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Running a radio station on a budget that is 33 times less than major radio stations takes a lot of effort, the chief engineer of the station says.

Morgan Grammer, a senior in radio and television from White Heath and chief engineer for WIDB-cable FM 104.3, said he has had to donate personal items in place of equipment the station needs.

"We have all sorts of equipment that needs to be replaced or paid for," Grammer said. "I've practically donated my home computer to the station so we can run RealAudio without purchasing a new computer."

WIDB, the campus radio station since 1970, has been plagued with funding troubles because of the electrical spike that left it with burned-out equipment in February 1996.

"After a couple of days, it was pretty clear we couldn't make any equipment work again," he said. "We asked (Undergraduate Student Government) for our $15,000 operating budget and a one-time $80,000 equipment budget, but they refused to give us either, since we weren't operating."

"We fought with them until the end of the year. They made a mockery of my life for four months and then gave us the $15,000."

USG Vice President David Vingren said USG decided the idea of loaning WIDB $80,000 was out of the question, because it did not receive enough information from WIDB to warrant loaning money.

"Their numbers kept changing, and they weren't sure of what they wanted," Vingren. "They wanted us to rush this money through, and it was near the end of the year. I didn't support the loan."

Grammer said the $15,000 operating budget was enough to get WIDB back on the air on Oct. 1, but the station still is in need of money to get basic equipment, and form news and ad production studios.

Dave Goode, a junior in radio and television from Buffalo Grove and general manager of WIDB, said something positive that has happened to the station is it has expanded to include RealAudio broadcasting on the Internet.

"Starting March 17, we'll have a link from the siu.edu (SIU Internet) page so students can click and hear our broadcasts live," Goode said.

WIDB's descent can be traced back to an administrative decision made in 1992 by the SIU Board of Trustees and former Chancellor John Guyon, Grammer said. In 1992, WIDB filed the necessary paperwork with the Federal Communications Commission to become a licensed on-air station at 91.1 FM. It was the only slot left for an FM station in Carbondale.

Grammer said Guyon and the board refused to sign the papers allowing WIDB to become an on-air station, citing an unprofessional on-air manner in which students used explosives, which presented a possible liability.

Grammer said WBDX-FM soon occupied the 91.1 FM slot, leaving WIDB with no possibility to be an on-air station, which is a station that can broadcast anywhere in the area. WIDB is able to broadcast in the Student Center, Channel 5 and RealAudio.

"Now that WBDX has that license, there is no way for us to get on the air unless an existing station goes off," Grammer said. "The paperwork cost us about $3,000 of the station's money, and Mike Starr (Radio and Television Department chairman) lost $7,000 of his own money to engineering fees he paid for FCC requirements."

Grammer said his dream is to make the station self-sufficient, but WIDB may have to use money from USG to do so.

"If we had a one-time loan of about $60,000, we could purchase the equipment we would need to be on our own," Grammer said. "We could also get the money from end of the year rollover. I've seen departments spend $100,000 in 12 hours so they didn't lose the money. Why not shuttle that over to us? If that kind of money is floating around, we could sure use it."

Vingren said he believes a $60,000 loan from USG is a possibility for WIDB's woes.

"WIDB needs to come up with a 10- to 15-year plan with definite structure to it," Vingren said. "We can't give out $60,000 just like that. I do think it is something that we should be looking into though."

Turner gets contract renewal

NEW BEGINNING:

Washington Coach Norv Turner gets an additional three years.

WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON—Washington Redskins Coach Norv Turner received a dramatic and decisive vote of confidence Tuesday when team owner Jack Kent Cooke extended his contract for an additional three years, through the 2001 season.

"Mr. Cooke wanted me, and this definitely is where I wanted to be," Turner said. "I think Mr. Cooke has sent a message that we're going to have continuity. If the coach's job security is an issue, that's a distraction. Every distraction you can remove helps a football team. Our football team will be able to focus on what we have to do to get better."

Turner, 44, had two seasons remaining on the original five-year, $3-million deal he received in 1994. Cooke and Turner began discussing an extension about six weeks ago and settled on a three-year deal.

In three seasons, Turner has an 18-30 career record and no playoff appearances. While suffering through seasons of 3-13 and 6-10, Turner and Redskins General Manager Charley Casserly overhauled the roster through free-agency and the draft.

The Redskins have improved each year and seemed on their way to the playoffs last season before losing six of their final eight games. Their 9-7 record still represented Turner's first winning season.

what happens in his basketball career.

Hudson said Carr's success in the NBA gave him some motivation to try it himself.

"Seeing him (Carr) do that encouraged me a lot," Hudson said. "I've seen that he was able to go in there and a lot of people didn't think he could make it, but he did. It gave me a lot of strength to try to pursue leaving after my junior season."

Both Herrin and Hudson agreed that Hudson's strengths are his quickness and his shooting ability. "I'm looking to play point guard," Hudson said. "I think I'm very quick, and I can score. I have a lot of confidence."

After graduating from Carbondale High School in 1994, Hudson enrolled at the University of Missouri-Columbia, but transferred to SIUC halfway through his freshman season.

During Hudson's two seasons with the Salukis, SIUC finished with an 11-18 record in 1995-96 and a 13-17 record this season, while Hudson led the Salukis in scoring both seasons.

But Hudson said the team's mediocre performances had no bearing on his desire to enter the draft.

"It really wasn't a tough decision," Hudson said. "We didn't have two great seasons, but I had a lot of memories here. I wouldn't trade anything."

Herrin said Hudson will be successful in life regardless of his basketball career.

"This guy is a classy individual," Herrin said. "He knows the difference between right and wrong, and he makes good decisions. He is a great young man."

"He's always got a smile on his face, and he's very friendly. He got his opportunity and came to play."

Missouri Valley Conference Tournament in St. Louis.

Hudson averaged 21 points per game for the second straight season, while leading the Valley in scoring this season.

Last season, Hudson finished 28th in the nation in scoring with 21.3 points per game.

Forward James Watts, a sophomore from Memphis, Tenn., said Hudson's scoring ability will be hard to replace.

"Troy is a competitive player, and he led the league in scoring," Watts said.

"If he wants to take a chance, then he should."

While Hudson's loss means the Salukis will have to replace his offense, Hamner said SIUC's inside players will need to pick up some of the load.

"A lot of our scoring has come from outside with the guards," Hamner said. "I look for that production to shift to the inside players a little more."

Hudson's departure may be temporary, as he is planning to keep his options open and might return to SIUC.

But Watts said the Salukis must treat the situation as if Hudson will not return.

"Right now, you've got to look at it as if he's gone," Watts said. "We've got to get in the weight room and be prepared for next season."

"If he comes back, then we've got our leading scorer back, and we'll make another run at the Big Dance (the NCAA Tournament)."

Salukis lose tight battle

EDGED OUT AGAIN:

Rough start stops Dawgs despite strong comeback.

MICHAEL DEFORD
DE SPORTS EDITOR

For someone who had just ended the day with two home runs and 7 RBIs, designated hitter Brad Benson looked like an emotional wreck Tuesday afternoon at Abe Martin Field.

Trailing visiting Murray State 7-3 with the bases loaded in the bottom of the seventh inning, Benson hit the second of two homers, a grand slam to left center, to knot the game at seven apiece.

Unfortunately, Murray State came back to load the bases in the top of the ninth on two hits and an intentional walk, then walked in the winning run to give MSU an 8-7 win and throw Benson's emotional high off kilter.

"It was a disappointing loss...it really was," Benson, a junior, said afterward. "There is not much more you can say about it."

Murray State (5-4) jumped on the Salukis (1-7) in the first for three runs on two hits and two errors. MSU added another run in the top of the second to take a 4-0 lead, knocking out Saluki starter Dave Anderson.

Benson cut the lead to 4-1 when he belted the first of his two homers in the bottom of the second. Murray State added two runs in the top of the third and another in the top of the fifth.

"Brad Benson deserves to have success," Saluki coach Dan Callahan said. "He works his butt off. I'm always pleased to see guys like that have success."

Benson answered with a two-run double in the bottom of the sixth to cut Murray's lead to 7-3, then added the grand slam.

"I was just trying to make contact," Benson said. "It felt great. I did that and I thought we had the game then. We just couldn't pull it off."

Benson went four-for-five Tuesday and was responsible for all seven SIUC runs, while Murray State only allowed SIUC 10 hits as a team.

MSU got five solid innings out of starter Todd Hollowell, who only gave up three hits and one run in five innings of work.

"Hollowell threw extremely well and kept us in check the first five innings," Callahan said. "I thought they did a good job. They came out and swung the bats well."

While Murray came out swinging, the first inning was SIUC's downfall. Two errors, one of which a mishandled fly by outfielders Joe Schley and Joel Peters, coupled by a two-run homer by MSU first baseman Robert Weatherly set the tone early.

Anderson gave up two walks and two hits in the inning, while the errors helped to account for the three runs.

"We did a horrible job coming out of the gates," Callahan said. "There was no excuse for what happened in left field with Peters and Schley. That particular play and Anderson's inability to work ahead of the hitters basically dictated the course of the game for the first five innings."

"That discourages me more than anything," Anderson only lasted through

ON THE MOUND: Saluki pitcher Jim Pecoraro, a freshman from Fairview Heights, pitches Tuesday during the game against Murry State University at Abe Martin Field.

2 1/3 innings before being replaced by freshman Jim Pecoraro, who gave a solid performance. Pecoraro gave up eight hits and two earned runs in 5 2/3 innings of work.

Callahan yanked Pecoraro in the ninth after he gave up a double on an 0-2 pitch.

"I thought Pecoraro did an outstanding job," Callahan said. "But just one mental lapse changed the whole complexion of the ninth inning. Prior to that he was cruising."

"One particular pitch just places a black cloud over the hole scene,"

Senior Mike McConnell came on in relief of Pecoraro with runners on second and third with no outs.

McConnell intentionally walked the first batter he faced, left fielder Chad Hamm, then got the short stop Brad Langdon to fly out to center. Pecoraro then walked right fielder Chad Vrbka to score Hamm from third.

"The misplay in left field and our pitching the first couple of innings set the whole tone for the game," Callahan said. "Those two things are what is most discouraging to me."

techniques to improve my game."

Besides Johnson, the Salukis received a good effort from junior Molly Card against the Louisiana schools. Card's only loss came against Tulane, a game that was interrupted because of the weather.

Card said the rain delay during her match caused her to lose focus, allowing her opponent to regroup and come back strong in the match. Card lost the match 6-2, 6-0.

"Anytime you have a rain delay during a match, it can change the outcome because your opponent can rest and come back with more energy," she said.

Card said she thought the team performed at a high level during the weekend and showed character by hanging around in every match.

"When you lose 5-1 to schools in the top 100, you have to feel proud of what you accomplished," she said. "As a team, we played much better this week than the last two, which shows we are improving as the season moves on."

Auld said the Salukis' efforts against the Louisiana schools proved to be a stepping stone in the maturity of the team.

"As a team we looked real good this weekend," she said. "The players that are competing in the top positions are facing tough competition week in and week out, which will only make them stronger."

Up next for the Salukis is a battle against Memphis University, the University of Tennessee Chattanooga and Arkansas Little Rock University beginning March 28.

It took just 58 college basketball games for Saluki guard Troy Hudson to know he is ready for the NBA.

Hudson, a junior in liberal arts from Carbondale, announced Tuesday his intentions to forego his senior season at SIUC and make himself eligible for June's NBA draft.

"I just want to thank SIUC for the giving me the opportunity to play," Hudson said in a press conference at SIUC Arena. "I want to say thanks for the fan support and say thanks to my coaches, my teammates and my family and friends for supporting me while I've been here."

Hudson, who was seated between his mother and coach Rich Herrin, said he is ready to move on.

"I've been thinking about it for a while, but just in the past week I decided I was going to do this," Hudson said. "I've always wanted an opportunity to play professional basketball. I thought right now was the opportune time to pursue that dream."

Hudson finished the 1996-97 season averaging 21 points per game and likely will be the nation's leading three-point shooter with 4.5 per game.

Hudson, who is the first SIUC underclassman to enter the NBA draft since the Minnesota Timberwolves' Chris Carr two years ago, said he is confident he can make the transition to playing professional basketball.

"Anything can happen," Hudson said. "I think that I'm good enough to play. I might get picked and I might not, but I'm not going to give up."

"I think I have a good shot at it, and I'm going to go in there and give it my best."

While he has had plans on playing in the NBA, Hudson has not signed with an agent and could return to the Salukis if he does not sign with an agent or an NBA team.

"I'm not looking for that (an agent) at this time," Hudson said. "I'm just going to see what happens and react to whatever goes on."

Herrin said he understands Hudson's decision and is confident he made the right decision.

"I support Troy 100 percent," Herrin said. "With the confidence that Troy Hudson has, if he feels this is what he wants to do, then I have to give him my total support."

Hudson said money was a not factor in his decision, and he intends to complete the academic semester and eventually earn a degree in liberal arts regardless of SIUC men's basketball guard Troy Hudson's announcement to enter the NBA draft does not come as a surprise to some of his teammates.

"We've known all along that it's Troy Hudson's dream to play in the NBA," Ryan Hammer said. "He's following those goals."

Hammer, a sophomore from Lawrenceville who played a back-up role behind Hudson the past two seasons, said the Salukis will miss Hudson.

"It's kind of hard to see him go because he's so talented," Hammer said. "I've gotten close to him over the past couple of years, and he's a great kid. But it's his dream to play in the NBA, and that's what he's going to do."

Hudson's announcement came just four days after the Salukis ended a disappointing season with a 13-17 record and a loss to Indiana State University in the opening round of the

A bleak season opening is brightened by one spectacular player.

SIUC women's tennis player Helen Johnson breathed life back into her team by going undefeated Saturday against Southeastern Louisiana University.

The Salukis had a dismal 0-5 start to their season, but Johnson's perfect record against Southeastern Louisiana University put a plus in the Salukis' win column.

The Salukis won 5-4 against Southeast Louisiana Saturday but dropped a 5-4 contest to the University of New Orleans Friday and then lost Sunday 5-4 to Tulane University.

Johnson went 2-0 in all her singles and doubles matches against Southeast Louisiana and was 6-0 during the weekend.

"I knew if I kept playing tough in my matches, then my opponent would start to make mistakes against me, and I could capitalize on that," the junior said. "The more I won, the more confident I became."

After their weekend matches, the Salukis are now 1-6 on the season.

Coach Judy Auld said Johnson's performances went beyond her expectations.

"I was pleased with Helen's performance," she said. "Helen's been playing against tough competition in the No. 4 spot, and this weekend proved she can compete against anyone."

Auld said the Salukis have had many close matches that ended in defeats in recent meets, but the losses helped the team improve its performance this weekend.

"We played much better than we did the first two weeks of the season," she said. "The team could have rolled over and quit, but they continued to battle until the end."

After the New Orleans loss, the Salukis went to Hammond, La., to face Southeastern Louisiana. The Salukis got off to a rocky start, when senior Liz Gardner lost her match 6-1, 7-5. SIUC eventually won the next game because of the strong play of Johnson.

"I have been getting better the last two weeks," Johnson said. "I have been practicing on different
