Group releases impact study

SARA BEAN
POLITICS EDITOR

Factors such as electronic commerce and web-based purchasing have more effect on regional economy than the shared service center would have, according to an Arthur Andersen economic impact analysis released Tuesday.

Associates of Arthur Andersen, an accounting and consulting firm in Chicago, presented its findings to SIUC and SIUE administrators, the SIUC Faculty Senate and the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce Tuesday.

The Arthur Andersen regional economic impact analysis stated the effects of a shared service center for procurement and a preferred vendor program would have an "immaterial" impact on Carbondale, senior Andersen associate Jim Roth said. The recommendations came from recent studies conducted by Andersen.

The impact analysis focused on two dimensions: the economic impact of a shared service center and the economic impact of purchasing goods of services through a preferred vendor system for major goods.

The shared service center, recommended in a study released in December 1998, would centralize all purchasing and disbursement functions to the control of one management for all three SIU campuses.

Andersen associates reasoned that the majority of the savings provided through the shared service center would come from the reduction of total salary and operational expenditures. These reductions would be accomplished by attrition or by transferring and retraining personnel, the report said. Therefore, any cost savings would be redirected to academic functions, and overall spending would not significantly be reduced, having minimal effect the economy.

USG to discuss fee, grade standard

DAN CRAFT
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Undergraduate Student Government will consider new approaches to issues including the proposed technology fee and GPA requirements for USG members tonight.

College of Agriculture Senator Ben Syfert has submitted a new amendment to the USG constitution that would require all USG members to maintain a 2.25 GPA.

This is the second GPA amendment Syfert has proposed to USG. The first proposal sought to lower the standard to 2.0 for all members. It was defeated in the Senate last month.

All senators must retain a 2.25 GPA to remain in USG. The president and vice president, however, must have a 2.5 GPA to run for office and maintain a 2.35 GPA once elected.

In other business, USG will consider the possibility of placing a referendum concerning the technology fee on the Student Trustee election ballots in April. USG discussed the possibility in past meetings, and legislation has been drafted for tonight.

The vote would be non-binding but is considered by USG President Jackie Smith as an excellent way to gain student input on the issue.

Other legislation on the agenda deals with the structure of fees for the upcoming fiscal year.

One resolution calls for support for a 7.5-percent increase in the rates charged for on-campus housing. Ed Jones, the on-campus housing director, spoke to USG regarding the increase last week. The increase would be a one-time increase and would be permanent.

The overall fee adjustments for the next fiscal year also are prepared for approval. USG has specified its opinions regarding the different fees and seeks to send its recommendations to the administration with the support of the Senate.

Senators join greeks in appealing Select 2000 initiative

SARA BEAN AND DAN CRAFT
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTERS

Undergraduate Student Government is lending its support to the SIUC greek community with a resolution calling for a student referendum on Select 2000 to be placed on the USG presidential/vice presidential ballot in April.

USG President Jackie Smith said the resolution is a response to petitions signed by members of the greek community asking for a review of the Select 2000 — a nine-point initiative that requires fraternities and sororities to maintain high academic standards, complete community service hours and have alcohol-free housing.

"This supports what the greeks are trying to do," Smith said. "This isn't just a greek issue, it affects RSOs, too."

The resolution, written by Smith, USG Vice President Brian Atchison, Pi Kappa Alpha President Tom Olson, and Sigma Phi Epsilon President George Grey, also charges the University Administration to re-open discussions about the program with members of the greek community.

"The participants don't like the program to the point that they are willing to sign the petition and distribute it," Smith said. "No one in their right mind would say that the greeks are happy with Select 2000."

Select 2000 was implemented at SIUC two years ago as a pilot program. Three other campuses across the nation — the University of Northern Colorado, Southern Florida College and Villanova University — also volunteered as pilot schools.

The USG resolution points out that the program was publicly announced as a pilot only and should be subject to review. Smith said the state of dissatisfaction among greeks makes this especially important.

"I hope this resolution gives credibility to the argument that the greeks are giving,"

Smith said. "I think it is clear that someone screwed up if everyone is this angry."

Atchison said many greek letter organizations feel that they are "just a service club."

He said this resolution, and the pending referendum, offers the students a "true, unanimous voice that is not weighted down by fear."

MEETING

USG will meet tonight at 7 in the Student Center Ballroom B.

Almanac

THIS WEEK IN 1970:

- President Nixon had a recommendation from one of his key advisers that the racial issue could benefit from a period of benign neglect and low key approach to racial progress. The suggestion came from Daniel P. Moynihan, the chief White House expert on urban affairs. Moynihan said, "The subject has been too much talked about. The forum has been too much taken over to hysterics, paranoias and batters on all sides."
- Artists at the Menard branch of the Illinois State Prison had just received four art books donated by Epsilon Sigma Alpha sorority. The books were taken to the inmates by Don Ross, a former assistant in adult education, who taught two courses in art at the prison.
- Billboard's top 10 LP's were Led Zepplin II, Beatles "Abbey Road," Creedence Clearwater Revival "Willie and the Poor Boys," Tom Jones "Live in Las Vegas," Engelbert Humperdinck "Engelbert Humperdinck," Chicago "Chicago," Jackason 5 "I Want You Back," Three Dog Night "Was Captured Live at the Forum" and soundtrack "Easy Rider."

Doctors recommend Carbondale

FRANK KLIMAS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The total number of medical doctors who have moved to Carbondale is up, according to the U.S. Census.

For nearly 30 years, the population of doctors practicing in Carbondale has increased, but the population of residents has remained about the same.

The 1970 U.S. Census reported 22,816 Carbondale residents not including students. The number slightly rose to 26,287 in 1980 and is currently estimated by the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce to be about 27,000. This represents an estimated 18.3-percent increase in the population between 1970 and 1999.

However, the population of doctors has increased by more than 200 percent. This is disproportionate when compared to the slow population-rate increase during the same time period.

Dr. Douglas Gates is an obstetrician-gynecologist at the Carbondale Clinic, 305 W. Jackson. He moved here in 1995 from Los Angeles because he was "tired of graffiti."

"I wanted to move into a university community," Gates said. As did Dr. Marsha Ryan, who moved to Carbondale to live in a university community because of the advantages it offers medical professionals.

"Carbondale has the advantages of a small town and the advantages of an urban medical community," Ryan, a general surgeon, said.

Dr. Rebecca Hartman is an obstetrician-gynecologist who has lived here for 15 years. She was recruited by the Carbondale Clinic from the Lansing, Mich., area.

"I liked the area," Hartman said. "The Medical School is definitely a benefit."

Gates and Ryan also see the SIU School of Medicine as a benefit. Gates explained the Medical School offers physicians an opportunity to enhance their medical education, and Ryan works with the SIU medical residents.

Gates is also an assistant clinical professor in the Department of Family Medicine at the School of Medicine.

"Carbondale offers well-trained, skilled colleagues to work with all in a university community," Gates said. "Carbondale has a good quality hospital."

Memorial Hospital of Carbondale has 191 doctors on its staff, up from 62 in 1970 and 88 in 1979.

During Carbondale's greatest growth spurt in the 29-year span, the population increased 15 percent between the years 1970 to 1980, but the number of doctors increased 26 percent.

What's Up Doc?
Doctors on staff of Memorial Hospital - Carbondale
Year	Population
1970	62
1980	88
1999	191

Source: U.S. Census Bureau, Carbondale Chamber of Commerce, Memorial Hospital of Carbondale

Doctors increased more than 166 percent between 1980 and 1999, but the Carbondale population is estimated to increase only 2.7 percent.

Ryan, who moved to Carbondale in 1981 at the beginning of the biggest increase of doctors, said she knows the reason behind the doctor boom.

"Carbondale has become a medical community," Ryan said. "It has many sophisticated specialties. No one expects a town of 27,000 to have such sophisticated medical specialties."

Three men arrested in connection with stolen car

Carbondale Police arrested one man on four charges and two others on one charge after they were found to be in possession of a stolen car early Monday.

Police stopped a red Honda Accord around 12:55 a.m. when the car was traveling the wrong way on Illinois Avenue near the corner of Oak Street.

Edward L. McKenney, 21, of Alorton, was driving the vehicle, and police discovered it was stolen out of St. Clair County. Robert M. Rodriguez, 21, and St. Andre S. Carter, 20, both of Cahokia, were riding in the vehicle. The men were charged with possession of a stolen vehicle, police said.

McKenney, who had no valid driver's license, was wanted on a federal parole-violation warrant. He also was charged with unlawful use of a weapon when police spotted brass knuckles under the driver's seat.

The men were taken to Jackson County Jail.

Carter and Rodriguez were released around noon Monday, and McKenney was still being detained as of press time.

School of Law hosts open technology forum today

An open forum sponsored by the School of Law concerning the future of technology will take place today at 2:30 p.m. in the Law School Auditorium.

The forum will discuss how to better use technology in the Law School and at SIUC. The forum is open to everyone and will be the first of several technology forums at the Law School.

The purpose of the forum is to get input and ideas from students, faculty and staff to better plan for technology. The new technology fee proposed by SIUC administration may be discussed.

SIUC not likely to follow Dartmouth's lead

Gus Bode

KAREN BLATTER
ACADEMIC AFFAIRS EDITOR

Gus says: I thought we already had co-ed living arrangements.

The establishment of co-ed fraternities and sororities is one change to the SIUC greek system an SIUC official and students never want to see.

Dartmouth College, in Hanover, N.H., is forcing its greek system to become co-ed. Under the new policy, fraternities would have to accept female members, and sororities would have to accept male members.

Dartmouth's Board of Trustees made the decision to go co-ed in order to reduce alcohol abuse, raise standards of behaviors and encourage respectful relationships between women and men in the greek system. The changes will begin by next fall.

Katie Sermersheim, assistant director of Student Development, said chapters going co-ed is not the way the greek system was designed and would defeat the system's purpose.

"I would not see it happen here," she said. "We have no intentions in going in that direction."

Dartmouth is best known for its Alpha Delta fraternity inspiring the movie "Animal House." Greek life at the college has been the center for entertainment for years at the small campus.

More than half of sophomores, juniors and seniors at Dartmouth are part of the greek system. Freshmen are not allowed to join.

Many greek members and greek alumni have been protesting the decision and think going co-ed will destroy Dartmouth's greek system.

Because of this, some national chapters are considering pulling the charter of chapters that are represented on Dartmouth's campus.

Tony Blood, president of Inter-Greek Council, does not support co-ed fraternities and sororities and said he only can imagine how greeks at Dartmouth feel.

"They are not happy," he said. "They are being forced to do something they have no support for. This was just shoved on them, and they didn't have much say in it."

Phil DiGiacomo, a member of Sigma Pi Fraternity, does not support what is happening at Dartmouth and said it goes against the point of the greek system.

Construction management technology moves to JALC

KELLY E. HERTLEIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIUC's construction management technology program will soon transfer to the campus of John A. Logan College through a collaborative merger between the two institutions.

Earlier this year, the Illinois Board of Higher Education made the decision to eliminate the construction management technology program from the SIUC curriculum.

University officials agreed the funding was not available to provide the program the proper resources it needed to expand at SIUC, so they made the decision to merge with JALC in order to keep the program.

Elaine Vitello, dean for the College of Applied Sciences and Arts, said the program's transfer from SIUC to JALC should be viewed as a positive transition for the students and the University.

"I really believe that this will be a win-win situation for the students and the institutions involved, which includes SIUC," Vitello said. "Conceptually [the program] was on the boundaries in some of the areas where we were headed. We knew it was a good and strong program, but we also knew that we could not plug the resources in to give it its prominence, which it should have."

The partnership between SIUC and JALC will be a prototype venture, the first of its efforts in the state of Illinois to combine a four-year university with a two-year college. The project is being closely monitored for its

Student gets column back after 'Canucks' fallout

A student who lost his job at Indian State University's student newspaper for referring to Canadians as "Canucks" in a column has been rehired.

Marc Viquez, 23, was fired after his Feb. 17 column in the Indiana Statesman included the term "Canuck" while describing the influx of Canadians into American entertainment.

He got his job back about a week later when Statesman editor Brian McKinley said Viquez's dismissal involved issues beyond his column. McKinley would not elaborate.

The university's director of student publications, Merv Hendricks, had complained that the term is a derogatory label for French Canadians. Hendricks said he later received e-mails from Canadians who said they weren't offended by the word, which is the nickname of Vancouver's National Hockey League franchise.

Viquez, a senior, said he wrote the column at the suggestion of his Canadian girlfriend.

"I still have no apologies for what I wrote," he told the Associated Press. "I think we all know Canuck is not an offensive word."

Religious freedom should be available to everyone

Dear Editor,

This letter is in response to the recent concerns about the newly opened store in Murphysboro, "New Ages, Other Worlds." This country was founded partially in the search for the free expression of religious beliefs. Adults have a responsibility to teach children tolerance and acceptance of differences. Failure to teach these things will result in hatred and prejudice. Before judging this store or its owners, visit the store, check it out yourself, consider its education. I think you'll find that while the store offers a diverse way of looking at things, it is not threatening or dangerous. What the store offers is alternatives, and there can never be too many alternatives.

Our Word

Is one life worth more than another?

SIUC is considering awarding an honorary degree to Bryan A. Hopp, who was an SIUC senior majoring in business administration, who recently passed away in his dorm room because of a cardiac problem.

The DAILY EGYPTIAN supports the efforts of Hopp's parents in their quest to have their son awarded the degree that he was only a few months away from completing.

Tragically, Hopp is only one of several SIUC students that have died recently. These additional deaths and the quest of Hopp's parents to get him the degree he deserves begs an examination of whether or not the University also should consider giving degrees to the other students SIUC has recently lost.

Honorary degrees are special degrees that are rarely given out to more than two people in a year. Many times these degrees are given to those that have made some special achievement or outstanding contribution to the University, such as Dorothy Morris, wife of longtime SIU President Delyte Morris.

In Hopp's case the situation is a little different. Anytime a student dies, or any person at such a young age, it's a big loss. Hopp was only a few months away from receiving his degree after a long battle with health problems and physical ailments. The fact that he was able to come back after double-bypass surgery and strive to defeat the limitations involved with his muscular dystrophy to come within months of a college diploma makes his effort a truly unique and inspiring story worthy of the honor his parents are seeking.

The case for the bestowment of an honorary degree is taken on a case-by-case basis. There are no set in stone rules or qualifications the deciding committee has to follow.

So why not give David Beals, who was an SIUC senior with near perfect grades who was killed in a motorcycle accident Feb. 15, an honorary degree as well? He was an active member of the community who was often outspoken about his beliefs. He is remembered for his protests against Mr. Donald's and the cutting down of trees in the Shawnee National Forest as much as for his work in the Department of Geology. It seems like Beals was a fine contributor to his community who also should be honored.

But Beals and Hopp aren't the only students to recently pass away. James Hugh O'Donnell, who was an SIUC freshman in business, died on Feb. 18 after being diagnosed with pneumonia. O'Donnell was just a freshman, but who's to say his life was less worthy of an honorary degree?

Certainly there seems to be an intangible factor in deciding who is worthy of an honorary degree and to avoid offending or disgracing the memory of all students who work hard to achieve their goals but pass away before ever fully realizing their dreams. Perhaps some guidelines should be set in stone. Is a freshman less worthy than a senior? Would a student who died from alcohol poisoning be less worthy than a murder-victim or a student who died of natural causes?

How do you judge people's character and ability after their death to deem them worthy of an honorary degree or any other award? It seems the closer you are, as both Hopp and Beals were, to graduation the more tragic it would be for them to not receive a degree after suffering untimely deaths. This doesn't make O'Donnell any less of a person or contributor to society, it just means he had less time to show it. In a sense that's a tragedy in itself. But realistically we don't know if O'Donnell would have achieved his degree academically.

Both Hopp and Beals were outstanding students with diplomas nearly in their grasp. It can be argued that as mere human beings we have no right or true authority to judge the life or character of another human being. Nonetheless we do it every day. As fallible individuals we may not have the right to say who should be honored and to what level, but certainly Martin Luther King Jr. is a more honorable individual than Charles Manson. Hopp and Beals may not have made contributions as significant as King, but Beals' contribution to the environment and Hopp's contribution to the spirit of humankind, as well as their academic prowess bestow upon them that intangible quality worthy of a degree they were already so close to receiving. For them to have put forth the effort they did to arrive at the collegiate finish line and never cross would be a tragedy worth mourning in itself.

"Gloria Steinem, where are you now?"

For reasons unbeknownst to myself, I sometimes find myself staked out at the magazine racks of a grocery store leafing through the newest edition of certain beauty magazines.

And I hate them. I hate them desperately. But there's a small side of me that invokes great pleasure from partaking in such mindless entertainment (and an even smaller side of me that pretends I only look through them for early spring fashion tips). Regardless, of why I read them, the result is always the same — I walk away ashamed to be a component of the female gender. And mostly, I walk away having reinforced my hatred for weakness in women.

I'm not by any means a self-proclaimed feminist, but maybe there's an innate fear of weak women that I carry with me. A fear that festers on the possibility that because of this weakness, we as females will regress until there's nothing left of us but mascara-streaked faces being carted around on a flawless pair of legs shoved into sharply tipped pumps. A fear that we'll never make it into the next century as anything more than insecure, defenseless Pollyannas. That these weak women will ruin it for the rest of us who consider having a personality and integrity is a good thing. Gone will be the Gloria Steinems and Camille Paglias and in will parade new sets of "The Rules" and Ally McBeal robotic protégés whose hemlines will then be so short that women will stop wearing skirts all together and commence in decorating their butt cheeks.

To clarify what I mean by "weak" women, I refer to those whose insecurities outnumber the neurons that fire in their brains. Women who resort to desperate tactics of jealousy, who can't validate themselves without a man and who don't know how to live their lives once rejected by a man. Women who are so afraid of someone losing interest in them that they will devise insane schemes that at once use manipulative control and then slip into desperate attempts to please.

A woman who, when faced with a crisis, would rather sludge on some lipstick, hike up her skirt and then ask a man to fix it for her. Women who whine, who are co-dependent, who see no value in themselves, who are possessive. Women who are so fragile that a run in their tights will send them into fits of hysteria. Women who would rather ask a man than learn it themselves. Women who worry more about being attractive and liked than they do about creating a substantial life for themselves.

Women who act how they've been told they should.

One of the aforementioned magazines I perused listed "30 things every woman should know how to do." The highlights of this list included such beauties as learn to pop a zit, learn to play poker and learn to give a sexy back massage.

How about: learn to not be obsessive or learn to develop brain activity above that of a brick wall. Later in the magazine it also instructed that a woman should never attempt to upgrade her computer memory on her own. Yes, thank you Cosmo or whatever magazine it was, we should never even think of trying to learn about how things work. We should never be self-reliant. And most importantly, we should be content to sit patiently and let our lives happen to us. Needless to say after reading the above advice, I threw down the magazine in exchange for one that discussed the joys of finding your G spot.

Fund-raiser celebrates success of Carbondale Crime Stoppers

SPAGHETTI

• Tickets for the seventh-annual Crime Stoppers spaghetti dinner are $3 for children 12 or under and $6 for adults.

• Tickets for the dinner are available at the First Bank, 1500 W. Main St., Vogler Ford, 301 N. Illinois Ave., City Hall, 200 S. Illinois Ave., and at the door of the hotel.

• Food will be provided by Pasquale's and in the Holiday Inn, and those who attend will be eligible to win various door prizes.

• Anyone calling Crime Stoppers at 549-COPS with information leading to an arrest is eligible for a reward.

DAVID FERRARA
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Carbondale Crime Stoppers paid out more than $2,000 for crime tips in 1998, and the organization will sponsor its annual spaghetti dinner fund-raiser Tuesday to obtain the money needed for future payouts.

The seventh-annual spaghetti dinner will run from 5 to 7 p.m. Tuesday at the Holiday Inn, 800 E. Main St.

Don Elliott, community resource officer for the Carbondale Police Department, directs the national tip line in its Carbondale jurisdiction.

"I think it is unique because we're the only ones that have it [the tip line] for the city of Carbondale," Elliott said.

The organization receives donations all year long, but Elliott said in past years, dinners were not sufficient for funds.

"It usually carries us from one year to the next," Elliott said.

Jane Hughes, interim treasurer and secretary since the program's inception in 1992, agreed that the dinners are necessary.

"It's surprising how quickly you can spend your resources if you get some good tips," she said.

Part of Elliott's association with the tip line is informing citizens about a crime every week in which no suspects are being sought.

In fact, Carbondale Police served two arrest warrants last week after receiving crime tips on the Crime Stoppers Tip Line, according to Elliott. Police made the first arrest within 15 minutes of a call to the tip line, and the second was made within two hours.

Elliott broadcasts a weekly crime report on Zimmer radio stations at 8:30 a.m. every Tuesday. He said it does not increase arrests made in such incidents, but it has helped.

"The Crime of the Week crime is a crime that you really have no suspects so it's really just a long shot," he said.

"But when you talk about solving a crime in which you have nothing, that's pretty good."

Those who call the tip line are eligible for a reward up to $1,000.

Payout depends on the degree of crime reported, but to receive money, a caller always must inform police of a crime in which an arrest is made.

Elliott is flooded with calls almost daily informing him of crimes that have occurred, information about wanted criminals and crimes that have gone unsolved.

He never takes the caller's name but repeats a number to identify the caller and records the tip. He then tells the person to call back in about 30 days.

If an arrest is made, Elliott meets with a board of 12 citizens in a monthly meeting and proposes a payment be made, and the caller is paid without having to identify themselves to authorities.

"I like the crime stoppers line because it's simple," Elliott said.

Though only about 10 percent of all calls are paid out, Elliott said he thinks all calls are substantial.

"Everybody who calls in, I think, believes that they have the right information," Elliott said.

Hughes said she thinks the tip line is effective in helping citizens participate in fighting crime.

"I wouldn't be on the board this long if I didn't believe in it," she said.

"I think that it helps to get the community and citizens dealing with crime."

IBM executive to speak at SIUC

ASTARIA L. DILLARD
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Gabby Silberman knows the importance of opening the lines of communication between universities and big business.

Silberman

IBM and SIUC.

Silberman said the IBM Center for Advanced Studies is a small organization within IBM in Toronto.

He said the center's mission is to create relationships with universities, particularly graduate students and professors.

"The idea is to create a two-way flow of communication," Silberman said. "We want to communicate to the universities what are the problems and challenges we're facing so they can include it in their research.

We also want to benefit from knowledge and research being done at the universities."

Silberman was asked to come to SIUC by Arkaigud Ramaprasad, director of the Pontikes Center for Management of Information at SIUC, to discuss how a collaboration between IBM and SIUC will benefit both parties.

Silberman does research in the IBM T.J. Watson Research Center in Yorktown Heights, N.Y.

The Pontikes Center began in 1989 with a mission to educate undergraduate and graduate students, computer industry professionals and business managers on effective management of information.

The research in the Pontikes Center derives off of rethinking, redesigning and reengineering the management of information.

Ramaprasad said the University is trying to establish a partnership with IBM, especially in electronic commerce.

He said the Pontikes Center is taking the lead in SIUC's electronic commerce initiative.

"We are trying to develop courses for students and executives," Ramaprasad said.

"We are also trying to develop a program of research."

Ramaprasad said Silberman will get to know the faculty, graduate students and resources at SIUC.

"It is a nice opportunity for our faculty and graduate students to find out about the opportunities at the IBM Center for Advanced Studies," Ramaprasad said.

Silberman said he is going to speak on the research being done at IBM and projects that are operating to hopefully encourage listeners

As a member of the greek system, Sermersheim has seen the benefits in being greek firsthand, and as an administrator she has seen the downfalls as well.

"I'm not in favor of it at all," she said. "This destroys the ability of those of the same gender to grow and develop together."

said. "This is what they think will be a solution."

Greeks at SIUC can sympathize with the problems greeks at Dartmouth are facing because they also have been forced by University administrators to change the greek system.

DiGiacomo said if a greek system is failing to work productively, it is the duty of the greeks to fix the problems because greeks have an understanding about the system that others do not.

"It's an age-old tradition," he said. "Rather than restructure it from the outside, greeks need to restructure it from the inside. Universities shouldn't take it among itself — it hurts the school, the greek system and all those involved in the greek system."

GUARDIAN: Natural healer proclaims angel counterparts help guide people through life.

DANA DUBROWNY,
STUDENT AFFAIRS EDITOR

When a woman came to see Feng Shui, a natural healer, Shui felt an energy enter the room with her.

"Did you know you brought an angel with you?" Shui asked.

The woman, unaware of the presence at her side, asked Shui to speak to the immortal being. Shui asked the angel her name, and the angel replied "Grace."

When Shui relayed the name, the woman broke into tears, recalling her childhood imaginary friend which, coincidentally, she named Grace.

Shui, who spoke at the Universal Spirituality meeting Monday at Longbranch Coffeehouse, 100 E. Grand Ave., disclosed the story upon Grace's request.

"I have an angel here with me now, and she wants me to tell her story," Shui said.

According to Shui, guardian angels have come to people since the beginning of creation.

"We are mere human beings — we can't come up with miracles like that," Shui said. "When I look back over my life, I got to places and met people that I shouldn't have, but here it was happening to me."

Shui said angels, guides and spirits exist whether people consciously choose to believe in them or not. She sees that similarity with the muscular system of the human body.

"If you compare them to muscles, you can either use them or you can choose not to strengthen them," she said.

"But there's usually a reason why you've been coaxed toward a certain direction."

When Tara Nelsen was 13, she led her life in a negative direction. According to Nelsen, a woman with long, red, wavy hair came to her in her dreams and told her to stop making poor decisions.

"She told me that this wasn't the direction I was supposed to be heading," said Nelsen, a senior in university studies from Algonquin and founder of Universal Spirituality. "I read a book and realized I had been listening to dragons instead of angels."

Shui said the angels we commonly think of take a human form but it is not necessary.

"I've had leaves speak to me in a forest," Shui said. "It's pretty much a modern invention to make angels look like us."

"If you have any belief in [angels], pick something and talk to it."

In order to reach angels, Shui said calming the mind is first and foremost in the process, which is succeeded by calling on a "light-worker."

"They come from a different vibration, and you have to trust the light-worker you are calling on," she said. "Start asking questions. The answer may be 'no,' but that question does not belong in your life."

"Shutting up and listening is always the best — clear your heart and mind and listen."

Although Shui cannot tangibly prove angels exist, her sense of the universe is enough evidence by which to live her life.

"There's people from all walks of life on this planet, and inevitably there's people who believe in angels," Shui said. "We don't know how or why it all got created, but the point is it's there."

Three hours 'Underground' not long enough

Okay, I admit it — I've got a short attention span. And because of it, long movies are something of a turnoff for me.

I blame my case of the Come-On-and-Roll-the-Closing-Credits-for-Cripe's-Sake! syndrome on the recent overindulgence witnessed in "Epics," "Meet Joe Black," "Titanic" and "The Thin Red Line." In laymen's terms, some films are just too damn long (and for no good reason).

If it were up to me, federal law would prohibit the production of any movie surpassing the one-hour and 45-minute mark, unless prior jurisdiction was given from a board of filmmakers, all of whom have made great movies with two-hour-plus running lengths. Martin Scorsese and P. T. Anderson would be chairmen of the board.

Director Emir Kusturica would have to go before this board for approval of his nearly three-hour long movie, "Underground." They not only would have given Kusturica an unanimous thumbs up on the project, Scorsese and Anderson would have invited Kusturica to join them in chairmanship.

Yugoslavia's greatest filmmaker, Kusturica, kept my attention for the duration of his brilliant, sweeping 1995 Palme d'Or winner "Underground," and amazingly if he had decided to keep his cinematic jambush whirling on the screen for three more hours afterward, I would have gladly sat there longer in amazement, still astonished, admiring and unfazed.

It takes a great deal of directorial talent to sustain equal amounts of passion and sorrow to balance out the tragic-comedy in a film of this variety. But Kusturica is up to the challenge. For 167 minutes of screen time, "Underground" never grows weary.

This bold farce (perhaps the first film farce of epic proportions) bombasts its viewers through the last 50 years of the history of 1941 Yugoslavia, when Germany bombed and invaded the country, and concluding in 1992, when warfare had once again destroyed the terrain.

War provides lucrative business opportunities for profiteers of every breed. In "Underground," Marko (played by Miki Manojlovic) is this kind of profiteer. Marko uses his shrewdness to lure naive friend Blacky (Lazar Ristovski) into helping him deal arms and gold while engaging in guerrilla-warfare raids on Nazi convoys.

Both men long for the love of the same woman, Natalija (Mirjana Jokovic). Marko designs an underground city for everyone in Belgrade, Yugoslavia, to seek refuge during air raids. When the war ends, Marko tells his compatriots that fighting still rages in the world outside of theirs.

This is, of course, part of a master plan to keep Natalija to himself. Humorous chaos ensues. The lesser reveals the inner-workings of Marko's plan, his relationship with Natalija and of Belgrade's underworld. One can easily come to appreciate the intricate details and surprises that make Kusturica's film a sprawling masterpiece.

Above all of the film's attributes, the one that makes it the most recommendable is its multiple textures. The movie is — all at once — a comedy, tragedy, war epic, dramatic love story and a slapstick satire. The interior of "Underground" makes this the second movie about war that I could recommend to a fan of the Three Stooges.

"Underground," in its staggering sadness, vivacity and invention, has a vaudevillian outer-crust and a politically agitated mantle.

At its core, "Underground" is simultaneously a wake, funeral and burial for a country that killed itself, and a two-hour and 47-minute fable that whizzes by at the speed of a bullet.

success by the Illinois Community College Board and the Illinois Board of Higher Education.

JALC has received permission from the Illinois Community College Board and the Illinois Board of Higher Education to offer the construction management technology program to students statewide.

Herb Russell, the director for college relations at JALC, said the availability to offer the program into extended areas is a tremendous advantage for the community college and will serve both institutions well.

"For the majority, community colleges are allowed to recruit only a five-county area, as we are," Russell said. "With this program offered we may recruit students from all over Illinois or anywhere else. Community colleges normally just do not have that option to them."

The joint endeavor between the two institutions has resulted in the manifest of a "2+2 program." The "2+2 program," adopted by SIUC and JALC, will allow students that complete an associate degree in the construction management technology program at JALC to transfer directly to SIUC and complete a bachelor's degree with a maximum of 60 hours of coursework.

While SIUC does not have the resources available to fund the program, JALC is looking to provide a new facility solely for the use of construction management technology students.

"In working with John A. Logan, they are going to be building a new facility," Vitello said. "Initially nothing is going to happen — the students will be at SIUC and Carterville until the new building will be completed at Logan, but it should be a great opportunity for the students."

A team of SIUC members and JALC correspondents have been

"They can combine the advantage of community college and lower tuition with the on-site living of a four-year university."

— HERB RUSSELL

vigorously working to create a seamless transition for the transfer of the construction management technology program and its students.

Those students majoring in construction management technology will be placed at the JALC campus to complete an associates degree, beginning with the fall enrollment class of 1999.

"SIUC capped enrollment for fall 1998 at SIUC," Vitello said. "There will be only one year that we will have the freshman class at Logan and the senior class at SIUC. This is how you can make an easy transition, because these seniors graduate and the freshmen are in school. In reality you haven't lost a class."

JALC does not provide housing to students. As part of the transfer process, SIUC is permitting those students at JALC enrolled in the construction management technology major to live in SIUC residence halls. These students also will have access to the Saluki Express, which will run continuously every hour to the JALC campus.

"They will be able to experience the best of both worlds," Russell said. "They can combine the advantage of community college and lower tuition with the on-site living of a four-year university."

Professors and lecturers teaching in the construction management technology program will be given the option to apply to JALC once the completion of the transfer has been finalized.

Vitello said although some faculty may have difficulties in the transition, the benefits outweigh the downsides.

"I think it is both sides for them," she said. "They have worked here and established a feeling and affinity for SIUC, yet going into a new facility and being able to interact with and be a part of a new program is exciting. In reality, nothing is really going to happen in the next year, except where the degree is going to be offered."

A satisfying weekend

Men's swimming team takes third place, women settle for sixth at NIC

MIKE BJORKLUND
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

While some teams saw the National Independent Championships as a way to showcase their seasons, the SIUC swimming and diving teams took a less stressful approach.

After capturing Missouri Valley Conference titles Feb. 13, the Salukis used their time off to rest and regroup. The resting periods came to an end, and the Salukis came home from Rochester, Mich., satisfied despite mixed standings.

The men finished third without key diver freshman Rhet Butler, who did not participate in the event because he was busy preparing for the Zone D Qualifying Meet March 12-13. The women finished sixth.

The men placed 11 points behind second-place Western Kentucky University and 40 in back of reigning champion, the University of Cincinnati.

"For us I think that worked out pretty well," men's coach Rick Walker said. "You have everyone come in focused in on their first meet, and it's our second time. So with a lot of our swimmers having already swimming their best two weekends ago, it's difficult to come through. They did a great job."

Junior Herman Louw had another solid weekend. He won the 200-yard freestyle during the second day of competition.

"Yeah, he had a great weekend," Walker said. "You are also talking about guys who beat Herman, guys that have titles in the events that he was beat in. He was performing against some of the top performers in the country."

Other top finishers for the Salukis included freshman Chris Papachrysanthou, who tied for first with David Tucker of WKU in the 33-yard freestyle. SIUC also came out victorious in the 800-meter freestyle.

Women's coach Mark Klumper said he was more satisfied with the effort put forth by his young squad after winning its second straight MVC crown just a few weeks earlier.

"Where the team placed really did not matter to us," Klumper said. "We are not accustomed to finishing in that (top) position, and I think if this had been our focus meet, we would have had a good chance to battle Cincinnati."

The Salukis finished 350 points behind the first-place Bearcats.

"I'm really proud of the team," Klumper said. "I'm proud of them for a lot of reasons. No. 1, we had an outstanding season. Combine the two meets, and we had more lifetime-best times out of swimmers that I've seen out of the team in a long time."

Some of the swimmers who recorded personal-best times included freshman Brooke Radostis, Dana Morrell and junior Mary Beth Wehner.

Wehner recorded career-best times despite not scoring in any of her events.

"To be able to come back and swim that fast again two weeks later is outstanding," Klumper said.

Besides freshman Kristin Kaylor, who along with Butler will be performing at the Zone D Qualifiers, the Salukis' season is finished with the exception of three individuals.

Senior Kirsty Albertyn is preparing for the South African National Championships set for later this spring. Cyprus native Nicoleta Michalidou is preparing for her country's championships. Also, sophomore Beth Ann Erickson will be competing in the Junior National Championships in St. Louis during spring break.

positive one.

"If this guy goes out there and sets a new (personal record), he could be All-American easily," Wright said. "You've got to go out there and try to win."

Winning is something that has come naturally to Bowers this season.

"I try to do the same thing for every meet during the season," Bowers said. "I don't want to get all tensed up, that's how you mess yourself up."

"I want to keep doing what I've done all season because I've been winning."

Another Saluki who qualified for the women's NCAA Championships, junior high-jumper Felicia Hill, chose not to travel to Indianapolis in hopes of getting a better jump on the outdoor season.

"I chose not to (go) because I was so tired from the indoor season," Hill said. "It really wore me out this year."

"I just want to get everything pulled together with my injuries and have a higher standing in outdoor."

Hill has been somewhat hampered by an injury to her left knee all season long, and she is continuing therapy this week instead of training for another meet.

BASKETBALL

Sophomore guard named MVC All-Conference Team

SIUC women's basketball standout guard Terica Hathaway has been named to the 1998-99 Missouri Valley All-Conference Team.

The sophomore from Providence, Ky., led the Salukis in scoring 18 times this season and reached double-figures on 22 occasions. Hathaway finished the regular season averaging 16 points and 5.5 rebounds per game.

University of Evansville forward Shyla McKibben and Southwest Missouri State University All-American guard Jackie Stiles were the only two other sophomores on the team.

Hathaway also was honored as a member of the Valley's Scholar-Athlete Team, earning an honorable mention nomination.

"They just told me before practice, so I was really excited and I was surprised," Hathaway said after practice Tuesday. "The coaches were there and the team's been there, so I think that's the most important thing."

Southwest Missouri State University led the conference with two selections including senior Roshonda Reed along with Stiles.

Others include seniors Amy Amstutz (Indiana State), senior Heather Best (Bradley) and Jenny Schmidt (Illinois State). Juniors include Tammi Blackstone (Drake), LaTeasha Hill (Wichita State) and Allison Starr (Northern Iowa).

The league specialty awards, including league Most Valuable Player and Coach of the Year, will be announced at the MVC Tournament banquet tonight in Des Moines, Iowa.

Tournament play begins at noon Thursday with SIUC facing the regular season champion, Southwest Missouri State.
