Scholarship requests swamp ISSC

By Vicki Olgeaty
Staff Writer

The Illinois State Scholarship Commission has received about 98,000 more applications than it had received at about this time last year, according to an ISSC spokesman.

And the scholarship commission may have to suspend award announcements early this year. Director of the Office of Informational Services Robert Clement said Tuesday. The ISSC staff is recommending the commission "suspend" award announcements when the expected pay-out level resulting from announcing Monetary Award Program grants approaches $80 million," Clement said. The commission is scheduled to consider the recommendation Monday.

"We expect to reach that level sometime early this summer," he said.

Clement said 118,000 students had applied for awards as of Saturday. Only 20,000 applications had been received by May 4, 1982.

Figures on how much money the commission has pledged so far were not available, but Clement said 75,000 award announcements had been made as of Saturday. About 16,000 decisions had been made at about this time last year.

The tremendous increase in applications "comes as a complete surprise," Clement said.

It's not known whether more people are applying for awards or if students are simply applying earlier, he said. This flood of applications could deteriorate into a trickle in a few months, Clement said.

Students may be applying early because of a slower-than-expected economic recovery in Illinois, the general uncertainty of funding for higher education, or in fear of rising tuition costs, Clement said.

"It could also just be that the system is processing applications faster this year."

Clement said.

Another factor could be that the scholarship-application process started in late February, about a month earlier than it started last year, he said.

The deadline for continuing students to apply for an ISSC award is June 1, but both Clement and Director of Student Work and Financial Assistance Joe Camille recommend that students apply now.

Big Muddy flood waters reach the steps of a Murphysboro house.

The Big Muddy River, which has forced at least four Murphysboro residents to leave their homes, is only two feet from reaching the Route 127 bridge south of Murphysboro, and is expected to crest Thursday at 37.5 feet. As of Tuesday there were no plans to close the bridge.

Big Muddy, Mississippi swell; residents forced out by floods

By Jennifer Phillips
Staff Writer

Over the last six days, Southern Illinois has been deluged with heavy rains, resulting in the Big Muddy and Mississippi rising well over flood stage and people vacating their homes for drier land.

The Big Muddy River at Murphysboro was reported to be at 35.6 feet Tuesday, according to the National Weather Service, and is expected to crest Thursday at 37.5 feet. Flood stage at the Murphysboro section of the river is 15 feet.

A Murphysboro Police Department spokesman, Paul McRoy, said four residences had been evacuated by the occupants' own choice and that the city doesn't have an evacuation process at this point.

Some residents on South Third Street in Murphysboro rated the flooding as worse than December's floods.

"About 10 years ago, the water was a lot higher than it is now and we're hoping it doesn't get any higher," one resident said. "If it does, we might have to swim to work."

The electricity at about 12 homes near the Big Muddy was turned off by Central Illinois Public Service Co. for safety measures, said Richard Powers, of the Murphysboro office.

A transformer at the Mobile Ranch Trailer Park, east of routes 127 and 13, was also turned off, he said. The flooded trailer park is usually about 200 feet from the river, he said.

At Chester, the Mississippi River passed 36.9 feet Tuesday

Bishops demand nuclear weapons halt

CHICAGO (AP) — Declaring their opposition to decades of U.S. nuclear thinking, America's Catholic bishops overwhelmingly approved a pastoral letter Tuesday that condemns the first use of nuclear weapons, all but rules out their use in retaliation and demands a "halt" to the growth of superpower arsenals.

Their pastoral letter on nuclear arms, which will be the basis for teaching in the 51 million-member American church, was adopted after two years of debate despite Reagan administration objections to the call for a nuclear freeze.

By a ballot vote of 238-9, the National Conference of Catholic Bishops adopted its 44,000-word pastoral letter, "The Challenge of Peace: God's Promise and Our Response."

It is the church's first comprehensive appraisal of moral imperatives in a nuclear age. The bishops said their "no" to nuclear war is "definite and decisive."

"Today the destructive potential of the nuclear powers threatens the human person, the civilization we have slowly constructed and even the created order itself," the bishops said.

The bishops had spent most of the day working on nearly 500 suggested amendments, many of which were withdrawn by the sponsors.

They first passed, then later reversed themselves and turned down an absolute rejection of "any use of nuclear weapons" in a section dealing with possession of weapons for deterrence. But they said virtually the same thing elsewhere in the letter.

In opposing the phrase's inclusion in the section on deterrence, Cardinal Joseph L. Bernardin of Chicago, head of the drafting committee, said:

"Laying down such absolute language here would upset the delicate balance we've attempted, and tend to destroy and undermine the arguments

we've built up. "We want to establish a firm barrier against any use of nuclear weapons, but we can't get rid of every ambiguity in this paradox of deterrence," Bernardin said.

The letter, in condemning any targeting of civilian centers, notes that U.S. planning designates 40,000 targets in the Soviet Union, 60 in the city of Moscow alone, justifying it on grounds of military targets being located there

Pay cuts hurt research, study says

By Phillip Fiorini
Staff Writer

The impact of a furlough or other forms of salary reductions on University researchers would be great, according to a report from a Graduate Council committee.

The report is expected to be addressed by the council at 8 a.m. Thursday in the Mississippi Room of the Student Center.

Jack Snowman, chairman of the council's Research Committee, said Tuesday that general furloughs or any other salary reductions implemented to solve budget problems would have many negative effects on researchers, especially those who are federally funded.

Washington's hold on council shaky

CHICAGO (AP) — Harold Washington, who could become the first mayor in 30 years to lose control of the City Council, took conciliatory steps Tuesday as the Old Guard threatened to abandon its rubber-stamp role and grab the reins of power.

Washington invited Cook County Democratic chairman Ed Vrdolyak to meet with him Tuesday, a day after Vrdolyak ignored the new mayor and pushed through a City Council realignment plan that parcels out most of the power to white council members in the Old Guard.

Sixteen of the 50 council members are black, as is the mayor.

The Washington-Vrdolyak meeting lasted about 15 minutes. The alderman said he had a "very pleasant conversation" with the mayor but provided no details.

Though Washington dismissed the council maneuvering by Vrdolyak as illegal, his call for a meeting signaled an attempt to reach a compromise without resorting to a showdown in court.

"Clearly, both sides have to work out concessions," said Grayson Mitchell, Washington's press secretary. "I think the mayor has said all along this has to be settled in the political process."

"With layoffs, you run the risk of not having research done on time," Snowman said. If research is not completed on time, he said, it could have adverse effects on the University's reputation.

Because of this, federal agencies that grant researchers could ask to have that money returned, he said.

Snowman said that declarations of possible furloughs or salary reductions also serve as a "disincentive" to researchers.

From assessments already made, the number of research proposals generated has decreased, and many professors might leave the University for lack of research, Snowman said.

A proposal, expected to be considered by the council Thursday, asks that the illustration and photographic duplication services offered by special research shops be maintained at their present level and be considered for possible elimination as recommended by the Report on Non-Academic Priorities Committee.

Snowman said the committee wants the administration to know that the elimination of these programs would be harmful to researchers.

The preparation of overheads and slides for researchers by the Scientific Photography Service in Life Science II "was deemed to be sufficiently unique and of high quality and should be maintained at their present level," the proposal

GPSC to study plan to abolish office

The Graduate and Professional Student Council will consider a resolution Wednesday rejecting a recommendation made by the Non-Academic Priorities Committee to abolish the Ombudsman's Office.

The GPSC will address the resolution at its last meeting of the semester at 7 p.m. in the Mississippi Room of the Student Center.

Dan Venturi, GPSC vice president, said Tuesday that the Ombudsman's Office is a valuable and should be maintained.

In other business, the GPSC will address a proposal that would require anyone using the Career Planning and Placement Center to pay a $10 service fee at the beginning of the year that would last for the rest of that year, Venturi said.

The Career Planning and Placement Center assists students and alumni seeking career employment, with maximum benefit from the services assured for students who file resumes about one semester prior to graduation.

The Learning Resources Center provides support for instruction, Snowman said. But, he said, it was his understanding that it doesn't offer special services geared for supporting research.

Snowman said the expertise provided to researchers through these special shops would be lost or adversely affected by eliminating duplication services for researchers.

The council is also expected to address a proposal, from the Educational Policies Committee, that suggests the Sexual Harassment Policy require that informal complaints must be filed within 30 days, but allow formal complaints to be filed within 60 days or until one week after the end of the semester.

Lars Larson, EPC chairman, said that it is possible that a student may not want to file a formal complaint against an instructor until the semester has ended.

The policy approved by the Faculty Senate in March states only that a complaint must be brought to the attention of the ombudsman within 30 days of the most recent alleged incident.

Another recommendation from the committee suggests that the required time limits for filing complaints and moving through the various stages of grievance be listed in one place in the proposed policy. The committee occurred with the Faculty Senate that the Ombudsman's Office should be the place to receive complaints.

Senate GOP predict budget passage

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republican leaders, given President Reagan's blessing, predicted Tuesday they would win passage of a 1984 budget plan that sticks to Reagan's original line on tax increases, but trims defense and spends billions more on domestic needs than he wants.

The plan would leave deficits approaching $200 billion in both 1984 and 1985, call for a modest $8 billion in tax hikes over the next two years, and add more than $11 billion to Reagan's original request for domestic spending.

Aftershocks shake California town

COALINGA, Calif. (AP) — Hundreds of aftershocks chased residents from their damaged homes Tuesday as they tried to clean up more than $25 million in damage from a powerful earthquake that injured 47 people but caused no reported deaths.

The Monday afternoon earthquake, registering 6.5 on the Richter scale, damaged virtually every home in this rural community and reduced the refurbished downtown area to rubble, ripping the brick facades from buildings, snapping gas lines and rupturing water mains.

Shultz hopeful of peace agreement

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz indicated Tuesday he hopes to have an agreement by the weekend for Israel's withdrawal from Lebanon. But the Lebanese foreign minister said it would be difficult to solve the remaining problems in two or three days.

Although Shultz offered the most optimistic forecast yet for his Middle East mission, he said Lebanon would have primary responsibility for obtaining an agreement on withdrawal of Syrian troops — a condition Israel has set for pulling out the troops that invaded Lebanon on June 6, 1982.

Committee votes to stop aid to rebels

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Intelligence Committee, in a blow to President Reagan's Central American policy, voted 9 to 5 Tuesday to cut off covert aid to rebels fighting against Nicaragua's leftist government.

Rep. Edward P. Boland, D-Mass., committee chairman, said the committee voted the aid cut-off because it felt that "what we were doing in that area was counterproductive."

The bill, which the Reagan administration lobbied vigorously against, will also be considered by the House Foreign Affairs Committee and then be voted on by the full House.

Council bans Main-Oakland left turns

John Schrag
Staff Writer

The Carbondale City Council Monday reluctantly approved a request to prohibit left turns from West Main Street onto Oakland Avenue.

The request came from the Illinois Department of Transportation, which is planning to widen and resurface West Main Street (Illinois Route 13) west of Oakland Avenue.

The street improvement plan, discussed at the council meeting Monday night, calls for widening the stretch of West Main Street between Oakland Avenue and Old West Main Street from three lanes to four lanes. City Manager Carroll Fry told the council that another plan to widen the intersection at Oakland Avenue and West Main Street to five lanes was found to be prohibitively expensive. The five-lane plan would require the purchase of much of the Burger King parking lot, while the four-lane plan will necessitate the purchase of less land.

City and state officials have been discussing the street-widening project for about two years as a way to alleviate the bottle-ups that occur at the intersection.

"There is no question that the project is needed," said Mayor Heien Westberg. "The intersection is very bad."

Westberg, presiding over her first council meeting as mayor, said it was unfortunate that the two new councilmembers did not have more time to study the proposal. Councilmen Keith Tuxhorn and Patrick Kelley took their council seats for the first time Monday.

IDOT officials requested that the council take action Monday because they hope to have the $300,000 state-funded project considered in this month's state bid-letting session. However, their studies indicate that the project will not help traffic flow if traffic is allowed to continue making left turns onto Oakland Avenue.

IDOT engineers say that maximum traffic flow will occur if the two outside lanes be limited for right-turns only and the inside lanes for through-traffic.

Councilman Neil Dillard expressed concern that the ban on left turns would make it difficult for people to get to Carbondale High School's Central Campus facilities. Fry agreed that some people might be inconvenienced by the change, but said there are plenty of side streets to use.

"People are just going to have to change their traffic patterns," he said.

City officials say that the left-turn ban will not be implemented until construction begins. If the state releases the funds for the project this month, the street improvements could begin this spring and be finished by the end of this year, according to IDOT officials.

Fry also told the council that city and state officials are still trying to find a long-term solution to the city's cross-town traffic problems. He said they are still investigating the possibility of building a diagonal street to route east-bound traffic on Illinois Route 13 onto Walnut Street before the Oakland Street intersection.

Allowable truck weight increased

By Terry Leveck
Staff Writer

Beginning Oct. 1, trucks will be allowed to carry a maximum load of 80,000 pounds on the nation's highways — almost 7,000 pounds more than what is now allowed on Illinois highways.

The state Department of Transportation estimates the benefits of this policy to the trucking industry will amount to about $185 million a year. The department, however, also estimates this extra load will cause $51 million in damages to the state highways.

The burden of repairing most of these damages will fall on the average passenger vehicle operator if the tax program proposed by the IDOT is approved, said former Illinois Secretary of Transportation Langhorne Bond, who was in Carbondale Tuesday seeking support of an alternative tax plan.

In an effort to re-align taxes to the truckers, Everyone Pays Their Own Way, an organization Bond helped form, has proposed to the General Assembly a weight-distance tax to replace the proposed truck license fee increase.

IDOT's proposed tax package, which is included in Gov. James Thompson's tax plan, provides for a 167-percent increase in license plate fees for small cars, while the cost of license plates for trucks would only increase 20 percent if the tax plan is approved.

"The truckers have cut a deal with the Department of Transportation to pay only half the price" it will cost to repair the damage they incur, Bond said.

The weight-distance tax would be imposed on all trucks weighing between 60,000 and 80,000 pounds and would range from 2 cents to 5 cents per mile. The tax would generate an estimated $86.6 million. The cost of eliminating the license plate fee increase would be $35.9 million, amounting to a net revenue of almost $51 million — the estimated cost of damage the heavier trucks will create.

In addition to the license fee increase, Bond estimated that 74 percent of the proposed motor fuel tax increase on gasoline and diesel will be paid by passenger vehicle drivers.

The weight-distance tax proposal was approved by the House Transportation Committee last week with a 9-7 bipartisan vote, Bond said. Rep. Alan Ronan, D-Chicago, is sponsoring the House bill, which will be read on the House floor sometime in June.

Bond said the General Assembly is sympathetic towards this proposal. "The more the members understand what's going on, the more they support this measure," Bond said. "This is a complicated issue we will not win" if the tax package slips through the General Assembly.

Bond said the trucking industry is reacting with "screams." But, he said, they can't do anything about it because they are getting a deal no matter what. Even if the tax is imposed, the industry will still benefit from the extra weight allowed, Bond said.

"The weight-distance tax was adopted by the Department of Transportation last summer, but they were bluffed out of that position by the truckers," Bond said.

The Senate Revenue Committee is scheduled to hear the proposal this week. Sens. John Dunn, D-Decatur, and Dawn Clark-Natsch, D-Chicago, are sponsoring the bill.

Everyone Pays Their Own Way is financed by the railroads of Illinois and is supported by the Taxpayers Federation of Illinois, the Chicago Motor Club, the Illinois Environmental Council, the Legislative Support Center, the Illinois Audubon Society, Friends of the Earth, the League of Women Voters, the Illinois Farm Bureau and the Central State Resource Center.

From here, all EPTOW can do is get its message across to as many people as they can and draw as much support as possible from other organizations, Bond said.

COBA dean search narrowed to one

One candidate for the position of College of Business and Administration dean will visit campus for a second time, while another candidate has been eliminated from the competition.

Thomas Gutteridge, associate dean in the School of Management of the Student University of New York at Buffalo, was scheduled to arrive Tuesday and stay Wednesday.

Gutteridge, who is also executive director of the Regional Economic Assistance Center at SUNY-Buffalo, was left the only candidate after another finalist, Sam Barone from the University of Detroit, was eliminated from the competition.

Vice President for Academic Affairs and Research John Guyon said Tuesday that University officials are negotiating with Gutteridge.

"We'll be talking about the needs on his side, the needs on the University's side and how both fit in with the needs of the College of Business and Administration," he said.

Guyon said he hoped to have the matter resolved by the end of the semester.

The COBA dean position has been unfilled since summer 1981 when John Darling resigned. Clifton Andersen has been serving as acting dean.

and is expected to crest at 40 feet Saturday, according to the Army Corps of Engineers.

The Randolph County Sheriff's Department closed Illinois Route 3 at 10 a.m. Tuesday, said Deputy Sheriff Lyndon Thies.

Most of about 65 Kaskaskia Island families have evacuated, he said. The main road to the island was not passable late Tuesday and most roads and levees on the island were under water.

Phil Hasser, of the corps of engineers, said they have been issuing sandbags throughout Southern Illinois as needed. Mostly, the corps has advisers and observers in the area to lend their expertise to flood victims, he added.

Meanwhile, Gov. James Thompson on Tuesday declared six central and Southern Illinois counties disaster areas from weekend tornadoes and rains that left one dead and 49 injured, according to the Associated Press.

The counties are: Greene, Jersey, Macon, Macoupin, Madison and St. Clair. Thompson said other counties may join the list as new information on damages is known.

Thompson said the six counties sustained $20 million in damages from storms Sunday, the AP reported.

Excellent education depends on Johnny

AFTER 17 YEARS of schooling, I'm wondering what the big fuss is about academic excellence and "A Nation at Risk: The Imperative for Educational Reform," a report put out by the National Commission on Excellence in Education.

I could have let Education Secretary Terrel Bell know what wrong with education in five minutes and saved the blue-ribbon panel the bother of taking a year to learn that we're not tough enough on students. Emphasize the basics, meaning math, science, social studies, foreign language and computer science. Give students more homework. Give teachers more pay. Make the school day longer. Make the school year longer. These are the answers, says the commission.

But they aren't the solutions, educators argue. We're told the report has received universal endorsement in the education field. But that doesn't mean everyone's jumping for joy. Educators find two things missing from the report: How we're going to pay for all these recommendations and why a report on educational reform is missing the part about reform.

MORE HOMEWORK. More teachers' pay. More time in school. This isn't revolutionary stuff and it isn't reform.

Bob Delaney
Associate
Editorial Page Editor

That's not to say it wouldn't work. If we want to make Johnny smarter, and I guess that's what we're talking about, make him stay in school longer, give him more work and make him take the classes that ensure a well-rounded education.

But what if Johnny doesn't want to stay in school longer than six hours each day, doesn't want to listen to the teacher lecture about the difference between 'we' and 'oui,' would rather play baseball after school than do homework and certainly would rather play ball in June than go to school?

I don't care what a balding president of some university has to say; I could have told Bell in a minute about the faint memory of a 10-year-old kid going to school on days he'd rather not or struggling to listen to the teacher lecture about the Constitution or the anatomy of a frog. MUCH LIKE a newspaper putting out a polished product on time everyday and then depending on a runny-nosed 12-year-old to make sure it gets to the right doorstep, we're talking about an institution that caters to 10-, 15- and 20-year-old kids who more often than not would rather be doing something other than going to school.

Educators talk about the irony of the commission's focusing attention on education's needs while student aid dries up, while teachers' real income shrinks and while President Reagan plans to dismantle the Education Department and the federal government's role in education.

There is some irony in it all. There's the quip about the ballplayer getting $100,000 and the teacher who taught him to read getting $15,000. It needs updating because players nowadays are more likely to be getting $1 million annually while teachers are getting $20,000, maybe.

TEACHERS MUST remember that these students who don't care much about school are graduating and becoming taxpayers who don't care much about school. The latter is more important because they ultimately decide how much money a school is to get or how well a teacher is to be paid.

Reagan hit the nail half on the head when he told commission members and education leaders on the White House lawn that parents have the primary responsibility for educating their children. That means that some parents — and students — must change their attitudes about education. Parents, playing a more supportive role in the student's outlook toward education and what type of education he's getting is reform that needs to be discussed.

Too many parents look upon the school system as a dumping ground for their children leaving education entirely in the hands of the teacher in the classroom.

Education is more important than that. At times, I wish I could do it all again because there were too many days when I just didn't feel like listening and let things slip over my head. Fortunately, I have parents who made sure I realized the importance of education.

Not all children are so lucky. "A Nation at Risk: The Imperative for Educational Reform" didn't tell us what could be done for these children and their parents.

There's still hope

By Jill Skradski
Student Writer

For most people, financing a college education has never been easy. And now, Reagan's budget cuts have made it even harder for middle and lower-income families. Tuition increases every semester and unprecedented reductions in federal funding foreshadow a disturbing future — an end to this country's long-standing commitment to equal educational access.

All is not lost, however. SIU-C students, and students across the nation, have assistance available to them. Colleges, legislators, even unions, have devised a host of special programs to deal with the financial crisis.

First the bad news: tuition could go up $100 in the fall if the recommendations of President Albert Somit's Budget Advisory Committee are followed, and federal aid to education has been slashed. The budget cuts represent a $500 million cut in the Basic Educational Opportunity Grant Program that awards financial assistance to low-income students, and a $100 million cut in the National Direct Student Loan program, which offers low-interest loans to needy students.

The picture sounds grim, but if a student is resourceful, it isn't hopeless. Some students may have been scared away from applying to college at all because the press has devoted so much space to the dire effects of the proposed cutbacks. But there are programs that can help in the struggle to survive college financially.

The first step that any student should take is to see whether his or her college has started its own special loan program. SIU-C has a short-term loan program that provides students with up to $125, depending on their year in school.

Another money-saving route is the College Level Examination Program of the College Board. First introduced in 1967, CLEP offers a series of examinations that can provide college credit for life experiences. About 1,800 institutions, SIU-C included, grant credit based on these exams — a step that could save a student several hundred dollars.

Despite the drastic financial cutbacks, there is still financial aid available. Numerous financial aid officers can advise students here. It is likely they can find some sort of aid that the student never thought of.

In other words, there is hope. Despite rising tuition and ebbing aid, students can still receive a college education — it'll just be a little harder to get.

'Does Israel deserve all that money?'

When the United Nations General Assembly in 1947 recommended the Partition Plan (Resolution 194), the Jews of Palestine were in ownership of no more than 5 percent of the land. Yet the plan gave away 54 percent of the country to them. In 1948, Israel was founded on 82 percent of Palestine through military conquest, while the rest of the country remained in the hands of native Palestinians until the second military occupation in June 1967. Of about 807 towns and villages in Palestine in 1945, only 433 were still standing in 1967. Of these, 328 were in the West Bank and Gaza areas and 105 inside Israel. In other words, 374 Palestinian towns and villages, about 45 percent, disappeared after the creation of Israel. They were demolished, plowed over, transformed or given to Jewish settlers.

In a state which claims democracy and supports human rights, Israeli troops and civil administrators tend to treat all local Palestinians as likely terrorists. Begin and Sharon have imposed a military-civil bureaucracy worthy of South Africa. The Israeli government has fired elected Palestinian mayors. It has closed universities whose students have held demonstrations. It has imposed loyalty oaths on Palestinian teachers. It has censored the Palestinian press. It has blown up the houses of parents whose children are suspected of helping the PLO.

Troops have orders to warn demonstrators twice before firing on them. In 1982, at least 17 Palestine demonstrators were shot and killed. The Israelis have been exploiting cheap Palestinian labor. Israeli laborers have become contractors. The Palestinians do the dirty jobs. The Israelis are the master people.

The Israelis don't see the Palestinian professors at work in the West Bank and Gaza. They overlook the Palestinian lawyers, doctors and engineers. The West Bank Palestinians are looked upon as guest workers with an advantage for Israel. These guest workers go home each night. Discrimination between the Jews themselves is extremely obvious in that nation. The Ashkenazim Jews of Europe dominated the state. By the late 1970's, the darker Sephardim Jews, who immigrated from North Africa and Arab countries, made up 55 percent of Israeli populations and 70 percent of the working force. They held fewer than 30 seats in the 120 seat Knesset.

As the Israeli journalist Jacobo Timerman put it, "Israel has a total lack of compassion for the Palestinians who were victims of the Israeli onslaught." Since Israel was founded in 1948, the United States has granted Israel tens of billions of dollars. An average of $15 million a day goes to Israel from the United States in the name of democracy and human rights. I want to ask every American tax payer, does such a nation deserve all that American money? — Moadi A. Yaqub, Senior, Engineering

Woman overcomes anorexia and pursues Ph. D. at SIU-C

By Jackie Dourlet
Student Writer

In January of 1968, Jane was the head cheerleader and one of the most popular girls at Glendale High School. In January of 1968, Jane was 5-foot-3 inches and weighed 104 pounds. In January of 1968, Jane got pregnant.

In May of 1968, Jane weighed 82 pounds and her parents sent her to a home for unwed mothers.

One month later Jane weighed 52 pounds and gave birth to a 2 pound, 13 ounce baby boy.

Jane was a victim of an eating disorder called anorexia nervosa, defined in simple terms as an obsessive refusal to eat or as willing starvation.

Today, 15 years later, Jane is a successfully recovered anorexic. She is completing a doctorate at SIU-C.

Jane is not the woman's real name.

Anorexia occurs most often at puberty or just before college, times when the prospect of growing up might seem especially frightening.

Jane was the typical anorexic: usually meek, compliant, a perfectionist, rarely selfish, rarely angry and rarely loud. In short, she was the typical "good girl."

The anorexic is often the one who always does well in school and never demands attention. Parents, instead, tend to lavish their attention on another "problem" child, never realizing what secret frustrations might be brewing.

Jane said she fit this description perfectly until she became pregnant.

"I needed an excuse to leave school. I didn't want to look like I was gaining weight... I always wanted to deny the fact that I was pregnant," Jane said.

As Jane looks back now, she said, "I was very young and immature. The pregnancy was something I could not cope with yet. I figured if I cut back eating, I could lose the weight I needed to."

The trouble started, Jane said, when she got carried away and drastically increased her physical activity.

When she began getting morning sickness, Jane said, she thought it was the perfect excuse not to eat or to get rid of what she had eaten. By this time, her family was beginning to worry about her weight loss and was encouraging her to eat.

When Jane went to the home for unwed mothers, she said, it was easy to give her food away and to not eat because no one was watching her. Then the home began to worry about her and placed her in a hospital.

At that time, she said, her temperature had dropped and she was extremely cold. Her feet had swollen and she could no longer wear shoes. Then her hair began to fall out.

"I couldn't see what the hubbub was about. I still thought I needed to lose a little weight," Jane said.

Anorexics, she said, do not believe they are actually sick.

"I saw myself as indestructible," Jane said.

She said she remembers her father taking her out one day and watching him cry for the first time while he told her she was dying of malnutrition.

"That was the first time I thought maybe something was wrong with me," Jane said.

After having the baby, Jane said she promised to eat again if she could just go home. Once home, she found it harder to recover from anorexia nervosa than she originally thought.

"It gets to the point where you don't think you can control it—I didn't think I could eat," Jane said. "I was afraid if I ate anything, I'd get very, very fat."

Her father helped her over-

Antique show, sale planned for Mall

Twenty dealers from 12 states will exhibit at University Mall's Antiques and Collectibles Show and Sale May 12 to 15.

Merchandise will include furniture, primitives, glass, china, crystal, porcelain, books, comics, movie posters, antique advertising, political americana, baseball cards, depression glass and various other collectibles.

The show is sponsored by the merchants of University Mall and managed by Jack Hatfield Promotions.

come anorexia nervosa by using many of the techniques therapists use today, she said. He was authoritative but caring. Jane said he would say, "I want you to eat this because I love you. And if you don't, you will probably die."

Recovery did not occur overnight, Jane said. She struggled with other eating disorders at stressful times in college. She experimented with drugs and traveled extensively. All the time, Jane said, "I was looking for myself, but actually I was running from myself."

Today, Jane said, it is important for people to be aware of anorexia nervosa because it has the potential to be fatal. She said she is extremely happy now.

"I don't regret any of it—except for the physical damage—because I'm so content now, and no longer confused," she said.

'If they can reach the keys, they can learn to play piano'

By Phil Milano
Student Writer

If they can reach the keys, they can play.

That's the philosophy of Mary Grizzell, faculty member in the School of Music and coordinator of the new "Suzuki Plus More" piano instruction program offered to children by SIU-C.

The program is based on Shinichi Suzuki's "mother tongue" philosophy of music education. Children learn to speak fluently because they are surrounded by language, so the philosophy goes; therefore, if they are surrounded by musical sounds to the same degree, they will develop an equally remarkable ability in music.

According to Grizzell, the program has increased in size since its introduction to the United States in 1972.

We place an emphasis on learning by ear," Grizzell said. "Listening to records is an important part of learning."

The "Suzuki Plus More" program differs from the original Suzuki philosophy, according to the coordinator, but after the child progresses to a certain level, music reading is learned in addition to playing by ear.

Children entering the program range in age from four to eight years. They can continue the program until high school, Grizzell said.

Of major importance in the learning process is parental participation. "There are two lessons for the children per week which the parent also

Films to benefit McFarlin

The Student Programming Council Films Committee will donate all proceeds from the showing of three award-winning films this week to the Harold McFarlin Heart Transplant Fund.

SFC films chairman Akbar Youssefpour said the admission price for all three films will be cut to $1.00.

"This series of films is well worth the admission price, and proceeds will go to a good cause," Youssefpour said. "We will also be giving away some SFC tee-shirts."

"The Last Detail" starring Jack Nicholson was shown Tuesday Night. The remaining two films, to be shown in the Student Center Auditorium, are:

Wednesday, 7 and 9 p.m.,

"Summer of '42" starring Jennifer O'Neill. A sensitive and well-done story of a boy's adolescent yearning.

Thursday, 7 and 9 p.m., "Bullitt" starring Steve McQueen. Action packed drama with McQueen as a tough but unconventional San Francisco cop. A spectacular car chase.

Youssefpour said the decision to help the McFarlin fund drive was made before learning that McFarlin's operation is now virtually paid for thanks to an unexpected grant from the National Institutes of Health.

But Youssefpour said the SFC films committee decided to go through with their fund-raiser anyway "to perhaps pay for personal expenses in California" while McFarlin awaits the operation.

Percussion Ensemble to give recital

The University Percussion Ensemble, under the direction of Michael Hanes, will present a recital Wednesday at 8 p.m. in Quigley Auditorium. The assistant director is graduate assistant Robert Cohlmever.

Pieces to be performed include works by Coates, Washburn, Bellson, Leonard, Weiner, Williams and Spears.

The performance is free and the public is invited to attend.

Hell and Voidoids still untamed

By Cynthia Rector
Staff Writer

When Richard Hell sings "You can best escape by dropping out," he knows what he's singing about.

His first album, "Richard Hell and the Voidoids" led American punk rock as much as the Sex Pistols' "Anarchy in the U.K." led the British movement. Yet the potent Voidoids waited six years to put out another LP.

Only two of the four original members remain: Hell on bass and vocals and Robert Quine on guitars. Fred Maher and Nauw have taken over drums and guitars, respectively.

The playful songs on his latest, "Destiny Street," are a far cry from the rebellion of "Blank Generation" with its morbid and biting "Who Say's, (It's good to be Alive)" or "Liars Beware." The first LP seemed to celebrate agony on every song, finding it occasionally amid capitalistic exploits and cheap sex, but finding most of its pain in the emptiness of an average American life.

Album Review

The 1977 Hell wrote in "New Pleasure:" "Too weak for life you have become; You can't get dressed you're too numb; But we assume sublime poses; Deep in true to life hypnosis.

As well as raw-edged subjects, Hell, personifying the punk ideal, became known for raw-edged sounds. Drums, rhythm section and leads usually just off center were pronounced from the very guts of the musician. No techno-pop for Hell. There still isn't.

"I Can Only Give You Everything," for example, is an energetic rock song with a beat. At the end, surr-how Hell's character breaks down. Picture him slithering on the floor of the recording studio, pleading "Everything. Ev-er-thing!!! Don't leave me alone!

Everything!!" Then as the drummer drops his drumsticks the adrenalin and life substance oozes out of the remaining band members.

But somehow the gusto returns and Hell jumps to the microphone just in time to sing "Ignore that Door," which starts out with a primal shout.

Hell hasn't grown totally out of his "Love Comes in Spurts" perversion. "The Kid With The Replaceable Head" lives up to it's title in its evocation of pity. And the title song "Destiny Street" has some obvious double entendres.

The new LP even has the same tame side-wild side format of the first. But, even on the fast-paced side, it is the music far more than the concepts that is wild. And if the lyrics are clever, funny or sad, they aren't as threatening or repugnant as the first LP.

His sound is easily recognizable on Destiny Street. One might even say that Hell parodies himself occasionally. He's grown up. He can do that.

Combined Choirs to present 'Elijah'

The combined University Choir and University Chorus, under the direction of Robert Kingsbury and accompanied by Donna Haney, will present "An Oratorio from the Words of the Old Testament" by Felix Mendelssohn Bartholdy at 8 p.m. Thursday in Shryock Auditorium.

The work will feature soloists Greg Coultz, Karen Yaok Lewis, Catherine Mabius, James C. Justice and Kerry Sims.

Tickets for the performance are $2 and are available at the Central Ticket Office or at Shryock the night of the performance.

attends, coupled with practicing at home," Grizzell said.

Classes, held in the Old Baptist Foundation, consist of three children and their parents. The children are encouraged by their parents, and this adds to their feeling of accomplishment and security, Grizzell said. "The teachers are there to guide and assign, but the parents must lend support to oversee the child's progress."

The purpose of the program is to foster a "love and understanding of music in order to enrich people's lives," she said.

Instruments such as drums and triangles are also used to help children acquire a sense of rhythm, according to Grizzell. Learning by association and through games makes the learning process easier for the child.

Current enrollment in the program, which began last fall is 20 and the coordinator hopes to see it grow. According to Grizzell, Robert Roubos, director of the School of Music has been very generous in supplying learning materials and space, and as the program continues she hopes to see a continuing increase in enrollment.

Grizzell said stress on performance in front of others during lessons helps the children perform at programs later on. "The child feels more comfortable, and everything is more natural."

Grizzell received her bachelor's degree and master's degree from the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, New York, and had extensive teaching experience at various universities before coming to SIUC 26 years ago. Her teaching goes back to private studio days.

Questions concerning the program can be directed to Grizzell by calling the Music School at 453-2263.

Community patterns topic of lecture

Patterns of development and decline in Southern Illinois communities will be the subject of a lecture given by Richard Kurin, visiting assistant professor in SIU-C's Anthropology Department, at 7 p. m. Thursday night in Ballroom A of the Student Center.

Kurin's talk will be based on a study of 187 communities in 31 Southern Illinois counties, said Jnan Bhattacharyya, coordinator of the Community Development Department's graduate program. The lecture is being sponsored by the Community Development and Anthropology departments. Kurin's study is a continuation of one begun by Raymond Wakeley, a retired professor in Community Development. It covers the years 1960 to 1990.

"It seems to have fantastic consequences for political and social groups in the area," Bhattacharyya said.

Kurin surveyed nearly 200 mayors in the region. He also received information from economic groups in the communities, such as Chambers of Commerce, to make a comparison of community characteristics, such as types of retail businesses and health, recreation and educational facilities.

"He tries to see if there is a pattern of development and decline," Bhattacharyya said, and to see what can be done to improve development.

Results of the study should be of interest to "anyone in Southern Illinois" Bhattacharyya said.

Three-hundred invitations to the lecture have been sent to various local groups in the area.

Report on agenda

The Civil Service Employees Council will discuss the non-academic priorities report at its meeting Wednesday in Anthony Hall.

Phyllis McCowen, chairman of the CSEC, said the administration has asked the council for a reaction to the report, which recommends either enhancement, maintenance, reduction, elimination or combination for each state-funded University program that doesn't generate credit hours. "It may be that we accept it. It may be that we reject it," she said. "I don't know what the council will do."

Diabetes Education Series to hold second class Thursday

The second class in the Diabetes Education Series will be at 7 p. m. Thursday at Memorial Hospital of Carbondale.

Bill to spur proper land use

State seeks forest development

By Greg Stewart
Student Writer

A bill designed to "promote forestry development" in the State of Illinois has been introduced in the General Assembly by Sen. Kenneth V. Buzbee, D-58th District.

The act, known as the Illinois Forestry Development Act, was the product of two conferences held on forestry in Illinois in the past two years.

The conferences were co-sponsored by the Department of Forestry at SIU-C and the Department of Forestry at the University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana, and were held at the two universities.

According to George Weaver, chairman of the Forestry Department at SIU-C, the bill is meant "to enhance the development of forestry in the state of Illinois."

Right now there are 3.8 million acres of forest area in Illinois, 90 percent of which is in private ownership, Weaver said. Only Ohio had more acreage or a higher productivity class of forestry land in the North Central Region of the United States, he said.

Weaver said that forestry landowners in Illinois are not properly managing their land for resources. To try to instill correct management methods, Weaver and Gary Rolfe, head of forestry at the University of Illinois, convinced Buzbee to sponsor a bill to provide incentives to landowners and industries for correct use of forestry land.

According to Weaver, the bill has four main parts:

- To create the Illinois Commission of Forestry Development. The commission, consisting of 23 uncompensated members, shall, among other duties "determine the opportunities for increasing employment and economic growth through development of forest resources; determine the staffing and funding needs for forestry and other conservation programs; and determine the needs of forestry education programs in this state."

- To create a forestry development cost share program. Administered by the Department of Conservation, this program would make available to eligible owners and operators of forest lands enough funds to cover up to 20 percent of costs for forestry practices. This program parallels the Forestry Improvement Practices Act where eligible owners can obtain up to 60 percent of costs through sharing. Combined, owners could have 80 percent of their costs paid by the Illinois government.

- To make available to industries loans for establishing or expanding businesses within Illinois. This program would be administered by the recently passed Agriculture Department Act, making money more readily available to industries.

- And to abate in full the property taxes for any timber land which is being managed under an approved forestry management plan. Under this plan, property tax would be set aside for any tax year during which an approved management plan is in effect.

Although he hasn't seen the appropriations bill yet, Weaver expects about $75,000 a year to be allocated for the cost sharing program. Weaver said the program won't be expensive, though, because money will eventually be generated by the Illinois Forestry Development Fund, another important feature created by the bill.

According to the bill, "the Department of Conservation shall pay into the fund all fees collected from timber buyers . . . and shall pay such monies appropriated from the fund to timber growers for implementation of acceptable forestry management practices." Basically, the program will fund itself, Weaver said.

One key phrase in the bill is "approved forestry management plan." Weaver said that for a landowner to be eligible for cost sharing and a tax abatement, he must first submit a plan to his district forester who approves or disapproves the plan and helps out with corrections.

Weaver said goals of a plan could be to provide a habitat for wildlife, to help with soil conservation or to help increase timber production.

"It must be a scientifically based program," Weaver said. Weaver said the forestry bill will aid in the economic development of the state, and should generate some direct jobs. As the bill stimulates forest production, the production should stimulate industries, he said.

The forestry potential in Illinois isn't recognized because "the state is so rich agriculturally that forestry is overlooked," Weaver said.

Weaver said it isn't even known whether industries have difficulty working in Illinois or not.

College council adopts arms control resolution

By Duane Schombert
Staff Writer

The College of Liberal Arts Council adopted a resolution Monday in support of negotiations for a nuclear freeze between the United States and the Soviet Union.

The resolution states that, as an immediate arms control objective, the United States and the Soviet Union should negotiate to achieve a mutual verifiable freeze on the testing, production and further deployment of nuclear warheads, missiles and other delivery systems.

David Christensen, faculty chairman of the council, said the nuclear arms race is of critical concern to higher education and universities in terms of budgets and the humanistic issue of survival of civilization.

"The arms race places huge demands on the budget and drains away money for defense that really is not defense or security," he added. "By supporting the arms race, the government can't help but reduce budgets available for education, unemployment assistance and job retraining. These are programs we need to pay attention to."

The resolution also would give special attention to destabilizing weapons whose deployment would make such a freeze more difficult to achieve.

Furthermore, the resolution states that in proceeding beyond the freeze, the United States and the Soviet Union should pursue major, mutual and verifiable reductions in nuclear warheads, missiles and other delivery systems.

Although it was through universities that atomic and nuclear power was born, Christensen and several other members of the council urged university officials, faculty and students to take responsible action in reducing the nuclear threat to higher education.

"It's an issue everyone should be concerned with," Christensen said.

In other business, the Council elected its officers for the 1983-84 academic school year.

Officers are Katherine Pedersen, chairman; David Christensen, vice chairman; Sudhakar Dharmadhikari, chairman of grievance committee; Robert McGlenn, chairman of teaching and learning committee; Margaret Epro, chairman of academic policies committee; Mary Lamb, chairman of selection of election committee; and Timothy Paul Keller, student vice chairman.

Summer sport camps offered

The Division of Continuing Education will offer nine sports camps for boys and girls starting June 5.

The camps being offered are volleyball, with five sessions June 5 to 29; softball, June 12 to 14; football, June 12 to 16; pole vaulting, June 12 to 17; baseball, two sessions, June 12 to 17 and June 19 to 24.

The wrestling camp will be held from June 13 to 16; girls basketball, two sessions July 10 to 13 and July 13 to 16. The boys basketball camp will meet for one session, July 17 to 22.

The swimming and diving camp for both girls and boys will meet for six sessions starting June 5 and continuing through July 22.

Information about the summer youth camps may be obtained from the Division of Continuing Education, SIUC, Washington Square C, 536-7751. Registration is required, as space may be limited.

TO THE SIU-C COMMUNITY A DECLARATION

IN SOLIDARITY WITH the poor of the world who suffer because of the massive excesses of the rich,

IN SOLIDARITY WITH those of our foreparents who, within the vision of their times, lived and worked for justice and freedom in the world,

IN SOLIDARITY WITH people around the world whose lifestyle and social harmony have been disrupted and destroyed by the intruding forces of other nations,

IN SOLIDARITY WITH all of those persons who are discriminated against because of the hierarchical structures of our world,

WE, THE HUMAN BEINGS IN THIS PLACE, DECLARE THE FOLLOWING:

WE choose LIFE for ourselves and for the world;

WE wish that our bodies be not "defended" by dropping nuclear bombs on other people—soldiers, civilians, children, women or men;

WE wish that neither we nor anything that is ours be made "safe", threatening to use such weapons;

WE do not want any part of any nuclear weapon system to be helped by us or by our money or by the political system to which we belong;

WE wish to use ourselves and our possessions to dismantle nuclear weapons and nuclear weapons systems, replacing them with human sharing, work, friendship and understanding.

WE WANT THIS TO HAPPEN NOW.

WE will not leave this to other people to do for us. In partnership with others we will find ways of doing something about it ourselves.

WE wish that it not come to pass that our own land or bodies, or the bones of our foreparents, or the bodies of our great grandparents or grandparents, or the bodies of our parents, our children, our grandchildren, or of any offspring into the future, be vaporized, torn apart or mutated by any of these bombs going off over us.

BY THE POWER THAT IS OURS, WE NAME OURSELVES AND ALL THAT IS OURS AND THIS PLACE WHERE WE STAND AS A NUCLEAR WEAPON FREE ZONE FOREVER.

More air play sought for AM radio

By Terry Levecke
Staff Writer

Daytime AM radio stations nationwide may be granted four additional hours of air play if bills in the House and Senate succeed in amending the Communications Act of 1934. Stations like WCIL-AM are allowed to operate only from sunrise to sunset under the present statutes. This policy was designed to clear the airwaves enabling rural areas to pick up stronger metropolitan stations, like WLS-AM from Chicago.

"This bill would enable daytime stations like WCIL to provide better service to local communities," said WCIL-AM program director Matt McCann. Big city stations no longer serve rural areas because of competition in their own market areas, McCann said.

"You just don't hear WLS giving the weather forecast for Carbondale or agriculture reports anymore," McCann said.

Rep. Paul Simon, D-2nd District, announced Monday that he will co-sponsor the bill introduced by Rep. Vin Weber, R-Minn. The bill is a compromise of one introduced last year that would have allowed daytime AM stations 24-hour air play. That bill was killed in committee.

"It's a good start," McCann said, referring to the extra four hours of air play, "but it's not the greatest solution in the world."

McCann is more optimistic about the bill since Simon said he would co-sponsor it.

We need more and more support for the bills" to get them out of committee, he said.

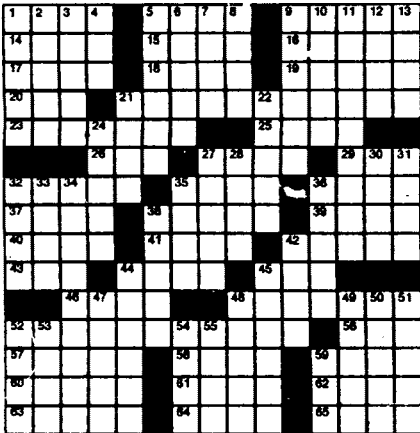

The Senate bill was introduced by Larry Pressler, D-S.D. Currently both bills are in subcommittees for study and have not been scheduled for further action.

Minority enrollment lagging, study says

By Vicki Olgeaty
Staff Writer

Minorities are still underrepresented in medical and dental schools in Illinois despite increased recruitment efforts, according to a higher education report.

But the SIU Medical School and Dental School rank near the top of the eight medical and four dental schools in terms of the number of blacks accepted in 1982, stated a minority enrollment report that the Illinois Board of Higher Education considered Tuesday at its meeting in Peoria.

"The types of activities which medical and dental schools are undertaking are appropriate to the goal of increasing minority student enrollments," the report stated. "The results of such activities to date, however, have not been satisfactory."

The report stated that black and Hispanic minorities are underrepresented in Illinois medical and dental schools at every stage from application to enrollment in comparison to their proportions in the total population of the state.

A major barrier to increasing minority student enrollments in medical and dental schools is the underrepresentation of blacks and Hispanics among those who receive bachelor's degrees and apply to such professional schools, the report stated.

The report recommended that recruitment efforts designed to increase representation of minorities among baccalaureate recipients be a high priority.

Several medical and dental schools indicated that minority students accepted at a school but who do not enroll there often enroll at other Illinois schools. Medical and dental schools in Illinois are competing for the same students, the report states.

Evidence of this was found at the SIU Medical School.

"Because a greater proportion of our accepted minority applicants come from the Chicago area, many of these applicants prefer to attend medical school there," SIU reported.

The enrollment of the SIU Medical School is 6.9 percent black, a percentage second to the University of Illinois. But only 1.4 percent of its first-year enrollment is composed of Hispanic students.

The enrollment of the SIU Dental School is 8.9 percent black, the highest percentage of the four dental schools. The SIU Dental School also had the highest percentage of Hispanic applicants, but no Hispanics enrolled.

Bill would make harassment of hunters a misdemeanor

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — To combat what has been called "war in the woods," an Illinois Senate committee Tuesday endorsed a measure to protect hunters from anti-hunting harassment.

Hunting groups testified in support of the bill before the Senate Judiciary Committee, which then approved the measure 7-1. It now goes to the full Senate for consideration.

A spokesman for the Illinois Wildlife Association, James R. Summers, told the panel of a Southern Illinois anti-hunting group that collected human hair clippings from barbershops to sprinkle in deer-hunting areas. He said the human scent scared the deer away before hunters could kill them.

The bill, sponsored by Democratic Sen. Sam Vadalabene of Edwardsville, would make such harassment a misdemeanor.

Vadalabene told the panel that Michigan, Arizona, South Dakota and Louisiana already have similar laws to protect hunters and that 18 states are considering enacting such measures.

Miles Brueckner of the Migratory Water Fowl Hunters, Inc., warned of dire consequences without a law.

"At present ... the only recourse is the hunter taking matters into his own hands and I'm sure we don't want to revert to that kind of society," Brueckner said.

Summers told the panel that many hunters come from northern Illinois to the southern part of the state to hunt, and then face empty woods because anti-hunting groups scare the animals away. Due to this, he said, the northern hunters lose money on their hunting trips.

The bill originally would have allowed punitive damages to harassed hunters, but the provision was taken out after some panel members objected.

The issue is not new. Outdoor Life Magazine published an article in July 1981, accusing "anti-hunting zealots" of fomenting "war in the woods."

Other types of harassment by hunting opponents include illegally baiting game areas with corn in the hope that hunters would be held liable. And, said Brueckner, duck blinds are routinely smashed or interfered with so they don't pass inspection.

Another type of harassment mentioned was intentional high-speed boating around fishermen. All types of intentional harassment would be covered as misdemeanors under the legislation.

State Police face budget reduction

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — Budget limits may require slashing Illinois State Police manpower by the equivalent of 265 troopers, restricting detective work and help given to local police agencies, according to a published report.

The manpower reduction from the current 1,100 would begin July 1, unless Gov. Thompson's four-year, $7 billion income tax increase proposal is approved.

The Bloomington Pantagraph reported Tuesday that Illinois Department of Law Enforcement Director James Zagle said in a memo sent Friday to all police agencies in Illinois that 51 troopers will be laid off when fiscal year 1984 begins.

The department's budget would be slashed to $102.4 million, down from the current fiscal year's $103.7 million.

The reductions will force state police detectives to stop investigating some kinds of crime, including gambling, vice, and minor burglaries, the report said.

An additional 139 trooper positions will expire through attrition and overtime will be eliminated, cutting effective manpower by another 75, the memo said.

Overtime in the department's Division of Criminal Investigation also will be eliminated, the equivalent of 50 detectives.

Department spokesman Bob Fletcher estimated that response times to rural accidents and crime scenes could increase by as much as three times in some areas.

Environmentalists urge probe of Ruckelshaus' public image

By William Kronholm
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Environmentalists testified Tuesday that they won't fight William D. Ruckelshaus' nomination to run the troubled Environmental Protection Agency. But they suggested his reputation may be overshadowing the question of his commitment to cleaning up the air and water.

Five major environmental groups urged the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee to examine closely Ruckelshaus' ties to industry and to seek assurances that he would guide the EPA with the public health in mind.

"We think that it is the responsibility of the committee ... to examine (his views) thoroughly so that the Senate, and the country at large, might know the man as opposed to the media myth that they are clinging as the next EPA administrator," said William A. Butler, vice president of the National Audubon Society.

Of the five groups testifying on the opening day of the committee hearings on Ruckelshaus' nomination, only the 4.2 million-member National Wildlife Federation flatly endorsed Ruckelshaus' nomination.

The other four said they were reserving judgment until they heard his testimony and they urged the committee to question Ruckelshaus carefully during his appearance Wednesday.

Butler noted that as a senior vice president of the Weyerhaeuser Co., a Seattle-based forest products company, Ruckelshaus criticized some environmental laws, including the Clean Air Act, and lobbied for change.

He said he did not know if the views were held personally by Ruckelshaus or were those of the company being presented by its lawyer. He said the committee should find out and seek assurances that Ruckelshaus believes in laws he will be responsible for enforcing.

Butler's comment about Ruckelshaus as a "media myth" follows a generally favorable reaction to his nomination to replace former EPA Administrator Anne McGill Burford, who resigned amid congressional and FBI investigations of the agency.

He was chosen largely because of his reputation as the agency's first chief, from 1970 to 1973. He also brings the tarnished agency a mark of integrity from his leaving his post as deputy attorney general during the "Saturday Night Massacre" of 1973 rather than follow President Nixon's order to fire special prosecutor Archibald Cox.

Committee won't demandate drivers' and physical education

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — A lobbyist for the union representing most downstate teachers says that after 19 defeats in recent years, those who want to end required drivers' and physical education should get the message.

But Ken Bruce, whose Illinois Education Association favors continuing the mandatory high school courses, says he's sure proponents will try and try again to win legislative approval for their idea.

Bruce made his comments after a Senate committee late Monday decided that upper-class high schoolers should be required to take drivers' ed and gym classes for at least another year.

It was a rebuke of the State Board of Education, which last week recommended lifting the requirements for driver training and PE. It was a victory for the IEA and the Illinois Federation of Teachers, which want to protect the jobs of members.

The Senate Elementary and Secondary Education Committee sent three measures to a subcommittee with clear orders that it avoid tackling the two programs until after lawmakers quit work in early July.

"The opposition, or should I say concern, about mandating (the programs) persists... the issue needs a bit more discussion and more study," said Sen. John Maitland, R-Bloomington, sponsor of two of the three proposals.

A fourth proposal, to end the PE requirement for all high school students, was held by the committee, putting the bill in legislative limbo. That bill also was Maitland's.

Students to present recital

Steve Frew, trumpet, and Brent Wallarab, trombone, will present a joint student recital at 4 p.m. Thursday in the Old Baptist Foundation Chapel.

Assisting Frew and Wallarab, will be pianists Ani'a Hutton, Mahn-Hee Kang and Jeanne Deneal.

The state school board contends studies indicate that teenagers are not made better or safer drivers after completing drivers' ed.

Many schools want the drivers' ed requirement eliminated, but for financial reasons. They say it costs about $170 to get one student through the drivers' course, but the state only reimburses schools an average $92 per student.

A state board spokesman confirmed the figures, adding Illinois will spend $15 million this school year reimbursing high schools for the $30 million driver training program.

Both students are freshman majoring in music performance. Frew is also majoring in music education.

Works to be performed include pieces by David, Hummel, Guilmant and Kennan. The performance is free and the public is invited to attend.

Swimmer's sport a step to higher goal

By Sherry Chisehall
Staff Writer

Editor's note — This is the eighth in a series of present and former SIU-C students who have aspirations to compete at the 1984 Olympic Games.

Every so often a great athlete comes along whose priorities are different, whose strongest commitments lie elsewhere.

Roger VonJouanne is such an athlete. VonJouanne was the anchor of the men's swimming team for four years and still holds several Sakuki records, as well as All-American honors in the 200 butterfly, 200 and 400 individual medley and the 100 backstroke. As a junior VonJouanne broke the American record in the 200 fly, and as a senior he placed first in the 200 IM at nationals.

But VonJouanne's loyalties run deeper than merely maintaining the self-discipline to trek up and down a pool for a few hours every day. To the Renton, Wash., native, swimming is a tool to accomplish a more subliminal goal.

"Swimming has been a vehicle for me," VonJouanne said. "God has given me a special talent, and it's my way of spreading His word. By being successful in my swimming I can give back to Him what He gave to me."

VonJouanne said his entire life turned around when he became a Christian three years ago. He had been swimming since the age of 10, and admitted reaching a stage of being burned out on the sport, toward the end of his sophomore year at SIU-C.

"Workouts got to be grueling, and in high school I even took a whole summer off of swimming," he said. "I usually took off a month and a half every year, but once I became a Christian I take about three days a year off. I look forward to workouts."

"When I accepted the Lord I became a new creation, and all my priorities changed. All of my views have been ground around since then. I've changed, my swimming has changed, my personality became remade — but that's what the Bible promised would happen. I just didn't know it then. It says God will leave no stone unturned, and that's what's happened to me.

"When I look back on how I used to be, I can't believe that was me. I was really scientific, I needed proof of everything. I couldn't believe people believed in His existence, and I tried to set everyone straight, because I thought God was a fallacy. I used to get into arguments with Christians, but after awhile their arguments got stronger and stronger and mine kept getting weaker."

"The change for me took place over an eight-month period. I was stubborn — I just wouldn't believe. He really silver-plattered me with miracles and had a lot of grace toward me. When I finally started praying, I realized He exists. All of my beliefs were churned around, and I learned to love people."

VonJouanne said every aspect of his life took a turn for the better, including his swimming.

"I was at a point when I was considering not swimming anymore," he said. "I thought it was trivial, and not important. But I realized that God gave me a gift, so I decided to pursue it. It made a world of difference in my training, because I learned to enjoy it. I'm motivated in my workouts, because I see swimming as my chance to spread the Word.

"Americans tend to put outstanding athletes on a pedestal. If they put me in the limelight, I use the opportunity to tell people about Him. When the cameras are on me at a big swim meet, I can tell them where I got the power. People listen then, and as long as it works, I'll do it."

"Coach (Bob) Steele said we're all in the sport for our egos, but that's not the case for me, although it is for most people. I'm not swimming for self-gratification. I wouldn't find it worthwhile to do it for myself. Most people want to reap the benefits for themselves, but I get more satisfaction out of doing it for Him."

"Before I became a Christian, I was always uptight about my swimming or my grades, but He's turned me over. He's pleased with me no matter how I finish. If you swim against your opponents, you get uptight during a race. Now I just close my eyes, and after the race I look up and see how I did. He honors a commitment to Him and a performance that's 100 percent. If I give my best during a race, it doesn't matter if I touch after anyone else.

"I'm not scared of losing anymore. And I do better because of that. Jesus takes all burdens, and He honors those who honor Him. I made my decision to really give it all to the Lord last fall, when I didn't know whether to keep swimming, because my funding stopped when I graduated. But I decided to pursue the talent He gave me, that's what he wanted me to do, and I can glorify Him through my swimming."

VonJouanne's pursuit of swimming may carry him into the 1984 Olympics. He is gearing his training toward the Olympic trials in July of '84, from which the top two swimmers in each event will be named to the U.S. Olympic team.

"My chances of making the team are very good," VonJouanne said. "Last summer the trials were held for the World Games, and the first two got to go. I was third. When school gets out I can attack my training for 15 months, and I hope to peak for the trials."

"My best shot is in the 200 fly, although my 200 IM is solid, too. When I'm in the water, I concentrate on those two. I make it a point to give 100 percent when I'm in the water, and the most important thing is glorifying God, whether I make the Olympic team or not."

In the meantime, school has been the focus of VonJouanne's life, another area that he excels in naturally. After his graduation, when his scholarship money ran out, he received a post-graduate scholarship from the NCAA in Thermal and Environmental Engineering, to pursue his master's degree.

"My swimming has taken a backseat to my studies, because that's how it has to be," he said. "I try to excel in academics, because that's a gift, too. People don't always see it, though. It's hard to bring something like that in the limelight, because people really don't care about it like they do sports, but I strive to do well in my studies the same as in swimming." "After the '84 Games, though, the swimmer's future is anything but definite. "I don't know whether or not I'll continue swimming," VonJouanne said. "My graduation will coincide with my swimming then, and afterward I plan to start working. I would enjoy doing both, but I probably won't have the time.

"Family is really important to me. A lot is said in the Word about raising a family as a commitment to God, and I want that. After the Olympics it may be time for me to concentrate on work and a family. Right now I think that might be the end of my swimming, but it's not definite. If He wants me to stay along that avenue, He will let me know."

"We knew they (Irsay and club attorney Michael Chernoff) were talking to a number of teams and that Denver was one of them," Kush said. "But we had no idea the trade was finalized."

As late as Monday, Kush was contending that the club's stand on Elway — the player had told the Colts prior to the draft he would not play for them, but Baltimore insisted on picking him anyway — was in the best interests of the team and the NFL.

"If we gave in," Kush said, "what would happen to every kid who wanted to play in Los Angeles or Dallas instead of wanting to go to Houston? The system is built on the teams you want to help out. There's nothing, wrong with the system."

After being chosen by the Colts, Elway, in a telephone conversation with Kush, expressed his disappointment and told the Colts not to call back.

The Colts didn't, but Jack Elway, the quarterback's father, called Kush the following day and they talked several more times before last weekend. Buoyed by the reestablished contact, the Colts privately held out hope they could persuade their draft pick to play in Baltimore.

But that was undercut by Irsay, who made a deal that appeared to offer less than the Colts rejected shortly before the draft.

The Los Angeles Raiders had offered three No. 1 draft choices — this year plus each of the next two years — and backup quarterback Marc Wilson.

Cross, Harper opt for NBA

CHAMPAIGN (AP) — Two top juniors in the Big Ten, Derek Harper of Illinois and Russell Cross of Purdue, announced Tuesday they would leave school early for professional basketball careers.

Their college coaches advised them against the move, but both players cited money and family obligations as the reasons for their decisions.

Harper, a 6-foot-10 center from Chicago, averaged 17.7 points a game for the Boilermakers last season to become the eighth leading scorer in Purdue history.

Harper, a 6-foot-4 guard from West Palm Beach, Fla., led the Illini with 18.2 points a game, shooting 59.6 percent from the field.

"After the season, I thought about it a lot," said Harper, considered one of the best college guards in the country.

"It doesn't have anything to do with the coaches, the players or the fans. I've enjoyed the three years I played here."

Both juniors said it was not easy to leave college basketball.

"The decision to leave school has been a difficult one to make, but I believe that my obligation to my family is most important," said Cross, who led Chicago Manley to the 1980 Illinois Class AA prep championship.

"Naturally, I tried to get him to stay," said Purdue coach Gene Keady. "For his sake, I wanted him to continue with his academics, and I thought another year in college would help better prepare him for the NBA."

Illinois coach Lou Henson expressed similar feelings about Harper.

"Personally, I don't feel this decision is in his best interests," said Henson.

"Derek could be the top player in the Big Ten next year and, according to scouts I've talked to, could be one of the top 10 draft choices next year. I'm told that would mean a contract well into six figures and guaranteed for at least three years," he said.

Both players have until May 14 to file a letter with the National Basketball Association making them eligible for the June 28 draft.

"Obviously, I would like to play for Chicago, but of course I have no control over that," said Cross.

Harper and Cross led their teams into the NCAA tournament last season.

Eddie Johnson of the Kansas City Kings, the only former Illini in the NBA, was in Champaign Monday night and talked with Harper.

"I'll say this about Derek — he's good enough to play in the NBA," said Johnson. "He'll make it and he'll be around for a long time."

In yet another sports contest between media outlets, staff members of WIDB Radio defeated WCIL Radio 57-48 Monday night at Davies Gymnasium in a benefit for the Harold McFarlin Heart Transplant Fund.

Doug Dillard, who works for both stations, opted to play for WCIL and was the Record-breakers' leading scorer with 30 points.

Second Herrin biathlon set

The Herrin Road Runners and Sterling Beer will sponsor a 20-mile bicycle race and a 6.2-mile foot race open to all ages at 11 a.m. May 14.

Both races, which will begin and end in the Herrin City Park, require an advance entry fee of $4. Free t-shirts will be given to the first 100 entrants.

The races will be divided into six male categories and five female categories according to the age of entrants.

Trophies will be awarded to the top three winners in all classes for both races.

Team awards will also be awarded based on the best five finishes in a given class. Team sizes are limited to eight.

Blackman steps down from track post

By Ken Perkins
Staff Writer

Disillusioned by recruiting demands and the pressures associated with winning, Claudia Blackman will step down from her double duty as head women's track and cross-country coach Aug. 15.

Blackman, 37, guided the Salukis to Illinois AIAW State Championships in both sports in 1976 and has had national qualifiers in track and field every year since 1974, but her teams have struggled somewhat in recent years.

The Michigan native said her decision was not a premature one, nor was there any pressure involved, adding that she had contemplated a change in her coaching duties in February and brought it to the attention of Women's Athletic Director Charlotte West.

After trying to come up with "other possibilities," the pair ran into the inevitable.

"It just took its toll," Blackman said about the long hours of recruiting.

"I've never really enjoyed recruiting, and coaching track and cross-country is a year long thing and it can get to you. I didn't get any pressure from above. I went to Dr. West, it wasn't as if she came to me.

"I would have rather waited to the end of the season," Blackman said, "but over in the Physical Education Department, I needed to give more notice of my plans."

Blackman, a tenured instructor in physical education, was granted approval to return to full-time teaching at SIUC last week. She has taught in the department since earning a master's degree in 1968.

Blackman will be stepping down from one of her better teams since she took over in 1972. With the recruiting successes of freshmen Denise Blackman and Ann Lavine and junior standouts Debra Davis and Nina Williams, the foundation for a potent team had been laid.

That made the resignation more difficult, Blackman confesses, but it also made it a lot more surprising seemingly it came at a time that was ripe for an upswing in the program.

"I don't think there is a good time to leave," she said.

"It is harder now because we have a good group of sophomores and a good group of freshmen. At least I am leaving a foundation for a good team."

Monday she huddled with her last Saluki team because she wanted them to be the first to know.

"I told them that I was leaving, but it didn't mean an end to the women's track and field program," she said. "I said it was the beginning in fact."

"Not many people said too much to me after that," said Blackman. "It was a shock, I guess. It wasn't that I had mentioned it before. Even if I had made a decision, the worst thing would have been to say something too early."

Blackman started coaching women's track on a part-time basis in the Spring of 1972. Amid coaching stints in badminton and basketball, she initiated the cross-country program in the fall of '72 and obtained a full-time coaching appointment four years later.

West praised Blackman for her high standards and commitment to the women's track program and vowed to keep the team moving in the right direction. She said the search for a new coach would begin immediately with hopes of filling the position by mid-June.

Stanton places well in World Cup diving

By JoAnn Marciszewski
Sports Editor

Nigel Stanton placed 10th on three-meter springboard and 14th on 10-meter tower while competing against high-level divers at the FINA World Cup in Texas last week.

Stanton, a freshman from Ware, England, joined the Saluki swimming and diving team in January as an established world-class competitor. He is the senior national champion of the United Kingdom in the one-, three- and 10-meter events. He placed 16th at last year's World Championships.

Stanton said he was pretty satisfied with his springboard dives, as he hit 10 of the 11 dives pretty well. He was not too pleased with his 10-meter dives, though it's usually his better event. Limited practice because of the lack of a 10-meter platform at SIUC took away from his sharpness, he said.

Stanton, at 18-years-old, was the second youngest competitor at the World Cup meet, which contributed to some difference in experience.

Colts-players saga continues

By Gordon Beard
AP Sports Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Less than a week after selecting disenfranchised quarterback John Elway as the No. 1 player in the National Football League draft, the Baltimore Colts have traded him — for another unhappy player.

In disposing of Elway, who threatened to play baseball rather than sign with Baltimore, the Colts received from Denver quarterback Mark Herrmann, offensive tackle Chris Hinton and the Broncos' No. 1 draft pick in 1984.

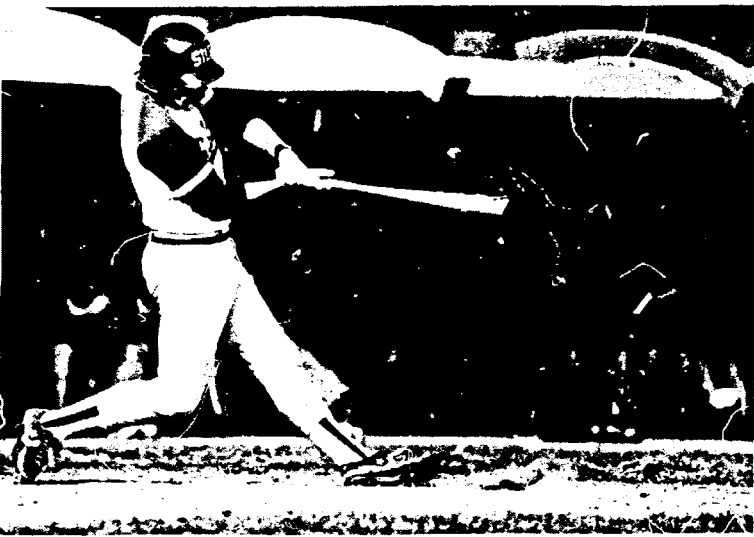

Hinton, Denver's No. 1 selection and the No. 4 choice overall in last week's draft, was reported having second thoughts about an NFL career.

Nigel Stanton

"Most people there have been diving 10 or 11 years or more," said Stanton, who didn't start until he was 12-years-old. There were differences in the degree of difficulty of the dives as most of Stanton's were done in the tuck position and others dove in the harder pike position.

Diving coach Dennis Golden said Stanton's performance was an encouraging one coming in the year before the Olympics.

Salukis split yet another twinbill

EDWARDSVILLE — The Saluki baseball team let another doubleheader slip away Tuesday at Edwardsville and Coach Itchy Jones isn't sure whether it's because of mediocrity or the lack of a killer instinct.

"We gave it away," Jones said after the Salukis lost 4-3 in the nightcap and ruined a possible sweep.

After winning the opener 5-3, SIUC took a 3-0 lead in the second game after a first-inning Robert Jones home run but let the Cougars scratch their way back with four one-run innings.

The denouement came in the sixth inning when Jay Bellissimo lost his control and the Salukis lost the game.

Bellissimo walked the bases full with nobody out and the winning run scored on a double-play ground ball.

"We walk a hitter and they're in a bunt situation, and we walk two more hitters," Jones said.

"They're saying we'll give you an out and we won't get an out anywhere."

SIUC has had a habit of splitting doubleheaders.

"I'm not sure that we're aggressive, and mean, enough to win doubleheaders," Jones said. "Maybe we're mediocre, maybe we're not good enough to win doubleheaders. I'm not saying that derogatively."

SIUC had a chance to tie it in its half of the seventh inning but Jones struck out on a curve ball with the bases full to end the game.

Jones' home run had held up until the Cougars scored single runs in the second, third, fifth and sixth innings. Jones dropped his home run over the Budweiser sign in the left field corner with the wind blowing hard to right field and a driving rain in his face.

It rained on and off throughout the afternoon.

It was the first time since 1975 that SIUC had lost to the Cougars. The Salukis had won 13 straight.

Bellissimo got the loss in relief in two innings of work after Gary Bockhorn had started with four solid innings. Jones divided up the two games between the probable starters for this weekend's conference series with Bradley.

"We need to win three out of four at Bradley or the season's over," Jones said.

In the first game, Richard Ellis pitched three innings and then yielded to Rich Koch, who got the save with an impressive four-inning stint. The Salukis got all the runs they needed in the top half of the second.

Mike Blumhorst and Jones started the rally with singles. Mike Gellinger kept it alive with an infield hit to load the bases, then Koch tripled all three runners in with a drive to left center field. Steve Boyd ended the scoring with a sacrifice fly.

SIUC added another run in the third when Scott Bridges tripled into the right field corner and scored on Blumhorst's ground ball.
