Firm charged with check rigging

WASHINGTON (UPI) — E.F. Hutton & Co., the nation's fifth largest brokerage firm, pleaded guilty Thursday to 2,000 federal counts of rigging millions of dollars in checks and agreed to pay $2.75 million in criminal fines.

The 32-year-old company said its practices "did not involve or threaten customer or client funds. The injured parties were certain commercial banks, to which the company will make full restitution."

The 2,000 criminal counts were filed against the company in federal court in Scranton, Pa., where E.F. Hutton agreed to pay $2.75 million in fines, make restitution to banks and never to commit the same violations again.

E.F. Hutton also consented to appointment of a special master to determine the amount of restitution it must pay to 400 banks and financial institutions that were victimized, the Justice Department announced.

Each charge was subject to a fine of $1,000 and the additional $750,000 was to defray the costs of the government's investigation.

"This is a sad and difficult day for E.F. Hutton and for me personally," said Robert Fomon, chairman and chief executive officer of the firm.

Securities and Exchange Commission regulations bar any convicted felon — including a company — from acting as an investment adviser, but Hutton asked for and was granted a 180-day exemption from the rule while the commission reviews the

Negotiations could put Sailing Club back on lake basin

By Jeff Curl
Staff Writer

The Southern Illinois Collegiate Sailing Club will probably be sailing once again on the sailboat basin at Crab Orchard Lake by early summer.

That message came from a meeting last Friday between three representatives of the club and Ken and Susan Barnhart, the new managers of the lake's sailboat basin.

The Barnharts, who rent sailboats, asked the club to leave in April, saying the club would be too much competition for their rentals.

However, Peter Carroll, associate professor in physical education and teacher of SIU-C sailing classes, Kathy Rankin, coordinator of student recreational sports, and club member Eric Sutton, senior in engineering, met with the Barnharts to talk about the club's chance of returning to Crab Orchard.

The three said they received some positive news from the Barnharts.

"I think it's going to work out," said Rankin. "I was really positive from the meeting."

The club and the Barnharts will "sleep" on the verbal agreement before any details are finalized, said Rankin. The two groups will meet early next week.

Although stressing that nothing has been finalized yet, Sutton said that the club will still be able to have its annual free sail day, but probably won't be able to have kegs of beer.

The club will also probably have to be off the premises after 6 p.m., he said.

"Nothing has been signed," Sutton said. "We just had a meeting and everyone took notes and everything's still up in the air. But we're really optimistic."

Election commission bill sparks heated talks

By Cynthia Weiss
Staff Writer

Frustration over the still unresolved Undergraduate Student Organization election came to a head at the Student Senate meeting Wednesday when a bill "to affirm the dismissal of the election commissioner and the election commission from their duties" was submitted.

The bill — which stemmed from a dispute over the election commission's disqualification of the Phoenix Party, and the election commission's "resignation" after the Judicial Board for Governance "reversed that ruling — was eventually defeated. But not before it had "done its damage" as one senator put it.

Harsh and heated words flew between the bill's submitter, Gregg Miller, and Lamont Brantley, election commissioner, when the senate voted to lift the rules and allow Brantley to answer to charges against him.

One verbal attack followed another in the Student Center ballroom while senators and members of the audience cheered sides as if at a basketball game.

Miller accused the election commission of attempting to ruin the USO, among other things, and said the senate should pass the bill because the commission had shown "conflict of interest, dereliction of duty and malfeasance of duty."

Brantley countered by telling Miller that he thought Miller's bill was poorly thought out and carelessly written. The bill, written to "affirm" USO President Andy Leighton's dismissal of the commission, was a farce, Brantley said, because Leighton did not have the power to dismiss the commission in the first place.

"Only the Committee on Internal Affairs with the approval of the senate can dismiss the election commission," he said.

Jay Neposchlin, one of many proxies at Wednesday's meeting, questioned whether Brantley's commission had allowed Tony Appelman and the Phoenix Party due process before disqualifying them.

Brantley heatedly told

Neposchlin that he felt Appelman did have due process, and that if Neposchlin didn't believe him, he should ask Appelman.

"I have," Neposchlin said. "Then he lied," Brantley responded.

Robert Jones questioned Brantley's choice of commission members. He said Brantley "stacked the commission with friends from the same apartment complex," to which Brantley replied, "I can't help it I live in a com-

Board to make final decision on USO conflict

By Cynthia Weiss
Staff Writer

Although the Undergraduate Student Organization election results were ratified at the Student Senate meeting Wednesday, there is still no president-elect, according to USO President Andy Leighton.

Presidential and vice presidential team Tony Appelman and Tracy Stone of the Phoenix Party garnered the most votes in the election April 18, but because of an ongoing struggle between them and the USO election commission, the two have not yet been officially named president- and vice president-elect.

The election commission disqualified the Phoenix Party April 16, two days before the election. The commission's decision was reversed on April 22, however, by the Judicial Board for Governance.

April 24, one day after

Election Commissioner Lamont Brantley had announced that the whole commission had resigned, the commission met and decided not to resign. It also voted to "redisqualify" the Phoenix Party over complaints filed on election day and within two days after.

Leighton said he received a memo from the election commission on which the campaign violations allegedly committed by the Phoenix Party were called "blatant" enough for disqualification.

The Judicial Board for Governance will meet at 5 p.m. Monday to decide the Phoenix Party's new appeal.

If the commission decides in the Phoenix Party's favor, Appelman will become president. If not, Dan DeFosse, receiving the second highest number of votes, will become president.

U.S., Japan, W. Germany seeking world trade talks

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — The leaders of the world's three largest economic powers agreed Thursday to seek world trade talks in early 1986 to ease import-export restrictions, but French President Francois Mitterrand withheld his approval. Reagan, Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone of Japan and West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl agreed in bilateral talks before the start of the seven-power Western economic summit to seek a new round of world trade talks.

Investment sanctions against S. Africa OK'd

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Foreign Affairs Committee approved trade and investment sanctions Thursday against the white-minority government of South Africa to pressure it to end its racial segregation policies. The bill bans U.S. bank loans to the South African government and new investments by American companies. It forbids the import of South African gold coins and restricts the sale of computers to the Pretoria government.

Former accuser 'elated' at Dotson's release

JAFFREY, N.H. (UPI) — Cathleen Crowell Webb said Thursday she is "elated" by Gary Dotson's release from prison, but won't be satisfied until he is cleared of the rape she now says never happened. Webb, 23, met with reporters in a church hall in rural southwestern New Hampshire one day after Dotson was freed on $1,000 bond from an Illinois prison. Webb testified last month that she decided to recant the rape charge she made eight years ago because of her belief in God.

Carbide plant to resume chemical production

SOUTH CHARLESTON, W.Va. (UPI) — Union Carbide plans to restart production of the deadly chemical methyl isocyanate at its Institute pesticide plant sometime Friday morning, company spokesman Thad Epps said Thursday. Meanwhile, a group of about 20 protesters from "People Concerned About MIC" drove a caravan of about 10 cars near Interstate 64 near the Institute plant with such signs as "MIC is a killer."

U.S. protests Polish detention of diplomats

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department lodged strong protests with the Polish government Thursday over the detainment of two American diplomats and charged Polish police kicked and struck one of the Americans. A department spokesman denied "ludicrous allegations" from the Polish foreign ministry that the two Americans had participated in anti-government demonstrations in southern Poland near the Czechoslovak border. The two were released after being held briefly.

Salmonella lawyers seek compilation of evidence

CHICAGO (UPI) — A group of about 150 attorneys plans to submit a proposal to court officials for streamlining the collection of evidence in lawsuits stemming from the nation's worst salmonella outbreak, a group spokesman said Thursday. So far, nearly 100 lawsuits have been filed against Jewel Companies Inc., which produced and marketed Bluebrook-brand lowfat milk that contained the salmonella bacteria. The attorneys' group wants to consolidate the collection of evidence and depositions since the circuit courts have no provisions for handling mass disaster litigation, Harte said.

Group says program elimination bad for cities

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — Elimination of the federal revenue sharing program would cost Illinois cities $200 million a year and could prompt property tax hikes or budget cuts, the Illinois Municipal League said Thursday. Michael Houston, mayor of Springfield and president of the cities' group, said the program — a target of Reagan administration budget cuts — is an "integral component" of financing Illinois cities.

House OKs inquiries of day care workers

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — House lawmakers Thursday overwhelmingly endorsed a measure requiring criminal background checks of day care center employees, but backed off requiring the same checks for teachers. The legislation is intended to prevent children from being abducted or molested by people watching over them. The background checks for day care center employees would involve only certain crimes, such as murder, kidnapping and sex-related offenses.

Scott Air Force Base may open for commercial traffic

By John Krukowski
Staff Writer

Legislation dealing with the opening of Scott Air Force Base to commercial civilian traffic has been drafted by Congressman Ken Gray and the plan has the support of Gov. James Thompson, according to a Gray aide.

Reaction to the idea on the other side of the Mississippi, however, is less than enthusiastic, says the director of the St. Louis airport.

The legislation would authorize the Secretary of the Air Force to enter into negotiations with state and local officials over the joint civilian-military venture at the 3,100-acre base near Belleville, said press aide Patrick McCaffrey.

Gray first made the idea public in a speech before Southern Illinois Inc. in February and has since accumulated more than 60 co-sponsors for the bill, McCaffrey said. Gray is tentatively scheduled to introduce the measure to the House May 17.

McCaffrey said the airport would relieve Lambert-St. Louis International Airport of about 25 percent of its congestion. Lambert logged almost 400,000 flights last year, he said.

Lambert is looking to rid itself of its freight traffic, McCaffrey said, and the airport at Scott could pick up the slack.

However, Col. Leonard Griggs, director of Lambert, has expressed opposition to the joint civilian-military facility, calling the idea "preposterous."

Griggs said he "supports the economic development of Southern Illinois" and the development of Scott in its present use as an Air Force base, but is opposed to opening the base to commercial traffic because it would take away from Lambert's traffic.

McCaffrey said Gray's idea has the support of the Federal Aviation Administration, the Airline Transport Organization representing 32 major airlines, and Gov. Thompson.

The idea has been put to work at 23 airbases around the country and would produce "a couple hundred to a thousand jobs," McCaffrey said. There is no estimate as to the cost of the project, which involves the construction of two 10,000-foot runways, a major air-freight terminal and a secondary passenger terminal, he said.

Civil Service votes due by Wednesday

By David Liss
Staff Writer

Civil Service Employees Council elections are set for Wednesday and ballots have already been mailed out, said Barbara Humphrey, co-chairwoman of the election committee.

Ballots must be returned to the Campus Mail Service by noon Wednesday to be eligible, she said. The first meeting of the new council will be June 5, she said, and new officers will be elected then.

If employees have not received ballots in the mail, they should call Humphrey.

Eleven positions are open on the council in five areas of employment — academic affairs, campus services, financial affairs, student affairs and miscellaneous. Employees in each area elect representatives for their areas. Academic affairs, the largest area, has four open positions and 17 candidates running, Humphrey said. Campus services has two seats open and eight candidates on the ballot, she said, and financial affairs has one position open and one candidate running.

Student affairs has two seats open and six candidates running, Humphrey said. The miscellaneous area has two seats open and four candidates on the ballot, she said. This area includes employees in University relations, presidential administration, planning and budgeting and the Carbondale offices of the School of Medicine, chancellor's office and Board of Trustees.

Thompson unveils fiscal 1986 highway plans

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — Gov. James R. Thompson Thursday unveiled an $884 million fiscal 1986 highway construction program that includes the improvement of more than 1,000 miles of roads and the rebuilding of 350 bridges.

The governor's program for the fiscal year beginning July 1 represents the first stage of a planned $3.9 billion, five-year project aimed at fixing or building more than 4,200 miles of road and renovating 1,350 bridges. "This ... will send a powerful signal to the business world that we in Illinois are ready to do business when business comes," the governor said, using the announcement to push for his "Build Illinois" plan.

The "Build Illinois" proposal, introduced in Thompson's State of the State speech in February, includes $372 million for three road projects that are not part of the regular highway program.

According to a news release from Sen. Glenn Poshard's office, the following projects are planned for Southern Illinois:

— Two miles of resurfacing on Illinois to Logan Street to Harrel Street in West Frankfort at an estimated cost of $400,000.

— A mile and a quarter of resurfacing on internal roads and parking areas in Cave-In-Rock State Park at an estimated cost of $64,000.

— Two miles of road work on the main park road and parking areas in the Saline county Conservation Area east of Harrisburg at an estimated cost of $187,000.

— Nearly three miles of patching on Sesser Road in Franklin County, a quarter mile of resurfacing on the Illinois 145 frontage road in Jonesboro and 16 miles of patching on U.S. 51 between Anna and Ullin at an estimated cost of $115,000.

11 lawmakers approve

"Build Illinois" and the 5 percent tax on private car sales which would be used to pay for it, Thompson said the long-awaited U.S. 51 project from LaSalle-Peru to Bloomington Normal would be finished by 1994.

In addition, he said, construction of the CIE from Illinois 336 near Quincy to Illinois 107 south of Griggsville would be completed by 1992 if the "Build Illinois" program is approved.

Veterans' heroics recognized at last

IT HAS BEEN 10 YEARS SINCE American soldiers came home from Vietnam. Unfortunately, it has been much less than 10 years since they received one of the many things to which their sacrifice should have entitled them — being recognized as heroes by their fellow Americans.

The recognition is a paltry reward to offer the hundreds of thousands of men who risked their lives in an undeclared war staged 8,000 miles from their homeland. Perhaps because many Americans were confused about why we were there and angry about what had happened, it took most of us years to realize what the men in uniform sacrificed, and even longer to say thanks.

The results of a recent poll by Newsweek show 63 percent of Americans consider our involvement in Vietnam's civil war to have been a mistake, not an attempt to aid what President Reagan has labeled a "noble cause." The anti-war protests staged here at home seem to be remembered better than the gallantry displayed by the men fighting in what was to become our nation's first major military defeat. Perhaps this is because the protesters eventually reached their objective. In Vietnam, even today, it seems that nobody won.

AFTER THE WAR IN VIETNAM WAS OVER and our soldiers — most of them — were home, Americans said that, if nothing else, at least we learned a lesson from Vietnam. But today no one seems to be sure what that lesson is and just how it should be applied. A part of it, to be sure, is never to be afraid to question acts of our leaders. And, to never overlook valiant acts of patriotism.

To some, the Vietnam War may represent all that is bad about the United States' political system. But to all, the Vietnam veteran represents all that is good about the American people.

Future Springfest planners should consider implications

I believe whole-heartedly in having fun and the concept of Springfest.

However, in view of extreme conditions of human starvation in the world, I was dismayed to see that activities such as an egg toss and an oatmeal dive were scheduled.

These activities involve a blatant waste of food and are in sharp contrast to the efforts made recently by children from the poorer sections of New York city who raised enough money to send an airplane load of grain to Ethiopia. I'm sure that it would be easy to find people in Southern Illinois who NEED eggs or oatmeal.

I sincerely hope that those who plan future Springfests will consider the social implications that may be conveyed by the various activities scheduled. Certainly there are many ways to have fun that do not involve such an extravagant waste of food.

Thanks for a job well done

On behalf of the boards of directors of both the Southern Illinois Special Athletes and the Southern Illinois Senior Olympics, I would like to take this opportunity to thank all of the people of the greater Southern Illinois area who volunteered their time in kind donations and/or services this past week in helping to make both the Special Olympics on April 25 and the Senior Olympics on April 26 and 27, a tremendous success.

As always, these events are totally dependent on volunteer efforts. Your efforts, donations and time DO make a difference.

Again, to SIU-C and the surrounding Southern Illinois community, thanks again for all of your support and a job well done.

We tip our hats to all of you. — E.L. Pavledes, chairperson, games coordination, Southern Illinois Special Olympics and Senior Olympics.

A conservative takeover of CBS would be genuine media freedom

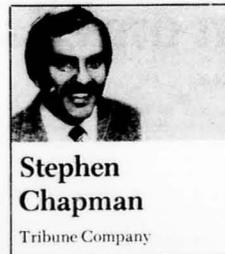

THE PROSPECT of a conservative-backed takeover of the CBS television network has been treated as if it were an affront to the very idea of particularly by CBS and its admirers. How dare anyone proclaiming a particular ideology try to gain control of the most distinguished news organization in broadcasting!

Former CBS anchorman Walter Cronkite declared, "I can't think of anything more chilling than the idea that a major news media would be under control of people who are admittedly ideological ... that would be the beginning of the end of our free media society." CBS vice president Mary Boies agrees: "To seek control of a corporation for the sole purpose of subjecting a news operation to political influence contradicts the tradition of a free and independent press."

These two may be forgiven if their association with CBS distorts their judgment a bit. But their ignorance of history and incomprehension of the First Amendment shouldn't be indulged.

FROM THE beginning of the American republic, and before, news organs served explicitly ideological ends. Newspapers and magazines usually were the creations of people intent on propagating their political beliefs. The Chicago Tribune, for example, was purchased by Joseph Medill in 1855 to serve as a weapon in the battle against slavery. Other publications unabashedly pushed other political goals.

Protecting such activities was the whole point of the First Amendment. Why else have it? The government would have little reason to suppress newspapers that merely report events in strictly factual deprived broadcasting of the First Amendment's protections. Where the state holds the power to license the press, the licensees are bound to avoid expressing opinions, or else to hide them behind a facade of majestic neutrality.

The latter, of course, is what all three major networks now do. Nearly every report on matters of political debate is colored by the correspondent's opinion. That opinion is not always liberal; sometimes it tilts rightward. But opinion nonetheless shows through.

A more candid approach, such as that offered by Jesse Helms, Fairness in Media and company—acting in concert with Ted Turner or with others—would be a step toward the honest debate carried on in the print media. Networks implausibly pretend to have no opinions; newspapers print theirs in black and white in editorials. The latter is fairer to the public and healthier for democracy.

Conservatives, however, don't have clean hands in this dispute: For years they have pressed the federal government to restrain "liberal bias" in broad-sting. If conservatives want the right to establish an openly conservative network, they have to concede their opponents the same liberty.

That means repealing federal regulations on what broadcasters put on the air, stripping it of the power to license them and requiring it to sell the right to the unconstrained use of each slot on the broadcasting spectrum. Warmed by the sunshine of genuine freedom, the airwaves may see a hundred flowers bloom.

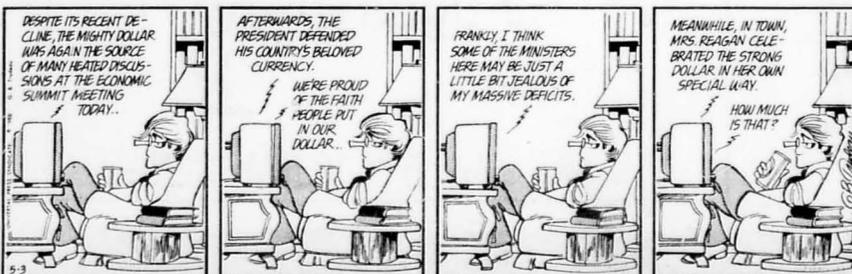

terms. It is those organs that preach to readers about the meaning of such facts, telling them what political conclusions to draw, that are likely to arouse the wrath of those in power.

Networks ... pretend to have no opinions

The attitude of Cronkite and Boies recalls the view of Supreme Court Justice Joseph Story, who said the First Amendment means only that "every man shall be at liberty to publish what is true, with good motives and for justifiable ends." The Court rejected this view in 1931, calling it "the essence of censorship."

IT IS THE idea of CBS as a model of objectivity, not the proposed conservative takeover, that is out of sync with American tradition and the Bill of Rights. In fact, the networks have shunned overt political evangelism mainly because the federal government, with the Supreme Court's blessing, has largely

Vietnam vets see parallels in Nicaragua

By Tom Atkins
Staff Writer

If all Vietnam veterans were asked how they feel about their experience in the war some would say the war was right, some would say it was wrong, some wouldn't know, and others would say, "Just forget it, it's over."

And for some, it is not over. Some Southern Illinois veterans are reminded of the horror and confusion of the Vietnam War when they consider events in Nicaragua and the Reagan administration's policies in Central America.

Others say the two situations cannot be compared, and others don't know what to think.

One Vietnam veteran, who asked that his name be withheld, said the economic war the United States is waging against the Sandinistas in Nicaragua is similar to what was used by the United States in Vietnam.

"THE ECONOMIC pressure we used in Southeast Asia is the same as we're using in Nicaragua," said the veteran, who served two terms in Vietnam.

The Contras are accused of disrupting the Sandinista's economy by terrorizing agricultural workers and disrupting transportation routes in order to destroy the country's financial base and create dissatisfaction among the citizens.

Arguments that claim the bloody revolution that brought the Sandinistas to power was instigated by Soviet and Cuban pressures is false, he said. Instead, dissatisfaction with the existing government led to the demise of the U.S. supported Somozas.

There is a second similarity to the beginning of the Vietnam conflict, said a second veteran who also asked that his name be withheld to protect his privacy. Just as Nicaraguans turned to a revolutionary government in despair of the existing Nicaraguan government, the Vietnamese turned to the communists of the north because of the corruption of the U.S.-supported regime in South Vietnam, said the veteran, a navy weapons-computer technician.

THE SIMILARITIES don't stop here.

One of the most distinguishing characteristics of the Vietnam War was the emphasis on "body counts," called a game of "human numbers" by several vets. The goal of each battle wasn't acquiring land, as in most warfare. The goal was to kill as many of the enemy as possible and then count bodies. The more casualties there were, the more successful the battle was.

According to Perry Murry, Vietnam veteran and coordinater for Veterans Affairs at SIU-C, the Contras are using the same strategy.

The Contras' apparent goal is not to advance their forces and gain land, it is to kill and terrorize as many of the civilian population, as well as disrupt the economy, then beat a hasty retreat into Honduras to the north, the second veteran said.

WHY DID the United States support what some people regard as corrupt dictatorships in South Vietnam and the Somoza regime in Nicaragua?

The second veteran, who spent six months in the jungle of the Vietnam de-militarized zone as a medic, said the reason is the greed of intervening governments.

Many people think that just because governments are powerful, they are right, he said. But this is far from the truth, the soft-spoken veteran said. Governments get their power from the support of the people.

The veteran drew an analogy, comparing the United States government to a vine he saw climbing a tree on a riverbank in the Vietnam jungle.

The tree, he said, represents the people of a country. The vine, he said, represents the government. Both can live together, with the tree supporting the vine, but if the vine becomes too greedy of its host, it will engulf the tree and block its sunlight. In the end, both will die, he said.

IN THE VIETNAM War, he said, the U.S. government became too greedy and blocked out the interests of the people.

"It destroyed what I thought America was," he said. "I don't want to see it happen to anyone again."

The Reagan administration claims to support the Contras in the name of freedom and democracy. But backing a corrupt government in the name of the American way can cause problems, to say the least, several vets said.

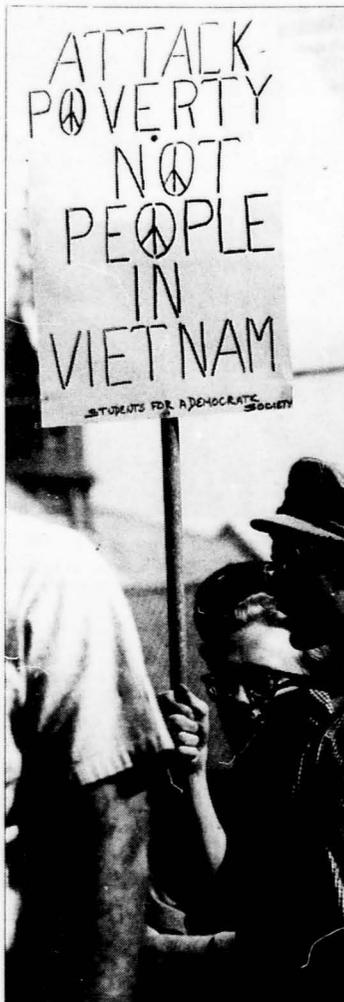

"It becomes necessary ... to support corrupt dictatorships,

'It becomes necessary ... to support corrupt dictatorships because not to do so would be to support communism.'

—Vietnam veteran

because not to do so would be to support communism," the first veteran said.

This has an all-too-familiar ring to it, some vets say. "We're making the same mistakes we made in Southeast Asia - to support a gang of crooks in the name of freedom and democracy," the first veteran said.

Many people believe that the names have been changed but the story remains the same. The photograph above, by John Richardson and provided by University Archives, depicts a familiar scene during the Vietnam War. In the inset photograph, by Daily Egyptian photographer Neville Loberg, Chuck Hicklin, senior in history, protests against U.S. involvement in Nicaragua at the Carondelet Federal Building more than a decade later.

THE BEGINNING of the Vietnam experience and current events in Nicaragua are similar, said Robert Slagter, instructor in the political science department at SIU-C and Vietnam veteran. "Some of the same forces are at work there," he said.

Similarities are similarities, he said, adding that they don't mean the two situations are exactly the same.

How likely is the United States to get involved in another conflict only 10 years after Vietnam? Many veterans disagreed on this point.

If the Reagan administration decides to invade Nicaragua, it won't allow such long-term involvement without total commitment, Murry said. "If they're going to play, they want to win." The wrath of public opinion would be a factor in deterring the government from increasing the involvement, some vets agreed. But the administration has already "tested the water" in Grenada, the first veteran said.

Grenada was a "feeling-out process" for other involvements, Perry agreed.

"THE GENERAL public would not allow another Vietnam, but if the general public can be convinced that what is being done, is being done all-out, I think they will support involvement in Nicaragua," Murry said.

Every veteran seemed to have a different opinion about the possibilities of increased U.S. involvement in Nicaragua.

The politicians will not forget Vietnam and allow pointless bloodshed in Nicaragua, said a veteran at a meeting of Vietnam Veterans of Southern Illinois.

However, another veteran at the meeting disagreed.

"They're chompin' at the bit, rarin' to go into Nicaragua," he said.

Murry's view was similar. "I don't think the experience in Vietnam is going to change the fact that we're going to get involved somewhere else, somewhere in the future," he said.

The second veteran compared Nicaragua to a new television show. The scenery and the characters are new but, just like all other TV shows, the ending will be pretty much the same.

SOME VETERANS at the meeting couldn't guess whether there would be escalated involvement or not.

A sudden conflict that may draw the government into war, or provide an excuse for involvement, like the Tonkin Gulf incident that dramatically escalated U.S. involvement in Vietnam, could start a conflict in Nicaragua, the first veteran said. "They could easily concoct a Tonkin Gulf," he said.

Slagter agreed. "The Hostage Flamingos feature mix of British rock, politics

By Martin Folan
Staff Writer

A flock of plastic flamingos were stolen from a yard in Carbondale. A note was then sent to the flamingo owners demanding that a $50 ransom be left at the garbage can behind Gatsby's in exchange for the flamingos.

The ransom was paid, in Monopoly money, the flamingos were returned, and thus became the band name "Hostage Flamingos."

The Hostage Flamingos, four men who 20 months ago formed the rock 'n' roll dance band, play the hits of U2. The Police, The English Beat and King Crimson, in addition to their own semi-political tunes.

"KING CRIMSON has been a big influence on us," said bass player Eddie Chapa.

The crazy, zany and wild performance of King Crimson drummer Bill Bruford has inspired Hostage Flamingo drummer Bernhard Ramecke.

"My favorite drummer is Bill Bruford," Ramecke said. "He plays pretty basic through a song, then he does something that totally throws everybody off."

Ramecke said his emulation of Bruford's style can be heard in many songs the group plays.

"WHEN I DO the drum part for 'Blister in the Sun,' I kinda do what's basic but kinda technical. What I didn't want to do was get too out of hand."

Ramecke's "basic-but-kind-of-technical" drumming can also be heard during the song "Stay," one of four songs on the group's "semi-political" demo tape.

"I do the drum part, and it's kinda basic yet it's complicated," he said.

Chapa wrote the song to explain how his girlfriend felt about him, Ramecke said.

"He wrote that over Christmas break," he said. "The chorus lines are 'Stay but not forever, play but not

Members of the Hostage Flamingos perform in the free forum area on campus. The group performs regularly at Carbondale clubs and is working to sign a recording contract.

together."

WHILE MOST rock 'n' roll bands use synthesizers, the Hostage Flamingos prefer using a cello.

"The cello sets us apart from other bands," Chapa said.

Dane Rovnik, who has been playing the cello since he was 6 years old, is the Hostage Flamingo cellist.

The band hopes its music will catch the ear of a record producer and lead to a recording contract.

"THAT'S OUR ultimate goal," Chapa said. "Hopefully something will break this fall and we'll get a record label.

The IRS record company, who R.E.M. is with, says we have a 300d chance. And we also have a chance with a small company in Minneapolis."

Any chances the band has depend on its four members — Chapa, Ramecke, Rovnik and lead guitarist Kurt Johnson, — who presently manage themselves.

Like a little league team without a coach, the band's main problem is its management, Ramecke said.

The summer schedule in Carbondale does not look very promising, but the Hostage Flamingos will try to keep working while they wait for a recording possibility.

Jazz groups and organist to perform

The School of Music will be presenting four jazz combos in concert at 8 p.m. Friday in Quigley Auditorium. The combos, directed by faculty member Harold Miller, will play selections including "God Bless the Child," "All Blues," "Blue Bossa" and "Song for My Father."

This Sunday, the School of Music will present a junior recital by organist Mark Hilt at 3 p.m. in Shryock Auditorium. Hilt, who studies with SIU organist and music faculty member Marianne Webb, will play selections by Lubeck, Schumann, Bach, Messiaen, and Vienne.

Art show set

Cynthia Cox, graduate student in art performance, will present a piece titled "Retentir" at 8 p.m. Friday at Shryock Auditorium. The piece features three-dimensional objects and live choral music.

Students offered varied experience with Grassroots

By Bill Walker
Entertainment Editor

Writing is difficult. And getting something published is also difficult, especially if you are a student with little or no experience. But there is a place for students to turn; it's called Grassroots, the SU-C student literary magazine.

The magazine is published each spring. The 1985 issue was just completed about three weeks ago, said Christine Tiarks, one of the magazine's editorial staff members.

Crystal Keller-Kerr, another staff member, said Grassroots is good experience for people who want to have their work published. The magazine gives them a chance to write and it also helps them learn how publishing works, she said.

THE MAGAZINE is run almost entirely by a student editorial staff. There are two faculty advisors, but it's the editorial staff that makes the decisions about the production of the magazine, Tiarks said.

All of the staff members are volunteers and any interested student is eligible to become involved on the staff. Because the magazine is produced with the help of the English Department, some students may think only English students can participate, but this isn't true, Tiarks said.

Also, any interested student can submit material for consideration, although not all of the material submitted makes it into the magazine.

EACH PIECE that is selected must be approved by the entire editorial staff, Keller-Kerr said. And although such a consensus would seem to be difficult to obtain, there were few problems this year.

Even material from the staff posed few problems, Keller-Kerr said. As with other material, the staff must approve other staff members' work. In addition, the staff's work is considered after all the rest and staff members are not involved with decisions about their own work.

Keller-Kerr said rejecting the work of another staff member is no different than making any of the other decisions.

"We're all pretty objective with each other's work," she said.

IF THERE IS a disagreement about some of the submitted material, it is usually settled through compromise, but Keller-Kerr stressed that politics does not play a major part in the decision process. In fact, the disagreements that did occur were very minimal, she said.

Funding is another important aspect of the magazine and is provided by seven campus groups, including the Undergraduate Student Organization and the Graduate and Professional Student Council.

Despite budget constraints, the magazine this year was 48 pages compared to 35 pages last year, Tiarks said, and this was good news for the staff because increasing the size of the magazine was one of its goals.

"I'M REAL HAPPY with the way it turned out," Tiarks said.

Keller-Kerr also was pleased with the outcome this year. She said she is particularly happy with the diversity that was achieved.

"I'm extremely happy with this final product. I think everything in there represents a lot of different talents and feelings."

To promote the magazine, a reading of some of the works was held on April 21 at Papa's restaurant and a reception was held April 22 in the Humanities lounge.

The reception is held each year to introduce the magazine to faculty and students, and the reading, which was new this year, is another opportunity for people to learn more about the magazine.

The cost of the magazine is $2, and it is available at the University Book Store, 710 Book Store, Campus News, Book World and the English Department office.

Bill Carter, left, and Joe Walter take time to give some insight into "Reno," a movie they finished making recently. "Reno," a parody of documentaries, was filmed in Carbondale. Carter is the director of the film and Walter stars as comedian Joe Reno.

Documentary film parody illustrates comedian's life

By Sarah Rohrs
Staff Writer

Jack Reno is an obnoxious, stupid, poor-man Don Rickles. Two students, with the help of the Student Programming Council, have made a film telling his life story.

The film is called "Reno" and it is really a parody on documentaries, said Bill Carter, sophomore in Cinema Production and director and editor of the film.

Joe Walter, senior in Radio and Television, stars as the non-existent comedian who enjoys making gutteral insults.

WALTER SAID it took half a bottle of "Jack" and four packs of cigarettes an hour to perfect the gravelly voice Reno talks with throughout the film.

Actually, Walter had a good time imitating Catholic priests in high school, he said.

Pat Moran, Janet Alexander Hamilton and Jay Clark also star in the film. It will be shown at 11 p.m. Friday in the Student Center fourth floor video lounge. The film may be shown early next month on Carbondale Cable Channel 7, Carter said.

WALTER SAID the film has "56 deep-meaning messages in it," with deep and profound messages from the pens of Franz Kafka and Roger Walters.

"Reno" was shot in Carbondale and produced on a video. Some scenes are so cleverly shot, Walter said, that nobody can even tell the scenes are in Carbondale, even when they are a few blocks away from the Student Center.

A lot of people were involved in the effort, including three local rock bands, Carter said. The bands are The Hip Chemists, Life Without Art and Your Mother's Lover. They played at Mainstreet East and their show was taped live.

IT'S THE BIG scene when Jack Reno makes his comeback, Carter said.

"The film was fun to make," Carter said, "that was the good part of it."

Carter and Walter decided to make the film as an independent project, and as they started working on it, they encountered quite a bit of cooperation and help from other people. "Biff" donated the lights, and the management of Mainstreet was helpful, Walter said.

Walter said the process of making the film was "fascinating... the height of arrogance." The script was only partially written and most of it was pure improvisation, he said.

THE ONLY difficult part of the film was communicating concepts to one another, Walter said, but even this added to the fun.

Both Carter and Walter work at SPC. Walter has been seen on Beavisision in the Student Center doing what he's wanted to do since he was six years old — be a comic.

Voltaire, an 18th century french satirist is one of Walter's comedian mentors, he said. Walter's goal in his career is to reach the level of satire.

But like Jack Reno, he said, he'll first be telling a lot of bad jokes.

English lit prof garners award

A specialist in 19th century English literature is the winner of SIU-C's 1985 Amoco Foundation Outstanding Teacher Award.

Kenneth K. Collins received the $1,500 cash prize Thursday at the University's annual service awards ceremony for faculty and administrative staff. He will also get a $200 travel account award from the dean of College of Liberal Arts.

Roland Keim, associate director of Admissions and Records, was honored also.

Collins, a member of SIU's English Department since 1976, won the College of Liberal Arts' Outstanding Teacher Award in 1983 and has been named outstanding teacher in the English Department.

Reagan wants allies to be economic leaders

News Analysis

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — President Reagan wants America's allies at the Bonn summit to take over as "locomotives" — economic leaders for world growth — but they are likely to balk at the role.

The United States was the locomotive last year. It attained an economic growth rate of 6.8 percent, dragging much of the rest of the world in its wake.

The major European powers achieved a 2.3 percent average growth rate last year while Japan achieved 5.5 percent, largely on the strength of exports to the United States.

This contributed to America's record $123 billion trade deficit in 1984.

Now U.S. economic growth is slowing down and Reagan wants other nations either to expand their economies or adopt his style of supply-side economics so that they, too, can play a more active part in sustaining world growth.

The Europeans do not want that task because for several years they have been following policies of strict fiscal reticence in a largely successful attempt to lick inflation.

They believe that to emulate the massive deficit spending of the United States would be disastrous for them.

"We are not in the locomotion business," said a spokesman for British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, whose hallmark is a tight control over government spending.

The so-called locomotive theory, according to which strong surplus countries like West Germany and Japan help pull the weaker powers out of stagnation, was first proposed by President Carter at the 1977 London summit.

In Bonn the following year, the summit leaders adopted a more sophisticated joint program for coordinated economic programs known as the convoy theory, which committed participants to specific expansionist or anti-inflationary measures.

The measures later were greatly criticized in Germany, where they were considered inflationary.

This time, West German Economics Minister Martin Bangemann made it clear that his government would not bow to U.S. pressure to carry out economic demand artificially.

Nevertheless, U.S. Treasury Undersecretary Beryl Sprinkel said the United States would persevere in its attempts to persuade its allies to adopt more imaginative and expansionist policies.

"We want them to look at how to make the market work," Sprinkel told reporters. "We are pressing them to adopt supply-side policies."

Sprinkel said the United States was not urging other countries to accept renewed inflation.

But he said they could emulate U.S. economic growth by freeing capital markets, by making it easier to hire and lay off workers, and by abandoning marginal tax rates that sometimes make unemployment more profitable than working, causing some people to opt for leisure.

Distinguished philosophy prof to be honored

By Cathy Brown
Staff Writer

After 42 years of teaching and 22 years at SIU-C, philosophy professor Morris Eames says he will miss "everything" when he retires at the end of this year.

"I've had a delightful career of teaching," he said. Eames has taught students from the freshman to the graduate level, and said he has "always had a very close relationship with students."

He has directed 23 doctoral dissertations and 28 master's theses, which "indicates the high regard in which he's held by many graduate students," said John Howie of the Philosophy Department. "Almost universally all the students who have had him seemed to like his approach."

BECAUSE OF his years of work, a new award, the S. Morris Eames Graduate Award Fund, intended to help deserving graduate students, will be announced at a reception Saturday in the Student Center Old Main

Morris Eames

Room.

Also at the reception the Philosophy Department will present Eames with more than 80 letters of tribute that he has received from people all over the United States and several foreign countries.

In addition to teaching, Eames has been the author or co-author of four books, has contributed chapters in many books and has written more than 40 articles for philosophy journals.

HE HAS ALSO co-edited five volumes in "The Early Works of John Dewey, 1822-1898" and served on the advisory board for 15 additional volumes of "The Middle Works of John Dewey, 1899-1924," and "The Later Works of John Dewey."

"We're very proud of him," said Howie. "He's done a lot for the department. He has a reputation throughout the United States as a scholar." Although someone has been hired to teach the classes he taught, Eames' retirement will leave "an enormous gap here in our program," Howie said.

Eames said he has always had a natural interest in philosophy. "I've always told students the most important thing about a person is his philosophy of life."

HE SAID people can always find a way to make a living, but "beyond that is the life of art and ideas, and the far reaches of the imagination." Those things, he said, are "what makes life worthwhile." Students are still interested in philosophy, he said, "but the emphasis shifts according to the problems of the times."

Soldiers after World War II were interested in social philosophy, students in the '50s were interested in existentialism, during Vietnam students were concerned with ethics, and students in the '70s seemed to turn toward philosophy that was related to business, environmental and medical ethics, he said.

BUT THROUGH the interest changes, students have not really changed that much over the years, Eames said. "Freshmen are freshmen," he said. "They're teachable just as much today as when I started in 1942 — and lovable."

"I never had any problems with any of my classes," he said.

He said he has had too many good experiences with students to pick one highlight of his career. But one experience in particular seems to sum up his teaching career the best. When he left the University of Missouri, where he taught for several years, his students presented him with a pair of cufflinks and a note for the man "who has erased the periods from our lives and put in question marks."

Airspace rules violation investigated

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two airplanes carrying 300 people violated the federal five-mile separation limit March 31 near Chicago, moments after an air traffic controller warned a pilot over his radio: "We're running all shifts short-handed."

The verbatim record of the incident was captured on a Federal Aviation Administration voice recording obtained by United Press International this week under the Freedom of Information Act.

It was the first of two unrelated March 31 incidents in which possible air traffic control errors are under investigation by federal officials in probes certain to heat up long-running debate on the adequacy of the nation's air system.

The second incident, the widely reported near-collision of two jumbo jets carrying 300 people on a runway at the Minneapolis-St. Paul International Airport, occurred less than three hours after Ozark and United airliners flew too close near Chicago.

In the newly disclosed Chicago incident, a violation of flight airspace rules came after the controller complained to a Northwest Orient Airlines pilot, whose aircraft was not involved, about reductions in controller overtime and short-staffing, according to the tape.

The controller made direct reference to the 14,000 controllers fired by President Reagan following the illegal strike by the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization and complained about the FAA's pace in replacing those fired.

The FAA controller, who an agency spokesman said could face disciplinary as a result of the violation of airspace rules, works at an air route traffic center in Aurora that controls pass-through airplanes near O'Hare International Airport, the nation's busiest. The FAA declined to identify him.

Sources familiar with air control procedures describe the incident as unusual because the controller voiced his personal opinion over the tape-recorded radio frequency and improper because his remarks were unrelated to his official duties.

The incident has been preliminarily classified as minor because the aircraft — Ozark flight 564 carrying 47 people from Kansas City to Madison, Wis., and United flight 155 from Chicago to Seattle carrying more than 250 persons — came no closer than four miles, said Diane Kapanowski, of the FAA's air system staff in Chicago.

Spokesman for United and Ozark said the flights landed safely and neither pilot filed an internal company report or the incident.

The Aurora center lost 407 of its 500 controllers to the strike, an FAA spokesman said, and that staff has been rebuilt to about 300.

Senate gives tentative approval to freeze on defense spending

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Thursday gave provisional approval to a freeze on defense spending next year, dealing a second major blow to President Reagan's budget, which calls for a 3 percent hike for the Pentagon.

Agreement to freeze military spending at the level of inflation came on a voice vote, despite a vigorous administration lobbying effort, both by Reagan on the telephone from West Germany and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger on Capitol Hill.

Wednesday, the Senate turned back Reagan's plan to limit Social Security cost-of-living payments to 2 percent and agreed to fully fund the payments.

Approval of the Pentagon spending freeze followed refusal of the Senate, 51-48, to kill the freeze idea. Twelve Republicans joined 39 Democrats in voting to keep the issue alive, while eight Democrats joined 40 Republicans in trying to kill it.

Senate Republican leader Robert Dole huddled with leaders following that vote, hoping to turn some members to his side. But he admitted on the floor that he had failed and noted it was getting late in West Germany, where Reagan was attending the Economic Summit.

"Based on that vote we've been visiting with a number of people without success. This time," he said. "It's now five after midnight in Bonn — a little late for calls to come over."

The defense freeze, proposed by Sens. Charles Grassley, R-

Iowa, and Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., would allow military spending to rise only to cover inflation in fiscal 1986 and by 3 percent in the next two fiscal years. The proposal would save $3 billion in fiscal 1986 and nearly $18 billion over three years off the budget worked out between the White House and Senate leaders.

"I think the basic question we are dealing with today is not so much dollars but the security of our nation," Hatfield said. He said a nation carrying a more than $200 billion deficit "is not a secure nation."

But the budget package is far from finished and many changes are expected. Senate leaders said there is sentiment building for an overall budget freeze.

TALKS: Bill sparks heated USO debate

petent area."

After a few more verbal duels, Mike Majchrowitz suggested that the senate reinstate the rules and get on with voting on the bill.

"This is becoming a free-for-all and a carnival," Majchrowitz said.

But a few senators and election commission members weren't ready to quit arguing.

Election commission member Gregg Henning said that at an election commission meeting Appleman had admitted guilt in several of the violations filed against him.

At that point, there was again a motion to reinstate the rules and move on but Leighton wanted to speak.

Answering to Brantley's statement that he was out of order in dismissing the election commission, Leighton said "I thought it was my responsibility."

He also said that the senate "was forced to pick the commissioner and commission" that they had because of lack of time.

"I'm sorry if I usurped the power of the senate. I felt it was something I had to do," Leighton continued.

At that point, Leighton surprised a few senators by stating that he — not Greg Miller — had, in fact, written the dismissal bill.

"I wrote it because I'm angry. I don't think this election was held fairly," Leighton said.

After a few more comments were made, the senate voted on the bill, which "passed" 14-11.

However, it occurred to several senators later in the meeting that such a measure requires a two-thirds vote. So it had not passed.

This news provoked Miller to call for reconsideration of the bill. The argument began again.

Dan DeFosse, who ran for USO president with the Independent Party, said he wished the senate would just drop it.

"The bottom line is, this bill is written to hurt somebody. There's no sense being mean, miserably and going after people," DeFosse said.

"I'd like to see this thing withdrawn. It's done its damage," he said.

But Miller would not comply and withdraw the bill.

"I'm sorry if we insulted Mr. Brantley, but I feel we have all been greatly insulted by him," Miller said.

Voted on for a second time, the bill did not gain a two-thirds majority, failing with 12 in favor, 10 opposed and two abstentions.

In other business, Heidi Holm expressed disapproval of ratifying the student trustee election results because of a line in the bill which reads "Andrew J. Leighton possesses the qualifications for the Student Trustee position."

Holm said she disagreed. When the legislation was voted on, however, hers was the only opposing vote.

Man surrenders after escape try

Jackson County Sheriff's deputies arrested a young Murphysboro resident wanted on a warrant who was in the wrong place at the wrong time.

A representative of the Sheriff's office said that Calvin C. Clemons, 20, of Route 5, Murphysboro, was spotted in the Jackson Court Courthouse shortly before 4 p.m. Thursday afternoon.

Officers arrested Clemons, who was wanted on a 1984 warrant, and attempted to take Clemons into custody. Clemons escaped from the officers and ran to the southeast part of Murphysboro where he eluded law enforcement officials until about 5 p.m. when he turned himself in to the Sheriff's office.

Clemons was charged with escape, said the representative, who declined to specify why Clemons was in the courthouse or the nature of the warrant.

Fund established to help prevent teen-age suicides

By Bob Tita
Staff Writer

Judy Whittenburg wants to stop teenage suicide. She is determined to help teens and their families avoid the tragedy that her family experienced.

Her son Steven Wikel was an 18-year-old senior at Carbondale Community High School, a stock boy at Save-A-Lot in Carbondale and an Illinois State Scholar. On Feb. 12 he shot himself with a pistol. Whittenburg has channeled the outpouring of sympathy and concern in the wake of her son's death into the formation of the Steven C. Wikel Memorial Fund for the Prevention of Teen Suicide.

She said the idea for the fund started when Dr. Brian Woodard, a neighbor, visited her shortly after Wikel's death.

"HE SAID 'I wish I could do something more than bring a dish of lasagna and flowers,'" Whittenburg said. Students and teachers were also interested in establishing a memorial to Wikel.

A scholarship fund was considered, but the high school principal felt a scholarship might appear as if committing suicide was an acceptable act, she said.

The memorial fund was set up to provide money and support for groups and other resources that help troubled teens. Whittenburg said she hopes the fund will eventually be able to provide money annually to a particular program.

"WE'VE GOT to be able to provide a place where they (teenagers) can go to speak about unspeakable fears," she said.

She said that there are people willing to listen and help teenagers with their problems.

She said Teenagers with problems commit suicide because they believe "if this is what I'm going to be like forever, I can't stand it. At that moment and time it may feel like they will never change," she said.

SHE AND her husband are psychiatric counselors at

The death of her son Steven prompted Judy Whittenburg of Carbondale to establish the Steven C. Wikel Memorial Fund for the Prevention of Teen Suicide.

Menard State Prison in Chester.

"It's very difficult to accept that his life was agonizing enough to end it," Whittenburg said. "My perspective on things has changed. A lot of things aren't important anymore."

She said teenagers face pressures and issues that teens of the past did not have to deal with.

"When I grew up, there was certainly no threat of the world blowing up. Kids take this seriously and they should," she said.

COMMUNITY INVOLVEMENT in the memorial fund has identified several needs for teenagers in the community.

"One of the things that police and students said is that there is really no place to hang out, someplace that's safe to congregate," she said. The money from the memorial fund may go toward establishing such a place.

A bake sale at Wal-Mart and booth at the Jaycees Yard Sale last Saturday collected $600. Proceeds from a performance at 7:30 p.m. Saturday by Randy Mark Miles, a gospel guitar singer, at the First Christian Church in Carbondale will also be donated to the fund.

People interested in helping with the memorial fund may contact the First Christian Church. The Carbondale InterChurch Council is acting as the trustee of the fund.

Mental health center helps outpatients cope

Kelly Beatty
Student Writer

The opinion that someone would have to be crazy to go to a mental health center is the typical outlook toward the Outpatient Program at Jackson County Community Mental Health Center, but "it's wrong," said Ed Davis, outpatient counselor at JCCMHC. "We deal with every problem from stress management to mental illness, but the majority of the problems stem from everyday occurrences," Davis said.

The Outpatient Program is a growth program, he said. It helps to develop, enhance and look for possible change. "Unlike the Sustaining Care program at JCCMHC, which expects no recovery from the problems it deals with, we teach the person how to define his problem and how to solve it."

"It's an education process where the person acquires the skills to be their own therapist," Davis said.

The program teaches them these skills through individual and group counseling, therapy sessions and evaluations and testing by the staff, he said.

In a stress management situation, counselors show people different skills used to deal with their problems, such as relaxation exercises and breathing techniques, Davis said.

First lady in Rome for papal audience

ROME (UPI) — First lady Nancy Reagan brought her crusade against drugs to Italy Thursday, saying she wants to "listen to the pope and see what he has to say" about saving young people from addiction.

Mrs. Reagan flew from Bonn, West Germany, to meet with Pope John Paul II and accept an award from an Italian drug rehabilitation center in a 46-hour visit while "Many of the people who come see us have adjustment problems. They are normally healthy people, but they respond to a stressful situation badly."

"Married couples are the types of people we see frequently. Through marital therapy, we try to define the couple's relationship and communication problems and then go through a series of problem-solving sessions to help them overcome their problem," he said.

Many times people come in who have cognitive problems, he said. "People tend to set themselves up with unproductive thoughts, which can lead to depression and anxiety."

"When this happens, we try to make them more aware of themselves, their weaknesses and shortcomings. Based on this self knowledge and awareness, a person can make more productive decisions," Davis said.

Through telephone surveys and evaluation, the program tries to define the community's "needs assessment" that will help the counselors to provide the services needed, he said.

A 1983-84 survey done by the Outpatient Program showed that 40 percent of the people in the program had situational disorders such as stress, Davis said. The survey also showed that 77 percent had never received prior services. "That means 8 out of 10 people in our program are new and that we're reaching more people every year," Davis said.

"It's a positive sign that we hope is erasing the stigma attached to mental health services," Davis said.

President Reagan attends the seven-nation economic summit.

"Doesn't everyone want to see the pope?" she said to reporters on her Air Force jet.

She twice declined to answer questions about her husband's controversial planned visit Sunday to the German military cemetery at Bitburg where World War II Waffen SS officers are buried.

"I don't have any comments on that," she said when asked how she feels about going to the cemetery. She repeated the answer when asked if she thought Reagan had gotten a "raw deal" on the issue.

At Rome's Ciampino Military Airport she stepped onto a red carpet between two Carabinieri national police.

An army sharpshooter was stationed on the roof of the VIP lounge next to the runway.

Livestock, poultry judges determine quality of product

By Rodney Sanford
Staff Writer

Fast food restaurants boast of having 100 percent beef in their hamburgers and chicken cut from the best birds, but it all starts from the animal.

Two teams from the SIU School of Agriculture assess the quality of livestock and poultry as a measure of their market value.

Harold Woody, livestock specialist at the Agriculture School and coach of the livestock judging team, said livestock sales firms look for former judges, because of their experience in selecting quality animals, making decisions on their own and making oral presentations.

MANY INSPECTORS at egg and poultry processing plants have had judging experience, Bill Goodman, poultry specialist and coach of the poultry judging team, said.

Goodman said interest is the greatest asset to be an SIU poultry judge.

"Many of our judges are not in poultry as a vocation, but had dealings with it in high school or wanted to know more about it," Goodman explained.

Woody and Goodman advise their future judges to take one or both of the judging classes, Animal Industries 311a and 311b.

JUDGES HAVE one year's eligibility. Goodman said this gives others a chance at the experience in judging competition. The judging teams compete in one contest each semester.

This semester the poultry judging team placed first in national competition in Knoxville, Tenn. The livestock judging team placed fifth in the 17-team Southeast Regional competition at Mississippi State University.

The SIU livestock judging team also sponsors judging contests for junior colleges, regional 4-H clubs and local Future Farmers of America chapters.

WOODY SAID the "hardest thing about judging is not being fooled by conflicting aspects."

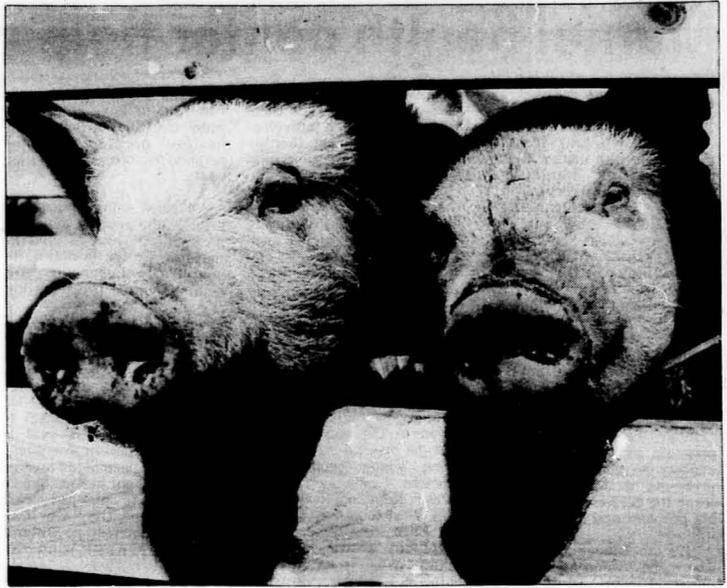

"A heifer might have a lot of volume, but judges must be able to tell how much of that volume is meat and how much is fat," Woody said.

But what kind of cattle makes a good hamburger?

Woody said animals with tall, long-framed bodies; muscle tone; meaty parts with little fat; and correct bone structure are most appealing.

LIVESTOCK INCLUDES beef cattle, sheep and hogs.

Woody also said heifers should have angular, refined features, while bulls should look more masculine. Sheep are judged for the same characteristics as cattle.

In hogs, inspectors go "hog wild" over large volume; wide, long bodies; muscle tone; and correct bone structure. However, Woody said, hogs must have lean backs from the shoulder blades to the loin area.

Goodman said chickens are judged in three aspects: color, size and physical characteristics.

CHICKENS ARE checked for healthy pigmentation, marked by a lack of yellow color in the skin.

To determine size, fowls are measured for the length, width and depth of their breast and the amount of meat on their legs.

Body structure in chickens is just as important as in livestock. Birds with crooked toes, beaks or backs denote inefficient growth patterns and don't make good breeders.

UNDER PHYSICAL characteristics judges grade eggs and the appearance of processed poultry like that sold in the meat section of supermarkets. Eggs are checked for the thickness of the "white," smooth shells and the absence of blood or meat tissue.

Goodman said the size of the fowl's comb and waddle — the fleshy outgrowths on top of the head and under the beak — are used to determine the bird's sex hormone capacity.

Although the commercial judging standards are the same for all poultry breeds including turkeys, exhibition judging rules specify different standards for each breed.

Dick Estell uses radio to bring literature to the people. His Radio Reader program is broadcast on more than 80 public radio stations nationwide.

Popular radio show reader brings literature to the air

By Cathy Brown
Staff Writer

Dick Estell is completely satisfied with his job. "This is the best job anyone has in the entire world," he says.

His job is to read books to people over the radio.

His Radio Reader program is on for 30 minutes a day on public radio stations around the country. On his show, taped in East Lansing, Mich., at WKAR radio station, Estell reads stories — fiction, non-fiction, biographies, autobiographies or anything else he finds interesting.

Estell, who has bachelor's and master's degrees from Michigan State University, said he has been reading to radio listeners and loving it for 21 years. He is not the only radio reader in the country, but he is the most successful.

WHEN HE TOOK over the job at WKAR in 1964, the program ran only locally, as do most radio reader programs. His program is now aired on more than 80 public radio stations around the country. It can be heard on WSIU-FM in Carbondale from noon to 12:30 p.m. weekdays.

Estell held a variety of jobs before becoming the Radio Reader. He has been announcer-engineer, program director, program coordinator, program manager, acting manager, general manager, executive producer, and producer-director at various radio stations in Michigan.

He became the Radio Reader when he became general manager of WKAR because, "the readers before me all happened to be the manager of the station." He didn't want the job at first because he didn't think he had time, but "he fell in love with it."

IT IS A perfect job for a man who has always loved to read. He said his grandmother read to him when he was a child, and he read a lot himself at an early age.

He said about eight years ago his mother found a piece of paper rolled up with ribbon that showed the gold stars he received for reading more books than anyone in his second grade class.

Estell said he thinks there are a number of reasons why his show is so successful. "I'm reading newly published literature," unlike other radio readers, who may read classics as well as new books.

"This keeps the interests of the listeners high because they are hearing new books being read that are also being talked about." Many of his choices are on the bestseller lists.

MORE IMPORTANT to his success, though is the fact that, "People love to be told stories, whether it's a story of what you did over the weekend or a story of what happened to you at work.

"I've never in my life run into anyone who didn't like to be told a story."

Estell said he chooses the books for the show himself, and he never reads them before taping them on the air. If he reads the books beforehand they are not as interesting to him, and it's hard for him to convey any interest to the readers, he said.

So when he reads for his show, he said, "everything becomes spontaneous." If something is funny, "I'll laugh out loud," and if something is especially moving, "I'll become choked up with emotion." He leaves these reactions on the tape.

Not reading the books beforehand does cause problems sometimes. "I can't always be successful in choosing books that are vital and alive," he said.

TO CHOOSE the books, he spends a lot of time poring over book reviews in magazines and newspapers around the country. If a book looks interesting, he'll write the publisher, get a copy and look through it to check the size of the print and get a general idea of how it's written.

Then if it still sounds interesting, he must write the author and publisher and get permission to read it.

Estell said reading a book on the air can actually enhance its sales because people may miss a day and want to buy the book, or after hearing it on the air, they may realize it would be a perfect gift for a friend.

Credit offered for trip to Paris

"Paris: Civilization and Environment," a three-week tour designed to introduce Midwestern travelers to the historic city's culture and geographic characteristics, is being sponsored by the Foreign Languages and Literature Department, the Geography Department, and the International Programs office at SIU-C.

James A. Kilker, professor of French, and A. Doyne Horsley, assistant professor of geography, will conduct the tour, which is scheduled from July 27 to Aug. 15.

Tourists may receive SIU course credit in either geography or French travel-study.

The group is scheduled to hear daily lectures and to visit museums, chateaux, churches, palaces and other historical and artistic sites in the "City of Light."

The program's $755 cost includes lectures, lodging, daily breakfasts, all travel outside of Paris, dinners at Tours and airport transfers.

A deposit of $150 by May 15 is needed. Checks should be sent to International Services, SIU-C, Carbondale, IL 62901.

Participants must make their own travel reservations. A group is being formed for a flight from St. Louis to Paris. Special round trip rates are $750 to $800. For more information, call B & A Travel Services, (618) 549-7347; (800) 642-0724 in Illinois, or (800) 851-7505 for out-of-state residents.

Kilker plans to base the group in Tours while traveling and at La Cite Universitaire in Paris.

Economy to receive billions from errors

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Commerce Department is preparing to add tens of billions of dollars to the size of the nation's economy to compensate for years of miscalculations based on unreported income, officials said Thursday.

But while the $3.8 trillion economy may be found to be much larger, it is impossible to predict how the percentage changes between quarters and years might be affected, they added.

For example, there may be little change in the 1984 GNP growth rate of 5.7 percent because it will be compared to the previous year that also will have adjusted figures.

The percentage changes are the growth rates of the economy, crucial information to businesses, Congress and a big influence on the political fortunes of presidential candidates.

For the January-March quarter, the department said earlier that the economy grew just 1.3 percent, with a 4 percent rate considered necessary to keep unemployment from getting worse.

The department's Bureau of Economic Analysis is now preparing to make major retroactive revisions in the GNP figures at the end of the year.

By far the biggest influence on the numbers will be an adjustment for the nearly $100 billion a year Americans do not report to the Internal Revenue Service as income, bureau economist Robert Parker said.

About 5 percent of the gross national product reported by the government is derived from tax returns filed by individuals and businesses.

Officials said one way to judge the enormity of the adjustments is to look at 1977, for which the changes have already been calculated.

The Commerce Department's comprehensive revision of the GNP figures will show the income of storeowners to be $46.5 billion greater than reflected in figures being published now.

For the same year consumer purchases of both goods and services will gain by $21.8 billion, both extremely large changes.

Much less of an influence — if any — on the new numbers will be a change in the GNP price index for computers, which up to now has not reflected the enormous price cutting of recent years. As a result the GNP figures have badly underestimated the volume of computer purchases.

But in the case of computers adjustments, trial runs with the numbers show the simultaneous adjustments in both the price and the volume will tend to cancel each other.

"The impact of the changes will in effect tend to wash out each other," Parker said.

"In terms of the dollar level (unreported income) is far and away more important for GNP and the savings rate," Parker said.

Last minute tax filers disrupt IRS schedule

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Internal Revenue Service, already struggling to catch up with refunds delayed by computer foulups, was buried under a record crush of last-minute returns, the tax collection agency said Thursday.

Returns filed on April 15, the last day, represented an increase of 43.4 percent over the same period last year, an IRS spokesman said.

"Amazing?" spokesman Steve Pyrek said. "There is no explanation." "Everyone was just waiting until the very end," he said.

This year the additional number who chose to wait until the deadline was an unwelcome surprise for IRS because its work was already plagued by problems with its new computer and its programming.

The week ending April 26 saw 5.43 million returns show up at the agency's 10 service centers for processing compared to 3.79 million last year.

Predictably, the IRS service center in Philadelphia, where several particularly severe processing problems have been identified, is still 20 percent behind where it was last year.

But like the IRS as a whole, it is catching up. The week before, it was 31 percent behind.

Refund checks for the year so far are running 8.7 percent behind last year, representing $2.6 billion being withheld from consumers.

The postponed refunds amounted to a lot more in January, February and March, however. The Commerce Department independently estimated consumers had $6.8 billion less in those months because of the IRS snafu, possibly helping slow down the entire economy.

So far this year the IRS has certified, although not necessarily mailed, $34.9 billion in refunds compared to $37.5 billion in the same period last year.

Because of its push to get payments out before June 1, when the agency becomes liable for 45 days of interest at 13 percent on overdue refunds, the refunds processed each week are running far ahead of the same weeks last year.

Rifle club will encourage initiative and leadership

Kelly Bratty
Student Writer

The legend of General John J. Pershing's leadership skills during the late 1800s lives on through Pershing Rifles, a newly formed organization at SIU-C.

"We're concerned with teaching initiative, assertiveness and leadership skills to anyone who's interested, civilian or military, male or female," said Steve Moore, public information officer for the group.

Recruitment for members will begin in full during E Night next fall, Moore said.

Officers have already been picked and plans for programs and activities are under way. The programs include a rifle team, which will focus on marksmanship and assembly, and a tactics team, which will have war games, he said.

"Because we are a national organization, we will be competing with other schools for ribbons, trophies and recognition of SIU," Moore said.

Pershing Rifles is also interested in getting involved with the community and its many functions, he said.

"We would like to sponsor things like dances and walk-a-thons, and get involved with social functions, doing a flag-raising ceremony," Moore said.

Joining Pershing Rifles is like getting involved with a pseudo-military fraternity or sorority, Moore said.

"We're like the military in that we teach leadership and commandment skills in that we're like a fraternity or sorority in that we go through pledging and have social functions where we can really get to know one another," he said.

"We would like to bridge the gap between Greeks and the people unable to belong to them. We want to give them something to look back on in college, something they could be proud of," Moore said.

House panel hears testimony on alcohol ads

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An advocate of restrictions on alcohol advertising told a House committee Thursday that young people are being led to believe that drinking is essential to fun.

Breweries give college students T-shirts, hats, pins and posters featuring athletes and women in skimpy bathing suits to entice them to buy beer, said Michael Jacobson, executive director of the Center for Science in the Public Interest.

When they turn on their radios there is a funk group promoting beer, and on television a Michael Jackson look-alike is break-dancing on a wine commercial, he said. "It is no exaggeration to say that the students are being indoctrinated into a lifestyle in which alcohol is the essential and central prop," Jacobson said.

Witnesses suggested that more money be spent to educate youngsters about the adverse effects of alcohol, regulatory curbs be placed on advertisements of alcohol, and taxes on beer and wine be increased.

Tim Reid, co-star of Simon and Simon, said television writers, producers, directors and actors have become more sensitive in recent years to the use of alcohol on prime time

TV. The use of alcohol on Dallas, a popular show about oil tycoon J.R. Ewing, has been cut by 70 percent in the past year.

The alcohol industry has worked with organized sports, churches, schools and the media to provide information about alcohol-related programs, said August Hewlett, president of the Alcohol Policy Council, a nonprofit group funded by the industry.

Others, however, criticized the industry.

Sue Ruschie, executive director of the Families in Action National Drug Information Center, told the panel that "None of the laws make any difference if nobody enforces them."

Despite concerted efforts, Families in Action in DeKalb County, Ga., has had little success in getting local officials to enforce laws and the alcohol industry officials to comply with them, she said.

The experience in Cheraw, S.C., a town of 6,000, has been very different.

As the result of a program launched by Mayor Howard Duvall, the number of teenagers killed in alcohol-related automobile accidents is decreasing. "Leadership from the top is very important," Duvall said. A Westchester County, N.Y., high school student credited a counselor who was assigned to her school to deal with alcohol-related problems with saving her life. The student became suicidal after her alcoholic father was abusive to her and made sexual advances toward her.

She didn't have any way to get to a clinic, so she turned to the Student Assistance Program, whose counselors "are confidential friends that offer a strong shoulder and an educated ear."

NICARAGUA: Similarities with Vietnam

potential is certainly there" for increased involvement, he said. "I don't think the Reagan administration would view that development with much alarm."

There are many scenarios that could lead to escalated involvement, he said.

With American forces in Honduras, and with the Contras fleeing into the north every time they are chased out by the Sandinistas, the United States could be drawn into escalated involvement if the Sandinistas decide to chase their foes over the border and encounter American forces there, the first veteran said.

ALTHOUGH VETERANS disagreed on the issue of whether or not U.S. involvement in Nicaragua will escalate into actions that involve the U.S. military directly, most agreed that it is important for people to learn as much as they can about the situation, then "search your own soul" to decide what is right for the individual.

"The more knowledge you have about a situation, the better you'll handle it later," Murry said. "The individual is the one that has to make the final decision," he said.

However, it doesn't seem like people are too concerned with events in Central America at the present. "They are only concerned with 'will it touch me, will it touch my son,'" the first veteran said.

"Most of the middle class is going to shed crocodile tears. They won't be too concerned," he said.

The second veteran agreed. Americans have freedom of everything but they're not concerned with other peoples' freedoms, he said. Those other people have freedoms too.

Remembering his experience in the Vietnam War, he said, "I come from the blood and tears of four years of watching it." People must remember, he said. "We're all just children of the world, we must learn to live together."

Credit available for volunteers in local community service work

By Paula Buckner
Staff Writer

Students looking for a way to beat the intercession blahs can volunteer service to local community organizations and earn academic credit through two programs sponsored by the SIU-C Community Development Department.

Paul Denise, of Community Development, said students can be involved in a community talent road show or in a clean-up project through the Credit for Structured Volunteer Service program.

"The two projects are designed to be short, intensified volunteer-study programs in which students earn three hours credit and get the service over and done with in two weeks," Denise said.

For the past three years, Denise said, CFVS has accepted freshmen to graduate students who wanted to "help special people with special needs." During the intercession projects this year, Denise said, he's looking for students with entertainment talents or carpentry skills.

The Community Talent Road Show needs 10 to 12 students with talents such as piano and guitar playing, mime and puppeteering.

About 20 students with painting or carpentry skills are needed for the Paint-up, Clean-up, Fix-up Program.

Volunteers involved in this project will concentrate mainly on repairing the Carbondale Senior Citizen's Center, the Carbondale Women's Center and the Synergy Crisis Center, Denise said.

Students who want to volunteer for the program but won't be in Carbondale for the two-week intercession can take their service with them, Denise said last summer all but four of 16 volunteers worked outside of the city, from Chicago to towns in Arizona.

Interested students may get more information by contacting Denise at 536-7512.

Pay for average teacher adequate, Bennett says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Education Secretary William Bennett says the average teacher salary of $22,000 is about right for the "average teacher," but that the "very good" ones should get more and bad teachers should get "zero."

Bennett, in an interview with the National Education Association, America's biggest teachers' union, also said that if given a magic wand that could accomplish one change in schools he would wave it to eliminate drugs.

"No drugs — none, zero, out, gone, disappear," Bennett said in the interview to be published in the June edition of the union's monthly magazine, "NEA Today."

The NEA, which has pushed for higher pay for teachers, now among America's lowest paid professionals, noted that the average teacher salary is now "just over $22,000" and asked Bennett, "What do you think it should be?"

The secretary said, "Well, I don't think there's a platonic form that says this is what teachers' salaries should be. I think it should be a function of local facts and circumstances, ability to pay, and obviously, in my view, merit — what teachers deserve."

Counseling helps students cope with sexuality

By Sarah Rohrs
Staff Writer

Sexuality can cause many problems, both physical and emotional, said a counselor at the Wellness Center.

People who need advice or just want to talk about troubling aspects of their sexual life can make an appointment with a sexuality counselor at the Wellness Center, said Lauren McKinsey.

"A lot of people just want to know if they're okay,"

McKinsey said.

Many people just need to have someone to talk to and receive feedback on their feelings, she said.

Someone who had sexual intercourse for the first time and is having trouble dealing with emotional feelings could be helped, as well as someone who wants to feel it's all right not to give in to sexual pressure from their peers, she said.

Society can pressure people into behaving a certain way sexually and this creates conflict. Men, especially, are under pressure to always be good in bed and always be in control of the situation, she said.

It can be helpful to talk to someone removed from personal entanglements, McKinsey said.

Emotional and communication problems can also lead to physical problems with sexual intercourse, McKinsey said. Women may experience vaginismus, an involuntary tightening of the vagina muscles. Men may experience impotence or premature ejaculation.

The counselors can help couples deal with these problems by figuring out what the source of the emotional or mental problem is, she said.

The Wellness Center is known for its birth control services and treatment of sexually transmitted diseases. The counselors also help women make decisions about pregnancy.

The Wellness Center also has materials on sexuality that students can check out.

Sexuality counseling at SIU-C is not as well-known as it used to be, she said. There were 10 sexuality counselors and sexual therapy was done.

"The visibility dropped away," McKinsey said.

The Wellness Center no longer conducts sex therapy.

People sometimes do bring up the emotional side of sexuality when asking for birth control, she said.

The Wellness Center wants to make people more aware of the service, she said.

Pivotal Cubs-Padres series set

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Chicago Cubs insist it's just another three-game series, one of many they will face the rest of the year.

But clearly there is a little something extra working for the Cubs and their fans beginning Friday, when the San Diego Padres invade Wrigley Field.

The last time the Padres were in Chicago they were whipped on consecutive days in the National League playoffs. The Cubs headed toward San Diego confident of winning their first NL pennant and going on to the World Series.

But a funny thing happened on the way to the Fall Classic. The Padres became the first National League team to come back from a 2-0 deficit and win the NL pennant.

"It is just another series, except that we're looking to continue to play well," said outfielder Gary Matthews. "We aren't thinking back from last year."

Rick Sutcliffe, 3-2, who will pitch for the Cubs in Friday's series opener, was the victim of the Padres' fifth and decisive game uprising. The Cy Young award winner agrees the Cubs aren't plotting revenge.

"It is something meaningful to us because we're in first place and we're playing another first-place team," Sutcliffe said.

Sutcliffe will be opposed by Andy Hawkins, who has the best record on the Padre staff with a 4-0 mark. Saturday, Scott Sanderson, 1-1, will oppose Mark Thurmond, the loser in game No. 2 of the playoffs, and Sunday, Steve Hoyt, 2-2.

Sunday's game will also carry a little more significance in that it will be the return of Hoyt, the 1983 Cy Young Award winner in the American League, to Chicago. Hoyt was traded by the White Sox during the off-season.

"I know the media likes to make a lot of things like this, but we saw them in the spring," said Chicago manager Jim Frey. "They look like they are every bit as strong as last year. But it is only three games out of 162."

The first weekend sellouts are possible for the final two games of the series. Saturday's game will be nationally televised.

What fans will see is a Cubs' club that is atop the NL East with a 13-6 record. The start marks the best by a Cubs' club since 1975.

Federal government will pay for 'dead broke' McLain's appeal

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — Denny McLain, the last major league pitcher to win 30 games in one season, is "dead broke" and the government will pay for the appeal of his conviction for racketeering, conspiracy, extortion and possession of cocaine.

McLain, 41, appeared before U.S. Magistrate Paul Game Jr. Wednesday and was declared legally impoverished after a hearing in which he said his assets were "none whatsoever," and that he lacked even the $70 fee required to file an appeal.

"I don't have any affairs anymore," he said in answer to a question from prosecutor Ernst Mueller. "I don't have anything left. I have nothing. I'm dead broke. Mr. Mueller."

McLain was convicted by a federal jury March 16 and was sentenced to 23 years in prison April 25.

McLain testified Wednesday his wife had sold two old cars (for $1,450), his teenage children had gotten jobs and the $3,500 he received from an Orlando television station for an interview went to his wife who "has been buying groceries."

He said business at a walk-in medical clinic he operated in Bradenton went from $100,000 a month gross to losing $30,000 a month after his indictment provoked "really bad press." He said it was sold in December for $130,000, half of what he said it was worth before the indictment.

He said he expects eventually to receive $80,000 from that sale but the money has been signed over to his attorney, Arnold Levine. The attorney also will receive a $10,500 deposit put up to secure bond while awaiting trial, and any part of the $50,000-to-$75,000 McLain said he is due from the sale of another clinic in Lakeland.

Levine said the total fees for representing McLain through the trial came to about $250,000, double his original estimate before the trial.

McLain, who won 31 games for the Detroit Tigers in 1968,

Women's track team set to defend IIC title

By Steve Kouls
Staff Writer

What a difference a year makes.

In the Illinois Intercollegiate Championships last year at Evanston, the Salukis overtook Illinois State in the final event to win the state title by a 130-127 margin.

SU-C pulled out the victory behind second- and third-place finishes from triple jumpers Sydney Edwards and Connie Price to outscore the Redbirds 14-5 in the final event.

But despite fielding a deeper team this season, Saluki women's track coach Don DeNoon doubts his team will defend its title this weekend at the Illinois Intercollegiate Championships at Macomb.

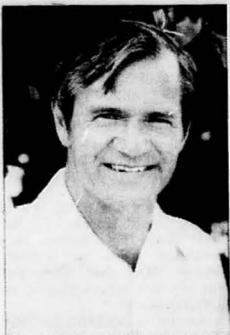

DeNoon thinks Illinois State and host Western Illinois have a good chance of winning the title because they're strong in the middle distance running events.

"If the strengths of Illinois State and Western aren't absorbed by the other schools, they'll be scoring a lot of points. But Illinois is strong in those events and we hope they'll absorb a lot of good efforts from Illinois State and Western," DeNoon said.

"If those points can be

Sydney Edwards

Don DeNoon

Denise Blackman

spread out we can win it, but that is far-fetched. I don't feel we have the confidence to win the meet this weekend."

DeNoon said many of his athletes have missed workouts this week because of exams.

"But at the same time, hopefully they (our athletes) can rise to the occasion," DeNoon said. "I would be very disappointed if we didn't finish in the top three because there isn't any teams, with the exception of Illinois State and Western, that should finish within 30 points of us."

DeNoon hopes the Salukis can post at least six first-place finishes in the meet. He is looking for first-place finishes from Price in the shot put and the discus; Denise Blackman in the 200- and 400-meter dashes; Cynthia Joy in the javelin and Karen Cooper in the 400-meter hurdles.

While DeNoon hopes Blackman can qualify for the nationals, he's been concerned about her recent practice sessions.

"The last couple of weeks her performances haven't really been up to par," DeNoon said. "If she isn't going to compete like she was a few weeks ago, it will be tough for her to crack the national qualifying standards."

Blackman's personal bests this season are 24 seconds in the 200-meters and a school record 54.35 in the 400-meters. The national qualifying standards are 23.64 in the 200-meter and 53.34 in the 400-meter.

In addition to the 400-meter hurdles, Cooper will compete in the 4 x 400-meter relay if she recovers from a groin pull injury she sustained last week at the Murray State Twilight Invitational.

Sharon Leidy won't compete in the heptathlon this weekend, but she is entered in three events — the high jump, long jump and the 100-meter hurdles.

"We'll be giving up 10 points without Sharon Leidy competing in the heptathlon but she could pick up 14 points with the events she's entered in," DeNoon said.

DeNoon hopes Leidy can reach the national qualifying standard of 5 feet, 11.5 inches in the high jump.

Leidy tied the school record in the high jump two weeks ago with a 5-8 effort at the Eastern Illinois Pepsi Challenge Invitational.

DeNoon is also expecting strong performances from Sue Anderson in the heptathlon and open high jump; Laurie Dvorak in the javelin, and the 4 x 100 and 4 x 400-meter relay teams.

The 4 x 400-meter relay team will consist of Blackman, Cooper, Kathy Raske and Darcie Stinson.

Hawks hoping to reverse trend in semifinals against Edmonton

CHICAGO (UPI) — Victories over the Edmonton Oilers have been few and far between for the Chicago Black Hawks in the past two years.

The Black Hawks must reverse that trend in a hurry if they are to reach the Stanley Cup finals.

On Saturday night in Edmonton, Chicago meets the favored, Oilers in the first game of the Stanley Cup semifinals after eliminating Minnesota Tuesday night 6-5. The Hawks won the series 4-2, but the final three games went into overtime.

"I know some people say that we may have benefitted from not having the long layoff," Hawks coach-general manager Bob Pulford said. "But I just as soon have had the time off to prepare."

Edmonton hasn't lost to the Hawks since Nov. 13, 1985, when Chicago prevailed 3-3 at the Stadium. The goalie was Tony Esposito, who has since retired.

Later that year, the Oilers eliminated the Hawks in four straight games in the Stanley Cup semifinals before losing to the New York Islanders. The Oilers avenged that loss by winning the Stanley Cup one year ago.

"We gave up five goals to Minnesota," said Denis Savard, Chicago's leading scorer. "If we play that way against Edmonton, they'll get 15."

Edmonton outscored Chicago 16-6 in that last Stanley Cup confrontation. This season, the Hawks lost twice at Edmonton.

"We'll be better prepared for them," Troy Murray said. "We know we're going to have to be."

Doug Wilson, the Black Hawks' top defenseman, agrees Chicago must play a much tougher skating game against Edmonton than it did against the North Stars.

"If we fall into that trap we'll be in real trouble," said Wilson.

Braves struggling despite Murphy and Mahler's play

ATLANTA (UPI) — Any driver could have told the Atlanta Braves it's tough to win a race on just two cylinders.

Despite the sensational hitting of Dale Murphy and an amazing 6-0 pitching start by Rick Mahler, the Braves are 10-10 and fortunate that none of the other teams in their division have been able to go into overdrive.

Murphy, making an early bid for his third MVP award in four seasons, leads the majors in home runs (10), RBI (32) and hits (30) and leads the National League in batting average (.395) and runs scored (21).

Murphy's 29 RBI in April tied the major-league record for most RBI in that month.

With a little help, a performance like that should have the fourth-place Braves running out front in the National League West. But all of the rest of the Braves combined have hit only half as many homers as Murphy. Atlanta's second-leading RBI man, catcher Rick Cerone, has only one fourth as many as Murphy.

And, while Mahler has two more victories than any other major league pitcher, no other Braves starter has won even one.

"There's no question but that we've got to start giving Murph some help," said Chris Chambliss, the Braves veteran first baseman, after getting four hits of the Braves' 25 hits in Wednesday's 17-9 win at Cincinnati.

"There's no way, no matter how great a season he has, that he can carry us by himself. We've got a lot of good hitters who can bust out."

"We all feel that way," added right fielder Claudell Washington, who had three RBI Wednesday. "Murph has been sensational, just sensational, but he's been waiting on a little help."

Part of that help was supposed to come from Bob Horner, who returned to the lineup after missing the last four months of 1984 because of a broken wrist. But although the wrist is supposedly healed, Horner, hampered by hamstring injuries in both legs, has been in and out of the lineup and contributed only one home run and five RBI over the first 20 games.

"If it's not one thing, it's 10 others," said Horner, 27, the last time his name was scratched from the starting lineup. "Why don't they just put me in a wheelchair in an old folks home?"

Horner is doubtful for this weekend's home series with Montreal. Ex-Cardinal Ken Oberkfell is hitting just .211 as Horner's replacement at third base.

The Braves counted on two 24-year-old youngsters with power-hitting reputations — outfielder Brad Komminsk and first baseman Gerald Perry — to provide additional punch this season. But although Komminsk has been the regular left fielder, he is hitting .257 with no homers and six RBI.

Tigers' dynasty may be crumbling

DETROIT (UPI) — Can a dynasty crumble seven games into its second year?

A lot of so-soon spoiled Detroit Tigers' fans were wondering whether that's the case as their favorite team entered the second month of defending its world championship.

"In all honesty," Detroit manager Sparky Anderson said, "we ain't been real pretty. We're just struggling along."

"We're in an awful (hitting) slump. I've been trying to remember how many times it's been like that. It's like Preston Gomez says, 'When you don't hit, you don't look good.'"

"There's nothing like scoring runs," Anderson said, easing back in his chair prior to a welcome day off on May 2. "When you're scoring runs, everything changes. Your club looks alive, your pitching is better."

Detroit has been scoring runs. But not as many as a year ago, when it was 17-2 after 19 games.

That start — which Anderson and the rest of the Tigers are now beginning to deplore as much as they loved it last season — might be unfair as a standard of comparison but it's all we've got.

"It'll never do you any good to refer to last year," Anderson sighs. "You just cry."

Detroit looked as if it might duplicate last year's beginning when it opened the season with six straight victories. But then the Tigers lost eight of 13 for an overall .579 pace.

That's not bad, but it stands up to 1984 like the Kentucky Derby winner did the year after Secretariat.

"If it doesn't pass, it's going to be a long, long season," Anderson said. "We could end up doing what Baltimore did last year. Fifth. You don't go to second or third in this division."

"But I'm not concerned about something I can't do anything about," said Anderson, who will, of course, change what bodies he can if the non-hitting drags on for another 30 days. "And I can't do anything about batting. You can sit and talk to a guy about hitting all you want — but he's still got to go up and do it."

A year ago after 19 games Detroit was hitting .286 with 22 home runs and 110 RBI. It had scored 114 runs — an average of nearly two runs more per game than this season. This season Detroit was batting .259 with 13 home runs and 75 RBI through May 1.

Softball Salukis to close GCAC play this weekend

By Steve Merritt
Staff Writer

Going into the final weekend of conference play in sixth place, the SIU-C softball team will face Indiana State Friday at 1 p.m. and Illinois State Saturday at 2 p.m. in double-headers at the IAW field.

The Salukis have won six of their last nine outings, taking two 1-0 games against SIU-E Monday night. SIU-C now stands at 20-15 overall, marking the first time the Salukis have won 20 games since 1979.

"We were pleased to pick up wins 19 and 20. It has been a while since we've done that. And it's good to win a couple games before going into the final four games," Saluki coach Kay Brechtelsbauer said.

With a 6-7 record in the Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference, a weekend sweep would leave the Salukis right in the middle of things.

"Realistically, we'd be happy winning three of the four," Brechtelsbauer said. "This will be a difficult weekend for us, probably the most difficult of the season."

"Illinois State has been on top (of the conference) since day one and Indiana State started slow, but are now coming on strong."

The Salukis defeated both teams earlier in the year at the Saluki Invitational. SIU-C came from behind to defeat Illinois State 4-3 in the bottom of the final inning of play and scored in extra innings to overcome Indiana State 1-0.

Illinois State, 10-2 and 25-14, was picked to win the conference in a preseason poll by GCAC coaches. Facing 15 of the top 20 teams in the nation, the Redbirds' only regular season conference losses came at the hands of Bradley and Northern Iowa.

"Illinois State is beatable, even though they have a comfortable lead," Brechtelsbauer said. "They have two phenomenal pitchers, and everybody in the lineup will have to hit well if we're going to win."

Brechtelsbauer said junior pitcher Maxine McLaughlin, 13-6, who leads the conference with a 0.53 earned run average, is "one of the best pitchers in the state."

Offensively, the Redbirds are led by rightfielder Lisa Golchert, who is batting .333 with 41 hits and 15 RBIs.

The Redbirds will have games at Northwestern and Eastern Illinois before taking on the Salukis Saturday.

Indiana State, 5-7 and 12-28-1 overall, trails the Salukis in seventh place in the conference and "is still in the thick of things," Brechtelsbauer said.

"If things go well, and if our pitching, defense and hitting all come together, anything can happen."

"They'll be up for us, you can bet on that." The games are "maybe even more important" for them considering their position.

The Sycamores will be coming off a Wednesday night game at Ball State before entertaining the Salukis on Friday.

Pitchford provides Salukis with spark at top of order

By Stan Goff
Staff Writer

Saluki junior Gerald Pitchford has done everything expected of a good lead-off hitter, and more.

Pitchford leads the team with 45 walks, 27 stolen bases and 55 runs scored — the kind of stats that represent a good No. 1 hitter — but he's also provided more power than usually found in lead-off men, especially the ones that are 5 feet 9 inches tall and 160 pounds.

The SIU-C center fielder is second on the club with nine home runs, and leads the team in total bases, extra-base hits and triples. He's hitting a solid .323 and leads all outfielders with 105 putouts.

"I didn't expect to be doing so well in so many stats," Pitchford said. "I like to walk and then steal bases, but I didn't run my last two years because my team relied mostly on power."

The native of New Athens transferred to SIU-C along with infielder-pitcher Kevin Pour last fall after playing two seasons at Belleville Area College. He hit eight homers a year ago, but didn't expect to top that mark in 1985.

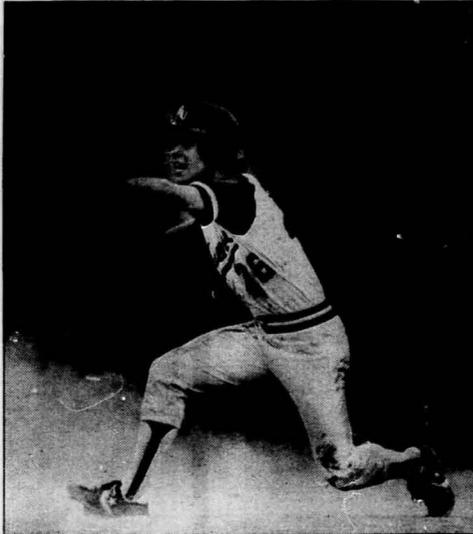

"The park is a lot bigger here and I told myself I'd probably hit about three out this year," he said. "It's nice to hit home runs, but I never expect to. It's just something that happens."

Pitchford returned from SIU-C's Florida spring trip with a team-leading total of three homers and eight steals, but a batting average of .270 that only ranked eighth on the club. He's been one of the most consistent Salukis since, with his average reaching a high of .333 on April 9.

"He didn't get off to a very good start in the spring," SIU-C coach Richard "Itchy" Jones said. "But he, (Jay) Burch and (Steve) Finley have been our most consistent contributors."

"He makes a lot of things happen for us. A lot of our big innings have started when he's gotten on and stolen a base, and he's also taken over in the outfield the way a center fielder's got to do."

"I like to walk," Pitchford

Gerald Pitchford, the baseball Salukis' leadoff man, is hitting .323 on the season.

said. "Especially since coach lets me steal on my own. I just like to get on and run."

He's five walks short of equalling SIU-C's season record of 50 set by Neil Fiala in 1976, and his 27 thefts rank in the Salukis' top 10 for one season.

Pitchford credits his surprising power to his 34-ounce Thumper bat that he's used since his first year in college.

"Everyone teases me about it because they all use Easton bats," he said. "But it's got a lot to do with me hitting home runs. I don't know, maybe I got a special bat. I'm looking for another one just like it, because if it breaks, I don't know what I'd do."

It's obvious to see how Pitchford has helped the ballclub offensively, but his stats alone are not enough to show how much he's helped on defense. He has used his speed to track down 105 flyballs, while committing just two errors, but he has also become the team's leader in the outfield. "He's made some real good catches, and he's done a fine all-around job defensively," Jones said. "But he's also done the job of controlling the outfield."

Pitchford likes taking command, and enjoys being surrounded by the likes of Finley, Robert Jones and Charlie Hillemann in the outfield.

"I like center field and taking charge, and I'm not as comfortable in left and right," he said. "I've played with some bad outfielders before, but Robert, Charlie and Steve are so fast that it makes everything easier on me."

Jones is also excited by Pitchford's intensity on the field, and his intelligence of the game.

"He's really a good competitor and he's played hard every game," Jones said. "He's always in the game and he's played up to all my expectations."

A's rally to overcome Milwaukee, bring end to 7-game losing streak

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — The Oakland A's strung together four consecutive singles with two out in the ninth inning Thursday, the last two by Donnie Hill and Alfredo Griffin, and scored two runs to defeat the Milwaukee Brewers 5-4 and snap a seven-game losing streak.

Rollie Fingers, who relieved Jim Kern to start the ninth, retired the first two batters but surrendered a single to Bruce Bochte and was replaced by Ray Searage. Searage, 0-3, was greeted by a single by Mike Davis, who earlier in the day was named the American League's Player of the Month for April, and Hill then singled to score Danny Meyer, pinch running for Bochte, with the tying run. Griffin followed with a single to center, scoring Davis with the winning run.

Keith Atherton, 2-2, pitched 1 2/3 innings to earn the victory. Cecil Cooper, Robin Yount, Ted Simmons and Jim Gantner drove in runs for Milwaukee.

Paul Molitor opened the game with a single and Dion James singled. Cooper doubled home a run and two others scored on infield outs by Yount and Simmons, giving the Brewers a 3-0 lead.

The A's closed to 3-2 in the bottom of the inning when Dusty Baker walked and Dave Kingman smacked his fifth home run.

Milwaukee made it 4-2 in the fourth when Ben Oglivie walked, moved to second on an infield out and scored on Gantner's single.

Oakland added a run in the fifth on singles by Steve Henderson and Rob Picciolo and a fielder's choice grounder by Griffin.

Cooper led Milwaukee with three hits while Gantner and Molitor banged out two hits apiece. Kingman and Griffin had two RBI each for Oakland. Don Sutton pitched the first 7.1 innings for the A's but failed to pick up the decision.

Sutton, the veteran right-hander who faced the Brewers for the first time since he has dealt by Milwaukee to Oakland during the off-season, gave up 10 hits. He struck out three batters while walking only one.

The Brewers out hit the A's 11-8 but left nine men on base. Oakland stranded only five baserunners.

Bob McClure started for Milwaukee and lasted five innings. McClure gave up four hits and three earned runs during that stretch.

The Brewers managed to steal three bases in the game. Cooper swiped two and Gantner stole a base.

Brown's girlfriend testifies in his behalf at rape trial

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The live-in girlfriend of former football great Jim Brown told a grand jury that she, not Brown, punched a woman the actor-athlete allegedly beat up and raped, grand jury transcripts showed Thursday.

Carol Moses, a convicted prostitute, testified she slugged the alleged victim in the eye after the woman, a substitute school teacher, tried to seduce her and later threatened to kill her at Brown's Hollywood Hills house last February.

Moses' testimony before the grand jury also supported Brown's story that he broke up the fight between Moses and the alleged rape victim, but did not beat up and rape the woman as prosecutors have charged.

A second grand jury witness, a former lover of Brown's named Leah Dawn Wallace, supported Moses' account.

Wallace testified that she and two men were talking to Brown in his living room when they heard Moses and another woman "rustling" in the kitchen. Wallace told the grand jury that Brown then tried to break up the fight between the two women.

"Stop, you guys, break it up," she testified, quoting Brown. Brown later came back into the living room and said the alleged rape victim had left "and everything is OK," Wallace testified.

Moses, who was granted immunity from criminal prosecution, was not asked whether Brown, 49, raped the woman. The former Cleveland Browns football great and the star of such movies as "The Dirty Dozen" and "Slaughter" has denied the rape charges.

The alleged rape victim has said she did not try to seduce Moses, and has claimed that Moses helped Brown sexually assault her in the suspect's bedroom Feb. 19.

The grand jury heard testimony for two days in March as part of the investigation of the case, but did not indict Brown.

while allowing just five earned runs in 41 innings of work.

"We haven't executed the plays that good teams make," Jones said. "It's just the kind of thing that happens when you're losing."

The Salukis haven't had many breaks go their way during their current string of losses, and Jones is waiting for things to even up.

"Some crazy things have happened during our losing streak," Jones said.

"But if you believe, in due time things will come your way."

Jones' remarks can be backed up by an incident that occurred in game one of Tuesday's double-header loss to Oklahoma City.

With SIU-C trailing 5-2 in the second inning, Burch, the team's top hitter, came to the plate with the bases loaded and one out. With the count 1-0, Burch ducked down from an inside pitch, but the ball went off his bat and back to the Chiefs' pitcher Wayne Cannon, who turned it into an easy double play to end the inning.

"Someone once told me that if you stayed in the game long enough, you'd see everything. I guess he was right."

change in the team's lineup, replacing junior Mike Elliott with freshman Eric Gray in the No. 2 spot.

Cornell will go with a lineup of Steve Breathett, Gray, Mark Hill and Franks in the 400-meter dash. The team turned in a time of 3:06.06 last weekend at the Drake Relays.

Other Salukis expected to fare well in the meet include senior weight man Tom Smith, middle distance runners Richard McDonnell and Bret Garrett and pole vaulter Jim Sullivan.

The Salukis' next meet will be the Missouri Valley Conference Championships at Des Moines, Iowa, on May 9-12. SIU-C has won every outdoor meet since joining the conference in 1975, but lost its first outdoor meet to Illinois State in March.

SNOW: Softball star battles injuries

her athletic career to softball and basketball to concentrate on her schooling.

Talking about this season and the current plight of the Saluki softball team, Snow said, "We've given up some runs that we shouldn't have. Teams haven't really earned that many runs off of us, but we've made some mental mistakes that cost us.

"A lot of teams seem to underestimate us. They seem to have the attitude that we'll be a pushover. I guess that is because of past experience, but we've a good team this year, one that's capable of winning the conference championship.

"If everyone stays, we'll be tough to beat next year. We had so many freshman this year, inexperience was a big factor. We had some problems learning how to work together, but that'll all be behind us next year.

"My goals for the rest of the season are to get my batting average up to where I think it should be and to help the team finish high in the conference. I may even get to play summer ball — if I'm not rehabilitating from another injury."

Lack of offense key to Salukis' troubles

By Stan Goff
Staff Writer

The baseball Salukis haven't played all that badly of late, yet they've lost a school-record eight consecutive games.

A number of things have kept SIU-C from winning a game during the last 11 days, but none is more evident than the lack of offense provided by a team that had little difficulty scoring early in the season.

The Salukis scored 74 runs in a six-game span from March 19-27 and raised their team batting average to .338, but have scored in double figures just three times in 33 games since then. They've managed to score more than five runs only once during their current losing streak, and have been held to three runs or less in six of those ball games.

"We haven't been hitting in the clutch," SIU-C coach Richard "Icky" Jones said. "And we're not getting the RBI production from the middle of the lineup."

Key early-season contributors: Robert Jones, Jay Hammond, Mike Gellinger and Chuck Verschoore have all slumped of late as the team's average has dropped to .301. There's nothing wrong with batting over .300 as a team, unless, of course, you were batting .321 just 12 games ago.

"We've made a mistake a game (during the losing streak)," Jones said. "And we're not able to overcome it because we've been hitting at a .203 pace."

Robert Jones, who practically carried the team on his shoulders for two weeks at the end of March and the beginning of April, has been in a real slump. He's gotten just three hits — two singles and a check-swing double — in the last 12 games, as the Salukis have gone 2-10.

Jones leads the team with 11 home runs, but hasn't cleared the fence since April 17 against St. Louis University. He has just one RBI in his last 12 games, and it came on a sacrifice fly in Tuesday's 5-3 loss to Oklahoma City.

"We'll just see if Robert gets his eye back this weekend," Jones said. "If not, we may have to make some changes in the outfield."

Hammond, who has played shortstop and first base, batted .300 in his first 18 games, but only .200 in his last 18 games, while Verschoore's average has gone from .314 after 29 contests to .267.

Gellinger was on fire in the first part of the season, batting .458 with 15 RBI after 21 games, but has dipped down to .289, and has driven in just six runs in his last 29 games.

The hitting isn't SIU-C's only problem. The defense has been shabby most of the season, and the pitchers often give up a lot of runs after two outs.

The Salukis have committed 82 errors and have a .953 fielding percentage. They have allowed 55 unearned runs to score, and relief pitcher Rich Koch has suffered six losses

Gerald Pitchford has been one of the Salukis' few bright spots during their recent slump. He leads the team with 27 steals.

Baseball Salukis face must-win situation against ISU Sycamores

By Stan Goff
Staff Writer

It's do or die for the baseball Salukis this weekend, as they travel to Terre Haute, Ind., for a four-game Missouri Valley Conference series with Indiana State to end their regular season schedule.

The Salukis, currently in the MVC cellar with a 5-11 mark, need at least three wins this weekend if they hope to finish in the top four and qualify for the post-season tournament.

"We've got to go out and win the first ball game," SIU-C coach Richard "Icky" Jones said. "They've (players) got to get excited and realize that they are good athletes."

Indiana State will be fighting for the right to host the MVC Tournament as the conference's regular season champion, a feat the Salukis accomplished last year. The Sycamores are tied with Wichita State atop the standings with an 11-5 record. The Shockers will play fourth place

Creighton (7-9) four times this weekend.

Other conference action will match second place Bradley (8-8) and fifth place Illinois State (6-10). SIU-C, 28-25 overall, will be hoping for Bradley and Wichita State to win its series to improve the Salukis' chances of slipping into the fourth and final tourney spot.

"Anything can happen," Jones said. "But if we had just won one game against Creighton, we'd be 10 times better off right now."

The Salukis, who have lost eight straight games, lost four games at Creighton last Saturday and Monday. The last two games were one-run losses, dropping SIU-C's record in one-run decisions to 1-6 in the Valley and 2-12 overall.

"Our one-run games are way out of balance," Jones said. "That will change, if you believe in yourself. We're a better team than we've been showing.

"When the team was 28-17 we were in great shape. If we'd have won our last eight instead of losing, we'd be near the top of the conference and looking at a possible at-large bid (to the NCAA Regionals)."

Mark Wooden will pitch game one on Saturday, with Kevin Pour or Todd Neibel taking the mound for the nightcap. Wooden, 3-3, pitched well against Wichita State on April 20, winning 2-1. Neibel was the last Saluki pitcher to win, having defeated the Shockers on April 21 by the score of 5-2 thanks to a 3-run homer by Charlie Hillemann.

"Last year we started off slow and got hot in time for conference play," Jones said. "But this year it's been the opposite."

Last year SIU-C suffered its first losing season under Jones' guidance, yet finished atop the MVC standings with a 9-4 record.

Snow overcomes injuries, becomes softball standout

By Steve Merritt
Staff Writer

Nicknamed 'Rehab' because of three knee operations, Rhonda Snow is one tough player.

As the centerfielder for the Saluki softball team, Snow has been flawless on defense this season — not committing an error all year. Snow leads the team in total extra base hits and is currently batting .252.

"I'm not as strong as I used to be," said Snow, who was a body builder before her injuries.

"I used to run about eight miles a day, lift weights and practice, but I had to slow down with the knee injuries," she said.

Snow came to SIU-C as a transfer student from Cleveland State Junior College in Cleveland, Tenn., and was a two-time junior college All-American. She was the leading hitter at the 1984 JUCO championship, where she hit for a .461 average.

"I used to hit anywhere from 200 to 300 by a week. Defense is more of a challenge to me, but I'm working hard to try and improve my batting average," the junior physical education major said.

"Some people are talkers. Rhonda is a doer," SIU-C coach Kay Brechtelsbauer said.

"A lot of athletes would not have been able to come back from such serious injuries, but with hard work and determination, Rhonda came back strong. She's an exciting player to watch and a pleasure to coach — she is one of the hardest workers I've ever seen. She has pride, and every time she steps onto the field, it's to do the best she possibly can.

"The only regret I have is that she'll be a senior next year," Brechtelsbauer said.

A lifelong athlete, Snow attended Farragut High School in her hometown of Knoxville, Tenn. While in high school, Snow competed in track, cross country, softball, basketball and volleyball. Later, at Cleveland State, she narrowed

Track men to host Illinois

By Mike Frey
Sports Editor

The SIU-C men's track and field team will put its five-meet winning streak against Illinois on the line on Saturday when it hosts the Illini in a dual meet at McAndrew Stadium.

It will be the Salukis' only home meet of the year. SIU-C was to host a quadrangular meet March 30, but it was canceled because of rain. The meet against Illinois will begin at 1:30 p.m.

The Salukis have had a long rivalry with Illinois. This will be the 19th dual meeting between the two schools and SIU-C has won 15 of those meets, including 12 of the last 13 battles.

The meet will feature three of the finest sprinters in the country — SIU-C's Michael Franks and the Illini's Tim Simon and Lester Washington.

Franks and Simon last met at the NCAA Indoor Track Championships in March. Franks captured the national championship in the 400-meter dash while Simon, a freshman, finished third.

Despite the Salukis' dominance of the rivalry in recent years, Coach Bill Cornell said Illinois should be considered the favorite this year. The Illini defeated the Salukis by 20 points in a quadrangular meet during the indoor season.

"Illinois is the favorite but we won't be giving away anything," Cornell said. "It should be a good meet."

Cornell said Illinois has the advantage in the distance events. The Illini have a strong distance crew, led by Mike Patton.

Cornell said the Salukis would have to pick up points in the sprint and field events to help offset Illinois' advantage in the distance events.

The Salukis have received strong performances in the 1,600-meter relay in the last two weeks and Cornell is expecting another strong performance from the quartet on Saturday. Cornell has made a
