City to gradually implement 21 entry

Council amends task force recommendation, will raise age to 20 by July, and 21 a year later.

By Aaron Butler
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The Carbondale bar entry age will be raised to 20 as of July 1, and raised again to 21 on July 1, 1996, after a divided vote on an amended city ordinance passed at Tuesday's city council meeting.

Mayor Neil Dillard announced at the beginning of a two-hour discussion on an ordinance raising the entry age to 21 that he would sponsor an amended ordinance raising the age to 20.

Councilman Richard Morris proposed an amendment raising the entry age to 20, after an amendment proposed by Councilwoman Maggie Flanagan, raising the entry age to 21 for Halloween weekend only, was defeated 3-2.

Councilman John Yow then moved the council amend the ordinance to raise the entry age to 21 as of July 1, 1996. The motion passed by a unanimous vote.

The ordinance was based on a recommendation made by the Mayor/Presidential task force on Halloween, formed in November 1994. Task force members were city and University administrators and students, assigned to develop recommendations on how to deal with the Halloween problem in Carbondale.

The task force recommended the city:

- Raise the bar entry age to 21
- Close bars and liquor stores on the strip, and prohibit restaurants on the strip from selling alcohol
- Close city parking lots downtown

■ Ban possession and sale of kegs during Halloween

■ Commit resources to publicity informing the public that the party is over

■ Aggressively pursue sanctions against Halloween weekend offenders

The items were tabled at the April 18 council meeting, after a discussion that lasted until after midnight. At press time, the council had only voted on the entry age ordinance.

Flanagan said she did not believe recommending a year-round entry age was the domain of a task force assigned to the Halloween problem.

"The people of Carbondale need to be confident of the process of ordinance development," she said.

The council also passed an anti-lockout ordinance, which City Manager Jeff Doherty said will provide a quicker remedy to landlord-tenant disputes by utilizing city courts rather than the lengthier circuit court process.

Doherty said the ordinance will prohibit landlords from making property inaccessible to tenants who have not paid their rent. Landlords will also be in violation of the ordinance if they evict a tenant without following due process of the law.

IBHE still undecided about athletic funds

By Dean Weaver
DE Special Assignment Reporter

The fate of intercollegiate athletic funding at SIUC and other Illinois universities is still undecided after Tuesday's Illinois Board of Higher Education meeting in Edwardsville.

Deborah Smitley, representative for IBHE, said she does not know if IBHE will stick with its original plan that would require all public universities to phase out the use of state funds for intercollegiate athletics.

At SIUC, the elimination of state funds would cut $1.3 million from the athletic department's $4 million budget.

As a result, the SIUC Board of Trustees is considering a $15-per-semester-athletic-fee increase that would be phased in over the next two years.

Smitley said the proposed athletic cuts were part of the Priorities, Quality and Productivity initiative that began in Oct. 1991.

The PQP initiative considers undergraduate education to be a top priority for state funding, so IBHE recommends universities transfer the state money from athletics to academics by May 30, 1996.

During Tuesday's meeting, two alternative resolutions were presented to modify IBHE's fund cutting approach.

Smitley said one proposal, drafted by board members David Downey and Lucy Sloan, asks that state funding of athletics be left alone.

Downey has previously said he believes individual university board's know best how to allocate state money and the importance of intercollegiate athletics to students.

Another resolution presented by board member Rey Brune asks each university to development a statement of purpose for its intercollegiate athletics program, Smitley said.

IBHE is expected to vote on these resolutions and clarify their position during its July 11 meeting, she said.

The escalating cost of tuition and fees was also discussed with the SIUC and University of Illinois Board of Trustees agreeing to

Alcohol Awareness: Health, fitness tour emphasizes safety

By Carey Jane Atherton

Giant inflatable objects filled the Free Forum area Tuesday as eye-catchers for the Jeep Eagle Health and Fitness Tour. The inflatables included hot-air balloons, a pair of jeans, a Jeep, a Clearly Canadian bottle and various games.

A booth containing information on safe drinking, health and fitness anchored the center of the Free Forum.

Students enjoyed a variety of activities put on by the tour whose purpose is to promote alcohol awareness.

Ken Gistedt, tour director, said the tour was presented by BAC-CUS, an alcohol-awareness group.

Recovery of bodies from rubble slows

139 bodies found, two unidentified

Los Angeles Times

OKLAHOMA CITY—As giant equipment Tuesday began to move huge chunks of concrete from the rubble pile that was once the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building, the recovery of bodies was reduced to the slowest pace since the April 19 bombing.

Only one body was recovered Tuesday, but searchers remained confident that the earth-moving equipment soon will uncover a number of bodies crushed when nine floors of concrete and steel collapsed into a pile.

"I'm a little discouraged this afternoon," said Ray Blakeney, director of operations for the state medical examiner's office. "We're moving huge pieces of concrete down there but the process is very slow."

Blakeney struggled to stick to his earlier prediction that the retrieval process will be completed by Friday. "We're ready for this to be over," he told reporters.

So far, 139 bodies have been recovered and all but two have been identified. Blakeney said four children and 33 adults are still missing in the building.

A piece of equipment called a "track hoe" is being used to grab at concrete with its mechanical jaws at

FUTURE CUBAN RAFTERS TO BE TURNED AWAY — MIAMI—The Clinton administration's decision to return to Cuba any future rafters fleeing the island has enraged influential Cuban-American exiles here, who compared the historic change in policy to an act of betrayal. Yet many others including Florida's Democratic governor supported the move, saying it will save the state from an onslaught of desperate and needy boat people. In a major, two-pronged decision, the administration said it will allow into the United States most of the 21,000 exiles now at Guantanamo Bay, but will forcibly repatriate to Cuba anybody setting out for Florida in makeshift vessels as thousands did last summer.

OPENING OF ARCHIVES REVEALS NAZI SUSPECTS — BERLIN—The fall of Eastern Europe's communist regimes has opened long-sealed archives to Western investigators, generating a wealth of new leads and evidence. The result during the past few years has been a surge in legal actions against suspected Nazi war criminals. The new evidence indicates that hundreds more suspects remain, provided they're alive. But it could take some time to find them. During the past 50 years they have fanned out to almost every corner of the world. A problem with maintaining public enthusiasm for such cases is that the defendants are almost invariably old and unobtrusive. They are often good neighbors and family men.

HUGE WAVES RAISE CONCERNS ABOUT CLIMATE — Ocean waves that towered 100 feet, the highest ever observed in the North Atlantic, formed during two East Coast winter storms in recent years, leaving scientists wondering if storms there are becoming more intense because of long-term climate changes. The waves formed about 200 miles south of Nova Scotia during a nor'easter that raced up the East Coast around Halloween of 1991, according to Vincent Carlone, a meteorologist and president of Oceanweather Inc., a Cos Cob, Conn., consulting firm. Similar 100-foot waves developed in the same area in March 1993 during the nor'easter dubbed "The Storm of the Century."

GROUP CHANGES POSITION ON COW HORMONE — WASHINGTON—The Washington-based Dairy Coalition, a lobbying group for the nation's largest milk producers, says a leading consumer group, Consumers Union, has changed its position about the safety of a genetically engineered hormone that makes cows produce more milk. The group's position is twofold. It says that milk produced with the drug poses no immediate health hazard, but there is a long-range concern about the drug that remains: It causes higher rates of udder infection in cows and the use of antibiotics at a time when scientists worry that their overuse is rapidly producing bacterial infections immune to antibiotics.

PLAN COULD FREEZE CONGRESSIONAL SALARIES — WASHINGTON—Salaries and retirement benefits of top federal executives could be affected if the Senate Budget Committee cooperates with a plan that would freeze congressional salaries for the rest of the century to help balance the budget. An extended freeze could also make it tougher for rank and file workers to get pay increases. Under the option, one of many plans being considered by the committee, House and Senate members who earn $133,600 annually wouldn't get raises for seven years or until the federal budget is balanced.

CARTOON MUSEUM TO DEBUT IN WASHINGTON — WASHINGTON—Washington's about to get a new museum of art. The long white room it occupies, at 1317 F St. NW, used to be a shoe store. This museum shows cartoons, almost every one of them originals, on loan from the 45,000-image hoard that Art Wood started building half a century ago. It's called the National Gallery of Caricature and Cartoon Art and will open to the public at 11 a.m. Tuesday. Admission is free. The timing is right too. On May 5, the cartoon world—and the U.S. Postal Service, which is issuing 20 comics stamps, and the Library of Congress, which is opening a funnies show — will toast the 100th birthday of the Yellow Kid.

No decision on law dean

Search process to be amended

By Rob Neff
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The law school dean search committee was unable to make any definite decision on the job description and qualification requirements for dean candidates Tuesday.

The committee held their weekly meeting after an internal search was approved in the hunt for a new law school dean.

Past searches have been national in scope, but the faculty has voted to amend that procedure, according to search committee chair Patrick Kelly.

Kelly, a law school professor, said the internal search was then approved by Benjamin Shepherd, vice president for academic affairs and provost.

However, opposition to the internal search remains. Erick Nordstrom, president of the Student Bar Association, said the majority of students support a nationwide search.

"The students want a national search because they feel there are candidates out there that should at least be considered," he said.

The search committee will meet again next Tuesday at 4 p.m. to discuss the description and requirements further, Kelly said.

"We met to discuss a draft of the qualification requirements for the candidates and did not make any definite decisions," he said. "We agreed to meet at the same time next week to discuss the matter further. Nothing too exciting."

The next step in the process will be nominations from the faculty, which will be reviewed by the search committee before they make their recommendation to Shepherd.

Shepherd will then make his recommendation to SIUC President John Guyon, who will make his recommendation to the Chancellor's office.

The SIUC Board of Trustees will make the final decision on who will fill the dean position.

Yard sale creates scholarship for civil service dependents

By William C. Phillips III
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The Civil Service Council will hold a yard sale to raise scholarship money for children of civil service employees enrolled at SIUC.

The 11th annual Civil Service Council yard sale will take place in the SIUC Arena parking lot on Saturday, May 6 at 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. The sale is scheduled for Sunday, May 7 in the case of rain.

Rebecca Molina, a secretary at the Civil Service Council, said the purpose of the yard sale is to raise money for dependents of SIUC Civil Service Council employees in the undergraduate program and an undergraduate award fund.

Civil Service Council yard sale

- Arena parking lot
- Saturday 8 a.m.-3 p.m.
- rain date: Sunday

The undergraduate award goes toward tuition and fees, Molina said.

"The amount of the award depends on the money raised from the council's two fund raisers," she said.

Nancy Fligor, a library operation assistant, said the council receives a lot of support from the community for the yard sale.

"Last year was our best year yet,"

Fligor said. "We raised $1, 625.93."

The council's only profits come from the yard sale, Molina said.

"Half of the money goes into the endowment fund (eventually to be used for the award fund) and the other half goes to eligible students who apply," she said.

In order for students to be eligible for the award, their parents or sponsor must be a civil service employee and support the Education Assistance Program, Molina said.

Rodger Hines, president of the Civil Service Council, said students' eligibility is not based on income or academics.

Fligor said the award is given on

Local businesses want piece of debit card program action

By Dave Mack
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Many in Carbondale, from administrators to students and local businesses, are in favor of a debit card program which would allow students to use their I.D. card to make purchases at campus and community locations.

According to Don Wilson, vice chancellor for financial affairs, the University is in favor of a debit card program.

"It would be a real benefit that somebody could provide to the students," he said.

However, Wilson said the University would need a financial institution to provide the credit for the debit card.

"We are looking at the possibility of finding someone who could provide that kind of service," said Wilson.

Despite fears of local businesses, Wilson said the University does not intend to restrict the debit card to on-campus locations.

"It wouldn't be totally limited to the campus," Wilson said. "It would be more universal."

Wilson said the previous debit card program was canceled at the beginning of the fall semester because of its limited use and the position in which it put the university.

"One could argue whether or not it put the University into the position of being a financial institution, and we're not," he said. "We're an educational institution."

Students said they would participate in the debit card program

"It sounds like it would be a lot safer than carrying money around campus."

Tara Koker

because of its convenience and safety.

Tara Koker, a senior in speech pathology from New Burnside, said the debit card concept interests her.

"It sounds like it would be a lot safer than carrying money around campus," she said.

Chad Soderberg, a junior in hotel restaurant management from Rockford, said the debit card would make his life a lot easier.

"You wouldn't have to carry cash," he said. "If you were out running around and you needed something, you wouldn't have to run home and get cash."

Local merchants said they were in favor of the debit card program.

Andy Mies, assistant store manager of Jimmy John's, 519 S. Illinois, said he supports the debit card because it would cut his costs.

"I would definitely be for it," he said. "It would reduce a lot of bad checks. We've had 30 bad checks in the last month alone."

Jeff Sharp, co-manager of Papa John's Pizza, 602 E. Grand, said the business would probably participate in the debit card program if it becomes a reality.

"It would free up some options for students and I could see where it would increase our sales because of that," he said.

Wilson said local businesses would like the debit card because of the benefits it offers them.

"Merchants would no longer have to worry about checks or lack of funds or anything like that," Wilson said. "It lowers some of the potential costs of business they might have."

Wilson said the University would prefer that the proposed amendment to Illinois Senate Bill No. 93 not be passed.

The amendment, which passed the Senate and is awaiting a House vote, would prohibit public universities in Illinois from issuing debit cards if local merchants did not have a reasonable opportunity to participate in the program.

"I don't think the amendment is absolutely necessary. It draws very clear lines and eliminates some judgment possibilities," he said. "We would have to find the kind of third party we need to provide the service."

Lee Blankenship, owner of the 710 Bookstore, 710 S. Illinois Ave., said the amendment is necessary to allow for competition between community and University businesses.

"It's the true sense of what our country is based on — freedom of enterprise," he said. "All we're asking for is a level playing field. Anything else would be a monopoly."

Wilson said the University would like the freedom to be able to explore other options in case a

2 Portuguese colonies issue Monroe stamps

Postal rivalry: Nine released; U.S. falls behind with one scheduled for June 1.

By Michael D. DeFord
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Neither rain nor sleet nor snow can beat the United States Postal Service.

However, Sao Tome and Principe, both colonies of Portugal, have beaten the U.S. Postal Service's deadline on the issue of a set of Marilyn Monroe postage stamps.

In a recent press release, John Van Emden of the International Collectors Society said the colonies, located in the Gulf of Guinea about 125 miles off the coast of West Central Africa, issued nine Marilyn Monroe stamps, surprising everyone.

"While the U.S. Post Office is waiting to release their single Marilyn Monroe stamp, this tiny nation has suddenly issued nine different stamps that commemorate every stage of the starlet's life and career," Van Emden said.

The U.S. Postal Service will issue the Marilyn Monroe stamp on June 1, and will print approximately 400 million stamps. June 1 also marks the birthday of the late film star.

Each Sao Tome stamp is four times the size of a regular U.S. stamp, and worth ten dobras. The legal tender is accepted by every postal authority around the world. The equivalent price of the stamp in U.S. dollars is $9.95 for all nine stamps.

"They're really quite stunning with all the colorful images printed together on the same commemorative sheet," Van Emden said.

Dan Finnegan, supervisor of customer service at Carbondale's main post office, said even though it was legal, Sao Tome and Principe delivered a low blow to the U.S. Postal Service.

"Many smaller countries provide stamps to collectors," Finnegan said. "They will issue the stamp and mass market it, which is very appealing to collectors."

"It was a cheap shot, but typical by beating our deadline and cashing in on the stamp."

Finnegan said the Marilyn Monroe stamp is the first one issued on the Legends of Hollywood series. Finnegan said a series of silent screen stars has already been issued.

"The Marilyn Monroe stamp is significant because certain sections of the public have requested it for quite some time," he said.

Finnegan said a stamp advisory board consisting of distinguished U.S. citizens recommends what stamps will be issued.

Van Emden said the Sao Tome stamps will have collectors worldwide mesmerized by

Search for law dean should be national

SOMETIMES ALL OF THE ANSWERS TO OUR problems or ideas for bettering our lives do not lie at home where everything is familiar. At certain intervals of our lives, such as going away to college, we must leave the comfort of our childhood and reach out for new experiences, knowledge and ways of thinking and acting so that we can grow. Such should be the case of the SIU School of Law — a school which must replace the departing dean, Harry J. Haynsworth. The law school, a relatively young institution, seems to be making a mistake by planning to choose the next dean from the comfort of its already existing faculty and administrators. By doing this, the school may be stunting its own growth. Law school faculty and administrators should reverse this decision and conduct a national search.

While advocates of conducting an internal search offer valid arguments for this method, none justifies not even attempting to find a new dean — with fresh and innovative administrative strategies — from outside of the University.

AMONG THE ARGUMENTS THAT ADVOCATES OF the internal search are making is one of financial concern. Some law school faculty say that it would be difficult to attract an outside dean because of fiscal constraints on the law school. Internal search advocates say historically, when deans are brought into the school from the outside, they demand extra finances to be channeled into the school's academic programs — resources many faculty say the school does not have.

Indeed, many external dean candidates could demand such extra finances before agreeing to fill the position, but that does not mean that the school should ignore an attempt to find an outsider. Perhaps someone could be found who would not make harsh demands on the finances of the school.

And perhaps a candidate may exist outside of the school who would be able to devise new ways of reallocating law school funds so that channeling more money into the academic programs is possible. Such "ideal" candidates may not exist, but the school should at least explore the possibility.

ANOTHER ARGUMENT OPPOSING A NATIONAL search is the amount of time such a process can take. One champion of the internal search said a search of national proportions could take up to two years, leaving the dean's office occupied by a temporary dean — someone who may lack the strong leadership needed for the office. A third argument made by the same individual negates this point, however.

If strong leadership already exists within the school of law, as internal search advocates suggest, there is no reason why one of these already existing leaders could not serve effectively as interim dean until a permanent dean is selected. This is a common practice when most top positions of the University are vacated — a method which seems to work rather efficiently.

ADVOCATES OF THE INTERNAL SEARCH MAY BE correct in saying that a highly qualified candidate for the dean's position already exists within the school. But there is no way of telling if internal candidates are the best people for the permanent position if they are not compared to outside applicants.

It is hard to believe that any of the official arguments given for conducting an internal search are the only reasons for using this type of process. It would be sad to think that the highest quality administrator would be overlooked because of political circumstances.

How will the school ever know if something better than what they already have exists on the outside world unless the unknown is explored?

Letters to the Editor

Effects of pornography different for rapists than for 'average' men

I have never experienced a sexual assault, but have input on an supposedly related issue. I disagree with the content of Amy Meier's letter of April 24, and strive to understand how she knows more about me than I do myself.

I can't deny the alarming statistic that one-third of all women are affected by sexual assault.

I'd like to argue that this frightening figure is too high, or offer a solution, but can't. I don't have the mind of a rapist and can only share the thought process of a thus "average" male. Therefore, her assertion that pornography "encourages the viewer to see humans as objects" may be valid in the mind of the rapist. It is not my place to disagree.

If pornography has contributed to the above statistic it is certainly worthy of thoughtful discussion. I wish I could empathize with the mind of a rapist and perhaps understand what pornography does to the criminal.

I don't think that pornography perpetuates the treatment of humans as objects. Biological predicaments have influences that pornography can't compare to. As an "average" adult male, I agree that centerfolds do not stimulate intellectual contemplation. Nor do they teach how to treat humans fittingly or as objects. Social desires and confidence (or the lack thereof) are much more significant.

If I treat humans as objects it must not be blamed on pornography, but greater influences. Learned behavior can be attributed to past experience, discovery of priorities and personality. Things have precedence over pornography. I learn things from other people more than from pictures. The importance of intellectual contemplation can be recklessly neglected without the pornography influence. This may be a chauvinistic view, but is one that I am reminded of quite frequently as I walk across this beautiful campus. If my experience has led to believe that protruding buttocks will give me happiness, then pornography does little more than keep that motive in check. Lose your dreams and you will lose your mind is an adage I don't have to remind myself of, and pornography is one way to dream.

If I blurred the line between criminals and average people, please be assured that my infected position will never lead to unlawful doings.

I want to be part of the solution, not part of the problem. Hopefully, I have narrowed down the problem area.

Perhaps the issue of pornography is significant in the world of sexual assault, but in the mind of an "average" male, it has no bearing on behavior. Though biology is not my strength, it has been a dominant factor in the forming of this opinion. I do not expect every human to acknowledge such a vital influence, surely it can be difficult for some people to understand.

Islamic view endangers liberty

The past couple of evenings, the Muslim Student Associations at SIU have been holding discussions on their vision for a better America. Their vision is rather frightening. In Islam, the church is the state and vice-versa. We must look behind the veil to see their real practice of "concern for humanity." To begin with, can you name one Islamic country that is democratic? Not one Islamic state has anything like the First Amendment. In fact, all other beliefs and expressions other than Islamic are not tolerated. In Islamic states, non-Islamic people are subject to Dhimma, a subjugated treaty, and Jizya, a penalty tax. But that is not the worst of it. The rights of women are appalling in countries ruled by Sharia — Islamic law. Men are considered superior; women have half the rights in judicial court and in matters of inheritance. A wife can be punished by beatings and a man can take more than one wife. Women are seen as possessions. Women are also considered intellectually deficient. If a non-Islamic woman marries a Muslim man, she cannot have custody of the children if they divorce. An excellent depiction of the "rights" of a woman under Islamic law is seen in the movie "Not Without My Children." Presently, the only countries continuing in the practice of "man stealing" — i.e., slavery — are Islamic states. In Mauritania (NW Africa), the lighter-skinned Muslims still have slave auctions, selling off the darker-skinned Africans.

All across Africa, Muslims are destroying whole villages, slaughtering hundreds of thousands of people who refuse to convert to Islam. Currently, every Islamic nation is listed with Amnesty International for human-rights violations. When you look behind the veil, you will find that their view of a better America is an Islamic America.

Fear reason ROTC display vetoed

On April 14, a meeting occurred between Army ROTC and University administrators that I found particularly amusing. It was an illustration of how bureaucrats make decisions using Murphy's Law with unrestrained absurdity.

ROTC had spent months planning a Campus Lake demonstration. It consisted of a boat assault by SIU cadets using explosive simulators, and culminating in a helicopter insertion of ROTC cadre into the Campus Lake. All systems were go until Cpt. Brent Jenkinson, officer in charge, ran into a wall of nonsense at the aforementioned meeting.

Of the officials at the meeting, Jean Paratore, vice president of student affairs, was to be the most creative and vocal in her "arguments" against the display. She began by saying that the University didn't want to present an image that "guns are okay." Is this comparing the U.S. Army to some type of street gang? Imagine the shock and rage emanating from the student body as they discovered that those camouflaged people seen on campus were actually some kind of militant organization that trained with guns. Were U.S. Army guns "okay" at Valley Forge or in the liberation of Europe?

Ms. Paratore then went on to offer her two most compelling arguments. She expressed concern that a water-fowl might fly into the helicopter's rotors or—hold your breath—that an unsuspecting old lady might suffer a heart attack from the blast simulators.

Yes, the death of a mentally challenged waterfowl who managed to fly into it hovering helicopter would forever alter the unstable ecosystem of the Campus Lake. Concerning the old lady with the massive, blast-induced cardiac arrest: well, need I say more?

There were other irrationalities offered against the demonstration. Someone said that he could not justify shutting down the lake for 45 minutes. He's right. Think of all the fine recreational events that occur on the lake Wednesday afternoons that would have to be postponed. Someone else claimed in with the concern that someone might "rush" the cadets. This was one of my favorites. Sort of like the Rolling Stones at their speedway concert.

I would respect those who opposed the event if they just explicitly stated their real concerns, which was fear, and not spewed spurious objections. Fear that some individuals and/or groups would object to a military display. That this most politically incorrect of demonstrations may upset the sensitivities of those who always seem to be fussed about something.

Sleep well, Ms. Paratore. You have saved waterfowl, old ladies, and the reputation of the University by ensuring that the hard work of ROTC goes unnoticed. I, however, am proud of the uniform I wear and what it stands for. The fact is, as an institution, the military is more respected than the Congress, the media, the church and, yes, even academia.

'Contract with America' positive step for country, addresses serious issues

In a letter to the DE on April 7, Zach Shelton said that the "stop the contract" protesters felt that the country is under attack by "Newt and company" and that flag-waving should not get in the way of the issues.

Great idea. Let's focus the "damage" that has been done by the Republican "attack."

Congress now has to follow 13 different civil-rights laws that until now only applied to us. (Gaspl). There's now also a limit on terms for committee chairs and for the speaker, and an elimination of unfunded mandates.

The Contract With America has tax incentives for adoption and relief to people who provide in-home care for the elderly. It has stronger child pornography laws and strengthens parents' rights concerning their children's education. It repeals the Clinton tax hike on social-security benefits and raises the limit on how much a senior citizen can earn before they start losing benefits. It goes after "deadbeat dads" and "ambulance chasers." It allows middle-class families to set aside $2,000 per person, tax-free, for savings, medical, educational and first-home expenses, and a $500 tax credit for each child of families earning $200,000 or less.

Mr. Shelton and the protesters would have us believe that a family with four kids earning $25,000 with an annual tax bill of $3,700 receiving a $2,000 tax credit — a 54-percent reduction in taxes paid — is benefiting only rich millionaires while screwing the middle class.

IRS data shows that 83 percent of those who pay capital-gains taxes have incomes of under $100,000; 5 percent have incomes less than $50,000. The capital-gains tax cut would return more money to these families to help them pay mortgages, medical bills, college tuitions or to reinvest as they choose to help them move up the financial ladder. Mr. Shelton and the protesters — after claiming to be defenders of the middle class and poor — would refuse these families their own hard-earned money simply because 17 percent of those who would benefit earn over $100,000 a year.

Denying cash benefits to single mothers under 18 would keep them from leaving perfectly good households and moving out on their own. This would save them from the stress of being a new head of household simultaneously with learning how to be a parent, and give them closer support from their own family.

When any family has a new child, the parents must either: A) work longer hours, B) work a second job, or C) make due with the current income. No one automatically gets a raise. Denying AFDC to welfare recipients, for additional children born to welfare families is only asking them to live with the same rules as anyone else. These ideas, incidentally, were echoed by Bill Clinton in his State of the Union speech 14 months ago — yet none of our principled liberals were bothered by it then.

The Republican school lunch proposal would increase funding by 4.5 percent and, by removal of the federal bureaucracy, more money than ever will make it to the states. The only cuts are in the bureaucracy, not in funding.

Bill Clinton's budget has proposed merely a 3.8 percent with more money still staying in Washington. Yet again, nobody's protesting that.

Sick to flag-waving, Mr. Shelton. The issues have escaped you!

Student proposes solution to party

My name is Robert D. Morgan. I am a 29-year-old senior in anthropology at SIUC. I have been thinking about the debate on the Halloween (unauthorized) block party. I believe that I have a way to remedy the situation to the mutual benefit of all parties concerned. It would be very difficult, if not impossible, to crush the Halloween block party out of existence by force. It would be better to structure it to the city's advantage while downsizing the negative effects at the same time. I believe that I have a 10-point plan to accomplish this goal. Any or all of these points could be used to help, but I believe that they would work best if used together.

1. Block off Illinois Avenue in such a way as to be able to charge a $5 per head admission charge to get into the party. The $5 charge would help pay for damages and added security needed to keep control of the partygoers and watch the entry gates.
2. Have an entry age of 19 for the entire blocked area of Illinois Ave-

3. Check identification at the entry gates to prohibit the average entry. This will cut down the population on Illinois Avenue slightly.
3. Block off Washington Street from Freeman Street to Elm Street to make an alternative free-fair/carnival separated from Illinois Avenue by one of the proposed pay entry gates to keep those under 19 out of the blocked area of Illinois Avenue. Equip the Washington free-fair with games, concessions, craft sales and costume contests every hour to make Illinois Avenue less crowded. Charge vendors some fees from the carnival to be used to pay for added security and cleanup for Illinois Avenue and Washington.
4. Make a mandatory Halloween night bar-entry cover charge of $3 per person at each bar on the Strip. If the parties' money is drained by cover charges and gate fees, then there will probably be less spent on drinking and slightly less bar-hopping.
5. Eliminate the parking behind

- 710 with barricades to prevent damage to vehicles and cut down attendance.
6. Prohibit glass containers — period — and can packages of larger than a six-pack from entering the block party area to limit injury and damage.
7. Place a 50-cent per beer-or-drink tax on any beverage brought into the gates to pay for cleanup and damage.
8. Allow no drinking on the outside of the Illinois Avenue block area except in authorized bars and restaurants.
9. Advertise stricter fines and penalties for the destruction of property and personal injury than usually levied.
10. Schedule mid-term exams during Halloween week as soon after the holiday as possible, depending on the day of the week. Halloween falls on each year.

Republican 'Contract' poses problems for students, faculty

Most people have probably heard about the "Contract with America," composed of many pieces of legislation proposed by Newt Gingrich and the newly elected Republican Congress.

Some of the goals of the contract have been made public. However, there are many aspects of the contract which are not being widely publicized which will greatly affect the well-being of many people, including students and University personnel. In order to attain the goal of creating a balanced budget, cuts will have to be made in many types of spending. What kinds of spending will be cut? Of great interest to students is the fact that cuts in discretionary spending will result in cuts in the food-stamp program, Medicaid and most importantly, student loans and grants (such as Pell).

If you are attending school with the assistance of loans or grant money, your opportunity to attend could be taken away from you if the contract passes. Of interest to University faculty is that cuts in discretionary spending will also decrease funding for higher education and will threaten grant money available to University faculty available for research. Most people would agree that the education is already underfunded. Most likely, tuition would be increased for those still able to attend college to make up for cuts in federal funding.

According to Illinois state senator Carol Mosley-Braun, the newly elected Republican Congress was elected by a mere 21 percent of the population. Obviously, most Americans did not "sign" this contract.

What can you do? Write your legislators and tell them that you would like them to vote no on all legislation on the contract. There will be an anti-contract demonstration scheduled during intersession. Look for fliers.

Writer displays weak grammar

Carol Threlkeld notes "that the DE can barely produce a single grammatically correct issue" and yet her letter of May 2 contains a comma splice in the first paragraph and two different errors in the relation between pronouns and an antecedent in the second. This should remind us how easy it is to become poets to kettles, especially when we are impassioned — as Ms. Threlkeld was.

Student opposes USSA position on gay issues

To support USSA or not to support USSA. This is the question that troubles Dr. Paratore. If it is her lawyer who has suggested it would be incorrect, let me be so bold as to suggest it might be time for a new lawyer.

Until now, as a courtesy to the student leadership, so as not to cause them problems in their support of USSA, I have remained silent on this issue.

It is no secret that Andrew Ensor does not support the gay political agenda. My reasons are personal and based on issues of morality, ethics, Constitutional law and my conviction that homosexuality is a psychological abnormality. A conviction I hold to despite the medical community's removal of homosexuality as a disorder.

I will state simply that I believe my reasons for this position are justified and for now I will leave it at that.

My positions on these issues are not meant to suggest that I tolerate harassment. For some reason the two issues of attitudes towards gays and harassment often become cross-referenced.

To catch someone in the act of harassment would give me cause to reveal a most unpleasant and ugly side to my personality. Even if the person being harassed happens to be gay, I would act decisively, and the harasser will have cause not to make the same mistake twice.

It is to suggest that I would support USSA being cut off from SIUC. USSA is a lobbying organization for the gay political agenda.

It's no big secret, it's just not a well-known fact, and it is my reason for supporting SIUC's and Dr. Paratore's efforts in cutting off USSA.

If we're going to give money to lobbying organizations, then let's find someone who will do something about tenure laws that protect the incompetent. At least we will be lobbying for something SIUC really needs.

Mike Spiwak, USG president during the 1993-'94 school year, addresses a group of students at a rally in the Free Forum Area in anticipation of a march to City Hall to protest rental-housing proposals Sept. 23, 1993. Spiwak, now a graduate student in Washington, D.C., says society is becoming more conservative.

Former students say changes in society reflected on campus

By Emily Priddy
DE Staff Reporter

As Bob Dylan once said, "The times, they are a-changing" — a phenomenon that can be witnessed on SIUC's campus, according to several alumni who have seen dramatic changes in the world and at the University since graduation.

Gary Marx, a 1976 graduate of SIUC's School of Journalism, said although he does not spend a great deal of time on campus now, he believes the attitude of the students tends to reflect the attitude of society as a whole.

"When I first came here in '75, it was just after the riots (of the Vietnam war era), so there was a lot of involvement. People were involved with things that mattered politically and socially," he said. "Toward the end, people became a little more isolationist — they kind of crawled back into themselves. I think this was the seeds of the 'Me Generation,' which was getting off its feet (and) starting to run toward the big dollar signs."

In his field, Marx said he has seen a similar trend.

"I came out of journalism, and there was a very distinct split between the news staff and the advertising staff... (Now) there's always that 'Maybe we should call the hounds off. Let's be careful. Let's make sure the publisher reads this before it gets in the paper.' That would never be a consideration in the past," he said. "It deeply offends me now that the money side of journalism drifts over into the newsroom."

Doug Diggie, owner of Old Town Liquors and a 1973 SIUC graduate, also said students have a more self-centered approach now than they did when he was in school.

"I really kind of think that they've gotten away from that 'What can we do for us?' mentality and kind of gotten into the 'What can I do for me?' mentality," he said.

Although Mike Spiwak has only been away from SIUC a year, he says he has seen significant changes in society since graduation.

Spiwak, undergraduate Student Government president during the 1993-'94 school year, is now a graduate student in American foreign policy at the John Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies in Washington, D.C.

Spiwak said he has seen a definite move toward conservatism among the American public since he graduated.

"Being here in Washington with the (House Speaker Newt) Gingrich revolution, I've seen drastic changes," Spiwak said. "I think America's taking a sharp turn to the right. Instead of the kinder, gentler nation, we're looking at a leaner, meaner nation."

Faces from SIUC's past

Alumni discuss their experiences at SIUC and life beyond college

By Emily Priddy
DE Staff Reporter

The 1970s were never known for their calm, quiet normality — at SIUC or anywhere else. The decade that came in with Vietnam War protesters, riots and demonstrations by Students for a Democratic Society gave birth to disco, polyester and Halloween, Carbondale-style. Perhaps stranger than the decade itself, however, is the story of the students who graduated during these tumultuous years. Where are they now?

A graduate of the math program and former student-body president now owns a liquor store on the Strip. A rock guitarist ended up in front of a computer at a local bank and directing a church choir in his spare time. A stary-eyed journalism major spent a year swinging a hammer before the lure of the newsroom pulled him to the Southern Illinoisian's copydesk.

These movers and shakers of SIUC's past have grown up, settled down and, for the most part, found the proverbial pots of gold at the ends of rainbows they never expected to follow.

Doug Diggie, who served as SIUC student body president during the 1972-'73 school year, said it is difficult for students to predict their own futures.

"Plans always have a way of modifying themselves as you go along," Diggie, a former math student who now owns Old Town Liquors, 514 S. Illinois Ave., said. "I have no clue (where I'll be in 10 years). Things change too rapidly anymore."

Beyond the safety of the campus, many graduates found unexpected challenges in the real world as they pursued personal and professional goals.

Rick McNeill, a 1976 music-education graduate, planned to teach music, but he changed his plans after seeing some of the bureaucratic realities of the educational system.

"I guess one thing that the music classes didn't prepare me for was the dealing with the school system — what rung on the ladder that the music department usually lands on, which is next to the bottom — above art, maybe, but way, way below the sports," he said. "I didn't want to battle the system. ... It was discouraging."

McNeill, once a member of two local bands, the Jades and Street Corner Society, currently is a data-processing manager for the Bank of Herrin, where he has worked for 19 years. In his spare time, he serves on the Herrin Unit 4 school board and directs the choir at Carterville First Baptist Church. He also sings at local revivals and recently released "My Tribute," a gospel album.

Gary Marx, a 1976 graduate of SIUC's School of Journalism, said although his experiences at the University gave him the skills he needed to succeed professionally, campus life only partially prepared him for the pressures of the real world.

"I'll never be able to replace the

Former Salukis apply athletic lessons to life

By Grant Deady
DE Sports Editor

For most, the cheers have gone away and the reality of everyday life away from Saluki athletics has set in. But the time spent competing for the maroon and white has helped several former SIUC athletes and coaches prepare for a life away from the playing field.

The moments of triumph in SIUC sports date back to the early 1900's, but no feat may ever match the magic that took place during the 1983 football season. SIUC went 13-1 and captured the Division I-AA National Championship with a 43-7 win over Western Carolina.

Ray Dempsey, who coached the Dawgs that season and now works as a pastor in Columbus, Ohio, said the lessons he and his players learned during the '83 campaign continue to help in his new profession.

"The more games they won, the more interested they got about what lied ahead," he said. "You could just sense that they knew something special was happening."

"Those kids learned to take instruction and we taught them that the cream comes to the top."

"They knew that they couldn't get cocky and had to keep going because when you get soft — you lose."

As senior pastor at Christ the King Church, Dempsey heads a congregation of between 600-650 people. Handling weekly worship services, weddings, youth education and memorial services are just some of Dempsey's duties, which he said aren't that different from his days in the Saluki coaching ranks.

"Southern is where I met the Lord in 1977, and that's why I get so excited about the place. We had a love-discipline relationship with those players in '83. We loved them, but we disciplined them too, he said.

"Now my team is bigger, but if you have one weak link, it can bring the whole team down."

Ichly Jones, who coached Saluki baseball from 1970-1990 and now heads the program at the University of Illinois, said athletes have a competitive edge in the business world.

"Athletes have had to absorb success and failure through sports so when they go out into the working world, they can better cope with the ups-and-downs," he said. "When I speak with my former players today, they talk about initiation, drive and a desire to excel — and that's what playing does."

And in his 20 years of coaching while at SIUC, Jones said the values and knowledge he gained have helped him meet new challenges in life.

"SIUC had such great tradition and that's something that I'm trying to build here (U of I), he said. "I'm not 19 anymore, so I'm not sure how many more challenges I've got left. But my days down there helped me prepare for what I'm doing today."

Another former Saluki athlete that would up her volleyball career in 1983, and now heads the very program she once was a part of is SIUC coach Sonya Locke.

Unlike many college coaches, Locke has a degree outside of the physical health or education fields. Locke was an advertising major at SIUC, which she said has helped her in many aspects of her coaching profession.

"I didn't grow up to be a coach. I was an advertising major, but my degree has not gone wasted," she said. "I advertise for SIU every day."

"It may sound bad, but I treat a recruit as a product — selling them on the unique points of the school and why they should come here."

"I treat SIU as a product and being aggressive and not taking no for an answer, at least the first time, prepared me for this kind of work. Those are all things I learned in advertising."

promote against abuse, and (for) drinking in moderation." Gistedt said. Gistedt said the tour is sponsored by companies like Jeep Eagle, Plymouth, Reebok, Infinity and Discover.

Gistedt said even though the sponsors are promoting themselves, they are all behind the same theme: drink safely and have a designated driver.

Herzog, a rock climbing wall instructor, said he was there to instruct anyone who wanted to give climbing a try.

Brent Jason, an undecided freshman from Algonquin, enjoyed the tour's Sticky Wall. He put on a Velcro suit, did a flip in the air and stuck to the Velcro wall upside down.

"It would have been cooler if I was drunk," Jason said.

Robert Barajas was in charge of the tour's inflatable bungee run. Barajas explained that two people put on a harness and race each other down the inflatable tracks to see who can go the farthest distance before the bungee cord flings them backwards.

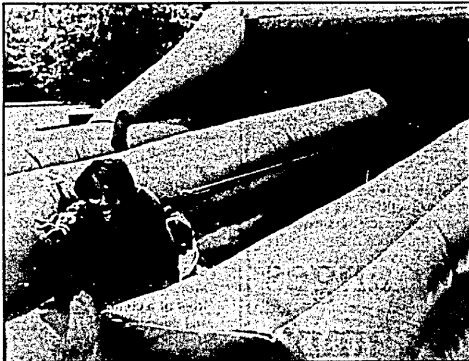

As part of the activities, students could win T-shirts and enter prize drawings.

Scott Miller, a rock-wall instructor, said at the end of the tour a bike, car and a set of Infinity speakers will be given away. He also said the tour gives away a pair of Reebok shoes at every school.

Gistedt said the tour would have been in the Free Forum on Monday, but was rained out. He said this is the tour's third year.

education I got at the Daily Egyptian," he said. "Making a living and surviving — putting food on the table — you're not prepared for real life at all. You're given tools at the University. Some of those were handed to me and they got rusty because I just laid them down."

After graduating, Marx worked for a small daily newspaper in Indiana, but quit journalism to become a carpenter. After a year away from the newsroom, Marx realized he missed covering the news.

In 1979, he came back to Carbondale to work for the Southern Illinoisian, where he currently writes a weekly column and serves as news editor.

Even in a work environment, situations sometimes arise for which classes simply do not prepare students, according to SIU Trustee John Brewster, a Marion lawyer who was a member of the SIU Law School's first graduating class in 1976.

"There is a world of difference between the educational experience and the work experience," he said. "People's problems don't always fit into simple and/or complex rules. They're usually a mixture of facts and emotions that all have to be dealt with."

H.B. Koplowitz, a 1977 journalism graduate, said students should be aware of the differences between college and life beyond the campus and take advantage of the good times that are available to them at SIUC.

"There's ... a lot of equipment on the campus — the radio station, the television station, the library — that once you get outside of class, you could use ... to build things, to have fun," Koplowitz said.

"The real world isn't as much fun as going to school. I used school to get an education, but also to have fun."

Now and Then

Diggle said he also has seen a recent step to the right, both on campus and in society.

"Politically, at least, society is taking a hard right turn, and I kind of think the campus is reflecting that," he said. "It has been for the last few years, interestingly enough."

H.B. Koplowitz, a 1977 journalism graduate and author of the book "Carbondale After Dark," which chronicles the history of the party image in the city and at the University, said changes in Carbondale's night life reflect changes in society to some degree.

"It's a sort of sign of the times or a reflection of the vision and cohesiveness and power of students nowadays that when a couple of years ago the city and the University decided to stop (Springfest), they succeeded," he said. "It's also a sign of students' irresponsibility then and now that what could have been a good time got out of hand. There's more to partying than drinking."

Koplowitz was one of several alumni who remembered a time when Halloween in Carbondale was a fun community event, rather than the annual riot it has become.

Diggle said interference on the part of city and University officials contributes to the riot atmosphere.

"They're kind of getting back into what's called 'in loco parents,' (an institution acting in the place of students' parents) and that was one of the things that caused the riots back in 1970," he said. "They seem to have forgotten history, and they're sort of sliding back into that student may gain.

"We (athletes) get competitive-style training, while they (traditional students) get more technical capabilities," she said. "I encourage my players to do as well as they can and to relate what they learn in athletics to other things."

financial institution is unwilling to provide the necessary credit.

"It may eliminate some possibilities," he said. "If no one's interested in providing the kind of service students want, we would look at the option of providing such a service internally," Wilson said.

However, a lack of interest from local financial institutions is unlikely.

Joe Kesler, president of First National Bank, 509 S. University Ave., said his institution would be interested in providing the financial backing for the student debit card service.

"We're always willing to work with the University in any way," he said.

"We would be happy to look at a debit card program for students," Kesler said.

submit their tuition and fee increase proposals to the IBHE for review and evaluation prior to approval, Smitley said.

Currently, there is no formal review process for tuition and fee increases, she said.

The individual university boards are ultimately responsible for all tuition and fee increases with the IBHE providing an oversight function.

Other items discussed included a review of the amount of time college students are taking to earn a degree and faculty roles and responsibilities.

Hines said sale spaces are available for rental to the general public. A single space is $20 and a double space is $30 if rented in advance. Each is an additional $5 on the day of the sale, he said.

"Most of our income is generated from the booths that are rented," Hines said. "As of now we have about 55 vendors who will be participating in the yard sale."

Molina said the vendors offer antiques, crafts, furniture, clothes and other items.

"Vendors are our yard sale," Molina said. "If we do not have vendors we will not have a yard sale. It is a good opportunity for people to make money and promote their products."

Wants separate status for FAA

The Washington Post

Rep. Jim Lightfoot, R-Iowa, has introduced legislation to make the Federal Aviation Administration (now part of the Department of Transportation) a separate agency.

It also provides for a test program that would exempt FAA from federal procurement rules and from most civil service rules.

Rules excepted would include those relating to civil service benefits like pay, health and retirement.

Alaska jobs fishy

By Jason E. Coyne
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A summer of working in Alaska beneath the midnight sun while making tall cash sounds like a great time, but it may be more work than one bargained for.

Mary Gore, program director for the Alaska Seafood Marketing Institute, said people need to research the opportunity before taking a chance working in Alaska. "It would be best to secure a job before you go, or know somebody, because otherwise you'll be looking at $100 a day in living expenses," Gore said.

Expenses are 20- to 40-percent higher in Alaska than the lower 48 states, she said, and recommends people thinking about fishery jobs research potential employers and the cities where they plan to work.

"In Juneau, there are only two processing plants and they don't even run all the time," Gore said. "Petersburg, 90 miles away, has about a dozen processing plants that run 24 hours a day and process millions of pounds of fish a day."

But Petersburg itself doesn't have many places to live, Gore said. One has to either camp or pay through the nose for housing.

"Apartments in Juneau cost $800 to $1,500 a month for a one or two bedroom — if you can find one," Gore said. "The city just agreed to allow a 'tent city' for over the summer."

Gore said people will not find a job on a boat, but most likely in a processing plant on shore. And the work in the processing plants on a "silence line" is extremely dull and boring, she said.

"Standing and slitting open bellies on fish for 18 hours a day is very tedious. Your hands cramp up, legs get stiff and your feet freeze."

Carbondale resident Chris Bauer said he's heading for Alaska at the end of the month.

"I'm finding the Midwest tiring, so I'm looking for a change of scenery," Bauer said. "The experience of going to Alaska, getting some money to pay bills and to get ahead financially will be good." Bauer said a friend made $18,000 over three months last summer.

"I think I'll be working in Egegik (Alaska), but I don't know exactly what I'll be doing yet. I think it'll be processing fish on shore," Bauer said. "After working for two or three months I'm going to travel across the Bering Strait into the former Soviet Union and check out life there."

Stamps

the quality of the stamp.

"When you compare the U.S. issue to that of the Sao Tome issue, which is a limited edition of just thousands of sets worldwide, you can see the irresistible appeal that these stamps will have to collectors and Marilyn fans," Van Emden said.

Robert Stevenson, director of the Southern Illinois Stamp Club, said the Monroe stamp is of no interest to him regardless of its origin.

"Stamps printed in smaller countries have nothing to do with stamp collecting," Stevenson said. "Collectors go for stamps that will retain their value. Very few collectors will bother with that stamp."

According to Finnegan, rarity and scarcity determine the value of a particular stamp.

He said old and rare stamps have a much higher value and appeal more to collectors.

Stevenson, a collector for approximately 15 years, said the Marilyn Monroe stamp issued by Sao Tome is a legitimate stamp, valid for collection and may be used for postage in that country.

But, he added, "There is a lot more to stamp collecting than just buying the stamp."

the end of a 30-foot hydraulic arm. With the work now being done increasing by heavy equipment, fewer firefighters are needed. As of 6 p.m. Tuesday, search crews no longer will work through the night. Oklahoma City Fire Chief Gary Marrs explained that the building's instability makes it unacceptable for firefighters to work at night when they might not realize that concrete is beginning to shift and possibly fall. Blakeney told reporters that switching from an around-the-clock effort to daylight-only work is a further sign that officials believe all those still missing are dead. Some firefighters continued to remove rubble Tuesday in an area of the disaster site considered relatively safe. But most of the remaining bodies are thought to be wedged beneath tons of concrete in an unstable "no-go" zone.

There were numerous signs that this chapter of the nation's worst terrorist incident is nearing completion. The Salvation Army and Red Cross are shifting their efforts from crisis work to long-term assistance. The media army that has camped at a location near the bomb site has begun to disperse. Fewer families are going to the church where they have been receiving psychological and religious counseling and other services. The Rev. Mike Hays, one of the clergy assisting the families, said that they have shifted their focus to the future and are beginning to discuss a memorial service for all the victims. "They want closure," he said. The last of the 11 urban search and rescue teams summoned from around the nation by the Federal Emergency Management Agency will depart either Wednesday or Thursday. Even with assistance from 11 teams, the brunt of the work on clearing away rubble has been left to the Oklahoma City Fire Department. "We've seen things nobody ought to have to see, in war or peace," one fireman said.

Letter Carriers send $20,000

WASHINGTON—The National Association of Letter Carriers union has sent $20,000 to the relief fund setup by the American Federation of Government Employees and another $5,000 to the Federal Employee Education and Assistance Fund to help survivors of the Oklahoma City bombing. Two NALC members—James Garrett and David Sykes—were working in the building when the bomb went off. Both members managed to escape and are now working at a postal facility six blocks from the destroyed Murrah Federal Building.

Missouri pair held, but Doe still wanted

FBI agents searching for a second suspect in the Oklahoma City bombing swooped down on two men at a Missouri motel early Tuesday morning, but by the end of the day investigators said they had determined that neither man was the elusive John Doe No. 2. Gary Alan Land and Robert Jacks, named in an all-points FBI bulletin, were arrested at daybreak as material witnesses in a full-scale raid involving dozens of heavily armed federal agents in body armor and riot gear. The pair spent the day attempting to explain to investigators why some of their recent movements in Kingman, Ariz., and Perry, Okla., appeared to coincide with those of Timothy James McVeigh, the first suspect charged in the bombing. But investigators' expectations that Land might prove to be the unidentified suspect known as John Doe No. 2 were quickly dashed. Although he bears some physical resemblance to the wanted man, they said the square-jawed, muscular Land has a mustache so thick that he could not possibly have grown it in the past two weeks since witnesses in Junction City, Kan., saw the clean-shaven John Doe No. 2. And Land does not have a tattoo on his left upper arm as the wanted man is said to have.

Still, federal authorities late Tuesday were considering whether they could find legal means to keep the pair in custody at least overnight. They also said they might call the men before a federal grand jury that began meeting Tuesday in Oklahoma City. "There's plenty there, there's plenty to be suspicious of," said a senior law enforcement official of the two men. "They were in the wrong place at the right time." Meanwhile, the number of confirmed missing in the bombing dropped to 37 after rescue officials confirmed they had located a woman, her four children and a male friend living out of state who had been feared buried in the rubble of the Murrah building. Officials now believe the final toll will be 176 dead in the worst domestic terrorist attack in American history, plus a nurse killed by falling debris at the

Retreat to offer German language instruction

By Benjamin Golshahr
Daily Egyptian Reporter

SIUC students or members of the community can participate in an immersion course that combines five hours of classroom exercises with singing, dancing, watching movies and baking food — all of which will be done at a lakeside-camp retreat where only German will be spoken.

The Department of Foreign Languages and Literature (German) will re-create the atmosphere of a German village at the United Methodist Camp, located by Little Grassy Lake, during a nine-day intensive foreign language course.

Though the course will be intensive it will be fun, said Colin Gregory-Moore, a visiting German lecturer in the Department of Foreign Languages and Literature.

"It's a non-traditional course — there are no exams," he said. "Basically we want people to enjoy themselves and learn German in a relaxed environment."

The course, GER 201c, is worth three credit hours, and will run from May 15 through May 25.

Tuition ranges from $135 to $452. The cost depends on whether the student is commuting or staying at the camp the full nine days, and whether they have a tuition waiver or not.

During the course absolutely no English will be spoken. Instead, four SIUC German instructors will use many different methods of teaching German, said Gregory-Moore.

He said much of the instruction will be through direct participation, which is similar to the way infants learn language.

"We're putting the language into a context," he said.

"(The students) will associate words with actions that go with them. For example I might physically stand up while saying 'Stand up' in German. This method of learning reinforced with writing exercises too."

He said everyone is welcome to attend, regardless of whether they have had any previous experience in the German language.

"Since some people will not know any German when they get here, they might have to bite their tongues for a few days" he said.

"Hopefully when they feel like it, (the students) will start conversing in German — if they don't we have ways to make them," he joked.

The instructors will teach three hours of German in a classroom environment in the morning and two more hours in the afternoon.

There will also be communal breakfasts, lunches and dinners, all of which will be German cuisine, said Stephen van Bibber, a teaching assistant at the Center for English as a Second Language.

"It will be traditional German dishes," he said. Possible dishes include schweinebraten (roast pork), schnitzel (roast cutlet meat, bread and fried) and sauerbraten, mit klößen — you just have to try it, said Bibber. In the evenings, different activities will be planned such as viewing German films, listening to German news broadcasts and learning traditional German folk songs and dances.

There are still 11 openings for students in the course. For more information call 457-4826.

Secrecy keeps Whitewater investigation under wraps

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—Cameras monitor hallways and office doors are sealed shut with combination locks. Lawyers inside are told to keep their window blinds drawn even during the day. For added security, some witnesses are interviewed off site, in hotel suites or apartments around Little Rock.

Whitewater independent counsel Kenneth W. Starr's extraordinary emphasis on secrecy has kept even those who are the probe's subjects largely in the dark. It may be months yet before Starr makes the key legal decisions on whether there will be criminal charges that could directly impact the political fortunes of President Clinton and his administration, according to sources close to the investigation.

Those sources dismiss as premature recent press reports that the probe will ultimately amount to only minor cases like that of a small-town Arkansas banker who pled guilty Tuesday after Starr focused in on his bank's dealings with the Clinton 1990 gubernatorial campaign. In fact, sources said, Starr's staff is looking into more than $800,000 in campaign-related loans that a handful of Arkansas banks made to Clinton while he was governor, an amount much larger than previously known. Investigators are trying to learn whether the loans were repaid and if the campaigns tried to conceal the sources of the money.

Starr's office is trying to learn whether Clinton or his associates are criminally culpable in those bank loans or in their monitoring of a federal savings and loan investigation involving the president, defense lawyers and others close to the case said. Starr clearly is using a bottom-up strategy for bringing criminal charges. So far, he has brought about a half-dozen cases, most of them against minor figures who had dealings with Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan, the thrift owned by the President's and Hillary Rodham Clintons' partner in the Whitewater Estates investment property, James McDougal.

MEMORANDUM May 1, 1995

TO: Everyone Who Interacts With Computer Networks on the SIUC Campus
FROM: The Computing Advisory Committee and Information Technology

Keddy S. Nothin

Over the next few months there will be a number of changes in the way you connect to the University's computers, and we would like to warn you now about some of the things you will be experiencing.

First the good news:

- 1) For those of you who use the dial-up access lines to connect to CWIS, CMS, the Internet and the WEB, we will be adding, over the next few months, a number of additional lines, slightly more than doubling the number available. This will still not guarantee that you won't get a busy signal, but at least you will still get fewer than you are getting now.
- 2) Within a couple of months there will be a Netnews server. This means we will have immediate access to the famous newsgroups you have read about everywhere. When it is available, it will be announced on CWIS so check there for more information on how to sign up.

Now the neutral news (this is the really important stuff -- READ IT!):

- 1) At about the same time as we put the Newsserver on line, we will also be instituting a security system for logging on to the University's networks. In order to dial up or to log on from your office computer, you will require a user ID and a password. Any member of the SIUC staff or the student body will be entitled to an ID. You will need it to get access to the Internet, other networked computers on campus, newsgroups and so on. There will be essentially three levels of access. Anyone via anonymous sign on will be able to log on to read general information about SIUC. Those with user IDs will be able to connect to the services that are now available, such as CMS; the POP server (Eudora services), the Internet; and if your unit permits it, to log on to other servers and computers on campus. There will be a third level of security for access to more sensitive materials such as student records, personnel and budget information.

What will make this different is that virtually everything you now do without a user ID or password will require the use of one (although you may only have to use it once for each session, and your software may permit the log on to be automated).

It will take a certain amount of time to get this system up and running, and those on campus during the summer will be the guinea pigs, so we beg your indulgence while we work through the inevitable glitches and problems. If every one is patient, we should have a smoothly-running system by the beginning of the Fall semester.

- 2) There will be a change in the way mainframe laser printing is done by Information Technology. In the past, laser printing costs were charged to your account (Bursar's or otherwise). During the summer this will be replaced with a system of debit cards, which will work like the current system of debit cards for photocopying. You will be able to purchase a debit card for five or ten dollars, then insert it into a laser printer when you are ready to print your work. We are estimating the price will be around 10 cents per page. This system will apply to everyone who does any centralized laser printing. If you are in a department or unit that has its own printing facilities, it would be a good idea to look into ways of moving mainframe output to your own (or your department's) computer so that you could print from within your own unit, which might well turn out to be cheaper.

Now the bad news:

We really hope there won't be any. But his is the real world, and computers have minds of their own. Everything will take longer than we hope, and will break just when we need it. Bear with us, and we'll try to fix things as quickly as we know how.

SPRING '95 EXAM PROM

549-1111

The examination schedule attempts to avoid examination conflicts by providing separate examination periods for Tuesday-Thursday lecture classes. Other information about final examinations is listed below:

1. The class final exam period is scheduled based on the meeting time and days configuration listed on the first line of the class entry in the Schedule of Classes book (which should be the same as the first printed line for the section on the registered student's schedule print-out). For example, a class section is listed in the Schedule book on two lines in the manner:

08:00 - 8:50 T R
09:00 - 10:50 W

The listed starting time for the first line of the entry is "8:00". The meeting days of that first line are "T R", and therefore are in the category "Begins with T or R." The Exam Date and Period is by the attached Spring '95 Final Examination Schedule to be Thursday, May 11 at 10:10 a.m. - 12:10 p.m.

2. Classes should plan to hold their final examination in their regularly scheduled classrooms. The space scheduling section of the Office of Admissions and Records will forward to departments information relative to the location for examinations for those classes that cannot hold their examinations in their regularly scheduled rooms because of a space conflict. This will be done sufficiently in advance of the final examination days to provide adequate notice for all.

Classes that meet less than the entire semester should hold their exams during the last regular class session prior to final examinations.

It is a policy of the University that no final examination be given prior to the scheduled final examination period, and that students be given their examinations at the designated times. Any deviation from this policy must be approved by the Dean of the College.

3. Students who find they have more than three examinations on one day may petition, and students who have two examinations scheduled at one time should petition their academic dean for approval to take an examination during the make-up examination period on the last day. Provision for such a make-up examination period does not mean that students may decide to miss the scheduled examination time and expect to make it up during this make-up period. This period is to be used only for students whose petitions have been approved by their dean.

4. Students who must miss a final examination may not take an examination before the time scheduled for the class examination. Information relative to the proper grade to be given students who miss a final examination and are not involved in a situation covered in the preceding paragraph will be found in the mimeographed memorandum forwarded to members of the instructional staff at the time they receive the final grade listing for the recording of grades.

5. Individualized Learning Program classes will be administered in the SIUC Student Center throughout final exam week. Students wishing to sit for an exam must contact the Division of Continuing Education at Washington Square "C" (536-7751) at least three days in advance in order to reserve a terminal and receive a room assignment.

Diversity programs blossom in business

Los Angeles Times

Even as the United States' three-decade experiment with affirmative action takes a pounding, employers are clinging to their preoccupation with workers' attitudes about race, gender and other human differences.

Diversity programs — campaigns that force people to consider these uncomfortable issues — are bigger than ever in the workplace, though they occasionally have been targets of the much noted "angry-white-male" backlash.

Rather than being out of touch with the nation's political mood, however, business seems to be a half-step ahead of the debate, overhauling policies and training efforts to tread more cautiously on sensitive themes.

Some companies have scrapped diversity training sessions resented by white male managers who felt they were being branded society's "bad guys."

Policies that focused almost exclusively on removing barriers hindering minorities and women from advancing professionally now are reaching out to older workers, the disabled, homosexuals and parents, as well. Or they are putting more emphasis on workers' varying educational and economic backgrounds, rather than just their race.

"Inclusive is the buzzword," said Berlinda Fontenot-Jamerson, personnel relations and diversity manager at Southern California Gas Co.

Employers are adopting their more subdued and nuanced approaches to diversity management largely to avoid the fiascos occasionally associated with earlier, more confrontational programs.

Some workplace diversity training sessions proved so disastrous that managers stormed out. Upset managers emerged "saying things like, 'I didn't make slavery. It's not my fault. Why should I have to do something about it?'" said Anita Rowe, a Los Angeles management consultant who occasionally has been hired to cool off the emotions triggered by other diversity trainers.

In overhauling their approaches to diversity, however, the employers and consultants running their programs face criticism from both ends of the political spectrum.

Even as they evolve, diversity efforts appear to be entrenched at the nation's biggest employers.

A survey by Minneapolis-based Lakewood Publications found that employers increasingly are offering diversity training to their staffs. The Lakewood poll, based on replies from 2,313 U.S. employers with at least 100 workers, found that 56 percent of firms provided such training last year, up from 40 percent in 1992.

Radio host uninvited to fundraiser due to words

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—After a barrage of Democratic attack faxes, the Republican Party shot down a plan to honor G. Gordon Liddy at a fund-raising dinner scheduled for Tuesday night.

At 4 p.m., Monday, a spokesman for the National Republican Senatorial Committee was enthusiastically defending the invitation to the controversial talkmaster. But half an hour later, those comments were declared "inoperative" as Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., the committee chairman, abruptly uninvited Liddy.

The Fairfax radio host has been at the center of controversy for repeatedly telling listeners to shoot federal firearms agents — though only in self-defense — in the head or groin. "Head shots, head shots. . . Kill the sons of bitches," he has said.

Liddy was invited in February to speak at a "Salute to Talk Radio" sponsored by the GOP committee for its "Inner Circle" members, who contribute at least $1,000 a year. More than 300 people were expected to attend the event at the Mayflower Hotel.

"I think it's unseemly to celebrate someone who's advocated taking head shots at law enforcement officials," George Stephanopoulos, a White House senior adviser, said before the invitation was yanked.

Conference their non-conference record is 13-9. SIUC baseball coach Dan Callahan said his squad's has busted throughout the season. "The effort has been there all year as has the attitude, but we just haven't won," he said. "And when that happens you can throw effort and attitude out the window." SIUC will travel to Southeast Missouri State today for a night game.

during his high school career. Lovelace contributed a best performance of 15'6" vault in high school, and received third place at state last year in his event. Saluki men's track coach Bill Cornell is glad to get the home-grown talent. "We are excited to get Ryan, as it is always great to keep the talented area athletes here" at SIUC Carbondale.

The SIUC men's swimming/diving squad shared the inkwell with the track squad, as it recruited six athletes for its program. SIUC men's head swimming coach Rick Walker deems them the "best recruiting class for us in a long time." Patrick Bever and Trevor Peterson will join the Dawgs to compete in the breaststroke and individual medley events. Bever brings 1995 Kentucky State Finalist in the 100-yard freestyle and 200-yard breaststroke and 1995 Junior National Finalist in the 200 breaststroke accolades to the SIUC squad.

get even stronger over the summer. "Both sides of the line are well conditioned and well coached," Watson said. "They're all in great physical shape. They're all much bigger and stronger." Ferguson said the progress made on the defensive line is just a portion of the great improvement made in all defensive areas. "We made strides all across the board," he said. "I was really impressed with the progress we made over the spring. Our tackling is improved and we are more physical. "Our chemistry is starting to click now...They're beginning to understand what we want and we're starting to understand them." One of the few setbacks suffered by the Saluki defense was the injury to junior safety Cedric Kemmer, who broke his leg during Peterson laid claim to a state championship in the 50 freestyle, also garnering two MVP awards during his high school days. Backstroke and sprint specialist Brian Welsh is another welcomed addition to the swim squad. Having two years left of competition, the Florida State transfer is said to be a great addition to an already talented group of backstrokers. Soon to be Saluki Herman Louw will be assigned the sprint freestyle and individual medley events. The athlete from Middleburg, South Africa, Louw was highly recruited by several well-known colleges, including Nebraska and Florida State. Contributing to the distance freestyle races will be Liam Weseloh, a freshman from Toronto, Canada. Walker expects Weseloh to be a leader in the distance events, even as a freshman performer. Kevin Stratton rounds out the signees for the Dawgs as a diver from Springfield, Mo. SIUC head diving coach Dave Ardrey said, "Kevin is a tremendous asset to our program and is a person who will elevate us athletically and academically."

the last week of practice. On the other side of the ball, last season's red-shirt freshman Reggie Kennedy is still dubbed the front runner by Watson to start at quarterback on opening day. But the Pontiac native will have to withstand pressure this fall from sophomore Jason Karnes and junior Chris Schullian, who are also aiming to take the opening snap. "We've got a situation where Reggie Kennedy has stepped up and became the starter after spring drills, but you really can't name the starting quarterback based on the first 15 days," Watson said. "I can't say he'll start on opening day. He was a surprise, but he needs to learn to be a better practice player." "He had competition when Jason Karnes came on and pushed him and made him better. Chris Schullian can also compete for a spot when he comes back (from playing on the Saluki baseball team). We'll have a good pool to chose from."

At 65, Shula still a success

By Joe Gergen
Newsday

There was a time when the entire premises of the New York Athletic Club, let alone the wood-paneled room on the ninth floor in which he was standing, were off-limits to women: Don Shula digested the information and used it to illustrate a point to his bride of two years. "I told you I'd take you to places you'd never been before," the man said to Mary Anne Shula. He paused with the timing of a veteran comic before finishing the thought. "Mobile, Buffalo, Foxboro." Four months before the start of his 33rd season as a head coach in the National Football League, Shula put on a different face than the metropolitan area is accustomed to seeing. He wore a well-tailored suit, a smart tie and a smile. "He hasn't lost a game in four months," a club official explained. Not since Jan. 8 to be exact. On that date, in San Diego, the Dolphins blew a 21-0 halftime lead to the Chargers to fall just short of the American Conference championship game and the chance to participate in a Super Bowl in their home field. In the immediate aftermath of the defeat, he called it "as tough a loss as I've ever been around." But the man didn't become the winningest coach in pro football history by dwelling on failure. In fact, it is one of the themes sounded in "Everyone's a Coach," the book on leadership he authored with management consultant Ken Blanchard. "You can't change the score," he acknowledged. "You have to try to make a positive of a negative. You learn from it, deal with it and utilize it the next time." As evidence of his outlook, Shula said the Dolphins were pleased with the free agents they have added as well as the college players they acquired in the recent draft and were expecting another banner season from quarterback Dan Marino. "All of us are very enthusiastic," he noted. "We're looking forward to this year." He is 65 and still going strong in a business that popularized the term "burnout." He has coached in more Super Bowls—six—than any other man in his profession. So what if he shares the record for most defeats in games identified by Roman numerals (four) with Bud Grant and Marv Levy. Shula aches for another opportunity. Remarkably, the coach has experienced only two losing seasons, 1976 and 1988. The Dolphins have amassed the best record in the NFL since the merger in 1970 despite being locked into the bottom half of the draft in all but a handful of years. It should be recalled that Marino, their franchise player, was selected with the 27th and next-to-last pick of the first round in 1983.

MJ's ESPN interview should run once again

Baltimore Sun
If the folks at ESPN are smart—and we know they are—they'll clear some time as soon as possible to run all of Andrea Kremer's bravura interview with Michael Jordan, portions of which ran during Sunday's "SportsCenter." Kremer has never been known as a tough questioner, but she was persistent with Jordan on a variety of topics that did not make the telecasts. Kremer went after Jordan over criticism that he has not used his tremendous celebrity to further causes or speak out on issues of the day. "I'm not looking to run for Congress. I'm not looking to run for any office, so I don't have to publicize what I do—just as long as deep down in my heart I feel I'm making a difference in lives that are close to me, or that wants me to make a difference. That's all that matters to me," said Jordan. "And no one's gonna tell me to do this or ask me to do that—you wouldn't feel comfortable doing it. As long as you do it out of the kindness of your heart, that's all that matters: If someone's gotta hold a gun to your back and make you do it, then you shouldn't be doing it."

Saluki track star wins Ashe award

Lesley Batson earns honor for achievements on the track as well as in the classroom

By Grant Deady
DE Sports Editor

The spirit of former professional tennis great Arthur Ashe Jr. is alive and well inside Saluki track standout Lesley Batson.

A sophomore sprinter from Ontario, Canada, Batson was recently named to a list of 450 collegiate athletes receiving the first annual Arthur Ashe Jr. Sports Scholars Awards.

Ashe, who died in 1993 after contracting HIV through a blood transfusion, set a precedent for minorities not just in tennis, but in all sports. And to honor Ashe for his accomplishments in paving the way for others, Black Issues in Higher Education Magazine began the annual awards to recognize minority student-athletes in intercollegiate athletes.

Batson was one of 450 athletes from across the United States of African, Asian, Hispanic or Native American origin from 24 different intercollegiate sports to receive the award.

"I'm very proud," Batson said of the honor. "It's very humbling to be recognized as someone following guidelines set by Arthur Ashe. It's a very good feeling."

Student-athletes who were chosen for the awards all achieved a 3.2 or higher grade point average through the 1994 fall semester, in addition to excelling in their respective sports.

Frank Matthews, publisher of Black Issues in Higher Education Magazine, said today's athletes cannot underestimate the importance of education or Ashe's accomplishments.

"Arthur Ashe was an extraordinary role model. He used his personal fame, generated by world class athletic achievements, to call attention to the importance of education and the need for athletes to achieve success in their studies," he said. "The men and women that we recognize embody the spirit and philosophy of Arthur Ashe."

Nominated for the award by the SIUC athletic department last fall, Batson just received notification that she had been named a winner.

"I just got the plaque the other day when Coach (Don) DeNoon gave it to me," Batson said. "This one (award) is different because it's academic and athletic. I'd have to rank it pretty close to the top. It's really an honor."

Along with teammates Sheila Hollins, Katrina Daniels and Hallema Ivory, Batson helped set a school record in the sprint medley relay at last Saturday's Drake Relays with a time of 3:57.89. Batson has also posted team bests this season in the 100- (12.10) and 200- (24.74) meter dashes, while also anchoring SIUC's top 4 x 100 (46.87) and 4 x 200 (1:42.60) relay team times.

And atop Batson's list of Saluki track achievements is her school record 6.98 in the 55-meter dash.

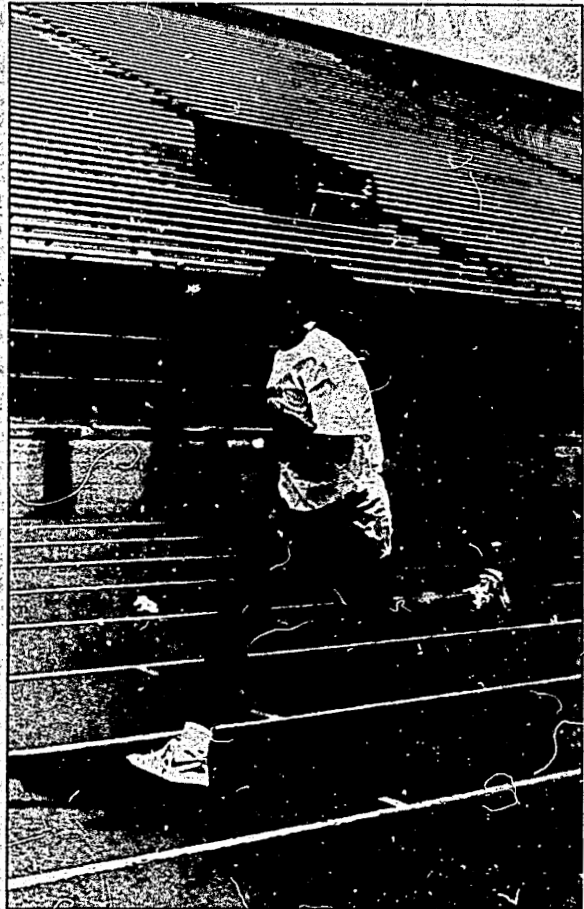

"A lot of athletes here are capable of qualifying for the award," Batson said. "But this will just be extra incentive for me to do more athletically and academically."

Attracted to SIUC because of its strong school of business, Batson said she chose to turn down other scholarships with more high-profile programs for a shot to run for SIUC.

"Before I decided to come here, I got offers from several Big 10 schools, but the college of business here was appealing," she said. "The atmosphere here was warmer and everyone was so helpful."

"I'm a hard worker and I like to get things done and be involved in lots of different things. The big schools don't always let you do that. They want you to just concentrate on one thing. "I made the right choice. I'm happy I'm here."

The Saluki women's track team is undefeated this season (6-0) and resumes action Saturday at the Indiana Invitational in Indianapolis.

Sports Briefs

Carterville and Kankakee have contributed to two new athletes for the SIUC men's track and field squad.

Ryan Lovelace, a Carterville High School pole vaulter, signed a national letter-of-intent for the Salukis, along with Mike Sandusky, a shot put/discus thrower from Kankakee's Bishop McNamara High School.

Sandusky joins the Salukis with a 55-10 best performance in the shot put and a 164-1 distance in the discus. Sandusky also earned letters in both baseball and football

Dawgs' Davis dominates Illini

Goose egg: Dan Davis pitches 2-hit complete game shutout; bats provide 11 runs, 18 hits

By Doug Durso
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Even though the SIUC baseball team has struggled this season, the Dawgs have been able to dominate a Big Ten intrastate rival, Illinois.

The Salukis pounded the Fighting Illini 11-0, in Champaign, Tuesday after whipping Illinois 12-8 at Abe Martin Field, March 28.

In Tuesday's game Senior Saluki pitcher Dan Davis dominated Illinois batters allowing only two hits and no runs in his complete game. Davis is now tied for the club lead in victories with three.

The shutout was the Salukis first since 1993 when, SIUC shut out Northern Iowa in two straight games.

Offensively, SIUC jumped out with one run in the first inning and four in the second, which was all Davis would need.

Brad Cosgrove led off the second with a bunt single and consecutive singles by Jason Smith, Braden Gibbs and a double by Mike Russell highlighted the four-run frame.

SIUC added one more in the sixth and in the seventh inning, back-to-back RBI doubles from Tim Kratochvil and Pete Schlosser led to two more Saluki runs. The Dawgs finished with three more runs in the ninth to close out the scoring.

Braden Gibbs moved from second base to shortstop after Craig Shelton was diagnosed with a stress fracture in his foot, which will make him miss the rest of the season.

Gibbs along with Mike Russell led the Salukis 18-hit attack with four hits apiece, while Kratochvil had three RBIs.

While the Salukis, who now have a 19-24 season record, have struggled in the Missouri Valley

Watson stresses fundamentals in off-season

By David Vingren
Daily Egyptian Reporter

It may be a bit premature for Saluki football coaches to get excited with its team's, two-week spring practice performance. But then again, every minute of improvement is crucial for a squad that is in the midst of a major rebuilding period.

"We're a much better team today than we were a couple weeks ago," Saluki head coach Shawn Watson said. "We got our objectives met in terms of defensive and offensive fundamentals."

Although Watson is happy with the team's progress at all positions, he realizes that if the Salukis are going to be competitive in the Gateway Conference, much more improvement will be needed before next season's opening day kickoff.

Watson said he wants his players to focus this summer on gaining strength through power weightlifting and becoming fundamentally sound.

"We're improving, but we have a long way to go," he said. "Until we get our objectives accomplished, we (the coaches) still have to keep pounding it into them."

Since the Salukis' next scheduled practice is not until Aug. 8, players will spend the next four months working on an individual basis. SIUC coaches are counting on their players to train properly on their own in order to keep the rebuilding process moving. "They know what we expect from them and I think they'll work exceptionally hard," Saluki defensive coordinator Linwood Ferguson said. "We give them evaluations on what they need to work on over the summer, so this is their chance to work hard and focus on the areas they need to work on."

Watson said SIUC's major project on the offensive and defensive lines will put forth a productive spring session and hopes they will
