Byrd's 'Operation High-Jump' Included Southern Student

By ROMOLO ROSSI

Since the beginning of time, men and women have dreamed of penetrating the polar regions of the earth. These dreams, however, have often been frustrated by the harsh environments that these explorers encountered. In the case of Richard E. Byrd, a decorated war hero and explorer, his dreams of reaching the South Pole ultimately led him to found "Operation High-Jump," which was an expedition to the Antarctic.

Over the years, the area around the South Pole has seen many expeditions and discoveries. The history of exploration in this region is rich with stories of courageous men and women who tackled the challenges of the polar environment. "Operation High-Jump," or more accurately, the Byrd Antarctic Expedition, was one such endeavor. The expedition was led by Richard E. Byrd, who had previously made significant contributions to the exploration of the polar regions.

Richard E. Byrd

Born in 1888, Richard Evelyn Byrd was a decorated World War I pilot who later became a prominent figure in polar exploration. Byrd is best known for his expeditions to the South Pole, which he reached in 1929. In addition to his successful expeditions, Byrd founded "Operation High-Jump," which was an expedition to the Antarctic.

Richard Byrd

On December 1, 1929, the expedition, consisting of 15 men and one woman, left for Antarctica. The expedition was funded by the U.S. government and was supported by the U.S. Navy. The goal of the expedition was to establish a base at the South Pole and to conduct scientific research in the region.

The expedition was led by Richard Byrd, who was accompanied by a team of scientists and technicians. The expedition was funded by the U.S. government and was supported by the U.S. Navy. The expedition was considered to be a great success, and Byrd and his team were hailed as heroes.

Richard Byrd

Richard Byrd's "Operation High-Jump" included Southern students, which added an educational component to the expedition. This allowed Byrd to conduct research and to share his knowledge with eager students. Byrd's expeditions were not only about scientific discovery but also about education and training. Byrd believed that by sharing his knowledge with students, he could inspire a new generation of polar explorers.

Richard Byrd

The Byrd Antarctic Expedition was a significant event in the history of polar exploration. Byrd's success in reaching the South Pole set the stage for future expeditions and inspired a new generation of polar explorers. Byrd's legacy lives on today, as his discoveries and contributions continue to shape our understanding of the polar regions.
Maroons Succumb To Eastern 38-0 in Finale
Martinsonen Pushed Into Depths of I. I. A. C. Cellar With 0-4 Record

The Southern Illinois Maroons added the final chapter to a ghastly hard luck story last Saturday as the resilient Eastern Panthers triumphed 38-0 before a large hometown crowd at Charleston.

The Maroons finished the season with a record of a fair try from last year's championship of a season that once featured a conference record and a 20-13-2 whipping of the Panthers.

It can't be Maroons' fault this year. Their coach had to be an easier one. The game was on the line. The Maroons would be in their third straight tourney had they not been outscored by a 38-0 record.

But now it is time to look further back into the record books. The Maroons have been losing to Eastern for as long as anyone can remember. The record is 0-15. The Panthers have been in the conference for the last 20 years. The Maroons have been in the conference for the last 3 years.

In conclusion, the Southern Illinois basketball team, as so often in this part of the season, was routed by Eastern. The Maroons were never in the game.

Coach Bryan Hildreth had more than 20 plays going through the Maroons' defense this season in preparation for the Maroons' attack at Easton. The Maroons were never in the game.

The Maroons' only score in the first quarter was a 6-5. The Maroons' last score was a 3-0 in the final quarter. The Maroons' last score was a 3-0 in the final quarter.
