Officials to decide on abortion benefits

By Christy Gutowski
Administration Writer

SIUC students' request in May to have their student health insurance cover elective termination of pregnancy hinges on the decision of University officials for approval. The Student Health Advisory Board conducted a survey last fall to review the possibility of including elective termination of pregnancy as a health insurance benefit and had public hearings to discuss abortion coverage in January and February. Students voted last May for a controversial referendum to add abortion as a student health benefit to their insurance coverage. Students cast 733 ballots in favor of coverage of abortions in the student health insurance policy, and 441 were opposed.

Jason Worley, spokesman for Arcordia, SIUC's student health insurance carrier, said no additional expense will be added to student health fees if the University approves abortion benefits.

But students still do not receive the coverage under the University's health plan.

In addition to the referendum, Susan Hall, president of Graduate and Professional Student Council, said she received a petition from a student women's group with about 300 student signatures supporting the abortion coverage. She said she received one letter asking the coverage not be included.

Hall said elective termination of pregnancy is widely supported among her constituents.

"It's very clear to me what the graduate and professional student population on this campus want to see happen," she said.

Worley said he has received no indication from University administrators to change the existing benefit and include abortion coverage.

Jake Baggott, SIUC health service administrator, said when the student referendum was passed, the student health program and the vice president's office planned to "follow the students' voice in the matter."

"Once the decision has been made and the start date established,

Income tax fear blitzed amendment

By John McCadd
Politics Writer

Fear of a graduated income tax system was the determining factor in Illinois' failure to approve an education amendment to the state constitution, political scientists said.

Most opposition to the amendment came from Republicans and residents of wealthy Chicago suburbs — interests that would sustain the most damage from the proposal, scientists said.

The amendment, which fell three points short of the necessary 60 percent for approval, stated the Illinois government would have to fund more than half of the state's total public education costs.

It was meant to equalize school quality in low-income areas by having the state pay what is now funded through property taxes.

Political scientists said the amendment failed — and will be even harder to pass in the near future — because it does not specify exactly how education funding would be increased.

"Most of the concern was about the possible tax increases that would result from the amendment," said John Baker, SIUC associate professor of political science. "The solution would have been to provide property tax relief to balance the income tax increase."

"The only problem is that it's hard to come up with specific language expressing (property tax relief) in an amendment," he said.

A Sangamon State University pre-election poll stated Republicans and wealthy Chicago suburbanites were the largest groups in opposition to the amendment.

Jack Van Der Slik, director of the SSU survey research center, said the amendment's prognosis of being passed in its present form will be difficult because of the newly-elected, Republican-dominated state senate.

Victims of fire look for hope amid rubble

By David R. Kazak

The residents of charred Building 9 at the Country Club Circle apartment complex rummaged through the rubble Thursday to try to salvage any remnants of their lives they could find.

For the SIUC students that occupied the building, a fire took everything and left feelings of loss, helplessness, and disappointment.

Michelle Fremouw, wearing purple sweat pants, suede boots, and a sweatshirt donated by residents of the other buildings at the complex, watched as her father pulled a smoke-ridden stuffed animal from behind the couch.

"That's Suzy Saluki," she said, unfolding her arms long enough for a quick point towards the blackened toy. "My mom gave me that when I first got here to SIU so I could hold it and squeeze it whenever I got homesick."

The stuffed animal was still in one piece, which was more than could be said of Fremouw's apartment. In the open air where her bedroom used to be, nothing but charred wood and furniture remained. Warped ceiling tiles covered the floor, accompanied by

United States slaps Europe with strict tariffs

Two hundred-percent tariff to triple U.S. price of Europe white wine

Zapnews

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration fired the opening shot Thursday in what could develop into a full-scale trade war between the United States and the European Community.

Special Trade Representative

Carla Hills announced retaliatory tariffs on European farm goods after talks between the U.S. and the E.C. in Chicago broke down Tuesday over the issue of French subsidies on agricultural exports, particularly oilseeds.

American farmers claim that they are losing up to $1 billion a year because the subsidized French products undercut the American competition in world markets.

Total two-way trade between the economic giants amounts to about $190 billion per year, with the United States holding a trade surplus of $16 billion, mainly from agricultural products.

In the first volley, the United States will impose, starting on Dec. 5, 200 percent tariffs on European white wines. Although that would affect Italy and Germany to some extent, the main target was France.

Once put into effect, the tariffs would effectively triple the price of a bottle of French white wine sold in the United

The Saluki offensive and defensive lines prepare to collide in a practice drill. The Dawgs prepared Thursday for a game Saturday against Southwest Missouri.

Salukis to battle conference power

By Jay Reed
Sports Writer

A tale of two different teams will perform Saturday when the Saluki gridders travel to Southwest Missouri State.

The Bears enter the game with perfect 3-0 Gateway Conference record, and the Salukis dwell near the cellar with a 1-3 conference mark.

Southwest Missouri State gives up only an average of 18.8 points a game, and the Saluki offense is scoring 32.9 points a game.

"This will definitely be a game of strength against strength and weakness against weakness," Southwest Missouri State head coach Jesse Branch said. "They have an awfully good offense, and if we can hold them to 10 points we can win."

Saluki head coach Bob Smith said the SIUC offense may attempt to crack the stingy Bear defense with trickery.

"We are working to mix it up with the run and the pass. We think we have a great game plan," Smith said. "We have some trick plays like the halfback pass and the reverse shovel pass ready to go."

Southwest Missouri State's defense is anchored by linebacker Bill Dulin, who has 54 tackles, and strong safety Shumone Burnett, who has 52 stops. Adrion Smith leads the secondary with five interceptions, and Carey Herron has recorded four picks.

"We are not a star-studded defensive team," Branch said. "We have guys that can really run, but we don't have individual stars. The guys are playing well as a team."

Branch said the Bears option attack has been led by fullback Jonah White, quarterback Cleveland Antione and running back Anthony Pegues. White has rushed for 617 yards this season on 136 carries and is described by Branch as the Bears' go-to-guy. Antione has rushed for 510 yards on 123 carries. Pegues has rushed for 443 yards on 56 attempts, an average of 7.9 yards a carry.

Smith said Southwest Missouri's option offense is explosive, and the key for the Salukis will be changing-up assignments and defensive patterns.

Peek at hoop teams is almost late tonight

By Karyn Viverito
Sports Writer

Move over David Letterman, because a new eye of late night—without Larry "Bud" Melman—has taken over Carbondale.

Almost Late Night with the Salukis, featuring the men and women of Saluki basketball, finds its way to the Arena tonight to give the fans a sneak peek at this year's 1992-93 basketball teams.

Melman, a signature guest of Letterman's late night talk show, was scheduled to be a main attraction, but he cancelled out earlier this week because of illness.

Entertainment still scheduled for the event is the introduction of the Saluki basketball teams, a three-point shootout and a slam-dunk contest.

The men's team will practice for the fans, giving them a show of what they can do in an intrasquad scrimmage.

Playing for the Maroon team will be Marcelo da Silva, Paul Lusk, Tyrone Bell, Tim Pace, Ralph Hughley, Ian Stewart and Ashraf Amaya.

Pitted against the Maroons will be the White team of Brian Piper, Chris Lowery, Mirko Pavlovic, Jojo Johnson, Marcus Timmons, Chris Carr and Scott Burzynski.

Prize giveaways and an appearance by the World Champion Chicago Bulls mascot, Benny the Bull, also headline the late night schedule.

The late night practice, which used to be at midnight, has been an early evening event the past few years and has been successful, said director of athletic promotions Tom Davis.

"This year the first day of practice ran during break, and

Emeritus professor Shea inducted into another hall of fame

University News Service

Edward J. Shea, professor emeritus of physical education at SIUC, has been inducted into Emory University's sports hall of fame.

Shea became an associate professor of physical education and Emory University's first men's varsity swimming coach in 1942, a year after he graduated from Springfield College in Massachusetts.

Shea said he was honored to be inducted into Emory University's sports hall of fame.

"It was one of the greatest things to me," Shea said. "It brought me tremendous happiness because the years I spent at Emory were some of the happiest years of my young, professional life. I was so ambitious then, and I wanted to accomplish so much. They gave me the free hand to do it."

It has taken Shea this long to be inducted into the hall of fame because Emory's sports hall of fame has only existed for three years.

Edward J. Shea

Hall of Fame honors are no stranger to Shea. Shea became a member of Springfield College's Athletics Hall of Fame in 1983. As an undergraduate there, he captained the varsity swim team, won New England Intercollegiate and Amateur Athletic Union titles and reached the NCAA swimming finals.

Shea, who was born in Chicago, was honored again by Springfield College in 1986 when he received its Distinguished Alumnus Award. Before World War II, Emory had no formal competition for swimming and a number of other sports. Ambition pushed Shea and by 1927, he had led the swimming team to a southeastern intercollegiate championship and one of the relay teams to a national swimming title.

He was chosen associate coach of the 1948 U.S. Olympic Swim Team, and he received many national, regional and state honors and awards during his seven years at Emory.

Also, while living in Atlanta, Shea found and directed the Atlanta Swimming Association, where his teams of teenagers achieved 363 national, sectional, state and city championship titles.

Because of his teams' successes and the attention he brought to swimming, Shea was called "the father of swimming in the South" by a number of regional sports writers during the 1940s.

And because of Shea's achievements and the accolades he brought to Emory, students at the U.S. AMBASSADOR RECALLED — The United States recalled its ambassador from Burkina Faso Thursday, accusing the African government of covertly supplying arms to Liberian rebels and then lying about it. Spokesman Richard Boucher said the U.S. had known for two years that the Burkina Faso government had been supplying weapons to the National Patriotic Front of Liberia, led by Charles Taylor. Taylor's soldiers have been accused of killing five American nuns.

KING SPEAKS TO NATION — Jordan's King Hussein delivered a televised speech to the nation Thursday in which he reminded his people that he was not immortal and that democracy and pluralism would guarantee a smooth transition of power to another member of the Hashemite family. The king, said in an emotional speech that "the time will come when another Hashemite will take over to continue the process of nation-building in this country."

RATIFICATION OF TREATY DELAYED — British Prime Minister John Major announced Thursday that London will delay its ratification of the Maastricht Treaties until next May, throwing the whole agreement into doubt. Major told the House of Commons that he would wait until after Denmark held a fresh referendum on the Treaties before presenting Britain's ratification bill for its third and final reading in parliament.

CLINTON INVITED TO MOSCOW — Boris Yeltsin has invited President-elect Bill Clinton to Moscow for an official visit, the Russian president's office said Thursday. In a telephone conversation with Clinton, Yeltsin suggested that high-level representatives of both sides meet as soon as possible to exchange information and get to know each other. Yeltsin said that the two nations "should become not only partners, but allies."

GAYS VOW TO CONTINUE FIGHT FOR RIGHTS — Gay and lesbian leaders basked Wednesday in the glow of an Election Day that handed them several victories—including a key one in Oregon—even while clearly signaling that the fight over gay rights will continue around the nation. "I'm very happy today ... It's like our long nightmare is over," said David Mixner, a Los Angeles activist and senior advisor to President-elect Bill Clinton, who helped marshal extensive gay support for him.

RUSSIANS DROP SURPRISE — Eager to combat their image of technological decay, the Russians are dropping in. Literally. In one of history's most unusual publicity stunts, a Proton rocket will fire a capsule from Russia's once-secret Plesetsk cosmodrome into polar orbit for seven days in November. It is scheduled to splash down 150 miles off the coast of Washington state on Nov. 22 with a toy dog, prayers for peace and pleas for American investment and trade.

REPUBLICANS SEEK TO LAY BLAME — As the dust and wreckage settle after President George Bush's decisive defeat in Tuesday's election, Republicans are looking for the cause. Much of the blame, according to Republican strategists, must go to President Bush for starting his campaign too late. Out of over-confidence, he held back until Labor Day, by which time the Clinton-Gore bus was already rolling through the Middle West, picking up votes and press coverage.

SIUC evaluates GE courses

Committee seeks student, prof input to improve courses

By Chris Davies
Administration Writer

The campuswide General Education Committee recently added a student to provide graduate student representation to the committee.

The committee, formed to evaluate and improve upon SIUC's GE courses, is having meetings with faculty from every college to gain input aimed at improving general education. Until last week the committee lacked student input.

Pete Carroll, GE Committee chairman, said it has been difficult to gain input from students because of their lack of interest.

"The University's faculty have expressed a number of excellent recommendations for the program," he said. "But student input has been lacking during the meetings."

Carroll said student participation could prove helpful in creating an improved GE curriculum.

"I welcome all of the input I can get from faculty and students included," he said. "Students need to get more involved and offer their point of view on the GE situation."

Carl Mowery, a graduate student in English, will represent graduate students. Mowery was appointed by Susan Hall, Graduate and Professional Student Council president.

Mowery said, he understands the faculty and the graduate student situation.

"I taught English 102 part-time at Murray State University, so I understand the initiative to teach a culturally diverse curriculum and the importance of variety in the classroom," he said.

"When I taught English 102 I used a variety of black and female writers in the course, as well as Japanese and other cultures," he said. "Some of the GE courses at SIUC do not use multicultural curriculums as they should."

Mowery said he will represent the graduate teaching assistants and express their views and concerns.

The GE Committee is scheduled to meet with the College of Engineering faculty Nov. 6, at 2 p.m. in CTC 9D.

American Red Cross teams up with Greeks

Fraternities, sororities to aid in Thanksgiving blood drive promotion

By Michael T. Kuciak
Health Writer

The American Red Cross and the Inter-Greek Council are teaming for the SIUC Thanksgiving Food Drive Competition Nov. 9-13.

The blood drive will be 11-4 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday in the Student Center Ballrooms. It will be from 8 to 1 p.m. Tuesday at Lesar Hall and 2 to 8 p.m. Friday at the Recreation Center.

Mikael Pyrtel, blood drive pro-motor, said the blood drive is part of a no-holds-barred ongoing competition between SIUC and University of Missouri at Columbia.

"We are trying to include the University and the Carbondale area as well," he said. "When you deal with the Red Cross, no one really loses."

Jonathan Senft, IGC blood drive chairman, said SIUC collected about 1,400 pints in the 1992 competition and is shooting for 1,600 pints this year.

"Mizzou took the title last year, and we'll be trying to take it back this year," he said.

Senft said the IGC is helping out by covering a lot of the expenses of the blood drive.

SIUC, U of I plan joint effort to link business educators

By Vincent S. Boyd
Business Writer

An innovative agreement aimed at boosting business growth in Southern Illinois will link business educators from SIUC and the University of Illinois Cooperative Extension Service.

In March, the Extension Service opened an office in the Southern Illinois Small Business Incubator at SIUC. The office is staffed by two business professors.

The professors, from the U of I CES, are John Quinn, extension educator in economic development and Normal Turok, extension educator in small business management.

Their purpose is to lend start-up and operating support to fledgling, downstate companies.

Turok, who will work directly with businesses in the area of management, said the operation can now tap SIUC's experts in a joint effort to bolster the region's business and economic growth.

"This is the first cooperative agreement between two universities to do this kind of thing," Turok said. "We're very excited about it."

She said both universities will work hand-in-hand for the benefit of the region.

"We will work together to take advantage of the resources of both universities to better serve the people of Southern Illinois," Turok said.

Quinn, who works directly with different communities, said his area of expertise will lend a hand in serving the people.

He said he recently held a workshop for utility employees in Alorton Park.

"The purpose of the workshop was to bring together office managers, customer service representatives and engineers," Quinn said.

Turok said the joint venture will be an asset to Southern Illinois.

"We'll combine resources so we can make a greater impact and better serve the people in the area," Turok said.

Skeleton of crowd of Halloween past

TRICK-OR-TREATERS OUTNUMBERED the Strip partiers this past weekend for the first time in 15 years. Carbondale residents received the treat by having a peaceful weekend because of the efforts of the city and University.

Carbondale had about enough of the traditional Halloween party when students vandalized shops and street signs along South Illinois Avenue. At that time, about 10 blocks of the street were shut down for the partiers by the city without the partiers having to take it. The party swelled from 10,000 to 30,000 when the city shut the street down to traffic.

THIS IS THE THIRD YEAR that the University agreed to close the dorms and cancel classes but the city allowed the bars on the Strip to stay open though it refused to close the street. The holiday saw an unprecedented low in attendance on the Strip—under 300. Normal semester weekends draw more of a crowd.

The city and the University are successfully waiting out the crowd—so far.

NEXT YEAR, THE FALL "RECESS" consists of only one day, Oct. 18., allowing on-campus students to be in Carbondale during the Halloween weekend. It will be seen then if the University waits long enough for the students to forget the revelry. As of yet, the city has not announced any plans to close the Strip next Halloween.

Though many students voted during their break, it does not seem that the election helped draw people away from Carbondale. Since officials stopped sanctioning the closing of the Strip for partiers in 1989, crowds dropped to about 3,500 in 1989, 1,000 in 1990 and 600 in 1991. When the bars closed in those years, partiers spilled onto South Illinois Avenue with less enthusiasm for upholding the tradition.

THE CITY HAS USED A STREET SWEEPER in past years to disperse crowds that threatened police. This year, the sweeper was sent home because it was not needed.

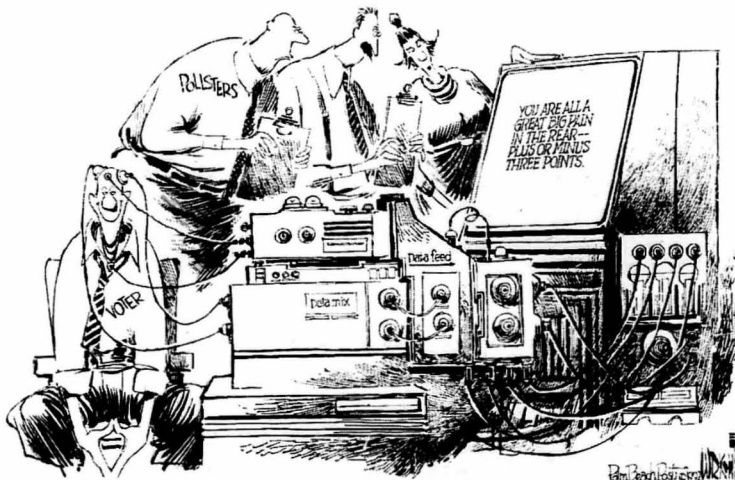

The crowd that did turn out was not a wet sponge. Partiers still shouted "Take the Strip," but could find no takers Friday night. They still yelled at cars and taunted police, but they could not amass the energy of past, larger crowds.

FINALLY, THE SATURDAY NIGHT-Sunday morning crowd took the Strip for about 20 minutes when the bars closed. But police were able to push back the crowd.

More costumes per capita were seen over the weekend. Out-of-towners were able to enjoy the Strip for the Strip, and not have the people to elbow through.

The collective city and University efforts were able to bring a 15-year growing crowd of 20,000 to almost 1/100th the size in just three years.

It will be a treat to see if the efforts did the trick. The city has learned a lesson in crowd control. The Strip, once alive on Halloween with thousands of partiers, is becoming a ghost town.

Letters to the Editor

Clinton: transition of presidency sustained by continuity of policies

Today I want to affirm the essential continuity in American foreign policy and my desire to seek bi-partisan support for our role in the world. During the transition that is about to begin, I urge America's friends and foes alike to recognize, as I do, that America has only one president at a time; that America's foreign policy remains solely in his hands; that even as America's administrations change, America's interests do not; that the greatest gesture of goodwill any nation can make toward me is to continue their full cooperation during this period with our one President, George Bush; and that the greatest mistake any adversary could make would be to doubt America's resolve during this period of transition.

I look forward to working closely with President Bush during this period to ensure continuity on global matters of interest to all Americans — from continued progress in the Mideast peace talks; to bolstering Russia's fledgling democracy; to working toward peaceful resolution of the conflict in the republics of the former Yugoslavia; to assisting the victims of famine in Somalia.

I also look forward to getting to work on the hard and vital task of restoring our nation's economic strength. Today I say to our financial and business leaders that, although change is on the horizon, we understand the need for stability as we pursue new growth. The changes I seek will strengthen American's market systems, not weaken them.

Bill Clinton
President-elect

And to the people of our great nation for whom we pledged to get up every morning and work hard to bring economic opportunity that was at the core of the Clinton-Gore campaign I say: that task has already begun.

It will not be easy but we will spare no effort to restore growth, jobs and income to the American people. Let me also stress the stakes and opportunities in the months and years that lie ahead.

We have won the Cold War; now we have the opportunity to build a new peace. We have entered a global economy; now we have the opportunity to master its competitive challenges rather than let these changes undermine these strengths.

We have become a diverse people of many colors, languages, and beliefs; now we have the opportunity to ensure that diversity is a source of great strength and pride around the world. We have become a nation of 250 million Americans; now we have the opportunity, the duty, and the imperative, to see that we do not leave even one of those 250 million behind as we prepare for the next century.

We have entered a period of great challenge and extraordinary opportunity for our nation. I am confident we can make it a proud place in our history; proud for the families who are raising this nation's next generation; proud for the workers and businesses who are America's lifeblood; proud for the men and women who wear America's uniform; and proud for the peoples of other nations, living in freedom or in fear, who draw strength from America's ideals, and share our vision of a peaceful and more prosperous world.

America has called on me to be our next president. But our forebears call on us all at this moment to honor their effort, their sacrifice, their ideals, and their lives — by working hard and working together, to improve children as those who preceded us did for us. They call on us to take our dreams and our hopes and make them real.

Thank you, and God bless America.

Malcolm's moment

Is director doin' the right thing making film on 1960s leader?

By Teri Lynn Carlock
Special Assignment Writer

Racism. Religion. Civil rights. Freedom of Speech. The power of leadership. The spirit of Malcolm X presents unforgettable lessons in all walks of democratic life.

This month, director Spike Lee will bring Malcolm X back to life on motion picture screens across the nation. But soon-to-be viewers are wondering about Lee's motives for doing the movie and the public's reaction.

Lee took over the project in late 1990 from director Norman Jewison and inherited Denzel Washington in the title role of the street hustler turned religious revolutionary.

The movie, which has a $33 million price tag, the largest of any of Lee's movies, was shot on location in Boston and Saudi Arabia.

In April of this year, as sections of Los Angeles burned across national television, Lee screened his movie at the Warner Bros. lot.

After viewing the piece, Lee said the movie is needed now more than ever.

"Some whites might cry racism, some Jews might cry anti-Semitism, some blacks might not like it. But they will be far outnumbered," he said.

Harold Moses, a lecturer in the SIUC black studies department, said Malcolm X was popular during the 1960s, but his presence was downplayed in the 1970s and 1980s. And now he is making a comeback.

"He's very popular now. I guess due to the social and racial climate—the class differentiation between blacks and whites since President Reagan was in office," he said. "He will have a lasting effect as long as there is tension between the two."

Moses said he thinks Lee chose Malcolm for his movie because he sees the commercialization in the movie.

"I can identify with Lee as a person, but I also see him as part of the capital system," he said. "Movie making has to do with surviving in the economical environment, and Lee is looking at this in terms of commercial appeal."

Moses said Lee is not the only one making a profit from Malcolm's history—whites and Asians have been selling Malcolm X products for months.

"It's a political economy existing between white and black America and Malcolm X at this point," he said. "Regardless if he is doing it as a self-venture, he realizes, as any prudent businessman, he's taken advantage of it."

Lee would not have persisted with his movie if he did not believe in Malcolm X, Moses said.

Roy Inniss, chairman of the Congress of Racial Equality, said it has been the press' tendency to

Attention on King—until now

By Teri Lynn Carlock
Special Assignment Writer

In the 1960s, two men exercised their power to speak out as a tool to influence thousands of people, but they have had different legacies in U.S. history.

One man's image and dream of racial unity have remained embedded in our minds for more than 25 years. But the other man's "by any means necessary" influence has taken a so-called backseat to the former's preachings.

Now the other man's time has come.

On Nov. 18, writer and director Spike Lee will release his long-awaited epic about Malcolm X, ending the history of Malcolm being kept in the dark as compared to Martin Luther King Jr.'s life story being told in countless history books.

George Hopkins, professor of history at Southern Illinois University at Carbondale, said Malcolm X and King are like day and night.

"My view is that Malcolm X and Martin Luther King are radically opposites in their origins—they've had different experiences," he said. "It's hard to find people that are so radically different."

Hopkins, who analyzes political assassinations such as Malcolm's, said Malcolm had a more difficult life than King.

"Malcolm X was the authentic voice of the underside of the struggling streetside, but King was the son of a prominent preacher," he said.

Education is another major difference between the two men, Hopkins said.

"Malcolm was entirely self-educated in prison," he said. "But King had every educational advantage that a black could have."

Antwan Perry, a junior in constructional technology from Chicago, said Malcolm X and King had a lot in common because they both were humanitarians.

"They wanted equality, no matter what the color of your skin," he said. "They were both individuals."

"I think Lee chose him because as we grew up, a lot of people didn't know about Malcolm X," he said. "There needs to be a movie so people can know what he's done."

Perry said there is a large demand to learn more

Malcolm overcame obstacles in his life

By Teri Lynn Carlock
Special Assignment Writer

Malcolm Little was born on May 19, 1925, in Omaha, Neb., the son of a West Indian mother and a black American father.

His father was a Baptist minister and a dedicated follower of Marcus Garvey, leader of the Universal Negro Improvement and Conservation Association.

When Malcolm was six, his father was beaten and thrown to his death under a trolley by members of the Black Legion, a local white supremacist group that earlier had burned the Little's home.

As a result of these traumatic experiences, Malcolm's mother became insane and entered a mental hospital, and Malcolm's sense of alienation from society increased.

But despite his rough childhood, Malcolm was an intelligent and promising high school student and hoped to become a lawyer. Soon that ambition was dismissed by his teacher as being unrealistic for an African American—she suggested he become a carpenter.

In 1941 Malcolm left school and went to live with his half-sister in Roxbury, the black ghetto of Boston. He worked two jobs, one as a shoeshine boy at the Roseland Ballroom and the other as a dining car porter, on the Boston-New York route.

Rebelling against what he believed to be a hostile white society, Malcolm became a small-time criminal, known as "Detroit Red," operating out of Harlem.

"I was a true hustler, uneducated, unskilled at anything honorable, and I considered myself nifty and cunning enough to live by my wits, exploiting my prey. I would risk just about anything," he said after being released from prison in 1952.

In 1945, at the age of 20, Malcolm was sentenced to seven years in prison for burglary. During his first year of incarceration, Malcolm continued to act like a delinquent—baiting guards, sniffing drugs, and raging against God and the Bible—earning him the nickname "Satan" from other inmates.

But with the help of a fellow prisoner named Bibbi who was literate and highly articulate, Malcolm learned to read the dictionary from front to back and began a correspondence course in English.

Malcolm's brother, Philbert, introduced him to the Black Muslim theology when he still was in prison. Further correspondence and visits from his family, along with his own reading, aroused Malcolm's curiosity for the Nation of Islam and its leader, Elijah Muhammad.

Quayle Quarterly folds wings

Magazine that kept 'watchful eye' on VP to end publication

The Hartford Courant

HARTFORD, Conn.—Tuesday's election results will end the run of the Quayle Quarterly, which has been bird-dogging Vice President Dan Quayle for three years.

The self-described "watchful eye" on the Vice Presidency has built a profitable circulation of 12,000, with subscribers in all 50 states and brisk newsstand sales. It combines mostly critical articles on Quayle's activities in office with a nearly day-by-day documentation of his myriad malapropisms.

Its creators are preparing a farewell issue with headlines such as "Democracy without Dan" and "Get a Job," are not exactly heartbroken.

"I realized that to think about Dan Quayle as much as I have is beginning to affect my brain," says Deborah Werksman. She edits the magazine with her husband, Jeffrey Yoder, from a spare room of their Bridgeport, Conn., home laden with 9,000 press clippings and sundry TV transcripts.

In fact, the couple had worried that a Bush-Quayle victory "would keep us in business," Yoder says, to say nothing of keeping in office a man they've been dedicated to hoisting by his own petard.

"It's often true that what's best for the satirist and comedian is not what's best for the country," he says.

Quarterly readers, a mix of hard-core political junkies and liberals looking for laughs, have learned about everything from Quayle's first love (from a columnist who attended high school with him) to "The First Vice President Named Dan," the despondent and drinking Daniel Tompkins, who was No. 2 man under James Monroe.

The magazine's 11 issues also served as a prime advertising vehicle for a sizable cottage industry in partisan Quayle-hunting paraphernalia, from a misnumbered Quayle wristwatch to The Dan Quayle Spelling Checker software.

Werksman, Yoder and their small staff of contributors spun off a derivative "Dan for All Seasons" calendar and just missed an April Fool's Day deadline with an "unauthorized autobiography" of Quayle published this spring.

Holding up a mocking mirror to Quayle brought the couple national television exposure, as well as lots of angry letters from what Werksman calls the "God what I've done to you school of thought."

It also put them at the core of a debate over whether conservative Quayle was merely maliciously maligned by liberal media moguls like themselves.

The Friends of Dan Quayle, a Washington, D.C.-based group promoting "a fair and balanced presentation of the vice president," could not be reached for comment Wednesday.

Yoder says the quarterly typically skewered Quayle with the facts alone. It even ran a front-page denial of the assertion by other publications that Quayle had wished to learn Latin for a trip to Latin America.

Yoder and Werksman started the quarterly in fall 1989, partly out of curiosity as to what Quayle was up to (they report he played golf 20 hours a week during recent summers), but mainly for laughs.

"We've had more material than we could use, all the way to the bitter end here," Werksman said.

Suspect sought in assault report

By University News Service

At 8:43 p.m. Wednesday, SIUC Police received a report of an attempted aggravated sexual assault. The incident occurred at 8:25 p.m. on the sidewalk between the campus parking garage and Parkinson Laboratory.

A male suspect approached the woman from behind and grabbed her by the arm. When she attempted to break free, he displayed a knife. A struggle ensued, and the suspect cut the back of the victim's hand and face. When she broke free, he fled into the parking garage.

The suspect is described as a black male, about six feet tall, weighing about 200 pounds.

(abortion coverage) will not be difficult to implement," he said.

Harvey Welch, vice president for student affairs, agreed and said he is waiting on President John C. Guyon's approval to begin the coverage.

He said approval may come after the University's lawyer investigates whether any legal problems may occur from requiring students who are morally against the issue to be required to pay for it as part of their fee.

Students pay $86 for fall and spring semesters for insurance coverage, Baggott said. They also pay an additional $78 for on-campus services such as access to the Wellness Center, Health Service, Student Health Assessment Center and dental coverage, equaling $164.

Guyon said the issue had not been pushed to the forefront of administrators' attention until recently because they have been dealing with budget issues, internal reallocations, long-range planning efforts and recommendations from the Illinois Board of Higher Education to sharpen focus and use resources more wisely.

GPSC Vice President Bill Hall said it is time SIUC adds abortion coverage to its student health insurance benefits.

"The only reason SIU students do not have this coverage in place as of this semester is because University administrators want to conduct additional legal research," he said.

"But we've been researching this issue generally for years and specifically since the public hearing proceedings in January and February."

He pointed out that other state universities such as Illinois State University, University of Illinois and Northern Illinois University offer abortion benefits.

"If (abortion) coverage is legal at these three Illinois public universities, how much more research do you want to do?"

Bonnie Crutchley, program supervisor for ISU's student health program, said student health insurance carriers are supportive of providing abortion benefits because elective termination of pregnancy is a relatively inexpensive health cost.

The average cost for abortion coverage is $250 to $280 for early termination.

Whereas, spraining an ankle can cost $300 for emergency room billing, she said.

ISU has included abortion benefits in its student health insurance coverage since 1972.

"Since, from a legal standpoint, a woman has the right to choose," she said, "this university is not going to attempt to legislate morality."

Title XI of the Educational Amendment of 1972 said universities that receive state funding and provide student health insurance plans may provide termination of pregnancy and recovery in the same manner and under the same policies as any other temporary disability.

A section was later amended by the Civil Rights Restoration Act of 1987 establishing "neutrality with respect to abortion."

The legislation said the title should not be construed to require or prohibit any public entity to provide services related to an abortion.

Bob Scholman, account executive for Byerly & Co., an employee benefits consulting firm for American College Health Association, said the decision to provide coverage for abortions in student health coverage is up to the University.

"What I think it boils down to is how much heat the individual campus can stand because (abortion coverage) tends to get out of hand," he said.

Guyon said the issue first will be discussed with Chancellor James Brown and the SIUC Board of Trustees before proceeding because of its sensitive nature.

a broken picture frame. The bed was nothing but a shell of metal and wire.

In Fremouw's closet hung clothes smelling like a barbecue grill when the fire is dying out. The clothes, which included a leather jacket melted and fused to the hanger, were too badly damaged to be of any use.

Fremouw, a senior who plans to graduate from SIUC in December, lived in the building for a year and a half before the fire destroyed the apartment she was only to have stayed in for another six weeks.

"I had everything I own here," she said. "All the furniture...they were my great aunt's. I had some things my grandma gave me.

"Insurance will replace lot of it, but it can't replace the things with sentimental value," she said. "Every little thing...it was my home, and now it's gone. This wasn't how I expected to leave Carbondale."

Laurie Schmitt and Sherri Wilcox were roommates in one of the apartments not damaged by fire as badly as Fremouw's, but smoke from the fire has ruined everything from the ceiling down.

The walls were coated with black soot. The ceiling ties sagged from water damage and had the same burnt smell as the rest of the building.

"Our clothes are ruined. Everything is ruined," Wilcox said. "Anything that could possibly be saved is not ours."

Wilcox pointed at a small table she owned. Even though the little unit was not damaged by the fire, the smoke had painted black spots all over the table which would never come off.

Wilcox and Schmitt, like many other former occupants of Building 9, will stay at the Knights Court hotel in Carbondale.

Wilcox said she has renter's insurance, which will cover her losses in the apartment as well as pay for the cost of the hotel until she finds a new place to live.

"This incident shows the importance of renter's insurance."

—Margie Morefield

Anyone without renter's insurance must pay the cost of staying in the hotel out of his or her own pocket.

Country Club Circle Property Manager Margie Morefield said the owner will pay for the cost of the hotel for two days as way of assisting the displaced tenants, but assistance for the residents ends there.

"This incident shows the importance of renter's insurance," she said. "Without it, you lose everything. It may sound callous, but without renter's insurance, it is more their loss than ours."

Fire Chief Cliff Manis said the cause of blaze was an electrical wiring problem in a suspended ceiling in one of the apartments.

"There was not a problem with the building in any way," Manis said. "Some thing like the light bulbs being overloaded could have caused the wires to catch fire. We looked at everything we could have looked at but we did not see anything out of the ordinary."

Manis said as far as he knew, the buildings in the complex are all up to current fire safety codes.

Morefield said even though the fire started because of a building related problem, there was no reason to believe that the other buildings in the complex are at risk of the same fate as Building 9.

"It's just one of those things that happen," she said. "We are in the process of doing electrical checks on the other buildings right now."

Manis agreed, saying the other buildings are not in any danger of fire.

But some residents in the other buildings said they were concerned the same thing might happen again.

In the building next door, SIUC senior Denise Bender lives with roommate Sarah Callow, also an SIUC senior.

"We've been nervous ourselves ever since the fire," she said. "How do they know if these buildings are in the same condition. I was scared to shut the door last night."

Callow said she drove home in a panic when she heard about the fire on the radio and experienced a sense of relief when she pulled into the building and see it was not her building on fire.

"My relief changed to sorrow for the people who lived there," she said. "I just think it is so sad."

Other residents of the complex donated clothes and food to their displaced neighbors.

"I've never seen so much generosity," Fremouw said. "The other residents brought bags and bags of clothes and food. If this were Chicago, I don't think we would've seen any help."

Fremouw said the immediate future holds a lot of confusion for her.

"Here you are, trying to get everything together to get ready for graduation," she said. "There is enough stress with finals as it is."

"Now we have the added stress of trying to get our lives back together."

give more attention to certain figures.

"It is the pattern of media in America to de-emphasize leaders with a nationalist orientation," he said. "Down through every century, there's always been one black public figure who's stood out from the rest, and Malcolm X wasn't the one."

Innis said he is fearful for the release of Lee's movie.

"Malcolm's greatest danger is the reconstructing of his image today—it could be a disaster," he said. "Projecting him and idolizing his philosophy is some kind of reverse racism."

"I think he's going to glamorize the criminal part of his life and create some social monster, and use the opportunity to glamorize black racism," Innis said.

He said he is afraid Lee will twist the history of Malcolm into a lie to make a more interesting movie.

"I think he wants to do more than just stir up controversy. I can very well see him preaching a distorted philosophy—I'm basing this on his character from 'Do the Right Thing,'" Innis said.

Terry West, a doctoral student in speech communication, said Malcolm is one of his rhetoric heroes.

"Some people believe Martin Luther King's message would not have been as strong without Malcolm X's," he said. "Malcolm awoke passion in people and presented an America that did like to hear about racial problems."

The time is right for a movie about Malcolm, West said.

"It surprises me that it's taken so long for a movie to come out about him," he said. "I guess a lot of white directors shied away from it because Lee has made the argument that you need a black director to do this."

West said Lee made the movie because he has a message to express to the audience.

"We have an awakened race consciousness in this country because of people like Lee," he said. "He's not just doing it to be radical; he sees it as a feeding of the broader, overall messages he wants to give out."

Gil Belles, professor of black studies at Western Illinois University, said luck was the key to Malcolm's significance in black history.

"He was in part a product of history—timing was why his ideas and personality developed into a legend," he said. "His intelligence was great and he brought it all together with the history of America and his followers rolled with it."

"The events surrounding him nurtured him, if he had been a different man in a different place, it might not have worked," Belles said.

"His vocabulary and speeches were directed toward the black community and it was not to bring in a coalition of whites to jump on the bandwagon like King," he said. "Malcolm was not concerned with that." Belles said he would rather have Lee make a movie about Malcolm than someone else.

"A black producer's interpretation has as much validity as a white one's," he said. "Lee probably feels he's in tune and has a lot more in common with Malcolm's approach."

Lee's movie most likely will be a big hit, Belles said.

"I think it's a sincere attempt to do a good historical movie on Malcolm X," he said. "And it'll get more attention, make more money because it'll be controversial—I'll go see it."

The Nation of Islam was founded in Detroit in 1930 by a mysterious peddler named Wallace Fard. Fard preached a message of black redemption and called whites devils, saying mankind began with the black race. He also preached that when judgement day arrived, all caucasians would be destroyed.

Within three years Fard had attracted about 33,000 followers. He not only established the Temple of Islam and created its ritual and worship, but founded the Nation of Islam.

When Malcolm was released from prison in 1952, he went to Detroit to become a formal member of the Nation of Islam, took the surname X and rapidly advanced in the in the Muslim hierarchy.

Malcolm found a wilder audience across the country, railing against the treatment of "so-called Negroes" in America. He rejected what he saw as the passive nonviolence expressed by such leaders as Martin Luther King, Jr., and had little good to say about their achievements.

Many of Malcolm's arguments are used as precedent for rusionians today, from the hip-hop political consciousness of Public Enemy to Arrested Development's songs about family values.

Malcolm's increasing popularity boosted his ego and caused a problem in his relationship with the Nation of Islam's leader, who ordered him silenced and may have called secretly for his murder.

In 1964, Malcolm resigned from the Nation of Islam and announced he would continue as a Muslim because of the ongoing civil rights struggle. He hoped to form a new house of worship which would be organized "to provide for the active participation of all Negroes in our political, economical and social program."

But on Feb. 21, 1965, Malcolm was shot down by three members of the Nation of Islam in Audubon Ballroom in New York City.

To the end of his life, Malcolm remained a black nationalist, committed to the spiritual and material elevation of black Americans.

Information for this story was taken from "The Autobiography of Malcolm X," which was written with the assistance of author Alex Haley.

about Malcolm X, and the motion picture finally will satisfy that need.

"Everyone knows about Martin Luther King—it's the first thing about black history that comes out of a person's mouth when you're growing up," he said. "Not enough people understand or know about Malcolm X."

Charlene Mitchell, executive director of the National Alliance Against Racial and Political Repression in New York, said both Malcolm and King made significant marks in history and should be praised for their achievements.

"I think they were both tremendously important people of our time," she said. "But I could compare Martin Luther King to Malcolm X as I could George Washington."

Mitchell said a new pride was instilled in African Americans by some of the works of Malcolm X.

"The movie could be a major contribution to his history, but I doubt justice will be done to him in the movie," she said. "If it isn't, it could be in some ways harmful."

"I think everything they've done is absolutely deserved—we needed them both because of their tremendous contributions," she said. "They both strived for civil rights, just one was headed in one direction and one in another."

Republicans opposed the bill than Democrats," Van Der Slik said. "It may be more difficult to pass the amendment in the near future because of the increase in Republican (state) senators."

"The greatest opposition was concentrated around the Chicago suburbs — and they'll have a lot more Republican state senators in office next year," he said.

State Sen. Ralph Dunn, R-Du Quoin, said many Republicans probably were not compatible with the graduated income tax concept, which states those with higher incomes pay more taxes.

He said a graduated income tax system only can be implemented via constitutional amendment, and approval of the amendment would have created such a likelihood

"I didn't think we needed to amend the constitution to have the state fund education more than it is now," Dunn said.

"We need legislation requiring the state to pay more than half of the state's education, but the graduated income tax doesn't seem to be very popular."

Dunn said Republicans may have voted against the amendment because of Republican Gov. Jim Edgar's public announcement prior to the election that he voted against it on an absentee ballot.

Hills expressed the hope that the impasse in the trade talks could be broken before the new tariffs actually come into force on Dec. 5.

The first tariff increases were expected to have an impact on about $300 million worth of European imports.

In a further warning volley, Ambassador Hills released a list of European products which might have higher tariffs slapped on them in the future, if the standoff continues.

The list represents about $11 billion worth of European products, including many manufactured goods and spare parts. In addition to white wine, the first increases would also affect some European grain products, including wheat gluten and rapeseed oil. Gluten is mainly used in pet foods. Rapeseed is used in processed cooking oil. Both of those products come mainly from Germany.

As he met his cabinet Thursday morning at the White House, President Bush said that he was not interested in starting a trade war, but merely wants to improve conditions for world trade.

President-elect Bill Clinton said in Little Rock that one of his priorities was in making progress in the trade negotiations.

The target of the American punitive tariffs, the government of France, tried to play down the impact. French Farm Minister Jean-Pierre Soisson called the American action parrunning since 1986, the year the "Uruguay Roe talks began.

Def Leppard rocks

Band to visit SIUC Arena to 'Adrenalize' Southern Illinois

By Casey Hampton
Entertainment Editor

Rock group Def Leppard asked in the first single released from its new album, "Do you wanna get rocked?" Next month, the band is giving local fans the opportunity to do so.

On the heels of its latest album, Def Leppard is revisiting the SIUC Arena on Dec. 12 at 8 p.m. in an effort to "Adrenalize" the Southern Illinois region.

The concert is entitled "Evening with Def Leppard," with no opening act scheduled. But concertgoers will get to view the performance in the Round—band members perform in the center of the Arena on a specially designed stage with the audience on all four sides.

Michelle Samoz, assistant director of Arena promotions, said Def Leppard, along with its stage show, remains one of the most notable acts on the touring venue.

"This is probably going to be one of the best acts out touring this year," she said. "I think this is keeping in line with getting some top-name artists here."

Def Leppard's hard rock success story stems from the 1983 release of "Pyromania," which sold 8 million copies, and the even more successful follow-up "Hysteria," which sold nearly 15 million copies.

It was during the group's 15-month "Hysteria" tour that Def Leppard first appeared on campus, in October 1987. With a similar setting in the Round, about 6,000 people crowded to see the show.

But life has not been all song and dance for the band since its worldwide success.

Upon the band's return from a three-year hiatus after "Hysteria," the members also are rebounding from the death of guitarist Steve Clark in January 1991 from a lethal combination of alcohol, anti-depressants and painkillers.

Clark's guitar playing is found on many of the tracks on "Adrenalize," but Phil Collen joined Def Leppard to take his place, simulating the sound of the band's trademark twin-guitar remaining songs and on tour.

Still widely received in the music industry with its already multi-platinum album, "Adrenalize" has lacked the strength to live up to its predecessor's eminence.

Brady Campbell, a salesman at Disc Jockey music store, said Def Leppard still is popular, but its notoriety in the industry seems to have diminished since "Hysteria."

"They've got a pretty steady fan base, generally of teenagers who usually turn over about every five years," he said. "Def Leppard has been out of the limelight so long that they're performing for a different generation now."

Campbell said Def Leppard created a stepping stone in the field of popular heavy metal when it first began that has warranted the success of ensuing hard rock bands.

"Def Leppard was the first pop-metal band, and they made groups like Poison, Mötley Crüe and Bon Jovi possible," he said. "But (members of Def Leppard) haven't changed—they found their formula and they're sticking with it. They haven't been treating new water."

Regardless, Def Leppard has opened a new chapter in its history, and the group is giving Carbondale a chance to take a glimpse next month.

Tickets for the "Evening with Def Leppard" concert go on sale Saturday at all usual SIUC Arena ticket outlets. Line reservation cards will be passed out at 8 a.m. at the Arena box office, with sales immediately following. For more information one may call 453-5341.

University dedicated the 1988 "Campus" yearbook in his honor.

A few years after retiring from SIUC, Shea began training for and competing in swimming events in his age group, including the World Master Swimming Championships and the Senior Olympics. Since then, he has competed in Japan, Hong Kong, China, Australia, New Zealand, Brazil and other countries and holds numerous world and national records and titles.

In 1989, Shea received the Luther Halsey Gulick Medal, which is the highest honor given by the 52,000 member American Alliance for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance.

In 1987, he received the Clark W. Hetherington Award, the highest honor given by the American Academy of Physical Education. Shea, a longtime member, served as the Academy's president in 1982.

In 1985, Shea received the Lindell W. Sturgis Award for public service. The award is the only award given by the SIUC's Board of Trustees.

Shea also has written four books. "Swimming for Seniors," published in 1986, has been translated into Japanese and German. Shea views "Ethical Decisions in Physical Education," published in 1978, as his best book. It is used as a textbook for graduate students across the country.

The Salukis have had two extra days to prepare for SMSU because of last week's Thursday night contest at Western Kentucky.

"It really helped to have a few extra days to prepare for their offense," Smith said. "They are so good they can kill you with different offensive patterns."

Last year the Bears came to McAndrew Stadium where the option attack ate up the clock, defense and the Saluki's undefeated record.

SIUC entered the Homecoming contest 5-0, but it failed to control the SMSU option attack and lost 17-13.

Kickoff is set for 1:30 Saturday at Plaster Sports Complex in Springfield, Mo.

Magic: Fears of opponents led to decision

Zapnews

LOS ANGELES — Magic Johnson claims that other players' fear of his medical condition prompted his decision to retire again from basketball Monday. He made the comment on ABC's "PrimeTime Live" Thursday night.

Johnson announced Monday that he decided to end his comeback attempt with the Los Angeles Lakers and retire once again. His stunning announcement came just four days before the start of the 1992 season and almost exactly a year after he went public with the announcement that he was retiring from pro basketball because he had tested positive for the HIV virus that causes AIDS.

Johnson suffered a cut in a pre-season game last Friday and noted the reaction from other players.

"You could see the fear on people's faces," Johnson told Chris Wallace of ABC. "Did he bandage it all? Is it all right? It's not leaking? You know, that whole thing."

Johnson said he was "helped out" by recent comments from other NBA players. Utah's Karl Malone and Gerald Wilkins of Cleveland were quoted in Sunday's New York Times as saying they had concerns about playing against Johnson because of the possibility that the virus might be transmitted through a cut.

Other days it was during the week when players would have to get up early that morning for class," he said. "It has not been a problem saving it earlier and more people have been able to attend."

The late night festivities are scheduled to start at 7 tonight in the SIUC arena. Admission is $1.

Former Pirate Scurry dies at 36

Zapnews

LAS VEGAS — Former major league pitcher Rod Scurry died Thursday at Washoe Medical Center, a week after an incident with Nevada police left him unconscious in an intensive care unit. He was 36.

A hospital spokeswoman said Scurry died around 3 a.m. Eastern time.

Police were called to Scurry's house last Thursday. They found Scurry outside his home complaining that snakes were biting and crawling on him. No snakes were found at the scene.

Scurry became violent when police tried to calm him and later stopped breathing as officers attempted to take him into custody for his own safety, a police spokesman said. CPR was performed until an ambulance arrived at the scene. Scurry was then taken to the hospital and placed on life support systems.

Scurry was a first round pick of the Pittsburgh Pirates in 1974. He compiled 32 saves in six years with the Pirates and also pitched for the New York Yankees and Seattle Mariners. He had a 19-32 record and a total of 39 saves in his eight-year career.

Scurry admitted drug abuse in 1984 and entered a rehabilitation program. He was arrested for cocaine possession in 1989.
