SIUC student rescues man from car fire

Jeff Piwnicki, Richard Bossert may be nominated for city hero award

JENNIFER WIG
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Jeff Piwnicki always knew he could be a hero. Piwnicki, a junior in business administration from Crystal Lake, helped pull victim Patric Gent, 43, from Gent's burning car early Friday morning on West Main Street.

The 22-year-old remembers seeing "The Outsiders" as a young child and thinking he could be a hero like one of the characters who pulls a child out of a burning house.

"I always thought that if I saw a house on fire I'd stop in a heartbeat," he said. "But you never think it's going to happen."

Piwnicki proved his bravery as he and his friend, Natalie Faris, were on their way home early Friday morning when they came upon the accident.

Gent left Mugsy McGuire's, 1620 W. Main St., driving west in the eastbound lane of Main Street before running off the road into a concrete bridge when his car burst into flames.

Faris and Piwnicki parked on the shoulder of the road and Piwnicki leaped out and sprinted toward the flaming car.

"Maybe for like three seconds I thought the car might blow up, but I just bolted," he said. "I was just reacting. I didn't even think about it."

A woman was yelling something and informed Piwnicki that someone was in the vehicle so he ran to the passenger door where Richard Bossert, another bystander, stood in shock.

Piwnicki and Bossert grabbed the passenger door frame and yanked it down before dragging an unconscious Gent to safety. Piwnicki described it as an adrenaline rush, allowing him and Bossert to bend the metal "like paper" and carry the man.

The pair mobilized him and waited for paramedics and police who informed the two that they might be nominated for a city hero award. Piwnicki was shocked about the ordeal and its effect on him, including the possibility of social recognition.

"I couldn't sleep [Thursday] night," he said. "Every time I closed my eyes I get these flashes, images. All I saw was yellow and red."

Faris, a freshman in anthropology from Crystal Lake, has few words about the incident, except those of pride for her friend and his quick reaction.

"It was surreal," she said. "I was worried that the car was going to explode."

Gent was released Sunday from the Memorial Hospital of Carbondale.

Flames engulfed the green car shortly after the two men pulled Gent to safety. Piwnicki said he was in shock for hours after the incident, too exhausted to think.

"It seems like a dream almost now," he said. "I try to think back on it and it's like a big flash in my mind. Right place, right time I guess."

NEWS IN BRIEF

CARBONDALE

Councilman struck by squad car, mistaken for suspect

City Councilman Brad Cole was hit by a police squad car early Saturday morning when he was confused for a suspect in an earlier incident.

Cole and another Carbondale police officer were chasing after a suspect who was throwing bottles onto South Illinois Avenue. Cole saw the suspect throwing the bottles and started to chase after him with the officer.

As Cole was running north on the west side of University Avenue and the officer was running north on the east side of University Avenue, the officer called for backup in a patrol vehicle. The officer in the patrol vehicle did not see the suspect, but saw Cole, who was close to catching the suspect.

The officer in the squad had mistaken Cole for the suspect and crossed into the sidewalk and struck Cole with his car.

Cole went to the emergency room, where he was treated and released with minor injuries. Cole had been down on the Strip observing the foot traffic associated with the bars. As of Sunday, Cole was stiff and bruised.

Parking officials announce lot changes and boarding restrictions

Repeated reports of close calls and speeding in the Lot 112 parking garage has led SIUC Chief Sam Jordan and Parking Director Brian Mager to install speed bumps and stop signs in the lower level of the lot the week of Nov. 20.

Lot 2 near Anthony Hall will be partially closed for the next 18 months for construction purposes. About 75 percent of the spaces will be closed until construction is complete. Alternate parking lots are Lot 10A and B. Lot 22 near Morris Library will lose six spaces because of repairs to the building. Alternate parking can be found in Lot 39 and Lot 6. Handicapped parking should not be affected. Anyone with difficulties should call Brian Mager at Parking Division, 453-5369.

Signs restricting skateboarding have been put up in the Brocway and South end of Fanner Hall. Recent complaints by pedestrians of near misses and instructors in the building complaining of high noise levels led officials to post signs in the area. Offenders will be fined $5 and may have their skateboard confiscated.

Undergraduate art show at Student Center

The Student Programming Council is sponsoring an undergraduate juried art show beginning Thursday. All full-time undergraduate students are welcome to submit entries. Pieces can be submitted from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Wednesday in the Student Center, Ballroom D. All work must be original. Juried pieces will be exhibited in the Art Alley Nov. 9 through Nov. 30. Five judges will decide which pieces will be shown. First through third-place awards will receive cash prizes. For more information, call 536-3393.

Native American activist to speak at Interfaith Center

John Bedonie, a traditional Navajo from Big Mountain, Ariz., is speaking at 4 p.m. today at the Interfaith Center, 913 S. Illinois Ave.

Bodonie is an activist who is protesting the relocation of his people by the United States government because of coal mining. The Navajo elder will also be addressing environmental and human rights issues. The event will be free, but a $3 donation is suggested.

Aviation society holds career day and banquet

Career Expo 2000 will run in the SIUC Student Center ballrooms from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. today. The program will feature booths and exhibits from over 30 companies including United Airlines, TWA, Delta Airlines, Northwest Airlines, Chicago Express and United Parcel Service.

The Aviation Banquet will be at 6:30 p.m. in the Student Center Ballroom D. Tickets for the banquet are $30 or $15 for students. They are available at the Student Center central ticket office or in the Aviation Department's record office at the Southern Illinois Airport. Both events are sponsored by the Aviation Management Society.

Ohio University enjoys peaceful Halloween

SARAH ROBERTS
DAILY EGYPTIAN

If the only things thousands of college students in Athens, Ohio, need to have a good Halloween party are a few costumes and each other, the question arises: Why can't SIUC do the same?

Athens, home to Ohio University, once faced problems similar to Carbondale's infamous Halloween activities. What began in 1974 as a two-hour takeover of Court Street, the Athens equivalent of the Strip, quickly escalated into full-fledged chaos two years later.

The scene in Athens in 1976 eerily resembled past Carbondale Halloweens, with students launching firecrackers, glass bottles and bricks at police officers, who in turn used tear gas and large wooden pellets to disperse the crowd.

But while SIUC was facing the National Guard in 1994, OU was organizing its Halloween into a city-sanctioned event. Likewise, while students in Carbondale wreaked havoc on the Strip this Halloween weekend, students in Athens were celebrating what has become a relatively peaceful event in style.

"There is nothing out of the ordinary," said one police officer to The Athens News. "It's just a regular block party."

Athens Police Chief Rick Mayer reported that 123 arrests were made over Halloween weekend, the same number of arrests reported in Carbondale. The difference? Carbondale's crowd peaked at 2,500 while Athens played host to nearly 30,000 party-goers.

Ted Jones, Director of Campus Security at OU, said a combination of organized events and a large number of battle-tested police officers were effective in keeping violence to a minimum.

"We tried to maintain a high level of visibility with both mobile and foot patrol throughout the weekend," Jones said. "I think the presence of police officers and state liquor agents really helped to keep any potential outbursts under control."

Unlike Carbondale, which begs visitors to stay away, Athens welcomes guests with open arms. Halloween is a much-hyped, highly publicized event that annually draws between 25,000 to 30,000 revelers. Live bands are booked to play from 6 p.m. to 1 a.m., prizes are awarded for original costumes, and vendors and fast food restaurants rake in enormous amounts of revenue, keeping a large majority of the crowd away from the bars and potential trouble.

This year also marked the first time that safety teams were utilized. The teams, comprised of volunteer citizens, gave directions to visitors and alerted police to trouble spots within the crowd.

Ron Lucas, the safety team coordinator, said that the teams were received by most party-goers and authorities as a positive step.

Carbondale City Councilman Brad Cole said Friday that he is in the process of reviewing last weekend's events and refused to comment on any of the Halloween activities until he is finished. However, Cole and other council members have not supported past suggestions to formally organize Carbondale's Halloween.

Questions remain about whether a structured Halloween celebration would be the answer to Carbondale's problems or whether SIUC students would be able to duplicate the success found in Athens.

Jones offered the most obvious answer.

"The demeanor of this crowd was nice and relaxed," Jones said. "The students down here are for the most part mature enough to celebrate responsibly."

Ancient holiday unites Indian community at SIUC campus

Festival of lights celebrates homecoming of king

CODELL RODRIGUEZ
DAILY EGYPTIAN

They wore dresses swirling with colors that lit the dim room, jingling bells and smiles from ear to ear.

The first dancers for Diwali, the Indian festival of lights, were only about two to three years old. While the actual holiday occurs Oct. 26, a festival took place Sunday evening in Student Center Ballroom D because it is the nearest weekend to the actual date.

The dance was the first of more than 10 that took place that evening. The young girls moved with bright eyes as adults sat at the bottom of the stage directing their steps. As they performed the traditional dances, they laughed every time they got to spin or jump.

The children were celebrating the holiday that recognizes an ancient legend in which an old king returned from exile on a night with no moon. When he arrived, he was greeted by his people with a row of lights in their houses, blanketing the street with a bright path.

Ed Gulick - DAILY EGYPTIAN
Young participants perform a traditional dance in celebration of Diwali Sunday afternoon.

Latika Lalvani, president of the Indian Association of Southern Illinois, said Diwali is the equivalent of Christmas. When the holiday comes the participants prepare by cleaning their houses and setting up lights throughout their homes.

"It's almost like we are welcoming a god," Lalvani said. "Even if we are in America, we follow the same traditions."

The DAILY EGYPTIAN, the student-run newspaper of SIUC, is committed to being a trusted source of news, information, commentary and public discourse, while helping readers understand the issues affecting their lives.

OUR WORD

Koehn right for SIU

Education and pumping new life into the Southern Illinois economy are the platform candidates for the state representative seat of the 115th District have decided to stand on.

Republican Mike Bost, who has held the seat for six years, and Democrat challenger Robert Koehn, a man many may feel is a long shot in this race, have different approaches to addressing these main issues.

After meeting with both candidates, the DAILY EGYPTIAN editorial board has determined that Koehn is the strongest advocate for SIUC. Bost seemed content to accept the status quo when it comes to SIUC issues, even at the state level, in fear that he would be seen as a micro-manager.

Although legislators should be careful about becoming over-involved in institutions of higher education, SIUC is the biggest business in this district and should be a major focus in the election.

Koehn displayed his commitment to stay informed and lobby aggressively for SIUC at the state level so he can assist when it is appropriate to do so.

Bost was a newcomer to the political scene when he took office six years ago, and he has come a long way in terms of experience. But we think that new ideas are needed in the 115th District seat and Robert Koehn is the type of candidate we would like to see in office.

Bost is a well-tuned politician who boasts his record of six years and the political networking he has established in Springfield.

Bost has made some progress in the establishment of employment opportunities for the citizens of Southern Illinois but has maintained a silent-partner relationship with SIU during the significant turmoil on campus during the past six years.

Koehn lacks experience at the state political level, but he has held a variety of administrative positions, from high school principal to superintendent of DeSoto elementary school. He is a strong advocate for improving the educational system, and who better to do that than someone who has been in the trenches for the past 20 years?

Koehn, an SIUC graduate, has had to balance a grueling schedule in order to campaign against his opponent. Whether it is waking at dawn to campaign at local coffee houses or breaking up fights at school, Koehn has become a master of time management.

As a part-time farmer, former factory worker and father, Koehn has first-hand experience of the difficulties that occur in Southern Illinois. Whether it is a lack of funding for local schools or a harsh summer that left many crops ruined, Koehn can relate.

Koehn is pro-choice, agrees with limited gun control and would consider adding homosexuals as a protected group from discrimination depending on the wording of the bill.

The DAILY EGYPTIAN endorses Koehn to represent the 115th District, but we do so knowing he is unpolished. At times, it is not easy to discern where exactly he stands on some issues. It is refreshing, however, that his indecision is clearly based on honest, ongoing deliberation rather than political double-talk.

We believe that if Koehn wins the election, he needs to become more authoritative and reflect confidence in his decisions made in Springfield. Strong stances have to be made on the statehouse floor and legislators have to advocate their positions actively. Although he will have to hit the ground running, we believe Koehn can become a strong advocate for SIU and Southern Illinois.

Watt's judgement has burned out

Any SIUC students who think their vote can't make a difference of that national and state politics aren't relevant to their lives should pay close attention to an item toward the end of the ballot tomorrow.

Beneath the presidential candidates, the state representative candidates and even the county board candidate is an easily overlooked section:

"AAA BALLOT FOR JUDICIAL CANDIDATES SEEKING RETENTION IN OFFICE"

Most voters don't even make it that far down the ballot, but, in this election, it's worth the few extra seconds.

Judge David W. Watt, who presides over the first judicial circuit, will now be held accountable by the electorate. Watt made headlines last year when he made inappropriate statements to State's Attorney Mike Wepesic in a sexual assault trial involving an incident in an SIUC residence hall.

"I find your comment ... that life doesn't happen that way — and this is not the first case like this we've had — and I don't think life does happen that way except in the dormitories of Southern Illinois University on Saturday night," Watt said. "It's too bad the parents don't make a surprise 3 a.m. visit on their son's or daughter's room. Because life does happen that way over there. That doesn't mean it's right."

The DAILY EGYPTIAN editorial board said then that Watt's comments were irresponsible. His attitude could easily deter SIUC women from reporting sexual assaults, subverting a diligent effort by Carbondale and SIU police to encourage victims to come forward. He seemed annoyed to be bothered with another sexual assault case.

Now we have the opportunity to examine his case to continue serving the first circuit.

We aren't the only ones re-evaluating Watt's fitness. The Illinois State Bar Association's advisory poll listed Watt as the only circuit court judge outside of Cook County who did not meet acceptable requirements for office. Illinois attorneys answered yes or no to several questions ranging from integrity to sensitivity. Most judges fared in the upper-90s in every category but only 44 percent of attorneys recommended that Watt be retained.

Watt may have once served our area well, but he has clearly soured on issues that citizens cannot afford to have a cynical judge deciding.

Everyone in the SIUC community who enters the voting booth Tuesday will have the opportunity to show Watt this University does not take sexual assault lightly, and we will not allow anyone who does to represent justice in our area.

Vote "no" next to Watt's name Tuesday. The harm that Watt brings to the bench exceeds any benefit he can offer the first circuit for the next six years.

When they come, which leader shall we take them to?

They've given us the lowdown on Social Security. They've talked Medicare into the ground. And yes, I've heard a thing or two about taxes.

But as a first-time voter, there's just one question I have for our candidates: how do you plan to deal with the possible annihilation

GEOFFREY
RITTER

Edge of the Known World
gmritter@hotmail.com

of Earth by aliens from outer space?

With Election Day just hours away, I feel this issue has been largely ignored by the various candidates. The threat is real, though; we've all seen "Independence Day," and we've all seen how this situation potentially could screw up a lot of things.

As president, I thought Bill Pullman did his job fairly well in the film — from rousing speeches to assessing the damage, he even found time to cry for his dead wife before heading an airborne charge against the space invaders. I know it's just a movie, but it does raise serious questions about our nation's leaders.

Should giant space slugs attempt to eradicate the earth in the coming four years — and I'm fairly certain this will eventually happen — I'm not sure which of our current candidates I would trust to lead the counter-attack.

Both seem to be more of the natural drone type, bowing to the whims of polls and talking heads, and I'm hesitant to trust the leadership of either. I'm sure both of them would oppose invasion, of course, but only if Gallup polls showed that at least half the American electorate was against having their organs harvested for fuel.

In the tightest presidential race since 1960, and arguably the most covered by the media, public-opinion polls have carried a great deal of weight with both the candidates and the voters. For the politicians, they are a measure of public opinion and a pillar on which to base their own political thoughts; for the voters, a vote can be influenced by the daily onslaught of statistics.

But in this election, we should be voting for a leader, not a follower. Of the 187 million human adults in America today, the average poll incorporates only 1,000 on average. Questionable results, without a doubt, and why the candidates put so much stock in them is beyond me. As a nation, we made the Backstreet Boys one of the most popular entertainers of all time.

We obviously need guidance.

I can attribute this brainwashing effect of polls to only one thing: aliens. The invasion has already begun in our political system, and it's only a matter of time until our entire population has its brains sucked out by sludge monsters and is enslaved, eternally forced to strip mine the earth for iron and krazax.

For whoever becomes the next president of the United States, there will be important issues to address — abortion rights, school reform, bans on concealed death-ray weapons — and we need a man who will step up to the plate, guts and glory and all. Not a man who follows the constant lead of numbers.

I live my life in constant fear. And all I'm looking for is a president who I know will be able to take care of business whenever the mother ship finally arrives. I'm not sure who I'm going to vote for tomorrow, but I do know one thing — I'm definitely not voting for Ralph Nader. That guy's an alien for sure.

One of those traditions is the food served for the holiday. These foods include Tandoori Naan, which is Indian bread. Those in charge of making the food spent the whole day preparing the feast, which had to satisfy the 350 people in attendance. While the food is traditional Indian delicacies, the types of food are made specifically for holidays.

"The food we are eating today is more of a luxury," said Aashish Lakhani, president of the Indian Student Association.

While the event was made to honor an ancient king, the holiday itself brings people together. Lalvani said she has celebrated the holiday many times along with nearly 100 Indian families who are settled in Carbondale, but was shocked at the abundance of Indian students involved and was glad to welcome them.

"I have never seen so many young people together," Lalvani said. "This is a joint effort to arrange this festival."

In an advertisement placed in today's Daily Egyptian, interim Chancellor John Jackson urges faculty to "exercise caution" when voting.

Jackson cites SIUC's wavering reputation in the ominous letter, warning faculty of the possible consequences a strike could have on recruitment, retention and the lives of students.

"Make no mistake," Jackson wrote. "A strike or the threat of strike by faculty will have an effect on the reputation of the University."

If a motion is approved in support of a strike today, faculty will have 10 days in which to actually "call" a strike. However, there are no time constraints for when a strike is officially executed.

The general membership meeting arrives in the wake of several mediation sessions that have yet to produce a faculty contract satisfactory to both the administration and faculty. The faculty bargaining unit is demanding higher salary increases and a commitment to replenishing depleted faculty lines.

Today's meeting was originally slated for late October but was delayed at the request of Federal Mediator Richard Kirkpatrick, who feared the meeting may affect the negotiation process.

"The only reason we extended the meeting was to give mediation a chance," Daneshdoost said, adding no major decision will be made without the entire union's input.

About half of all SIUC tenured and tenure-track faculty comprise the union.

Mediation is scheduled to resume Dec. 5.

SOUTHERN ILLINOIS UNIVERSITY
CARBONDALE

November 6, 2000

An Open Letter to the University Community:

I write today to ask that we each take a moment to reflect upon the future of our University and its reputation. Last week, referring to disturbances on South Illinois Avenue, the Daily Egyptian reported: "SIUC's reputation suffers another hit." We cannot undo these events, but we can, as I do, pledge to take whatever steps are necessary and appropriate to prevent a recurrence.

Also late last week, I learned that today the faculty will be asked to vote on the University's most recent collective bargaining proposal, and, if the University's offer is found lacking, to take a strike vote. These are major decisions to be made by the faculty. I urge faculty to attend the meeting, to exercise caution and restraint when considering a threatened strike, and to consider the broader implications of such a vote. Underlying my sense of urgency about these faculty decisions is my firm belief that there is a direct connection between our University's reputation, whether accurate or not, and our ability to recruit students and faculty. Stated another way, the threat of a strike, reinforced by an authorizing strike vote, will have serious and detrimental effects on the public's perception of our University.

While we have enjoyed some rebound in enrollment recently, our recruitment and retention situation remains fragile. Make no mistake, a strike or the threat of strike by faculty will have an effect on the reputation of the University. Such actions will influence discussions that parents have with their high school seniors over the holidays. Uncertainty may also influence decisions our continuing students make over the holidays about their future study. And the questions raised about the stability of this institution are also likely to inhibit our ability to attract new, high caliber faculty.

A strike by a university faculty is substantially different from a strike in private industry where the threat of strike is a normal and accepted means of forcing agreement. It is also different from strikes in the public schools where parents and students have no other choice for public education. Our students and their parents can vote with their feet. The public officials who support us will not be favorably impressed by SIUC being the only university in Illinois facing a faculty strike.

More immediately, a strike or even the uncertainty caused by a strike threat could cause major disruption in the lives of our current students. Such disruption could have both immediate and long-term effects. Our students are our future alumni, a group we look to for a lifetime of financial and other support. Our students' current well-being is important to both their and the University's future.

While faculty have the right to strike, they also have the right to refrain from such activity. My hope is that these choices are fully considered by faculty, and that the Association will return to the bargaining table with the resolve to negotiate an agreement which is mutually acceptable.

Sincerely,

John S. Jackson

one time, then you cannot repeat yourself. You have to do it effectively."

Koehn said Bost is perceived as being unbeatable in this election. He said Democratic leaders have decided to shift their financing to other legislative races they believe they can win.

Koehn said he believes there are special disadvantages to waging a successful campaign against a sitting representative. He said Bost is well-known, established and experienced in winning the 115th District.

Jennifer Lindeman, legislative assistant to Bost, said the whole campaign is being cut back. She said Bost is expected to win by a landslide, and scheduled advertisements are being pulled.

"This is not a normal campaign for us. Normally, we are fighting to the polls. This is different," Lindeman said. "We don't have to be as aggressive as in other years."

Negative advertising is something no one will see between Koehn and Bost. Koehn said he is unaware of attacks in this campaign from either side.

Briggs said there is a good reason for this. He said negative advertisements tend to hurt the candidate, not his or her opponent. However, he said he sees a trend toward negativity, especially late in the campaign season.

Locally, the Gary Forby-Jack Woolard scuffle for state representative for District 117 has produced comical, if only somewhat negative advertisements. One advertisement has Woolard's name being mocked by a sheep, and another has a Woolard look-alike being chased by dogs.

Koehn said he believes the Forby-Woolard race is heated, but it has not degenerated into something wholly negative.

"I don't think there is any name-calling or personal attacks," Koehn said. "It seems like they are going after each other's integrity."

Eric Kobesek, a freshman in elementary education at SIUC and a member of the Shawnee Green Party, said he is upset with the candidates' spending habits. He said campaign-finance reform is needed to stop the advertising wars. He believes the rising cost will make candidates dependent on the wealthy and on corporations.

"[I am] for public financing of elections. We need to bring it back to the people," Kobesek said.

Briggs also thinks something needs to be done to cut campaign costs and time. He cited England's system, which limits campaigns to three months before the election, and it limits the amount of money that can be spent.

and they dispersed without further incidents.

In the other incident, Saturday morning two unidentified people threw bottles at police from atop a roof on the northwest corner of Illinois Avenue and College Street.

Other than a few catcalls and remarks about "marital law" and "the Carbondale police state" flung at police in passing, no one seemed interested in confronting the police Sunday morning.

Doherty said he thought things were going well in terms of the atmosphere on the Strip prior to Halloween.

"This past week was just unacceptable, and we have to start over again," Doherty said.

Last week saw a significant amount of property damage associated with Halloween. Wednesday morning police resorted to tear gas to break up rioting crowds.

Doherty said everyone wanted things to calm down and return to normal. He cited good relations between police and the SIUC students on normal weekends in the past.

"I'd like to work back toward that," Doherty said.

Candidates neck and neck as E-Day arrives

ALEXA AGUILAR
DAILY EGYPTIAN

With the two presidential candidates in a statistical dead heat, Election Day promises to be a sprint to the finish.

Vice President Al Gore and Texas Gov. George Bush have bounced within a few poll points of each other in the last weeks of the campaign, and both have marched through battleground states with a dizzying pace in the final days before the election.

Illinois is now a battleground state again, after it was considered for weeks to be solidly in the Gore camp. Its 22 electoral votes could be a deciding factor in the 270 electoral votes needed to capture the White House.

Illinois returns as a battleground state for Bush, Gore

Mike Lawrence, associate director for the Public Policy Institute, said he thinks it is possible for Bush to win the White House without carrying Illinois, but would be "shocked" if Gore wins the presidency without Illinois.

Chicago tends to vote predominantly Democrat, while the collar counties tend to go Republican. This has the potential to cancel those votes out, Lawrence said, meaning victory could depend on the votes of the downstate region.

Because Tuesday's race is so painstakingly close, both Democrats and Republicans are gearing up for massive voter turnout drives this year. And although analysts have predicted that voter turnout will be dismally low again this year, Lawrence isn't so sure.

"I think it might be heavier than many anticipate," Lawrence said. "Because it is so close, more people will be convinced their vote can make a difference."

In the months after the spring primaries, many assumed Gore had bagged the presidency. His popularity surged after the Democratic National Convention and his selection of Joe Lieberman as his running mate.

But Gore has struggled with likeability and credibility issues. David Kimball, assistant professor of political science, said it is Gore's personality that has created such a close race.

"I think with a popular current president, a strong economy, and a set of typically Democrat issues, Gore would seem to be the most popular choice," Kimball said. "But as a candidate Gore hasn't inspired people, he is not exciting them."

Another problem for Gore has been doubts about his credibility. Gore's claims about inventing the Internet, paired with his exaggerations during debates, created doubts about his sincerity and truthfulness.

While Gore has struggled with personality problems, Bush has had to prove he can hack it

Gore is no bore for Democrats

Why should we as students vote for Al Gore this Tuesday?

The answer is simple.

He may not be the most interesting, but he has made many advances in the system to ensure access to affordable education in America.

Gore believes that making college affordable will help all Americans take advantage of the finest higher education system in the world and allow us to reach our potential in the 21st century. During the current administration, they fought successfully for the largest increased investment to expand access to higher education since the GI Bill. They have helped to make the first two years of college affordable to every qualified young person with the HOPE Scholarships, and made further education more affordable through Lifelong Learning Tax Credits. They increased Pell Grants by 52 percent, decreased interest rates on college loans, and have taken steps to lower the cost of repaying student loans. In addition, as Vice President Gore cast the deciding vote to create the Direct Student Loan Program, which has made student loans easier to access while saving taxpayers more than $4 billion.

As president, Gore has promised to build on these programs by increasing the maximum Pell Grant award and expanding the HOPE Scholarship program. However, the need to go further and create more opportunities for affordable higher education has not gone unnoticed. That is why Gore has proposed a National Tuition Savings plan that would allow families to save for their children's college education inflation-free and tax-free. He supports the president's budget proposal to make up to $10,000 worth of college tuition tax-deductible. He has also proposed life-long learning accounts that allow employers and individuals to put money away tax-free for qualified higher education expenses.

Let's vote for Al Gore on Tuesday and keep the tremendous efforts of this administration alive!

Ryan Burrus
College Democrats

It's easy voting Green

The presidential candidate who has the most to offer college students and the country as a whole is Ralph Nader of the Green Party. Many important issues have been skimmed over by the other two candidates. Unfortunately, these issues are ones that college students typically believe in.

Both Al Gore and Dubya wish to continue the present drug policy. This means more prisons, more prisoners, and even more criminals. Ralph Nader believes in the legalization of medical marijuana, the decriminalization of responsible recreational use and ending the ban on growing industrial hemp. Those who do have drug problems should be rehabilitated not incarcerated.

As far as the environment, Nader refuses to compromise. Despite paying lip service to environmental concerns, Al Gore has a very bad record. Not only has he supported global trade pacts that endanger workers and the environment, he is a major stockholder in Occidental Petroleum. This giant oil company is currently displacing native people off their land in Columbia so they can drill there. Gore is also personally responsible for allowing the use of an incinerator in Ohio even though he promised local residents he wouldn't permit it. Dubya has allowed industries to police themselves for pollution and look where Texas is today.

Ralph Nader is a firm believer in the reproductive rights of women. Dubya most certainly isn't. As a congressman, Al Gore routinely voted against pro-choice legislation right alongside the most conservative of the right-wing. In fact, he had an 84-percent pro-life voting record. In addition he voted in agreement with the appointment of Antonin Scalia and Clarence Thomas, both anti-abortion, to the Supreme Court. In his current bid for president, Gore has now adopted a more appealing facade to garner votes.

Next Tuesday, vote for Ralph Nader and Winona LaDuke for president and make a real difference.

Andrew S. Jackson
College Green Party

W. stands for a White House win

In this year's election, we as voters have a choice between candidates with very different opinions of best course for the country to follow. We will have the opportunity for a new president to set a fresh direction for government and for politics in general. The best candidate to do this is Texas Gov. George W. Bush.

For the last few years, Washington has been the site of partisan bickering with very little getting done for the American people. There is enough blame to go around for both political parties. It is time to say enough is enough. While Gore has helped preside over this partisanship in Washington, Bush has signed significant legislation on both welfare and tort reform. He has engineered measures for tougher education standards and more local control for schools in Texas.

According to the White House's own web page, Texas has "more high-quality teachers with smaller classes for Texas' schools, crime has fallen 15 percent, 496,746 fewer people are on welfare, health care for nearly 50,900 uninsured Texas children, more toddlers are being immunized, child support collections are up 178 percent, 2,005,800 new jobs, home ownership has increased in Texas, and 11 toxic waste sites were cleaned up." This was all accomplished under Gov. Bush.

Bush offers tax cuts to everyone who pays taxes, with six million low-income families no longer paying taxes. Gore picks and chooses who gets tax breaks based on who meets his qualifications for who is deserving.

This election is about restoring bipartisanship, about fostering government that will nurture a booming economy without getting in the way of American ingenuity. There is only one candidate for president who can do all that, and he is George W. Bush.

it as commander-in-chief. After he failed to answer a journalist's pop quiz about world leaders last spring, some wondered if his experience and understanding of the issues were enough.

Bush's gaffes have become notorious, like when he pronounced subliminal, "subliminal," and called Social Security "some kind of federal program."

But the debates swung surprisingly in Bush's favor. Though polls showed most Americans thought Gore "won" the debate, they were turned off by his performance.

"Bush got a boost from the debates. Expectations were low for Bush, and then Gore exaggerated again," Kimball said.

"If Bush wins, I think it's not going to be because people rushed to accept him," Lawrence said. "I think it will be because they rejected Gore."

Kimball said if Gore loses, his campaign will be second-guessed for not using President Clinton and his record more prominently.

Lawrence said Gore is in a tough spot. "There is the Clinton fatigue. But Clinton is very popular among the Democrat base and could help him," he said.

Kimball credits Gore for running an issue-driven campaign.

"This campaign has focused on more policy details than most," he said.

For people like Tina Sanders, a Democratic precinct committeewoman in Murphysboro, her only goal on Tuesday is to get as many as people as possible to the polls.

"As soon as I get off of work, I am going to start driving people to the polls who haven't voted," said Sanders. "This Election Day is going to close — we've just got to get them there."

LOCAL ELECTIONS

Illinois House of Representatives, District 115

Mike Bost

Political Experience: 115th District state representative since 1994; former Murphysboro city treasurer; former member of the Jackson County Board; former Murphysboro township trustee; Republican precinct committeeman.

Education: "Education is not a 15-minute sound bite issue. We have a disparity in the state. We've tried to work with the schools to provide equity. We've been able to work across party lines to try and achieve a lot of things as far as education funding."

Jobs: "We had created a very unfriendly business environment in the State of Illinois. We were not offering tax incentives to new industries to come and develop in Illinois. I've worked on reforms to try and expand business opportunities in the state and the Southern Illinois region."

Health care: "In a perfect world, we'd provide health care for everybody without raising taxes. That's not the case. What we've got to do is try to come up with some sensible plans that meet the criteria that pass federal guidelines."

Robert Koehn

Political Experience: Jackson County board member, 1982-1988; served as chairman, 1984-1986

Education: "Having been in education for more than 20 years, particularly as an administrator, I'd challenge anyone to come up with a problem that I haven't had to resolve, especially in dealing with it at the family level."

Jobs: "Are all of the resources being pulled together so districts can share in an economy that could provide 400,000 or 500,000 jobs to the region? It hasn't happened. As far as job creation, that would be my approach."

Health care: "We need to come up with a plan to make health care accessible to all citizens. That doesn't mean that everybody will get 100 percent, but I think if we approach health care from the preventive point of view it will become more of an investment that's going to return tax dollars to us eventually."

OUR WORD

Vote like you mean it - know the issues

The selection for the next leader of our country is down to two major candidates. Our current vice president and a former president's son have been fighting a battle to get to the White House since more than a year ago, and we, the citizens, will choose a winner tomorrow.

Al Gore and George W. Bush's appearances on television and on the road with buttons and slogans have picked up speed since the conventions this summer. Close political races coupled with high stakes inevitably have led to a circus of mudslinging and fierce attention to minor issues. Before the candidates entered the ring, a lull in the campaigning gave the voters, whether smitten by one candidate or horrified with both, the advantage of being able to become educated about our candidates.

Both candidates have long, revealing public records: Both have served in the military. Gore was a congressman and a senator before he was vice president, and Bush, who grew up in a political family, was well in view of the public eyes as a big businessman before he was elected Texas governor. Now that the Internet can bring the minutes of meetings, newspaper clips and biographies to any interested citizen, voters didn't have to wait for the televised debates to decide where the candidates stand.

If voters are educated before heading to the polls, they will go into the polling booth having evaluated the promises and accusations that surfaced during this deadlocked campaign. They will have understood the meanings and implications of the regularly used buzzwords like "campaign finance reform" and "school vouchers", phrases that can change meaning with different parties and politicians.

As Bush, Gore and other public and local figures prepare for the first election of the 21st century tomorrow, voters should be prepared. Our ability to vote is easily taken for granted in this country. As part of an educational community, SIUC students, staff and faculty have no excuse in ignoring their right and responsibility to vote knowledgeably.

When you walk into the voting booth tomorrow, do it with the confidence of an informed voter.

One of SIU's prized newcomers, sophomore wing player Toshiyoshi, was satisfied just to be playing again after spending a full year away from basketball competition because of NCAA transfer rules.

"There's enough balls to go around, everybody got a chance to shine and do their thing," said Harvey, who finished with six points, four assists and three steals. "Everybody went out there and played hard and got something accomplished. I think everybody's satisfied with what they did."

Weber joked that Harvey — who took a handful of questionable shots — still has more to learn.

"Shot selection is one thing he has to add to his vocabulary," Weber said.

But the exhibition game was a nice opportunity for the Salukis to start molding individual strengths into a cohesive unit. Schrader, a senior co-captain, was concerned with SIU's defensive effort, but likes the chemistry makeup of this season's squad.

"I think you can see we got a lot of guys who can put some points on the board which is good, but we got to stop someone," Schrader said. "Everyone has stepped up their roles, and I think everybody now knows their roles a little more in-depth."

SCOTT

"The past month has been real disappointing," Scott said. "Football is what I love and what I came here to do, and it's obvious that I haven't been doing it."

Although he has not practiced with the team, Scott is staying in shape in anticipation of an eventual return to football. But for now, it's a fruitless endeavor.

"It's like going to work all the time but not getting paid," he said. "Right now I'm just preparing to get as big and as strong and as fast as I can get to secure that I have a good future. I'm really focusing on myself because there's nothing I can do to help the team."

Scott has met with Quarless face-to-face a couple times since Oct. 7, but the gap between them has yet to be bridged. He said the coaching staff knows how to reach him if it wants to resume discussions.

"I'm not stopping myself from playing, they're stopping me from playing," Scott said. "If they want me, they know where to find me — they know I'm ready to go."

Scott, who has now missed four straight games, is arguably SIU's most talented defensive player. A quick and hard-hitting linebacker, he led the Salukis in tackles in each of his first two seasons. He pines to rejoin the team and resume his football career, but with just two games remaining in his junior season, he is not optimistic.

"I'm under the impression that the problem or whatever it is was solved," Scott said. "I don't make that decision, so I can't tell you if or when I'll return to the team."

Brian Hamlett, a Saluki wide receiver who was suspended at the same time as Scott, has since returned to the team. Looking back at his conduct during the Western Illinois game, Scott said the emotional atmosphere at the time contributed to what unfolded, but he stopped short of saying he regrets his actions.

"I would have handled some things the same way and I would have done a couple things differently," Scott said. "But what's done is done."

Before the meltdown on Oct. 7, Scott said he had a "pretty normal" player-coach relationship with Quarless.

"I don't hate coach Quarless, I don't even dislike him," Scott said. "I just don't agree with the situation. He has a lot of pressure on him, and that's how he chose to handle the situation."

Despite the hardships of this season, Scott said he very much would like to finish his college career at SIU.

"I want to remain a Saluki — I started at this school and I want to finish here," Scott said. "I don't help my team out at all by not playing, but it would be hard for me to let my teammates down that I came in with and just leave them."

"I'm still a member of this team under my understanding and I still support the team and wish my teammates the best. I'll always stay loyal to my teammates."

Scott has attempted to stay as upbeat as possible, and for the most part, he has succeeded. But he admits it has been difficult to stomach watching the Salukis (2-7) lose three consecutive close conference games without him.

Coming out of high school in his home state of Michigan, Scott received late recruiting interest from I-A programs such as Michigan State University and the University of Kansas. In the end, Scott chose the school that believed in him before the others: SIU. That he went out on a limb in coming to SIU makes the recent events all the more exasperating for Scott.

"It's like twisting a knife in my back," he said. For now, Scott sees few options in trying to fix what has developed into a nightmare detour in his college career.

"It's really hard, because I think I showed a lot of loyalty and a lot of commitment to this team," Scott said. "It's real frustrating that my junior year had to go this way when it could have went so much different."

I'm not stopping myself from playing, they're stopping me from playing.

Down 17-6 in the third quarter, Saluki special teamer JerMarsh Robinson jump-started the Salukis with a 100-yard kickoff return for a touchdown, the longest return in school history, to narrow the deficit to 17-12 following a failed two-point conversion attempt.

"He's an excellent special teams performer, if we could just keep him focused most of the time he can do those kind of things," said Quarless of Robinson, who also made two commendable defensive plays in the special teams department. "Just look in the media guide, we'll have a lot of records in there by the time I'm done, I just don't know if we'll win enough ballgames."

Robinson ignited a fire in the Salukis, as the defense — led by defensive lineman Bryan Archibald's two sacks — kept the Archibalds' triple option in check for the remainder of the third quarter.

On its next two possessions following Robinson's return, Potete marched the SIU offense downfield, resulting in a 28-yard Scott Everhart field goal and a 20-yard touchdown strike to flanker Steron Davidson, giving the Salukis a 22-17 lead entering the fourth quarter.

Potete was 10-for-18 for 111 yards and one touchdown in just a little more than one half of play.

"I was very impressed with his mindset, I was very impressed with the way he handled it," said Quarless of Potete's performance off the bench. "I think he understands what we're trying to address and he competed to the end, so I think it's very much a compliment to him."

However, the Sycamores took advantage of a Donnie Reeves fumble early in the fourth quarter and would score the deciding touchdown six plays later with nine and a half minutes remaining in the game.

The Salukis had opportunities and time to come back, but couldn't get the job done. The loss pins SIU in a tough situation, as it has to win on the road against Youngstown State University Saturday to avoid finishing last in the Gateway Conference for a third straight season.

Quarless was obviously frustrated at game's end again, and noted that he doesn't think he's had enough time to build the type of program he wants at SIU.

"I'll go on record to say this, I came here in '97 with 39 scholarships and my God people, you can't build it that quick, OK," Quarless said. "But no one mentions that, and I'm tired of the fact that no one mentions it."

As for the players, the past few weeks have been equally tough, but they haven't forgotten why they are out there.

"For this stuff to happen week in and week out, it is frustrating," Kobe said. "Winning and losing is part of the game and if you can't handle it, you shouldn't be playing."

SALUKI SPORTS NOTES

SIU drops two more tough MVC games

The SIU volleyball team lost two more matches this weekend to bring their school record losing streak to 11 matches. The previous record was eight which was set twice last season.

SIU (8-19, 1-14 MVC) also brought its Missouri Valley Conference losing streak to 10 matches when it lost to Creighton University (3-15, 15-10, 12-15, 6-15) Friday and was swept by Drake University (7-15, 3-15, 15-17) Saturday.

The game two win against Creighton was the first game the Salukis have won since Oct. 14 against Bradley University.

In the Creighton match, SIU set a season-high with 96 digs and had double-digit dig performances from six players.

SIU has three more matches remaining this season. The Salukis will play at Bradley University Friday and University of Northern Iowa Saturday before returning for a final Nov. 16 home match against the University of Evansville.

Korn to redshirt during upcoming season

ANDY EGENSE
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Sophomore forward Brad Korn has decided to redshirt the 2000-2001 basketball season to improve his physical development for later in his Saluki basketball career.

Korn

Korn played in 25 of SIU's 33 games in his freshman campaign last year, and contributed in many late-season games. The former Plano High School star has impressive skills for a big man, but lacks the strength and coordination needed to be as effective as he would like.

"Last year I should have redshirted, but the situation wasn't right. This year was a better situation for me to redshirt," Korn said.

Korn had been thinking about redshirting this season since last spring and has had discussions with the coaching staff since then. SIU head coach Bruce Weber thought it was logical for him to redshirt because a couple of SIU's newcomers are junior college transfers who can step in and play immediately.

Although the Salukis could use Korn's size, they will now have to rely on help from freshman Josh Warren.

"I did it because I think he's going to be better three years from now," Weber said. "We feel good about it and I think he feels good about it, we just have to help him (adjust) now."

Weber said a part of that assistance will be helping the 6-foot-9-inch Korn develop leg strength along with his footwork skills and continuing to try to add weight to his slender frame.

"It's going to be a hard year for him, but I think he sees the big picture," Weber said. "He's still 179 pounds and no matter how much he's gotten stronger he eats and eats, but nothing's happened."

Webster said a part of that assistance will be helping the 6-foot-9-inch Korn develop leg strength along with his footwork skills and continuing to try to add weight to his slender frame.

SIU women's basketball wins first of two exhibition games

JAVIER SERNA
DAILY EGYPTIAN

While exhibition games don't affect a team's season record, no college basketball team wants to lose one — especially its exhibition opener.

A feeling of relief must have overcome the SIU women's basketball team in the waning moments of its 76-69 victory over Slovan Bratislava, the Slovak National team, when senior Terica Hathaway buried two free throws and sealed the SIU triumph in its first exhibition game at the SIU Arena Sunday.

SIU allowed Slovan to stay in the game until the final 24 seconds when it grabbed the rebound from Adriana Taskova's failed three point shot — which would have tied the game. Sophomore Molly McDowell was then fouled with 17 seconds left and she made both attempts. Hathaway was fouled right before the buzzer and she hit both free throws to seal the win.

"I think the players were nervous," rookie SIU head coach Lori Opp said in general about the game. "I think you could see it out there, especially when some of our younger kids went in you could see the jitters."

Sloppy ball movement at times resulted in SIU committing 24 turnovers.

"We moved the ball too slowly... and that's something we're going to improve," Opp said.

But the Salukis made up for their shortcomings by controlling the boards, and by improving their first half field-goal percentage from 34.3 to 47.6 in the second half.

Opp acknowledged SIU as a team didn't shoot the ball well in the first half, but is quick to point out why she thinks that is.

"Part of that is because of the coaching staff. We've been so busy teaching that we haven't taken enough time to just flat-out shoot the ball," Opp said.

The Salukis dominated the boards, grabbing 46 rebounds to Slovan's 24. Sophomore forward Katie Berwanger led SIU in rebounds with 11 followed by senior forward Terica Hathaway's 9 and senior center Kristine Abramowski's 8.

Hathaway led SIU in scoring with 17 points. McDowell, who left the game in the first half after being knocked to the floor, returned to the game in the second half and ended up with 13 points and four steals. Junior Holly Teague and Abramowski both finished with 11 points.

Teague, who also had five assists, committed one turnover and one steal

The loss snapped Western's eight-game winning streak and prevented it from clinching the Gateway crown as it dropped to 8-2 overall and 4-1 in the league, while the Redbirds improved to 5-4 overall and 3-2 in the Gateway. Illinois State running back Willie Watts rushed for 170

Saluki season sinks to new depths

COREY CUSICK
DAILY EGYPTIAN

A few eyebrows were raised when backup quarterback Kevin Kobe started in place of Sherard Potete on Senior Day at McAndrew Stadium, but nothing could have prepared the 1,000 in attendance for the end result in the latest edition in a string of disastrous defeats.

A 23-22 home setback to previously winless Indiana State University proved quite fitting for the frustrating season on hand for the SIU football team Saturday in McAndrew Stadium. The one point loss follows two consecutive Saluki losses where they blew second half leads.

The Sycamores (1-9, 1-5) entered Saturday's contest with only 10 first quarter points to its credit all season, but the hungry squad equaled that total aided by a blocked Saluki punt minutes into the contest, which resulted in a Sycamore field goal.

Offensively for SIU (2-7, 1-4), Kobe struggled to get the Salukis in the endzone in his first collegiate start. The sophomore completed nine of 17 attempts for 71 yards with one interception in what Saluki head coach Jan Quarless called an "inconsistent" performance.

"I tried to go out there and just take what they gave me and I made some mistakes, and we just killed ourselves that first half," said Kobe, who was pulled with 1:49 left in the half for Potete. "I thought I did some things good, but I didn't get the ball in the endzone. That's the big deal, and I didn't."

Kobe said he wasn't surprised to get the call because he was taking reps with the first squad in practice last week.

"I wasn't sure until [Friday] night what exactly was going to happen and [Quarless] let me know," Kobe said. "It was Coach's call."

Quarless wouldn't elaborate on why he opted to start Kobe, other than saying "it was a decision we made."

After a month on 'sabbatical,' Scott wants to stay a Saluki

JAY SCHWAB
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Bart Scott came to Carbondale to make ferocious hits on the football field. But lately, the star Saluki linebacker has been reduced to a bewildered spectator as he helplessly watches his team crash and burn.

Scott has not played in a Saluki uniform since halftime of the Oct. 7 Homecoming game against Western Illinois University, when frustration led to a run-in with the Saluki coaching staff. Scott will not discuss the specifics of the incident, saying "we're still a family, and some things that happen within the family are kept within the family."

But he did say he has been surprised at how severe the fallout has been since the incident, after which Saluki head coach Jan Quarless placed Scott on what Quarless described as "sabbatical."

"I didn't think the situation was major at all, I think it was relatively minor," said Scott, who noted he has never had disciplinary problems before. "I've been totally surprised — never in my wildest dreams could I imagine something like this could ever happen."

Quarless has repeatedly declined to offer specifics about Scott's 'sabbatical,' leaving Scott's absence from the team shrouded in secrecy. Quarless did not return phone messages left at his office on Sunday.

Meanwhile, Scott has tried to focus on academics and take advantage of extra free time during the past month, but he has been

The SIU men's basketball team's first exhibition game had all the ingredients of an NBA game: rim-rocking jams, a fast-paced offense and not much defense.

The Salukis were able to distribute the ball evenly around the floor as four players ended the night with double digit scoring numbers, and two others added nine points apiece.

SIU head coach Bruce Weber thought his quick, athletic team played fairly disciplined. But Weber said that he will stress defense in the upcoming practices this week.

"We can get some points and get to the hoop, there's no doubt about that," Weber said. "Until the last four or five minutes, they stayed within the system."

Junior transfer Tyrese Buie was impressive and led all scorers with 20 points, while sophomore guard Kent Williams finished with 18 points, connecting on three 3-pointers. Williams scored all 12 of his first-half points in the opening 12 minutes.

Weber was pleased with Buie's performance, after having a few rough showings in practices prior to Saturday's contest. Seniors Abel Schrader and Joshua Cross finished with 13 and 10 points, respectively.

"Everybody did something a little bit that they should have some confidence," Weber said.

SIU shot the ball well from three-point land, connecting on 10 of 20 attempts. The Salukis were able to put all but two players in the scoring column.
