the spirit of the Sixties

STORY BY BRETT WILCOXSON

OF THE INTERNET.

With all the major events that took place in the '60s in the United States, at least one SIUC student is excited about this year's Homecoming theme "A Saluki Salute to the Sixties."

"I think the theme was a good idea," Colleen Kelly, a member of the Sigma Sigma Sorority, said. "It gives people who are competing in the float competition something to be creative with. There's a lot that went on in the '60s."

Tina Kofink, director of tradition for the Student Programming Council, said a lot of thought went into choosing this year's theme. "We chose that ('A Saluki Salute to the Sixties') because it's also Saluki Family Weekend, and a lot of people's parents were in school during that time," she said. "So we thought it would be a fun theme for everybody."

Kofink added that the theme is a way of linking all of the Homecoming events.

"It's to set a theme for all of the weekend's events," she said.

"And people can do whatever they want in relation to the '60s."

While the theme is important for many Homecoming participants, for others it is not. Nadine Lucas, administrative aide at the SIUC Alumni Association, said Homecoming is an event alumni look forward to regardless of the theme.

"I think it's probably the biggest weekend of the year for alumni coming back," she said. "It means about everything to the graduates of older years. They come back and renew acquaintances and show loyalty. It's about people who had a great time at SIUC and are coming back."

Lucas said her association will be available Saturday before the Homecoming football game to greet returning alumni.

"We'll have the big Alumni tent near the stadium where we give free lunch to alumni," she said.

"There will be a representative from most of the colleges on hand."

While alumni events began Thursday, Kofink said student-oriented festivities will begin tonight.

"We are doing a fireworks bonfire pep rally for Friday at 8 p.m. in the Abe Martin Field," she said.

"We're going to have the bonfire, the Saluki Shakers, the Saluki Cheerleaders, and the football coach (Jan Quarless) is going to introduce the team and give a little speech."

This year will mark a change in the way the crowning of the court is done.

"We're going to crown the Homecoming queen and king at the rally," Kofink said. "Usually we crown them during halftime of the football game, but we think the students will enjoy it more if we do it at the bonfire. This is the first year it has been done here (at SIUC) like this."

Kofink said this change is being enacted to make the event more community-oriented. Also, because this weekend is also family weekend, the Family of the Day winner will be announced during halftime, so there would not be enough time to do both events.

Most components of Homecoming will not change this year, and the competitive nature of the parade is one of those things.

Kelly said the Tri Sigmas have teamed up with the Sigma Pi fraternity.

The parade will wind through town at 9:30 a.m. Saturday.

"I think our theme revolves around when the U.S. first landed on the moon," she said.

"I think we're also going to have a collage of people skating around the float in '60s diner outfits, and we're also going to tie in SIUC by putting Pulliam clock tower on the float."

Kelly said her organization's float has a good shot at winning, because the Sigma Pi fraternity has been the champions the past four years.

"We're going to try real hard to help them make it five in a row," she said.

At least one opposing group hopes Sigma Pi doesn't extend its winning streak.

Tony Blood, president of the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity, said his fraternity had a lot of trouble with conceptually tying in SIUC with the '60s, but he thinks they have a shot at winning the float competition anyway.

"We were frustrated because we weren't sure what they wanted," he said. "There's so much more we're familiar with to work with on a national scale than on a Southern Illinois scale."

Blood said his fraternity's theme will focus on the well-known events of the '60s.

"Our float is going to be divided into four sections, a Vietnam reenactment, the JFK assassination, The Beatles and another section that is yet to be decided on," he said.

While the fraternity's float does not have a planned SIUC connection, Blood said he thinks it will appeal to people from all over who come to the parade.

"It'll work unless the crowd are all SIUC grads from the '60s," he said.

Homecoming will provide a good time for many SIUC affiliates, and Kofink said that is what the weekend is all about.

"It's a time for the students, the alumni and the community to get together and enjoy school spirit," she said.

Fireworks to light sky after pep rally

BRIAN EBERS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

This year's bon fire and pep rally will have three new events tonight, making it one of the most exciting SIUC Homecoming events, a Student Programming Council member says.

Amy Kuhlmann, a graduate student in education administration and higher education from Cripple Creek, Colo., is an SPC graduate assistant who assisted with the development of the pep rally.

"We have some new things this year that will help people become excited about the game and stay excited," Kuhlmann said.

The festivities begin at 8 tonight with the lighting of the bon fire at Abe Martin Field.

Tina Kofink, a senior in radio-television from Villa Park, helped SPC obtain staging from the Student Center to be used in the pep rally.

"This is the first time we've had a stage," Kofink said. "We plan to have the cheerleaders, the Saluki Shakers and coach (Jan) Quarless all on the platform."

"Also we will have coronation (of the Homecoming king and queen) for the first time ever at the pep rally."

Kuhlmann said the early coronation, which traditionally takes place at Saturday's football game, will give the king and queen a longer time to reign.

"Normally everyone knew who the king and queen were before the football game anyway because they were in the Saturday morning Homecoming parade," Kuhlmann said.

Immediately following the coronation, a first-ever fireworks display will take place. Melrose Pyrotechnics Inc., owned by an SIUC alumnus from Indiana, will light up the $5,000 display before everyone goes home.

"Everyone likes fireworks from young children to senior citizens," Kofink said. "It should provide a great atmosphere for everyone to go home and return excited for the next day's festivities."

Ceremony scheduled to honor alumni

RYAN KEITH
DE SPORTS EDITOR

SIUC Alumni Association Executive Director Ed Buerger sees SIUC as a springboard to a career in any field, and he hopes recognition of the school's most successful alumni can prove that point to SIUC students.

Ten of the most successful people ever to graduate from SIUC will be honored for their achievements as the inaugural Distinguished Alumni Class by the SIUC Alumni Association this weekend.

The 10 alumni will be honored with a plaque on a memorial wall in the Recreation Center following an official ceremony at 2:30 today in the Alumni Lounge at the Recreation Center.

"The Association has always taken great pride in the accomplishments of its alumni," Buerger said. "But we've never honored them (the distinguished alumni) at the level we hope to now."

Included in this year's class of SIUC Distinguished of Alumni are:

• Marcia Bullard — Bullard graduated with a degree in journalism in 1974. She is the president and CEO of USA Weekend magazine in Washington, D.C.

• Roland W. Burris — Burris graduated with a degree in political science in 1959. He served as the attorney general for the state of Illinois from 1991 to 1995. He is a managing partner in the Jones, Ware and Grenard law firm in Chicago.

• Ted Cunningham — Cunningham graduated with a degree in management in 1968. He is the executive vice president of Chrysler Corporation and CEO and president of Chrysler Mexico.

• Dennis Franz — Franz graduated with a degree in theater. He is a two-time Emmy-award winning actor who portrays Det. Andy Sipowicz on ABC's "NYPD Blue."

• Walt Frazier — Frazier entered the NBA in 1968. He was honored as one of the league's 50 greatest players last winter. He is a broadcaster for the New York Knicks.

• Bob Gower — Gower graduated with a bachelor's degree in 1958 and a master's degree in chemistry in 1960. He is the president and CEO of Lyondell Petrochemical Co. in Houston.

• Arnette Hubbard — Hubbard graduated with a degree in chemistry in 1957. She was only the second woman in modern history to serve as president of the SIUC Alumni Association. She is a former commissioner with the Chicago Board of Elections. She is a circuit court judge in Chicago.

• L. Eudora Pettigrew — Pettigrew graduated with a master's degree in 1964 in rehabilitation counseling and a doctorate degree in education psychology in 1966. She is president of State University of New York College at Old Westbury.

• Ken Pontikes — Pontikes graduated with a degree in marketing in 1963, and he died in 1994. He was the founder, president and CEO of Comdisco, Inc. of Chicago.

• Judith Roales — Roales graduated with a degree in journalism in 1965. She is the executive vice president and general manager of the St. Petersburg Times.

This group was selected by a committee of five members, including three members of the Association's national board of directors, an alumni chapter representative and a Student Alumni Council officer.

While the induction is intended to honor and respect each inductee, Buerger said the wall should have a positive effect on the student population.

"You say to yourself, 'They got their start here,'" Buerger said. "They walked through Thompson Woods just like I did."

The honor also is intended to give the school's faculty a sense of appreciation and to motivate them to help produce additional successful alumni, Buerger said.

The idea for the recognition began last winter, largely because of the efforts of the Association and Bill McMinn, director of Intramural-Recreation Sports at the Recreation Center.

The association set up a display for Homecoming in the Recreation Center two years ago, and McMinn saw a great amount of interest and decided to work on a permanent display.

Four of the 10 inductees will be returning for the ceremony. Greg Scott, director for public and alumni relations for the association, said Pettigrew, Hubbard, Burris and Bullard will return to Carbondale.

Buerger said the inductees' return shows that they care about the school.

"The one thing about an alum is that you're always going to be SIU," Buerger said. "There may even be days when you wish you weren't, but you're always going to be SIUC. And these people are SIU."

Tailgate coordinators expect thousands to attend event

TAMEKA L. HICKS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Emptying beer cans, devouring barbecue and just plain having fun before the Homecoming football game have been traditions for 11 years at SIUC. However, this year's tailgating plans include more than filling tummies and getting drunk.

Greg Scott, director for public and alumni relations for the SIUC Alumni Association, said that because tailgating usually reaches an attendance of more than 3,000 people, the SIUC Alumni Association has expanded one of its tents by 2,200 square feet to increase student-alumni interaction.

The Alumni Association has two tents, one tent for door prize registration and the larger tent, which is 80 feet by 140 feet, to accommodate tables for each academic college unit within the University. Tents will be located east of the McAndrew Stadium following the 9:30 a.m. Homecoming parade Saturday.

"This is a great tradition for this University because it's grown every year," Scott said. "And we want to provide a great atmosphere."

The atmosphere of the pre-game event is electric, with complimentary lunches, door prizes and University representation.

Along with University representation, Scott said alcohol will be present, but he said under-age drinking problems are not expected because each person will be asked for identification.

Brian Johnson, a junior in radio-television from Los Angeles, said that during Homecoming he tailgates and visits the alumni tent before the football game.

"I've participated in tailgating about three times, and everyone just shares their food and drinks," Johnson said. "We just chill out and walk around to the different tents. It's a lot of food."

TAILGATING

• Activities begin east of McAndrew Stadium after the 9:30 a.m. parade Saturday.

• People can bring their own alcohol, but glass bottles and kegs are prohibited.

• Beer will be sold in the Alumni Association tent.

Showing pride, spirit at Eboness pageant

COMPETITION:

African-American women showcase talent.

TRACY TAYLOR
DE CAMPUS LIFE EDITOR

In an attempt to get out of her dorm room, showcase her talent and show her Homecoming spirit, Ebony Berry is competing in the 26th annual Miss Eboness pageant at 8 p.m. Saturday in Shryock Auditorium.

Berry, a freshman in psychology from Peoria, said she found out about the pageant, filled out an application, auditioned and the rest is history.

"It's a lot of fun, but it is also a lot of hard work," she said. "We practice our acts every day from 6 to 10 p.m. But practice makes perfect, and it just gets better and better every time we practice."

While the traditional Homecoming activities are geared toward a variety of students, the Miss Eboness pageant gives African-American students a chance to show pride in their heritage during Homecoming. The pageant is sponsored by Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, Inc.

Armeicia McGrew, a senior in psychology from Dolton and a contestant in this year's pageant, said her love for performing and reflecting a positive image are reasons she is participating.

"I believe it is important because it gives black women a chance to show their talent and let it be known that they can do positive things," she said. "I've been to the previous three pageants, and it made me want to be a part of it. I just looked at them and said, 'I could do that.' And I wanted to do it before I graduated."

Laketta Caldwell, a junior in speech communications from Paducah, Ky., said the pageant gives women a chance to perform and be elegant at the same time.

"Not only does it give me a chance to perform," she said, "but it gives me the opportunity to work with intelligent, black females that I probably would not have met had I not been in the pageant."

Homecoming king, queen to be presented at pep rally

CHANGES: Candidates judged by distinguished panel of judges.

TRACY TAYLOR
DE CAMPUS LIFE EDITOR

Instead of the traditional crowning of the Homecoming king and queen at the big game, this year's Homecoming candidates will be presented Friday night at the bonfire and pep rally.

Tina Kofink, the director of Homecoming activities, said the original reason for the change in days was because this year, the SIUC family of the year was to be named the same day.

Kofink said the crowning day is not the only difference in this year's king and queen competition.

"We wanted to increase participation this year, so we changed it so you didn't have to be sponsored by a Registered Student Organization," she said. "And instead of preliminary voting, we had a distinguished panel of judges to interview all of the candidates, and the ones with the highest scores went into the court."

The panel of judges included faculty, staff, students and alumni. Although Kofink said the new process was a good idea, Robyn Obert, a junior in biochemistry from Quincy and a member of the court, said the judging made her nervous.

Obert said she is glad the winners will be crowned the night before the game so her nerves will be calmed.

"I'd almost rather know before the game," she said. "It will be better that way so I don't have to be anxious for an extra day."

Obert decided to run because of encouragement from her Delta Zeta sorority sisters.

She said her involvement as a student life adviser this summer also encouraged her to compete as Homecoming queen.

Jane Starkweather, a junior in English from Carbondale, entered the competition because she thought it would be fun to represent the student body.

She said that if she wins, she does not want to take the title lightly.

"I'd like to plan some community service projects and make appearances at SIUC functions," she said. "I just want to represent the student body positively as a whole."

These are the 10 candidates for king and queen:

Shannon Biby, a junior in journalism from Rockford; Casey Faye Mills, an undecided freshman from Murphysboro; Sara Ann Walz, a senior in psychology from Naperville; Michael Beam, a graduate student in art from DeSoto; Tony Blood, from Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity; Donald Gibbs, a senior in management from Princeville; Scott Knudsen, a senior in administration of justice from Plynouth; Nader Zane Rabie, a senior in physiology from Carbondale; Robyn Obert, a junior in biochemistry from Quincy; and Jane Starkweather, a junior in English from Carbondale.

Greeks, officials differ on effects

SURVIVAL: Fraternity members contend plan will hurt membership, damage social structure.

WILLIAM HATFIELD
DE POLITICS EDITOR

(Editor's note: This is the third story in a five-part series exploring the issues of Select 2000. The first stories can be read on-line at <http://www.dailyegyptian.com>.)

Former greek leaders and administrators paint a vastly different picture of how Select 2000 will affect membership in the SIUC greek system than the current greek leaders and some members.

Administrators and former greek leaders point to a system in which greeks will recruit better students who will revisit the values and standards upon which their national organizations were founded.

But some greek members say Select 2000 could damage the greek social structure and cause a decline in membership.

Select 2000 is a nine-part initiative for the greek system that includes maintaining higher grades; making chapter houses alcohol and substance-free; and requiring hours of community service for greeks.

SIUC is one of four schools in the country chosen to pilot the program.

Select 2000 makes all chapter houses, on and off campus, substance-free beginning fall semester 1998. This year fraternity houses cannot sponsor or conduct social events that include alcohol, but members of legal age may drink in their rooms.

Nick Dodd, Interfraternity Council president, said eliminating parties with alcohol and forbidding alcohol from chapter houses will cause potential members not to join.

"If the area of social outlets doesn't get addressed, this could hurt the greek system," Dodd said. "A lot of people don't understand the good qualities and good aspects outside the social area until they get involved in the greek system."

"They don't understand the brotherhood, the leadership ability. They don't understand it can help you in school. They just see the social outlet like a lot of people do."

Katie Sermersheim, assistant director of Student Development, said Select 2000 will make greeks live up to the standards set by their nationals and that it will not detrimentally affect enrollment in the greek system.

"It depends who you talk to and

Marchers to take back night

TRACY TAYLOR
DE CAMPUS LIFE EDITOR

Leena Barta said she is "taking back the night" to heighten the awareness of sexual and physical abuse against women and children in Southern Illinois.

Tonight's annual Take Back the Night Rally is part of this week's Women's Safety Week activities. The march is sponsored by the Women's Center Rape Action Committee, 408 W. Freeman St.

Women's Safety Week
No. 3 of 7

Barta, a graduate student in psychology from Texas and an employee at Women's Services, said she got involved in the march because of her interest in women's safety.

The march will begin at 7 tonight at the Interfaith Center, 913 S. Illinois Ave., and proceed downtown to the Carbondale Pavilion.

"It's a candlelight vigil and a peaceful demonstration," Barta said. "We want people to know that they can report sexual assault, and they will be believed. I want people to know if they have been assaulted that they will be listened to."

Barta said people are encouraged to bring candles and flashlights as a symbol of freedom for women at night. She said that traditionally, women have been trained to be afraid of the night.

"It is a symbol that the community is watching," she said. "We're lighting the night and darkness with our awareness."

Carbondale Police Chief Don Strom, a guest speaker for the march, said it brings a strong, positive message to the community.

"The rally sends the message that we are all united, and we want to make the community safe for women and children," he said.

There also will be speakers this year who will address sexual assault against children and domestic violence.

Sexual assault survivors are invited to wear arm bands to show that they are recovering from violence.

"Taking back the night means we want to take our personal space back," Barta said. "We want to demand our personal safety and space outside, in our homes and in our workplaces."

With hammers pounding and saws cutting wood, the SIUC Student Alumni Council is turning a flat-bed trailer into a large float for Saturday's Homecoming parade.

The parade, which will feature 16 floats, steps off at 9:30 a.m.

The SAC has been participating in the Homecoming parade since 1976 and looks forward to building the Homecoming float every year.

In accordance with this year's Homecoming theme "A Saluki Salute to the Sixties," the SAC float is based on the show "American Band Stand," and the whole flat bed will be a huge TV set. Those watching the parade will be looking at the show.

The float also will feature songs from the '60s, and the members of the club will be dancers from the show. The band "Three Dawg Night" will be played by the Saluki Dawgs.

The Dawgs and their owners have been on the SAC float for the past five years.

Melissa Pearson, a sophomore in environmental engineering from Rockford and special events chairwoman for the club, said she is glad that the SAC gets to have the University's mascot on its float.

"The Dawgs play a role in our float," she said. "We never have had problems with them."

Jill Manka, a graduate student in marketing from Rantoul and vice president of external affairs, said the end product will be a great accomplishment.

"After spending a lot of time on the float,

Students' puppy love often is short-term

I had another column ready to go this week, but a conversation I had Tuesday night forced a last-minute substitution. My good friend Bryan has been in Carbondale for a long time. I had the pleasure of working with him at trash production factory in the Quads in 1992. Believe me when I tell you that Bryan has a lot to say about Carbondale and SIUC.

We were at an illegal Carbondale house party, talking about this very column, when I asked Bryan what he would most like to see in my column.

"Write about stray dogs, guy..." he answered.

I have to admit, I was impressed. Most people I talk to about my column are quick to provide me with a plethora of dogmatic issues to tackle. While these topics are generally broad-based, they usually do have one thing in common — a reoccurring theme of personal human oppression usually involving that individual directly.

Not my pal Bri, though. Bryan thinks that it is extremely important that everybody realizes the responsibility associated with having a dog. So do I.

Bryan owns two strays. His first, Buddy, is just that. When I first saw him, only two days after Bryan rescued him from a Texas expressway, he looked like a little rat. At 6 weeks old, Buddy had no hair, and the medicine Bryan used to treat his mange smelled quite terrible. Throughout his whole ordeal (an ordeal the dog doctor said Buddy had a very slim chance of surviving), this little dog was an inspiration. His will to live — coupled with Bryan's heroic actions — have assured Buddy a long and happy life. Unfortunately, Buddy is a rare exception.

College students are notorious for dumping dogs. I'm not trying to label anyone as irresponsible, but it is easy to understand how attractive the idea of having a dog is to so many students. It also is easy to understand how cumbersome that same dog can become when it's time to move.

Some students believe that dropping a pet off at the humane shelter is a guarantee that the dog will be adopted into a good home. This couldn't be further from the truth. In fact, the day that animal is dropped off at the shelter, a race against the clock begins. Most humane shelters keep strays less than one week before destroying them. Considering this, most strays have a better chance of living a little longer outside captivity.

The most important thing Bryan would like people to consider is adopting strays. While it is true that a cute little puppy is adorable, there are innocent dogs on death row who will die waiting to be adopted. If you are considering acquiring a dog, please contact the Humane Shelter.

Finally, I would like to thank Bryan for bringing this message to the attention of our readers. Dogs can certainly provide a special kind of fulfillment that no other pet seems to offer. Every time I look at little Buddy, I'm reminded of this.

Homecoming events not limited to football

THERE IS MUCH MORE TO AN SIUC Homecoming than football and parties. It is a tradition for students, returning alumni, area residents and visitors to turn out in force to attend a yearly medley of parades, tail-gate parties and football games. But while everyone anticipates Homecoming staples, this weekend's other offerings should not be overlooked.

Taking in dinner and a show is what many would consider an unconventional way to start Homecoming festivities. Getting a group together to attend the opening night of "Arcadia" is sure to also provide some alternative entertainment. "Arcadia," a play revolving around a love story set in 1809 and in the present, will be presented at 8 p.m. Friday at McLeod Theater in the Communications Building. Tickets are $5 for students and $10 for the general public. For more information, call the SIUC Theater Department at 453-5741.

For those wanting to start the weekend with a little more sizzle, Friday's 8 p.m. Saluki Bonfire and Pep Rally are another avenue of choice. Sponsored by the Student Programming Council, the event will feature music and fireworks at Abe Martin Field. Contact SPC at 536-3393 for more information about this Homecoming event.

SATURDAY MORNING COME OUT AND SUPPORT another Saluki team as the men's and women's cross-country teams sponsor their 22nd annual Saluki Invitational. The women's team is going for its fifth-consecutive Invitational title, while the men's team has won four out of the last five invitatorials. Besides the Salukis, 14 teams from other schools will be represented at the meet, which will be just west of Abe Martin Field. The excitement begins at 10 a.m. for the women's team, and at 10:35 a.m. for the men's team.

AFTER THE FOOTBALL SALUKIS DEMOLISH Southwest Missouri State during Saturday afternoon's 1:30 p.m. game, celebrate by taking in some of SIUC's nighttime entertainment before heading out to party. If you missed "Arcadia" Friday, catch it at the same time and place Saturday night. But if you need some stand-up comedy laughs, check out comedian Cary Long at the Student Center Ballrooms for only $3.

Another entertainment option during Homecoming weekend is Alpha Phi Alpha's 26th annual Miss Ebonyess Pageant at Shryock Auditorium. For many, Miss Ebonyess is a highly anticipated Homecoming tradition for the SIUC community. Dress for the event is formal, but this is an excellent excuse to dress up and be seen by classmates, friends and family. Tickets for Miss Ebonyess are $8 in advance and $10 at the door, and are available at the Shryock Auditorium Box Office. Call 453-3379 for additional information.

ATTENDING THESE HOMECOMING WEEK-END events can provide everyone with a different batch of memories to enjoy. But no matter how Salukis choose to enjoy Homecoming, enjoy the weekend in peace so that we can do it all again next year. Go Dawgs!

"Our Word" represents the consensus of the Daily Egyptian Editorial Board.

Pig Out, North and shaman are newsworthy topics

Dear Editor,

This letter is meant to address one M. Lionel Bender's Thursday diatribe, "DE coverage of seams shameful" and to clarify for him the role of a newspaper. First, Mr. Bender, what have you got against the so-called "beer fest" — a community attempt to rectify city/student relations? It is a news story. The availability of beer always is good news.

Two, who would you expect the College Republicans to lust (aside from North)? Nixon's not available. Reagan's mental health would make him unpredictable — he'd probably relive a movie role instead. All George Bush wanted to do was take that last parachute jump. Mr. Bender, you could take the same initiative of attending same with a university paper shredder. Shred the ads announcing his arrival! Good publicity for tenure and all that!

Finally, what in the xxxx do you have against a lousy shaman? I feel your pain. Sure, I'd join your Humanist and Skeptic Association, but I'm skeptical that it may be a scam. Then again, I'd like to pierce my ears, nose and throat, but there I'm skeptical that the cost would be too great.

how they view their organization," Sermersheim said. "If they view their organization strictly as a drinking club and providing social outlets that provide alcohol, then no, they probably will not survive under Select 2000, but that is the choice they make."

"If, however, they choose to revisit the founding principles by demonstrating what a fraternity or sorority is supposed to be as defined by their rituals, then they will be here for many, many years to come."

Chris Schoonover, a Theta Xi member and a junior in finance from Mattoon, said many students join fraternities and sororities for a social life.

"It's going to be a different greek system," Schoonover said. "In the long run there might be better scholars, but overall there's going to be a lot fewer greeks."

Ryan Nix, a member of Delta Sigma Phi and a former greek leader, disagreed.

"You hear that this is going to kill the greek system, but it's not true," he said. "We have 17 new members this fall, and not one of these guys has ever said, 'You guys can't have parties and we don't think we want to join your fraternity.'"

"People are joining organizations because they want to be a part of something. People who pledge for alcohol have low standards and put holes in the wall."

Dodd, however, said that Select 2000 could make chapter houses unappealing.

"You need a certain amount of people to pay the bills," Dodd said. "But when you start telling people who are 21 or 22 that they can't drink a beer in their room while they watch football on a Sunday afternoon, then I think that person is going to go to an apartment or out of the house."

Nancy Hunier Pei, director of Student Development, said Select 2000 will not dissuade potential members from becoming greeks.

"Studies have shown that the incoming freshman class is looking for more than just alcohol consumption," she said. "It is becoming a national trend."

David Vingren, Undergraduate Student Government president and Pi Kappa Alpha member, said Select 2000 could hurt greek enrollment enough to cause chapters to lose their houses.

"They don't allow alcohol, and that's a big turnout," Vingren said. "People won't move in there, and they will potentially lose their house."

Dodd said that despite the announcement of the initiative last spring, enrollment in the greek system has not decreased this fall.

The exact fall enrollment in the greek system has not yet been compiled.

"I'd say it's at or better than last fall," Dodd said. "But a lot of people didn't know about Select 2000."

"As a whole, I don't think Select 2000 affected Rush because not enough people knew about it."

Sermersheim said greek enrollment at SIUC is about 7 to 8 percent of the undergraduate student population. She said at most other campuses, the average is 10 percent to 15 percent.

"Maybe our question needs to be if we are going to die in the current way we are existing," she said. "If we continue to operate the way we have been operating, there may not be a greek system in five or six years."

Doug Burkott, former Interfraternity Council president during the Select 2000 discussions in January, said that once Select 2000 is implemented, it will be better for everyone.

"These are growing pains similar to those of a teen-ager," Burkott said. "When they start eliminating alcohol, they are going to be in a better fraternity and they're going to realize that."

In Monday's Daily Egyptian, part four of the series will examine the alcohol aspect of Select 2000 and alcohol's effect on the SIUC greek system.

Cigars not in liability suit

REUTERS

The American holy war against tobacco, which has demonized Joe Camel and made hundreds of lawyers rich, has left out the biggest, smelliest and most stylish form of the weed — the cigar.

Cigarette makers have been facing ever-stricter health warnings, a flood of personal-injury lawsuits and been forced to negotiate a $368 billion "global" settlement with state attorneys general looking to recoup Medicaid costs.

But cigar makers have had it easier. They face no obligation to put health warnings on their products and have been left out of the settlement talks and major litigation.

"People weren't thinking about it (the cigar boom). Even the public health people were surprised, or caught napping," said Patricia Davidson, a staff attorney at Northeastern University's Tobacco Products Liability Project, who has been studying the cigar industry.

The cigar business is booming. Sales in the United States reached $1.6 billion last year, with as much of $800 million of that spent on top of the line "premium" stogies.

A number of companies are jockeying to expand in the business.

Last month Spain's leading tobacco manufacturer, Tabacalera SA, said it was buying three cigar firms in the Americas for $367 million.

defense course, said self-defense is a needed skill for women.

"All women should learn self defense," she said, "because it is becoming a much more unpredictable world, and you can't depend that small, rural towns will be any better than the city."

Morrow said the definition of self-defense depends on what a person is defending.

"You as an individual is important," she said. "Depending on the situation that you are in, if you are by yourself or if you are with your kids, you will be defending different things."

Morrow said although victims show fear, while being attacked they need to combat that fear.

November Davidson, a self-defense instructor for eight years, said the keys to getting over fear include focusing on such things as loved ones. She said women need to know that loved ones are the reasons for wanting to escape, and not becoming a victim.

"It is more a psychological thing than a physical thing," Davidson said.

The two things that a woman needs to do while being attacked is to assess the situation and know one good move to get away, Davidson said.

"Confidence is the key," Morrow said. "Keep your head up and show your self-confidence."

Christine Schlotte, an undecided freshman from Palatine, said she took the class to understand how she can protect herself.

"You hear about a lot of attacks," she said. "If something were to happen to me, I'd want to know how to defend myself."

Symposium to focus on public health, environment

CELEBRITIES: Former FDA director, journalist Bill Curtis to speak.

JASON FREUND
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Monday's symposium concerning public health and environmental hazards will be moderated by a prominent television journalist and feature a speech from the former director of the U. S. Food and Drug Administration.

The Bertram W. Carnow Memorial Symposium will take place Monday at the Student Center Auditorium. The event begins at 8:45 a.m. and ends at 5:30 p.m. Carnow was a leader in the field of occupational and environmental health.

There is a $25 charge for a continental breakfast at 8 a.m. and for the luncheon. After the luncheon, Dr. David Kessler, the dean of the Yale School of Medicine and former director of the FDA, will be the featured speaker.

Paul Simon, director of the SIU Public Policy Institute, said there will be free seats available for faculty and students who want to hear Kessler speak.

"I have great respect for Dr. Kessler," Simon said. "He's a first-rate public servant."

The panel discussion will be moderated by Bill Kurtis, a prominent television journalist and commentator.

Simon said having Kurtis as moderator was the idea of Dr. Shirley A. Conibear, Carnow's widow, who is financing the event.

"(Kurtis) does an excellent job," he said. "It gives us a chance to not only bring a first-class media person to campus, but to have him see the campus and perhaps do something with the topic."

Conibear, the symposium's chief sponsor, is the president and senior scientist at Carnow, Conibear and Assoc. Ltd., based in Chicago.

Simon said Conibear contacted him early this year about the event.

"Her husband was a leader on air pollution in the United States, and I worked with him as a state legislator and as lieutenant governor," he said.

Mike Lawrence, associate director of the Institute, said the panel discussion will include experts with different views of the issues.

"We'll have experts in public health and environmental science and also (experts) in regulation and from businesses," he said.

Lawrence said the symposium will focus on how such information is distributed and received.

"This conference deals with how much information do policy makers and regulators need to make sensible decisions," he said. "How do they get that information, and how do people that want them to get that information convey it to them?"

Lawrence said the symposium will help spread information to others about the issues discussed.

"The idea is to increase awareness and sensitivity of those who are participating to the viewpoints of other experts that may see the issues from other sides," he said. "It's also to enlighten faculty and students at SIU about these very difficult decisions made in protecting the environment and in public health."

The panel will discuss past incidents such as air pollution in Pennsylvania and the Los Angeles Basin, as well as future events such as site planning for industrial facilities.

Simon said the event would benefit students as well as faculty.

"Anytime students and faculty can get a better insight into how public policy is named, they benefit," he said.

Other policy makers and experts featured include Simon, Dr. Linda Birnbaum, director of environmental toxicology at the Environmental Protection Agency, as well as several prominent business professionals and university professors.

Lawrence said the symposium will be videotaped so others can benefit from what is discussed.

The symposium has been a major initiative of the Institute since it began and is expected to become an annual event.

Acne antibiotics may cause acne

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

TORONTO — British researchers say long-term use of antibiotics to treat acne not only may not work, but apparently create skin bacteria resistant to several powerful drugs.

Scientists in Toronto, at an infectious disease meeting of the American Society for Microbiology, report that 64 percent of patients with recurrent acne problems harbor bacteria that are resistant to medications.

Trish Coates, a researcher at University of Leeds, says, "The resistant bacteria can also be passed on to others through contact, which means that even people who haven't received antibiotics treatment for acne will develop resistant bacteria to the antibiotics used in treating acne."

Coates says that people are treated with antibiotics typically for 8 to 12 years.

Marilyn Roberts, professor in pathology at the University of Washington School of Public Health and Community Medicine, Seattle, says, "Long-term treatment with antibiotics is insane. That's the best way to develop bacterial resistance."

Coates says, in her study she found that — the bacterium, Propionibacteria acnes, had developed resistance to widely-used antibiotics erythromycin, tetracycline and clindamycin; several colonies of resistant bacteria could be found in each patient.

P. acnes causes the redness around acne lesions.

Roberts says doctors and patients need to be educated further that long-term use of antibiotics for treating acne can cause more difficult problems down the road by creating P. acnes populations that can't be treated.

it is really rewarding to get finished," she said. "Working on the float is very relaxing. It gives me a way to take my mind off of my classes for a short amount of time."

The SAC has spent two weeks perfecting its float.

Donald Gibbs, a senior in management from Princeville, has done a lot of the painting and hammering on the float.

"You see something come out of nothing," he said. "This was an empty trailer bed a week ago, and now it will become a float that we are proud of."

Manka said that the after spending much time on the float, the group always is happy with the outcome.

"You want the float to look like what you pictured in your head," Manka said. "For the most part, it comes out just the way you planned it to, and you are pleased with the results."

Pearson said the best part about the building of the float is getting to be with the other people in the organization.

"This builds better and stronger friendships," she said. "It's not like just sitting around at a meeting just looking at each other, we are working together."

Other floats are being made by Alpha Chi Omega/Alpha Gamma Rho, Lambda Chi Alpha/Delta Sigma Phi/Sigma Alpha, Phi Sigma Kappa, Theta Xi, Alpha Gamma Delta/Sigma Nu, Pi Kappa Alpha, Sigma Pi/Sigma Sigma Sigma and Sigma Phi Epsilon/Sigma Kappa.

Small floats will include Criminal Justice Association, Jackson County Democrats, Residence Hall Association, Tumble Towers, SIUC Circle K and Mac Smith Hall Council.

If Angie Link is ever pursued by an attacker, she will know not to panic and how to protect herself through the art of self-defense.

As part of Women's Safety Week, the Women's Self Defense course is being offered to SIUC students, faculty and community members. About 36 women attended

Administrator lashes out at fraternity system

Harvey Welch, vice chancellor for Student Affairs, criticized SIUC fraternities Wednesday at the Graduate and Professional Student Council meeting in an effort to justify the implementation of Select 2000.

"My concern with fraternities is reform with fraternities," Welch said. "Fraternity behavior is out of control and needs to be changed. Fraternities need to stop using alcohol in all of their activities."

GPSC President Tim Hoerman disagrees with Welch's analysis that alcohol is the fundamental problem consuming fraternities. Hoerman predicts fireworks in future Select 2000 debates.

"It looks like there will be bloodshed," Hoerman said.

Welch also outlined four future events at the University that will affect students: a pending accreditation review of the University in 1999, the implementation of a decentralized budgeting system, adoption of the Oracle program and upcoming administrative job searches.

Police to search MIT frat house

HAZING?

 Authorities investigate if 18-year-old may have been forced to drink self to death.

REUTERS NEWS SERVICE

Boston police are planning to search the fraternity house where 18-year-old Massachusetts Institute of Technology freshman Scott Krueger apparently drank himself to death.

Police have applied for a warrant to search the Phi Gamma Delta house where up to 30 people were partying Friday night when Krueger fell into an alcohol-induced coma. Most of those at the party reportedly have hired lawyers because criminal charges could be brought if it is found that Krueger was forced to chug lethal amounts of beer and rum during an illegal hazing ritual.

Krueger, a high school honor student and athlete from Orchard Park, N.Y., near Buffalo, had only been at MIT for a month when he died. His parents have reportedly told police their son did not drink.

A report today in the Boston Herald said investigators "will be looking for anything that can tell them exactly what happened there."

Fraternity members have already cleared vomit and liquor bottles from the basement room where Krueger was found.

MIT officials, meanwhile, have admitted they failed to adequately respond to warnings of out-of-control drinking on campus.

President Charles M. Vest said he "will be the first to admit that the lesson of this tragedy is that...we've been inadequate."

Vest says the school intends to conduct a sweeping review of the use and abuse of alcohol on campus in the wake of Krueger's alcohol poisoning death this week.

One of the new policies Vest announced Wednesday includes a ban on school money used to purchase alcohol at functions where underage students could be expected to attend. The school also plans to build more undergraduate housing, promote more "dry" parties and study and target binge drinking on campus.

Study: beer bingeing can kill

DEADLY BREW:

 Finnish researchers say heavy beer consumers face added health risk.

WASHINGTON POST

LONDON — Beer bingeing can cause more than a painful hangover, a team of Finnish doctors said Friday. It can kill.

After studying the drinking habits of more than 1,640 men, researchers at the University of Kuopio in Finland discovered that how a person drinks is as much of a health risk as the amount consumed.

Bingeing, which the study defined as consuming more than six bottles or more of beer in a session, increased the risk of injury, poisoning, violence and heart attacks, particularly among middle-aged men, they said.

"The risk of death was substantially increased in men whose usual dose of beer was six or more bottles per session compared with men who usually consumed less than three bottles, after adjustment for age and total alcohol consumption," Jussi Kauhanen said in the British Medical Journal.

"The pattern of beer bingeing is associated with increased risk of death, independently of the total average consumption of alcoholic drinks."

Kauhanen said the results of the study suggest that a heavy intake of beer could increase heart attacks by triggering irregular heart beats or blood clots.

Most health advisories suggest weekly limits on alcohol. Kauhanen called for more studies examining how people reach, exceed or keep within those limits.

"Our findings show that it is equally important to examine carefully the relation between drinking patterns — especially heavy intake — and health outcome," he added.

The article did not quantify the volume of bottles used in the study.

Golota vows to stay above Lewis' belt and take it

NEWSDAY

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — It has been almost 10 months since Andrew Golota was disqualified for the second time against Riddick Bowe for throwing low blows in a fight he was winning, and the Polish heavyweight is no closer to understanding why it happened.

As much as Golota would like for questions concerning his boxing ability to remain on a higher plane, most of his conversations with the media go downhill very quickly to focus on what Lennox Lewis describes as Golota's "fetish" for punching below the belt.

Golota was grouching about the attention his underhanded tactics received Wednesday at the final news conference before his fight with World Boxing Council champion Lewis on Saturday night at the Convention Center when the Polish media hit him with a barrage of questions. Shaking his head, Golota translated for American reporters: "It's the same questions. The Polish media is terrible. Sorry, I didn't make them happy. I like to read the papers and see everything I do, not just the dark side."

Like it or not, Golota has no one to blame but himself. After his second disqualification against Bowe, Golota held his head in his hands and moaned, "I stupid." Considering he was winning on all cards when both Bowe fights ended, there could be no other conclusion.

Before the second Bowe bout, trainers Lou Duva and Roger Bloodworth spoke about special training techniques to help Golota keep his punches up. This time, Golota said, "They just tell me, 'Don't do it.' It's a funny thing. In sparring, it never happens. A fight is much different. It's real. I can't guarantee (it won't happen again). I'm just a human being."

With bad aim. After the second disqualification, Duva questioned whether he could work with Golota again, but here they are. "We sent him to a doctor, a psychiatrist," Golota joked.

Making light of the issue, Duva told Lewis not to worry about protecting against low blows. Presenting the champion with a football helmet, Duva said, "This is what Lennox Lewis needs to protect his chin." Lewis took the helmet and placed it over his groin. Duva also introduced a man in a suit of armor and told Lewis he could wear the same outfit.

All joking aside, Golota understands he will be under scrutiny from referee Joe Cortez. But instead of calling on Cortez to police Golota's tactics, Emanuel Steward, who trains Lewis, said his fighter would prefer a free-for-all.

"If it's a knock-down, drag-out fight and Golota wants to get dirty, all I ask of the commission is that they take out the referee," Steward said. "If they did that, I think Golota would be the first one to want out of the ring. I don't think he has the talent — the heart, really — to be champion."

Steward suggested Golota resorted to low blows in his last fight because Bowe survived two knock-downs and fought back, knocking Golota down once. But that doesn't explain the first bout when Bowe was looking for a way out of the pummeling Golota was giving him.

Golota said he was more tired than hurt in the second Bowe fight. More than anything else, he blamed his lack of control in both bouts on nerves and inexperience in big fights.

"You can't explain it," Golota said of his nervous reaction. "You've got to try it to understand it. Every fighter has got to deal with it. I guess I'm more experienced now."

Wizards to work magic on NBA

OUT OF BULLETS:

Pro-basketball's newest name features many familiar faces.

BALTIMORE SUN

WASHINGTON — It's been an NBA off-season that has featured major trades and several coaching changes. But when Washington's basketball team begins training camp Friday at Shepherd College in West Virginia, the only major difference will be the name.

The team formerly known as the Bullets will suit up for 1997-98 as the Washington Wizards.

In December, they will have a new place to call home when they move from USAir Arena in suburban Landover into the new MCI Center in downtown Washington.

But the faces will be pretty much the same. The Wizards have 11 players under contract from last year's squad, which made the playoffs for the first time since 1988.

"I don't mind the fact that we're going into the season with pretty much the same team," Juwan Howard said recently. "We achieved a lot last year, and we're going to get a chance to grow even more."

That growth could be bolstered by the fact that Bernie Bickerstaff, whose mid-season hiring made a major difference in the team's playoff run, will get a chance to mold the players during a full training camp.

Since the season ended Bickerstaff has hired three new assistant coaches — Jim Brovelli, Mike Brown and John Outlaw — all of whom worked with him in Denver.

Bickerstaff says whatever new system he implements will not be overwhelming to the team.

"We just want to keep things simple," Bickerstaff said. "You want things to get to the point where the players don't have to think too much, where they just react."

With 11 players on the roster pretty much set, the major question going into camp will be who will earn the 12th and final roster spot.

Second-round pick God Shammgod signed a contract for the rookie minimum over the summer, but he still has to make the team.

"We have to remember he's just a youngster," Bickerstaff said. "He was a sophomore last year in college. I'm going to try to go into training camp objectively."

While Shammgod could provide quickness as a third point guard, behind Strickland and Chris Whitney, the Wizards still might be in the market over the next few weeks for a veteran player who could provide leadership for the young team.

The NBA pre-season officially starts on Oct. 9.

Salukis look to spike Evansville

MOMENTUM:
SIUC volleyball team rides six-game winning streak against Purple Aces tonight.

SHANDEL RICHARDSON
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Despite wins against Southwest Missouri State University and Wichita State University last weekend, SIUC volleyball coach Sonya Locke says there is no time to enjoy the victories.

"I'm happy to get the wins, but we don't have time to sit around and savor victories," Locke said. "We have to totally focus our attention again on another team and get better at the things we didn't do well last week."

The Salukis enter tonight's home match against the University of Evansville with a 6-7 overall record and 3-3 record in the Missouri Valley Conference. The Purple Aces come into the contest at the bottom of the MVC standings with a 1-5 conference record and 8-9 overall.

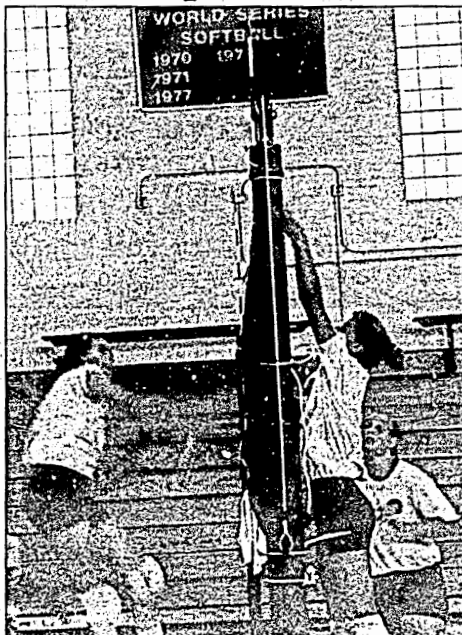

"SIUC has won seven straight matches against the Purple Aces, but Locke does not want her team to underestimate Evansville's ability.

The Purple Aces have non-conference victories over Austin Peay State University, who beat SIUC earlier in the Saituki Invitational, and DePaul University this season.

The Aces also boast the MVC's fourth-leading blocker in Jessica Kiefer. Kiefer, a 6-foot-3 freshman middle blocker, is averaging 1.17 blocks per game.

"We are going to approach Evansville just like any other Friday night match," Locke said. "We're still going to go at them the same way as other teams."

The Salukis will counter Kiefer with junior middle blockers Montique Galvin and Laura Pier. Galvin's 1.30 blocks per game rank second in the MVC, while Pier's 1.08 are eighth.

VOLLEYBALL

REJECTION:

Defense has been the focal point of the Salukis' game plan in recent matches. It showed last weekend, as the Salukis out-blocked the competition 18-13 in the two matches. SIUC's 122 total team blocks in the MVC rank behind one school, the University of Northern Iowa.

Locke plans to continue to stress defense because she believes most matches are won on the defensive side of the net.

"First of all, you can only win a game or match if you beat the other team to 15 three times," Locke said. "And defensively is the only way you can stop a team from scoring points. I think it has to be stressed."

Junior outside hitter Lindsay Fisher said Locke's persistence of stressing defense has improved the team's overall morale.

"(Locke has) really been spending practice toward the team we have been playing," she said. "(Last weekend) was a big confidence builder because the teams we beat were good teams. We proved we could play with any team in the conference."

SIUC welcomes 14 teams to Invitational

CROSS COUNTRY:

Men's squad deals with illness as women shoot for fifth-straight title.

COREY CUSICK
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The SIUC men's cross country team is trying to come back from a disappointing seventh-place finish at the Indiana Invitational last Saturday, but the Salukis may have to do it with out Andy Bosak.

The Saluki men and women race Saturday at the 22nd Saluki Invitational, where the women's team will attempt to win its fifth-straight Invitational.

Bosak has been ill since last Saturday's meet at Indiana, and men's coach Bill Cornell said the team will not know about Bosak's status until today. "Bosak may have to sit out," Cornell said. "We won't know until (today), but we want him to be healthy at the (Nov. 1 Missouri Valley) conference meet."

Despite the possible loss, Cornell is positive about his team's chances. "We can still win the meet as long as we have enough depth," Cornell said. "It will be very competitive, and the team who has the most depth will win."

Sophomore runner Matt McClelland said the team has a chance to win as long as the Salukis stay focused.

"It should be a good meet," McClelland said. "It won't be a pushover, but we are capable of winning it if we work hard."

The women's team is attempting to extend its string of victories to five in a row, but the Saluki women must do something they have not done all year — finish first.

The Salukis will be led by sophomore Jenny Monaco, the top runner for the team in all three meets this season. Monaco had a second-place finish out of 33 runners with a time of 18 minutes and 37.4 seconds at Carbondale on Sept. 6. The women finished second behind the University of Kansas.

Women's coach Don DeNoon said SIUC has a good chance at winning the meet and keeping its streak alive.

"Anything is possible with the number of teams in the meet, but I think we have a good shot at winning," he said. "Tennessee is one team that has a crack at beating us."

Sophomore runner Leah Hofferkamp said the team is looking forward to the meet and some action.

"I think we're all pretty pumped," Hofferkamp said. "We're looking forward to the meet because we didn't have one last week, so we're ready."

CROSS COUNTRY

•The Saluki Invitational will be on Saturday with the women's meet starting at 10 a.m. followed by the men's race at 10:35 a.m. The meet will be west of Abe Martin Field.

•The meet will feature 14 teams, including the University of Memphis, Western Illinois University and Murray State University.

Sunday's Latinfest promotes Hispanic heritage

TRACY TAYLOR
DE CAMPUS LIFE EDITOR

With folkloric dancers, a Latin disc jockey, games and prizes, this year's Latinfest during Homecoming weekend will give Hispanic students a way to celebrate Hispanic Heritage Month with pride.

For the first time, the Hispanic Student Council will sponsor a Latinfest from 12 to 5 p.m. Sunday at the Free Forum Area.

Linda Vela, a sophomore in English from East Chicago, Ind., said the members of the Hispanic Student Council decided to plan something that would celebrate their culture.

"We're hoping that it becomes a tradition. That's why we're calling it the first annual," she said. "It mostly has to do with the Hispanic Heritage Month celebration."

The Latinfest also will have the traditional Homecoming activity of crowning a king and queen. Vela said that other organizations have their kings and queens, and it would be a good idea for the festival.

Eliza Vela, a law student from Indiana and the chairwoman for the committee for the Hispanic King and queen, said the festival will promote cultural awareness.

Eliza Vela said the Latinfest king and queen nominations will have a lot of the same judging criteria as the Homecoming royalty.

"One of the differences is that we are allowing freshmen to run so that anybody who wants to run can," she said. "Originally it was just a queen contest, but we didn't want to have the stereotypical criteria based solely on beauty."

Eliza Vela said the nominees must be involved in community service and will be judged in three categories.

"The first category is academic achievement and community service," she said. "The second is a three-minute speech on an impromptu question, and the third is poise and personality."

Eliza Vela said the judges will be community members, professors and students.

"The campus should be a part of our culture and see what it's like and how we celebrate our heritage," she said.

Some of the nominees for Latinfest king and queen are Judith Rocha, a sophomore in social work from Chicago; Linda Vela, a sophomore in English from East Chicago, Ind.; Jorge Torres, sophomore in aviation technology from Chicago; Gabriel Cerda, a senior in civil engineering from East Moline; and Seferino Torronex, an undecided freshman from Moline.

Graduating from SIUC a tradition in some families

DONNA COLTER
DE NEWS EDITOR

Shirley (West) Davis started a family tradition when she attended SIUC in the 1940s, and now her four sons have graduated from SIUC and her granddaughter Lana is a third-year MEDPREP student.

The Davises are just one of many families to have multiple relatives graduate from SIUC.

"I think the three main reasons (we went to SIUC) is it was available, it was affordable, and it had the quality programs we needed to pursue our careers," John Davis, Shirley's eldest son, said.

"What we found is that SIU has high quality programs in a wonderful environment. The faculty is second to none."

John graduated with three degrees from SIUC. He received his bachelor's degree in 1965, his master's degree in 1969 and became an education degree specialist in 1976. John's wife Julie (Friese) Davis received her bachelor's in art education from SIUC in 1968.

John is the former superintendent of schools in Anna-Jonesboro, where all four of the Davis brothers graduated high school. He is now the executive director of Southern Illinois Orthopedic Health Clinic.

Tom, the second of the four brothers and Lana's father, received his bachelor's degree in 1969.

The third son, D.W., received his bachelor's degree in 1973, while the youngest, Mike, received his degree in 1981.

D.W. is the former regional superintendent of schools. Now he is the golf professional at Rend Lake. Tom and Mike are surgeons in Southern Illinois.

Lana transferred to SIUC after her first year at Tulane University in New Orleans, and she said she doesn't regret her decision to come to SIUC.

"I transferred back from New Orleans because it was a different atmosphere," she said. "(SIU) was much more comfortable for me. I love it here."

Since their graduations from SIUC, all of the Davis brothers have remained active with the University.

They have endowed a scholarship to SIUC in the memory of their mother. This year it supported Saluki fullback Bryan Nolbertowitz.

The whole family are lifetime members of the SIUC Alumni Association. They support the arts, and the Southern Illinois Orthopedic Health Clinic is a corporate sponsor to WSU-TV.

"We recognize the important part SIUC plays in our community," John said. "Having SIUC makes our community a much better place to live."

The brothers also began a program to boost SIUC enrollment. The Southern Illinois High School Appreciation Day was started to give a local student a $1,500 scholarship to SIUC. All the student had to do was attend certain events at SIUC, then put her name in a hat. Christina Howard of Murphysboro High School won the scholarship.

Lana said she appreciates what her family is trying to do to boost awareness of SIUC.

"I think (what they are doing) is great," Lana said. "They are making an effort to help SIU. They realize a lot of students in Southern Illinois are underprivileged, and they realize (Southern Illinois) is a nice place to live."

And with SIUC Homecoming weekend beginning today, the family will honor another tradition. Every year the family attends the parade, the tailgate party before the football game and the Homecoming football game.

"We take some coffee and doughnuts (to the parade), and let all the kids chase the candy," John said. "Then the family will go to the alumni tent at the game, and then the football game."

Like the Davis family, the Henderson family of Sparta is rich in SIUC tradition.

John and Georgeann (Palmer) Henderson were high school sweethearts when they decided to attend SIUC in the '60s. John was following after his sister, Rita.

John received his bachelor's degree in civil engineering in 1967 and his master's degree in civil engineering in 1972.

Georgeann received her degree in journalism, with a minor in English and teacher certification, in 1968.

The Henderson's daughter, Jenna (Henderson) Smith received her master's degree in speech communication from SIUC in 1994. She is now an admissions counselor and field representative for New Student Admissions. Her husband, Greg Smith, is a senior in education and will graduate in December.

Georgeann said the family tradition of attending SIUC began because of SIUC's relation to Sparta and John's sister Rita.

Ex-Saluki football players waiting for turn in NFL

DREAMS: Tight end Jones with Jacksonville; punter Gagliano looking for team.

TRAVIS AKIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Two former Saluki football players are both struggling to find their places in the NFL.

Former Saluki tight end Damon Jones is looking for playing time with the Jacksonville Jaguars, while ex-SIUC punter Mark Gagliano is still trying to find a team.

Jones played at SIUC from 1993 to 1996. In 1996, he caught 32 passes for 431 yards and two touchdowns. At the end of the season, Jones was drafted in the April NFL draft by the Jaguars in the fifth round.

Jones received a $90,000 signing bonus, and he has signed a three-year contract with the Jaguars, but he has not had any playing time in the Jaguars' first four games.

"When the opportunity comes (to play), I hope to make the most of it and do the best I can," Jones said. "I am trying to get better in practice. I just have to play hard."

Jones said playing under head coach Tom Coughlin is not as rough as people tend to think.

"He's a good coach and makes sure we are prepared every week," Jones said. "People mistake him for a hard guy. He just never wants you to lose focus."

Dealing with Coughlin is something Jones knows first-hand because of an off-the-field incident July 6. Jones allegedly hit an off-duty police officer in a Jacksonville night club after refusing to leave the stage during a performance of the rap group "Outkast."

Jones has been charged with a misdemeanor, and the case is still pending.

But Jones said both he and Coughlin have worked out the problems.

"I have put it behind me," Jones said. "It is something that could have been avoided."

While Jones is working to get playing time, Gagliano is trying to find a team that will let him punt.

"The position has such longevity, it is tough to break in," Gagliano said. "All I can do is just hope that everything works out for the best."

Gagliano played at SIUC from 1993 to 1996. He accumulated 10,776 yards on 264 punts. During his senior year, Gagliano averaged 45 yards per punt to lead the nation.

Gagliano also was named Division I-AA All-American in 1996. That honor marked the first time a Saluki has received the honor since Terry Taylor and Donnel Daniels were named to the All-America team in 1983.

This summer Gagliano worked out at the Indianapolis Colts training camp. The Colts opted to go with Pro Bowl punter Chris Gardocki, and Gagliano was cut Aug. 12.

While he was with the Colts, Gagliano played in a preseason game against the Cincinnati Bengals Aug. 1. Gagliano had a 53-yard punt that landed on the 3-yard line. He also kicked off, and on one kickoff return, Bengal Cory Dillon broke the defense and Gagliano had to make the tackle.

Despite a solid performance in the preseason game, Gagliano still is searching for a job. He said he made the right decision playing at the Colts camp even though he knew he could not beat Gardocki, but waiting for a job has been difficult.

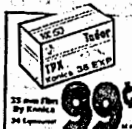

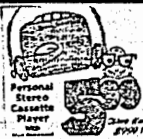

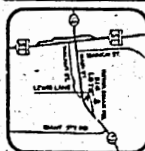

"This is the toughest experience I've gone through," Gagliano said. "But I have a lot of confidence. Not many get a chance to chase their dreams like me."

While he waits, Gagliano spends his days lifting weights and kicking. He does not have a job, and he said he is giving it until the conclusion of the training camps in 1998 to decide whether or not to begin to find a job apart from the NFL.

Memories of past Homecoming games

TERRITORY: Southwest Missouri State University has proven to be formidable opponents for the Salukis.

SHANDEL RICHARDSON
AND COREY CUSICK
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTERS

The SIUC football team has a history of exciting Homecoming football games against Southwest Missouri State University, including a second-half Saluki comeback in one of the team's last three meetings.

Oct. 14, 1995: Salukis' second-half display leads to 33-30 overtime win

The SIUC football team mounted a 20-point second-half comeback that led to a 33-30 overtime victory against Southwest Missouri State University to move the Salukis' record to 4-3 overall and 2-1 in conference play. The Salukis fell to a 20-0 deficit in the third quarter, but staged a ferocious comeback and scored 27 unanswered points to take the lead. After a SMSU score to tie the game at 27-27, the game was forced into overtime, where new Division I-AA rules allow each team to start on its 25-yard line and attempt to score.

After each team has one chance to score, the game is over. The Salukis won the coin toss and chose to play defense first. They held SMSU to a field goal, which pushed SMSU ahead by a score of 30-27. The Salukis knew they needed a touchdown to win, so after two failed runs that amounted to four yards, they faced third down and six.

Saluki quarterback Danny Smith fooled the SMSU defense by calling a quarterback draw and ran for nine yards to the SMSU 12-yard line. Two plays later, Smith threw a 12-yard reception to Reggie Fowler, who outran the SMSU defense for the game-winning touchdown. Smith threw for 328 yards on the day, and the Salukis amassed 469 total offensive yards to SMSU's 318.

Oct. 5, 1991: Salukis suffer first defeat of the season 17-13

SIUC entered the contest with a record of 5-0 and a No. 20 ranking in the Division I-AA polls, but finished the day with a 17-13 loss to Southwest Missouri State University.

The Salukis opened the game with two impressive drives, but each ended in a mishap.

An interception thrown by quarterback Brian Downey at the Bears' 15-yard line stopped the first drive. After a Bear field goal, SIUC mounted another drive that began on its own 13-yard line. The Salukis drove to the SMSU 17, but missed the 30-yard field goal attempt. SMSU opened the scoring in the second half on a Paul Carney 6-yard touchdown run to give the Bears a 10-0 lead.

On the following possession, SIUC drew within three points as Downey connected with Doug Amaya on a 36-yard touchdown. Downey finished the game with 186 yards, completing 17 of 31 passes. Downey's efforts surpassed Fred Gibson into third place on SIUC's all-time career passing yards list. On the ground, the Salukis were led by sophomore tailback Greg Brown's 94 yards on 26 carries.

SMSU added another touchdown after a 25-yard Saluki punt yielded excellent field position for the Bears on the SIUC 25-yard line. The Saluki offense was unable to threaten again until Downey hooked up with LaVance Banks on a 21-yard pass play with 1 minute and 24 seconds remaining. SIUC attempted an on-side kick but failed.

Oct. 21, 1989: Saluki rally comes up short 31-25

SIUC trailed 31-3 during the third quarter, but the Salukis were determined not to give up before falling short in a 31-25 loss to SMSU. Reserve quarterback Fred Gibson led the Salukis to 22 unanswered points as he completed 15 of 30 passes for 312 yards and three touchdowns.

SIUC receiver Wesley Yates hauled in seven catches for 199 yards, including an 87-yard touchdown reception. Yates' performance was the most yards gained by a Saluki in school history.

SIUC outgained SMSU 473-371 in total offense, but it was not enough to overcome the first three quarters.

The loss dropped the Salukis to 1-7, and they finished the season 2-9.

Salukis hope to snap streak

RYAN KEITH
DE SPORTS EDITOR

The SIUC football team is treating Saturday's Homecoming game against Southwest Missouri State University as the perfect opportunity to end a two-game losing streak.

But regardless of Saturday's outcome, several team members agree that a loss to the Bears in the Homecoming battle, which begins at 1:30 p.m. at McAndrew Stadium, should not defeat the team's positive attitude for the rest of the season.

Left guard Walter Skeate said Homecoming is the best opportunity for the Salukis to establish a winning streak.

"After the way we've been playing, I think we can compete with anybody in the league," Skeate said. "It's always important to win at home. You always want to win Homecoming. We all want to have a good game, and we all want to win."

The Salukis enter play Saturday with a 1-3 mark overall and an 0-2 start in the Gateway Football Conference. SIUC is coming off a 28-27 loss to defending conference champion the University of Northern Iowa Saturday, which included a chance to win in the game's final seconds that came up one yard short.

A come-from-behind 24-20 win over Murray State University Sept. 6 and a near repeat of those heroics in a 19-14 loss to Indiana State University one week later have given SIUC coach Jan Quarless reason to be optimistic.

"I think the second half of the last three ball games really speaks for the way they have responded," Quarless said. "These losses are becoming tougher for them, which I appreciate."

"We've asked this football team to stop streaks, and obviously this is one we've got to stop this Saturday."

Although the team's resilience has been a positive, left tackle Jason Krivis said the biggest difference between losing and winning during the last two weeks has been a poor first-half effort offensively.

"We finally got our rushing game going, and that was something we needed to do," Krivis said. "We're going to have to play four quarters of football the way we have been playing, and we've got to play the first half like we've been playing the second half."

The Bears enter Saturday's conference-opener with a 2-2 record on the season. Southwest defeated the University of Tennessee-Martin 27-14 in Springfield, Mo., two weeks ago and is returning to action after a one-week layoff.

Southwest ranks fifth in the conference in rushing and second in passing under coach Del Miller, who is 13-13 in his third season with the Bears. Southwest also ranks fourth in the league in total and scoring defense.

The Bears have had their way with the Salukis since the mid-1980s. Southwest, who holds an 11-8 advantage in the all-time series with SIUC, has won nine of the last 10 matchups with the Salukis, including a 24-17 win at home last season.

The Salukis took a 17-0 lead into halftime last season, only to watch Southwest score 21 points in the third quarter and add a field goal in the fourth for a seven-point win. That loss began a five-game losing streak that dropped the Salukis from 4-1 to 4-6 overall.

But Krivis and Skeate, returning starters from last year's squad, both agree that this year's team is more prepared to handle success and defeat under Quarless' leadership.

"I don't think any one game is more important than the others for us right now," Krivis said. "I really don't think you could compare last year to this year because the character is so different. We're not going to let one game ruin our season."

Skeate said there is a difference between this year's team and last year's team.

"I believe last year's team wouldn't have come back the way we did, the way we've been doing all season," Skeate said. "It could have been 45-0, instead of 28-27 with us having a chance to win the game."

Even though an extra week of preparation may give the Bears the advantage Saturday, and a win would boost the Salukis' spirits, Quarless does not see a repeat of last year's struggles in the future.

"Does the season hang in the balance? Absolutely not," Quarless said. "I think that we'll be all right. I just think that anytime you can go 2-3, rather than the other situation, your football team still believes you can go out and be winners for the season."

Amtrak to retain afternoon departure

RAILED: Passenger rail system had considered scheduling trains to leave early in morning.

DONNA COLTER
DE NEWS EDITOR

The 4:05 p.m. departure time of the Carbondale-to-Chicago Amtrak train has been saved for now because of the effort of Carbondale and University officials.

The announcement was made at a press conference Friday.

It has been two years since the city of Carbondale and SIUC began working with Amtrak to save the 4:05 p.m. departure time on the Illini route from Carbondale to Chicago, as well as the south-bound route from Chicago to Carbondale.

Amtrak considered altering the time to a morning route, and though no definite time was set, a 6 a.m. departure was discussed. The change was to go into effect July 1.

A group of students then met with Amtrak and Illinois Department of Transportation officials in April to ask them to save the Illini departure time, citing that a change would be a hardship to college students.

"The efforts resulted in a victory for students," Dave Vingren, president of the Undergraduate Student Government, said. "The 4 p.m. leave time was extremely important for students' lives."

Vingren said that if the train's departure time was changed to the morning, many students would have to miss class on Friday to make it home.

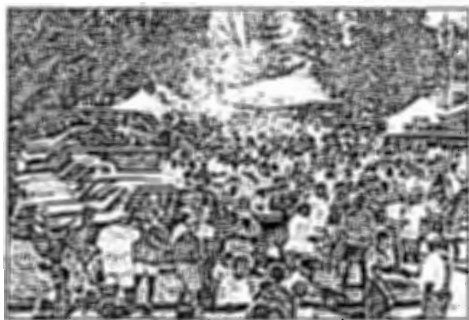

Of the passengers who ride the Illini route, 41 percent are students and 49 percent are under the age of 25, Mark Magliari, manager of media relations for Amtrak, said. The numbers came from a study conducted by Western Illinois University under contract of IDOT. Mark Terry, former president of the Graduate and Professional Student Council, devised an alternative for the route. Terry suggested Amtrak change the departure time to 6 a.m. on weekdays and continue a 4:05 p.m. departure on Friday.

"(The alternative) was strongly considered by Amtrak," Jeff Doherty, Carbondale city manager, said. "Amtrak informed us the schedule would be maintained with

BRIAN EBERS
DE CAMPUS LIFE EDITOR

With hot dogs simmering on an open grill, C.E. Welch once again evaluated the familiar surroundings of his alma mater at Saturday's Homecoming festivities.

Welch, a 1965 SIUC alumnus from Springfield, is a member of the SIUC Alumni Association. The Alumni Association set up two tents east of McAndrew Stadium Saturday morning and served food and drinks.

"When I was at SIU we didn't have a tailgate," Welch said. "We just watched the parade and then went to the football game."

"It's just great to see this (tailgating) going on now. It's good to see people having a good time visiting with old acquaintances and improving ties with the University."

The Homecoming football game allowed thousands of SIUC students and alumni to mingle and recollect old memories. Three thousand people were expected to attend tailgating festivities.

Justine Stephens, a 1959 alumna from Carbondale, comes to watch the football game every year.

"My husband was on the 1930 (SIUC) football team," Stephens said. "That was the only undefeated team in SIU's history."

Stephens is optimistic about the football team this year. She anticipates a winning season.

"I like winning," she said. "When we win, we get big crowds, and the team is

Greeks question plan's ban on alcohol

PREVENTION: Administrators say Select 2000 could keep alcohol-related deaths at bay.

WILLIAM HATFIELD

(Editor's note: This is the fourth story in a five-part series exploring the issues of Select 2000. Earlier stories can be read on-line at <http://www.dailyegyptian.com>.)

Some SIUC greek leaders and members say that education, rather than banning alcohol in chapter houses, is the answer to the potential alcohol-caused safety hazards that are plaguing some greek systems nationwide.

But SIUC administrators and former greek leaders cite other schools that are becoming alcohol-free, and say that Select 2000 can aid in preventing tragic alcohol-related deaths like those at Louisiana State University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

"I think those incidents could potentially happen anywhere," Katie Sermersheim, assistant director of Student Development, said. "I don't think any greek system is immune to those types of things."

"I live by the philosophy of 'Why wait for something like that to happen?' And what these should challenge us all to do is to take a step back and recognize that these are things that could happen to anyone on any campus and try to adjust ourselves accordingly."

Select 2000 is a nine-part initiative for the greek system that includes maintaining higher grades, making chapter houses alcohol and substance-free and requiring hours of community service from greeks. SIUC is one of four schools in the country chosen to pilot the program.

Last week, the MIT campus was shaken by the apparent alcohol overdose that led to the death of Scott Krueger, an 18-year-old freshman from Orchard Park, N.Y. Krueger was found unconscious in his room at Phi
