Businesses uprooted by Varsity expansion

By Tony Gordon
Staff Writer

The Varsity Theater in the 400 block of South Illinois Avenue is planning the addition of a new auditorium and screen, to be constructed just north of the theater. The addition will supplant three businesses and a non-profit organization.

Leaf and Stem Tobacconists at 410 S. Illinois; David F. Low Watch Repair, 412 S. Illinois; and Sam's Lock and Key, 416 S. Illinois have received 30-day notice to move. The Christian Science Reading Room at 414 S. Illinois will also be forced to move by Oct. 1.

Construction will begin "as soon as possible" after the Oct. 1 deadline, according to Dennis Kerasotes of Kerasotes Theaters in Springfield, owners of the Varsity and the four adjacent lots.

No specific details were available on the Varsity addition, but Kerasotes said that the firm hoped to have it open by Christmas or New Year's Day.

The tenants have been renting from Kerasotes on a month-to-month basis since January 1. Kerasotes said, "I feel bad about the short notice of the move, but we have to expand where we have the business." He said he had no choice but to expand north of the theater, because the Federal Building is behind the theater and the planned railroad station will be across the street from the theater.

Sam Lence, whose shop has been at the present location for 18 years, said he thought Kerasotes must have been planning the expansion before the notices went out. Claiming it was an "ungentlemanly way to do business," Lence, who received his notice Friday, said he wished Kerasotes had notified him earlier.

Even without the notice, Lence said he had "a gut feeling that something was going to happen," which he said was prompted by all the new construction around his shop over the last few years.

The notice did catch him unprepared however, Lence said, and he said he fears that he may not be able to find another location by Oct. 1 to keep his business open.

The Christian Science Reading Room, operated by the First Church of Christ Science, has been on Illinois Avenue since March 1972. Joan Trummer, board chairperson of the church, said the move on such short notice is "uncomfortable." But she added, "The downtown area is in a period of transition now, and is not as good a location as it used to be. We still get good foot traffic past the front, but parking is a real problem. It's difficult to move with such a short deadline, but we'll do the best we can."

Jim Walters, who about three years ago opened Leaf and Stem at the location that has housed a tobacco shop since 1961, said he accepted the no-lease agreement with Kerasotes because the rent price was right.

Walters said considering a tobacco shop has been at that location for such a long time, he and his business partner "thought we would be let in on the planning for the location."

David Low has been in business in Carbondale for almost 25 years, 15 of them on Illinois Avenue.

Medicare firm said to have destroyed mail

By Karen Gullo
Staff Writer

A company which processes Medicare claims in Illinois is under investigation by the federal government following a former employee's allegations that the firm destroyed thousands of letters from Medicare recipients.

The Electronic Data Systems Federal Corp., a private firm in Des Plaines which is under government contract to process Medicare claims, is being investigated by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services and the General Accounting Office, according to Rep. Paul Simon, D-Carbondale.

Medicare is a Social Security Program providing help with medical costs for persons over 65.

An ex-employee of EDSF, Albert Crowhurst, of Skokie, charged in published reports last week that the firm routinely discards letters to reduce the amount of backlog of mail. According to the Chicago Tribune, Crowhurst was a supervisor of a special task force the company formed last spring to reduce the backlog of unanswered letters.

Crowhurst said he was told by his supervisors to put cartons of mail in the garbage, it was reported. He said that EDSF destroyed as many as 30,000 pieces of mail in March and locked up another 75,000 pieces so they wouldn't be counted as backlog for the quarter ending December 1979, the reports said.

An estimated 1.4 to 1.6 million people receive Medicare benefits in Illinois, according to Ron Fischer, assistant general manager of Medicare. EDSF processes an average of 443,000 claims a month and receives 35,000 to 40,000 letters a month, Fischer said.

About 90,000 people in the 24th Congressional District receive Medicare benefits, Steve Hull, Simon's press aide said.

After conducting an internal investigation of the Crowhurst's charges, the firm said it found nothing to substantiate his story.

"Immediately after his allegations were made public, we started an investigation and found no truth to the charges," Fischer said in a telephone interview early this week.

Decision delayed indefinitely on lawsuit against Trustees

By John Ambrosia
Staff Writer

A court decision expected last week which would have affected the 14-month old Open Meetings Act lawsuit involving the SIU Board of Trustees has been delayed indefinitely, according to attorneys involved in the case.

The case, being heard before the 5th District Appellate Court in Mount Vernon, concerns the efforts of the Illinois Education Association and one of its member groups, the Faculty Organization for Collective Bargaining, an SIU-Edwardsville group, to join the Madison County state's attorney in suing the board over possible violations of the act at meetings held in January, 1979.

Institution of SIU's current chancellor system of governance was the major action taken at those meetings, according to Madison County State's Attorney Nicholas Byron.

Attorneys had hoped for a quick decision on the Appellate Court case so that the original Open Meetings Act suit, filed against the board by Byron in June, 1979, could proceed. Disciplinary action brought several weeks ago against Judge John M. Karns, a former member of the three-judge panel hearing the case, may have held up the decision, ac-ording to John C. Feirich, a Carbondale attorney representing the board.

"It's possible that the problems with Karns could have held up the decision," said Feirich. "But then again it's just possible that they were delayed in their decision because they got behind schedule. I had been set to receive an opinion right about now, but now I couldn't even guess when a decision will come down."

The disciplinary action against Karns appears to be the major cause for the postponement, but other reasons such as possible holidays and vacations taken by the court may have contributed to the delay, said Wayne Schwartzman, a Chicago attorney representing the FOCB.

A spokeswoman for the court said that although Karns was brought up on disciplinary procedures, the fact that a decision hasn't been reached yet is just a matter of "the judicial process." She declined to comment on the nature of the charges against Karns. Both attorneys said they were disappointed at the delay, and Swartzman added, "The case has gone on for quite some time now, and naturally we're anxious for a decision. I can't guess when it will come, though."

Feirich is confident that whenever the decision comes down, the board will win. stating, "I feel pretty good about our position. I feel we had a good, solid presentation. We made a good argument for keeping the FOCB out of the suit."

However, Schwartzman said he believes the FOCB's chances also are excellent.

"I don't think there will be any problem at all. We are a citizens' group, a taxpayer's group, and I can't see where we can be denied the right to join in on a suit filed by the state's attorney. We were able to prove that sometimes the state's attorney alone isn't enough to meet the needs of the group."

If the FOCB isn't allowed to join in the lawsuit, the original meetings act violation suit would continue almost immediately unless the group appeals the decision to the state Supreme Court. Schwartzman declined to say what the group's plans would be should they lose the Appellate Court decision.

Both attorneys are confident of winning the original suit. The FOCB is asking not only that the board be penalized for the possible violations, but that all action undertaken at the meeting be negated, which would mean the elimination of the chancellor system.

Human Resources dean takes charge

By Mike Monson
Staff Writer

When Samuel Goldman was selected to be the new dean of the College of Human Resources last May, one administration official said "Goldman will be able to move in and assume full command."

The 45-year-old Goldman, whose appointment became effective Aug. 1, appears ready to take charge.

"I applied for this job because I thought it would be an interesting challenge," Goldman said. "I enjoy being an administrator, making a difference in what happens."

Goldman comes to SIU-C after eight years at Ohio University at Athens. From 1972 to 1978, Goldman was dean of the school's College of Education. He became acting dean of the school's College of Health and Human Services for a year after having helped found the college in 1978.

Goldman replaces acting Dean Seymour Bryson, who becomes associate dean of the college. Stanley H. Smith, the first dean of the College of Human Resources at SIU-C, left in July 1978 to become president of Shaw University in North Carolina. The search for a successor to Smith took 22 months and involved two separate searches until Goldman was finally selected.

Goldman, who received his doctorate from the University of Chicago, describes the College of Human Resources as being "quite similar" to Ohio University's College of Health and Human Resources.

"While I wouldn't call them identical, there are many similarities," Goldman said. "The emphasis at both of them is the same—on human growth and development."

Goldman, who is married and has two sons, describes the human resource or service field as one where "the focus is upon preparing people to care for human needs as a service profession."

Such fields as administration of justice, social work and rehabilitation are examples of human service professions, Goldman said.

Goldman said he is pleased with the program he has inherited.

"We have some fine, nationally recognized programs and some extraordinarily productive faculty members," he said. "For instance, we have the only doctorate of rehabilitation program offered in the United States."

Goldman said he will teach a management course at the University "once I get a chance to get settled in."

City has big plans to improve downtown

By Melody Cook
Staff Writer

An Illinois Avenue hotel-convention center surrounded by parking facilities, a new city hall building and a library, a new Bank of Carbondale building on East Main Street and other developments are parts of Carbondale's long-range plans to rejuvenate the city's downtown "central core," said Donald Monty, assistant city manager for community development.

Other plans include the possibilities of downtown "green" grassy areas and the grouping of similar businesses, such as financial and office buildings, by providing shared store fronts and parking facilities, he said.

Improvements already underway include the construction of the new railroad depot, the repair and widening of sidewalks and the purchase of new trash receptacles by city merchants and trees by the city to line Illinois Avenue, he said.

No date has been set for the completion of the redevelopment project, but to estimate it at 1990 would not be unreasonable, Monty said. However, factors such as changes in the national economic situation, as they would affect the private developers, could either speed up or delay completion.

"Downtown Carbondale, as well as the downtowns in most bigger cities, is going to find itself as more of a financial and office center with some specialized kinds of retail stores," he said.

Independent developers have already expressed interest in purchasing property on the north end of the development area, which runs east and west of Main Street from Poplar to Wall Streets and north and south from Hickory to Mill Streets, he said.

The city would rather keep the actual property sales between the developer and the owner, Monty said. In fact, a developer and a property owner could negotiate sales terms totally on their own without involving the city.

However, developments that will have a good impact on the community by providing economic, cultural or other improvements may be supported by the city through the issuance of revenue bonds, tax revenue financing or, "in some cases, the possibility of eminent domain. Usually if we can accomplish our project without using that, we would rather," Monty said.

The southern part of the redevelopment area, next to the campus, will probably continue to consist of businesses like food and clothing stores that depend on the large walk-in clientele from the University, Monty said.

To reduce the concentration of the eight bars within the Illinois Avenue "strip" frequented by students, however, no new liquor licenses will be issued on that street for establishments whose main business will come from serving alcohol. But businesses such as hotels or the new convention center which include drinking lounges may be granted licenses by the City Council, Monty said.

Also, if an existing bar is displaced by a new development project, it would be "encouraged" by the city to rebuild somewhere other than Illinois Avenue, Monty said.

Democrat to take vacant board seat

Democrat John Brown was appointed Wednesday night to the board seat of Walter Robinson, whose board post was vacated at the meeting when the board accepted his second letter of resignation. Brown will serve until the November general election.

Brown, 69, was the manager of an insurance company in Bloomington until he retired to Carbondale three years ago.

The County Republican Central Committee chose Robert Crim in a caucus Tuesday night its choice to run against Brown in November. Crim, 44, a native of Carbondale, is a retired U.S. Air Force major.

The winning candidate will fill Robinson's board seat until it expires in November 1982.

Walter Robinson disappeared from the area five months ago leaving a resignation the board would not accept until it was verified.

Civil Service salary plan opposed

By Scott Canon
Staff Writer

The Civil Service Employees Council decided Wednesday to send a letter to SIU-C President Albert Somit stating its opposition to a salary step-plan drawn up by Personnel Services.

The council opposes the plan because it feels the plan discriminates against career civil service employees, council Chairperson Phyllis McCowen said.

The plan, which must win Board of Trustees and state approval, is designed to bring University civil service salaries in line with those of state code employees, McCowen said.

However, McCowen said the council approves of raising civil service wages to the level of state code employees, but it believes the plan is set up in a way that favors new employees over career employees.

McCowen said, "Most of the people that have worked for one period of time—and by this I mean 12 or 14 years—are already at the top of the pay scale set down in the step-plan."

The step-plan has seven levels for each job classification and most of the increases will go to those employees that are at the lower levels, McCowen said. That policy would discriminate against career employees since newer employees would gain most from the increases, McCowen said.

If the plan is implemented it will apply only to range civil service employees. Range refers to those employees whose salaries are within a specific range set down by the University, McCowen said.

McCowen said the council can act only in an advisory fashion and that the letter to Somit is intended to show the council's dissatisfaction with the step-plan.

Lawsuit decision delayed indefinitely

"We are looking for a remedy to the violation of the law, and that remedy would be to cancel every decision reached at the illegal meeting," Schwartzman said. "The board has to be shown that they cannot get away with this sort of thing."

"What good is the Open Meetings Act if a violator can say, 'OK, so I did wrong. I won't do it again,' and he gets away with any actions he wants during that meeting? I don't think this is what the legislature had in mind when they designed the law, and we're going to press the judge for this ruling."

Feirich said that three previous cases involving the act resulted in convictions, but did not negate the actions taken at the meetings in question. There isn't a legal precedent to back up what the FOCB is asking for, he said.

The original civil suit was brought against the board in June 1979 by Byron and charged the board's members with 14 violations of the act. The suit also asked that executive sessions of the board be tape recorded or transcribed by a reporter, and the board subsequently adopted policies including recording of its closed sessions.

The suit charges that in January 1979 the board held two days of closed executive sessions during which a decision to initiate the chancellor system was made. The announcement that the system had been selected was made at a five-minute open session the next day, the suit charges.

Israel, Egypt agree to U.S. summit

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt (AP) — Egypt and Israel agreed Wednesday to resume the stalled Palestinian autonomy talks in the coming weeks and prepare for a summit with the United States after the November U.S. presidential elections.

The development came one month after Egypt suspended the talks in displeasure with Israel's declaration that all Jerusalem, including the Arab-populated eastern sector, was its eternal capital.

KKK grand dragon burglary suspect

CENTRALIA (AP) — Charges were filed in four counties against the head of the Illinois Ku Klux Klan, a suspect in burglaries in a six-county area of Southern and Central Illinois.

James McKinney, 28, grand dragon of the Illinois Klan, and his roommate and fellow klansman, Robert Scott Hansen, 26, are being held under $25,000 bond each in the Clinton County Jail in Carlyle.

State's Attorney Pat Hitpas charged the men Wednesday with two counts of burglary each for the July 4 and Aug. 5 burglaries of a Centralia residence.

Polish government freezes prices

KATOWICE, Poland (AP) — Victorious Silesian miners started returning to work Wednesday and the Polish government announced a price freeze on meat and other foods, consumer items, rents and public transportation fares in an effort to meet worker complaints about rising living costs.

The miners agreed to return to coal pits after winning concessions from Poland's beleaguered government in an agreement that signaled an end to the country's two-month wave of crippling strikes.

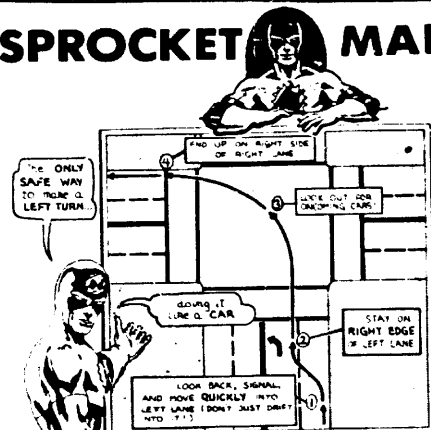

St. Louis desegregation goes smoothly

ST. LOUIS (AP) — "Let's make it work," said ribbons handed out as city schools opened peacefully Wednesday under a court-ordered, partial desegregation plan which requires busing 7,600 youngsters.

School officials reported no trouble as nearly 180 buses exchanged students between the predominantly black north side with the predominantly white south side.

"We've got some typical first-day confusion," said Albert L. Reinsch, principal at Grover Cleveland High School. "I expect a temporary adjustment period and then it will be business as usual."

Pitch in to help your city on 'Carbondale Clean-up Day'

Have you ever felt, at one time or another, like picking up litter, but saw your virtuous intentions as being totally insignificant to the correction of the real problem?

Have you ever felt guilty about the times you've littered accidentally or intentionally?

Unfortunately, for most of us, the answer to these questions is yes. "Carbondale Clean-up Day '80" will be a day where you and I can say, "Yes, why not? I've always wanted to pitch in, but I never had the time, or I didn't think that my good Samaritan efforts were of any social significance."

"Carbondale Clean-up Day '80," scheduled for September 20, will be a day where students, student organizations, and the citizens of Carbondale can pitch in and help clean up our environment.

The major purpose for having "Carbondale Clean-up Day '80" is to increase the prestige of both Southern Illinois University and the city of Carbondale.

In the past, both SIU and the city of Carbondale have been socially criticized, especially by mass media, for being "Burned-out in Carbondale" in 1979 and the "No 1 Party School of the Year" in 1966. No one can measure the impact of what these "labels" have done in deteriorating the image, creditation and reputation of both SIU and the city of Carbondale.

No one can deny the fact that other schools in other cities across our nation participate in partying, drinking, getting high, etc., and that they, in turn, could also be given a "bad" name with proper exposure by mass media.

But "Carbondale Clean-up Day '80" will hopefully reverse this trend and show that respectable and constructive events are happening in the city of Carbondale.

Furthermore, through the utilization of untapped resources, such as specialized student organizations and individuals, this event can be a realization.

All interested students should contact Undergraduate Student Organization (USO) between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday at 536-3387. —Michael Popienko, Senior, Finance

Follow spirit of meetings law, not necessarily letter of it

By Lenore Sobota
Associate Editor

Supporters of open meetings are already starting to miss former Illinois Attorney General William J. Scott.

Throughout his 12 years as attorney general, Scott consistently interpreted the Illinois Open Meetings Act broadly to ensure that public agencies, boards and councils held their meetings in the open. The state's courts did not always agree with Scott's interpretations of the law. They were not required to follow his legal opinions. But at least there was someone in Springfield who supported the idea that public business should be conducted in public.

But now Scott is a convicted tax evader and Tyrone C. Fahner is the man in charge.

In his first legal opinion concerning the Illinois Open Meetings Act, Fahner advised the Sangamon County state's attorney that when a governmental body holds a closed meeting under the provisions of the act, it doesn't have to give any public notice that the meeting is going to take place. Now the public will not only be unaware of what is going on behind closed doors, the public won't even know anything is going on behind closed doors.

The Open Meetings Act is hard enough to enforce as it is. Despite its bold proclamation that the actions of governmental bodies should be taken openly and that their deliberations be conducted openly, the act does not do the job as well as it could and should. Several broad and vague exceptions are included which can easily be used by governmental bodies to hold closed meetings that violate the spirit of the law but pay lip service to the letter of the law.

In this case, the letter of the law says public notice is required of all meetings required by this Act to be public. Therefore, Fahner is technically correct. A governmental body does not appear to be required to give notice of a meeting that falls under an exception to the Open Meetings Act.

But what about the spirit of the law?

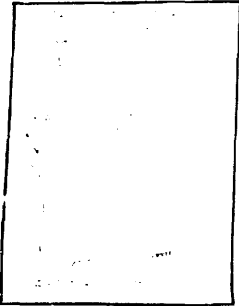

If the public policy of openness—supposedly supported by the Open Meetings Act—is going to be carried out, public notice of ALL meetings should be required. This enables the press and public to do a little checking and see whether the closed meeting legitimately falls under an exception to the Open Meetings Act. Advance notice provides time to take action to prevent an illegal closed session either by showing up at the meeting and appealing to the honesty of the public officials present, or by seeking a court order.

If Fahner's interpretation is followed, the meeting can be over and done with before anyone—other than those in attendance—knows the meeting even took place.

Fortunately, many governmental bodies, including the SIU Board of Trustees—have routinely provided public notice of all meetings, open and closed. It is hoped these practices will continue despite Fahner's pronouncement. Otherwise, it's time for the General Assembly to think about amending the act again.

As the Open Meetings Act says, "It is the public policy of this State that the public commissions, committees, boards and councils and other public agencies in this State exist to aid in the conduct of the people's business." Fahner and all governmental bodies in this state should remember that

SIU has its priorities mixed up

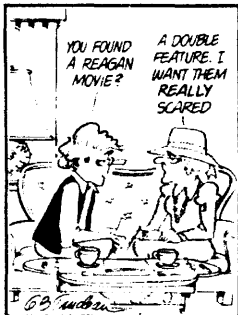

It amazes me that the University feels that recreation is more essential than studying. Why else would the Student Center and Rec Center keep normal hours over Labor Day weekend while the library is open half its normal hours? I find it especially irksome in light of the fact that I pay extra for the Student Center and for intercollegiate athletics and rarely if ever use the Student Center or see an intercollegiate game. Why not let Student Programming run the library over short holidays? What else have they got to do? —Robert Snyder, Junior, Art

DOONESBURY

by Garry Trudeau

The George Brett Trophy, for terrific battling by a presidential candidate in August, will not be awarded.

Ronald Reagan, who knows that Jimmy Carter's campaign consists almost entirely of charges that he is belligerent, antiquated and flip, managed in one week to praise American involvement in the Vietnam war, dramatize a ticklish problem of diplomatic recognition: Would he—could he—should he—establish normalized relations with his running mate?

Reagan said, correctly, that our cause in Vietnam was noble. But that subject, like the subject of evolution, is large enough to deserve more than brief, off-the-cuff ventilation.

Our cause was the defense of a small ally from aggression; it was an attempt to prevent the horrors that have, in fact, followed our failure. Reagan understands that large events cast their shadows forward, and that reassertion of American strength depends, in part, on Americans rejecting the shame they have been told to feel about Vietnam, an undertaking that actually was, in the words of Eugene Rostow, "legally, morally, and strategically, identical with the Korean war."

Regarding Taiwan, Reagan's explication was careless, but his instinct is sound, which is more than can be said for the President. Reagan understands that Carter has acted as though Peking was doing us a favor by accepting normalized relations, a favor for which we should pay much and ask nothing. Such relations are at least as important to Peking as they are to us, so Peking can jolly well pay the price of tolerating decent relations between the United States and an old ally. Instead, Carter allowed Peking to dictate terms that made the United States party to a range of niggling humiliations of Taiwan.

Regarding Vietnam and Taiwan, Reagan has a better case to make than he has taken care to make. Regarding both, he has at least been more concerned with honor than politics. The reverse is true of Carter's campaign.

Many Americans, schooled in cynicism by Carter's manipulation and exploitation of the Iran tragedy and other foreign and defense matters for political gain, expect "October surprises"—foreign policy adventures timed to influence the election. Certainly Carter's August surprises were remarkably reckless.

His revised nuclear targeting strategy surprised Republicans: It plagiarizes Page 53 of the Republican platform and concedes Reagan's point about the vulnerability of our land-based deterrent. It surprised the secretary of state, who would have liked an opportunity to shove his ear into the policy-making process. It surprised the Russians, who know Carter is not taking the procurement and other measures necessary to make this new "policy" more than a campaign maneuver.

Carter surprised the American Legion (and anyone else who knows the record he is struggling to obscure) when he said that "instead" of building the B-1 bomber, he decided to "accelerate" development of air-launched cruise missiles. The truth is that after he killed the B-1, he continued to retard the ALCM program and has delayed it at least two years.

Now the administration has leaked and wildly misrepresented information about some of the most close kept defense secrets since the Manhattan Project. For security reasons, some civilians working on the "invisible" aircraft technologies have had to agree to allow the government to tap their phones. Actually, these new programs, some of which may enable aircraft to "absorb" or otherwise defeat radar detection, are not new. Carter did not start them, and their fruits are not imminent.

Had Carter not killed the B-1, there would now be operational squadrons of B-1s. Because he killed it, the United States can have nothing comparable until the 1990s. The administration may have contrived to give the impression that it has plans to utilize "stealth" technologies for an aircraft that will fill the gap of vulnerability created by its B-1 decision. It does not.

Still, Harold Brown, the complaint secretary of defense, says, preposterously, that "stealth" technologies (for hypothetical aircraft that do not exist, cannot exist in this decade, and probably will never exist if Carter is reelected) "alters"—Brown uses the present tense, for pete's sake—"alters the military balance." It is exquisitely right that the Carter administration, which has killed or delayed every strategic program it inherited, and has initiated none, now brags about invisible aircraft. —Copyright 1980. Officials' pay to be analyzed for inequities

By Randy Roguski
Staff Writer

A study which would indicate whether SIUC administrators and professionals are paid fairly compared to their peers on campus and at comparable institutions is being proposed by the Administrative and Professional Staff Council.

Charles Daugherty, AP Council chairman, said the study would also suggest an improved system of assigning titles to administrative and professional positions.

The AP Council is a constituency group representing administrators and professional staff members in University administration. The council consists of employees not included in faculty or civil service classifications.

Daugherty said President Albert Somit must give the go-ahead for the study and that it would take about four months to complete once it is approved.

Former acting-President Hiram Lesar expressed interest in the study last summer. Daugherty said. Although he has not yet discussed the study with Somit, Daugherty said he "expects the same response."

Daugherty said the council was encouraged to pursue the equity study after Gov. James Thompson announced at a recent press conference that he will be supportive of measures to rectify any inequities in salaries for higher education employees in Illinois.

It has not been determined whether the study would be conducted by Institutional Research or by a firm outside the University, according to Harold Richard, director of Institutional Research.

Richard said a study conducted by his office presents the danger of biased results.

"People find it hard to be dispassionate when they're talking about their bread and butter," he said.

However, Richard said that an outside firm would rely on an organizational structure which might be different than SIUC's structure. He said the structure of any institution is "peculiar to that institution," and the danger of a study by an external firm is "the peculiarity of slotting people to jobs."

"You can't fit them with a shoehorn," he said. "We have people here who must operate as autonomous professionals."

First BEOG checks arrive

By Carol Knowles
Staff Writer

The first round of Basic Educational Opportunity Grant checks will be disbursed beginning Thursday, according to Joseph Camille, director of the SIU-C Student Work and Financial Assistance Office.

Students who returned their Student Eligibility Report by Aug. 15 and who registered for classes by Aug. 22 will, in most cases, be eligible to pick up their BEOG checks.

The first round of Secondary Educational Opportunity Grants, National Direct Student Loans and Student to Student Grants are also being processed this week. Postcards will be mailed to notify students that this funding has come in, Camille said.

Illinois Guaranteed Loans are being processed and picked up by students as the loans come through the office, Camille added.

BEOG checks will be distributed according to the first letter of a student's last name on the following dates:

T to Z Thursday, Sept. 4
O to S Friday, Sept. 5
K to N Monday, Sept. 8

E to J Tuesday, Sept. 9
A to D Wednesday, Sept. 10
The $25 deduction in BEOG funding will be reflected in the check a student receives, Camille said.

Postcards will be mailed to students in advance of each pickup date to let them know that they are eligible. A student may also check with the financial aid office if he feels he is eligible.

Camille said of the 4,393 Student Eligibility Reports received by the Aug. 15 deadline, only 2,889 checks will be disbursed during the first round. Identification number mismatches, student holds, incomplete student files and financial aid termination could all result in the delay of check disbursement. Also, a student registered for less than six class hours will not be able to pick up a BEOG check.

The second disbursement of BEOG checks will begin the week of Sept. 15. An exact date has not been set.

Announcement of flight plans may help to deter speeders

By Andrew Strang
Staff Writer

The Illinois State Police will be announcing when and where its airplanes will be monitoring automobile speeds in hopes of deterring motorists from driving faster than the 55 mph speed limit, according to a police spokesman.

Public Affairs Trooper Charles Schwarting said that the Aircraft Speed Zone Alert Program will go in to effect within the next two weeks. The pilots who fly the airplanes will give their schedules to the news media every two weeks, Schwarting said.

There will be no increase in the number of airplanes that will be checking automobile speeds, said Melvin Kersten, public information officer for state police District 13, which includes Carbondale. Rather, police hope that by making motorists aware that airplanes will be in their area, they will keep to the speed limit, Kersten said.

The program is just one of several methods being used by state police to attempt to control vehicle speeds on Illinois roads, according to Kersten.

Prosecutor labels resignation a hoax

SAN DIEGO, AP — Assistant U.S. Attorney Thomas M. Coffin says a classified ad in a newspaper announcing his resignation is a hoax. He suspects somebody he once convicted did it.

The advertisement said Coffin and Roger W. Haines Jr., another federal prosecutor, had formed a private law partnership.

A newspaper spokesman said the ad was placed over the telephone in by a man claiming to be Coffin. The $120 cost was never paid.

It is a federal offense to impersonate a federal officer or to use the telephone to defraud.

Airplanes have been used to monitor the highways for the last "15 to 20 years," Kersten said. He said the new program adds no costs to the state police budget because no new airplanes or men will be used.

He added that the U.S. Department of Transportation has placed pressure on the states to enforce the 55 mph speed limit by threatening to cut off funding for the building and maintenance of roadways.

Schwarting said that the program has been used successfully by other police agencies.

Three bands set for lakeside jam

By Karen Clare Staff Writer

A lakeside concert featuring three Carbondale-based bands is scheduled for Saturday at the Campus Lake boat dock.

The first Lakeside Fest, which is being sponsored by Center Programming, one committee associated with the Student Programming Council, will begin at 2 p.m. Admission is free.

Dan DiOrio, chairman of SPC Center Programming, said he hopes it will be a "dance day" for everyone who attends.

Katie and the Smokers, a band which has played circuits in Chicago and the East Coast, will open the show. DiOrio said the band describes its sound as modified rock.

"They're an older band, real diversified. They add their own style," he said.

DiOrio said the band plays music by such artists as Steely Dan, Eric Clapton, Robert Palmer and Edgar Winter.

Powder Blue will take the stage at about 5 p.m. Lead singer Larry Williams, a former member of Big Twist and the Mellow Fellows, is probably the most well-known member of this funk and disco group.

"They—Powder Blue—play a lot of funk and disco and a few originals," DiOrio added.

New Wave fans will have their musical tastes met at 8 p.m. when Bras will perform. Bras, a three-piece band with a New Wave flavor, will play high-energy rock 'n' roll by such artists as Talking Heads and the Ramones.

"DiOrio said the band also plays "rockers" by such artists as Aerosmith and the Beatles, to name two.

"All three bands are danceable and high energy," DiOrio said. "I think they are some of the better Carbondale bands."

DiOrio is looking forward to a good turnout at the fest and said that the event could set the precedent for a yearly tradition.

Before returning home to Carbondale this weekend, we'd like to thank everyone who came to see us this summer at Evergreen Park and those of you who helped make our first appearance at Chicagofest a dynamite time.

We're looking forward to coming back to Hangar 9 and gettin' crazy with all of you.

See ya then!

Elevator for handicapped built; other facilities to be modified

By Colleen Moore
Staff Writer

An elevator that has been installed in the B Wing of Woody Hall is the first of a series of facility improvements for the handicapped.

Also included in the improvement project are additional curb cuts, ramps and automatic door operators, and modifications to make rest rooms, laboratories, drinking fountains and elevator controls more easily accessible.

The target date for completion of the project is May 30, 1981.

The elevator should be in operation by Monday, according to Supervising Architect Allen Haake of the Physical Plant.

The elevator will reach most floors of Woody Hall, except for the second and third floors of the C Wing, Haake said. Haake said the cost of the elevator was $192,763.

The elevator will have a device which calls off floor numbers to aid the blind, Haake said.

Additional hand rails and larger toilet compartments will be installed in rest rooms at various locations, Haake said. Knee spaces and special handles on faucets will be made at many lab stations in Life Science II, Lindgren Hall, the Neckers Building, the Agriculture Building and Brown Auditorium, he said. Work on these projects is expected to begin this week, Haake said.

Work on lowering drinking fountains is also expected to begin this week, Haake said. Fountain modifications are planned for the Technology Building, Quigley Hall, Lawson Hall, the Agriculture Building, Morris Library, Woody Hall, the Arena, the Wham Educational Building and the General Classrooms Building.

Construction on ramps and elevator control buttons should begin by Sept. 15, Haake said.

Haake said other improvements will include:

—additional ramps at Woody Hall, Washington Square and the Technology Building;

—lowering call buttons in elevators at the Communications Building, the Technology Building, Life Science II, Quigley Hall, the Neckers Building and the General Classrooms Building, and,

—installation of automatic door operators at the east entrance of the Communications Building and at Morris Library.

Haake said if additional funds become available, elevators may be built in Altgeld Hall, Wheeler Hall and at Small Group Housing. He added that improvements may be made to freight elevators in the Agriculture Building and Pulliam Hall.

Textbooks. Shelves of them. And more shelves. Everything you'll need for the coming year of reading, writing, and arithmetic. All the required course materials and suggested readings. Accounting through Zoology, with the alphabet of knowledge in between. In one place, at one time. To make it easier on you.

Supplies. The ones you'd expect to find. Notebooks and pens, pencils and folders. And the ones you may not know about. Like the engineering supplies, the art supplies. It's all right there, so you can stop when you buy your books. No running around to collect everything you need to start the semester. You're busy enough as it is.

Employees in University Bookstore aprons, who are there when you need them. And know the answers to your questions. They keep the shelves stocked. Keep the lines moving. Help you get through book buying as quickly as possible.

There's even prices that don't leave a hole in your pocket. Used books save you 25%, and we have lots of them.

Master Charge and Visa may be used for any purchase at the Main Office or in the Supply Dept.

And it's nice to know that what you pay for books goes back into the operation of the Student Center. To help pay for the free coin return lockers, the TV lounges and Info Desk. It's one of the reasons the low prices of bowling and billiards stay low.

What's it all add up to? Convenience. Low prices and help when you need it. A return on your investment. Through the door of the University Bookstore. That's what's in it for you.

SPC group has fresh outlook

By Carrie Sweeney
Focus Editor

Blend together a new chairman, a new name and a stack of fresh ideas. Mix with endless hours of work and a lot of enthusiasm, and the end product is the Student Programming Council's Expressive Arts Committee.

Formerly SPC Lectures, the committee has taken on both a new name and a new outlook towards this year's student programming, said Greg Janese, committee chairman. "The committee programs more than just lectures. We also provide many other forms of entertainment," he added. "I felt the name lectures committee had a negative and boring connotation. I felt that the title needed to be changed to something more appealing and descriptive of what we actually do plan."

The committee, which is made up of student volunteers who are interested in gaining public relations experience, does more than just book speakers, Janese said. Members do research on an available show to determine whether it would appeal to people at SIU-C, set terms for the contract under the allotted budget, plan the marketing strategy and see to it that all the performer's arrangements are made.

"There's a lot more work involved than just booking a performer," Janese added with a laugh. "A lot more. We have to take care of every need and every detail."

He added that interested students who want to join the committee are welcome to come to the SPC office on the third floor of the Student Center.

"Working with SPC is a good step in the door," said Janese, a senior in public relations. "You learn how to work with the major agencies out of New York and Los Angeles and you actually get involved in what it takes to put on a show."

"Many people don't realize that this school has a well-known reputation. Nationally, SIU is considered in the top 10 for its programming, so it really isn't difficult to get top lecturers or entertainers, as long as it's financially feasible for the committee," added Janese, who was assistant public relations director for the Du Quoin State Fair this summer.

One main consideration when scheduling events is the committee's budget, which comes from student fees, Janese said. SPC rarely receives a profit from ticket sales, he added.

"The ticket prices that we charge enable the committee to just break even. Speakers are so expensive these days, and once all the fees are paid out there isn't any money left to make a profit on," Janese explained.

Although programming for next spring has not yet been completed, arrangements for this semester's schedule began in May. On Sept. 12, at 7:15 p.m. in Student Center Ballroom D, A Whitney Brown, a comedian/juggler from California, will perform as part of SIU-C Open House night.

Co-sponsored with Shryock Auditorium is a performance by The Amazing Kreskin, at 8 p.m. Sept. 13 in Shryock. In addition, Robert Weiss, producer of the movie "The Blues Brothers" and a graduate of SIU-C, will speak at the Student Center Ballrooms Oct. 15.

"Booking Weiss was a gamble for me," Janese said. "I had an intuitive feeling that the movie was going to sell, even before it was released, and so five months ago I signed him to appear. It just so happened that I gambled right."

"In the entertainment business sometimes that's all you have to go on."

No dreams come true in 'Xanadu'; special effects can't hide bad film

Jim Pflaum
at Writer

"Xanadu!" Where dreams come true! Where no acting or dancing skill is required to play the leads? Where people wear roller skates all the time—even when they are talking to gods?

The mushy storyline of "Xanadu" casts Olivia Newton-John as Kira, a daughter of Zeus sent down to help frustrated artist Sonny Malone (Michael Beck). Gene Kelly plays Danny McGuire, a retired musician who doesn't know what to do with his golden years.

Somehow Sonny and Danny get together and open up a disco with the help of Kira. However, Kira happens to fall in love with Sonny along the way. In other words, your standard "boy-meets-goddess" musical.

Most of "Xanadu," however, is anything but standard. One scene typifies the general confusion which dominates the mood of this film. A 1940's swing band complete with dancers plays old favorites in one corner of the disco while a semi-punk band (The Tubes) jams in another corner.

Review

Scenes of the two bands are edited together badly into one big mess. While this opportunity invites some interesting comparisons between the New Wave and the old standards, it comes off as pointless and does nothing for the movie.

To add insult to injury, the two bands then join together for one tune that sounds particularly awful.

Newton-John's singing talent and personal magnetism unfortunately adds no spark to "Xanadu." While her singing is as good as ever, her range as an actress is narrow as newsprint.

Director Robert Greenwald fills "Xanadu" with special effects hokum that run throughout the movie. He probably realized that his two lead characters were no great shakes and figured he could gloss over their ineptitude by impressing the audience with flashy lights and disappearing people. However, most audiences will take intelligent dialogue and competent acting performances over cheap special effects anytime.

For all of "Xanadu's" elaborate dance numbers and expensive special effects tomfoolery, the film lacks charm and, more importantly, heart.

'Man without talent' steals the show whether on or off Evansville stage

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — "I can't sing, I can't dance and I can't act," the president of the University of Evansville protested a decade ago when asked to star in a locally produced musical.

"We know," the show's organizers replied, "but you certainly would sell tickets."

With no further ado, a star was born.

And U.E. president Wallace Graves had so much fun that now, 10 years later, he's recreating the presidential performance that he says proved once and for all "I have no talent whatsoever."

The audience and the critics obviously disagree, citing Graves' strong voice and excellent stage manner in the title role of Gilbert and Sullivan's 19th-century operetta "The Mikado."

A social and political satire, "The Mikado" is set in the Japanese town of Titipu, and chronicles the nearly unrequited love of strolling musician Nanki-Poo for the delicate and pure Yum-Yum.

Nanki-Poo is actually the Mikado's son, disgusted and hiding from an older and somewhat gruesome lady of the court whom his father has commanded him to marry.

Nanki-Poo and Yum-Yum get together in the end, thanks to the ingenious ploys of the townspeople, who also find time to poke gentle fun at the arrogance, greed and inefficiency of politics.

The local production was conceived in 1971 by a British professor teaching at U.E. and a member of the school's music club. "They tricked me into it," the 58-year-old Graves insists, but his grin gives him away. "Actually, there is a bit of ham lurking here," said Graves.

Amateur and professional actors from the university, the community and local high schools spent several months rehearsing.

The show opened to a packed house. "A lot of people wanted to see me make an ass out of myself," Graves recalls. "I accommodated them."

The production was such a success that the opera company was forced to add a matinee. By the time it was over, Graves says, "I was ready for the big time. I was hooked."

In the years that followed the actors staged nine Gilbert and Sullivan shows. Graves played the Lord Chancellor in "Iolanthe" in 1977, but turned down a bit part offered in another play — "No songs," he confides. "Not enough lines."

"The first time, it was sheer terror," he says. But he sees his extra-curricular activities as beneficial both for the university and himself.

"I think it's important to occasionally try something not in your regular line of work or play — something alien and difficult, to make sure you know how to meet a challenge," he says.

"And just the thought I would do something like this. I think it makes me seem more human to people, besides, it's fun."

If Graves has yet to crack under pressure, it's not because his colleagues haven't done their best to heckle him during performances.

In one scene, an actor hands him a scroll. Graves unrolled it during a performance — and found it contained a Playboy centerfold.

His elaborate costume consists of long, flowing silk robes and an 18-inch pointed hat. He modeled it for a reporter, then strode through the halls of the Administration Building, leaving a sea of stunned students and secretaries in his wake.

"It's the new cone-head look," he told them, his face serious. "Do you like it?"

Graves, who has served as U.E.'s chief executive for 13 years, studied political science and international relations before taking the reins at the liberal arts college of 6,600 students.

He's been known to step out of his presidential role long enough to take his place in the dunking booths at various fundraisers.

And because his character does not appear on stage until the middle of "The Mikado," he isn't at all shy about roaming around outside the theater in full costume to search of a soft drink machine.

"I think of it as laying myself on the line," Graves explains. "It's out of character for me. I mean, I don't go around singing and dancing at faculty meetings."

But as soon as he says it, the wide grin is back. "Maybe I should," he says, "maybe I should."

Non-readers may be intelligent

SAN DIEGO (AP)—Some intelligent children simply cannot be taught to read, and society should accept that fact instead of wasting money and time in a vain effort, according to the head of a learning disability clinic run by the nation's largest prepaid health plan.

"It's like a physical handicap for some kids, a code they'll never break," Dr. John H. Richards, director of the Kaiser-Permanente learning disability clinic in San Diego, said Tuesday.

"Let's not say a child is a failure just because he can't do one thing," Richards said. "If he can't read by the age of 13 or 14, encourage him to go into other areas where reading isn't essential."

There are "geniuses with an IQ of 150 and over who can't read and never will be able to," who deserve a chance to earn fame and fortune, Richards said in an interview.

"We all were brought up that you're dumb if you're illiterate or certainly that you can learn with enough special instruction," Richards said, "but after 13 years of research, I'm convinced that simply isn't true."

"There comes a time to give up trying to teach them to read and start letting them live around it."

Richards, a 46-year-old pediatrician, said at least 2 percent of young people unable to read can become successful "when they're out in situations where they don't have to read, at least not out loud."

The toughest thing for parents is to admit it, he said, "but they're gradually beginning to understand they're putting an awful lot of money and time into kids who will never learn to read."

"Admit it, some people just can't read," Richards said.

"It's not the end of the world."

Touch of Nature sponsors student outdoor trips

Beginning Sunday, groups of eight to 10 people will head for the wilderness in a series of Student Outdoor Adventure Recreation (SOAR) trips sponsored by the Touch of Nature Environmental Center.

Students, faculty and staff can bicycle, orienteer, canoe, explore caves, climb rocks, backpack and ski, according to Clem Dabrowski, SOAR coordinator and leader of most trips.

Dabrowski said the SOAR program stresses camping without harm to the wilderness and learning by experience rather than instruction.

SOAR trips sometimes confront participants with "challenging situations," such as rock climbing, to instill self-confidence, Dabrowski said.

An "Outdoor Adventure Weekend" at the Touch of Nature Center and two overnight bicycle tours in the Shawnee National Forest, are new to the fall semester SOAR agenda. Activities being considered for the Adventure Weekend include backpacking, canoeing, map and compass navigating, rock climbing and caving.

Groups will also travel to Land Between the Lakes, Ky.; the Eleven Point and Current Rivers, Mo.; Grand Canyon, Ariz.; Okefenokee Swamp, Ga.; and the Porcupine Mountains, Mich.

Trip costs vary from nothing (a free moonlight canoe trip on Little Grassy Lake) to $150 (the Grand Canyon backpacking trip). Charges cover transportation, most equipment, first aid supplies and wilderness instruction.

Further information is available from Dabrowski at Touch of Nature, 457-0348.

Republican dreams may be broken by Democratic state strongholds

WASHINGTON (AP)—Republicans, hoping to win the presidency and dreaming of a congressional majority, stand to chance whatsoever of reversing the Democratic lead in governorships this year. But GOP strategists believe they can close the wide gap of the Watergate era.

Currently there are 31 Democratic governors and just 13 Republicans. Some 13 spots are up on Nov. 4, including 10 held by the Democrats.

Democratic officials say they expect to maintain a significant majority of governorships, but the numbers and the politics provide the GOP with an opportunity for advances.

"We're competitive in just about every race," says one prominent Republican. Of the 13 governors' jobs up for election this year, 10 are held by Democrats. And the three Republican seats at risk are in GOP strongholds—Delaware, Indiana and Vermont.

One incumbent already has lost his re-election bid. Gov. Thomas L. Judge of Montana was defeated by Lt. Gov. Ted Schwinden in a late-spring Democratic primary. The only other "open" seat is in Indiana where Republican Otis Bowen is retiring after two terms.

The North Dakota situation demonstrates the Democratic tenacity in gubernatorial spots, the last Republican governor was elected in 1958. Gov. Arthur A. Link had no serious opposition in Tuesday's Democratic primary. Front-runner in the GOP field was State Attorney General Allen Olsen.

Although several other primaries are scheduled this month, incumbents in both parties are favored for renomination and in most cases re-election.

The GOP hopes to continue its recent upswing. The Republicans slipped to 13 governors in 1974, the first full elections after Watergate. In 1976, they lost one more, but stood at 18 after the 1978 elections. David Treen's off-year victory in Louisiana pulled it to 19.

Among the closely watched contests this year is Missouri, where Democrat Joseph P. Teasdale is facing a challenge from Kit Bond, the Republican he ousted in 1976.

In New Hampshire, former Republican Gov. Meldrim Thomson is favored to win the Sept. 9 primary and another crack at Gov. Hugh Gallen, the Democrat who retired him two years ago.

In West Virginia, another former governor, Republican Arch Moore, is seeking revenge against Democratic incumbent Jay Rockefeller.

Washington Gov. Dixy Lee Ray is facing a strong challenge in the Sept. 16 Democratic primary from State Sen. James McDermott. Three prominent Republicans are vying for the GOP nomination, and both parties see this as a key contest.

Democrat Bill Clinton of Arkansas, the country's youngest governor, is challenged by former Democrat Frank White, a Little Rock banker who switched parties last spring.

Gov. Pete DuPont of Delaware is a heavy favorite for re-election. His Democratic opponent will be State Sen. William J. Gordy.

Carter seizes offensive

By The Associated Press
Hours before Ronald Reagan's appearance before an important Jewish organization, President Carter offhandedly disclosed plans Wednesday for another Middle East peace summit, and spent the rest of the day courting ethnic and Jewish voters in the industrial Northeast.

Seizing the offensive in his re-election campaign, Carter casually announced that Egyptian and Israeli leaders had agreed to resume their stalled peace negotiations and to meet with him at another Mideast summit.

Then, bolstered by endorsements from two labor unions, the president toured Philadelphia ethnic neighborhoods and, in a predominantly black church, pictured Reagan as a potential destroyer of the Social Security system.

Reagan, the president's Republican challenger, had most of the day off to work on his evening speech to the national convention of B'nai B'rith, the influential Jewish service organization.

John Anderson, the independent candidate, tried to dispel reports that his campaign was floundering financially.

"The money is coming in, fear not," he told reporters in Detroit as he completed a five-day campaign swing through Wisconsin, Illinois and Michigan. "We will be able to finance this campaign."

Carter won the endorsement Wednesday of the million-member American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees and the 250,000 member United Transportation Union on Wednesday.

But the 800,000-member International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, a strong re-convention supporter of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy for the Democratic presidential nomination, chose at a convention in Cincinnati to remain neutral.

NIU instructor compiles 'figures' giving Miss Kansas contest edge

By Andrew Strang
Staff Writer

Miss Kansas is starting off at 2-to-1 odds to win Saturday night's Miss America Pageant in Atlantic City. Or at least George Miller, a Northern Illinois University professor who successfully predicted last year's winner, says so.

Miller, a professor of business and analytical systems, has developed a computer program that predicts the pageant's winner through composite statistical profiles of all the pageant's contestants.

He predicts that 21-year old Leann Folsom of Kansas will win this year. He successfully predicted that Miss Mississippi, Cheryl Prewitt, would win last year's contest. He gave Prewitt 9-2 odds last year, so he is more confident of this year's choice.

The statistical model is a serious attempt to predict future actions through statistical probabilities, Miller said, defending himself against people who protest his work on the grounds that the pageant is sexist.

Choices for finalists this year include Miss Michigan, with 8-1 odds, and Miss California, with 10-1 odds, Miller said. Miss Illinois has a chance to finish in the top 10, although Miller did not say what her odds were.

The predictive model is correct "about one out of four times on the basis of information available before the pageant and about one-half of the time using data available on the day of the finals," Miller said.

The information that goes into the statistical model includes the contestants' academic progress, their physical attributes, and their talents which will be shown in the contest, he said. All of the factors are combined and manipulated and a composite score is obtained, the professor of business and analytical systems said.

He said equal waist and bust sizes on a girl will score well with the judges. "Folk singing and baton twirling don't do well," he added.

The formula does not have any allowances for possible biases of the judges, but Miller is considering altering the formula next year to incorporate the judges in the prediction.

Miller said that he does not gamble on the pageant, and not many people have offered to bet with him.

"I'm sure that there is a lot of activity in Atlantic City over my prediction," he added.

The predictive model was devised as part of a paper Miller wrote with Chippei Tseng, also a NIU instructor. The paper, titled "The Anatomy of Miss America," was written for the American Statistical Association's convention in 1979. Miller has received national press coverage of this year's prediction.

Wednesday's Puzzle Solved

Plane's cargo intact after flaming crash

CHICAGO (AP)—Six vials of mildly radioactive material were removed intact Wednesday from the charred cockpit of a twin-engine cargo plane that skimmed trees, clipped rooftops on two homes and crashed in flames on a South Side street, authorities said.

People in the homes escaped injury. The pilot of the propeller-driven Rockwell Aero Commander, Ivan Adams, 29, of Chenoa died in a hospital. He was the only person aboard and had 14 years of flying experience, officials said.

The craft was leased by Purolator Courier Corp. from Clark Aviation Inc. in Bloomington and was carrying freight and canceled checks.

A spokesman for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission said the six vials were being carried in dry ice inside a two-foot square container that was in the plane's cockpit instead of the cargo area. Investigators said the container had a radioactive warning symbol printed on the sides.

An NRC inspector successfully removed the container. He said the vials contained "small quantities" of radioactive material for use in laboratory research and posed no hazard.

Authorities speculated that the plane might have lost power in one engine shortly after taking off.

Sports information head hired

Stan K. Blackford, former sports information director at the University of Wisconsin at Milwaukee, has been named men's sports information director at SIU.

Blackman's appointment was announced by men's Athletic Director Gale Sayers.

The 25-year-old Evansville, Ind., native is a graduate of the University of Evansville, where he earned bachelor's and master's degrees in journalism and communications. He was a graduate assistant in the University of Evansville sports information office from 1977 to 1979.

A former sports editor of the University of Evansville's student newspaper, the University Crescent, Blackford did sports information work for Wisconsin-Milwaukee's men's and women's athletics programs.

Blackford's duties at SIU will involve the publication of media guides, assisting members of the working media at Saluki sports events, and compiling statistics. He'll also write news releases concerning upcoming events.

Blackford will begin work at SIU on Thursday. He replaces Tom Simons, who resigned Aug. 8 after nearly four years at SIU.

Astros remain on top in West despite trouble in pitching staff

By the Associated Press

The Houston Astros have maintained the top spot in the National League West despite problems that have affected their four top pitchers.

With a day off after splitting a Labor Day doubleheader, the Astros were headed for Pittsburgh to close out a 10-game road trip.

Nolan Ryan, 9-8, was scheduled to pitch Wednesday night against the Pirates, but he flew home Sunday to have his sore back checked by team physicians.

It was another in a long series of pitching problems Manager Bill Virdon has contended with since J.R. Richard, 10-4, the league's strikeout king a year ago, went on the injured list July 14 and was lost for at least the season after suffering a stroke July 30.

Joe Niekro, 14-11, and Ken

Forsch, 10-11, also have had problems.

Niekro pitched Sunday, only two days after having his foot drained, but had to be relieved in the eighth inning with a 6-4 lead against Chicago. The Cubs then jumped on his relievers for three runs in the bottom of the ninth for an 8-7 victory.

"He was really hurting," Virdon said. "Otherwise, I wouldn't have taken him out."

Forsch has had two consecutive sub-par performances since a his mother was hospitalized in an intensive care unit in Sacramento, Calif. He was removed after permitting six runs in three innings as St. Louis last week and he gave up four runs in less than three innings of the first game Monday against the Pirates.

Virdon acknowledged that Forsch is having trouble concentrating, but said, "The main problem, though, is his slider hasn't been good the past two games."

Back spasms forced Ryan out of a Friday game after he worked five innings and retired seven batters in a row.

"There was no way he could go back in there," Virdon said.

The Astros announced Tuesday the acquisition of Jose Morales, a .323 hitter in 70 games with the Minnesota Twins. An hour later, however, the Astros said waiver problems had killed the deal under which the Twins were to have received a player at a later date.

Houston also called up four farm club players from Tucson, pitchers Bert Roberge and Bobby Sprawl, infielder Mike Fischlin and catcher Allan Nicely.

Braves complete sweep over Cubs

CHICAGO (AP)—Dale Murphy crashed a three-run homer and Gary Matthews added a solo shot Wednesday to lift the Atlanta Braves to a 4-3 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Murphy's opposite field drive into right, his 26th of the season, came in the seventh off Cubs starter Lynn McGlothen, 9-11, and erased a 2-0 Chicago lead.

Bob Horner led off the frame by ruining McGlothen's no-hit bid with a single off the glove of second baseman Mike Tyson. Chris Chambliss followed with another single before Murphy drove McGlothen's first delivery into the seats.

Matthews added a solo shot, his 18th of the season, with two out in the eighth.

Tom Boggs, 9-8, yielded six hits in eight innings before being relieved by Rick Camp after Jim Tracy's leadoff triple in the ninth. The hit was Tracy's fourth of the game. Mike Vail's infield groundout brought home Tracy for Chicago's final run.

Chicago got its first two runs in the fourth when rookie Carlos Lezcano hit his third major league home run after a single by Vail.

McGlothen worked eight full innings before giving way to Dick Tidrow. He yielded no hits through the sixth and allowed only three base runners, two on walks and one on an error by rightfielder Vail.

Prep spikers to play at Arena

By Michelle Schwent
Staff Writer

SIU will host a 12-team high school volleyball tournament beginning at 8 a.m. Saturday at the Arena.

The Southern Illinois Preview Invitational will include teams from Belleville-Altoff, Collinsville, Freeburg, Breese Mater Dei and Carbondale.

Saluki women's volleyball Coach Debbie Hunter said the idea behind hosting a high school tournament at SIU is to promote the growth of area volleyball.

"The tournament will also aid us in showing off the campus and our facilities, and help our recruiting," Hunter said.

Hunter said Belleville-Altoff is the tournament favorite because they have more all-around players than the other teams in the tournament. They are led by the Rule sisters, Karen Crotty and Kay Kenning.

Defending champion Collinsville may not fare as well this year as the Kahoks have lost standout Kim Brombolich to graduation. Collinsville's top returnee is letter winner Ann Price, Hunter said.

Collinsville will be tested its first match as the Kahoks face Freeburg, the Illinois High School Class A champs, at 9:30 a.m. The Kahoks bounced Freeburg in the finals of last year's Southern Illinois Preview, 20-7, 12-20, 20-18. Freeburg may be at a disadvantage since one of their star players, Julie Mueller, has been ill and may not play, according to Hunter.

Carbondale will open against Anna-Jonesboro at 8 a.m. and faces Collinsville at 11 a.m. Hunter says Carbondale should have one of the better teams despite losing some good players to graduation, including Mary Maxwell, now a Saluki.

The Terriers will have some tough games since they are in a pool with Freeburg and Collinsville.

The tournament will consist of three pools with six teams each. Each team will play round-robin within its pool. The team with the best record and the second place team in each pool will advance to the semifinals at 3:30 p.m.

Following the preliminary high school games, the Salukis will play Illinois at 5 p.m.

Ticket prices for the tournament are $2 for adults, including SIU students, and 50 cents for high school students and children. SIU students can attend the SIU-Illinois game for 50 cents. This admission will permit them to view the high school finals which follow the college game. Students will need to show a paid fall fee statement and an ID.

A's Langford not spectacular, but he's getting the job done

By The Associated Press

He's never won 20 games in a season—he has yet to have a winning major league campaign. His earned run average is 2.97, solid but not spectacular. So far this year, he's given up 197 hits, an average of more than one per inning.

So why all the fuss about Rick Langford of the Oakland A's?

Observe:
—Langford has pitched 20 consecutive complete games. The last man to do that was Robin Roberts of the Philadelphia Phillies in 1953. The major league record is 39 straight by John Taylor of Cincinnati in 1904, a reliever era.

—Langford leads the league in complete games with 23.

—Langford won nine complete games in a row until losing to Boston on Aug. 21, then again to the New York Yankees on Monday. He lost 12-1 to the Red Sox with a 12-hitter and 5-0 to the Yankees with a six-hitter.

—He has pitched 227 1-3 innings this season, third only to Larry Gura of Kansas City and Oakland teammate Mike Norris.

Langford, a 6-0 right-hander from Farmville, Va., says his secret is that he does not try to strike anyone out. He has only 77 strikeouts this season.

"I make good pitches and I work a lot on my location," Langford said. "I try to make the batter hit the ball, and that's why I pitch complete games."

Langford, 28, is in his fourth full season with the A's after being traded from the Pittsburgh Pirates with five other players for Phil Garner, Tommy Helms, and Chris Batton in March 1977. His record was 14-11 after the loss at New York.

Last year, he completed 14 games with a 12-16 record, but Manager Billy Martin has been reluctant to go to a bullpen this year that has only 10 saves total and a composite ERA of 5.58.

"I don't see any reason to pace myself," Langford said. "I take one batter at a time, and I have full confidence I can go nine innings. Billy has full confidence in me, too, and that helps.

"Last year I pitched 219 innings. That was the most I had ever gone," Langford said. "but my body will let me know."

Pitching every four days, Langford could start as many as seven more games this year, making the 30-complete game plateau reachable. He's a long way off the major league record of 48 complete games in one season by Hall of Famer Jack Chesbro of the New York Highlanders, now Yankees, in 1904, but he says he doesn't give a hoot.

"I don't care about the record for complete games," he said. "Finishing a game means nothing. Winning games is what's important."

Netters will play in-state foes

Western also will have some new netters. And ISU, a two-time victor in the fall over SIU, lost two players, but still has good depth.

"I would have liked to have played ISU during the spring."

Auld said. "The fall was just a bad season for us. We were losing and it just seemed to snowball.

"We need points from everybody," Auld said about this year's openers. "Everyone is equally important."

Netters prepare for in-state matches

N.Y., will see action for the Lady Salukis Friday and Saturday when they open their season against Illinois and Illinois State.

Reruns are big in the world of television this time of year, but women's tennis Coach Judy Auld wouldn't mind not watching any reruns this weekend when her team opens its fall season against Illinois, Illinois State and Western Illinois.

Now, Auld has nothing against TV. It's just that the Salukis lost two out of three matches to the same teams in a similar season-opening meet last year and she neither wants nor expects a repeat performance.

"I expect to do better this year," Auld said of the meet, to be played on WIU's courts Friday and Saturday in Macomb. "In that first weekend last year, we weren't up to par physically. Lisa Warrem, who had mononucleosis, just ran out of gas and couldn't make it through her last match."

But this year, Auld will take a healthy squad into a meet she said could have an impact on seedings for the state tournament.

"I would be more than pleased to go 3-0," Auld laughed, "but I'd still be pleased to win two of three."

Auld is taking all eight team members—seniors Debbie Martin and Jeannie Jones, juniors Mona Etchison and Tammy Kurtz, sophomores Lisa Warrem, Paula Etchison and Becky Ingram, and freshman Stacy Sherman of Macomb. The only definite about SIU's lineup, however, is that Jones, Warrem and Martin will open the Nos. 1, 2, and 3 singles spots.

"After that I'm kind of fuzzy," Auld admitted. "I feel confident that I can go with pretty much any players in the Nos. 4 and 5 positions. Stacy will be important for us in the middle part of the lineup." She added that she hadn't settled on doubles combinations yet.

"We worked on doubles last week, but that's one thing in kind of worried about," Auld said. "I haven't seen the doubles teams enough to combine them the way I want to."

Otherwise, Auld said things are running smoothly at least better than they were last fall. The Salukis worked on volleys and service volleys for doubles last week, and the coach liked what she saw. But there are some bugs to iron out.

"Probably the biggest thing I've seen is the lack of intensity we need right now," Auld said. "That may be just because it's practice. Once we get into matches, we'll pick that up."

As for the opposition, Auld said Illinois, which defeated SIU last fall but was swamped by the Salukis, 8-1, in the spring, has added several players.

Many new faces found on women's golf squad

By Rick Klatt
Staff Writer

Second-year women's golf Coach Mary Beth McGirr is searching for a familiar face. Graduation has taken from last year's Illinois AIAW state championship team two-time AIAW national qualifier Sandy Lemon and No. 2 golfer Sue Fazio, not to mention the Nos. 3, 4, 5, 6 and 7 players, too.

"Obviously, we're going to be an extremely young team," McGirr said of the 1980-81 group that includes seven freshmen and one junior college transfer.

"But in a way it's exciting having a team so young," McGirr said. "The kids are really serious about golf, and once they settle into school, things should begin to fall into place."

Young is putting it lightly. Sharla Snyder, the junior college transfer, will not be 21 years old until later this month and none of the others is even near 20. But the age problem doesn't bother McGirr as much as the lack of quality golfing experience. Only freshmen Barb Anderson, Sue Arbogast and Lisa Rottman have competed in amateur tournaments, according to McGirr.

Anderson, however, has been pegged by McGirr as "the person who will fill the shoes of Lemon." A runner-up in the 1979 Illinois High School Association girls' golf championship, Anderson was a three-letter winner on the men's golf team at Edwardsville High School and a top-10 finisher in IHSA tourneys since 1977.

"Barb should be the most consistent player this year," McGirr said. "She also has the potential to be one of the really good players at SIU."

Arbogast, a four-year member of the Streator High School men's team, has competed in United States Golf Association juniors tournaments, Illinois Professional Golf Association junior tournaments and the women's Western Open and Houston Open juniors tournaments.

Rottman, a graduate of Metropolitan High School, competed in the Lake of Egypt tournament two weeks before the start of fall semester and finished only two strokes back of Nancy Scranton, last year's top Illinois high school senior.

Tracy Keller, Dania Meador, Lavon Seabolt and Sue Speers are the four other freshmen. Keller placed in the top 20 at last year's IHSA state championship.

If youth and inexperience are to be the weaknesses of this year's team, strength may be one of its strengths.

"When I recruited, I looked for girls who could drive a long way," McGirr explained. "It's much more easy to teach someone the other things than to teach them to drive a ball a good distance." McGirr added that all seven newcomers met her first recruiting requirement, as well as her second—scoring in the 70s in competition.

McGirr said she will begin team qualifying matches next week to see which six women will travel to Normal next weekend for the season-opening Illinois State Invitational.

"Right now I'm pretty much unsure about who'll be our top players," McGirr said. "I've only seen them golf one round. The rest of the time has just been practice."

Following the tournament in Normal, where McGirr hopes to place in the top six, the Salukis travel to Terre Haute, Ind., for the Indiana State Invitational Sept. 19 and 20.

The next weekend SIU defends its state crown by again traveling to Normal for the IAIWA state championship. After an off weekend Oct. 3 and 4, the Salukis go to Savoy for the AIAW Midwest Regionals.

The Salukis close the fall season at the Georgia Invitational in Athens, Ga., Oct. 13, 14 and 15.

Tryout additions fill golf roster

By Dave Kane
Staff Writer

It used to be that tryout time was when a coach had to make his most difficult decisions. Which enthusiastic athletes' hearts would he be forced to crush as he prepared the infamous "cut list?"

Men's golf Coach Jim Reburn was presented with such a task last weekend as 23 candidates competed for three spots on the team's fall roster. But Reburn wasn't exactly forced to split hairs when he had to decide which golfers to add to the squad.

"We didn't really get too much," Reburn said. "We had about 45 people come to a team meeting, but only 18 showed up for the tryout rounds the first day (last Thursday). They all played 18, but only nine people showed up on Friday for the second round."

Admittedly, some of the scores of the candidates weren't of the PGA caliber. A few shot in the upper 90s, while most were in the 80s.

But when the smoke finally cleared at Midland Hills Golf Course, where the tryout rounds were played, three players—freshman Kirk Drapp, junior college transfer Steve Sargent, and Terry O'Neil—made the cut. Drapp shot a 75 on Thursday, while Sargent shot a 76 and O'Neil a 79 Friday.

"I was going to have 83 be the cutoff point for possible players to add to the team," Reburn said, "but even that was a little too high. The course did play pretty tough those two days, though."

Reburn said the three newcomers will have difficulty proving their worth to the team. None was outstanding, but all three were consistent.

"I watched all three of them play," Reburn said. "They played solid golf; nothing outstanding, but they didn't make the mistakes some of the others made."

Reburn said he didn't know a great deal about O'Neil, but had some background on Sargent and Drapp. Sargent is a native of Loogootee, Ind., attended Wabash Valley College, and placed second and third in his team's major meets. Drapp is from Streator High School, where he finished first in the WIC Conference Tournament and the Illinois High School Association district meet during the 1979-80 season.

But it's understandable why Reburn forses plenty of competitiveness for his new additions. He also staged a qualifying round last Saturday at Jackson County Country Club for players already on his roster. Two more such rounds will follow, including one Saturday at either Midland Hills, Rend Lake or Jackson County. Reburn hasn't decided on the course.

Last Saturday, however, sophomore Rob Hammond fired a four-under-par 68, while teammates Doug Clemens, John Schaefer and Rich Jarrett carded 70, 71 and 72 respectively.

The top scores from those qualifying rounds will help Reburn select which Salukis will go to the 54-hole tournament at Murray State University Sept. 19-20.
