Political analysts comment on presidential visit

President Clinton's visit to SIUC has as much to do with campaigning for re-election as it does campaigning for student aid. SIUC and other political analysts said. With the presidential campaign coming up, Clinton may be beginning his campaign trail early, analysts said. Steve Bachar, a White House official, arrived at SIUC Tuesday to meet with administration officials and examine the campus in preparation for the visitation of President Bill Clinton. Clinton is scheduled to speak Monday at a rally sponsored by the United States

Student Association, and White House official Laura Schwartz said it will be Bachar's job to be point man for the president's visit.

Schwartz said she did not know specifically when or where Clinton's speech would take place and would not know for sure until later this week. But she said

According to Derge, Illinois cannot be ignored, while a candidate is campaigning.

NATO bombings continue

The Washington Post

NATO warplanes ended a four-day bombing moratorium over Bosnia Tuesday with new waves of airstrikes intended to lift the siege of Sarajevo and pressure the Bosnian Serbs into a political settlement of Bosnia's 3-year-old war.

The renewed bombing signaled the third phase of Operation Deliberate Force—one that NATO and United Nations officials vowed will continue until Bosnian Serb forces loosen their stranglehold on the Bosnian capital.

The operation began last Wednesday with a 51-hour bombing campaign that opened a chapter of unprecedentedly broad NATO involvement in the Bosnian conflict. It was followed by a 104-hour cease-fire intended to give the Serbs an opportunity—which they did not take—to remove an estimated 300 heavy weapons from a 12-mile "exclusion zone" around Sarajevo and allow free movement by U.N. forces.

NATO sources said the renewed attacks began at 1:08 p.m. (7:08 a.m. EDT) after reconnaissance determined the weapons had not left the exclusion zone despite NATO warnings that bombing would resume.

The strikes were directed against ammunition dumps, equipment-storage sites, repair depots and command-and-control facilities, the sources said, noting that approximately 15 sites were on the day's target list, with an average of 20

First Lady attacks China's human rights

The Baltimore Sun

BEIJING—Confounding predictions that she would shy away from criticizing China, first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton delivered an attack against human rights violators Tuesday, hitting out at forced abortions, limits on free speech and arbitrary arrest.

In remarks aimed specifically at China, which is hosting the U.N. World Conference on Women, Mrs. Clinton said it was "indefensible that many women in non-governmental organizations who wished to participate in this conference have not been able to attend—or have been prohibited from fully taking part."

Her comments came on the second day of the U.N. conference and nearly a week after the start of a parallel conference of non-governmental organizations (known as NGOs) that are in China to exchange ideas and lobby the official gathering.

These NGOs have been isolated on a 100-acre site north of Beijing, where many of their workshops have been videotaped and monitored by Chinese secret police. Thousands of women could not attend the conference after being denied visas or issued visas too late to make travel plans.

China had no official reaction to Mrs. Clinton's speech, but NGO members seemed ecstatic.

"It's great that someone of importance finally said something," said Lo Li Ping, a delegate from Fairfax, Va. Lo's work with Tibetan women has been disrupted

FRANCE TESTS NUCLEAR WEAPONS IN PACIFIC — PARIS—Defying growing worldwide protests, France began a series of nuclear weapons tests Tuesday, detonating a nuclear device at remote Mururoa Atoll in the South Pacific. The explosion marked the first of as many as eight tests that the French government has said it will conduct in the South Pacific through May, and it was sure to add fuel to the international campaign against France that has spawned angry demonstrations from Australia to Japan to France. "These programs are indispensable so that we can be in a position to guarantee the viability and the certainty of our nuclear arms in the long term," said a statement issued by the French Defense Ministry. "The nuclear deterrent guarantees our independence and the ultimate protection of our vital interests."

HURRICANE LUIS SPINS TOWARD PUERTO RICO — SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico—Hurricane Luis—the sprawling, dangerous and most severe storm to reach the region in decades—spun across the Eastern Caribbean Tuesday knocking out power and phones in the tiny Leeward Islands, before casting its wide and angry eye toward Puerto Rico. The storm, with maximum sustained winds near 140 mph, was classified as "severe" by the National Hurricane Center in Miami. It crossed over or grazed the islands of Antigua, Guadeloupe, Montserrat and St. Martin before heading to the British and U.S. Virgin Islands on Tuesday. Phone lines were down and radio stations off the air in Antigua, Barbuda, St. Barthelmy and Anguilla—small islands whose widths seem puny when compared to the 60-mile-wide eye of Luis, whose hurricane force winds stretch 105 miles from its center. Antigua reported winds of 140 mph.

SHEIK PORTRAYED AS TERRORIST LEADER IN TRIAL — NEW YORK—A prosecutor portrayed Sheik Omar Abdel-Rahman as the leader of a self-styled jihad army designed to wage a holy war of terrorism against an infidel America as the eight-month trial of the radical cleric and nine followers moved Tuesday toward its conclusion. In his summation to the jury, Assistant U.S. Attorney Patrick Fitzgerald said the sheik approved a panoply of plots ranging from a scheme to assassinate Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak to plans to blow up commuter tunnels linking New York with New Jersey and the Manhattan headquarters of the FBI in an effort to diminish U.S. support for Israel. "America was the number one enemy," Fitzgerald said. "He (Abdel-Rahman) made no bones about it."

SENATE BEGINS RUBY RIDGE HEARINGS TODAY — WASHINGTON—A Senate subcommittee today will begin shining the spotlight on critical issues flowing from the government's 1992 siege at Ruby Ridge, Idaho. One of the biggest is: Has the judgment and competence of U.S. law enforcement officials been compromised in cases involving people who hold strong anti-government views? Coming on the heels of recent House hearings into the 1993 Waco tragedy, the ill-fated Texas standoff that followed Ruby Ridge by six months, the Senate hearings will explore how white separatist Randy Weaver was first confronted by federal agents, what led to efforts to arrest him and how mistakes, miscalculations and even a lack of professionalism by federal marshals and FBI agents preceded their fatal shooting of Weaver's wife, Vicki, and 14-year-old son, Sammy, after a U.S. marshal was killed. Three weeks of scheduled hearings into the shootout at Weaver's small cabin on a remote northern Idaho mountainside may be troubling to federal officials on another score, too. Top Justice Department officials have strenuously objected to the timing of the hearings, occurring in the midst of their own internal, criminal investigation.

Greek system provides new opportunities for members

By Rebecca Hutchings
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Sorority life is like a society unto itself with rules and standards that even fraternity brothers do not quite experience, a sorority member said.

"Sororities can't publicize like fraternities do," Megan Beller, a member of Sigma Kappa Sorority, said. "We don't throw parties all the time, and guys can wear their letters while they drink. We can't."

"I guess it comes back to the idea that girls are supposed to be ladies." One of thousands of girls that experience sorority life at SIUC, Beller said she doesn't have any idea what she would be doing now if she had not joined a sorority.

"It takes up so much of my time," Beller, a junior in education from Belleville, said. "I never really thought about what I would be doing now if I hadn't joined. There's really nothing I don't like about it."

Beller said when she was younger, she was active in sports and more of a tomboy and had not planned on being in a sorority until she came to SIUC.

"I never really thought about what I would be doing now if I hadn't joined. There's really nothing I don't like about it."

*Megan Beller
Sigma Kappa member*

"In high school I never even thought about (joining a sorority)," she said. "My mom had mentioned the idea to me. She was in a sorority at St. Louis University."

Beller said she knew five girls when she came to SIUC and decided to rush during her freshman year, in spring of 1994, to meet more people.

"When I was a freshman I really didn't know what to do with myself, and I wanted to meet more people," Beller said. "I have 75 friends now (from her sorority) and I have so much to do. It's also kind of exciting with something always going on."

She said having friends to rush with her helped out a lot in deciding which sorority she wanted to join.

"We could talk about the different sororities," Beller said. "There were a couple of girls that rushed by themselves. I think that girls should definitely rush by themselves even if they don't have anyone to do it with them."

Rushing is expensive and time consuming but when it is over the monthly dues are reasonable and there is more time for other activities, Beller said.

"It takes up a lot of your time," she said. "Pledging itself is more expensive than dues."

Sorority life matured Beller and made her more aware of others through the community activities she participated in and through living with her sorority sisters.

Going Greek: Rush week begins

By Cynthia Sheets
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Fraternities and sororities will have their hands full as SIUC students interested in "going Greek" begin rush week today.

"We have 75 students who have signed up for formal rush," Jonathan Spencer, Inter-Fraternity Council rush chair, said. "Most people who are interested are already signed up, but people can still sign up for Wednesday's activities."

Spencer said Wednesday's and Thursday's activities include tours on and off Greek Row, with groups leaving the Student Center around 6:30 p.m.

"It's a chance for guys to see every house," he said. "The tour is a type of overview to see what the house has to offer, its membership personality and just be able to go around and meet everyone."

Fraternities who are participating in the fall rush include: Sigma Pi, Sigma Phi Epsilon, Sigma Nu, Pi Kappa Alpha, Lambda Chi Alpha, Delta Sigma Phi, Sigma Tau Gamma, Delta Chi, Alpha Tau Omega, Alpha Gamma Rho, Phi Sigma Kappa and Theta Xi.

Preference night, where both participating rushees and the Greek organizations decide who will pledge and to what organization, is scheduled for Friday, Spencer said.

Houses then make their bids for the rushees. A bid is the invitation to join a Greek organization.

The bids can be picked up by the rushees on Saturday at the Inter-Greek Council office, Spencer said.

A 2.3 grade point average is required for both the sorority and fraternity rushes, and freshmen and first year college students need to have been in the top half of their high school class.

Lisa Malanowski, Panhellenic rush chair, said the sororities run their rushes a little differently than fraternities.

"Wednesday evening is orientation for everyone," she said.

Clinton visit topic at GPSC meeting

By Wendy J. Allyn
Daily Egyptian Reporter

SIUC Graduate and Professional Student Council leaders said their first meeting of the semester will focus on two issues: preliminary GPSC business and President Clinton.

"We're going to be addressing the Clinton visit, of course," said GPSC President Bill Karrow.

But before the organization can organize procedures in conjunction with the President's visit on Monday, they need instructions from the White House, Karrow said.

Mark Terry, a GPSC vice president, said the council and the Undergraduate Student Government should know today what responsibilities will be delegated to them. "GPSC members can then discuss them at the meeting and decide on procedures."

Education and student loan cuts subject of Clinton speech

By Donita Polly
Daily Egyptian Reporter

President Bill Clinton is scheduled to speak next week to SIUC students and faculty wearing black in protest of the "Death of Education," student government officials say.

The Undergraduate Student Government and the United States Student Association are sponsoring a "Death of Education" rally with Clinton as the guest speaker.

The Sept. 11 rally is tentatively scheduled to begin at 11:30 a.m. Clinton is to give his speech on student aid and the Direct Student Loan Program in the middle of the rally.

USG governmental affairs commissioner Dan Piper said he encourages all SIUC students, faculty and staff to wear black to the rally to signify the death of education.

Piper said the proposed congressional cutbacks in education could be the worst ever in financial aid, and if the cuts are enacted, millions of students from low and middle income families will not be able to afford college.

"The State Student Incentive Grant and the Perkin's Loan are targeted for elimination," Piper said.

"If these programs are removed, 280,000 students who were previously eligible for aid will be eligible no longer."

"We're giving Clinton a message to take back to Congress," Piper said. "The message is that education is an investment, and Congress should cut corporate funds before financial aid and education."

USG President Duane Sherman said SIUC students need to come out to the rally and show support for financial aid.

"At this event, SIUC students will be representative of students across the country," Sherman said. "We need to send a message to our Congress that we will not stand for any reduction of financial aid."

Kevin Boyer, executive director for the National Association of Graduate/Professional Students, said one reason Clinton chose SIUC is because the University is in close proximity to other colleges.

"Clinton could have picked any number of schools, but strong support from all student groups made Carbondale more attractive to the White House," Boyer said.

According to Piper and Sherman, USSA provided the White House with a list of eight campuses but chose SIUC as the end.

"Last Tuesday, I got a phone call from USSA," Sherman said. "They asked if SIUC could have a successful rally. I said most definitely."

The exact location of the speech has not been released because of security reasons, Piper said, but students will be able to follow signs directing them to the rally.

City deserves praise for funding concert

FEW PEOPLE IN CARBONDALE DISPUTE THE fact that more non-alcoholic entertainment alternatives are sorely needed here. College students, as a rule, are social animals and need to meet, interact and play with students their own age who can identify with their point of view. By removing the 18- and 19-year-olds from the bars and discouraging keg parties, the city council took that atmosphere away from SIUC's younger students. It is nice to see them give something back.

The City of Carbondale paid almost $3,000 to sponsor a punk rock concert in the Free Forum Area at the beginning of the semester. They paid for the whole thing, from hiring the band to promoting the event and supplying food. When the event ran over budget because it was moved from Shryock to the Free Forum Area, the city kicked down the extra $300 needed for the stage. And according to Josh Wiese, Student Programming Council concerts director, the event was a hit. Wiese said the event drew 450 people, or triple the expected crowd for the event.

EARLIER IN THE SEMESTER, THE DE criticized the city for passing keg regulations while the students were away. While that criticism still stands, the city deserves recognition for its efforts supporting development of alcohol-free alternatives. While city funding for future concerts is an improbability, the city helped get the ball rolling for future concerts.

Campus clubs offer possibilities for fun

OF COURSE, FINDING ALCOHOL-FREE entertainment college students will enjoy is ultimately up to the individual student. Each student on this campus has unique tastes and interests. Luckily, there is a diverse selection of good, clean extra-curricular fun right here on campus.

If your thing is outdoors activities, try Base Camp at the Student Recreation Center. They provide group outings, as well as reasonable equipment rentals, to SIUC students. Special interest clubs are always looking for new members, and offer activities from war games to arts and crafts. For the political activists out there, there are a variety of political Registered Student Organizations. Or you could take a stab at getting elected to the Undergraduate Student Government. There are 450 RSOs at SIUC just waiting for students to join up. Brochures listing these groups are available at the office of Student Development on the third floor of the Student Center.

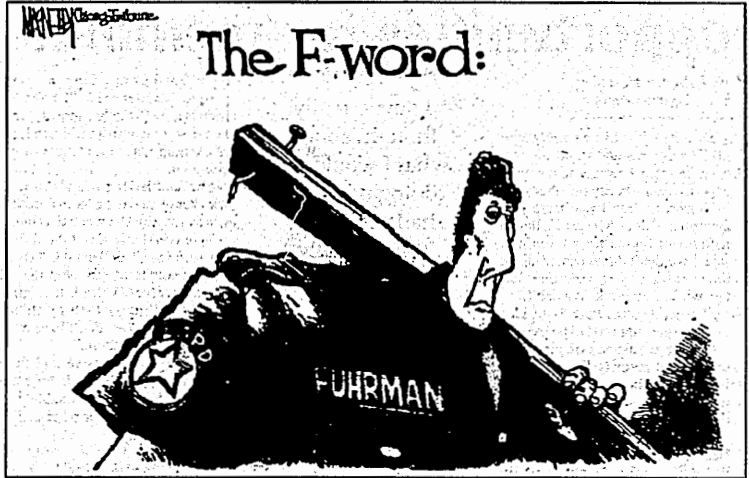

THERE IS MORE TO THE WORLD THAN kegers and hanging out in bars. Students need only open their eyes to the possibilities and get involved in whatever activity floats their boat. Universities provide a wide range of opportunities. Don't become one of the countless drunkards on the strip. Take advantage of your four (or five, or six ...) years here. Do something worth while.

Gender equity far from global

Survey: Status quo means abuse, rape in some countries

By Robin Wright
for the Los Angeles Times

Women from all corners of the globe have convened in Beijing to discuss how to achieve empowerment and equality. It's a daunting topic. A U.N. survey concludes that, at the current rate of progress, women will not gain economic equality until the year 2490.

Yet, the biggest problem for women begins at home, and it often boils down to simple survival.

Worldwide, at the end of the 20th century, staggering numbers of women are still slaves, spoils of war, sexually mutilated and, most of all, victims of abuse in its many brutal forms.

The United Nations calls the trend "a global epidemic." If it weren't for the credibility of the institutions that compiled the data, the numbers would almost be unbelievable.

In Peru, 70 percent of all reported crime involves women beaten by their husbands, says a U.N. study prepared for the Beijing conference.

In Chile, Papua New Guinea, Sri Lanka and Tanzania, at least 60 percent of women report being beaten or abused by a male family member or intimate. At least one of three women is beaten or abused in Malaysia, Mexico, South Korea and Zambia, according to "Violence Against Women," a World Bank report.

During a 1991 legislative debate on rape-law reform in Malaysia, a member of the ruling party admonished that "Women should wear purdah (head-to-toe covering) to ensure that innocent men do not get unnecessarily excited by women's bodies and are not unconsciously forced into becoming rapists."

In Japan, a society well known for its manners, roughly 59 percent of women surveyed reported physical and/or sexual abuse by a partner,

Women should wear (head-to-toe covering) to ensure that innocent men do not get excited by women's bodies and are not unconsciously forced into becoming rapists."

Unidentified Malaysian legislator

according to the Domestic Violence Research Group.

One of four Canadian women claim they have been physically assaulted by a current or former male partner, while up to 4 million German women are victims of domestic violence annually, World Bank and U.N. reports document.

Abuse takes other forms besides beating or sexual attack. In India, it includes an increasing number of "dowry deaths," the punishment meted out by in-laws when a bride brings an inadequate dowry in money and goods to her husband's family. Since 1990, more than 20,000 brides have been killed, usually by dousing the woman with kerosene and burning her alive, the government reported in May. The figures may be low.

Worldwide, roughly 114 million women have had their genitalia mutilated, a custom imposed within families, according to the Population Council. In places such as Somalia and Djibouti, 98 percent of women have had their labia majora, labia minora and/or clitoris snipped, carved out or sewn up.

Burkina Faso, Sudan and Nigeria are among many African countries to outlaw what is commonly called female circumcision, a practice that probably dates back to Pharaonic times in Egypt.

Growing numbers of girls and women are also being lured, abducted or sold into forced prostitution and involuntary marriages, often at family initiative or with its compliance. Thousands of Nepalese, Burmese, Laotian and Thai women are sold into virtual slavery, usually as prostitutes, Human Rights Watch reports. In Thailand, they're sold as young as age 11, after they finish sixth grade, the last year of mandatory schooling.

Perhaps the most shocking numbers are the females who don't exist at all. Based on discrepancies in the standard male-female ratio, more than 100 million women are "missing" around the world, some 49 million in China alone, reports the 1995 U.N. Development Program survey issued two weeks ago.

Female infanticide and selective abortion of female fetuses are practices still so prevalent among families who prefer male children that regional governments in Punjab and Maharashtra imposed a ban on prenatal sex tests. Favorite infanticide techniques include feeding baby girls poisonous plant saps and choking them by lodging rice balls soaked in milk in their throats.

In Canada, a judge in British Columbia suspended the sentence of a 33-year-old man convicted of sexually assaulting a 3-year-old girl with the comment, "The child was sexually aggressive."

In fact, the problem is not strictly male attitudes and actions. Women, too, are often full or partial accomplices, whether by aborting a female fetus, allowing or urging a daughter's circumcision, not stepping in when a female relative is being abused or even by not helping themselves.

The bottom line is that women have no hope of political or economic empowerment if they have no dignity or equality at home.

Clinton

Bill Neikirk, a political writer for the Chicago Tribune, said Clinton's primary concern at SIUC will be campaigning for re-election because Illinois is a key state.

"The education and student aid theme to Clinton's speech is not new," Neikirk said. "When Clinton comes to town, the White House is counting on him being heard all throughout Southern Illinois and St. Louis. The president's words get around."

Another good reason for the president to come here is because Jackson County has consistently voted Democrat, Derge said.

"As long as I can remember, there has been a presence of the president down here," he said. "In 1972, Jackson County was the only county in the state of Illinois to vote for George McGovern."

McGovern ran against Republican candidate, Richard Nixon, in the 1972 presidential election in which Nixon won. John Jackson, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, said it would seem appropriate for Clinton to make a national announcement concerning the Direct Student Loan Program.

"I think everything Clinton does from this point is campaigning," Jackson said.

However, Laura Schwartz, a spokeswoman for White House affairs, said Clinton is visiting SIUC for official reasons only.

"There are no campaigning trips," Schwartz said. "This is an official trip for the president."

Jackson said Illinois is crucial to Clinton's campaign because of its size and its affect on the Midwest.

SIUC was chosen instead of campuses in Milwaukee and Pittsburgh for President Clinton's speech site. Another political writer, James Warren of the Chicago Tribune, said Clinton's decision to give a speech about student aid to SIUC was a good decision.

"It's better to give the speech in a state whose legislature spearheaded the financial aid programs under attack than some steel mill in Pittsburgh," Warren said. Derge said several factors have influenced Clinton to speak at SIUC, including SIUC's representation as a "poor people" University. "When you think of student aid, you think SIUC," Derge said. "Since SIUC is a big consumer of federal money in student aid, he will attack the Republican Congress."

SIUC President John Guyon said a large number of SIUC students receive financial aid. He said the University administers $100 million a year in aid.

The Direct Student Loan Program, originally written by Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., is one of the financial aid programs on the congressional cutting block.

The Direct Student Loan Program credits loan money directly into student bursar accounts, and a credit balance is delivered to students in the form of a check instead of students going through a lender and an agency to guarantee the loan.

"Clinton has to touch base on a lot of different things," Derge said. "He's preaching to the choir about giving more money to people who want more money."

Bachar is here to help the White House decide.

He is the first of numerous White House officials who will be on campus this week examining the campus, Schwartz said.

Jack Dyer, executive director of University Relations, spent Tuesday afternoon showing Bachar around the campus. But Dyer would not say where he took Bachar or even why Bachar, whose business card identifies him only as Presidential Advance, is here.

SIUC employees at both Shryock Auditorium and the SIU Arena said Bachar and Dyer spent anywhere from 10 to 15 minutes at each location.

Bachar declined to comment about his duties or the procedure he is following.

USSA is advertising a tentative time for the president's speech at 11:30 a.m. Schwartz said after a day of planning Tuesday, a tentative schedule for Clinton should be laid out and be made available today.

fighter-bombers hitting each target.

British gunners from the U.N. Rapid Reaction Force outside Sarajevo joined the fray by firing 40 cannon rounds at a Serb mortar position. U.S. Air Force AC-130 gunships also were scheduled to hunt Serb artillery and armor Tuesday night, though deteriorating weather over central Bosnia made the missions uncertain.

No NATO losses were reported, and returning pilots said they encountered scant resistance except for light anti-aircraft fire. But in an apparent gesture of defiance, Serb gunners pumped a dozen artillery shells into central Sarajevo Tuesday night, including one that exploded about 300 yards from a U.N. compound. French gunners retaliated just before midnight by hurling howitzer shells at a Serb position that the United Nations said had fired at least eight shells into the city.

NATO ambassadors issued their ultimatum to the Bosnian Serbs early Sunday, warning that attacks would resume with fresh intensity unless the Serbs complied with U.N. demands. Although early reports indicated the Serbs had 72 hours to withdraw, a deadline of 11 p.m. Monday (4 p.m. CDT) was set. Following a long night of confusion in which various Bosnian Serb leaders issued contradictory statements of defiance and compliance, NATO and U.N. surveillance teams finally determined that the Serbs had moved none of their weapons away from the capital.

Packwood readies plan to revamp Medicare

The Washington Post
WASHINGTON—Senate Finance Committee Chairman Bob Packwood, R-Ore., said Tuesday he has completed work on a proposal for revamping Medicare that would save an estimated $270 billion over seven years and begin shifting millions of elderly recipients into managed health care programs.
 Senate and House Republicans are working on separate versions of a plan to avert the projected bankruptcy of the national health care program for the elderly and to help balance the budget by 2002. Congress has set a Sept. 22 deadline for the Finance Committee and House Ways and Means Committee to report detailed plans to achieve massive savings in Medicare, Medicaid, welfare and other big-ticket government programs as part of their long-term balanced budget drive.

 Packwood's plan was submitted Tuesday to the Congressional Budget Office (CBO), the chief budgetary and economics analyst for Congress, to determine whether it would achieve the $270 billion of savings Republicans are counting on as part of their balanced budget plan.

Republicans leaders Tuesday expressed confidence they can muster sufficient support for their Medicare proposals after members of Congress returning from the August recess reported encountering little public hostility to their efforts at town meetings and other events.
 "People understand something has to be done," Barbour told reporters, following a Senate Republican policy luncheon at the Capitol. "An increasing number of American know Medicare is in a predicament and they want the problem solved."

"I lived (in the house) last year and this year," Beller said. "I was an only child and kind of selfish and after living and sharing everything with these girls I've changed a lot."

Megan Beller

Beller said the sorority keeps her active in the community from volunteering time at nursing homes to giving blood.

 "We have to donate a lot of our time to community activities," Beller said. "Academics are really important too. We have study hours and have to keep our grades up."
 Beller said everyone in the sorority is close and everyone has someone to talk to if you have a problem.
 "We have a very diverse house and we don't compete with each other," Beller said. "Everyone here is their own person. We do compete with other (sororities) though."
 Beller said joining a sorority has not made her trendy, but has made her more aware of what she looks like.

 "You always want to give people a good impression," Beller said. "It's like you want to make sure you look nice."
 Sororities look for quality girls when expanding their membership, Beller said.
 "We want to have girls that can take the place of those girls that are leaving," Beller said. "One girl can totally effect the house, if she has a bad reputation."
 Beller said every year she looks forward to coming back to school to see all of her friends.
 "If I hadn't joined a sorority I would be very, very bored," Beller said.

by the heavy-handed Chinese surveillance, which resulted in one workshop being broken up and another stifled.
 Mrs. Clinton's comments were especially welcome because the committee that organized the NGO forum had backed down during a fight with China over the weekend. Organizers had initially said they were giving China an ultimatum to stop harassing the delegates, but they later retracted the statement and have allowed subsequent harassment to go unchallenged publicly.

Freedom of expression is supposed to be guaranteed at the NGO and U.N. sites because they are both sponsored by the United Nations, meaning international standards of human rights are supposed to apply.
 "Let me be clear," Mrs. Clinton said. "Freedom means the right of people to assemble, organize, and debate openly. It means respecting the views of those who may disagree with the views of their governments."

"Rushes are taken to chapter houses both on and off Greek Row.
 Thursday and Friday the rushes meet with the chapter members in the Student Center. And Saturday, we hold preference parties in the evening to find out which chapter matched up with which rushee."
 Whereas men can receive numerous bids from different fraternities, women participating in rush can only receive one bid from a sorority, Malanowski said.
 Five sororities are participating in this rush: Sigma Kappa, Alpha Gamma Delta, Delta Zeta, Psi Omega Chi and Sigma Sigma Sigma.
 During rush, application fees for sororities are $25, while fraternities charge $5.

Police dog takes a bite out of crime

By Julie Rendleman
Daily Egyptian Reporter

No one can say the Carbondale Police did not get their man on Sept. 2, and they did so with the help of "man's best friend".

The police received a phone call at 3:27 a.m., reporting that a man was breaking into an apartment at 250 S. Lewis Lane Apt. 94. When the police arrived they found Carlton Alexander, 18, of 250 S. Lewis Lane, inside the residence. Don Priddy, Carbondale Police Public Relations Officer said.

The police handcuffed Alexander in front instead of in back according to Priddy, so when police put Alexander in the car he escaped and ran across the parking lot.

A canine officer was on the scene with the police dog, Jasper. Jasper was given the command to take off after Alexander. The dog knocked Alexander down and a struggle ensued. But Alexander proceeded to strike Jasper then continued to flee Priddy said.

The police chased Alexander across the street and tackled him and sprayed him with pepper spray to capture him.

"These things happen all the time.

For some reason people think they can just get away when they are captured," Priddy said.

Alexander was taken to Carbondale Memorial Hospital for treatment of injuries he received when fighting with Jasper. An official in administration at Carbondale Memorial Hospital said Alexander was released with minor injuries.

Alexander is currently being held at the Jackson County Jail on $5000 bond. He is charged with attempted burglary, escape, disorderly conduct, criminal trespass to property and battery of a police canine.

Speaker to discuss South Africa's future

By Jeremy Griggs
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A counselor with the Independent Broadcasting Authority of South Africa will address the public today in the University Museum Auditorium.

Lyndall Franisa Shope-Mafole is to speak on the topic, "New South Africa: Challenges of a National Unity Democracy" at 2 p.m., said Bill Elliott, associate dean of the College of Mass Communication and Media Arts.

Shope-Mafole said she plans to discuss not only the challenges the new South African government faces, but also the challenges the country as a whole faces.

"I want to discuss the challenges all of South Africa faces and the role of broadcasting in making sure it works out," she said.

Elliott said she is in the United States to look at the Federal Communications Commission to see how it develops regulations.

"I want to see how the media is regulated, so that we can try to implement a similar structure in South Africa," she said. Shope-Mafole has been in the United States two weeks, during which she has talked with officials from the public and private sector.

"I've had a very good time visiting with a wide variety of very important people," she said.

"I've had the opportunity to meet with the commissioner of the FCC, and people in senior positions in the movie industry such as Disney, Paramount Pictures, and Fox-TV. It's been a learning visit," Shope-Mafole said.

"Without direction from the White House and University administration, we're kind of spinning our wheels," Terry said. "We'll need assistance on the part of our members."

In addition to the presidential visit, GPSC plans to focus on budgetary issues and filling committee appointments.

Terry said attention will also be given to the recent change in GPSC leadership, for members who may not be aware of the situation.

Karrow was appointed GPSC president Sept. 1, after the resignation of Adam Kantrovich. Kantrovich said he decided to resign because of a potential professional opportunity.

As the new president, Karrow said he wants his first meeting to be an open forum, so he can become familiar with members and everyone can voice concerns.

"Part of the reason for the open forum is to break in the new president and the council," he said.

Karrow said anyone interested in being appointed to a committee should attend the meeting tonight in the Student Center Illinois Room at 7 p.m.

Whitewater prosecutor loses charge

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—A federal judge Tuesday dismissed one of two indictments against Arkansas Gov. Jim Guy Tucker on grounds that the prosecutor, Whitewater Independent Counsel Kenneth W. Starr, exceeded his authority in bringing the case.

U.S. District Judge Henry Woods agreed with Tucker's lawyers that the allegations had nothing to do with the independent counsel's mandate to investigate the relationships between two defunct Arkansas lending institutions and the two couples who owned the Whitewater Development Corp.—Bill and Hillary Rodham Clinton and James and Susan McDougal.

Differing agendas could bring shut down of federal government

By Alan Schnepf
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Despite worries of a federal government shut down at the beginning of next month, local politicians and SIUC professors said government services in Carbondale probably will not be interrupted.

Lucinda McKinney, an assistant political science professor, said the different agendas of the Republican-led Congress and Clinton, may spur the president to veto bills that he believes cut too deeply into government spending.

She said if these bills do not pass, money will not be available for many federal agencies, causing them to shut down.

John Jackson, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, said temporary shut downs or "train wrecks," as they are called in Washington, have occurred before in the Reagan and Bush administrations and usually last only a day or two before compromises are reached.

"Ultimately, the federal government cannot stay shut down," he said.

Simon said he thinks there will probably not be a shutdown of Carbondale government agencies, which would occur when continuing resolutions failed to pass.

"I would say that's a possibility, not a probability," he said.

McKinney said when train wrecks occur, continuing resolutions, which fund agencies at or around their previous budgets, are used to run operations on an interim basis until a compromise is reached.

If the agencies were shut down, she said the consequences could be quite serious.

"(Government) workers could be sent home and offices might not have the money to buy pencils," she said. "Social Security would probably not be affected, but there might be a delay in food stamps."

U.S. Sen. Paul Simon (D-Ill.), said he believes continuing resolutions will be needed to keep the government running.

"I think there is a probability better than 50-50 we'll have a confrontation in some areas," he said.

The nation's new fiscal year begins on Oct. 1, but Brian Lott, press secretary for U.S. Rep. Jerry Costello (D-Ill.), said the U.S. House and Senate have only agreed on one of the 13 major spending bills. Even if the two reach agreements on the bills, the appropriations would still be subject to the president's scrutiny.

Both McKinney and Lott said they think Congress will have the bills ready for Clinton and that any stalemate will be between the president and Congress.

Simon said the fight between the president and Congress could take a while to resolve.

"I wouldn't be surprised if we ran on continuing resolutions until Dec. 1," Simon said.

Simon's spokesman, David Carle, said college financial aid and the Direct Student Loan program are items that Congress and the president disagree sharply on. White House officials said Clinton will try to drum up support for the Direct Student Loan program during his visit to the SIUC campus next week.

Ripken doesn't realize his place in history

The Baltimore Sun

Try as they might on the news-magazine show "Sixty Minutes" the other night, they couldn't get Paul Newman to admit that talent had a whole lot to do with his hugely successful film career spanning four decades. "Luck," he said, "and maybe some good looks."

Paul Robert Redford said, "Paul really doesn't know how good he is."

In some ways, Cal Ripken doesn't really know how good he is either. Oh, he knows he can play baseball a lot better than most, but for all that other stuff, shucks, t'weren't nothing.

Until recently he hadn't an inkling of how special he has been for years, showing up, giving it his best, carrying himself impeccably and always putting the team first.

As the old Yankee Tommy Henrich, whose career took in the last two seasons of Lou Gehrig's reign through the end of the Joe DiMaggio era, said, "This is a fantastic athletic feat. Everybody is supposed to go all-out every day. If you were to tell me the guy who would break Gehrig's record would be a shortstop, I would've told you you were out of your mind. The law of averages took a big beating here."

Going all-out every day? What a laudable, if extremely old-fashioned, concept. Cal has been doing it forever and he appears uncomfortable at being dubbed a hero for what comes naturally—blue eyes and gray hair, like Newman.

Words beginning with C-A-L that haven't been used on these pages yet: Calcium (as in milk), caldron (where No. 8 has resided for months now), Calvert (as in Lord Baltimore), calamitous (what this season would qualify as had it not been for "The Streak"), calcification (what may happen before he misses a game), calumny (here, never).

It's too late now, but in keeping with the old-fashioned values Ripken has always brought to baseball, it's strange a nickname was never hung on him. About 80 percent of old ballplayers had nicknames: Iron Horse, the Mechanical Man, Bambino, Big and Little Poison, Dizzy and Daffy, Rube, Pepper (The Wild Hoss of the Osage), The Only Nolan, Yankee Clipper, Shotgun, Cuckoo, the Little Professor, the Arkansas Humming Bird, etc.

One of the great newspaper leads concerning Lou Gehrig's consecutive-games streak was authored by New York columnist Vic Ziegel: "Lou Gehrig played in 2,130 consecutive ballgames for the Yankees. Why?"

As we moved into an era of guys not being able to go for much more than a month, Ziegel sought out the answers to where endurance, desire, consistency and sustained ability, whatever had gone. Alas, except as in the cases of Billy Williams, Steve Garvey, a few

"We finally have a coach who knows what he's doing," Jeremy said. "In high school the coach always asked us what we wanted to do."

Joseph said time management was the toughest part about the transition from high school to college.

"Coach has a more demanding schedule than high school," he said.

"We're getting used to it," Jeremy said. "We're getting settled in now, but it'll be tougher when we get more homework and bigger assignments."

The twins have a tendency to run along with one another, whether it is in a race or during practice.

Tampa Bay leads list of surprise teams

The Los Angeles Times

With everyone in the National Football League talking about stock these days—particularly disgruntled Miami Dolphins' employees who were not given that hot tip by owner Wayne Huitzenga—it fits that the first week of the season was similar to hundreds of public offerings.

After a summer of buildup, players and teams put on their Sunday best so the world could see what they were worth.

In the case of holdouts, backups and Tampa Bay Bucs, plenty.

In the case of the New York Jets and their new coach, well, the one-word headline Monday in one of the New York tabloids spoke volumes.

KOtitic.

On this week's new offerings, a tout sheet:

Going Up: Trent Dilfer and the amazing Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

By throwing all sorts of passes in all kinds of traffic, second-year quarterback Dilfer proved he is afraid of nobody.

And that's who dominates the rest of the Buccaneer schedule: nobody.

The Buccaneers play both expansion teams, plus the Cincinnati Bengals, Washington Redskins and Houston Oilers.

"I believe we're a good football team ... but we can't allow ourselves to get too confident," said Hardy Nickerson, who then laughed. "When is the last time you've heard that around here?"

Dropping Fast: The childlike Ricky Walters.

So this is what the San Francisco 49ers were talking about.

In his first game with the Philadelphia Eagles, Walters cried. He gipped. He complained.

And then, when it was time for him to be a man by laying himself out across the middle for a pass from Randall Cunningham, he pulled back.

"I'm not going to trip up there and get knocked out," he said. "For who? For what?"

Going Up: Deion Sanders.

While watching 49er defensive backs Eric Davis and Marquez Pope burned constantly against the New Orleans Saints, Sanders reportedly turned to teammates in the San Francisco Giant clubhouse and said:

"The price just went up."

Dropping Real Fast: West Coast offenses.

After spending months in darkened projector rooms, it seems defensive coordinators have finally figured them out.

The Philadelphia Eagles did not score an offensive touchdown. The Denver Broncos scored one.

The San Francisco 49ers scored two. The Green Bay Packers scored two. The Kansas City Chiefs scored three, but two were on long passes that are uncharacteristic of the trendy attack.

"Everything is cyclical," said George Young, Giant general manager. "Remember the run and shoot?"

Going Up: Players who missed training camp in a salary dispute.

Robert Smith, running back for the Minnesota Vikings, was sitting at home studying astronomy one day, and running for 66 yards in 12 carries the next.

Michael Westbrook didn't show up until late August, yet is already the Washington Redskins' most exciting receiver since Gary Clark.

Last week Commissioner Paul Tagliabue said that despite much criticism, "There was no feeling that the preseason should be shortened from four games."

Somebody ought to think again.

Dropping Like a Lead Balloon: Magic Johnson, for following Al Davis to Oakland and cheering for the Raiders there.

What are we to think?

One minute he is bringing jobs to our south-central neighborhoods.

The next minute, he is cheering for a business that stole them away.

Going Up: Backup quarterbacks.

Gus Frerotte will keep the Redskins job ahead of injured Heath Shuler the rest of the season. He has no less than Redskins icon Sonny Jurgensen backing him.

If Mark Brunell is not named the Jacksonville quarterback by this week, he will be in the lineup ahead of Steve Buechelein by the end of the month. Brunell showed he can run, and the Jaguars showed they need a quarterback who can run.

Jim Harbaugh played like he should be the starter ahead of Craig Erickson in Indianapolis, but smart and quiet, he is the perfect backup. And that is where he will stay while Erickson struggles to learn the new offense.

Dropping So Far, We Won't See Them Again Until February: The Pittsburgh Steelers.

They can beat Cleveland—the only games on their schedule that matter—with quarterback Mike Tomczak.

They cannot beat them without Rod Woodson, who is out for the season because of a knee injury.

Going Up: Morten Andersen, Atlanta Falcon kicker.

e possibility of seeing Kevin Hannah.

We didn't have him all the way back last week, but he could see some return duty and maybe some time at tailback."

Carpenter, out of Dunbar High School in Chicago, also received Gateway accolades being named the special teams player-of-the-week for his 96-yard kickoff return, which gave the Salukis the lead for the final time against SEMO.

Tolen hyperextended his elbow, but Watson said he is healthy enough to play.

Bone awards

The SIUC coaching staff gave bones out to the player who had the best game on each unit.

The offensive player was William Tolen and his 106-yard performance. Defensive end Ryan Smith was named on his side of the ball and Carpenter won the special teams award.

Growing pains

Freshman quarterback Reggie Kennedy's 10 for 25 performance was not the debut Watson had hoped for.

Watson said Kennedy did all right considering it was his first collegiate start and will be at the helm against Murray State on Saturday, but the possibility of sophomore Danny Smith seeing some action is there.

"Reggie will start the question now is will Danny Smith see some action and I can't answer that now," he said.

The Dawgs open their home slate on Saturday at 1:30 against 1-0 Murray State.

Another McEnroe back at Open

Newsday

He's never won the U.S. Open. He's never been married to a movie star.

He's never been called "McEnrow."

Patrick McEnroe has spent his tennis career in the shadow of his brother John. Now John McEnroe sits in the television booth and Patrick McEnroe, the emerging McEnroe, plays in the spotlight.

John's little brother is having his biggest U.S. Open. He beat Daniel Vacek Monday night to advance to a quarterfinal match Wednesday against fourth-seeded Boris Becker. It is the furthest Patrick McEnroe ever has advanced in his hometown major. "It's great to be playing my best tennis here," he said Tuesday. "I always wanted to do my best here. All the things I've been working on have come together at the right place and the right time."

It has taken time for McEnroe's game to come together. At 29, in his seventh full season of professional tennis, he won his first championship in the New South Wales Tournament in Sydney in January. "Honestly, it wasn't a big deal," McEnroe said. "It wasn't like I had to win a tournament to validate my career. But it showed that my hard work has made me a better tennis player."

It hasn't made him a legend, isn't likely to, and that's OK with him. When John McEnroe was 18, he was a Wimbledon semifinalist. By the time he was 20 he had won the first of three consecutive U.S. Opens. At 22 he won both Wimbledon and the U.S. Open. By the time he was 29, Patrick's age, he was on his way down.

Patrick is on his way up, a late bloomer. He followed John to Stanford University, but unlike his brother he stayed there four years and got his degree in political science. He wasn't a tennis prodigy. "I didn't feel it would be a definite thing that I would make it in tennis," Patrick said. "John was in the semis of Wimbledon at 18 and that wasn't going to happen to me."

Tuesday he practiced virtually unnoticed on Court 8 at the National Tennis Center. He has gotten the backing of the New York fans, but hasn't captured their imagination. After hitting balls for 45 minutes with his coach Dick Herbst, he signed autographs for a dozen fans and did an interview with DSF, the German version of ESPN, which was the only television crew waiting for him.

"I don't worry about the spotlight and I don't particularly want to be in it," McEnroe said. "I understand that it comes when you achieve a certain level of success."

When John McEnroe's afternoon broadcast for USA Network ended Tuesday, dozens of people crowded around the booth and had to be shooed away. John still is the star. But right now Patrick is the man.

"He seems to be comfortable with what he can do," John said. "He's playing within his limits and doing the things he does best. I think he's more comfortable with being pumped up. He's letting himself go and that allows him to bring out his best tennis."

running back/kick returner.

"Rookie? What rookie?" Meggett said.

The very first day he put on shoulder pads and a helmet with a Patriot on the side, he stopped being a rookie."

Said Martin: "I always have people telling me I'm just a rookie, but I want to play like a veteran."

Martin is particularly aware of Parcells' deep-seated anxiety about using rookies.

"(Parcells) doesn't like to play rookies, so I tell him he doesn't have to worry about me," Martin said.

So what does Parcells think of Martin?

"He's just a young kid trying to get along," the coach said.

NFL officials this year instituted a rule aimed at protecting quarterbacks, preventing tacklers from using their helmets if the passer is in a defenseless position, meaning when he is releasing a pass.

But Troy Aikman doesn't believe the rule will make a significant dent in the rash of quarterback injuries.

In fact, the Cowboys star said even before the start of the regular season that the injury rate for passers wouldn't change, regardless of the new rule.

"Over the years, the league has tried to come up with rules to protect the quarterback," Aikman said. "Now, they have this one with the (tackler's) helmet."

But what we'll find is the same thing we've always found.

It's not going to make a big difference. Quarterbacks are still going to get hurt."

Parks brothers help pace SIUC

By Chad Anderson
Daily Egyptian Reporter

For some reason, twins always seem to attract attention, but in the case of a set of twin brothers on the Saluki cross-country team, the attention is well deserved.

Jeremy and Joseph Parks, freshmen from Eldorado, started their season off with a bang, helping SIUC defeat both Kansas and Southern Indiana Saturday.

The twins said they experienced pre-race jitters before the meet against Kansas and Southern Indiana.

"Yeah, we were a little bit nervous before the meet," Joseph said.

Jeremy said running against a team like Kansas for their first meet, and running in an upcoming meet against Illinois and Arizona on Sept. 16, is tough on them, but beating an opponent from those schools gives them a lot of confidence.

"It's a lot more competition than high school," Jeremy said. "It's pretty exciting running against Kansas, who was ranked 16th in the national finals last year, and Arizona was ranked fourth last year. I always think about who's running next to me, and beating a guy from Arizona is important. It gives us confidence."

In their first collegiate meet, the twins impressed Saluki coach Bill Cornell by placing high and running a low time.

"To run under 20 minutes in their first meet was excellent," he said.

Cornell said the twins have fulfilled the expectations he had of them before the season began.

"They've fulfilled them more so than I ever expected," he said. "We thought all along they would be better at the longer distances, and that's proven true. They're eager to do anything I ask, and they believe in themselves. It didn't seem to bother them last week (to run against a school such as Kansas in their first collegiate meet)."

The twins have received an abundance of media attention already this season according to Cornell, but the twins said this is nothing new.

"It keeps people from home and here updated about us," Jeremy said. "It doesn't bother us, we enjoy it."

"We're used to it," Joseph said. "It's always been like this through high school."

The twins said Cornell has been a big help to them, and has given them some direction to train in.

"We finally have a coach who

Hefty offensive line key to Saluki offense, season

By Doug Durso
DE Sports Editor

When the SIUC football team beat Southeast Missouri State 30-27 last Thursday, the Salukis used a powerful offensive line and quick running backs to punish SEMO and leads the Dawgs to victory.

Head coach Shawn Watson said he counted on the offensive line to make the running game go.

"I wasn't really surprised, I was glad to see it," he said. "We did well across the board. I think we made strides in that area."

Even though the line weighs an average of 305, Watson said the attention to fundamentals has made the offensive line better.

"Our line is basically fundamentally sound and they continue to improve," he said. "It's nice to see our guys moving forward instead of backwards."

Senior captain Larry Mullins received Gateway Conference honors as the offensive line player of the week.

Watson said three linemen really stood out in the game against SEMO.

"Larry (Mullins) played well, Steven Jones was unbelievable and Shane Kreke had outstanding game for us," he said. "And the rest of the line gave us winning performances."

William Tolen led the Salukis with 106 yards, true freshman Karlton Carpenter gained 77 on nine carries and Coe Bonner chipped in with 48 yards. The 235 total rushing yards was the most by the Salukis since Watson has been the head man.

Watson said because the Salukis have so many talented running backs the ball will have to be distributed among them.

"William Tolen will get the start," he said. "He's a senior, he's given us a lot of steady play and dedication through the couple years that he has been here."

"He will be spelled by Carpenter and Coe Bonner and with the

SIUC athlete's court hearing reduces charge

By Chris Clark
DE Assistant Sports Editor

SIUC sophomore swimmer Chris Salisbury, 19, was released on his own recognizance Tuesday after his first appearance in court on disorderly conduct charges.

Salisbury, of Carbondale, was originally arrested Sunday night by SIU Police for allegedly stalking an ex-girlfriend and was transported to Jackson County jail where he was booked on stalking charges. The charge was then reduced to disorderly conduct at Salisbury's court appearance Tuesday.

"According to a report from University News Service, Salisbury had allegedly been reported to SIU Police on several occasions over several days by his ex-girlfriend."

Salisbury's next appearance in court could not be determined.

SIUC swim coach Rick Walker declined comment at this time.

Dallas, 49ers ahead in Sanders sweepstakes

Newsday

I know. I know. Not another Deion column.

But look at the bright side. This may be the last of its kind, since it appears Sanders is about to decide his football fate not only for this year, but for the next four or five.

In other words, the annual "Where's Deion Going This Year?" farce is about to end. If we're lucky, by Friday. Maybe even Wednesday.

So if all this stuff is giving you a headache, take heart. It's giving Deion a headache, too. In fact, his migraines became so severe a few days ago, he took himself out of the San Francisco Giants' lineup Friday and Saturday.

"It's definitely the stress," Sanders told reporters Sunday. "I'll be home watching TV (this week), hoping and praying someone will come through with an offer so I'll know my destiny for the next five years of my life."

Here's how his destiny shapes up.—The Dallas Cowboys. Jerry Jones is talking about a four-year or five-year deal worth about $2.5 million a season. Jones has

"I'll be home watching TV (this week), hoping and praying someone will come through with an offer so I'll know my destiny for the next five years of my life."

Deion Sanders
Free agent cornerback expressed confidence about signing Sanders, who would play cornerback and wide receiver with Dallas. Jones has freed up plenty of money under the salary cap by restructuring deals with tackle Erik Williams, defensive end Tony Tolbert, tackle Mark Tuinei and guard Nate Newton. —The San Francisco 49ers. Team president Carmen Policy met with Sanders' agent, Eugene Parker, last week and talked about parameters of a deal that is expected to be competitive with Jones' bid. Policy has assurances that playing time won't be an impediment to a deal, an important factor because the Niners aren't as willing to let Sanders play receiver because of the presence of star wideouts Jerry Rice and John Taylor. —The Miami Dolphins. Looking for an upset special? Consider Miami. Dolphins officials have been virtually silent on the Sanders negotiating front, but are pursuing him heavily. Last year, team owner Wayne Huizenga offered a $4 million signing bonus, and Huizenga, who also owns baseball's Florida Marlins, attempted to trade for Sanders twice this season, once when Deion was with the Cincinnati Reds, and again after he was dealt to the Giants. —The Denver Broncos. Looking for a real upset special? Try Denver, whose owner, Pat Bowlen, has said he'll match any offer.

And what about the Philadelphia Eagles? They're 50-1.

In the meantime, for those of you who can't take another word about Deion, relax. It's almost over.

The big problem for the New England Patriots this season was supposed to be the lack of a running game. Enter unheralded rookie Curtis Martin, a third-round pick out of Pittsburgh whose history of knee injuries scared away several teams in the draft.

But not Pats Coach Bill Parcells, who appears to have come away with a steal.

In Martin's NFL debut Sunday, he rushed for 102 yards and scored the winning touchdown in New England's come-from-behind 17-14 win over the Cleveland Browns at Foxboro Stadium.

Surprised? Not David Meggett, the former New York Giants
