Climbers can boulder indoors or outdoors

By Tracy Taylor
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A car accident in his junior year of high school kept Michael Batsie in a wheelchair for three months. Rock climbing is what got him out.

"I was watching some guy climbing on television and it inspired me to get out and do something spontaneous," he said. "Through bouldering outside, I built up my strength and moved on to bigger climbs both indoors and outdoors."

Bouldering is a sport where the rock climbers do not exceed 20 feet, while in actual rock climbing, the athletes climb higher distances.

Whether an experienced veteran at rock climbing or a novice at the sport, Batsie and some other rock climbers said they agree that they can build up their strength, endurance and skill either on a mountain or on the climbing wall at the SIUC Recreation Center.

Batsie, a freshman in elementary education from Mahomet, said he began climbing in a park near his hometown after his accident. Batsie said it was his first attempt at rock climbing.

"I began climbing around rocks not more than 20 feet, and then I started going to an indoor climbing gym in Champaign where the wall was 30 to 35 feet high," he said.

Batsie said he was inspired by Hugh Herr, a rock climber who got frostbite during a climb and lost his legs from the kneecap down.

"He is still climbing," he said. "It made me want to do something."

Although Batsie likes to climb on outside rocks better than on simulated walls, such as the one in the Recreation Center, he said the wall helps to keep up his strength.

"The wall prepares you because it works out your muscles, but in simulated rock climbing, the rocks are big and positive," he said. "You can get your grip inside these rocks. Rocks like that are scarce in real rock climbing."

Batsie said he was able to scale the entire wall in the Recreation Center the first time he tried.

Batsie said he has climbed rocks in the Grand Tetons in Wyoming, outdoor mountain ranges and Giant City State Park.

Although some people learn rock climbing on real rocks and others on simulated walls, rock climbers agree that the wall is good practice.

Ryan Hughes, a sophomore in aviation management from Rockford, said he has been outside rock climbing for seven years.

Hughes said the wall is a good way to keep up practice in rock climbing.

Students question insurance coverage after fire in trailer

By Travis Akin
Daily Egyptian Reporter

When Jenna Smith saw the devastation a recent fire wreaked upon her neighbor's trailer at Crab Orchard Lake Mobile Homes, she was left questioning her own insurance coverage.

Smith, the neighbor from whose trailer the victim's called 911 to report the fire, said she immediately checked her insurance policy to see if it covered her belongings.

"I looked at my policy, and I am in the process of finding out what is covered," Smith said. "The fire made me think and realize that there is more money in things inside my trailer than I realized."

John Owen, a senior in architecture from Chatham, said fire insurance is not a big concern because he said he and his roommate are both very concerned with safety.

"My roommate and I are both pretty conscious of things like making sure the gas stove is turned off," Owen said. "Because we are conscious of safety, there is no real threat of a fire. When I get my own home, though, I will have fire insurance."

Other students such as Kevin Taylor, a second-year graduate student in theater from Oakland, Ky., said fire insurance is necessary.

Taylor said his computer is so important to school and business that he sends copies of the invoices from purchases he makes for his computer to his insurance company. He said in case of a fire, he would be able to get those items replaced.

Taylor said it is not unusual for graduate students to be concerned with their belongings.

CARBONDALE

Accident victim dies

The five-year-old daughter of two SIUC students died Aug. 30 from injuries sustained in a car accident on Interstate 57, about 75 miles north of Marion.

Caitlen Mumford, the daughter of Jason and Meghan Mumford, died at 11:55 p.m. at the Carle Foundation Hospital in Urbana.

Illinois State Police in Effingham said Jason Mumford, 25, a junior in physical education from McHenry, was driving northbound with his family when he lost control of the vehicle, hit a median and struck a bridge support at 1:15 p.m. Aug. 30.

The family of four first was taken to St. Anthony's Hospital in Effingham. Meghan Mumford, 23, a sophomore in psychology from McHenry, and the Mumford's son Jacob, 2, were treated and released. Caitlen and Jason Mumford were transferred to Carle Foundation Hospital.

Jason Mumford was admitted to the hospital in serious condition, but hospital officials said his condition has been upgraded to stable.

He has since been transported to Lutheran General Hospital in Park Ridge.

Memorial Hospital gets $1 million for baby care

The Memorial Hospital of Carbondale received an additional $1 million in state funds to provide obstetrical perinatal (premature birth) care to 1,100 young Medicaid patients this year, hospital administrator George Maroney says.

Maroney said the hospital's obstetrics unit will deliver about 2,200 babies this year.

Of those babies, half will be Medicaid recipients, Maroney said.

In addition to delivering babies, Maroney said the hospital provides a neonatal intensive care unit for premature infants and infants who are born with infections and other health problems.

Of the 200 infants in that unit, 65 percent are Medicaid patients, he said.

Columbian heads Spouses' Group

By Sheila Stowers
Daily Egyptian Reporter

When Diana Gregory came to the United States as a summer camp art counselor in 1980, she said the children at the camp tried to make her feel at home by helping her with her English.

Gregory, 38, from Bogota, Colombia, said that although her English was weak, she had little trouble adjusting to the American way of life because of her extensive world traveling.

Her husband, George Gregory, 67, a master's student in linguistics from SIUC, said that his wife adapted very quickly to American culture.

"In some ways Diana is not a typical Colombian," he said. "Born and raised in the capital and having traveled internationally, she wouldn't have any trouble adjusting anywhere."

Diana Gregory said she returned to Colombia to study English after spending the summer in the United States in 1980. While she was there, she met and married George Gregory, who was in Bogota teaching English.

The couple said they decided to move to the United States permanently when their son Greg was six months old because of terrorist activity in Bogota at the time.

"At the time I was there, we suffered a lot with bombs in the city," Diana Gregory said. "It was so scary to just go anywhere."

"My mom lived in an area where there were a lot of politicians and important people, and someone put a truckload of explosives in the area. Fortunately, it didn't go off." She said that she and her husband wanted to feel safe taking Greg Alexander, 5, to the park or to the supermarket. So they moved back to America.

"I really enjoy living here," Diana Gregory said. "I appreciate so many little things that make life easier. I can go with my kid anywhere."

The Gregory family lived in Florida before moving to Carbondale a year ago so that George Gregory could work on his degree.

Diana Gregory said she enjoys living in Carbondale because there are so many internationals and so many opportunities for cultural exchange.

She is now the new president of the International Spouses' Group, which provides activities for the spouses of international students at

Diana Gregory said she got involved in the International Spouses' Group because she wanted to learn about other cultures. She said the group has helped her make friends with other internationals whom she would not otherwise have had a chance to meet.

Beth Mochnick, director of community relations for international programs and services, said many of the international wives left careers behind to be with their husbands while they attend school.

"Sometimes the wives get a little lost in the commotion of moving to another country and getting the husband set up, especially if their English isn't really strong," Mochnick said. "The wives get isolated."

George and Diana Gregory both are happy living in Carbondale. They said they enjoy the cultural awareness provided by the international population in Carbondale.

They also said they like the relative security of Southern Illinois and the freedom they enjoy while spending time with their son.

Military strike was justified because of Iraqi's invasion

PRESIDENT BILL CLINTON AUTHORIZED THE use of military force Tuesday when the United States military fired cruise missiles on certain Iraqi air defenses.

Whether or not this decision was a political ploy by Clinton in order to gain voter support before the upcoming election remains to be seen.

Despite the numerous threats to withdraw from the surrounding territory, Iraqi forces continued to invade the city of Irbil, the capitol of Northern Iraq, and then began to move towards the city of Sulaymaniyah.

Sulaymaniyah served as the headquarters for political groups, one of which is the Patriotic Union of Kurdistan, which controlled key areas until the Iraqi invasion.

IRAQI FORCES HAD CAPTURED A MAJOR population center Monday, with a 20,000 plus soldier division, and then continued to move further into Kurdistan.

After this action, the president signed a directive stating that action needs to be taken and that military action would be used if necessary.

Even though Turkish, Iraqi and United Nations officials reported to the White House that the forces had been withdrawn from Irbil, the Iraqi army began to move toward its current goal of Sulaymaniyah.

Justifying military actions can be difficult, especially when taking into account the potential death rate from such a strike.

Military action should only be taken after all other steps have been exhausted. The casualty rate, of both civilian and military personnel, can climb rapidly from strike missions such as this one.

KURDISTAN HAS BEEN OPPRESSED BY IRAQ for more than 40 years. Intelligence reports even stated that Iraqi troops were hunting down people belonging to opposition groups and executing them, as well as holding mass executions in the city of Irbil as they entered the new cities by force.

Dealings with Saddam Hussein in the past have always been marred, because it always seems to come down to some form of military action.

It seems that military strikes are the only type of action that gets his attention enough so that he will listen, even if he doesn't listen for very long.

Certain international lines had been drawn concerning the surrounding area, but Hussein did not abide by them. He continually pushes his troops through the area in hopes of gaining more power and land.

There seems to be a phrase of "We should have taken care of him (Hussein) the last time during Desert Storm," going around describing the hatred some people hold towards this man.

It shows that many people do agree that something needs to be done once and for all in order to put an end to the killing and suffering going on in the Middle East.

Hopefully, the action taken Tuesday will be all that is necessary before some kind of understanding can be reached — before thousands more die.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Student applauds protestors

I applaud the black students who came to the Free Forum area protesting the cartoon on page 5 of the DE on Friday, Aug. 30, 1996.

Whoever put this cartoon in must be out of their minds to think that blacks can be exploited. Republicans simply are playing with fire.

There is no surprise that racism, and sexism exist in this country. I personally suffer from a learning disability. I wonder every now and then if there is a term that describes the hatred of the learning disabled.

Anyone that disrespects the learning disabled should be required to take civic courses or classes to learn about different kinds of people that exist throughout the world.

The black students that protested about the cartoon show that they won't be taken for granted. At least they got out and talked about it.

As a sympathetic white male, I know what it is like to be hit with hatred.

I've been hated because I learn differently because of the disability that I have — autism. Now why would people hate people like me because of that?!

I've lived with a learning disability my whole life. The people who put this outrageously dumb, foolish cartoon in should be arrested for discrimination and harassment.

I want to ask the same people this question: How would you feel if someone did this to you?!

Personally, people who discriminate against others because of their race, gender, sexual orientation, nationality and disability should not go unpunished.

Also, anyone who thinks about putting a cartoon that discriminates against certain groups of people in any newspaper should be knowledgeable of the people they are trying to victimize before putting garbage like that in a newspaper.

In closing, let's try to love and like each other for their abilities and their characters, and not by the color of their skin and/or handicaps they might have.

Clinton not doing a very good job

I just finished reading Brian Clardy's letter to the editor about the Welfare Bill and was appalled with the ignorance which my eyes beheld.

Mr. Clardy, as a doctoral student in history, your article is a clear example supporting the theory that intelligence cannot be learned.

You state that, "President Clinton displayed a great deal of moral courage when he enacted the recent bill to 'end welfare as we know it.'"

Who, Mr. Clardy, do you think initiated this bill? The answer is the Republicans.

By no means did the Democrats initiate this bill, and the President vetoed it three times before finally signing the exact same bill.

The only difference between the bill he just signed and the one he vetoed three times is that it is now eight months closer to an election.

You say that we need to give Americans the tools they need to control their lives.

It pains me to see that you think Democrats protect your freedom better than Republicans.

The whole democratic theory revolves around a loose interpretation of the Constitution, making way for bigger government, more governmental control, and less freedom — a theory of government we were terrified of until it collapsed in the Soviet Union.

In President Clinton's administration, drug use has risen 105 percent, wage earnings have dropped 1 percent, the federal deficit has risen more than it did in Reagan's and Bush's 12-year administration, and despite Clinton's promise, taxes have been increased multiple times.

Mr. Clardy, your "undying support" and trust of the president will be the death of this country. Ignorance will be the death of this country.

Do you want a government that is free of corruption and scandals? Do you want a government for the people? How can you answer "yes" to these questions and vote for Bill Clinton?

Does character mean anything? And while I am sad to see the beliefs you hold to be true, I am not at all surprised, for after all, you are a Democrat.

Bus service a bust, not success

On the front page of last Wednesday's Daily Egyptian was the headline: "Saluki Express considered success." Absent in the accompanying report, however, was any mention of the criteria used for evaluating the bus service's performance.

Curious, I called Sean Borman, the SIUC Transportation Clerk and was told that success meant that "the buses weren't empty." Ridership figures in the DE, as well as those provided by Mr. Borman, indicate that when judged not by the meaningless "non-empty" standard, but rather by the standard of "Administrators should spend students' money as carefully as they would their own," the Saluki Express has been a failure.

Last year, the buses averaged 16 riders per bus-hour. Assuming an average trip of 15 minutes, each of the seven 40-passenger buses carried only four passengers at any given time, an occupancy rate that gives the term "mass transit" new meaning. Admittedly, if trips averaged longer than 15 minutes, the number of seats occupied would have been proportionally higher, but given that Carbondale proper is less than four miles from corner to corner, rides much longer than 15 minutes suggest poor routing rather than efficiently-used buses.

When evaluated on the basis of rider trips rather than rider hours, the Saluki Express' performance was equally dismal. The total number of student trips was 115,000 last fall and 124,000 last spring. Assuming an enrollment of

ANOTHER LOOK BY NEAL ROMNEY

20,000, students averaged only six bus trips per semester, meaning that each student trip cost more than $4. Were students to have paid the $.50/trip, non-student rate rather than the mandated $25/semester student fee, they would have saved $44 each in just two semesters.

Admittedly, the bus service has been operating for only one year and usage is still creeping up, but were the need for this service as great as its proponents insist, ridership would already be triple or quadruple its current level. And yes, SIUC students did approve the Saluki Express on referenda in 1986, '88, and '93, but the administration's willingness to override students' wishes on other controversial matters calls into question the credibility of any such justification for continuing this costly and inefficient bus service.

Despite its apparent extravagance, Saluki Express, it could be argued, contributes significantly to the overall social welfare. While it is difficult to refute such an assertion without being labeled mean spirited, the fact is that the quality of life for the overwhelming majority of SIUC students has not been markedly improved by the advent of mass transit in this decidedly non-urban setting. In fact, in an informal, quasi-random campus poll, half of returning SIUC students indicated they had never once used the bus service, and almost half of the rest reported only one ride per week.

The simplest and most sensible course is to discontinue the Saluki Express at the end of the current contract and thereafter allow individual students to decide how best to invest their transportation dollars. However, if the administration insists on levying fees for "mass transit," it could use the money to purchase a mountain bike for each student. Those physically unable to bicycle could be served by a couple of vans purchased from the same funds. While no less coercive than the Saluki Express, this program would at least minimize noise and air pollution, conserve fossil fuels, encourage regular exercise, decrease campus gridlock and provide unlimited flexibility in scheduling one's movements. As well, graduating students would have something to take with them besides their diplomas and their empty pockets.

"In other circumstances the United States might have distanced itself from a situation in which a sovereign state moved against a foreign-supported separatist movement on its own soil. Iraq was intervening, after all, at the request of one Kurdish faction to pry out another aided by Iran, a mortal foe..."

...It is troubling that so many allies and friends, and not just those within easy range of Iraqi intimidation, were critical of the American strikes. Some had seen an incipient softening in Saddam Hussein's recent acceptance of U.N. terms for selling Iraqi oil for food. Some genuinely doubt that anyone can profit from further American intervention in the tangled Kurdish question. Many countries are accepting Baghdad's complaint that it was a stretch for Washington to try justifying its missile strikes by the 1991 U.N. resolution condemning Iraq's repression.

But on another level, many foreign critics are aware of the advantage to themselves in having the United States available to check Saddam Hussein's power. But a gulf leadership role is required of the United States, and Mr. Clinton, who was slow in recognizing the crisis that was shaping up in northern Iraq, at last seems to have started playing it."

"There's an old rule in politics: When your opponent is hanging himself, stay away from the rope. Within hours of the blockbuster news of Clinton strategist Dick Morris' resignation, the Dole campaign was faxing statements recounting Bill Clinton's scandals, in an attempt to pour more fuel on the news inferno..."

With the Morris resignation, questions of whether Republicans were behind the story's release are common...If this campaign is decided on leadership and integrity, Dole wins, hands down. And he has done this campaign and the taxpayers a great service by naming Jack Kemp as his running mate and unveiling a bold, responsible and doable tax cut and economic plan.

Most presidential campaigns are decided on economic issues — and the country is still unsure about Clinton's plans.

History shows us that Clinton will pay the price for whatever sins Morris may have committed by losing him as trusted campaign strategist. Just as Michael S. Dukakis never recovered from the loss of political guru John Sasso, in 1988, Clinton may be doomed to a similar fate. Dole and his campaign should let history be their guide and stay away from the ropes now tangling the Clinton campaign."

Bird watching intrigues even non-enthusiasts

By Melissa Jakubowski
DE Features Editor

While Jennifer Adams sat outside Wham waiting for her class to start last semester, she watched a hawk swoop down and pick up a squirrel. "It was so amazing," Adams, a sophomore in education from Calumet City, said. "The bird was so graceful and quiet. No one even noticed this huge bird come down. It was like something out of National Geographic."

Adams is not an avid bird watcher, but according to the Audubon Society, it is one of the most popular hobbies in the world. Bird watchers may not be ornithologists — zoologists with a specialty in bird science — but they do have a chance to provide scientific value and clues about the changing world environment.

Barbara Cordoni, SIUC professor of psychology, has been an avid bird watcher for more than 20 years. Through various birding expeditions, she said she has visited every continent in the world except Antarctica.

Cordoni said birds are an indicator species, which means they are a reflection of the ecological environment in the world.

"It can all be traced to the coal miners taking canaries into the mines to test for poisonous gases," she said. "If birds are alive and living well, then the area should be okay for people, too."

PAT MAHON — The Daily Egyptian

Dr. Lee C. Drickamer, zoology professor, watches for birds in Thompson Woods Wednesday.

Ben Gelman, a retired public information specialist for University relations and author of the book, "Bird Watching with Ben," said there are more than 9,000 types of species of birds in the world. He said there are about 361 species in the Southern Illinois region alone.

Gelman said a common practice for bird watchers is to keep a life list of all the birds they have seen. He said in the past 10 years that he has lived in Makanda, he has spotted 143 species of birds.

"A neighbor of mine said she had a little bunting (a six inch bird with blue and green colors) by her feeder," he said. "I ran over there and snapped a picture of it. Until then, there had never been an official record of one in Illinois."

Gelman said every year around Christmas, bird watchers hold a national bird count where they go into a forest area, recording bird sightings and calls. He said the information gathered at the counts is passed on to scientists and other groups.

"Bird watching has definite scientific value," he said. "At the gatherings, we can count the number of each kind of bird for a 15-mile diameter circle."

Cortoni said she and her husband are part of a bird-feeding research project through Cornell University. She said they have different types

Cooper's Hawk now off endangered species list

Colleen Heraty
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The Illinois Endangered Species Protection Board voted last week to remove the Cooper's Hawk from the Endangered and Threatened Species List because of a dramatic population comeback, officials say.

In 1978, there were no known nests of the Cooper's Hawk in Illinois, but today data indicates the bird is no longer endangered, likely to be lost in the near future or even threatened, Sue Lauzon, the board's executive director, said.

Lauzon said although some species have been taken off the endangered and threatened list in Illinois because they were too common, this may be the first time a species has been taken off the list because of its recovery.

"No one knows exactly why, but we think the bird is making a slow comeback after the pesticide DDT was banned in the 1970s," Lauzon said. "It may be a delayed reaction."

Lauzon said the pesticide had a large effect on most eagles, hawks and owls in the late 1960s and early 1970s, causing the populations of some species to become perilously low.

"Somehow, DDT interfered with how their bodies produced calcium, causing their egg shells to be very thin," Lauzon said.

The shells were so fragile that when the birds sat on their eggs to incubate, the shells would break and they were not able to raise their young, Lauzon said.

"Now we are seeing an increasing trend with the Cooper's Hawk population, and other states around us have seen the same thing," Lauzon said.

Dan Kirk, an SIUC graduate student in zoology, is studying the Cooper's Hawk for his thesis. He said he believes the hawk probably has been around in Illinois longer than people have thought.

"These birds are shy and secretive, so you would have to find them," Kirk said. "They do not soar like eagles but stay below the forest canopy."

Kirk said he began studying the birds this summer, and he said he has found 12 Cooper's Hawk nests within three counties in Southern Illinois.

Everglades clean up progressing

The Washington Post

MIAMI—For the first time in years, the managers who monitor the health of the Everglades, one of the greatest and most imperiled marshlands on Earth, have some good news to report — the water is cleaner.

Farmers, most often viewed as environmental villains, appear to have improved the quality of the water running off their land and entering the Everglades ecosystem.

A report by the South Florida Water Management District indicates farmers have achieved a 68 percent reduction in the amount of phosphorus fertilizer discharged from their fields. Previously, many farmers argued that even a 25 percent reduction would bankrupt them.

Hughes said he comes to the wall in the Recreation Center three or four times a week because endurance is a big key to regular rock climbing.

"Each time you go to the wall and put more stress on yourself, the things that were difficult at first become easier," he said.

While the indoor wall is good preparation for outdoor climbs, there are distinct differences between the two, some climbers said.

Julie Ludman, a senior in outdoor recreation from St. Charles and a student supervisor for the wall, said that the wall has many differences than a real rock climb.

"When you are on a rock, it's not a flat rock like the wall," she said. "You can only simulate real rock climbing to a certain point."

Ludman said on the simulated wall, the climber can see the rocks and that is not true for real rock climbing.

actual rocks," she said. "You can't see where you're going."

Although rock climbing comes easy to many, precautions must be taken to ensure the safety of the climber.

"Proper safety techniques include safety ropes being connected to the climber, and all climbers have to wear their helmets," Ludman said.

Most climbers agree that rock climbing is a dangerous sport.

Hughes said people who do not keep their equipment in good shape are in constant danger.

"Climbers are dying all the time," he said. "If you take precautions with your equipment, you should be in pretty good shape."

independent and have more material possessions than an undergraduate," Taylor said.

"We also tend to have more things that we have purchased with our own money, and we are not supported by our parents."

Bilderback said while some students such as Taylor believe fire insurance to be a necessity, it is often hard to find.

He said there are not many companies that carry the type of insurance that would apply to the students.

Bob Bahr, a Carbondale State Farm insurance agent, said his company offers two plans for renters.

One plan is a cash policy that allows up to three people to be on the same policy, Bahr said.

The minimum amount of insurance would be $8,000, and with a $250 deductible, the annual premium would be around $75, he said.

Bahr said the other plan requires renters to have at least $25,000 of coverage, but it is a full replacement plan.

With a $250 deductible, the yearly cost would be $155, he said. In other words, if a person loses a television in a fire, under the replacement plan, the person would get a new model to match the lost television.

Under the State Farm cash plan, the renter receives money based on the original cost of the item minus the depreciation value.

Sandra Hayes, the personalized manager at Diederich Insurance, 506 W. Main, said the company has similar plans.

She said her company's cash policy has a $5,000 minimum with a $250 deductible.

The average cost is $135 a year. Hayes said her company also has replacement plans as well, but it requires at least a $15,000 minimum.

With a $250 deductible, the yearly cost would be $98.

Other local insurance agents could not be reached as of press time.

Both Hayes and Bahr said students should have some type of fire insurance.

"It is a good idea to have it, Bahr said. "You may never have to use it, but it is a good idea to have some."

of bird seed on five individual pieces of cardboard. She said she and her husband have to record which birds come to which particular feed.

Cordoni said she and her husband have bought more than 2,300 pounds of bird seed.

"By being volunteers, we can help scientific studies and fundamentally, the federal government," she said.

Lee C. Drickamer, a professor in zoology, said bird watching can definitely determine if there is any habitat destruction in Southern Illinois caused by logging, human development and the draining of wetlands.

"By being volunteers, we can help scientific studies..."

Barbara Cordoni,
SIUC psychology professor

He said bird watching also can determine if chemicals are having an effect on the environment.

"The fragmentation of the Shawnee National Forest had a definite influence on the bird population in Southern Illinois," he said. "But in the past 60 years, the forest has been growing back in.

Bird counts can help determine reproduction rates and growing populations."

Drickamer said the historical location of Southern Illinois is good for bird watching because geographically, it is a crossroad between the northern and the southern regions.

He said SIUC has one of the best campuses to bird watch because of Campus Lake.

Gelman said bird watchers have the opportunity to see a variety of exotic birds, whether they have the opportunity to observe them for an hour or a day. He said the most exotic bird he has seen was the slaty backed gull from Siberia. He saw it two years ago.

"It was just sitting there near the Mississippi River bank in Alton," he said.

EDITOR'S NOTE

This University has been in desperate need of a publication capable of informing students of the best bands, films and social events each week. Because of this need, the Daily Egyptian created the Glyph. Not only does the Glyph fulfill all of those needs, it goes beyond that. Glyph also discusses issues that college students are interested in. These issue stories will appear every Thursday and will not be caged to SIUC. The issue stories also will focus on national trends and on current events and how these things pertain to college. For those who missed the announcement for the Glyph in the DE's Aug. 29 E-Page, the correct pronunciation for Glyph is "glif," and the name is short for the word hieroglyphics, which would have been tough to stretch across the top of the cover. Hieroglyphics was an ancient style of Egyptian writing. The DE hopes that students will find this new and exciting publication interesting and hopes it will not take away from Thursday's class lectures too much. The DE will try everything it can to keep this publication fresh, innovative and entertaining. All comments and ideas are welcome and can be submitted by contacting the DE entertainment staff at 536-3311 ext. 240.

The third annual Cascade of Colors Hot Air Balloon Festival has taken months of preparation but is ready to fly, planner of the festival says.

Tom Forenz, a balloon pilot from Canada and a graduate student at SIUC, said he is extremely excited about this year's festival. The festival will be at the Southern Illinois Airport off Route 13 between Carbondale and Murphysboro.

"We've put so much planning into this," he said. "There is no way a person could come out here and be bored. There is something for everyone."

Forenz said there will be balloon launches daily as well as balloon races, aircraft displays, airplane and helicopter rides, special shape balloons, live music and fireworks.

Matt Baughman, a graduate student from Springfield and Forenz's assistant, said the gates to the festival will open at 2 p.m. Friday and will last through Sunday.

"This is an all weekend deal," he said. "People can either pick a day to come or can come all weekend. There are so many things to do and see. We have a carnival set up. There will be crafts, and some of Southern Illinois wines will be on display."

Along with the arts, crafts and balloons, seven area bands will perform starting at 6:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday and randomly throughout the day

Sunday. Performing will be: The Groove Merchants, 6:30 p.m. Friday; Jungle Dogs, 8:30 p.m. Friday;

The Alright Blues Band

Massive Funk, 6:30 p.m. Saturday; Alright Blues Band, 8:30 p.m. Saturday; and Jackson Junction with Juli Ingram, 3 p.m. Sunday. The Fishskins and Juli Ingram also will perform Sunday.

Baughman said the festival has taken almost a year to plan and arrange.

"I began seriously getting involved in June, but this has been in the works since last year," he said. "I have been finishing up with a lot of publicity and working with businesses on finishing up details."

"At first, the work overwhelmed me, but it didn't take long to get excited about this. It's going to be a great weekend."

Baughman said he is anxious to see the Balloon Glow, a display of special shape balloons at 8 p.m. Saturday.

"We have some excellent balloons this year," he said. "There will be six balloons of special shapes. The special shape balloons are not the normal shape. There will be a Noah's Arc balloon, and that balloon is the largest, most expensive balloon in the world."

The Jungle Dogs

"We also have a Humpty Dumpty balloon and a Hagar the Horrible balloon. The balloons will be flying all weekend, but for the Balloon Glow, they will be grounded and lit up."

Admission is $4 for adults and $1 for children. An all-weekend pass is $5. Forenz said anyone arriving on a bicycle or a motorcycle will receive $1 off admission and special "inside" parking.

"We are allowing bikers to ride inside the gates," he said. "We just wanted to help alleviate part of the traffic problems."

Forenz said a bus will be running from the Student Center every hour beginning at 1:30 p.m. Friday. Forenz said no coolers are allowed, but lawn chairs and blankets are welcome.

The irresistible lure of coffeehouses

By LISA M. PANGBURN

ILLUSTRATIONS BY AGNIESZKA REZCONKA

Traci Heiden sits at a corner table of Long Branch Coffeehouse (100 E. Jackson St.) with the sounds of folk music circulating around the room, along with the cigarette smoke and the smell of hazelnut.

Heiden, a sophomore in physical training from Rantoul, is one of the many underage people who enjoy a coffeehouse setting rather than a bar scene, but she said the coffeehouse she chooses depends on what is going on at each one.

"The good thing about this place is that you can come here on the weekends and listen to music or study or just relax with your friends," she said.

"We came here tonight to listen to the music. The other coffeehouses in town are just as good for different reasons."

Melody Griffen, a Carbondale resident, said she prefers the mood of coffeehouses far more than the bar scene because of the relaxed environment.

"I don't understand the whole problem with people getting upset because they can't get into a bar," she said.

"There is so much more to do in Carbondale than go to a loud, crowded bar. I would much rather sit in a semi-quiet setting and enjoy the company of my friends than go to a bar and have to scream to talk. What's the point of that?"

The folk music of Kelly Zullo brought a crowd of about 50 people to Long Branch Saturday night.

Zullo played an acoustic guitar and sang mostly original songs.

She played a lot of women's folk, singing a little about Mother Earth as well as women's issues.

Some of the people who congregated around her would pause in their conversations to listen to what she was singing.

Zack Osborne, a Carbondale resident, said he came to listen to the music and sit with his friends.

"I didn't come to read tonight," he said.

"I come in every once in a great while to read, but I wanted to get away and just relax to some good folk music."

Monica Spiegel, an employee of Long Branch, worked behind the bar.

She quickly poured cups of coffee, created dozens of espressos and served a couple of muffins.

She said she was very pleased with the number of people who showed up for the singer.

"Kelly is great," she said. "She does a lot of women's folk music, and there aren't very many people who perform that kind of music."

"I think coffeehouses are going to have a higher clientele now that the bar entry age is 21," she said. "I think that's great."

"If more people come, we can go back to having poetry readings and open mic nights."

"We offer a lot of entertainment, and people don't get drunk and stupid here."

No one got drunk, no one got into a fight and no one had to yell.

The evening proved to be a peaceful one filled with the music of a woman from Tennessee.

Another night at a coffeehouse proves to be a stress-reliever for some and a common meeting place for others.

Kelly finishes her set and kindly gives a "thank you."

Traci finishes her cup of coffee and waves good-bye to some friends, and Zack just continues his discussion.

There are three coffeehouses in

Carbondale:

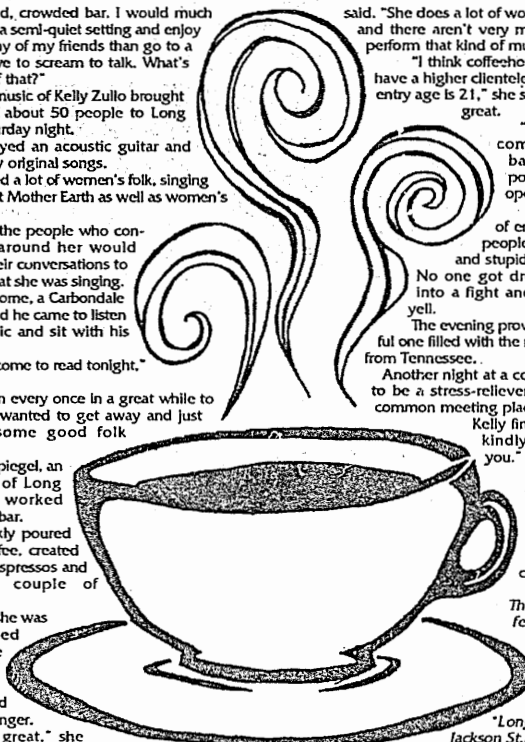

"Melange (607 S. Illinois Ave.)

"Java (611 S. Illinois Ave.)

"Long Branch (100 E. Jackson St.)

CD CAPSULES

-by chad anderson

Jesse Johnson
Bare My Naked Soul
Dinosaur, 1996

When the psychedelic influences of Jimi Hendrix are crossed with the vocal styles of Lenny Kravitz and the artist formerly known as Prince, a guitarist such as Jesse Johnson is produced.

The bluesy sound of the Fender Stratocaster on "Bare My Naked Soul" is taken into places reminiscent of Hendrix's studio work, although it is not quite as masterful and crafty. The album's fourth track, "I Miss," truly presents Johnson's Kravitz influences, and its fifth track, "Let Me In," has a twangy, six-string acoustic sound to it with vocals leaning more toward the style of the artist formerly known as Prince.

While it may seem that Johnson is trying to ride the coattails of a proven formula for selling albums, the music is true and original.

Check this one out if you dig this sound, but virgin-eared listeners should be observant of the parental advisory.

Eels
Beautiful Freak
Geffen, 1996

With its MTV hit "Novocaine for the Soul," the Eels enter the charts as a dime-a-dozen, alternative band with its release "Beautiful Freak."

The group at least tries to be artistic in its music by utilizing the piano and studio overdubs, but falls dramatically short of becoming more than an MTV Buzz Clip. Aside from "Novocaine For the Soul," the rest of the album is not worth the plastic it was recorded on.

"Beautiful Freak's" music develops into deep lulls capable of putting a listener in a coma. Maybe the band did too many doses of Novocaine, and wrote this album while in the dentist's chair.

The group simply is also too reminiscent of the long-forgotten band Weezer.

My advice is to wait for the next buzz band, maybe that one will at least have two tolerable tracks on its album.

White Zombie
Supersexy Swingin' Sounds
Geffen, 1996

On "Supersexy Swingin' Sounds," the hard-edged tunes of White Zombie collide with the mind-bending effects of a studio mix album.

The album of mixes contains a new and exciting version of "More Human Than Human," which reaches into the realms of industrial music. While the studio mixes work well for most of the album, songs such as "Blur the Technician (Poker From Stud to Strip Mix)" become almost too close to dance music one might hear in a local drinking establishment.

The hard driving vocals of Rob Zombie and the guitar of J still will test the boundaries of any set of speakers. It's rock 'n' roll, not jazz. It's meant to be played loud.

White Zombie describes this album on the cover as the "unique and distinctive world of sound created by White Zombie." Point taken.

Wild Colonial's
This Can't Be Life
Geffen, 1996

The vocals of Angela McCuskey on Wild Colonial's latest release, "This Can't Be Life," do little to expand beyond the efforts set forth by the Indigo Girls, Frente and 4 Nonblondes.

Like the Eels, this album is a sleeper, too. The music of Wild Colonial's changes so infrequently that it is tough to decide just what track the CD player is on.

It is a good album to play once in a while to remind yourself how bad music can really be, but I wouldn't suggest playing this one at your next party.

The band is trying, though, and offers an interesting repertoire of instruments.

Little used and heard-of instruments such as the ambient bass, melodica, wurlitzer and the pen whistle are used throughout this album.

Beyond that, I have little to say for this release.

FILM FINDS

THE FAT MAN I USED TO LOVE

"The Island of Dr. Moreau," starring Val Kilmer and Marlon Brando, falls drastically short of its promotional billing. Since Brando played "The Godfather" in one of film's classic roles, I went into the movie with hope and enthusiasm. But I left feeling like my pocket had been picked.

Directed by John Frankenheimer ("Manchurian Candidate"), this movie hurts from the first scene on. The story concerns some babble about a U.N. official named Edward Douglas, played by David Thewlis ("Dragonheart"), whose plane goes down into the Pacific Ocean. He is then picked up by Montgomery (Kilmer) and taken to the island to meet the mysterious Dr. Moreau (Brando).

Now I bought from the husky racks for a while, but Brando has become positively obese. The scenes he appears in are horrific. He sounds like he is reading lines from a cue card just so he can hunch up and get back to the lunch buffet at KFC. His performance is a far cry from his days in "On the Waterfront" and "Streetcar Named Desire."

Brando's character, a Nobel Peace Prize-winning doctor, is holding genetic experiments in order to create a moral, perfect being. So what better way to do it than by mixing man with a warthog or hyena? Yeah, right. This is just one of the endless holes this movie has in its story. This is a story which is not clever enough, or well written enough to let us overlook them. Look for this one to grace my year's worst films article.

IAN MILLER'S VIDEO DELUXE: PICK OF THE WEEK

This week. In order to keep with my theme, my pick is "The Godfather," a classic American film directed by Francis Ford Coppola, starring Marlon Brando and Al Pacino. If you have not seen it yet, rent it. If you have, rent it again because it truly does take multiple viewings to get all the characters and dialogue. Plus, it gives you a chance to see Brando in his truly hungry stage. I'll refrain from any further jokes.

Country music

One morning in March 1989, Michael Stipe, lead singer of the band REM, planted a tree in Evergreen Park at SIUC as an environmental token to the Carbondale community.

Later that night, he led his band in what some consider a monument in SIU Arena concert history. Moving like a poetic swing man, Stipe headed a performance that was both visually and musically stimulating.

But it seems the chance of REM playing at SIU Arena again is becoming slimmer and slimmer for two reasons. REM tours much less than it did in 1989, but a trend also has developed over the past few years of more country acts playing the arena.

Last year the only rock band to play the arena was Bush. Country stars Alan Jackson and Tim McGraw played the arena. It is this ratio of rock band performances to country band performances that has some SIUC students dismayed.

The Conflict

Dax Imhoff is one of these students. The first concert Imhoff, a junior in biology from Johnston City, ever saw was the rock band Foreigner at the Arena. "I don't remember everything from that concert, but what I do remember is that there was a very receptive crowd response to the band," he said.

Since then, he has seen Van Halen twice, Bon Jovi, Skid Row and MC Hammer, to name a few, at the Arena. Imhoff said there was a consistently energetic atmosphere that created a common thread throughout each show.

Imhoff said it is this kind of atmosphere that he misses. Now, Imhoff said he does not go to as many Arena shows as he once did because of the number of shows that are country.

"I don't think they should eliminate country shows all together," he said. "But they should have more rock shows."

Imhoff said he believes that if more rock shows came to the Arena, a consistent and increasing crowd would attend the concerts.

But some at SIUC believe that the number of rock shows at SIUC is sufficient. Beverly Ellis, data entry operator at Information Technology, said she has seen some of the country acts at the venue.

"I think it is wise that the Arena books shows that appeal to the whole area," she said. "It's the only year-around venue we have in the area."

Ellis said people from places such as St. Louis, Paducah, Ky. and Cape Girardeau, Mo., come to Carbondale to see country shows.

She said people travel around to see shows that might not come to their hometown.

In fact, Ellis said she was going to Iowa to see Neal McCoy last weekend.

"Country fans tend to follow performers around the country," she said.

But the conflict over country and rock acts at the Arena is more complex than just the difference in musical taste among those who attend the concerts.

The Reason

Lawrence Juhlin, vice-president of student affairs, said SIU Arena operates on the money it makes from its events and receives no funding from student fees.

There is a student activity fee, which SIUC students pay, but this money goes toward a campus safety program, Rainbow's End child care, the Undergraduate Student Government and the Graduate and Professional Student Council.

USG gives a portion of this fund to the Student Programming Council. If SPC co-sponsors an event at the Arena, then student fees may be used to program a show.

Kelly Throw, concert director for the Student Programming Council, said the council sometimes co-sponsors concerts with the Arena. She said part of the reason there are more country shows than rock shows is because of expense and availability.

Throw said rock shows tend to be more expensive than country shows.

She also said that country acts tend to show more availability to playing in Carbondale.

"Country shows go over well in this area," she said. "Obviously, a country show in Chicago would not go over very well."

Gary Drake, SIU Arena director, said when marketing and promoting a concert, there is a 60-mile radius the Arena considers — not just the Carbondale community.

Within this sixty-mile radius, there are ticket sales locations including Paducah, Cape Girardeau and Harrisburg.

"Not many shows would sell well if we didn't sell tickets outside of Carbondale," he said.

Drake said the Arena conducted research in the past that showed students made up anywhere from 22 percent to 8 percent of those attending concerts.

Gary Drake, SIU Arena director, also said that there has been a national increase in the popularity of country music during the past couple of years.

Therefore, booking country acts was economically feasible and provided a service that was in line with current music trends, Drake said.

However, a local music retailer said there seems to be less of a trend now for people to buy country music than in recent times.

Rick Molter, manager of Blockbuster Music in the University Mall off Route 13, said he has seen no increase in country music album sales lately. If anything, he said country sales have slightly decreased.

"Country music sales have stayed steady for quite a while," he said. "It is the newer artists that are selling now, and the Rebas, and other older artists are decreasing in sales."

The magazine "Country Weekly" recently published research conducted by the Simmons Study of Media and Markets that shows increases in the popularity in country music — especially among young adults.

The study showed that in the 18-year-old to 24-year-old age group, country music increased 69.7 percent between the years of 1990 to 1996. The study reports there was only a 34.8 percent increase in the 45-year-old to 54-year-old age group.

Drake said there was a transformation in rock-n-roll a couple of years ago in which the old school of Arena rock bands slipped down the popularity ladder.

He said this paved a path for new bands such as Green Day and Bush. But bands such as these could not have sold enough tickets early on in their stages of popularity to be profitable for the Arena, Drake said.

"If you sell tickets for $25 a piece and there are 1,000 tickets that don't sell, that is $25,000 we don't receive," he said. "We have to do what is economically feasible."

With the increase in country music and this transformation in rock music, Drake said booking country acts has been the logical move to make during the past couple of years.

Into the Future

However, Drake said now that bands such as Green Day and Bush can sell well at places like the Arena, SIUC may see more rock shows in the future.

The Arena even has confirmed that Hootie and the Blowfish will play Oct. 23.

Drake said though the Arena still will book country shows in the future, booking Hootie and the Blowfish is a stepping stone to bringing more rock acts to SIUC.

New York City attracts legal graffiti artists from Germany

The Washington Post

NEW YORK—For Mathias Kohler, a graffiti artist from Germany, a summer trip to New York ranks somewhere between a pilgrimage and a working holiday. It gives him an opportunity to have a photo taken that will show the folks back home that he has been there, done that and legally left his "tag" on a wall in the city "where it all started."

"We have a lot of graffiti art all over Germany, but New York is the roots of it all. So Germans want to come here to see it and, if they can, to try it out," Kohler, 28, said during his "working" holiday in New York.

In the past few years graffiti artists from Italy, Australia, Japan and Scandinavia have been coming to New York, which is widely acknowledged as the Mecca of graffiti art, to view what local maestros can do with a can of paint and creative flair and to make their own contribution. Some, like Kohler, do it legally in areas where they have been granted permission to paint.

Others do it illegally, under cover of darkness in subway depots and on other public and private property.

They establish contacts with their American counterparts through a myriad of underground magazines distributed in record shops in Europe, Australia and Japan as well as on the Internet.

AMY STRAUSS — The Daily Egyptian

Eric Rushing (left) and Matt McClelland, freshmen cross country runners, run nine miles through Carbondale for practice Wednesday afternoon.

CROSS COUNTRY

Freshmen runners adjust to SIUC

By Donna Colter
Daily Egyptian Reporter

When freshmen cross country runners Eric Rushing and Matt McClelland arrived on the SIUC campus this fall, they said they relied on their teammates to help them adjust to the rigors of being student athletes.

Rushing, a computer engineering major from Dawson, said both the SIUC campus and his love of cross country are what brought him to SIUC.

Although he said adjusting to campus life did not scare him, Rushing admitted he had help settling in on campus.

"Joe and Jeremy Parks (sophomore members of the cross country team) have been there to answer the questions that I have asked," he said. "Since we are suite mates, their door is always open to me."

"Without the Parks, I would have had to figure more things out for myself."

Because Rushing is taking so many general education classes,

"We do everything together as a team. It is hard for us to meet other people because of our schedules, but we do go out."

*Eric Rushing,
Freshman cross country runner*

he hasn't had the chance to take any classes for his major. He is concentrating on adjusting to the studying.

"The studying is a little harder than high school, but I have more time during the day to study since I am in class less," he said. "I am taking English, calculus, theater and chemistry. "I am not enjoying anything yet, but at least calculus isn't too hard."

Even after studying, class and practice, Rushing said he still finds time to socialize with his teammates.

"We do everything together as a team," he said. "It is hard for us to meet other people because of our schedules, but we do go out." McClelland, an agricultural education major from Rushville, is both a roommate and a teammate of Rushing. He said he also is happy with his adjustment to SIUC.

"My decision to come to SIUC was better than I could have expected," he said. "It is the best choice I could have made."

McClelland said the Parks also have played a role in helping him with his transition to campus life.

"My adjustment wouldn't have been so soon without their help," he said. "They have been here to help me out since day one."

When it comes to classes, McClelland said he is fairing slightly better than his roommate.

"I don't like my general education classes, but I do have a few agriculture classes that I really enjoy," he said. "Even though my schedule is hectic, I am keeping up with my reading and assignments."

Cross Country Coach Bill Cornell said McClelland and Rushing are making the transition to collegiate level running.

"It is hard for freshmen to get used to running a longer distance," he said. "Matt and Eric are both doing well, and the talent is there."

Charlotte West, SIUC associate athletic director, said she believes that being on a team makes it easier for an incoming athlete to adjust to college life.

"The team affiliation gives structured care," she said. "With the team affiliation, the goal is there for the players to help each other."

"If a player is struggling, there is always someone to step in and help."

Gagliano

UCA's 20-yard line.

"It was just a good day," Gagliano said. "The punt team did a great job Saturday. Our coverage and protection was just awesome."

Gagliano said several areas have helped him improve his game and attract the attention of scouts.

For one, Gagliano said he is stronger and more mature this year than he was a year ago. And two, he said he worked closely last summer with Brad Maynard, the NCAA's 1995 kicking champion.

"Brad told me I needed to spend more time working on flexibility and leg speed and not worry that much about the weight room," Gagliano said.

Gagliano said he is well aware of the scouts in the stands, but he said he tries not to let it put any added pressure on him.

He is equally aware that it takes two to maintain consistent punting.

During punt situations, Gagliano said he relies heavily upon his center and good friend, junior Kevin Skinkis.

"Kevin Skinkis is awesome," he said. "I mean, he delivers the ball right where I need it. He's one of the best."

Skinkis said the feeling is mutual.

Skinkis said he and Gagliano constantly communicate with one another, and when one is down, so is the other.

"I knew when I was recruited here that my main job was to get the snaps back to him because we knew we had a great punter," Skinkis said. "When he has a great day, I have a great day."

As far as the professional level goes, Gagliano said he believes the opportunities to earn a selection among the NFL's elite are high — so does Skinkis.

"We're good friends and best of buddies," Skinkis said. "We always stick together and remind each other that we're out there for one another."

"Gags (short for Gagliano) is a great kid, and if I'd like to see anybody make it to the pros it would have to be him. I think he's got a great shot at it."

Gagliano will continue handling the team's kickoff tasks, which Watson said will increase Gagliano's stock.

"When he became our kickoff man, that increased his stock quite a bit," Watson said. "Now the test will be how consistent can he stay."

Gagliano said kicking off lets him show the scouts how versatile he can be on the field.

"It gives me an opportunity to showcase my talents in a different manner," he said. "I definitely feel like it will help me."

"Everything is just coming together at the right time. It's pretty exciting."

Team USA eliminates Slovakia

Newsday

NEW YORK—There is the graceful skating, and the way Brian Leetch handles the puck as if it were a goose feather. In the locker room he says little but strides with the confidence of a Stanley Cup champion.

Leetch, the New York Rangers' All-Star defenseman, is taking his turn in Madison Square Garden as captain of Team USA — a "great honor," he says — eight years and one ring after he did the same for the 1988 Olympic team.

"Brian has done anything and everything that's been done in this game," Team USA general manager Lou Lamoriello said. "He does it on the ice and very quietly off the ice."

Nearly healthy after an injury-plagued playoffs last season, Leetch is feeding off the spirit the Americans have generated in the World Cup tournament. Team USA (3-0) completed a sweep of the first round with a 9-3 victory over eliminated Team Slovakia (0-3) Tuesday night in a skatefest that featured a hat trick from Keith Tkachuk. The Americans play the winner of Friday's Finland-Russia quarterfinal Sunday in Ottawa.

Leetch longs for a fresh start after injuries and a general malaise stunted his effectiveness and helped usher the Rangers out of the playoffs in the second round. "I felt good three weeks before the playoffs and I started losing jump in my legs and never regained it," said Leetch, who assisted on goals by John LeClair and Mike Modano. "It's like a pitcher having a tired arm, you can't get that extra pop. That's how I felt. There was basically nothing physically wrong."

The 28-year-old former Conn Smythe and Norris Trophy winner led NHL defenses in scoring last season with 85 points but had only a goal and six assists in 11 playoff games before the Rangers lost to the Pittsburgh Penguins in five games.

Leetch fractured his foot in the final game of the regular season and underwent oral surgery before Game 1 against the Montreal Canadiens, leaving him disoriented on pailkillers. In Game 5 against the Canadiens, Leetch's season nearly ended when he crashed head-first into the boards, re aggravating a nerve injury in his left shoulder that still is only 85-percent healed.

"It's going to be weak," said Leetch, who injured the shoulder in the 1992-93 season. "It got back to 90 percent and I reinjured it again last year. It's definitely not as strong as before I hurt it."

He has been diligent with strengthening exercises and took no time off from workouts in the offseason. Leetch appears fit and trim and shows little signs of being slowed by the shoulder injury during the World Cup. His hip check of Pavel Bure in an exhibition game knocked the Russian Rocket out of the tournament with a kidney bruise.

Technique change works for Dolphins' kicker

The Sporting News

Most observers didn't give Dolphins kicker Joe Nedney much of a chance at unseating veteran Pete Stoyanovich, the fourth most accurate kicker in NFL history. But for Nedney, the competition went off without a hitch. Literally.

Thanks to a simple change in technique during the offseason, Nedney, who kicks with his left foot, put together a brilliant preseason and made Stoyanovich expendable. Jimmy Johnson traded Stoyanovich to Kansas City for a conditional fifth-round draft pick in 1997.

Credit Dolphins special teams coach Mike Westhoff with discovering a subtle problem in Nedney's approach.

"It's a minor thing, just like something in a golf swing," Westhoff says. "But he just went and practiced a million times until it felt right."

The result of Nedney's change, which produced a smoother approach to the ball, was the elimination of a chronic hook in his kicks.

"I have a natural hook on the ball and really worked hard to get rid of it," Nedney says. "It's really worked out well. The ball's traveling much straighter now."

Locke said the younger players definitely stepped up Tuesday, which is nothing less than what she expected.

"We have to rely upon them. We have to expect that they are going to play that way," she said. "Marlo having 26 kills and Lindsay having 19 kills is no surprise to me because I know what they're capable of. "Someone on the team was going to have to step up and handle things, and both of them did a very nice job."

Locke added that Moreland actually was upset with her own performance.

Fisher agreed she did nothing spectacular in the win over SEMO.

"I don't know if we think of it as stepping up," she said. "We're just out there doing our jobs."

Smith's condition remains questionable

Emmit Smith of the world champion Dallas Cowboys is questionable for Sunday's game against the New York Giants. Smith went face first into the ground on a fake hand-off play Monday night against the Bears and suffered a strained neck and left shoulder. Smith and team officials said they feel optimistic about his chances for playing. Backup running back Sherman Williams will assume the starting job if Smith is unable to go.

Lloyd has season-ending knee surgery

Greg Lloyd of the Pittsburgh Steelers underwent surgery for his season-ending knee injury suffered in the season opener against the Jacksonville Jaguars. The surgery to repair a torn tendon in his left knee is expected to cost him a year of rehabilitation.

NFL announces Players of the Week

The NFL has announced its Players of the Week following the kick-off weekend. In the NFC, Green Bay's Brett Favre, Minnesota linebacker Jeff Brady and Carolina kicker John Kasay earned the top honors. In the AFC, rookie running back Karim Abdul-Jabbar of the Miami Dolphins, rookie linebacker Ray Lewis of the Baltimore Ravens and San Diego kicker John Carney took the honors.

Taxpayers to foot bill for Bucs' Stadium

The Tampa Bay Buccaneers are in line for a new $200 million football stadium thanks to taxpayers in Florida's Hillsborough County. A majority of the voters, 53 percent, said they would pay an extra half percent in sales tax for the next 30 years in order to keep the team. Proponents say the tax hike also will help fund other civic projects, while opponents argue there is nothing wrong with the Buccaneers 30-year-old home, Tampa Stadium.

Swedes uneasy about 2004 games

The bomb that went off in Atlanta's Olympic Centennial Park and the heavy organizational burden during the summer Olympics are sending chills down the spines of future hosts. An International Olympic Committee is scheduled to visit Stockholm, Sweden this month to assess its bid. But Sweden, who hoped to host the 2004 Olympics, has seen a 52-percent jump in opposition to the games.

Salukis break losing streak

By L. Bruce Luckett
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The SIUC women's volleyball team bounced back, after opening the season with four straight losses, with a win over Southeast Missouri State University Tuesday night in Cape Girardeau.

The Salukis needed all five games to record their first win of the season.

After winning the first game 15-11, the Salukis dropped the second 13-15.

The Salukis came back to crush SEMO 15-3 in the third game, only to lose game four 13-15, which set up the do-or-die game five. The Salukis won game five 15-10 to end the match and its four-game losing streak.

"I wasn't sure of how our team was going to react (to facing SEMO after the opening losses), so it was good that we played really hard and we won," Coach Sonya Locke said. "We are just looking to continually improve."

After a short practice Monday dedicated to addressing the problem of committing too many unforced errors, Locke said the team definitely showed improvement from its four opening losses during Friday and Saturday's Washington State Cougar Challenge.

During the Cougar Challenge, SIUC fell to Gonzaga University, Idaho State University, the University of Tulsa and host Washington State University.

In Washington, SIUC averaged a mere .098 percent hitting as a team, compared to its .333 percent against SEMO.

"My intentions were to make sure that what we practiced we really concentrated on," Locke said. "I just went in knowing that we had a short practice and concentrated on specific things."

Monique Galvin, a sophomore middle blocker in journalism from Chicago, said Monday's practice was very helpful, although it was not solely responsible for Tuesday's win.

"The win we got was because we executed what we did in practice every day," said Galvin.

Marlo Moreland, an undecided sophomore from Lancaster, Texas and Lindsay Fisher, a sophomore from Rantoul, led the team by setting personal records in kills.

Locke said the team focused on blocking and passing.

Moreland, an outside hitter, had a

Gagliano has promising future

By Michael DeFord
DE Sports Editor

SIUC Football Coach Shawn Watson says Saluki punter Mark Gagliano's professional stock is on the rise.

Watson said Gagliano's past two seasons as SIUC's premier punter have already attracted the attention of professional scouts and will attract even more in the future.

"He is getting several looks now," Watson said. "He was going to get looks to begin with, but I think he's getting a lot more, and people are very serious about him."

Throughout his career at SIUC, Gagliano has been a consistent mainstay on SIUC's corps of special teams.

Gagliano, now a senior, first attracted the attention of professional scouts as a sophomore at SIUC in

"It was just a good day. The punt team did a great job Saturday. Our coverage and protection was just awesome."

Mark Gagliano,
Saluki punter

1994, when he averaged 41.4 yards per punt for fourth best in Division I-AA.

Last season the Collierville, Tenn., native averaged 40.1 yards per punt. He hasn't missed a beat this year either.

Gagliano set SIUC and Gateway Conference marks against Central Arkansas Saturday when five of his punts yielded 267 yards.

"His punting is outstanding," Watson said. "At any level in the country, he is one of the best in college football. He proved it Saturday."

Gagliano also handled SIUC's kick-off duties Saturday with equal success; four of his kickoffs landed inside
