MONEY'S WORTH

The grants of college students may be numerous—but the time heard most frequently is Southern's campaign. "What do we do for the faculty paid on registration days?"

The most worthwhile service, according to student opinion, is the community concert series which brings outstanding artists to the campus. Only a portion of the activity goes to support these concerts.

That students realize and appreciate the value of the concerts is evidenced by the large student attendance. Students are men and women, and they contribute a definite amount of money to the University's coffers. These funds are used for the benefit of the community concert set-up.

In addition, the Carboniferous Complex series has given S.U.N. the claim of "CULTURAL CENTER OF THE WORLD." The series has not only bolstered this distinctive claim. It is also an interest added to the student body by the University's activities.

POSTAL SUB-STATION NEEDED ON CAMPUS

With almost 1,000 persons in the Southern campus—inducing the training school—there are definite ways in which a university can serve the faculty and for money for the university and the student.

The Southern student finds himself on a campus a mile from a post office. The campus former was stampede. It is more such stamps in small quantities, which are delivered and picked up on the campus, and the tickets are done ten by two. If the letter is not mailed twice a day, one must make the trip to the post office, and then the work of the postal goes on and the irregular selling of one or three cents to the students, there are no postal facilities on or near the campus.

A campus post office would be convenient for mailing that important reglon for letters, cards, and so forth, for getting a good order of stamps, for second class mail, all which now necessitates the mail trip to the post office.

The college administration would find a campus post office just as facilitating for the individual at Southern would, if it was not for the post office that would cut off the shipping expenses of the University. At present, all outgoing packages are sent by express. The express rates begin at 30 cents and therefore the weight, and the weight will be such a load to be returned to a company or a machine part to be taken by express, express would charge.

At one time the postman did pick up postal post packages here, but because regular postage could not be exacted here, and also because the postman could not be expected to return, such postal service became a liability both to the postman and the store-room clerks.

Travelers, as proposed, would not only save time but save for money for the university and the individual on the campus. It is suggested that the post office be put on the campus to have the possibility of obtaining a campus post office.

The postal problem will become more acute when, after the war, the attendance is doubled, tripled.
