Bylaws 'unclear' for trustee election

By Mimi Jarzemsky
Staff Writer

Graduate Student Council President Gary Brown said Thursday he will call for a meeting with Student President Pete Alexander and the vice president for student affairs to discuss apparent discrepancies in the Student Trustees Election Bylaws. Both the GSC and the Undergraduate Student Organization considered modifications of the bylaws that govern the election of the student trustee at their regular meetings this week.

Finding sections of the USO student trustees bylaws "unclear," the GSC voted to refer the document to the Executive Council, while the USO voted to approve the change.

The proposed change touched off a dispute between the GSC and the USO over which group should oversee the student trustee election.

Alexander said, "Traditionally student government has run the election. This year we chose to include the Graduate Student Council."

Pat Melia, executive officer of the GSC, said sections of the bylaws titled, "Conduct of Campaign," were unclear. The bylaws Melia questioned were: —"Posters or other campaign material may not be placed in Morris Library or outdoors." Melia said the term "outdoors" is unclear because it is not specific enough.

—"Posters are to be placed only on University bulletin boards. Only one poster per bulletin board is to be allowed." Melia questioned if this included students living in off-campus dormitories.

—"No campaign activity shall begin until the Monday following the Sunday after the petition deadline." Melia said this was unclear.

A bylaw in Section 10, "Post Election Requirements for Student Trustees," stating, "The Student Trustee shall be a student at Southern Illinois University at Carbondale," was also found unclear by the council. Melia said the university considers anyone taking one hour as a student.

Section 10 also says that an undergraduate student trustee may be disqualified from holding office if he goes below a grade point average of 2.0. A graduate student trustee must maintain a 3.0 grade point average.

Richard Grunz, Board of Trustees legal counsel, said that Section 10 is invalid because state law has given the student the office and only the state can take it away. He said at this point there is no state law in regards to disqualifying a trustee from office.

"The trustee is entitled to the office for one year," Grunz said.

Chris Blankenship, vice president for USO said, "If the legal council says it (Section 10) is invalid we will delete it, of course, but at this time we have not been told such."

Legal group says inmates fear reprisal

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second article in a two-part series on inmate work strikes at the U.S. Penitentiary at Marion and what some inmate support groups say is the cause of those strikes.

By Dr. ar. Athans
Staff Writer

Demands that prison officials have collected by "random interviews" with the striking inmates at the U.S. Penitentiary at Marion are not the same ones that Prisoner Support groups have compiled.

One group, the Marion Prisoners Right Project, has formulated a list from its long association as inmate legal representative and says that the inmates are still afraid to speak up for fear of reprisal.

An MPRP legal assistant, Janet Mitchell, said prisoners have been punished for past strikes and they are already being punished in the latest work strike. Prison authorities confirm that 35 inmates have been punished for their involvement in the strike.

Past problems at the prison, which the MPRP says still exist, have been discussed during the litigation of a 1975 class action suit, Bono vs. Saxbe, in which inmates claimed the prison's segregation and control units were cruel methods of punishing prison dissidents.

In the Bono case, American Civil Liberties Union attorneys said the control unit housed inmates not only from Marion, but from other federal penitentiaries, state prisons, the Virgin Islands and South Africa.

A prison psychiatrist testified in the suit that half of the suicide attempts at the prison occurred in the control unit, though its population was only one-fourth of the total prison population.

The lawyers equated the boxcar cells with "living in your bathroom," and said some inmates had been in them for more than four years, 23 and a half hours a day.

Lee Tockman, an ACLU lawyer, said that prisoners are also put in the control units because they are "members of a certain class of people."

"They're Black Muslims, Marxists or some type of prison leaders," Tockman said.

The penitentiary had 72 six-foot by eight-foot "controunits" in 1973, nine of which were boxcar cells that have sliding metal doors that shut out all sight and sound. Foreman's court order, called for "modifications" of the closed-front cells so that inmates could open the outer door to let light and sound into the cell. But Mitchell said the prisoners can't reach the outer door from within the cell and that guards still control the boxcars. Kou Beai, a prison spokesman, responded only by saying that modifications had been made.

Mitchell said, "The cells are used for sensory deprivation. We offered to send in a psychologist to examine the prisoners in the control unit, but the prison denied the request. We are now in the process of filing a contempt charge against the prison for violating the court order."

Mitchell also said that the January hunger strike, which later became the work strike, was in protest of "strip cells" and that these are still in use. She said inmates were placed in the strip cells during the winter months with no clothes on and are forced to sleep on metal bunks with no food for several days. She said inmates told her about severe rat problems and beating and harassment by the guards.

She said that when inmates tried to keep rats out by covering the bars with sheets, they were "ticketed," (written discipline), by guards for breaking rules.

Beai said prison authorities had used strip cells in the January hunger and work strike only because prisoners were protesting by "tearing up the cells, breaking windows and pulling sinks off the wall." Beai added that, "Some personal items were taken from the inmates because they were burning anything they could set their hands on," including clothes. Beai said any reports of beatings at the prison are false.

"There are many different races and religions in the prison," Mitchell said, "so Black Muslims, American Indians and other minorities in the prison are continually harassed by guards. The guards are everywhere and control their every move." Marion has 400 inmates and more than 300 staff personnel.

"I think the place is one of the most racist prisons anywhere and the beatings are quite frequent," she said. Five beatings occurred in the three months before the January strike, she said, according to what inmates have told MPRP lawyers.

Senate votes to cut revenue sharing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Budget Committee voted Thursday to eliminate federal revenue sharing for states and cut the federal bureaucracy by 5 percent across the board as it neared completion of a balanced 1981 budget.

The votes continued the committee's pattern of making deep cuts in domestic programs to cover defense spending increases that exceed President Carter's $150.5 billion request by more than $5 billion.

Republicans and conservative Democrats repeatedly overturned the positions of the panel chairman, Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine.

In its proposed budget, the Senate panel voted to:

- Eliminate Saturday mail delivery, saving $400 million, a step also supported by the House committee.
- Proposed $250 million reduction in the postal subsidy would have avoided an end to Saturday mail.

- Phase out 200,000 CETA public service jobs, a cut of $600 million. Carter and the House committee favored reductions of about 50,000 jobs.
- Cut the food stamp program by $1 billion, much more than the House and Carter favored.
- End $500 million in Social Security benefits, such as burial payment and college student benefits.

Despite the higher defense outlays, the panel was almost certain to join Carter and the House Budget Committee in proposing a balanced budget for fiscal 1981, which starts Oct. 1.

If approved by the full House and Senate, it would be the first balanced federal budget in 12 years.

In drafting the Senate committee's guns-over-butter budget, a coalition of

Prison called 'pressure cooker'

MARION (AP) — An attorney for a prisoners advocacy group has termed the work stoppage at the Marion federal prison "a pressure cooker situation."

Jim Roberts of Carbondale, a spokesman for the Marion Prisoners Rights Project, said he interviewed inmates at the Southern Illinois prison Wednesday and was told the administration is attempting to apply pressure to individuals to end the work stoppage which began March 17.

Roberts said the strike is the longest non-violent work stoppage in prison history. He said the estimated 400 inmates at Marion refused to work because of grievances which they have listed and presented to the administration.

"The prison is tense, the administration has been singling out individuals and meeting and pressuring them to go back to work," Roberts said.

"I really feel some outside source has to intervene, either a Congressional investigation or an inquiry by the Justice Department," he added.

A U.S. Bureau of Prisons spokesman in Washington, Mike Aun, said Wednesday he has no comment on the allegations.

"We have to be confidential because we don't want to get into a situation where we're negotiating through the press," Aun said. "We have a peaceful situation there and we want to keep it that way."

Prison spokesman Ron Beal said the situation at the prison remains unchanged. He said staff members are making daily rounds to all units to talk with prisoners.

First student appointed to ISSC

By Jacqui Koszczuk Staff Writer

The appointment of a first-year law student from DePaul University as the first student voting member of the Illinois State Scholarship Commission could be a precedent for further extension of student voting power in higher education policy making, according to some hopeful student leaders.

Gov. James R. Thompson last month named Paul R. Eber, 23, to the nine-member body, marking the first time that a student maintains full voting privileges on an Illinois higher education governing board.

Legislation creating the unsalaried position was passed in September, after Eber himself authored the bill and helped push it through the General Assembly's higher education committees.

Eber, one of three nominees submitted by intercollegiate student organizations, said he gained "greater visibility among legislators" during the drive to pass the bill, but that he believes the selection "was based on the fact that I have a wider range of experience in dealing with higher education structures."

Eber, co-founder of the Illinois Student Association, was nominated by the ISA and by the Illinois Students of Independent Colleges and Universities, which represents students at private schools.

He said he views the appointment as a trial balloon which will have student governments in the state "paying close attention. If this works out, it could decide the future" of student voting power in other policy-making areas.

SIU-C student trustee Bob Saal agreed, saying Eber's success on the ISSC could lead to voting student members on the Board of Trustees and the Illinois Board of Higher Education.

Ricardo Caballero-Aquino, former Graduate Student Council president, said he also felt the appointment "builds expectations that we will eventually have student voting members on all the higher education boards."

Students on governing boards currently have only advisory votes.

Eber, a graduate of Illinois State University where he was student government vice president, said he feels he has "extra responsibility" over that of the other ISSC members because he must act as a liaison for students. "Letting them know what the ISSC is doing and also making sure the ISSC knows what students' financial needs are."

He said he does have some "specific plans" in mind for the ISSC, but he declined to give any details before completing the research for them.

Utilities, pay prompt rent hike

By Cindy Humphreys
Staff Writer

An increase in rates for on-campus housing next fall, already approved by the Board of Trustees, will be needed to offset next year's estimated $800,000 increase in total housing expenses, of which utilities, salaries and food rank highest, and will prevent a $1 million deficit, Director of Housing Sam Rinella said Wednesday.

Rinella said increases in utility bills, salaries and food prices make up the greatest portion of the new expenses.

Utilities have gone up $290,500 from 1980's budget, and salaries have gone up $165,200. The erratic nature of food prices, Rinella said, causes annual food cost differences to vary by as much as $100,000. Next year's food costs have increased by $132,700.

Food costs didn't always fluctuate so widely. "We used to be able to buy a three-year contract for milk," Rinella said. "Now we can only get three-month contracts."

"We've gone from a yearly to a monthly contract system for canned foods, and we buy our fresh meat on a weekly basis," Rinella said. "We try to buy in greater quantities when the market is good, but our menus are all planned out months in advance."

The only cut in next year's $12 million housing budget is in the area of building, equipment and grounds maintenance, Rinella said the $250,000 cut was made there because "that is one thing you can forestall or delay. We can reschedule a painting job, but we can't reschedule paying the electricity and food bills."

The cut comes in a year in which "more capital improvement projects are going on than in any of my previous 16 years in SIU Housing," Rinella said. "A lot of these projects are repair and replacement, but there is also a tremendous amount of large construction projects getting underway."

The proposals for many of these special projects are being started now, he said, but money won't be needed for the actual construction until 1982.

This year's budget included a $400,000 deficit that was remedied by the $100 increase in this fall's housing prepayments, which are the first month's rent in advance, and not deposits, Rinella said.

This year was also the debut of the $26.40 bond retirement fee, which is essentially a renaming of the money originally obtained from students through retained tuition, Rinella said.

Retained tuition, tuition money withheld from the Illinois treasury by the University, is being phased out as a method of subsidizing facilities such as housing and the Student Center by the Illinois Board of Higher Education over the next six years, he said.

The bond retirement fee goes towards paying off the principle and the interest on the bonds sold to finance the construction of the Student Center and some University Housing," Rinella said. Of the $26.40, $12 goes to the Student Center and $14.40 goes to University Housing.

Bruce Swinburne, vice president for student affairs, has labeled the fee "a backdoor tuition increase imposed by the BHE."

The fee jumps to $33 this fall and will continue to rise by $6.60 increments for three more years, Rinella said. At that time, he said, no tuition will be retained by the University to pay housing costs.

Rinella admitted that the bond retirement fee forces off-campus students to pay for housing they don't live in, but he compared the fee to the one for the Recreation Building.

"You may never go over to the Rec Center, but you still pay the fee," he said. "It's part of the cost of going to this University."

SIUC housing costs rank fourth in Illinois, following the University of Illinois, Northern Illinois University and Illinois State University, after having ranked second for several years, Rinella said.

"When SIUC quotes a housing price, though," he said, "it includes room and board, sheets and pillowcases, air-conditioning, telephone and the option of paying in monthly installments."

Iranians demand pledge clarification

By The Associated Press

Iran's Revolutionary Council on Thursday demanded clarification of U.S. pledges before asking militants to hand over the American hostages in Tehran. President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr was quoted as saying Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini would have the final decision on a transfer of the captives to government control.

Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh told reporters after a council meeting Thursday night that Iran wanted President Carter to clarify commitments of restraint made in response to conditions set by Bani-Sadr.

Bani-Sadr said in a speech Tuesday he would seek custody of the hostages if Carter promised to refrain from "propaganda" or "provocation." The Carter administration responded with a pledge of restraint.

However, Ghotbzadeh said, "We have to have some more information on the precise position of the United States concerning the statements which were made by Mr. Bani-Sadr."

Anderson ponders independent run

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Republican John B. Anderson says he will use a brief California vacation this weekend to "sit under a eucalyptus tree... and think" about becoming an independent candidate for president.

In an interview Thursday by the Philadelphia Inquirer, the Illinois congressman—who has yet to win a Republican primary—acknowledged that time is running out for him to organize an independent campaign for the presidency.

"I cannot continue Hamlet like in that position for long," Anderson said. "I have to resolve the conflict."

Anderson went further than ever in discussing the possibility of an independent candidacy.

Anderson said he had been busy with daily campaign demands to review his opinion seriously. But he said he would travel to California Friday.

In Washington, Anderson spokesman Don Graul said the three days in California were not set aside for Anderson to make any final decision on mounting a third-party campaign.

"He has set no timetable on this," Graul said. Anderson will resume campaigning in Los Angeles on Monday.

Hostages fuel Carter campaign machine

By Andrew Zinner
Staff Writer

The latest chapter in the Iranian Hostage Crises further indicates that the Carter administration's treatment of the touchy diplomatic situation is constantly being formulated within the context of re-election fever. Carter is milking the crisis for all its political worth, at the expense of 50 American hostages.

The latest incident of political selfishness involved the report Sunday that Iranian officials had received a conciliatory message from the President, one which included a call for an international commission to resolve issues between the two countries. The message also allegedly cited mistakes in previous U.S. policy toward Iran, which is one of the conditions made by the student militants which must be met in order to release the hostages.

The report was immediately denied. One unidentified U.S. official called the reported message "a fabrication." White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said: "The President sent no message to Khomeini."

The denial may be true. Perhaps no such messages were ever sent. But according to Erik Long, the Swiss ambassador in Teheran, a second U.S. message was delivered by him to Iran President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr Sunday. While not knowing the contents of the letter, Swiss authorities insisted that messages were sent between the two nations.

It doesn't matter if these particular messages were sent, and when, and what affair. The immediate nature of the denial was an obvious attempt to show political muscle-flexing. Carter wants to appear "tough" domestically, to show everyone he really is a "leader."

This type of "leadership" is one reason why 50 Americans are languishing in the Iranian capital. Though not the top story in the news every day, the hostages have spent five months in captivity.

As long as Carter and his diplomatic advisers maintain such a stubborn nationalistic attitude, those hostages won't move. If the denied messages were really never sent, similar ones should have been, and right away.

CHEER UP—MAYBE WE'LL GET HOME FOR THE NEXT CENSUS.

Compromise is one of the keys to successful diplomacy, and the United States certainly has not compromised enough in this affair.

It is true that the Iranian government isn't exactly the paragon of diplomatic negotiation, but it doesn't have to be. It holds all the aces, and has a long time ago that the game is not a bluff. We are the ones who must make the genuine concessions.

And such communication between the governments is another stop in the hostage-releasing direction. The importance of such diplomacy cannot be overlooked. Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said that if Carter acknowledged the purported message, it would help in "reducing tension and resolving differences between Iran and the United States."

But apparently Carter is more interested in maintaining a good domestic image throughout the primary campaign. His up-to-now immensely successful campaigning technique, which consists of wrapping himself inside the flag and hiding behind the hostage situation, has made such a message denial imperative.

Carter had painted himself into a corner with his hard-line stance. He perceives the electorate as approving of such a position, and primary results so far indicate this is so. But a key question must be asked, one which involves our entire presidential-selection process.

What is ultimately more humanly important to one man, the release of 50 captured Americans (or any other kind of captured people, for that matter) or the maintenance and propagation of personal prestige and power?

The actions of the administration thus far clearly provide the answer to that question. Conditions made by the student militants, such as a U.S. admittance of past interference in Iranian affairs and a guarantee not to engage in such interference in the future must be met if the hostages are to be released.

No one in this country can deny past interference in Iranian affairs. Any look at recent history will reveal plenty of dubious American escapades in the ancient land. Not only will such an admittance help the hostages, but it would also strengthen our image internationally, which has taken a severe nosedive in recent years.

Stubborn nationalism and pride-promoting, chest-pounding rhetoric currently emanating from our highest office may enable Carter to win the democratic nomination and even the general election, but it will do nothing to help release the hostages. Thus far, political image has outweighed the value of 50 human lives.

Gacy's death revenge, not justice

The infamous John Wayne Gacy's recent conviction and death sentence will undoubtedly appease the fears and temporarily dissipate the revengeful anger within the echelons of our "law-abiding citizens." However, his execution will only have such an effect on individuals who are so myopic as to see no further than their own noses.

The rest of us—the average, reasonable men and women of this country—know that the trial does not end here, for the common social strife from which Gacy's behavior was developed has all but vanished. The longer we propagate the myth that revenge is helpful rather than devastating to society (through capital punishment or through any other means), the longer we will stand trial under the heavy sanction of revenge, for whatever trespasses we may commit.

So be it, then, that our "law-abiding citizens" have collectively engaged in premeditated murder in revenge against Gacy, failing drastically to differentiate between him and themselves, as Defense Attorney Sam Amirante pointed out.

Although it is obvious that Gacy also killed in revenge, just as the state will do, this fact can be forgotten as easily as a non sequitur, along with the fact that he learned to seek revenge in this society of revenge-seekers. Society taught him—along with a host of others such as Charles Manson and Richard Speck—that revenge is a high-priority alternative in dealing with one's anger, and that it may be dealt with on dark streets as well as on the silver platter of the electric chair.

So be it, also, that our "law-abiding citizens" have attempted, once again, to obscure the real question at hand: How long can this country's political machine continue to play "vicious cycle" with us by investing funds in hypocritical, death-penalty prosecution and debilitation, rather than in social welfare and rehabilitation? — John Gordon, Senior, Linguistics (The letter was signed by four other persons.)

Gus owes artists an apology

Gus owes an apology not only to the winners of the Reichardt Trust award, but to all of the artists who spent considerable time and energy preparing for this show.

In reference to the DE coverage of the Reichardt award winners Gus said, "$4,400 will buy a lot of six-packs of inspiration." C'mon Gus, it's as though we don't get enough insulting advertising suggesting all we do is party and drink beers by the keg. But now Gus is right in there throwing the same insinuating remarks in a year attempt to be witty, cute and clever, of which he strikes out on all three.

Perhaps I am being defensive in suggesting the same thing would not have been said had it been an award for an outstanding journalism student, but consider this with some empathy.

All I know is what I've seen, and that is my friends and fellow are students expending countless hours, energies and money towards perfecting and sophisticating their styles. These people deserve praise, not offending remarks for their dedication and work.

To be sure, the winners, as well as the less fortunate, will celebrate now that the show is over—but $4,400 worth of six-packs? You said it Gus and I'm offended. Ever price a kln? Metal is real expensive, so is paint and canvas. Then there's tuition and rent and this all adds up—$4,400 is merely a start.—Mary Krainak, Senior, Art

Remember music department

I am appalled at the fact that you seem to have forgotten a music department exists. The Southern Singers, University Choir, Male Glee Club and University Chorus, under the excellent direction of Robert Kingsbury, get absolutely no coverage at all in the DE.

The choir put on many concerts throughout the year, with no mention of them made in even the Campus Briefs or Activities columns. The Marjorie Lawrence Opera Theatre's recent production of "The Merry Widow" was barely covered, and the reviewer omitted the two women who played the leading roles.

It seems that if it is not rock or New Wave, it doesn't merit mentioning in the DE.

It amazes me that for a school with such a reputable Communications Department, the DE continues with this uneven and incomplete coverage. The DE has the potential to be one of the finest campus newspapers in the nation, and yet, it doesn't have the respect of the students. Dawn Cowap, Freshman, Journalism

Group lists ideas for Halloween '80

By Charity Gould Staff Writer

Despite a no-show by SIU-C students, Jim Karas, student representative to the Carbondale City Council was hopeful about the outcome of a meeting held Wednesday to discuss plans for the 1980 Halloween celebration and to discuss the city's attitude toward partying on South Illinois Avenue.

Though only a few students chose to attend the meeting, Karas said the session produced a lot of "good ideas" on the fate of the city's annual Halloween celebration. Karas called the meeting after the Carbondale City Council requested his recommendations for organizing the event.

Ten people, including two representatives of the SIU-C administration and four student senators, compiled a list of proposals that they hope will make the Halloween party safer.

City council members have indicated they would not support another Halloween party like Carnival '79 that left South Illinois Avenue covered with litter. The council has asked the Liquor Advisory Board, a citizens' committee, and Karas for recommendations on Halloween festivities by May 12. The city also established a special board to make suggestions.

Banning the sale of glass containers, finding an alternative location and urging all of the 300 recognized student organizations to participate were suggestions agreed upon by those at the meeting.

Tom Busch, assistant to the vice president for student affairs, said that the alternative location should be within walking distance of campus to cut down the number of people "driving while drinking."

Greg Saddler, student representative to the Carbondale Liquor Advisory Board, said he sympathized with the city.

The city is concerned with protecting property and public safety, Saddler said.

"The city seems to feel that Halloween just happens. They feel it's a problem that just keeps getting bigger and bigger," he said.

SIU-C plans All Class Day to honor King

By Charity Gould Staff Writer

Monday has been declared "King All Class Day" by acting President Hiram Lesar in honor of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., the civil rights leader slain in 1968.

To commemorate King's philosophy and humanitarian efforts for which he received the Nobel Peace Prize, students are encouraged to go to all of their classes on Monday, stated a bill passed by the Undergraduate Student Organization in February. The Graduate Student Council and Black Affairs Council also endorsed the idea.

"The concept that all students should make a special effort to attend class in honor of Dr. King's memory seems very fitting because King promoted the ideal that people should better themselves, so they could better society," said Gary Brown, GSC president.

The day was originally scheduled for April 4, which would be 12 years since King's assassination in Memphis.

Computer to aid library research

By Ryle Ganther
Student Writer

New technological ad-ances that will be implemented in the next 10 years at Morris Library will make researching easier for users, said E. Dale Cluff, the new director of Morris Library Services.

An "on-line" catalog and a resource network are examples of these services of the future Morris Library, according to Cluff.

Cluff assumed the director post in January after serving as an assistant director of libraries at the University of Utah in Salt Lake City.

The central card catalog will eventually be eliminated by a computer cataloging system, according to Cluff.

A user of Morris Library under the on-line catalog system will see a message on a video screen asking the person what section of the catalog he wishes to see. The sections would be titles of books, names of authors or subject areas. The user would then signify to the computer what section of the catalog he is using.

The user would then punch in the name of the author, title of a book or subject area that is needed. The computer gives the requested information on the screen for the user to copy down, according to Cluff.

This system will be more rapid than "humping through cards in a card catalog to find resources for research, Cluff said.

Instead of librarians filing cards in a card catalog, the on-line system will automatically arrange new resources, he said.

Networking will provide libraries all over the country with the ability to share resources.

The same computer used for the on-line cataloging will be used for the network. The computer will call up on the video screen upon request resources from other campuses in the country.

The network system will expand the present interlibrary loan services as well as cut operating costs, Cluff said.

Bald Knob

By Jenell Olson
Staff Writer

Forty four years ago 250 people embarked on a darkened wilderness road which meandered as it constantly rose to the summit of Bald Knob. This Sunday about 2,000 people are expected to follow their steps for the Easter sunrise service, which has become one of Southern Illinois' most widely known traditions.

People come from all over the country for the Easter celebration," said the Rev. William Larely, one of the originators of the idea to conduct services on the mountain. "The other day a couple from California arrived to camp on the mountain. A few years ago a family came from New York to spend five days there."

In 1936, Larely and Wayman Presley, a former mail carrier in Makanda, decided that there needed to be a place where people of all denominations could meet occasionally for worship. They agreed that Bald Knob would be an ideal site for such a meeting.

Easter: A look at the customs and symbols

By Carrie Sweeney
Staff Writer

Spring: A season when life emerges from even the most barren of places and warms. Weather and fresh air combine to raise almost everyone's spirits. Spring also ushers in Easter, a holiday associated with symbols of life.

In most countries, Easter comes in early spring when green grass and sunshine begin to replace the snow and cold of winter, and is observed on a Sunday between March 22 and April 25. Although the origin of the word Easter is not clear, it is thought to have been derived from the name of Eostre, a Teutonic goddess of spring, or from the Teutonic spring festival called Eostur.

Easter, the principle event in the liturgical year, did not evolve as a holiday without major controversy over when it was to be celebrated. The dispute arose in the second century when one group of Christians wanted to keep the festival on Sunday, regardless of the date. Others, in Asia, wanted to follow the Jewish custom of holding the holiday on the 14th day of the first lunar month after spring equinox, whatever the day might be.

These quartodecimans refused to be persuaded by Pope Anicetus, (c. 158), to conform to the practice of Rome and the West. In 190 Victor ascended to the papal chair and threatened to excommunicate the Asians unless they abandoned their custom.

Deeming it intolerable that the churches of Asia Minor should differ from the mother churches of Rome, Constantine urged that the festival always be held on a Sunday, independent of a particular phase of the moon or of Jewish precedents. The deciding task was given to the Alexandrians by the Council of Niceaea, (325), because they were skilled in astronomical calculations.

Ultimately, the date of Easter was determined on the basis of a system of cycles of 19 years, each containing 6,940 days, with one day dropped every fourth cycle. Slightly modified in 325, this calendar form has been universally accepted in Western and Eastern Christendom.

The name Easter, in some languages, comes from the Hebrew term Pesach. The Italians call Easter Pasqua, the Spaniards, Pascua and the French, Paques. No matter what the holiday is called, the ancient customs and symbols still exist in modern celebrations.

The most recognized of all Easter symbols is the cross, which represents the crucifixion of Jesus Christ. In many parts of the world, especially Great Britain, people eat special cakes called hot cross buns during the holiday season. Each cake has on it a cross made of icing.

Cottontail egged on to tell past; bunny trail history a long one

By Charity Gould
Staff Writer

"I'm just hoppin' down the bunny trail, leaving eggs for those rowdy Southern Illinois University-Carbondale students."

Peter Cottontail was humming this tune to the beat of the Beach Boys favorite, "Little Deuce Coupe," when I spied him in the underbrush by Thompson Woods.

"I've never been interviewed before," he said, sitting his small, furry rear on top of his basket of brightly-decorated Easter eggs. "This ought to be a blast."

Enthusiastic victims, that's what I like. "How did you get stuck with the job of delivering eggs to 20,000 students?"

Sitting back on his hind feet, nose in the air, he began his tale like this:

"Legend has it that the Easter bunny idea came from Germany. There was a poor German woman who dyed some eggs for her children during a famine. She hid them in a nest and just as the children discovered them, a big rabbit leaped away. Well, the story spread far and wide of how that rabbit brought Easter eggs to those children."

Cottontail also said that the rabbit has been a symbol of birth and new life for many thousands of years.

"Why hide eggs?"

Munching on a carrot he happened to have stuck in his back pocket, Cottontail said that eggs were forbidden during the Lenten fast but could be eaten again at Easter. Thus, the decorated eggs symbolized the end of the penitential season and the beginning of a joyful celebration.

"Well, that's the story. It's been nice talking to you, but I've got work to do," Cottontail said, glancing down at the half-empty basket of eggs.

"Hoppin' down the bunny trail..."

Easter customs vary worldwide

Easter decorations and paintings often include a figure of a lamb as a symbol of Jesus. Lamb is also one of the traditional Easter foods. This symbolism stems from the Jewish Pesach holiday, or Passover. In Biblical times Jews sacrificed a lamb, called a paschal lamb, during their traditional Passover ceremony.

In some lands, lights, candles and bonfires mark the observance of Easter. Roman Catholics, in some countries, put out all the lights in their churches on Good Friday. Then, on Easter Eve, the main Easter candle (paschal candle), which dates back to the fourth century, is relit and used to light all the other candles in the church, including one for each individual. The individual candles are taken home to be used for special occasions.

Eggs, another common symbol, represent the new life that returns to nature about Easter time. The tradition of exchanging eggs began when ancient Egyptians and Persians dyed eggs in spring colors and gave them to their friends as gifts. The Persian custom, however, came from the belief that the earth had hatched from a giant egg.

Early Christians of Mesopotamia were the first to use colored eggs for Easter. In some European countries, people colored eggs red to represent the joy of the resurrection and in England, friends often wrote messages and dates on the eggs they exchanged.

Elaborate candy eggs, with a window in one end and tiny scenes inside, were popular gifts in the 1800s and today.

children find chocolate or plastic eggs filled with candy in decorated baskets on Easter morning.

In Great Britain and France, mothers once told their children that the Easter chimera brought their eggs. In France and some other European countries, church bells do not ring from Good Friday to Easter. According to one legend, the bells fly to Rome until Easter and drop eggs on the way back for boys and girls to find.

The Germans color eggs green and carry them on Maunday Thursday (the day before Good Friday) for good luck. German children believe that the Easter rabbit hides the eggs they find in their gardens and on the Monday after Easter, the children have egg-rolling contests called Eierlesen.

Other objects customarily associated with Easter are the rabbit, symbolizing birth and new life, and the lily, symbolizing purity.

In the United States, Mardi Gras is staged in New Orleans from about January 6 to the day before the beginning of Lent, a 40-day period which Christians traditionally observe by fasting and praying. People flock to Mardi Gras to enjoy the costume balls, parades and celebrations.

On Easter Sunday, many Americans attend outdoor sunrise services at such places as Theater of the Red Rocks, near Denver, Colorado; Hollywood Bowl, Hollywood, California; and the Hawaiian Punchbowl, near Honolulu.

The Easter holiday, as it has evolved through the centuries, has come to have many meanings, and is celebrated in different ways all around the world. And although the Easter holiday originated from a variety of customs and symbols, in most Christian religions the resurrection of Christ still remains as the traditional significance of the celebration.

Bald Knob a 44-year tradition

The mountain is said to be one of the most scenic spots in the Midwest. Located in the Shawnee National Forest near Alto Pass, it rises 800 feet above the valley below and overlooks Kentucky, Missouri and the Mississippi river.

When the first sunrise service was held on the mountain, there was nothing there but what nature had planted. Today an 111-foot cross made of marble at the base and heavy reinforced white porcelain steel panels above adds to the area's beauty. How and why the cross was put there is a story in itself.

"When we decided to hold the services, there was nothing said about putting a cross on the mountain top," Lirely said. "In 1938, when we were making plans for the second service, the CCC (Civilian Conservation Corp) boys asked me if they could have a wooden cross from a forest tree. It was the first cross on Bald Knob."

That cross stood on the mountain until a lighted one replaced it in 1939. Made of wood, the new cross was lit by a string of light bulbs powered by the generator of a farm tractor. "In 1945, my Sunday school class carved three wooden crosses from white oak trees," Lirely said. "They are still standing today."

Plans for the 111-foot cross that is presently standing were made in 1944. Three years were spent securing funds to form the Bald Knob Christian Foundation and purchase the site.

During the several years the group spent campaigning for contributions to pay for the cross, a 40-foot neon one was placed on the Forest Service fire tower.

"Today everything is working very nicely, except we have problems with vandalism," Lirely said. "Ten large flood lights, each costing $250, have been broken, and we can't afford to replace them. We once put chains between two brick pillars to keep people from destroying the cross, but vandals drove through the chains and knocked one of the pillars over onto the road. They then cut the chain with bolt cutters and took it with them." In addition, vandals kicked in the doors of the concession stand and broke all of the glass windows. Lirely added, "We just can't keep up with them." Even though the lights haven't been replaced in preparation for the sunrise service to be held at 5:30 a.m. Sunday, the concession stand has been repaired and the trash on the grounds has been cleared away.

It's Easter—where's the church?

By Craig DeVriese
Staff Writer

It has been in the planning stages for weeks. Three days of shopping to find that pretty spring frock for little Suzi. And Tommy looks like such a little man in his new navy-blue blazer, white pants and polished black shoes.

Mother, of course, looks bright and cheery in her new spring dress, and Father has finally consented to wear the flashy green tie the kids bought him for Christmas.

Easter morning. The Instamatic is loaded. The kids are all smiles. The Easter Bunny ate half the carrot they left for him the night before. A quick romp through the back yard and the kids find most of the eggs. Father diligently hid last evening.

A bite of breakfast, dress up in the new attire and it's off to church.

But Father gets lost. "Father," says Mother in a scolding tone, "Why don't you remember where it is? It has only been a year."

Like clockwork each year, Americans crowd into churches on Easter Sunday. Something is mathematically wrong here. On a normal Sunday, these churches accommodate crowds much smaller than this. Many people choose, for whatever reason, to attend church once each year. On Easter Sunday.

"Twice," corrects Father Jim Genisio, pastor of Saint Francis Xavier Catholic Church in Carbondale. "There's Christmas, too."

But Genisio and other religious leaders around Carbondale are neither bitter nor discouraged by this twice-a-year occurrence. Some are philosophical and take it in stride. And others say they are pleased, hopeful and glad to welcome the "two-timers."

Ray Porter, senior pastor of First United Methodist Church in Carbondale, said, "We're glad to have them anytime. I don't try to be judgmental. I just accept it and we are glad to have them."

Porter conjectured that some come out of holiday custom, others come to celebrate the coming of spring and still others come out of a sense of religious obligation.

"As many people as there are, there are probably that many reasons," he said.

The Reverend Steve Luebbert of the Newman Center is hopeful that by coming to church on Easter, these people may get a further sense of commitment.

"The eternal optimist in me says that as long as they're coming that one time, they may come more often," he said.

How does Duane Lancheater, pastor of First Presbyterian Church in Carbondale, view two-timers?

"With amusement, usually," he answers. "It's nice to see some people. I suppose initially I was disturbed by the fact that Easter has become a cultural event, but I've probably mellowed through the years and now I look at it with amusement."

One reverend doesn't take what he calls "Easter Christians" quite that lightly.

"Well, I'm not very happy about it," said Ray Rist, pastor of Our Savior Lutheran Church in Carbondale. "I'd like to see our church as full on the Sunday after Easter as it is on Easter. But," he adds, "we welcome them on Easter."

Father gets his bearings and eventually Family scurries into church. They settle into the crowded building and listen to the sermon. Five minutes later Suzi tugs at Mother's sleeve, her face and frock covered with chocolate from the candy rabbit. Mother told her not to bring along.

"Mom," Suzi says, "I have to go to the bathroom."

"I will buy or trade for scrap gold and silver."

Jewish Passover marks exodus

By Robin Saponar
Staff Writer

While many residents prepare to observe Easter, Jewish residents are already observing Passover.

Rabbi James L. Sagarin said that Passover "is a festival of religious freedom that marks the exodus of the Hebrews from Egypt."

The holiday began last Monday night at sundown and will last for an eight-day period. "Usually a Passover meal or seder is held on the first two nights," he said.

Seder, which is the Hebrew word for order, is an appropriate name for the meal because the foods are eaten in a special order. He said the seder is a re-enactment of the exodus. "Each person participating in the service should feel as if they were leaving Egypt," he said.

During the seder the participants drink four cups of wine while in a leaning position. Sagarin said the wine is "a symbol of bounty and fullness of life," and the leaning originates from a Greek and Roman idea that "when one is leaning, one is relaxed as if royalty. Jews are supposed to be as kings—to enjoy Passover as free people."

One of the foods eaten during Passover is matzah, an unleavened bread. This is eaten because "when the Hebrews left Egypt in haste, the bread didn't have time to rise," he said.

Other foods eaten during the seder are salt water, an egg, parsley and horseradish or bitter herbs. The salt water represents the tears shed by the Hebrew slaves and the egg represents the renewal of spring or life. Because it has no beginning or end the egg represents the cycle of life, Sagarin said.

Parsley represents springtime or change and the bitter herbs represent the slavery in Egypt.

Kihn hot, but can't sell public

By Bill Crowe
Entertainment Editor
Graham Parker and the Rumour may claim to be the "best kept secret in the west," but the Greg Kihn Band may give them a run for their money.

The band has collected rave reviews from music critics around the country and its concerts are some of the most electrifying around, but commercial record sales have always been elusive. Its strange how some of the best bands around today are also the most neglected.

"Glass House Rock," the band's fifth album, continues the Kihn tradition of leading albums with solid, passionate rock and a minimum of "filler" material. Kihn's emotional singing and songwriting again blends well with the band's ability to deftly alternate between fast and slow material.

The first side features a smooth blend of hard, driving rockers and more tender, pop-oriented tunes with the lighter material sounding excellent.

"Small Change," the best cut on the album and the one which closes side one, sounds equally passionate as it does fragile. Kihn's emotionally-strained vocal on such lines as "It hurts me when you lie, It makes me wonder why, I'm standing on the backstreet of a lost goodbye" makes the listener feel he is actually close to tears.

Backed by some fittingly emotional guitar fills, the song comes off as being defiantly proud rather than self-centered or self-pitying.

"Anna Belle Lee," a cut almost equal to the emotional intensity of "Small Change," features a pleasant backup harmony and an appealing sound reminiscent of music's simpler days in the 1960s. Again Kihn's lyrics tell a fragile story with lyrical simplicity. Kihn's writing is passionate without becoming soap-sudsy. For example: "I guess I'll never know your secrets, Although I hardly even tried, To get past your defense, Each time I was denied."

The band's onstage energy is captured nicely on a live cover of Graham Gouldman's "For Your Love," which was a big hit for the Yardbirds in the '60s. With drummer Larry Lynch and bassist Steve Wright taking over the lead vocal backed by some screeching, lead guitar fills by Kihn, the cut supplies a close approximation of the band's live sound.

There's also a novelty tune on "Glass House Rock"—a rocked-up version of Burt Bacharach and Hal David's "The Man Who Shot Liberty Valance" from the John Wayne movie of the same name. Lynch handles the lead vocal excellently, alternating between a stoic Frankie Laine-ish sound and a harder, more rock-oriented one.

The Greg Kihn Band is destined to be remembered as continually good but never great. Kihn is often compared to Bruce Springsteen (he has recorded at least two of Bruce's songs), but that comparison is more fantasy than reality. His singing and songwriting talents are immense, but he lacks the jagged edges which makes The Boss' music immortal.

Nevertheless, "Glass House Rock" is an emotional blend of pop and rock which again proves that this band is highly underrated and enormously neglected by the record buying public.

Trackmen to face Big Ten schools in weekend meet

Sprinter Marvin Hinton, who last week won the long jump and 200 meters against Lincoln, has been practicing with the Saluki football team this week, but will run at Indiana.

"He's the kind of kid that can play two sports," Hartzog said of the freshman from Memphis. "He's been hitting in football, so he may be a little sore."

Marion native Mike DeMattei, who won the pole vault last week with a season's best height of 16-2, suffered a finger injury this week in practice when the pole he was using broke. Assistant Coach Jar. Johnson said he expects DeMattei to compete Saturday.

Hartzog said senior sprinter Clarence Robison and junior standout David Lee both have been running well. Lee, already a qualifier for the NCAA championship in the intermediate hurdles, won both hurdles last week, setting a new McAndrew Stadium record in the process.

Robison, a former football tailback under SIU Coach Rey Dempsey, won the 100 meters last week. He is a member of the relay team which will be looking for revenge against Wisconsin. The Badgers defeated the Salukis' relay team in the indoor season.

Next week, the Salukis travel to Champaign for a dual meet against arch-rival Illinois.

point out situations in a game that officials might encounter and must be aware of."

Paratore said the coordinator will be responsible for the development of an "officials club," which she said can provide officials with a chance to meet on a regular basis, rather than just for training sessions.

Paratore said all officials will be evaluated on a regular basis during the particular sport which the official is officiating.

"The official will be evaluated by the coordinator, who will get his information from graduate students supervising games for him," she said. "The coordinator will decide whether or not to keep the official on the basis of this evaluation."

Lady thinclads seeking third win over Illinois

By Ed Dougherty
Staff Writer

Coming off what women's track Coach Claudia Blackman has called one of the best meets the women's track team ever has had, the Lady Salukis will be looking for a third straight upset over the University of Illinois in a triangular meet at Indiana this weekend in Bloomington, Ind., and revenge over Southeast Missouri State Tuesday in SIU's home opener.

SIU finished sixth at Memphis State's Lady Tiger Invitational last weekend, its best finish ever at that meet. Pleased that several members of her squad accomplished personal bests, Blackman said her team could win at Indiana if the team's improvement continues.

"I won't put winning the meet out of the question," Blackman said. "We always seem to rise to the occasion when we meet Illinois."

"I take particular pride in beating the University of Illinois," Blackman added. "We haven't lost to them since we've been meeting them on a regular basis."

"Two years ago we upset them in a dual meet, and last year we beat them and Indiana in a triangular," she said.

Blackman said her team will have to be performing at its best, but not over its head, to beat Illinois. According to Blackman, the Indiana coach doesn't see SIU winning any events. But Blackman doesn't agree with his prediction.

Lindy Nelson should win the 5,000-meter run, Blackman said, and Karen Laporte should win the 400-meter hurdles. Blackman said Cathy Chiarello should win the 1,500-meter run and possibly set a school record if the weather holds.

Blackman also said Cindy Clausen has an outside chance of winning the 400-meter dash. "She ran very well last week and has been working very hard," Blackman said.

Blackman said she is hoping her squad can make a clean sweep of its next two meets by defeating SEMO in the Lady Salukis' track home opener.

"I hope we can do better than the tie we had last year," Blackman said. "They got up for us more than we got up for them. It's really an emotional thing between us to see who is the best."

SEMO doesn't have as much depth as the Salukis, Blackman said, and that should allow SIU to dominate the meet. The coach said she expects SEMO to stay close to SIU in the sprints, but the Salukis should run away with the middle-distance and distance races.

Blackman said the results of the field events should be similar to those of the distance races, except for the shot put.

Doubles team wins racquetball title

Two members of the SIU racquetball club earned national honors last weekend by winning the women's doubles championship in the second annual National Intercollegiate Racquetball Championships.

Ann Mirrieles and Kim Prader defeated a doubles team from Memphis State, 13-21, 21-16, 11-7, to take first place and a accompanying $1,000 scholarship.

En route to the victory, Mirrieles and Prader had to defeat teams from Lake Forest College and the University of Illinois.

Michelle Busacca of UCLA defeated Barb Faulkenbury of Air Force to take the singles title.

The women's portion of the Saluki club finished in third place in the team standings. Memphis State took first and Illinois second.

Also, Memphis State took first place for the second year in a row in the men's half of the competition. Illinois took second and Michigan third. SIU finished sixth.

Kevin Dunlop of Houston defeated Michigan's Larry Fox for the singles championship.

SIU players Ken Hughes and Mike Coffey were the only Salukis to advance past the first round.

The SIU club now is preparing for the United States Racquetball Association regional championships.

Strike doesn't stop players' training

By The Associated Press

It's back to Square One for most of the striking members of the Major League Baseball Players' Association—taking batting and fielding practice and possibly playing some intrasquad games just like the pre-exhibition days of spring training.

And it's on to Round Two for negotiators Marvin Miller, executive director of the Players' Association, and Ray Grebey, chief bargainer for the club owners, who were scheduled to hold their second session with federal mediator Kenneth E. Moffett Thursday in New York.

Having decided to cancel the last week of exhibition games but open the season as scheduled next Wednesday and give the two sides until the Memorial Day weekend to reach a settlement, the players branched out from coast to coast, with those not involved in official or informal workouts promising to stay in shape on their own.

Only two teams—the Montreal Expos and San Diego Padres—did not hold some sort of practice Wednesday. The Expos refused to work out under their coaches' supervision, while the Padres voted to return to San Diego.

Some players were combining workouts with a chance for a rare April vacation.

After taking batting practice and doing his running, Boston star Carl Yastrzemski said he would work out Thursday and Friday and then spend Easter weekend at his Florida home.

"I'll be back Monday and be ready to accompany the team to Milwaukee for the season opener," he said.

For others, like Jack Brohamer of the Red Sox, a week without exhibition won't make much difference.

"I'm going to sit on the bench, as usual," quipped the reserve infielder. "That's how I stay in shape during the season."

With millions of dollars at stake in the ongoing negotiations, some petty differences crept into the picture, with the owners refusing to pay room and board—a contract requires a player to participate in exhibition games—which brought gripes from some players, who will have to shell out several hundred dollars to stay in camp.

"Because we're going to work out, I think we should be reimbursed, but we won't be," said Baltimore's Mark Belanger.

And Minnesota's Mike Marshall, the Twins' player representative, said he would return home "if my expenses aren't paid."

Big Ten champ Indiana is track team's next foe

By Rod Smith
Staff Writer

"Indiana wants me, Lord I can't go back there."

Whoever wrote that song certainly wasn't talking about Hartzog, Lee and Company, the Saluki track team. Although Indiana just won the Big Ten Indoor championship with its finest team in years, Coach Lew Hartzog is looking forward to Saturday's meet in Bloomington, a double-dual with the Hoosiers and Wisconsin.

"We're not awed a bit by the Big Ten," Hartzog said. "In the last 20 years, we've beaten all of them badly and twice we have outscored their entire conference in the NAAs. I think the track tradition at SIU is much better than that of the Big Ten."

Hartzog said the double-dual scoring of the meet will make it tougher for the Salukis to win.

"We probably would beat Wisconsin, but the points will be more spread out," Hartzog said. "We graduated 12 seniors and are running with an 80 percent freshman team, so we can't be favored. We're just looking forward to the tough competition."

Indiana has an outstanding team, according to Hartzog. Fifteen Hoosiers qualified for the NCAA indoor championships, and they won the Big Ten championship by 10 points over Michigan State.

Does Hartzog see this meet as another tuneup for the Missouri Valley championship meet in May?

"Heck no. This is a blood and guts meet," Hartzog said. "There is going to be some awfully tough competition. We're just looking for some good marks out of our young bunch. By next year, these guys will grow up, we'll be back on top again."

The coach said he is anxious to see freshman Tom Ross run the steeplechase for only the second time.

"I'm curious to see him run," Hartzog said. "His 9:18 at Louisiana isn't a bad time for his first race. He possibly could break the school record of 8:59 this year."

Softball team motto: 'Let's play three'

By Dave Kane
Staff Writer

When the SIU women's softball team arrives at Southwest Missouri State University Friday for the Southwest Missouri Invitational, they'll be saying, "Let's play three," and that's no Ernie Banks imitation.

The Lady Salukis will play three games Friday in the 16-team tournament, and for their first game of the year, they couldn't have asked for a more worthy opponent. Texas Women's University, the defending national champs, will take on SIU at 9 a.m.

SIU then will play Nebraska at 10:30 a.m. and battle Kansas State Friday at 8 p.m. Texas Women's, SIU, Nebraska and KSU form one of four pools. The top two teams from each pool will be determined from Friday's play and will advance to single-elimination championship play Saturday.

The hectic one-day slate will offer a startling contrast to the progress of SIU's season so far, as the team has had three scheduled double-headers rained out over the past two weeks and has yet to play a game.

Coach Kay Brechtelsbauer already has stressed the need for game situations to answer questions. "The girls are extremely anxious to play," Brechtelsbauer said. "We've had a few more scrimmages and practices despite all the rain, and we've learned a little more. But in terms of game situations, we just don't know."

"In practice, I try to set up certain situations to see what the players will do, but in a game, everything's strictly spontaneous," she added. "They're not going to know what's going to happen in a game, so that's the only way we'll know who'll come through."

For a team that hasn't played a game and is uncertain of a solid lineup, SIU appears to have its hands full against Texas Women's University. Although the status of the defending national champion is impressive, Brechtelsbauer isn't in awe of TWU because of the lack of a key ingredient.

"I really don't know about them because they don't have the pitcher who carried them last year," Brechtelsbauer said. "I think her name is Kathy Aronson. She transferred after last season. It's hard to tell about a team even if you know it has super hitters if you're not knowing about its pitching."

Although Brechtelsbauer won't tab a tournament favorite, she feels the meet has a good representation of teams. The field includes Texas-Arlington, Louisiana State, Illinois State, Oklahoma State, Oklahoma, Minnesota and host Southwest Missouri.

"Southwest Missouri is always tough," Brechtelsbauer said, "and although I don't know what Minnesota has, they're always known for their good hitters. Illinois State came away with a 3-1 record from the Oklahoma tournament."

SIU played in the tournament two years ago, but with the multitude of new faces on its roster, it will be the first college tournament for many of the players. A look at the infield is a prime example.

Freshman Tracy Miller will be at first, junior college transfer Pat Siang will be at second, while freshmen Val Upchurch and pitcher-infielder Donna Dapson will share duties at third.

And just as sophomore pitcher Vicki Stafko was recovering from a strained pitching arm, another injury, put a hole at shortstop.

"Beth Stevenson (another freshman) had to have emergency surgery after practice Wednesday when she dislocated the index finger on her throwing hand," Brechtelsbauer said. "We're still not sure of the extent of the injury, but Beth definitely would've started."

So Vicky Beasley, another juco transfer from Danville, will take over at short. Brechtelsbauer listed Beasley's strong throwing arm as her best attribute.

Although Dapson could see action at third, the mound is where she will be needed most.

"We'll have Gena Valli, Stafko and Dapson for our front-line pitchers," Brechtelsbauer said. "Of the three, Donna looks the strongest right now. We'll definitely be counting on her."

IM officials coordinator to be hired Saluki nine looking for sun;

By Mike Sandrolini
Staff Writer

In an effort to provide participants in the SIU intramural sports program with better officiating next fall, a full-time "officials coordinator" will be hired by the intramural-recreational department, according to Jean Patore, coordinator of intramurals.

Patore said William C. Blyer, director of intramural-recreational sports, has not considered anyone for the new $12,000-a-year position, but she said, "he will be making a national search to find the best-qualified person who is capable of doing the job."

Patore said the officials coordinator will replace three graduate assistants. However, she said graduate assistants who presently are on the intramural-recreational staff will not be dropped next fall.

"We won't cut the people who are regulars," Patore said. "When their terms are up, we just will not replace them. Adding a full-time coordinator will not hurt our budget. The coordinator will be paid the same as three graduate students."

Patore said other universities, such as Illinois State, Indiana State and Indiana, have added an officials coordinator to their intramural programs. Each of the three universities, she said, has improved the quality of officiating in its intramural sports program.

"I feel that the addition of a coordinator here will help the program a lot," she said. "Good officiating makes an intramural program good. The coordinator will be able to spend much more time working with student officials. The officials will be better because of it, and the program will benefit."

Patore said there always have been problems with students in the intramural program who are not pleased with the quality of officiating. She said the students aren't happy with the number of "bad calls" officials make during a game.

Patore said graduate assistants currently are training and supervising the officials. But, she said, the graduate assistants "are loaded with work as it is."

"They simply don't have the time to work with the officials as they would like to," she said. "They have other duties, such as supervising intramural games, working in the office and scheduling events. They also have to attend class."

Patore said the officials coordinator will be able to sit with an official, talk over any problems or questions he or she might have and decide on a solution to the problem or question.

"The coordinator will be there," she said, "and all of the officials will know that this is the person to go to if they are having trouble officiating. The coordinator will be a certified official in two- or three-team sports, so he or she should be able to help an official."

Patore said the coordinator will train officials "better than before," and make the official more consistent when making a call.

"Because of the lack of time graduate assistants spend with the officials," Patore said, "we haven't been able to give them all the training in the rules they need. But that will all change with a coordinator."

"The officials will be able to train with the coordinator on an individual basis," she said. "Each official will attend training sessions, where discussions of rules will take place."

"We also will use audio-visual equipment," she said, "to help

Saluki nine looking for sun; to play series with Louisville

By Dave Kane
Staff Writer

It has to happen sooner or later for the Saluki baseball team. One of these days, SIU will get back into action if the Southern Illinois monsoon season comes to a long-awaited halt. In fact, it may seem that the season is starting all over again to Coach Itchy Jones and his team.

Rained out in eight of their last nine contests, the Salukis hope to get back into action this weekend with a three-game series at Louisville. A single game will be played Saturday and a Sunday double-header will conclude the series.

SIU then will come home to host a twinbill Monday against St. Francis College of Joliet at 1:30 p.m. at Abe Martin Field. The weather obviously has been the Salukis' No. 1 enemy so far this season, as the team has managed to play only one game since returning from the spring trip to Florida. From the standpoint of game experience, that's bad news. But the layoff also has hidden advantages, according to pitching coach Mark Newman.

"You have to basically start all over again," Newman said. "The hitters lose their timing and the pitchers lose their conditioning."

"On the other hand, we had a few players who were stiff and sore after Florida and the rest has helped them," Newman continued. "The lack of games has given us a chance to get back in the batting cage and work on technique and I think we've improved ourselves. It (the rain) has been a blessing in that respect."

The Salukis expect to go with ace pitcher Bob Schroeck at Louisville Saturday, with Rick Wysocki and either Harold Brown or Tom Caufield Sunday. Rob Clark and either Brown or Caufield will work the double-header against St. Francis.

Saturday's game at Louisville will offer Schroeck the opportunity to run his personal win streak to 18 games as he seeks to break the NCAA record of 23 set by South Carolina's Earl Bass in 1974-75. Schroeck has not lost since Apr. 1, 1973, but has not pitched since March 23 this year. He may need to shake a few cobwebs due to the layoff.
