Spring book co-op axed; future in doubt

The Undergraduate Student Organization will not have a book co-op this spring and whether there will be future co-ops remains in doubt, according to Jerry Cook, USO chief of staff. The first co-op last January, in which more than $10,000 worth of books changed hands among 591 students, was terned successful by both University administrators and student leaders.

USO staff members have acknowledged that part a the venture's success was due to the Student Center providing space and other services free of charge.

But University officials say they will have to charge the USO for future co-ops, while USO staff members contend that because students support the content through fees, the the center through fees, the USO should not be charged for holding the co-op in the center.

John Corker, Student Center director, has estimated the cost of the past co-op at between $800 and $1,400, and that future co-op costs will run from $1,250 to $1,400, it will lead to the demise of the co-op. If the Student Center charges the USO "that amount of money to run the co-op, it will be forced to close," Rogers said.

Cook said, "I feel that students own the Student Center. The book co-op provides a service to the entire student body and we shouldn't be charged for the use of the Student Center because we're paying for it."

However, Corker and Dean Isbell, SIU System treasurer, both agree that in order for the center to meet requirements to bond holders, it must charge rental fees to any organization that uses space in the center for any "income-generating activity."

The Student Center provided space and other services free for the first co-op because it "didn't want to stifle the USO's effort," Corker said.

Cook pointed out that although the USO had charged a 10 percent commission on book sales to pay for the services of recognized student organizations and publicity cost., it made only $33 on the venture.

Bond raps Reagan policies as unfair

Julian Bond has grown older, and the issues which preoccupy this nation are not necessarily the same as they were during his early care as a civil rights activist in the 1960s.

But the policies of the Reagan administration have led him to believe that it is time to 'mobilize the troops and lead them once again

"monute the roops and lead them once against into the streets against the barricades of apathy and indifference."

The Georgia state senator, appearing Monday as the keynote speaker for SIU.C's Human Resources 22 conference in the Student Center, delivered a harsh and unreserved condemnation of the Reagan administration and the New Federalism.

"A year ago, we were fearful," he said.
"Today I think we know what real fear is. A year ago, we unought our civil rights were in jeopardy. Today we see them swiftly slipping away. A year ago Reaganomics was an unproved economic theory. Today Reaganomics is an unproved economic theory."

The leadership of the Congress "has announced its intention to alter or eradicate the landmark legislation which made it possible for black and brown Americans to enter the political process." he said, referring to the Voting Rights Act, whose extension has been approved by the House and will be voted on by the Senate this year.

"The same conservative confederacy intends...to erase the laws and prayrams written in blood and sweat since Martin Luther King in blood and sweat since Martin Luther King in blood and sweat since Martin Luther King in the America ? was the premier figure in black America, Bond said.

The only other alternative would be to "charge a higher commission and that would defeat the entire purpose of the commission and that would defeat the entire purpose of the co-op — providing cheaper books to students," Cook said. Corker said the USO must be aware that "if they're selling books, they're taking business away from the University

Morris Library; use it, don't abuse it

STUDENTS AT SIU-C have the benefit of access to one of the finest research facilities in the nation, Morris Library. With approximately 1.7 million volumes, 18,000 periodicals and 1.5 million meroform units, the library is an educational resource of the first rank. It is also the largest open stack library in the United States

United States.

Unfortunately, some students don't treat the library like the valuable tool it is. Some thoughtless and inconsiderate people are tearing into the heart of the University, which Morris Library certainly is, when they deface and steal library materials.

Up-to-date statistics on theft and damage to materials are not available. The most recent inventories of library collections are several years old. But anyone who has searched in vain for that vital book or periodical knows that the extent of theft and damage to the collection is significant.

IT'S REGRETABLE THAT such a problem exists at a ti's REGRETABLE THAT such a problem exists at a miversity. The ostensible reason people are here is to take advantage of access to learning materials. Some people, though, apparently forget that others may need the same materials they are using, and decide to keep them for themselves. These are the people who steal books and tear the pages from magazines.

The problem, as is usually the case, has to do with money. While the cost of library materials has risen anywhere from 10 to 15 percent a year for the past several years, the budget for the library has remained relatively stable. The result has been an inevitable squeeze on the library's resources.

At most times, only one or two workers are present on each floor of the library. That makes it easy for irresponsible students perhaps some are not students - to damage or remove — pernaps some are not students — to damage or remove periodicals and books without being seen by library workers. This would not be such a serious problem if other users of the library would speak up when they see pages being turn from books or magazines. Few people do it, however, evidently preferring not to get involved.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION at the library, in addition to

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION at the library, in addition to making theft easier, compounds the damage each theft causes. In many cases, stolen items are not replaced. The money for replacements is simply not there, according to librarians. What can be done to help make the library's collection safer? One possibility, if the necessary money could be found, would be to institute a checking sysytem for backpacks. Many universities require that students take only a notebook or book and pencil into the library, and leave backpacks and purses at the door. Such a system might be helpful at Morris Library. A stronger sense of responsibility on the part of students would also help, of course. If students who see materials being defaced would speak up to the librarian, instead of sitting silently, materials could be preserved.

It's sad that the problem exists at all. Students at SIU-C are

It's sad that the problem exists at all. Students at SIU-C are presumably adults. They should be able to differentiate between their own property and that of the public. Obviously, not all can. That's the real problem.

Student votes can be powerful; register to vote here Tuesday

The Undergraduate Students Organization, the Graduate Student Council and the League of Women Voters are sponsoring a voter registration drive in the Registration Center at Woody Hall in conjunction with the Education for E campaign. Tuesday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. is your campaign. Tuesday from 10 a.m. wap.in. is your last chance to register.

But why should I register to vote? And why should I register in Jackson County? And even if I did register, what difference would one vote make? These three questions are typical of those asked by students when I try to persuade them to utilize their right to vote.

Most students are disillusioned by the political process, leary of politicals, made cycnical by the foul taste — and strong negative impressions— left by the Vietnam War and the Watergate scandal.

But now is the time for a rebirth of student participation — not a time of violence or destruction, but a time of orderly and organized action. The gravity of the situation demands it, and resources and opportunities needed to affect change have never been greater.

We must work together and vote for what we believe in. The political system responds first and foremost to votes. In order to have a voice in political decisions, students must vote. Take two minutes out of your day today and go to the Registration Center from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. to register. Only if students show their solidarity and willingness to work together can we stem the tide threatening educational opportunities for all people.

Back to my first point — why should you vote?

First, we can make a difference. As students at First, we can make a difference. As students at a large university in a small town, we comprise an unusually large voting block. Because 8,000 students voted in 1972 — only one third of SIU-C's current population — Jackson County was the only county within 300 miles to carry George McGovern instead of "Tricky Dick." The drastic cuts proposed in student aid combined with tuition integrating roads. s make it even more important to vote today than at any time since the Vietnam War.

Professor blames apathy for cuts

There is often the charge that journalists twist the news or a story to fit their various ideologies. A letter on the editorial page on March 11 in the Daily Egyptian did exactly

The author of the letter, The author of the letter, Matthew Meighan, took a statement made by a professor at the "Fight Cuthacks" teachin and very irresponsibly twisted what the professor said to fit his own ideology. The professor who made the statement was Robert Roper.

When Roper said "the real blame belongs to everyone in this room and the 5,000 SIU-C students who won't receive their Peli Grants this year," he was refe ring to student apathy. It does exist, Meighan, and it did contribute to the lack of success in stopping the cut-backs in student aid made in the 1982 budget.

When Roper went on to say that if a student receives a loan, that it a student receives a loan, "they better make damn sure that they pay it back," he was referring to the large default rate on the student loans and, as a result, the opportunity it gives budget cutters to trim the program because it is inef-ficient and wasteful. Roper simply meant that students when the students they load their loans of the students. simply meant that students should pay back their loans so that future students can have the same privilege.

Meighan seems to think that Roper was "blaming the victim," and even more outrageous was the idea that Roper was part of some "capitalist conspiracy" that is exploiting the working beaple of this country. It seems clear, given what Roper said, that he was trying to get the "victims" to act, and not be silent like they were last year. Furthermore, Roper wants students to act responsibly with their aid. Does this equate with blaming the victim? —Jiam Granate, Senier, Political Science. Senior, Political Science.

Some D.E. stories belong in the National Enquirer

Is the Daily Egyptian a viable source of information or just another form of the National Enquirer?

I just can't believe that the Daily Egyptian gets away will all of the yellow journalism and outright lies that it puts into most of its stories everyday. I'm just sick of it. My student fees could be much better spent fees could be much better spent elsewhere. On March 29, "Fight cuts, students told at rally," by Doug Hettinger and Lyndail Caidwell, said "two SIU-C skydivers, one with an American flag trailing his chute, landed in the crowd as the lead guitarist of the band Low Budget played Jimi Hendrix's version of "The Star Spangled Banner."

The truth of the matter is that the band stopped playing when the skydivers came in, and there sure wasn't any American flag trailing behind any parachute. It appears that these two staff writers are trying to make this even sound like something more than it was, for what reason I don't know.

Does the Daily Egyptian have any ethical standards to follow? Or should they be selling the Daily Egyptian at the checkout counter in the grocery store, along with the other papers that make up their own distorted stories?

Another interesting story is the review of the Charlie Daniels Band concert by Tom Travin, the news editor. If Tom Travin, the news editor. If Tom is the news editor, he should be able to get facts straight. I realize that this article is a review of the concert and as such contains Tom's personal views of what happened, but the facts should not change.

His headline, "Despite earsplitting volume, CDB fans seemed satisfied" does not do

I just don't understand how the crowd could drown out the band if the band's was so ear splitting. He even said that, "it was unnecessarily loud, to the point of being deafening." Yet the crowd managed to drown out the band. That says a lot about the vocal power of SIU-C students. If we could just

If the Daily Egyptian cannot do this, maybe our student fees oo ins, maybe our stituent rees could be more wisely spent elsewhere. After all in these days of student aid and budget cuts, we are going to have to drop programs that have little or no merit.

Nuclear weapons, power linked

I would like to correct a misquote attributed to me in the article "Simon to speak at nuclear rally," by Randy Rendfeld, in the Daily Egyptian, March 26.

It was reported that I said that only a small portion of nuclear power plants are actually power plants and that "the major portion of them are weapons plants." This not only is not what I said, but it also an erroneous statement. I would ignore this misrepresentation if it did not seriously damage the credibility of the group I was representing and, by association, all the groups concerned about nuclear technology. It was reported that I said technology.

I told the reporter that a small portion of the budget allotted for nuclear development goes to nuclear power, while the majority goes to nuclear weapons production and development. I further explained that many people do not realize the inseparable link between nuclear power and nuclear weapons. The knowledge, equipment, process and fuel are the same for both. And in much of their course, the nuclear power industry and the nuclear weapons industry are interchangeable and interdependent.

Many countries to which the United States, as well as other countries, export nuclear power countries, export nuclear pover technology can use this technology and the nuclear fuel that is provided to produce a nuclear weapon. The power reactor, therefore, could have an innocent civilian cover, rather than being obviously military in nature.

I regret that my views were misrepresented and hope that in misrepresented and nope that in the future more care can be given to the accuracy of reporting in the Daily Egyptian. —Catherine Speffard, Member, Women's Environmental Support Group.

Racism doesn't exist in theater

I AM NOT in the habit of firing off letters to the Daily Egyptian but after reading the viewpoint that was published on March 30, I feel compelled to write in reply. This particular item was one of the biggest pieces of drivel I have ever read in the

I have ever read in the newspaper.
The article to which I refer was headlined "Niggardly' funds foit black play."
The viewpoint was written by a woman complaining of being unable to get a play she had written produced at SIU-C. In it she cast same rather nely cast some rather ugly Department and a member of its faculty.

To begin with, let's set the record straight on the word "niggardly." Webster's defines it as "miserly." The continual use of the word continual use of the word "niggardly" along with phrases like "black groups" and "black play" in the column as well as in the headline was an extreme display of poor taste. In her viewpoint, Consuello Madonna Parrish tens of approaching Christian Moe of the Theater faculty with the idea of entering her play in the American College Theater Festival. She says Moe expressed doubts that the department could the produce her play because of our "niggardly" budget. To twist this statement into the context Parrish did in her article was a very cheap shot at the Theater Department in the Theater Department in neral ^2d at Moe in pargenera ticular.

IT WOULD BE nice if every play written at SIU-C could be given a full-scale production, but that's simply impossible. I hate to break it to you, Parrish, but you aren't the only one in the world who ever wrote a play. Many people write one after another and never see a single work published or produced. As to the rather thinly veiled implication that racism was the real reason there was doubt your play would be produced by the Theater Department, I can only say that that is the worst kind of paranoid nonsense.

I feel Parrish's column not only slandered the entire department but also a gen-tleman of the theater and a good friend. I have worked with Moe on two separate productions and have found him to be fair, honest and genuinely concerned with the artistic advancement of SIU-C students. If you're looking for racism there, you're barking up the wrong tree. The Theater Department is in a state of transition and change and when I last spoke to people in a position to know, little was certain about next year's production schedule. One of the things that have been made clear in undergraduate meetings, the Theater Department, like many others, will have to closely count its pennies in future because budgetary considerations and rising production costs.

If Parrish really believes in her play, she'll continue her efforts to get it produced. But filling a newspaper with carefully worded insinuations won't put her work on the boards. Spare us the sob story, please. — David Nava, Janior, Theater.

More jazz acts at Shryock, please

Management courses offered to local businesses, industry

By William Jason Yong

Southern Illinois busin and industries may participate in management courses and other training programs to be offered around the region this fall by the Department of Continuing Education at SIU-C. James Osberg, conference coordinator, said seven James Osbe-g, conterence coordinator, said seven management courses will be offered to Southern Illinois businesses to train first-line supervisors. The courses will deal with work centers and their deal with work centers and their management, effective speaking and writing, lines of communication, labormanagement relations, practical psychology, legal aspects of business and fiscal aspects of business and fiscal aspects of business.

Professors from the School of Professors from the School of Technical Careers will teach the courses, Osberg said.

An advisory council has been formed to help plan and organize the training programs. Currently, there are 11 business representatives from throughout Southern Illinois on the council the council.

the council.
They are, from manufac-turing, George Cameron, vice president of Diagraph Export Department, Carbondale; Don pepartment, Carbondale; Don Gass, director of industrial relations at Turco Manufacturing Co., Du Quoin; Fred Thompson, general manager of Southwest Forest Industries, Herrin; and Richard Trokey, personnel manager of Phelps Dodge Cable and Wire Co., Du Quoin.

baccalaureate programs at the School of Technical Careers, is also a member.

Osberg said Southern Illinois was a heavily unionized area, and he hopes the council can serve as a link between the business community and labor

The council has contracted 30 different industries which have several hundred employees each. The aim is to study their needs and problems and to look into ways the Universit/ can meet their training needs, Osberg said.

The council plans to set up classes on a contractual and offcampus basis. Coursettual and or-campus basis. Courses will be given at selected locations in Southern Illinois. On-campus classes during the evening hours will also be scheduled. Last week, Osberg and Stickel met with officials from the Department of Commerce and Community Affairs in Springfield. The meeting touched on matters concerning financial assistance and business information to be

"I'd rather leave my replacement with as good a team as I can," Cornell said.

As far as track is concerned, Hartzog said Cornell — who was a world-class miler in 1965 — will be in charge of the Saluki distance and middle-distance runners.

"Bill is a little better educated than most track coaches in the United States. He coacnes in the United States. He was schooled well in all track and field events in England, but his principle work will be with the middle people," Hartzog said.

Hartzog said Cornell will earn $22,000 a year for his coaching duties at SIU-C.

Rose Cornell worked in Murray State's Student Affairs Office and will probably seek employment at SIU-C, according to Hartzog.

Valli sidelined

Gena Valli, standout pit-cher and first baseman of the Saluki softball team, will be sidelined at least until the weekend because of an arm injury, according to SIU-C trainer Sally Perkins.

Perkins, who examined

Valli's pitching arm Monday, said the senior "has a problem with two nerves" in her right forearm. Perkins said the nerves were under pressure from swelling resulting from a stray pitch which hit Valli in the arm in a ame at Southwest Missouri aturday.

"She can't grip anything or make a fist," said Perkins.

"She'll probably be able to DH DH this weekend and hopefully to play first by the start of next week."

Perkins said Valli won't be able to pitch for at least two weeks. Valli's record is just 2-5 this year, but she has a brilliant 1.64 ERA.

Coach Kay Brechtelsbauer said Valli will be misued in the Saluki lineup, calling her an excellent ballplayer who does well at the plate and in

"She's a good leader," said the Saluki coach, "and she will be leading us from the bench until she can play.

Baseball team suffers 'lack of hitting strength'

Baseball Coach Itchy Jones said though he doesn't believe in letdowns, the Salukis always have trouble on their first road trip following spring break.

As a perfect example of what Jones meant, the Salukis spit a double-header at Louisville Sunday. SIU-C won the first game 11-5 in eight innings to stretch their winning streak to eight. But they lost the night-cap, 3-1, to drop their record to 12-8.

chers were sharp and deserved to win both, but we had a lack of hitting strength."

The Saluki batters didn't exactly knock the Cardinal hurlers out of the box in the opener. Rather, the Cards pitched themselves into their wn jam. SIU-C tied the game in the seventh when catcher Steve Boyd knocked a grounder to the shortstop with the bases loaded. Boyd just beat the toss, and two Salukis scored to tie the game at

"He made me mad in practice, and kept reminding me to point my toes," Siomski said. The junior also gave credit to team mate Danny Muenz.
"Danny pushed me and helped me polish my routine this past we k." he said.

Slomski's final routine scored a 9.7, breaking the Saluki record of 9.65 shared by Brian Babcock and Jack Laurie. Nebraska's Jim Hartung gave a "flawless" 9.8 performance, according to Slomski, to capture first in the rings.

Slomski said he didn't feel much pressure going into the NCAA meet, because no one expected him to do well. However, teammate John Levy, who competed on the high bar, did feel the pressure.
