Salary reduction plan to be discussed

By Phillip Fiorini
Staff Writer

The Graduate Council will discuss a proposal Thursday that would authorize the president of the University to reduce the salaries of the faculty and the administrative and professional staff.

The proposal will be discussed at a council meeting, to be held at 8 a.m. in the Mississippi Room of the Student Center.

John Baker, special assistant to President Albert Somit, said the proposal would allow the president to authorize salary reductions with approval of the Board of Trustees.

Baker said Tuesday that Somit already has the authority to call for reductions from civil service and student workers.

"This is simply to notify people that this would be possible under the terms of their contract" if the proposal is approved, Baker said.

How much of a salary reduction would be implemented, he said, depended on what was proposed by the president.

William Hardenbergh, president of the council, said he understood the proposal was drafted "to meet the severe budgetary problems" the University might face, whether or not the Legislature approves Gov. James Thompson's proposed tax increase.

"What we have now is gravy compared to what will happen if we don't get a tax increase," Hardenbergh said. "But this is one of the ways we could deal with a really bad situation."

Baker said the proposal would be addressed at the Board of Trustees meeting in May.

In other business, the council will address a report from the New Programs Committee concerning a proposal for a masters degree program in Industrial Productivity.

The report asks that the proposal, which was submitted to the council last semester, be resubmitted to address problems concerning the need and the resources for the program.

The council will also discuss the proposed guidelines for approval and implementation of student fees.

The proposed guidelines have already been referred to the council's Educational Policies Committee.

Hardenbergh said the council will also discuss proposals for the consideration of future policy on academic and research computing. The proposals are contained in a letter from Somit to John Guyon, vice president for academic affairs.

In the letter, Somit makes references to the types of basic computer literacy the University may demand of undergraduate students as a part of general education requirements.

Cook withdraws from trustee race

By Vicki Olgeaty
Staff Writer

Jerry Cook is withdrawing from the race for student trustee, leaving Sharon Hutcherson as the sole candidate.

"I feel as though the position of student trustee will be very well filled," Cook said Tuesday. "I don't feel I'm putting students in a position where they don't have a choice."

He said students indicated their choice in February when they elected Hutcherson over five other candidates in an election held to replace Stan Irvin, who resigned.

Hutcherson will be the only candidate in the student trustee election, scheduled for April 13. No write-in votes will be accepted.

Cook said he decided to enter the race Friday afternoon when he discovered that incumbent Hutcherson had not yet submitted her petition.

"My opinion is that the position is certainly too important to have a race in which no one competes," Cook said.

Friends gathered signatures for his petition in time for it to be submitted by the deadline at 5 p.m. Friday, Cook said.

Cook said he decided Tuesday, however, to withdraw from the race after talking to friends and Hutcherson, who also submitted a petition Friday afternoon.

"I wanted to make sure she really wanted to run," Cook said. He said he was a "little uncomfortable" that Hutcherson submitted her petition so close to the deadline.

Hutcherson has the dedication, commitment and expertise to do a fine job as student trustee, he said.

Cook, who is president of the Undergraduate Student Organization, said he will not be active in student government next year; instead he will concentrate more on studies and applying to medical school.

Cook said he will submit a letter to the election commission Wednesday asking it to withdraw his name from the race.

"It was a very tough decision, but I'm very certain it's the right decision," he said.

USO, city clash; vow to work together

By Karen Torrey
Staff Writer

City officials and the Undergraduate Student Organization clashed Monday night over lack of communication regarding the problem of off-campus student parties, but both vowed to work together for a solution.

USO Vice President Fritz Levenhagen told the Carbondale City Council that the USO is eager to work with the city. He complained that the USO had to learn about the problem through the media because the city administration neglected to contact the USO about a special report made recently about party-related issues.

Levenhagen accused the council of mailing copies of the report to students thought to be involved in the matter, an allegation strongly denied by Mayor Hans Fischer.

"I think you're here tonight covering your tracks on a ball that you and the USO dropped," Fischer told Levenhagen. Fischer noted that neither Jerry Cook, the USO's liaison to City Council, nor any other representative had attended several recent meetings where student parties were discussed.

City Manager Carroll Fry also asserted that it was the USO's responsibility, not the city's, to establish contact between the city and the SIU-C student body.

"I'm not in the business of babysitting anybody," Fry said. He added that he can now arrange a meeting with SIU-C administrators, USO members and city officials because he has received direction to do so from the City Council.

Levenhagen reiterated that the USO will cooperate in efforts to remedy the problem.

In related business, the City Council authorized Fry to have the city's legal department "clean up" several city ordinances to help "in regulation of undesirable activities."

The legal department had previously suggested using the city's noise ordinance to declare houses where disruptive parties are frequently held public nuisances, as well as reviving an ordinance that would require the licensing of rooming homes.

The department also suggested a new ordinance which would make landlords, as well as tenants, responsible for the condition of their property.

Gus Bode

Gus says if the city won't furnish babysitters, perhaps it will furnish a map to tell the USO how to get to council meetings.

City Council rejects street repair bid

By John Schrag
Staff Writer

The failure of an Anna construction company to use minorities in work done in Carbondale has led to the denial of its bid for a contract with the city.

The Carbondale City Council at its meeting Monday night rejected the bid of Denny & Sons construction company of Anna for a contract for the city's street cut repair program.

Although Denny & Sons' bid of $20,655 was lower than the only other bid, the council rejected it, citing the company's past non-compliance with the city's equal employment opportunity regulations. The council awarded the contract to L.E. Cecil Construction of Carbondale, which bid $24,500 for the repair of streets that are cut up when water or sewer lines are repaired.

Denny & Sons was awarded the street repair contract last year, but only after a warning that failure to increase the number of minority employees on its workforce would lead to denial of the contract this year.

Cleveland Matthews, the city's equal employment opportunities officer, told the council that the company did not use any minority workers during work on the street repairs last year. He said the contract signed by the company required them to use minorities for 16 percent of the man-hours needed for the job.

John Womick, an attorney representing Denny & Sons, told the council he thought their action was "grossly unfair," saying his client should be allowed to respond to the charges.

He said that when his client received the invitation to bid on the project his client assumed his bid would be accepted.

Don Denny, owner of the company, said Tuesday that he attempted to hire minorities for the work done in Carbondale, but was unable to do so. Denny said his company has an agreement with Laborers Local Union No. 227 in Carbondale for any work done in the city. He said he requested minority laborers on the days his company was working in Carbondale, but was told none were available.

Saying the city was putting itself "in the role of prosecution, judge and jury," Womick asked the council Monday to give his client a chance to tell his side of the story.

"They've been tried in absentia and now they're going to be hung," he said.

Matthews, however, told the council that he made several unsuccessful attempts to contact Denny. He said he left messages for Denny to return his calls, but never heard from him.

IBHE OKs Thompson budget; urges additional state support

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — Amidst cries of catastrophe, the Illinois Board of Higher Education on Tuesday approved Gov. James R. Thompson's pared-down budget for state universities, saying it would mean layoffs and tuition increases next year.

The proposed $1.2 billion budget for 1984, $87 million below this year's level, calls for a $500 tuition increase, 1,068 full-time layoffs, smaller community college grants and no scholarship aid for 27,000 students.

Although the budget passed unanimously, it was accompanied by a recommendation that the Legislature approve Thompson's proposed $2 billion tax increase.

The Board wants $237 million more than Thompson has recommended in state support. The additional money would lessen universities' dependence on tuition by $70 million, Board Director Richard Wagner has said.

University presidents from across the state addressed the Board before approval of the budget, and all warned of dire changes in the state's higher education system without a tax increase.

Kenneth Shaw, chancellor of Southern Illinois University, said fiscal year 1984 would be a "disaster if we had to implement this plan."

"Even those who find it politically hard (to raise taxes) will look back in six years and say 'we've made a big mistake,'" Shaw said.

University of Illinois President Stanley O. Ikenberry said, "The plan before us is an interim plan. A tuition increase of substantial and destructive measure (is)...necessary. The (other) answer is to completely restructure higher education."

Ikenberry said Illinois' ability to be a "modern, competitive industrial state" is at stake.

Only one group advised the Board to reject the budget outright. The University Professionals of Illinois, a professors' union, called it "anti-education."

"This year it is appropriate...to take dramatically different action," said Dr. Margaret Schmid, chairwoman of the Illinois Federation of Teachers' University Council.

In other action, the Board also approved recommended program cuts which included:

— M.A. in Speech at Northeastern Illinois University.

— M.S. in Interdisciplinary Studies at Western Illinois.

— M.S. in Secondary Education at Illinois State.

— M.A. in Sociology, Anthropology and M.A. in Environmental Studies at Sangamon State.

— Ph.D. in Cultural Foundations at Southern Illinois.

— Secondary Education Degree programs at the University of Illinois, Urbana.

News Roundup

Illinois floods force evacuations

PEORIA (AP) — At least 60 Illinois families evacuated their homes as the rain-swollen Illinois and Spoon Rivers crept over doorsills Tuesday.

Up to 25 families in the East Peoria, Rome, Spring Bay and Chillicothe areas were forced out Tuesday as the Illinois River reached 23 feet, the level at which most riverside dwellers must evacuate, the Red Cross said.

Senators say Reagan breaking law

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two Democratic senators charged Tuesday that the Reagan administration may be violating U.S. law and a 1948 international agreement by supporting anti-Sandinista guerrillas in Nicaragua.

"What we are dealing with here is not a partisan issue of whether the administration's Central America policy is right or wrong," Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., told the Senate. "The question is whether it is within the letter and the spirit of the law."

Reagan to request spending cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan intends to ask Congress to reduce spending by about $900 million next year to offset part of the cost of the $4.6 billion 1985 bill he signed last month, officials said Tuesday.

Administration and congressional officials said the president would submit the formal request next week when he submits budget revisions for the 1984 fiscal year that begins Oct. 1.

Mideast talks stalled amid tension

KHALDE, Lebanon (AP) — U.S., Lebanese and Israeli negotiators failed to break the deadlock in troop withdrawal talks Tuesday, and PLO chief Yasser Arafat and Jordan's King Hussein seemed far apart in their negotiations.

Meanwhile, military sources in Tel Aviv reported two bombings but no casualties in Lebanon's Israeli-occupied port of Sidon. The Lebanese National Resistance Front claimed responsibility for the attacks and claimed an undetermined number of Israeli soldiers were wounded.

Bishops soften anti-nuclear stance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Months after the White House's protest, Roman Catholic bishops softened on Tuesday their call for a nuclear weapons freeze and added a warning against negotiating "naively" with the Soviet Union. But their attempt to set church policy on war and peace would still rebuke President Reagan's arms buildup.

The new proposal calls for agreements to "curb" testing, production and deployment — a change that may be hotly debated when the document is laid before the nation's 286 Catholic bishops in Chicago May 2-3. Adoption by a two-thirds vote would make it official policy of the American branch of the church.

Experts hope to salvage satellite

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The world's biggest and costliest communications satellite, launched with fanfare from the space shuttle Challenger, traveled a misshapen orbit Tuesday as experts on the ground sought ways to salvage it. They voiced some hope for success.

The new shuttle, meanwhile, was coasting like a seasoned traveler around the Earth. Its astronauts, quietly busy with metals processing and other scientific experiments, wondered if they had anything to do with the satellite's problems.

"We don't really have a story for you," said Mission Control. "We'll probably be talking a lot about that post-flight."

Plans were to use the satellite's nozzles and the fuel it carries for small course corrections, to propel the satellite into its proper 22,300-mile-high orbit.

A lot was riding on the ability to overcome the problems with the 2.5 ton, $100 million Tracking and Data Relay Satellite, which is needed urgently both for defense purposes and future missions of the shuttle. Without TDRS, a spacelab flight in September is practically an impossibility.

Challenger commander Paul J. Weitz and his crew, pilot Karol J. Bobko and mission specialists Story Musgrave and Donald H. Peterson, who had ejected the satellite from their cargo bay late Monday, were asleep when the trouble began. They were in the second day of the ship's five-day inaugural flight.

"The Challenger is operating near flawlessly," said flight director Randy Stone. "The crew is feeling fine."

There was no indication the crew suffered from the space sickness that beset astronauts on the five flights of the first shuttle.

Musgrave was eager to get on with the day's work. "We're going to come out of the chute running hard," he said.

Weitz and his crew members had a relatively light schedule Tuesday, devoted mainly to metals processing, scientific and medical experiments. They also were to make the first of four course-changing maneuvers to meet a phantom target in space. The exercise was a rehearsal for later flights when astronauts will chase down satellites to service or repair them.

The astronauts' next big day is Thursday when Musgrave and Peterson climb into space suits and walk out into the airless void of the open cargo bay.

What had been a perfect satellite deployment just before midnight turned sour 5½ hours later when a firing of an attached booster rocket ended 20 or 30 seconds early. The satellite, instead of hovering over one spot along the equator, 22,300 miles high, tumbled into a 14,000-to-22,000-mile egg-shaped path.

At that orbit, it could perform its intended functions some of the time, but not all of them always.

man said Denny knew in August, when last year's contract was awarded, that the city was not satisfied with his minority employment practices. She said the company knew then that its contract would not be renewed if it didn't increase its number of minority workers.

Council rejects rezoning proposal

By John Schrag
Staff Writer

A controversial proposal to rezone some land south of the city failed to get enough votes for approval at the Carbondale City Council meeting Monday night.

The change was requested by George Herbert, who asked that zoning for 5.5 acres of land south of the Parkwood subdivision be changed from agriculture to medium-density residential use. He had proposed building duplexes on the land, which is south of Elstrom Drive, just west of old

U.S. 51.

Because the council did not approve the zoning request, the land will remain zoned for agricultural use.

The request for the zoning change drew protest last week from some residents of Parkwood subdivision and other nearby homeowners who presented a petition signed by 45 persons opposed to the zoning change.

The residents told the council they did not object to the land being developed with single-family houses but feared that the construction of rental units would lower the property values of their homes.

At the meeting Monday, the council heard from Don Slinkard, a resident of the subdivision who supports the zoning change.

Slinkard, who also sent a letter to the council members, told the council that the people opposing the rezoning proposal don't represent a majority of the residents in the subdivision.

He told the council that only 22 of the 45 people who signed the petition live in, or own property adjacent to, Parkwood subdivision. And, he said, those people own only 6 of the 16 homes in the subdivision. The remainder of the residents do not oppose the rezoning request, he said.

Slinkard also disputed the charge that the duplexes would lower property values. He said that historically new construction has tended to raise surrounding property values.

His arguments, however, did not persuade enough council members to approve the rezoning.

Because the zoning request was opposed by more than 20 percent of the neighboring residents, the council needed a two-thirds majority to approve it. Therefore, the motion to approve the change failed when council members Neil Dillard and Sammie Aikman voted against it. Mayor Hans Fischer and Council Members Archie Jones and Helen Westberg voted in favor of the change.

Although the land lies outside the city's boundaries, it falls under Carbondale's 1 1/2-mile zoning jurisdiction. The zoning change had been endorsed by the Carbondale Planning Commission, the city's planning department and community development staff.

McFarlin fund nears $22,000

By Robert Green
Staff Writer

The Harold McFarlin Heart Transplant Fund received a $1,860 Easter blessing Sunday from parishioners of St. Francis Xavier Catholic Church in Carbondale.

The Rev. James Genisio said the money, which was collected during Easter services, was "the biggest extra collection we've ever had." He noted that McFarlin is not a member of the parish.

Robert Hallissey, a campus coordinator of the McFarlin fund drive, said Tuesday that the church collection should push the total fund "near the $22,000 mark."

Hallissey called the St. Francis donation "tremendous," and said he is hopeful that other churches in the area will also respond with donations this weekend.

He said several local church organizations, including Campus Ministries, the Carbondale Ministerial Alliance and the Murphysboro Ministerial Alliance, have discussed plans to hold a special collection April 10 for McFarlin in area churches.

McFarlin, a 46-year-old SIUC history professor, has been told by doctors that his damaged heart won't keep him alive for more than a year. He has been accepted as a candidate for heart transplant surgery at the Stanford University Medical Center but must raise $80,000 for the operation, which isn't covered by faculty health insurance.

A $40,000 down payment must be made before McFarlin can fly to California for the operation, and his predicament has spawned fund-raising drives throughout the University and the local community.

Upcoming efforts include a "Massage Day" conducted by the Physical Therapy Department from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Friday in Room 114 of Wham Building. The cost is $1 for a complete back massage and larger donations will be accepted.

The Carbondale Eagles will host a chicken and dumplings dinner from noon to 5 p.m. Sunday at the Eagles Club, 1206 W. Linden St. The dinner will be followed by a dance from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. featuring a country and western band.

All proceeds from the dinner and dance will go to the McFarlin Fund, and tickets are being sold by the Phi Alpha Theta history honor society from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the solicitation area of the Student Center.

The Carbondale City Council recently proclaimed April 9 as Harold McFarlin Day, and fund-raisers are planning to solicit door-to-door.

Budget proposes cuts in city's services

Carbondale's proposed city operating budget for fiscal year 1983-84 would allow city services to be kept at "substantially the same level as this year," but calls for reduced funding to some community services.

The preliminary budget, which proposes expenditures of $11,146,765, was distributed to City Council members Monday night.

In a memorandum to the council, City Manager Carroll Fry noted that federal funding for the health and child care programs will run out next year and indicated that funding for other community services may have to be "sharply reduced" in order to continue health and child care services in the future.

The proposal for fiscal year 1983-84, which begins May 1, represents an increase of $6,371,275 over the current budget. Fry stated in the memorandum that the increase is primarily a result of expected expenditures on the federally-funded railroad project and the city's proposed downtown parking garage.

The proposed budget is available for public inspection at the City Clerk's office and the Carbondale Public Library. The council is expected to act on the budget on April 18 after hearing comments about the budget at a public hearing scheduled for Monday night.

Opinion & Commentary

Let the world know SIU-C is 'big-time'

IF UNIVERSITY officials want to raise more than the $1 million in contributions they did last year by upgrading SIU-C's image, they should learn, as officials at Washington University in St. Louis did, to be reporters first and salesmen second. Let interested people of the world know what makes SIU-C an outstanding institution of higher education — then ask them if they could spare a dime.

It is troubling that SIU-C could attract only $1 million in 1982. SIU-C is "big-time" in enrollment only, being outclassed in prestige and fund-raising by the likes of the University of Illinois.

It takes more than a hard sell, though, to draw a bead on potential donors and convince them to help SIU-C instill knowledge and understanding. SIU-C seemingly lacks the name recognition of a U of I.

Officials such as Jack Dyer, executive director of university relations, aren't without hope that fund-raising can be increased fivefold to $5 million annually by 1987, a goal set last year by Stanley McAnally, then vice president for university relations and development and now SIU Foundation president. They need look no further than Washington University for answers to better name recognition.

WU found itself competing with no fewer than 13 "Washington" colleges or universities — ranging from Washington and Lee to Washington Baptist College — so it's not surprising donors would confuse which schools they wished to contribute to or that donors would prefer donating to a school named Illinois over one with Southern, Western or Northeastern in it.

DESPITE THE crowded field of Washington universities and without a renowned football or basketball program (a path chosen by many as a quick route to riches) Washington University has done well using a campus features service along with consultation from a national public relations firm.

The feature service acts more as a newspaper than as a public relations office. Rather than "tipping" the media of campus events, it produces news and features in ready-to-use form for newspapers and other media that draw attention to the university and its achievements. Good writers rather than good salesmen are used — and provide what editors look for in news releases.

Stories are developed as a reporter would develop a news story. The media are given objective accounts of interest rather than university hype. The media get good stories and the university gets some recognition.

For instance, the nation's attention can be caught by flooding and flood control. A release about some professor getting $12,000 to research flood plain drainage might draw a blink, but editors and readers were more than interested in flood control efforts last December on the Mississippi River, in which — as a note to all potential donors out there — SIU-C students did play a role.

Letting the world know about flooding in Southern Illinois as well as the research being done here, what students are learning about it in the classroom and SIU-C's role in flood plain development in Southern Illinois tied up in an attractive feature story for the media would be a nifty way of spreading the word about how SIU-C serves Southern Illinois.

THERE ARE STORIES out there dying to be told and ones that would be a welcome change from the standard release coming across an editor's desk about this researcher getting that grant and that student winning this award.

The U of I attracts dollars on name recognition. The public has been convinced of the university's value. It's not enough to sit down and say that we'll set our sights on increasing fund raising fivefold. Let the world know what a great university this is — objectively, as any good newspaper would — and it'll beat a path to the door. Some may even show up with their spare dimes in hand.

Delyte W. Morris

IT HAS BEEN more than a dozen years since Delyte W. Morris served SIU-C as president. It is unfortunate in an age of "what have you done for me lately" to see each new generation of students and faculty let the memory of Morris fade more and more into the distance. Current students likely know little about the man who made a teachers college into one of the country's largest universities while alumni from the days of Southern Illinois Normal University know little about the modern SIU-C and the SIU system that Morris built. University officials ponder what it will take to create a more positive image for this University and win stronger support from its alumni.

About 275 people did their part at polishing SIU-C's image and bridging the gap between "old grads" and more recent generations by raising the funds for a statue of Morris that is to be unveiled Saturday in Morris Library.

We take great pride in being an educational system serving 35,000 students and the entire Southern Illinois region — the SIU of the 1970s and 80s — while forgetting the man who in the 1950s and '60s made it possible. Morris had his detractors — those who saw him as stubborn and authoritarian. Nonetheless, Morris' accomplishments are the stuff traditions can be built around.

SIU-C has a tradition and Morris is a big part of that. We must look to the past for our tradition and keep it in mind to build our dreams for the future.

'Star Wars' defense not far-out

Do you know what the problem of so many Americans is today? — they are a lot of talk but very little action. A view (and attitude) was expressed in the March 30 DE in an editorial entitled "Star Wars — the final frontier?" This editorial was very typical of what I hear so many well-intending individuals cry about. But that's all they do — cry.

If so many people are joking about this matter, how serious can it be? If the author can refer to it as a sales pitch, when millions of lives are potentially (to the author) at stake, how important can he think the issue is?

The author also complains about moving conflict to outer space. I suppose he would prefer the first strike to take place in our backyards? (Frankly, I could picture Fane-as a more deserving target — kind of an architectural design award).

The reference that was made to Buck Rogers was very funny; very much like the rest of the editorial in that it accomplished nothing but filling space.

All that the editorial did was to look at the shortcomings of Reagan's proposal. It didn't even consider the positive aspects of this strategy (lasers, etc.).

This "Star Wars" strategy does have the potential to save lives, instead of avenging them; which the present Mutual Assured Destruction situation can't do. Imagine what would happen if tomorrow (under the MAD scenario), by either computer malfunction or human error, some nuclear missiles were launched. The "Star Wars - Buck Rogers" system would possibly give us time to find out that it was a mistake. MAD won't give us this chance and chances are that retaliation measures would be taken.

I urge you to not always go for the hype of an issue without going for the issue itself. The author of the article owes someone an apology (perhaps President Reagan) for trying to abuse the media as a playground for melodrama.

I didn't vote for Reagan, but I will, within reason, support him. Should anyone disagree with his policies, they should advocate a strong effort to change them — but with moderation and less rhetoric. Enough empty talk. — Jeff Humphrey, Senior, Political Science.

'The fate of our lives are at stake'

Last summer over three-quarters of a million people gathered in New York to protest the U.S. - Soviet arms build up and to send a message to President Reagan. He didn't listen.

Also last summer, Senior Admiral Hyman Rickover, inventor of the civilian nuclear power reactor and father of the modern nuclear navy, testified before a Senate subcommittee that the biggest force being perpetrated upon the American public is that the Soviet Union is in any way militarily superior to the United States. He went on to criticize Reagan's policies and warn of their disastrous potential. Reagan still didn't listen.

William Colby, former director of the CIA has testified that the U.S. and the Soviet Union are now at a level of nuclear parity. Countless numbers of former government officials have said that a virtual parity of nuclear superiority exists, but Ron is too busy playing propaganda games with the Russian government.

Equally impressive statistics can be given to support either Soviet or American nuclear superiority. The fact is that both countries possess an immeasurable amount of destructive power — killing power. The weapons are for offense, not defense. We, the television generation, have been socialized and politicized to believe that the Soviet government is the only one that takes part in covert operations to overthrow or suppress foreign powers — like Afghanistan. But our government (CIA) does the same things, ask an American Indian, or someone from Viet Nam, Lybia, El Salvador or Nicaragua, except we justify it in the name of national interest.

My point is not in any way to condone the actions of the Soviet government, but to tell the people to go beyond what Reagan says and watch his actions. Read between the lines. He is an actor who is very good at using the mass media to convince his audience. Research the topic, read books, go to a nuclear awareness lecture. The fate of our lives is very much at stake.

Maybe Reagan has one good idea though. If we let prayer back in (public) schools, all the kids can pray that he doesn't get us all killed. Brian Blank, Junior, Economics.

Birth control usage overemphasized do not just drop them.

In the article, the subject of birth control usage was mistakenly emphasized. Though we have our own views, they are not reflected in how we treat a woman who comes to us. We accept women where they are at and try to help them any way we can. We do not "come down" or judge them because of their past. We do suggest abstinence, however, if the woman has a negative pregnancy test and she does not want to be pregnant.

Finally, the quote of "right now our value system is, if it feels good, do it" should only be taken in the whole context of what was said. I was making a personal observation of how I view societal values today. Birthright, nor I, hold this value system.

We at Birthright feel there are much better choices than abortion and offer caring, friendship, and support to help a woman through her pregnancy. — Joan Davis, Director, Birthright.

Specialist says old strip mines should be reclaimed as parks

By Michele Inman
Staff Writer

Efforts to reclaim mined land should include reclaiming land for wildlife as well as for farm crops, says a leading wildlife specialist.

W.D. Klimstra, director of the SIU-C Cooperative Wildlife Research Laboratory, said he believes wildlife habitats can often fit into a reclamation plan better, and at less expense, than agricultural uses.

Klimstra, professor of zoology, said reclaiming abandoned mined lands is not in competition with other land uses. Also, there is an enormous public interest in utilizing these lands for recreation.

The wildlife research laboratory is involved in various reclamation projects in Illinois to reclaim mined land for wildlife.

"We are interested in abandoned mined lands that weren't subjected to recent reclamation laws. We're looking at these as being useful for wildlife to offset the continual clearing of habitat for liberal reclamation requirements," Klimstra said.

"The economics of this reclamation effort reflect our desire to revegetate lands without having to cover them with four feet of soil, which is required by state and federal regulations for reclaiming prime farmlands. This is immensely costly because it requires that a great deal of soil be moved with heavy equipment."

Projects are being conducted at Southwestern Coal Corporation mine site in Sparta, the Little John area in west central Illinois properties of AMAX Coal Corporation near Ocala, Ill. and Evansville, Ind., and two mine sites of the Monterey Coal Co. in Macoupin County.

New technology to be shown

Students and faculty will have an opportunity to observe examples of industry's newest technology at a conference from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. April 12 in the Student Center Ballrooms.

About 40 companies are scheduled to present programs on "State-of-the-Art High Technology," including McDonnell-Douglas, 3-M Corp., Radio Shack, IBM, Heathkit and Apple. SIU-C representatives will speak on machine tool and mining technology.

The conference is structured to include education, industry and government, according to Charlotte Ferketich, researcher

Research at the laboratory is funded by state and federal governmental agencies and the coal industry, Klimstra said. "The bulk of the financing is from the coal industry, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the Illinois Department of Conservation," he said.

"We have about $250,000 to $300,000 worth of contracts with the coal industry."

According to Klimstra, the major thrust of the laboratory has been reclaiming problem areas resulting from poor techniques in removing overburden to uncover coal and the consequences of processing coal.

"Right now we are dealing primarily with the problems of gob and slurry," he said.

Researchers in the lab, Klimstra said, have developed the ability to revegetate areas that are extremely toxic and unsightly.

The most successful tests, he said, have been with a type of wetlands grass known as reed grass.

"We've shown that reed grass can be utilized in reclaiming slurry areas," he said.

In Illinois, prior to its first surface mining act, 100,000 acres of land or more were mined with no criteria for reclamation. Since 1962, an additional 100,000 acres were mined, subject only to fairly liberal reclamation requirements, Klimstra said.

The Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977 set standards to reclaim these abandoned mined lands for purposes such as farming or recreation.

Since then, in Illinois, abandoned mined lands have been reclaimed successfully.

Klimstra said a once-presumed-extinct race of Canada geese, rediscovered about 20 years ago, has been successfully re-introduced within its former breeding range in areas of west central Illinois.

The area contained large acreages of wetlands, as a consequence of more than 40 years of surface mining, Klimstra said.

The legumes and grasses in the pastures and meadows, which were used for reclamation, have proved to be adequate nesting materials and cover for nesting and brood rearing.

Study abroad applications available

By Shelia Washington
Staff Writer

Applications are being accepted at the Office of International Education for full-time students who would like to study abroad in fall 1983 or spring 1984 through the International Student Exchange Program.

ISEP is a one-on-one exchange plan under which participants pay the equivalent of SIU-C tuition, room and board while earning credit transferable to SIU-C degree programs.

Unlike other direct-exchange programs where an international student changes places directly with an SIU-C student, the ISEP program, composed of various colleges and universities, could offer a student from France an education at SIU-C while an SIU-C student goes to England, said Thomas Saville, international opportunities adviser of International Education.

Saville said the Office of International Education hopes to nominate five SIU-C students during the coming year. He said a cumulative 3.25 grade point average and fluency in a foreign language are expected of students interested in the program.

Africa, Asia, Canada and Europe are among the regions available to participating students. Most study sites are universities, but institutions specializing in political science, international business, science and applied technology are also available.

Saville said that although travel cost is the responsibility of the student, applications for an international student identification card scholarship, separate from the ISEP program, are available at the Office of International Education to help students meet travel costs.

Travel-study course in Jamaica offered

By Julianna Anastasoff
Staff Writer

How would you like to spend summer school on an exotic island in the Caribbean, with warm breezes, cool calypso and sandy beaches surrounding you as you studied the history, people and culture of that region?

The Black American Studies Program at SIU-C, in cooperation with the Division of Continuing Education, is sponsoring two three-week travel-study sessions this summer in Jamaica at the University of the West Indies (Mona) campus.

The course has been designed by Locksley Edmondson, a Jamaican and chairperson of the BAS program. Edmondson, a UNESCO scholar and former Dean of Social Science at UWI, is recognized internationally as an expert on the socio-economic and political development of the Caribbean basin.

The coursework will be interdisciplinary in nature, covering historical, cultural, political, socio-economic and cultural themes.

The sessions will include lectures and discussions involving West Indian academicians and professionals, site visits and tours of historical and socio-economic significance at sugar plantations, bauxite mining and tourism operations, a Maroon community, a reconstructed Arawak Indian village, community development projects, museums and theaters.

Edmondson said the trip is a unique opportunity to gain firsthand experience of a Caribbean country in transition. Summer is an especially opportune time to observe and participate in the cultural life of Jamaica which comes to a peak in July and August with the annual Jamaica Festival celebrations, he said.

Jamaica will celebrate its 21st year of independence during this period.

The program is open to undergraduate and graduate students from any discipline and other interested individuals in the community at large, offering four credit hours at the 400-level. Students may also arrange for additional credit within their individual departments.

Edmondson stressed that because of the interdisciplinary nature of the coursework, this study trip is relevant to all students in the social sciences as well as to those in other fields such as education and communication.

The two sessions run from June 28 to July 19 and from July 20 to August 11. The cost of the land-based portion of the trip is $940, which includes lodging at UWI, organized field trips outside the Kingston area, airport transfers, honoraria, health insurance, four hours credit at SIU-C, and a contingency fee to be used only in the event of monetary market shifts and unforeseen cost increase.

Edmondson said that, given the deflating Jamaican dollar, a large portion of the $940 may be refundable. Financial aid is also applicable to the tuition fee.

The above fee does not include meals, which will be available on campus, local travel or round trip air fare.

Each group is limited to 20 students, and applications and inquiries may be directed to Edmondson at the BAS office or to James Osberg at the Division of Continuing Education.

Senior one of top cadets in country

By Doug Janvria
Staff Writer

A member of SIU-C's Army ROTC has been selected to attend the prestigious George C. Marshall Awards Conference to be held April 12-15.

Cadet Thomas M. Costello, senior in business administration, will be one of the select cadets from colleges across the nation to attend the conference, co-sponsored by the U.S. Army and the George C. Marshall Foundation.

According to Capt. Paul Raffaelli, the conference is intended to bring together future leaders of the Army and top Army officers of the present and past. Costello will be one of about 300 college seniors in ROTC selected to attend the conference.

The cadets are selected, one per ROTC detachment, by faculty members in the military science program and their decision is based on academic standing and on overall performance in ROTC.

"We take a look at the person as a whole, how he's working as a student, and how he's working with other cadets," Raffaelli said.

Surprise was Costello's first reaction to news of his award. "I was really surprised. I was just working one day and Capt. Winslow notified me that I had been selected for the award," he said.

Because of the newness of the military science program at SIU-C, there will be only the second cadet from SIU-C to have attended the conference, according to Costello.

Costello will be involved in roundtable discussions on topics of cadets' special interests. Also included on the program is a panel discussion of "The Military and the Media - National Will and Public Support" moderated by Julius D. Battle, chairman of the John S. Hopkins Foreign Policy Institute and former U.S. ambassador.

"The conference will be at the Virginia Military Institute, and that in itself is going to be kind of an interesting experience - to see what a military academy is like," Costello said.

This is the sixth year of the conference in honor of the late soldier-statesman and Army general, George C. Marshall.

Series of philosophy talks set

The Philosophy Department is sponsoring a series of three talks in April on topics ranging from "whistleblowing" to "transcendental reflection in Kant."

The lectures will be held Thursday, April 14 and 21 at 4 p.m. in 106 Faner Hall.

The first speaker on Thursday will be Gene G. James, managing editor of The Southern Journal of Philosophy. His topic is "In Defense of Whistleblowing," an attempt to ethically justify federal employees who report wrongdoing among their superiors, said John Howie, chairman of the Philosophy Department's colloquium committee.

Sandhya Basu, who has served as a reader for Baranasi Hindu University in Varanasi, India, will conduct the second talk April 14 on "Transcendental Argument and Arthapatti."

"The Problem of Transcendental Reflection in Kant" is the third topic. George J. Agich, an associate professor in medical humanities at the SIU Medical School in Springfield will be the speaker.

Agich is among a growing number of philosophy professors being hired at medical schools across the country.

Furs exhibit 'maniacal' drive

By Thomas Sparks
Entertainment Editor

"Beautiful chaos" is the way producer Steve Lillywhite chose to describe the Psychedelic Furs' stage show. That description is apt.

In a blistering, surprising, yet incredibly orchestrated performance at Shryock Auditorium Monday, the Furs, propelled by lead vocalist and poseur Richard Butler, kept the crowd on its feet for the duration of the show.

As the lights came up on a cluttered stage, the audience was drawn into a world of green swirling mist broken occasionally by two sweeping searchlights as Stravinsky's "The Rite of Spring" swelled from the speakers. From that point on, the show was reminiscent of the late 60s-early 70s so-called "art-rock" movement — a movement that was led by such notables as Peter Dinklage and Genesis, David Bowie and Marc Bolan.

Reminiscent is a misleading word, however. Butler and the Furs have taken the premise of a "complete" show and built upon it a performance they can call their own.

That performance presents a well-rounded view of the many facets of the Furs' music, from the wall-of-sound approach utilized on their earlier albums, to the more mainstream style adopted since their association with Todd Rundgren, producer of their latest album, "Forever Now."

Their style on vinyl has mellowed and become more optimistic over the last couple of releases, but their live show exhibits an intense, almost maniacal drive that should propel the Furs to further recognition much as it propelled the audience. Throughout the show, however, the cacophonous sound that is identified with the Furs was in strong evidence, and was further embellished through personnel additions on tenor sax and cello to the four-man lineup.

Butler, however, was the show. The remainder of the Furs more or less forms a backdrop for his antics and ability. The six musicians seldom moved from their places or exhibited much emotion — apparently they were content to provide the solid sound needed to back up a voice and presence as powerful as Butler's. The exceptions were Butler's brother Tim on bass and saxophonist Gary Windo (on loan for the tour from NRBQ).

Highlights of the evening were the opener, "Into You Like a Train," which set the mood of the show, from their first LP, and "Love My Way," "Sleep Comes Down" and "Goodbye," all taken from "Forever Now."

Throughout the performance, Butler appeared to be genuinely sincere while developing a rapport with audience — a rapport that grew so powerful that the Furs were called back to the stage for three encores and still left the crowd wanting more.

Returning for the first encore, Butler and crew ripped through the irreverent "Imitation of Christ." Following the second encore, the stage once again became submerged in green mist and searchlights to Stravinsky — a fitting closing. The audience wasn't leaving, however, and clamored for more even as the auditorium lights came up.

The band apparently hadn't had enough either as the lights went down again and they returned for the second performance that night of "Goodbye."

A major problem with the show, though, was the sound mixing. In an auditorium with acoustics as good as Shryock's, there is just no excuse for "muddy" sound. Yet both the Furs and opening act Divinyls had a mix that lost many of the highs and subtleties that would have made this show even better.

The Divinyls performance, overall, was no better or worse than most of the bands you could catch in any major city. With lead singer Christina Amphlett doing her best to appear sincere, yet failing, the band played 40 minutes of fairly indistinguishable music. If nothing else, they made the Furs look even better.

Production aimed at children slated for five performances

Costumes, color and music will highlight the Paradise Alley Players' production of "The Princess Who Wouldn't Smile" which will be presented at 9:30 a.m. and 1:15 p.m. Thursday and Friday at the Marion Civic Center.

"The Princess Who Wouldn't Smile" features the kind of tongue-twisting dialogue and slap-stick humor that is normally associated with W.C. Fields and the Marx Brothers yet is aimed at children.

The play is a traditional fairy tale and takes place in "The Flower Kingdom," a fantasyland in which the inhabitants are in charge of caring for all the flowers of the land.

But, all is not well, the king's daughter won't smile and so the king offers her hand in marriage to the man who can make her smile.

Over 3,000 children are expected to attend the annual children's theater event. Four shows will be presented for children from schools throughout the area.

A fifth show at 7:30 p.m. on Friday, was added for the general public. Tickets for this performance are $1 for adults or $50 when the adult is accompanied by a child.

Tickets for the evening performance may be purchased in advance at the Marion Civic Center. They will also be available at the door.

CCHS band halfway to 3rd state title

By Jeanna Hunter
Staff Writer

The Carbondale High School Music Department is well on its way to a third consecutive state championship. They have won the State Ensemble Contest, which is the first half of the title, and they will compete in the State Organizational Contest on April 23.

Originally, in the ensemble contest, CCHS was given a score of 495 points, but due to an error, the score was recalculated to 489. William Carson, director of the CCHS band, said. The higher score would have tied CCHS with the record score set by Macomb in 1977.

The bands are judged on the basis of tone quality, technique and musicality, with soloists being judged also on sight-reading ability and scales, said Carson.

The success of CCHS' music department is its diversity, he said. A lot of the students work in more than one area. He said that if the department continues to get that kind of support, it will continue to be successful.

Tuesday 99 members of the music department at the high school left for Florida for their annual tour, during which they will perform at Sea World, a church and a high school, Carson said. Time has also been allotted for an afternoon and evening of fun at Disney World.

The five-day trip, which will cost about $10,000, was funded by cheese and sausage sales and a skatathon sponsored by band members. The CCHS Music Boosters have also contributed money for the trip. Karen Johnson, Music Boosters publicity person, said.

University Chorale will present concert

The University Chorale will present a concert at 8 p.m. Wednesday in Shryock Auditorium.

The program will consist of spirituals, folk songs and other assorted selections by Rachmaninoff, Hindemith, Holst, Copland, Butler, Thompson and Persichetti.

The Chorale is directed by Conductor Robert Kingsbury and Assistant Conductor Michael Morris.

The concert is free and the public is invited to attend.

State needs a humane budget, says head of Human Services

By Sheila Washington
Staff Writer

Unemployment, increased utilities and higher rents are making families choose between eating and heating, according to Lenora Cartright, the keynote speaker Monday at "Illinois in '83: Service and Self-help," a four-day human resources conference.

"I'm very concerned that those of us in human services and social sciences are not aware that change is occurring. When we look around, things have already happened," said the commissioner of Chicago's Department of Human Services, the largest social service agency in the nation.

Cartright is the first woman to head the department, which coordinates, plans and monitors citywide delivery of social services through 24 neighborhood centers which provide assistance to about 250,000 Chicago families annually. She has implemented successful social service projects in Chicago and attained recognition in Who's Who in Black America, the Directory of Distinguished Americans and the International Who's Who of Intellectuals.

Cartright's social service call also addressed the national economy, which she coined as "doomsday budget policies that we are too familiar with."

"It is important to talk about budgets up front," said the University of Illinois assistant professor who has been on leave since accepting her position as commissioner.

Cartright said her position with government in Chicago, of which she is proud, is not one she sought. She said she was comfortable as an associate professor of urban planning and the active director of the school before becoming commissioner.

But because her work with Chicago communities programs gave her a perception of what was going on in Chicago, her job allowed her to take what she had learned back to her community planning and organizing classes at the University of Illinois with a better understanding of the problems. "You must not just sit back and read what is happening, but you should be concerned about making some things happen," she said. "You must address yourself as to where you stand, where your family stands and where those less fortunate stand in terms of state policies today in human service programs."

"In order to achieve the necessary funding, we must help the governor to understand the need for a more humane budget," said Cartright.

Cartright called for the end of insensitivities to human need in the nation as well as in Chicago.

She said she believes the test of national and local progress will be the ability to provide opportunities, skills, job options and education jointly and equally with services available to those who cannot help themselves.

"I don't want to see Chicago separate itself from the union," she said, "but in our program the least we can do is sustain an increasing population that cannot sustain itself. The most we can do is enhance it."

Travel in Europe still cheap for students, says professor

By Duane Schonbert
Staff Writer

While most students will work or attend school this summer, some may travel abroad.

In order to make the trip economical and enjoyable, Hans Jellen, assistant professor in educational leadership, offered some hints Thursday at the Hump Day lecture in the Student Center.

"A person can travel economically in Europe by planning and utilizing a variety of resources and travel options to make Europe affordable in times of economic instability and change," he said.

A certain amount of homework must be done before leaving for Europe, according to Jellen, who was born in Germany.

This homework, he said, includes getting a valid passport at the post office, packing the minimal amount of clothing, and obtaining an international student identification card and a sleeping bag.

The international student identification card enables a student to have access to such places as museums and concert halls in Europe, Jellen said. The card can be obtained from International Services, 910 S. Forest St. in Carbondale.

Jellen advised travelers to fly out of New York and to try to travel in a group. However, he said, if the group notion does not work out, then a person should go to each airline ticket counter and ask to be put on standby.

According to Jellen, this procedure is a good investment because on some flights a person can get a standby seat for $120 one way, which is a savings of about $400.

Once a person has arrived in Europe, Jellen suggested purchasing a Eurail Youthpass, which allows unlimited second-class travel in 16 countries.

He said a first-class Eurail ticket will cost about $50 more, but guarantees a seat for the ticket holder and enables access to luxurious Trans-European

Express trains, which are "beautiful trains with glass domes and reclining chairs."

"Most students who attend universities in Europe are on scholarships," Jellen said. "Since most of these students' programs are financed by the government, they travel extensively during summer break. Because of this, the trains are crowded, but with first-class a person is guaranteed a place to sleep."

Besides sleeping on the train to save money, Jellen said, a person can stay in a university dormitory for about $4 a night because most halls are empty during the summer months.

"I don't advise staying in a European hotel because the rates are very high," he said. "I have stayed in student housing in the past and it really works out beautifully. It's the cheapest way to go."

Jellen added that a university setting, in addition to having cafeteria facilities, allows a student to find peers with similar interests who know the city or country well.

Another reasonable accommodation is a Youth Hostel, which is a small dormitory facility, costing about $5 a night, Jellen said.

For additional travel tips, he said travelers should look into such reference books as the Michelin Guide and Let's Go to Europe, which provide highlights of European travel.

Another way to obtain tourist information, Jellen said, is to write to the tourist information center of a given country, the addresses of which can be found in Chicago or New York phone books available at Morris Library.

When meeting foreigners, Jellen advised, students should be polite and respectful because there is a cultural pride among European students.

"Learn to say, 'Hello, how are you?', 'yes', 'no' and 'Thank you,' in their native language," he said. "Many European students view Americans as being culturally arrogant, so don't wear a t-shirt with an American flag with a number one underneath it."

"Remember, a lot of central European universities are quite radical. As a matter of fact, some of them are hotbeds for leftist movements, so be sensitive about what you say and do."

To get a taste of Europe, the cities Jellen suggested seeing include Amsterdam, Paris, Rome, as well as taking a train into Berlin from any German city.

"Getting a look behind the Iron Curtain is an experience an American will never forget. It will make you recognize the kind of freedoms we enjoy here in America," he said. "Over there, huge mirrors are put under trains to check if people are hanging on to get out of the country. It's an eye-opener. Police come in, with no respect for human dignity or human individuality, and will screen a person's belongings thoroughly. It's a learning experience."

Author plans writers' club

By Beth Quick
Student Writer

Writers are independent people, but they need to interact with other writers for motivation and inspiration, says William Atkinson, a freelance writer who specializes in writing for business publications.

To give writers a way to interact, Atkinson wants to form a writer's club in the Carbondale area. He talked about it in a press conference with students in a journalism class.

Atkinson said the club would give writers the opportunity to mingle with other writers. Tips on writing techniques would be given at meetings by Atkinson and guest speakers.

Although fiction writing would not be ignored, he said, the main goal of the writer's club would be to teach club members how to write articles and make money doing it.

Atkinson, who lives in Murphysboro, is a 1973 graduate of SIU-C with a major in social studies education. He became interested in writing when his duties as personnel manager for a nursing home included writing.

He said he writes for a number of business magazines and is area correspondent for Time magazine. He has written a book titled "The Freelance Writer's Tax and Record-keeping Handbook," which will be published in September by Contemporary Books, Chicago.

Describing his life as a writer, Atkinson said, "I try to get most of my professional work done in the morning when I feel I am most effective."

"Most writers concentrate on the article and not on the publication," Atkinson said, "but the only way to success is to do the opposite."

He said it is more effective for writers to put all their energies into a few topics.

"Good, solid non-fiction writing is about 80 percent researching and interviewing, 15 percent organizing and 5 percent writing," Atkinson said.

Once a writer has done the research and interviewing, the organizing and writing fall into place, he said.

People interested in the proposed writer's club can call Atkinson at 684-3571.

Cardinals drop home opener

ST. LOUIS (AP) John Candelaria pitched a four-hitter, striking out 10, and Lee Lacy, Dale Berra, Lee Mazzilli and Jason Thompson homered, leading the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 7-1 Opening Day victory over the defending world champion St. Louis Cardinals.

Heavy rain throughout the morning and game-time temperatures in the low 50s held attendance Tuesday to 43,509 although the game in 50,122-seat Busch Stadium was a sellout.

The homers by Lacy, Berra and Mazzilli produced three runs off Bob Forsch, who walked four and yielded six hits in 5 1-3 innings. Thompson followed a walk to Mazzilli and Bill Madlock's single in the ninth with a three-run blast off Doug Bair.

Lacy homered on the game's second pitch, lining a Forsch fastball over the left field wall. After St. Louis tied it in the bottom of the first on George Hendrick's double, Pittsburgh went ahead to stay on Berra's shot in the fourth. Mazzilli homered in the fifth.

The Pirates added a run in the eighth on Tony Pena's foul sacrifice fly to right off Jim Kaat.

"Rosalyn Dunlap from Missouri," said Davis. "She ran with me over the summers with the Zephyrs. She's real good. I think she was second or third in the national meet in the 600."

Although Missouri Coach Dick Weis has listed Dunlap as questionable because of an injury, Davis may get a tussle from Eastern Illinois' Gail Stevens, a mighty fine 400-meter runner in her own right. "Sometimes, I just can't tell if I'm getting any better. I don't know, maybe I have a mind block or something," Davis said.

"Now I've got to run 53 seconds to make it to nationals. But that's not going to keep me from trying."

Price to miss NCAA meet

The men's gymnastics team was dealt some bad news just a few hours before leaving for the national championships at Penn State as Brendan Price was diagnosed as having mononucleosis.

Price was ranked as the top vaulter in the region, with teams from the four regions composing the NCAA field.

Coach Bill Meade left Tuesday morning for Penn State, before the gymnasts who were scheduled to leave at noon, and didn't find out until arriving that Price would not be making the trip.

Team competition starts Friday night, and Meade has until then to determine who will take the freshman's place. Two alternates, Murph Melton and Gregg Upperman, were scheduled to go, and Lawrence Williamson also went after learning of Price's illness.

Besides competing in vault, Price is also a strong performer in floor exercise and high bar.

Golfers end layoff with second

The men golfers managed to scrape the rust off their clubs long enough to get in 18 holes Monday at the Riverman Invitational, hosted by the University of Missouri at St. Louis.

Despite not playing for a week because of rain, coach Mary Beth McGirr's club chalked up a second place finish with a 315 total at the nine-team tournament, four strokes behind tournament leader SIU-Edwardsville.

The University of Missouri at Rolla finished third with a 320 mark, followed by Washington University (322) and UMSL.

breaking line centered by Dennis Savard.

Savard scored 35 goals and finished with a club record of 121 points.

"In this series, Savard obviously is the key," said Plager. "How do we stop him? You tell me. If you could stop him, he wouldn't have 121 points."

Tessier gets more satisfaction from Chicago's totals of goals scored and goals against. They finished with 338 goals, bettering the team record of 332

(325). The invitational field was rounded out by St. Louis University, Lincoln University, Culver-Stockton and McKendree College.

John Schaefer was the top scorer for SIU-C, shooting a 76 on the par 72, 6,500 yard course. Schaefer's score put him in a tie for third place overall, behind second-place finisher John Briski of Washington University, who shot a 75, and Kent Dinsdale of Missouri at Rolla, who parred the course to take first.

Scott Briggs was number two for the Salukis, tying for sixth with a round of 77. Tom Jones tied for 10th with a 78, while Rob Hammond shot an 84 and Jan Jansco notched an 87.

McGirr said the tournament was small, made up mostly of teams within two hours of UMSL, but it gave the SIU-C squad a chance to get in a round of golf.

"The weather wasn't real good, it was cool and windy, and the tournament wasn't real big," she said. "But at least it gave them a chance to play, which they haven't done in a week. It showed in their short game. All they really need is some nice weather to practice in."

Putting it all together isn't easy for Salukis' top quarter-miler

Fy Ken Perkins
Staff Writer

To Debra Davis, running the 400-meter race is a form of improvisation. Live. Unrehearsed. No room for shucking and jiving.

She's the athlete's athlete: fluent and undaunted; innovative and diligent; confident and cool. She works out hard and loves what she does.

Understanding the road to success in women's track and field is one of her virtues. Understanding why it has eluded her is one of her quests.

"I don't know what's wrong," says Davis, SIU-C record holder at 400-meters and No. 7 all-time Saluki point producer.

"I should be running 53-, 52-second quarters and I'm not. I don't know what it is. I don't know if it's me or what."

Her statistics say yes, it is her. But her smooth, effortless stride of the 1 lap event says no, there must be some mistake.

Since her freshman year two years ago, Davis has been trying to put the bits and pieces of her talent into the puzzle that spells All-American. And for two years, she has been a few pieces short.

If she could just make the cut, says Coach Claudia Blackman, she could wind up as one of the best.

But picking up a piece here and there is easier said than done. And Saturday she'll be running in her fourth meet of the outdoor season without a first class invitation to the NCAA meet.

"I'd love to make nationals," said Davis "just to see how far I can go, to see how good I really am. I just pray for a good day on a good track."

On a bad day Saturday in Indiana, she ran on a good track and captured the 400-meters in 56.47 seconds.

In Monroe, La., her first outdoor meet of the season, she ran her best time and demolished the field. It was a 55.06, a school record, and if the qualifying standards hadn't been lowered this year, she would have met her mark. Last year, she ran 55.2 in six consecutive meets. Qualifying was 55.1.

"That was so disappointing," she said.

Now that the Saluki women are competing in the NCAA and not the AIAW, the qualifying mark for the national meet is 53.47.

"I've ran 54s in the relays," said Davis. "I don't see why I can't run it in the open quarter."

Blackman, who saw Davis run a promising 55-second quarter her first year, said her tactics could be altered.

"I think one of her biggest weaknesses is a slow start," she said. "I don't know if it is because she's afraid of becoming tight at the end or not."

"Her finish is her strength," she continued. "She does that better than most quarter-milers."

But old habits are hard to break. Since her big days in little Harvey, Ill., Davis has been only doing what she was taught. To slice up her race like a piece of pie, run the curve, glide the straight away, conquer the back curve and run like hell the rest of the way.

It's hard to argue with Jane Dickens, coach of the Chicago-based Zephyrs Track Club, who has produced countless superstars and has coached Davis for two summers. Or even the Thornton High School boys track coach who saw Davis run a 400 for the first time. It was only 61 seconds, but she was only 15.

So it's like the back of her hand now and mighty hard to change ever, though she knows that the first part of her race may be the difference of a few seconds, seconds that can lower her time to 53.0.

"I know they are right," Davis said about the criticism. "Every meet I make up my mind to come out strong, but don't do it. At times, I've felt like I have started out at a fast pace. But if people still say I don't, I guess I don't."

Some of the blame could rest on the level of competition. Davis has been quite successful in winning races, but not lowering her time.

But Saturday is the Second Annual Dog and Cat Fight at McAndrew Stadium and there's one runner in particular Davis hopes will show up

'Racqueteers' want perfection

By George Pappas
Staff Writer

The overall goal of any racquetball player is to perfect the kill shot from anywhere on the court. But the time and practice needed to perfect this skill can take a couple of years of continuous playing.

The Saluki Racquetball Club takes this fact into account. The Salukis have gathered the 13 best players in SIU-C, pushed them to near perfection, and will go to Memphis, Tenn., this weekend for the American Amateur Racquetball Association Championships.

Last year, the Salukis tied for third in the nation. Quite an accomplishment for a club that started in 1977.

That third place finish was the highlight of Coach Bruce Zamost's career at SIU-C. He has coached the Salukis since the club's inception.

"We could have won it all," said Zamost, "but a couple of our key players choked in the semi-finals."

Memphis State went on to win the championship for the tenth consecutive year.

"They have the biggest racquetball program in the U.S.," Zamost said. "They also have the most exclusive tennis and racquetball club."

Nevertheless, Zamost is expecting a good show from his team. The Salukis have a first and second men's team, and one women's team. The number one seeded player on the Salukis, as well as in Southern Illinois, is Bobby Clar. Clar proved his number one spot by placing first in the Saluki Open over the past weekend.

"Bobby can sure play," Zamost said. "He has a great backhand and can play the corner shots very well. He should do good in Memphis."

Seeded second on the men's first team is Greg Smolens. The number one doubles team consists of Kirk Post and Chris Warlick. Tony Boyd is the independent player for the Salukis.

"This is the best team I've ever had," Zamost said. "They really have a great perspective of the game."

The one and two seeded players on the second team are Rob Roberman and Don Thalman respectively. The second doubles team consists of Mike Klien and Bill Meade.

The women's team has a rookie lineup. Last year, Zamost said, a couple of the guys choked in the finals, but the women came through to help the Salukis gain third place. Seeded one and two for the women are Bridget Coomber and Kim DuShane respectively. The doubles team consists of Candi Conwell and Patu Reilly.

The winning school in the AARA championships will receive a $10,000 scholarship. "Now you see why Memphis has such a great team," Zamost said. "They keep winning that scholarship."

The winners of the championship will not only get the money, but an automatic chance to qualify for the U.S. Olympic Racquetball Team. They'll get a free ride to Denver, Co. where they'll work out in the Olympic training club in Denver.

Before a student can start for the Salukis, he must play on the team for two semesters.

"It's the ladder game," Zamost said. "You start at the bottom and climb your way up."

Along with Memphis State, other teams expected to finish well are Penn State, Illinois and Air Force, Zamost said.

Zamost's overall view of the championships: "If our rookie women win a few, we will do great and place in the top three again."

Baseball, softball games rained out

Both the baseball and softball teams had games rained out Tuesday, and the prospects for playing Wednesday look bleak as well.

Coach Ichy Jones' team was washed out of a doubleheader with Evansville, and have now played only one game in the last 11 days. Bad weather has taken a big chunk of the team's current homestand. SIU-C will try to make the games up Wednesday at 1:30 p.m. at Abe Martin Field.

If that doesn't work out, the Salukis will make a stop in Evansville Thursday, on their way east. SIU-C is scheduled to play a four-game series with Miami of Ohio Friday and Saturday.

The softball team watched the rains wipe out its trip to Cape Girardeau to play Southeast Missouri. Coach Kay Brechtelsbauers' team will have to wait until Friday for its next game. The Salukis will participate in the Illinois State Redbird Invitational in Normal on Friday and Saturday.

The softballers will be trying to improve a .95 record.

Jones' team carries an 11-8 mark.

Hawks, Blues face off in playoff opening round

CHICAGO (AP) — Coach Orval Tessier, the Chicago Black Hawks' taskmaster, isn't going to make any changes when his Norris Division champions take on the St. Louis Blues Wednesday night in the opening round of the Stanley Cup playoffs.

"St. Louis will have to adjust to our style, not us to their style," said Tessier before the opening of the preliminary best-of-5 series.

"But playoffs are different and there's different pressure," said Tessier. "If we drop one home game, we'll be in a tough position because the third and fourth games will be in St. Louis."

Actually, the Black Hawks, who had a 6-2 edge over the Blues during the regular season, are hoping there will not be a fourth game let alone a fifth.

They would like to win both games at home Wednesday and Thursday nights and lock up the series in St. Louis Saturday night. If a fourth game is necessary it will be played in St. Louis Sunday night. If the series goes five games the final will be in Chicago next Tuesday night.

The Hawks, who finished first with 104 points, eight more than runnerup Minnesota, closed the regular season with a 7-2 victory over the Blues after suffering a 4-2 loss in St. Louis the night before.

Coach Barclay Plager, whose Blues finished fourth in the division with 65 points, called it "a nothing game. That was the end of the season. But there's another season coming up and we have to think about that."

"If I lost 7-2, I'd call it a nothing game, too," said Tessier. "We lost a hockey game Saturday night and I could have said it was meaningless. But I said I was ashamed, we could have worked harder."

To make sure there are no mistakes in the playoffs, Tessier had a workout Monday and sent his players carrying notes about the Blues.

They contained all the vital statistics concerning the Blues — goals, assists, plus-minus ratings, penalty-minutes, power-play goals, shorthanded goals, shots and percentages.

"I want each of our players to go through every one of the St. Louis players with a fine-tooth comb," said Tessier. "Then I'll ask them questions on those statistics and I want the right answers."

Tony Esposito and Murray Bannerman will share Chicago's goaltending duties as they have all season but Plager's big fear is the record
