Student trustee candidate's petition rejected

Signatures invalidated by lack of social security numbers; Arnoldi to file grievance

By Dave Katzman
DE Associate Editor

A petition filed by a student for the student trustee position was rejected by the election commission because of alleged false and missing information on it.

Troy Arnoldi, a senior in speech communications from South

Roxana, said he turned in 220 signatures to the Student Trustee Election Commission for placement on the April 17 ballot, 20 more than is required. He received a letter at the commission meeting Tuesday stating that a number of invalid signatures — signatures with incomplete information, incorrect identification numbers or of non-students — dropped the total number of signatures below 200.

Arnoldi said he checked the invalid signatures and found many of them listed in the University Directory. He said several of the invalid signatures were from people in his classes.

"I don't know the process they go through to identify (authenticity), but if I could go through a campus phone book to find these students, then something's wrong with this process," he said.

Arnoldi, a member of the Saluki Party, said there are 209 valid signatures on his petition, not including several illegible signatures he could not verify.

Patrick Smith, chair of the Student Trustee Election Commission, said all procedures stated in the commission's bylaws were followed correctly.

He said all valid signatures also have to have a printed name and identification number following them.

"Although he may have found one or more signatures of people who he believed were students at the time, the signatures didn't have corresponding ID numbers following them," Smith said.

"The bylaws are very explicit that there must be 200 signatures, and

Liquor fee law received well by businesses

Plane carrying Brown lacked safety devices

Newsday

The military version of the Boeing 737 that crashed in a Croatian hillside with Commerce Secretary Ron Brown aboard carried no ground proximity warning system, a safety device required on commercial jets and installed on most other Air Force airlift jets.

The plane, which the Air Force calls a T-43A, also carried no voice and data recorders, the so-called "black boxes," which could make solving the mystery of Wednesday's crash more difficult. It will also probably shed no new light on some recent mysterious crashes of Boeing 737s that have cast a shadow on an otherwise reliable and relatively safe 25-year flying record.

The Air Force, which operates just two passenger-carrying versions of the jet, never retrofitted

Media tours Crab Orchard incinerator

Residents repeat concerns about dioxin emissions

By Lisa M. Pangburn
Daily Egyptian Reporter

If the public is educated on incineration of toxic waste at a local site, there will be less for the public to be concerned about, site authorities say.

The first tour of an incineration site at Crab Orchard Wildlife Refuge was given Wednesday to area media by representatives of the U.S. EPA, the Fish and Wildlife Service and Schlumberger Industries, Inc., owners of the incinerator.

"One of the reasons we held this media tour was so the public could understand more of what is going on out here," Leanne Moore, of the Fish and Wildlife Service, said. "People need to understand this incineration is necessary so the PCBs do not contaminate the wildlife."

PCBs (polychlorinated biphenyls), a form of toxic waste, were dumped into Crab Orchard Lake as a result of a bomb-making project during World War II. The incinerator would burn-contaminated soil to get rid of the toxins.

Man environmentalists have pressed opposition to the incinerator because burning PCBs would create dioxin, known to cause cancer.

The tour consisted of viewing the incinerator and then viewing the contaminated soil surrounding the site, located in the center of the closed part of the Refuge, about 100 yards south of Crab Orchard Lake.

Nan Gowda, the U.S. EPA's technical contact, said even though incineration is expensive, tests prove it is the best choice.

"The EPA has done many tests on the cost of incineration, and this is the most practical and safe way of removing the PCBs from the soil," he said.

Richard Davis, a representative from Schlumberger, said the cost of incineration from 1984, when contamination was discovered, until the incineration process is completed, will be approximately $42 million.

Davis said a trial run of the incinerator will be done towards the end of April and full incineration will begin in May if the trial goes well.

Gowda said the trial run will be done with contaminated soil.

"The soil we will use will be spiked, or extra contaminated, so we will test the effects of a worst condition scenario," he said.

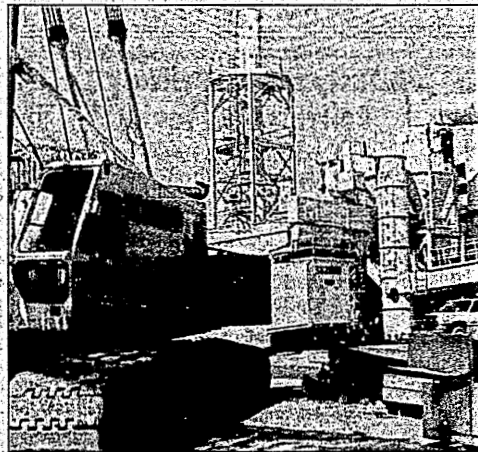

Barbara McKasson, from

Makanda, said she thinks the authorities are not treating the site seriously enough.

"They are going on the assumption that there will be uniform contamination of the soil," she said. "However, it is very unlikely that all the soil will be equally contaminated, so it is very unlikely that all of the PCBs will burn completely."

Mark Sattelburg, of Fish and Wildlife Services, said it is better to remove the PCBs now than to let the PCBs get into the food chain.

LISA M. PANGBURN — The Daily Egyptian

Construction workers put the finishing touches on the Crab Orchard incinerator Wednesday. Some residents have voiced concerns about the safety of the facility, which is known to emit dioxins and other chemicals.

RUSSIAN MEDIA SIDE WITH PRESIDENT YELTSIN — MOSCOW—The leading presidential candidate of a large country visits the heartland in his first campaign swing. Elections are just 11 weeks away. In most countries with a free press, this would qualify as news. Not in Russia. Anyone watching Russian television last week could be excused for not noticing that the Russian presidential front-runner, Communist Party leader Gennady Zyuganov, had launched his campaign in Siberia. As Russia's presidential campaign quickens, some of the country's most prominent journalists and media executives have been recruited and have openly joined President Boris Yeltsin's reelection campaign. They cite the threat of a Communist comeback — and the potential Soviet-style crackdown on the media they say would surely follow — to justify their break with what they regard as the high-minded notions of Western-style, independent media.

CHINESE ORPHANS NEGLECTED BY GOVERNMENT — BEIJING—In a lengthy report on the status of the China's 300 million children — one-fifth the world's total — the government on Wednesday acknowledged "much room for improvement," particularly in the areas of rural education and care for the disabled. But the report released here by China's State Council strongly denied allegations by a New York human rights organization that infants admitted to state orphanages are victims of systematic neglect resulting in many unnecessary deaths. The Jan. 7 study by Human Rights Watch cited government statistics to show that more than half of the children admitted to state orphanages ultimately die there. China last year became the largest source of adopted children to the United States.

NIGERIAN OIL SHORTAGE LEAVES PEOPLE IN LINE — LAGOS, Nigeria—Drivers suffered in mile-long lines last month at gas stations around Nigeria, Africa's leading petroleum producer. Fights exploded. Some patrons were trapped in line for days. The chaos signaled another fuel shortage for Africa's most populous nation, where government mismanagement has so poisoned the petroleum industry that Nigerians must endure several such crises yearly. The repeated shortages have become a potent symbol for what ails Nigeria, one of the few major oil-producing countries forced to import fuel. Analysts say the short answer is that Nigeria's military regime has mismanaged important aspects of the industry. Critical pipelines remain unfinished. Fuel depots are constantly being repaired. An inefficient distribution system means some parts of the country are without fuel for days.

NEW EGGS STUDY OKS PROTEIN 'POWERHOUSE' — The "incredible, edible" egg had an untarnished reputation as an inexpensive powerhouse of protein — until cholesterol became a household word. But there is some encouraging scientific news from the cholesterol front: The cholesterol that we eat is probably not responsible for clogging arteries in healthy people. The cholesterol that is present in some foods, such as eggs, may raise blood cholesterol only slightly in many people, research studies now suggest. Saturated fats, which are found mostly in animal foods and some vegetable foods, including coconut oil, raise the cholesterol level in the blood more than high-cholesterol foods do.

DEM SENATORS URGE DOLE TO OPEN RECORD — WASHINGTON—A group of Democratic senators Tuesday urged Majority Leader Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., to take the secrecy out of an arcane Senate practice allowing individual senators to hold up action on legislation. With the support of Minority Leader Thomas A. Daschle (S.D.), Sens. Ron Wyden (Ore.), Bob Kerrey (Nebr.), Harry M. Reid (Nev.) and Byron L. Dorgan (N.D.) urged Dole in a letter to honor "holds" on bills only when senators who request them disclose their identity in the Congressional Record. A bipartisan health care bill was held up for months recently when "revolving holds," initiated by a changing cast of senators, presumably Republicans, were placed on the legislation to delay action. Eventually, the holds were lifted, and Dole has scheduled the bill for consideration after the Senate returns April 15 from its Easter-Passover break.

Education funding too vague—legislators

Edgar's proposed constitutional amendment initiative might not make it to the ballot

By Donita Polly
DE Politics Editor

Gov. Jim Edgar's proposed constitutional amendment initiative that would have changed the way education is funded in Illinois was too vague and left too many questions unanswered, local legislators say.

Edgar's proposed amendment would have funded education by lowering property taxes and possibly raising income taxes.

The amendment was recommended by the Commission on Education

Funding, which was appointed by the governor.

The amendment would have provided a property tax relief of $1.5 billion but could have resulted in a $400 million tax hike.

Although the amendment received early opposition from Senate President James "Pat" Philip, R-Wood Dale, and House Speaker Lee Daniels, R-Elmhurst, supporters hoped to get it on the November ballot. A Senate caucus discussed the initiative this week, but there was not enough support for it to be carried through to a vote.

Paty Schuh, spokeswoman for Philip, said the senator did not support the initiative because it did not give voters the information they needed about how the proposal would affect voters' pocketbooks.

Sen. Dave Luechtefeld, R-Okawville, said the governor's proposed amendment introduced things that needed to be addressed, such as high property taxes and the uneven funding among Illinois school districts.

However, he said vague wording resulted in its Senate defeat. "Unless things change drastically, I don't think this thing will be on the ballot," he said.

Because of the initiative's vague wording and the questions it raised but left unanswered, Luechtefeld said it was difficult to support.

He said although the governor's initiative is not supported, the House is attempting to deal with parts of the initiative in different ways. "The issues are now in front of the people, and the people will demand that we do something about those issues," he said.

Rep. Mike Bost, R-Murphysboro, said he did not support the governor's initiative because of the effects it would have on his district. He said the initiative could have resulted in an increase not only in income taxes but property taxes as well.

He said some schools in his district would have been hurt if the initiative was passed.

Bost said because of the initiative's vagueness, it left too much to the Illinois Supreme Court's discretion.

Guyon says budget bleak for next year

By Signe K. Skinion
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The current state of the University is "bleak" but is expected to get better, SIUC Chancellor John C. Guyon told members of the Graduate and Professional Student Council at its Wednesday night meeting.

Guyon said the University will face monetary tough times next year, but things should look better after 18 months.

"After 18 months, enrollment will have turned around by the recruitment and retention efforts and the demographic rises of incoming freshmen," he said.

Guyon said SIUC is facing five monetary problems that are being worked on. The five problems include:

- This year's budget shortfall because of low student enrollment;
- An estimated low enrollment for next year;
- Student tuition waivers;
- A contingency fund, and
- SIU President Ted Sanders' Budget and Planning Document, which requires a monetary reserve for University priorities.

Guyon said the University projected 200 to 300 fewer students this year than in 1995. However, the actual number was 750, therefore creating a larger gap in expected tuition for the University's base budget.

Guyon said the monetary problems from low enrollment were solved by taking money from empty University staff positions. He said that by next fall, the University will have to continue to leave unstaffed positions open to make up for the projected shortfall.

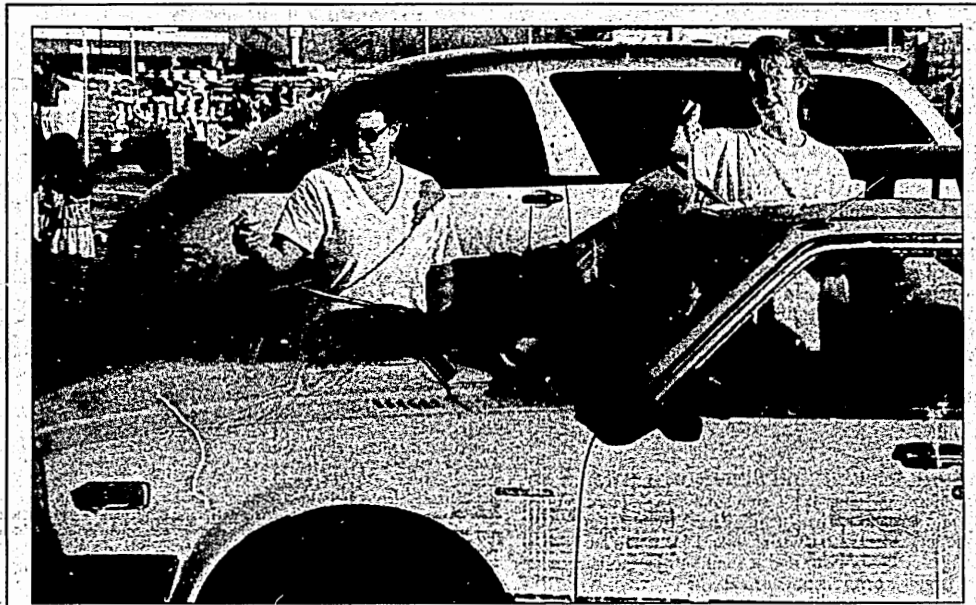

"The on-campus undergraduate enrollment shortfall projected for next year will make the University find about $3 million," he said. "One way to meet this is by not filling positions and collect the money from the staff fund for those positions."

Guyon said to meet the University's priorities, 1 percent of the University's base budget must be set aside. He said through state appropriation, SIUC will receive $1.4 million, which is equal to the 1 percent that is needed and will be used for University priorities.

Guyon said another monetary concern facing the University is the contingency fund to be used for unexpected emergencies next year.

Guyon said $2.8 million dollars will be put in the contingency fund from the departments and cannot be expended unless an emergency arises.

"After January 1, 1997, if the

WSIU suffers budget cuts, needs support

By C Kuhlmeier
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Both WSIU's television and radio stations are relying more heavily on public support to help make up for federal budget cuts, WSIU FM's station manager says.

The radio station will be having its annual fund raiser April 13-22. Tom J. Godell, WSIU radio station manager, said at least one-third of the station's $600,000 budget must come from private citizens and businesses.

"The federal government has cut our funding for this fiscal year by 12 percent," he said. "Even though we receive state and University funding, it still is not enough to both pay our bills and keep the same quality of programming. We've scaled back our budget as much as we possibly can without having to take programs off of the air."

"We've scaled back our budget as much as we possibly can without having to take programs off of the air."

Godell said the federal government cut the WSIU-FM's 1996 budget from $129,256 to $115,051, a decrease of $14,205.

Yana Davis, corporate support manager at WSIU FM, said that while state and federal support has decreased, private funding has increased.

"In the last five years, individual support has doubled, and corporate support has quadrupled," he said.

"Support has gone up, but funding cuts have made us rely more on public support. It is a sizable amount of funding from a market of this size."

Godell said this year's pledge drive will affect the station's programming for the next several years.

"By the end of the drive, we'll know if the listeners are willing to support the station," he said. "Times are tough because 20 years ago, stations could run on state and federal funds."

The television station, which held a fund-raising drive in February, fell short of its goal and now is looking for solutions to its budget problem. Bob Gerig, acting director and TV manager of WSIU, said.

The fund-raiser was for both WSIU-TV and WUSI-TV, an affiliated University station in Olney. He said the station hoped to raise $90,000, but it only received $74,500 in public support.

"We have secured our budget for this year," he said. "Beyond that, we're not sure what course of action we will have to take to alleviate the funding problem."

Gerig said to cut expenses, the station may shorten its broadcasting schedule. Because the station has to buy most of its programs from outside sources, such as PBS, he said

Altercation between student groups settled

SIUC football players and fraternity members meet to resolve differences

By Lisa M. Pangburn
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Two sides met Wednesday night to resolve the altercation between some fraternity members and several members of the SIUC football team that occurred at a dance March 23.

The altercation took place March 23 at Lincoln Middle School, 501 S. Washington St., when members of the football team requested to be let into an event, sponsored by several fraternities, for free.

On Tuesday, Watson said he just wants to end the problem positively. "What I am hoping to do by this meeting is bring the problem to a positive conclusion," he said. "I am trying to get the two sides together and make it a good situation for everyone."

The meeting Wednesday lasted approximately one hour.

Cedric Kenner, an SIUC football player, said he would like to approach this as a student issue, rather than Greeks versus football players. "We didn't want this issue to be blown out of proportion," he said. "We just want to resolve everything."

Alphie Patterson, president of Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity, said he thought the meeting was very positive and productive. "Resolutions have been made and future meetings will be held to iron out any questions," he said.

USG referendum on student fees does not go far enough

SIUC'S FINANCIAL PROBLEMS ARE MAKING their way to student pocketbooks. The SIU Board of Trustees has already approved a $34.50 student-fee increase for the next school year and is working on raising the fees another $43.50 the year after that. Both of these raises exceed the 3-percent guideline on fee increases the Illinois Board of Higher Education recently adopted.

Now the Undergraduate Student Government is considering calling for a referendum to determine if students want the increases to stay within the 3-percent cap. We think it's important to get student input on serious issues such as fee increases, but as it stands, the proposed referendum should be improved.

The proposed referendum shows the fee increases broken down into separate items such as campus recreation and Student center fees. This allows students who probably haven't seen these figures see them for the first time. More importantly, however, it allows the student body to tell the BOT whether it believes going above 3 percent on the increases is justifiable to keep services intact. Here's where we believe the referendum is flawed:

The referendum states that "revenue losses from a lower increase in student fees could be balanced by increased revenues and/or decreased operating costs," and that "reducing the administration's 4.47-percent fee increase below 3 percent will have undetermined ramifications affecting the student body." Did you have to read that last sentence twice? We did.

WE BELIEVE THE REFERENDUM WOULD BE more honest and clear if it stated something along the lines of "some services on campus may have to be cut to reduce the fee increase to the IBHE standard." The fee increase is already a complex issue and it shouldn't be muddled with more jargon when it is not needed.

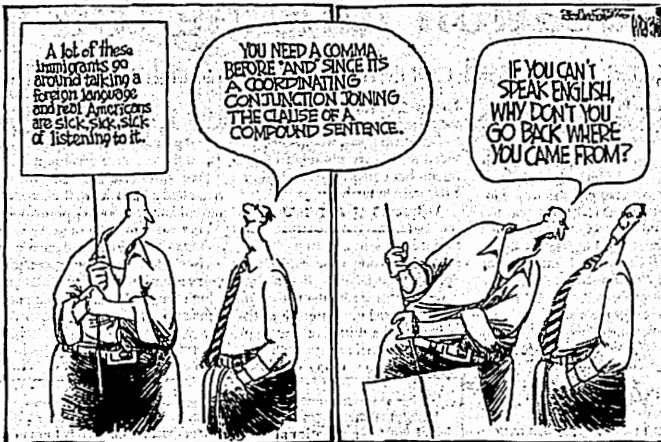

USG should also improve the referendum by evaluating individual fee increases to determine if they are justified, and placing what they believe are the least valid increases on the referendum. What about the athletic-fee increase that has been raised two consecutive years despite a student referendum that opposed the first increase? SIUC's administration projects that the athletic fee will continue to rise by at least 7.4 percent every year into the next century.

Regardless of whether the referendum changes, we encourage students to participate and vote for keeping the increases within the 3 percent limit.

One of the reasons the IBHE implemented the 3-percent rule was to keep the price of education from skyrocketing. A student who enrolled at SIUC four years ago pays $181.50 more per year in fees than he or she did the first year. Keeping higher education affordable should be a priority for the administration, and the 3-percent rule is a good guideline to accomplish this.

Another reason the rule was made was to keep costs down for the Illinois Student Assistance Commission, the state agency that funds many grants and loans for state schools. To give incentive for schools to follow the cap, the rule states that 20 percent of any funds obtained with the portion of a fee increase above 3 percent must be given to the commission. Larry Juhlin, vice president of Student Affairs, points out that since many SIUC students are funded through the commission, some of this money makes its way back to SIUC. We think it would still be better to keep fees down to a point that allows the University to keep all the money fees bring in.

USG should use the next week to improve the referendum.

Letters to the Editor

Reader: Do you honor your God?

It was said by a close friend of mine that our lives preach. What is your life saying? "You who brag about the law, do you dishonor God by breaking the law? As it is written: 'God's name is blasphemed among the Gentiles because of you.'" (Romans 3:23-25, Isaiah 52:5) Do you claim to be a Christian and not follow God's law? Do you not know that this is what fuels the hatred that people in the world have for Christ?

Those of you who are fooled into believing you are saved or just "not going to hell" should look at what your life is preaching. "The acts of the sinful nature are obvious: Sexual immorality, impurity and debauchery; idolatry and witchcraft; hatred, discord, jealousy, fits of rage, selfish ambition, dissensions, factions and envy; drunkenness, orgies, and the like. I warn you, as I did before, that those who live like this will not inherit the kingdom of God." (Galatians 5:19-21) If these are still present in your life, then you should be concerned. "Surely the arm of the Lord is not too short to save, nor his ear to dull to hear. But your iniquities have separated you from your God; your sins have hidden his face from you, so that he will not hear." (Isaiah 59:1-2) Not only should this make you think, but it should bring you to action to change your life.

Some may think these letters are offensive. I'm not judging anyone because the same words that judge you judge me. "Even if I cause you sorrow by my letter, I do not regret it. Though I did regret it - I see that my letter hurt you, but only for a little while - yet now I am happy, not because you were made sorry, but because your sorrow led you to repentance. For you became sorrowful as God intended and so were not harmed in any way by us. Godly sorrow brings repentance that leads to salvation and leaves no regret, but worldly sorrow brings death." (2 Corinthians 7:8-10)

Ads exploiting women profit from society's ills

I am writing to protest the trashy ads that have appeared in the Daily Egyptian lately. I am referring to the Niki Knockers and Upper Deck ads that feature women used as objects to attract business. This exploitation does nothing but encourage the view that women are little more than toys, an attitude that is the basis for many problems in our society, instead of the wonderful creation by God that we all are.

Editorial fails to reflect town meeting's history

With regard to the Daily Egyptian editorial on April 1, "Failed meeting fault of students and city," there are two serious misconceptions I would like to set straight.

First: The Citizens Advisory Committee, though appointed by the mayor, is an independent advisory body. We set our own agenda created from our citizen's perspective, not that of the mayor. The committee, not city officials, decided that we should get input directly from Carbondale residents through neighborhood "town meetings." We have held meetings in the northeast, the southwest and the northwest. We will hold one in the southwest in May.

The DE has reported on some of these. It was our committee's decision that we should also hold a town meeting on campus to get student-resident input.

Second: As to the lack of advanced notice. At our January meeting we decided that the campus meeting should be on March 28 so proper publicity could get out after Spring Break.

Chuck Van Rossum, a committee member, contacted Student Affairs in late January about the March meeting and told them the meeting would be held in Grinnell Hall. On his advice, I sent a formal request to Harvey Welch, Student Affairs vice president, on Feb. 2.

Although he did not reply, I assumed that all was clear. Our committee would have preferred a more central place, such as the Student Center, but expected that concerned students would meet wherever.

Later we were told we made a mistake in choosing a Thursday night meeting because Thursday was "party night," and students wouldn't miss partying.

Concerned about advance publicity, I contacted the DE in February and was told that a story would go into the paper the day before the meeting. It actually was printed the day of the meeting.

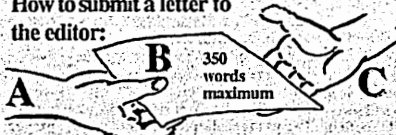

We on the CAC are not familiar with the campus procedures. We assumed that once a meeting on matters of concern to students was scheduled, the University administration and student organizations would expedite the matter.

Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

Ignorance will hurt U.S.

The shift in the economy is a development that most Americans see but may not know how to adequately assess. It is the manifestation of what has been called "New World Order" by the Masons since early America. What is the New World Order and how should we view it?

There are two things that Americans must see, whether they be white, African American, Chicano, etc., in reference to the New World Order so that we may use such an idea to our benefit.

The prominent idea of the new World Order can be seen in light of the establishment of one world government. It was the desire of this country's founders as we can observe on such documents as the dollar bill in the words of Novus Ordo Seclorum, i.e. New World Order. We see the establishment of trading blocks and the movement of democracy away from the people and to large executive bodies that establish international agreements such as GATT (General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs) and NAFTA (North American Free Trade Agreement), the movement of decisions to such levels defeats a coherent idea of democracy and reduces it to myth-like proportions.

If this seems unbelievable ask the 70 percent of the Mexican agricultural work force that has been displaced by the imposition of American products with the NAFTA agreement (free trade for multinational corporations). Such developments represent key steps toward new World Order.

The shift of the American economy, according to the University of Chicago School of Public Policy, from industrial to service will place the one-third of the African-American population who are in poverty into a permanent reserve army of labor.

This represents over 13 million people, but it's just an indication of the nation's social challenge. With this it should be no surprise that prisons are the fastest growing industry in the urban industrial complex.

K. Jamal Isma'il

Perspectives

The third world model, which is defined by a small elite group of wealthy land owners controlling masses of superfluous populations who are on drugs, dying with disease, living in poverty/ignorance, being adopted by the United States shows that the focus is moving from nationalism to internationalism. Indubitable examples of this are the sectioning of the world into trade blocks and the conferences for the unification of Europe. NATO, which is in essence an international white army, has been key in this process, as well the United Nations, which is European controlled. These are the essentials of recognizing the character of the New World Order.

Secondly, the demand that it places on the average individual and community is simple. We must, on a grassroots level, develop a system of community control and progress that focuses on community development.

Communities are always and have always been more important than nations. The African-American community has been in the Americas long before there was any such thing as the United States. It will, with careful community management, be here when there is inevitably no United States on the earth. This means that humanitarian enterprises must be seen as favorable, as well as working for AT&T or McDonnell Douglas.

The most threatening thing to the African-American community is the drug culture, which is essential to establishing the third world model in America. We must socialize our community away from crime and immorality through moral/self-education, the growing prison complex depends heavily on the continuity of crime and immorality in our community.

The New World Order (the old order, new face) will seek the ultimate end of its racist philosophy (genocide) unless we can harness and manifest the ideas of such men as Booker T. Washington, Marcus Garvey and the Hon. Elijah Muhammad. These are men who demanded of us self-education and the establishment of a coherent community life.

We must see the New World Order as good in the sense that it recognizes the importance of the oneness of humanity, but as misguided because it intends to manipulate that realization into a fascist system in which the G-7 (world's richest countries) consolidate to decide the world's fate. The reality of democracy is fading quickly with such prospects.

We mustn't, then, see racism as our greatest problem but immorality, ignorance, misdirected education and family dysfunction as the main targets of our energies.

Those who see my explanations as polemical or extreme, may research this in literature expounded by the University of Chicago School of Public Policy, or in the works of various authors published by Third World Press. Those Americans who wish to be ignorant and free will be this nation's downfall.

Halloween

The Carbondale City Council adopted an ordinance to combat the Halloween "problem" Tuesday night. The ordinance restricts liquor sales along South Illinois Avenue for three days during the Halloween weeks of 1996 through 1999. It gives six businesses a 100-percent waiver on liquor-license fees and gives eight businesses a 50-percent waiver.

The ordinance was adopted to counter Halloween activities that in recent years have caused thousands of dollars in property damage, physical injuries and multiple arrests, officials said.

Five bars and one liquor store on South Illinois Avenue asked the City Council to be compensated for being forced to close during three days of the Halloween season for

"I do not like the violent stuff anymore than anyone else, but the city blames the businesses for the actions of a few people."

Doug Diggle

the next four years.

Jim Tomlianovich, owner of La Roma's, 515 1/2 S. Illinois Ave., is one of the business owners who received a 50-percent reduction in his fees. He will save $337.50 annually for the next four years.

Tomlianovich said he thought the fee reduction was a step in the right direction for the businesses affected by the restrictions.

"I do not feel the full blunt of the restrictions because I don't sell that much alcohol," he said. "But I do lose some business because of the alcohol ban."

Doug Diggle, owner of Old Town Liquors, 514 S. Illinois Ave., said he did not agree with the businesses on South Illinois Avenue being singled out by the city. He said the Halloween activities were no fault of the businesses and said they should not be penalized.

"I do not like the violent stuff anymore than anyone else," he said. "But the city blames the businesses for the actions of a few people."

Diggle received a full fee waiver for the next four years and will save $2,200 annually.

"This is not nearly what I would make over the three days," he said. "This is the least the city can do to help the businesses hurt by this situation."

Jean Paratore, SIUC vice chancellor and dean of students, was a member of the Mayoral/Presidential Halloween Task Force assigned in 1994 to study ways to counter Halloween activities that city and SIUC officials called "out of hand."

Paratore said she was surprised by the reduction in liquor-license fees. But she said she is pleased the liquor-sale restrictions were upheld. "The restrictions are what the task force hoped would do away with the celebration as it has become," Paratore said.

Mayor Neil Dillard said the ordinance was the best solution to end the Halloween activities and said he understood the sacrifice the businesses are making.

"The fee reductions are good faith efforts of the city," he said.

"We realize we are impacting these businesses, and this way we can share in the cost."

Kim Clemens, Undergraduate Student Government president, said she thinks the city's restrictions are excessive but necessary to achieve the ultimate goal of eliminating Halloween as it has become.

"I wasn't surprised by the actions," she said. "They really don't have a choice because this is pretty much all they can do."

Diggle said he can see the end of the Halloween activities on South Illinois Avenue because of these restrictions.

"Last year, during Halloween, there were 400 people on the Strip. There are more than that on a regular weekend," he said. "In four years, those who had been to a Halloween on the Strip may be gone, and it will no longer be a big deal."

City officials said that is exactly what they are counting on.

them with the ground proximity warning system, a sophisticated device that warns pilots to pull up immediately when it detects impending flight into terrain. Such systems, required on U.S. and many other countries' commercial jets, is widely credited with greatly reducing such crashes, once a major cause of death.

Air Force spokesman Maj. Chris Geisel said he was not sure why the plane did not have the system, which was not available when Brown's plane was built in 1975.

But most other large military planes, such as the C-5 Galaxy and KC-10, do have the systems, and some of those were retrofitted since their original manufacture.

Two U.S. commercial airline crashes involving Boeing 737s remain unsolved, and U.S. safety authorities have said they want all of the thousands of planes in service by U.S. airlines fitted with better black boxes.

In 1991 near Colorado Springs,

Colo., and in 1994 in Pennsylvania, United Airlines and USAir 737s went into unexplained rolls that ended in fatal crashes. The crashes suggested sudden mechanical problems with the plane's rudder, but Boeing has said it was unable to replicate the problem in tests.

The National Transportation Safety Board offered assistance to military safety investigators, who did not respond Wednesday.

The plane, which had recorded 12,000 landings in its 22-year life, is one of 19 originally purchased for about $5 million. All are still in service, most as navigational trainers, and the only notable problem they have had was a 1980 incident in which a T-43 struck a bird, causing several hundred thousand dollars damage, Geisel said.

they must all be valid."

He said he felt students did not include identification numbers because they were concerned with unauthorized use of their Social Security numbers. This process of requiring the numbers interferes with free elections because of these concerns, he said.

"Who wants to give someone they don't know full access to their lives?" he said. "I don't blame anyone in putting down false numbers or not one at all."

Smith said there is a disclaimer on top of each petition stating that all requested information must be included for the signature to count.

He said the commission's verification practice calls for questionable petitions to be double-checked by a different commission member, and the student list given to the commission was dated March 27.

Smith said a letter stating the politics is attached to each set of petitions.

"When we made the petitions available, they were attached to a copy of the bylaws," he said. "We told them right up front. We expect them to be followed to the letter. Mr. Arnoldi was incapable of following those rules."

Smith said out of four petitioners, a total of two were ruled invalid.

Arnoldi said he is upset with the way the commission is handling his complaint. He said the commission is quick to point out campaign violations of others, and it needs to examine the validity of its own policies.

"It seems like the Student Trustee Election Commission has already made up their minds about the situation, which is wrong because they should be open to the procedures," he said.

Arnoldi said he plans on filing a grievance, and no matter what the outcome is, he plans to run in the election.

The election bylaws state that any grievance with the commission or its policies goes to Jean Paratore, vice president of Student Affairs, who then refers it to an ad hoc committee of the Student Review Judicial Board.

funds have not been used for an emergency, that money will go back to the departments," he said.

Guyon said the Illinois Board of Higher Education put a 3-percent limit on University tuition waivers, and SIUC will have to find $450,000 to cover its debt for exceeding the limit with next year's promised scholarships.

Tuition waivers are academic and athletic scholarships. Guyon said the 3-percent limit is based on the total tuition the University will receive. He said another $1 million is needed to cover faculty and staff vacations and sick leaves.

GPSC President Bill Karrow said Guyon answered many questions the council had, but not all.

"We still don't know who can spend the money from the contingency fund and why."

*Bill Karrow

"We still don't know who can spend the money from the contingency fund and why," he said. "It's important for us to be able to know what an emergency is considered to be, so if a dean needs a new rug because the other one is worn out, he can't use the contingency fund to replace it."

In other council business, a motion was passed to support raising Student Legal Service fees by $1.50 per student per semester beginning July 1, 1997.

Betsy Streeter, SLS director, asked council members to support a needed fee increase above the SIUC Board of Trustees' approved SLS fee increases of 75 cents next year and a proposed increase of $1.50 the following year. She said these increases are not enough for the department, and that more money is needed to continue the student service. "We provide legal service to about 1,500 students every year," she said. "We cost less than any other lawyer a student could go to."

Karrow said the council should vote for increased SLS funding because many SIUC students use the service. He said he will present the council's motion at the April 11 SIUC Board of Trustees meeting at SIUC that is scheduled to begin at 10:30 a.m.

another solution to the problem would be to stop buying the more expensive programs from these companies.

Gerig said the TV station has made staff cuts by not filling vacant positions within the station. He said the station may have to cut programming to help compensate for the loss of federal revenue.

"Our station has a $120,000 federal budget for this year, but we're expecting more cuts next year," he said.

"The problem is if we cut our programming, then viewer support will decrease, which will eventually downsize our budget significantly."

Gerig said federal spending composes 26.2 percent of both television stations' budgets. He said in 1996, federal spending will decrease from $541,917 to $437,684 for WSIU-TV and from $413,644 to $397,355 for WUSI-TV.

Brian Piepenburg, fund-raising producer for WSIU-TV, said the station overestimated public support while setting their fund-raising goals.

"We thought we were setting an optimistic goal for this year," he said. "Our goal was based on how much money we needed to recover from federal budget cuts."

Godell said he hopes that both stations will raise enough funds to maintain the current level of programming. "People depend on us for information and entertainment," he said. "It is our duty to work harder to give the people what they want and not what we can afford."

Bush explodes to new energetic heights

By Jason E. Coyne
Arts/Entertainment Editor

Bush came and rocked the Arena hard for nearly two hours Tuesday night.

The fans who came out to see the Goo Goo Dolls may have been disappointed but must have quickly forgotten the band's absence.

Because when the lights dimmed before Bush took the stage, the crowd converged on the railings barring them from the main fanatics on the floor. Security waved flashlights like a true police force, visually warning the troops to keep at bay.

As Bush exploded to new energetic heights, the fans followed suit in intensity and paid dearly. At least two people sustained head injuries while moshing and one had to be escorted off the main floor on a stretcher due to a cranial laceration.

Kicking off the show with "The Little Things," Gavin Rossdale was dressed in a traditional rock star's dark jeans, black t-shirt and a chain-link wallet. The crowd, rock 'n' roll-starved by those responsible for booking bands at SIUC, responded accordingly. The last time rock 'n' roll relief supplies were shipped on a large-scale to Carbondale, it was last year in the form of Sponge.

surfing above all, waving to the thundering band or displaying peace signs to one another during "Monkey," before falling under from their own weight.

The video screen behind the band became increasingly psychedelic throughout the show. At one point during the sixth song "Come Down," the screens emulated 1967 LSD-induced Pink Floyd gigs.

Bush, forgetting it is supposed to be a nice MTV band, whiplashed through the seventh song like it was Motorhead or old-time Metallica. The first injury occurred during this speed-metal display as a fan came out of the pit grabbing his head and wobbling around while being escorted by a security guard. An SIUC policeman responded to the incident and had paramedics on the scene within a minute.

The crowd, ranging from the pre-pubescent to the middle-aged but dominated by younger college students, didn't have its concert etiquette down but responded accordingly when Bush left the stage for the first time. The fans lit their lighters, and a short-lived chant of "we want more Bush" ensued.

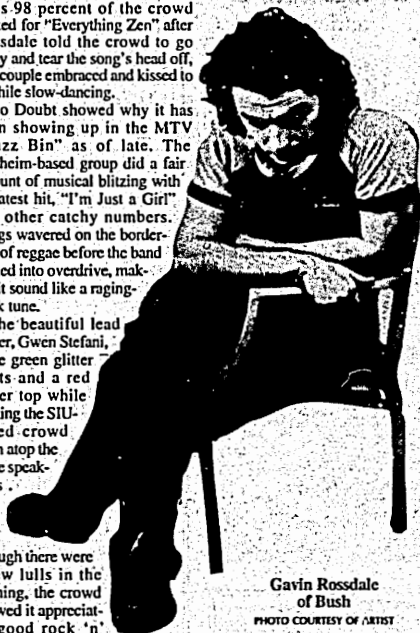

Rossdale returned to the stage alone to do "Glycerin," receiving the loudest applause of the night.

As 98 percent of the crowd rocked for "Everything Zen" after Rossdale told the crowd to go crazy and tear the song's head off, one couple embraced and kissed to it while slow-dancing.

No Doubt showed why it has been showing up in the MTV "Buzz Bin" as of late. The Anaheim-based group did a fair amount of musical blitzing with its latest hit, "I'm Just a Girl" and other catchy numbers. Songs wavered on the borderline of reggae before the band shifted into overdrive, making it sound like a raging-punk tune.

The beautiful lead singer, Gwen Stefani, wore green glitter pants and a red halter top while rocking the SIUC-based crowd from atop the stage speaker.

Though there were a few lulls in the evening, the crowd showed it appreciated good rock 'n' roll on a larger-scale in the Arena.

Busta Rhymes — "The Coming" (Elektra)

For true hip-hop fans the wait for Busta Rhymes' debut solo album is finally over. Properly titled, "The Coming" dropped in stores Mar. 26. On this 13-track CD, Busta lets loose of all his frustration while showing his true skills as a rapper. In the past other rappers have tried to bite his energetic style but failed. Only Busta can yell and scream at the top of his lungs while rapping and the crowd will listen.

The song, "Woo Hah! Got You All in Check" was the perfect first release. It puts all sucka MC's in their place. The song is 100 percent Busta Rhymes. The catchy, repetitive hook line "WOO Hah, WOO Hah" invites you to feel the forceful power of the song. The best beat has you throwing your hands in the air as you feel the energy Busta releases.

He includes several tracks that other rap artists, such as, Rampage The Last Boy Scout, Q-Tip from Tribe Called Quest, Redman, Jamal, and Keith Murray to lend their talents. He also calls on members of his group, Leaders of the New School, (Charlie Brown, Dinco and Milo) to provide more diversity.

"It's a Party" is a slick sneak into the R&B fans ears featuring the harmonic duo, Zhane loan their smooth, beautiful voices. The combination of R&B and hip-hop works without a doubt for this production. This cut will definitely be bumpin' in car stereo systems and played at all summer barbecues, while it surfs the radio air waves.

The track "Abandon Ship" which features Rampage The Last Boy Scout has a hard, banging beat that makes you feel the thumping bass in the bottom of your feet. It is a reminder of Busta's original style on the joints with Leaders of the New School. The song releases Busta Rhymes' true feelings about rappers who are not keeping it real on the hip-hop scene.

Q-Tip returns the favor of Busta appearing on Tribe Called Quest's single, "What's the Scenario?"; by displaying his skills on the mellow track, "Ill Vibe." This smooth groove with a vibrating beat makes you want to wave, a hand and bounce your knees to the flowing rhythm.

The hard hitting, powerful chart busters are at the beginning of the album and as the CD plays, it changes the groove by slowing the beats down to a mid-tempo pace.

On the last track "End of the World" (Outro) Busta thanks the entire world, but warns that it may be the end. This can be interpreted one of two ways; the end of rap, NOT or the end of the world, you choose.

Overall, "The Coming" is what hip-hop lovers were expecting and more. It rocks and bumps hard as hell because Woo-Hah!!! Busta got you all in check!

A BRIEF LOOK

NATIONAL

The Cowboy Junkies first single off of its latest CD "Lay It Down" will be made into a video. The video for "A Common Disaster" will feature footage filmed by Texas tornado chasers. Director Chris Applebaum chose the footage for the "very dark and ominous song" because it gave him "the impression of an approaching storm" and tornadoes are, "a shared experience, a common disaster."

Bush sits atop the Rolling Stone Reader's Top 20 poll in the April issue, which features lead singer, Gavin Rossdale on the cover. The Goo Goo Dolls placed 10th in the poll. Both bands were to play the SIUC Arena Tuesday night but the Goo Goo Dolls had a late-scheduled TV appearance, which their contract stipulates is appropriate enough to cancel live shows for.

Dances of India to perform at Shryock

By Travis Akin
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Indian dance is more than just a series of rhythmic movements, it also is a dramatic story that is told through the dancer's expressions and movements, a founder of an Indian dance school said.

Students of the School of Dances of India in St. Louis will present a dance program at 8 p.m. Saturday at Shryock Auditorium.

Asha Prem, the founder of the School of Dances of India, said the dramatic element of the dance style is what separates it from other forms of dance.

"When you see a dancer, she is very expressive," she said. "Her hands and her face tell the story. In ballet, the dancer has to be light and show the lightness of body movement, but in Indian dance, the movement is more towards expression."

Prem said it is hard to teach the expressive part of the dance.

"The expression has to come from within, just like acting comes from within the actor," she said. "In India, you are surrounded by culture, and it is easier to get the expression. Here in America, the body movements are not a problem, but students need to relax and shouldn't be bashful with the expressions."

It is style that uses strength and individuality, said Priya Sateesha, a sophomore at Mary Institute and St. Louis Country Day and a student at the School of Dances of India.

"It is a very personalized style and is very individualistic," she said. "It is a symbolism of grace and strength that involves facial expressions ranging from happiness to sadness and to jealousy."

The dance style is a good way to keep in shape and relax, Malabika Ghosh, a dancer in Saturday's show, said.

"It keeps your weight down and does not make you feel old," she said. "I saw a dancer who was 65 years old, and I had to keep reminding myself of her age because she was so beautiful."

Ghosh, who has two children, said the dance is very important in preserving the Indian heritage, and she is encouraging her children to study the arts.

Sneha Sastry, one of Prem's students, said she has enjoyed dancing with her younger sister Leena, and they both have learned more about their Indian ancestry through Indian dance.

"We know what the different gods mean, and we still feel as though we are Indian," she said. "Indian dance has brought us closer to our heritage."

The fact that they are sisters has helped them to learn more by practicing with each other and in their performances they are able to work well together, Sastry said.

"Dancing together, we can feel each other while dancing and know whether or not to move slower or not to walk as far," she said.

It takes most students about seven years to learn the ancient Indian style of dance, Prem said. She said the dance has been in existence for thousands of years and, according to Hindu teachings, it began in 2,000 B.C., Prem said.

"Brahma, the creator of Hinduism, was approached by angels to create something that would educate and entertain," she said. "He created the dance scriptures and taught it to the mortals. Indian dance was then handed down to us from the heavens."

The dance is not just limited to worship, she said.

"Once you learn the basic movements of the dance, you can expand on it," she said.

A dance program begins with a prayer to Ganesha and follows with a greeting to the audience called a jahniswaram, Prem said.

Saturday's program will include dance dramas and the stories of the dances will be told before they are performed, Prem said.

The School of Dances of India will present a dance program at 8 p.m. Saturday, at Shryock

'Fargo' portrays murder with light flair, respect

The first thing "Fargo," the latest movie from the Coen brothers ("Blood Simple," "Miller's Crossing," "Barton Fink") tells us, is even though the names have been changed, the events of the film are factually accurate out of respect for the dead.

But do not be misled. Respect probably should be the last word used to describe this film. Blunt, hard-hitting and an unusual way of presenting a murder story may be better ways of describing it.

Unlike past Coen films, this one is fairly simple. Jerry Lundegaard (William H. Macy) makes a deal with two criminals (Steve Buscemi, Peter Stormare). If they kidnap his wife, he will split the ransom his father-in-law is sure to pay. The kidnapping turns bad, resulting in multiple murders, deceit and madness.

The movie's focal character, Margie (Francis McDormand), is not introduced until almost a quarter of the way through the movie. She is the pregnant police chief of Brainerd, Minn. While investigating the murders, she finds out how the kidnapping and murders are related.

After seeing this movie, viewers will believe the movie is a true story for the most part. But there is heavy use of dark humor in this film, which probably was not present when this series of events actually happened. Nor does the film prove the factual accuracy was out of respect for the dead, to say the least. Many of the more morbid scenes will make people laugh.

There have been many movies ("Pochontas," "Panther") which used artistic license to the point where facts have been twisted and turned to make the movie what the filmmaker envisioned. "Fargo" may not twist and turn the facts. But it does use creative license in portraying these murders in a light tone. But it uses it wisely, and the film is better off because of it.

Dustin Coleman

Movie Review

Frankly, if it did not, this may have turned into just another murder movie. The events themselves, probably would not have worked well on their own.

This is not to say the Coen brothers' use of artistic license in this film dilutes the film or misleads audiences. In most aspects, "Fargo" is very real. There is no quick, poetic language. The characters say things the average human would say. The dialogue is simple, everyday language and contains very few one-liners.

There are no beautiful characters. These people are everyday people. There is no pedestal for these characters to stand on. Their faces are not airbrushed and do not seem like they spent hours with a make-up artist to get some kind of desired look.

More importantly, the Coens have taken a unique focus to the movie that prevents it from becoming just another murder flick. This is not even a murder movie in many aspects. This is more about Margie. She has to stay emotionally divided from her work. She goes about her everyday business while she is pregnant. On one account, her husband cooks eggs and bacon for her minutes after she finds out about a triple homicide. She seems unaffected by the murders.

She has a life. She knows she must live it and not become totally occupied or emotionally affected by her work. She has to stay objective while doing her job, and she does until the end, when all the pieces of the puzzle finally are put together. In this scene, she does not break down, but it is the only time she delivers any kind of dramatic emotion.

Murders occur everyday. We read about them, and we see the reports on TV. But unless murders hit close to home, or involve a celebrity, we never really see how many people are effected, changed, or in the case of Margie, how the situation is handled.

The film handles these situations in a way that is crafty, crass and most of all, entertaining. In many ways, "Fargo" is a slice of life in American murders. It is a good slice, but at the same time, a very strange one.

SIUC, Carbondale plan retirement community

By Lori D. Clark
DE Assistant Politics Editor

To serve retiring SIUC faculty and other retiring community members, the University, and City of Carbondale are in the first stages of planning a retirement community, a Carbondale official says.

Carbondale City Manager Jeff Doherty said a feasibility study is being conducted to find the positive aspects the development could have, which is the first step in the retirement community development.

At the March SIU Board of Trustees meeting, the trustees signed a memo agreeing to the retirement community. The Carbondale City Council drafted a memo at its March 19 meeting.

Stephen Margetic, vice president of the Retirement Housing Foundation in Long Beach, Calif., said the feasibility study is going to commence as soon as the memo of understanding from the city and the University is received by the Retirement Housing Foundation.

Margetic said the feasibility study will show whether the senior housing is a viable product.

"Retirees contribute a lot to the community. They attend University events. ... Retired people are good citizens and will be a business boost."

*Kenneth Peterson
Member, SIUC
Emeritus Association*

The study will look at the demand for the retirement community, what other institutions would compete against it and whether the financial operation would support the investment.

Once the feasibility study is complete, and if the retirement community is found to be beneficial to Carbondale, preparations for planning and funding would begin.

After planning and funding preparations are completed, construction of the community would begin, Doherty said.

"The basic concept would be one and two-bedroom units as well as efficiency units available for rent or purchase," Doherty said.

"The complex would also have a central commons area," he said.

Doherty said the retirement community would be helpful to a lot of retired people.

"A range of services would be offered, from one meal a day to assisted living with medical and housekeeping assistance as required by the individual," Doherty said.

Kenneth Peterson, member of the SIUC Emeritus Association, an honorary faculty organization, said the retirement community would be beneficial to area retirees, especially those from SIUC.

"We've lost a lot of retiring faculty because they go out of state," Peterson said.

"Retirees contribute a lot to the community."

"They attend University events. They may contribute to the SIU Foundation. They could participate by giving lectures or serving as tutors. Retired people are good citizens and will be a business boost," he said.

James Tweedy, vice chancellor for Administration, said the University has worked with developers and the city to develop the retirement community because of its benefit to Carbondale.

"Now retirees may stay in Carbondale to live out their retirement," Tweedy said.

The retirement community would be located on the north side of Chautauqua Road, previously the site of SIU riding stables.

Passing health inspection, bar off probation

By Tammy Taylor
Daily Egyptian Reporter

After passing a Health Department reinspection, a local bar and restaurant is off of probationary status, the business' manager says.

Jim Owen, the new manager for the Metropolitan, 100 S. Illinois Ave., said the business passed a Jackson County Health Department reinspection Monday with 90 out of a possible 100 points.

He said the restaurant needs a covered ceiling in the basement and said a service closet used as a station for the bus boys has to be reorganized before the remaining 10 percent will be in compliance with Health Department regulations.

The Metropolitan was operating on a two-week probationary permit because it could not pass Health Department inspections satisfactorily, Owen said.

He said the restaurant was closed from March 12 until March 18 so the violations cited by the Health Department could be corrected.

Violations included the improper storage of liquor, food items and glassware in the basement, improperly operated dishwashing equipment and lack of a certified manager, Jim Bloom, director of Environmental Health for Jackson County, said.

"Hopefully, the Metropolitan is able to hire a manager who knows what the Health Department is looking for in future inspections," he said.

Owen said he wants to improve the structure of the restaurant and bar operation to ensure efficiency. He said he is working on restaffing the bar and restaurant.

"Most of the employees we've lost recently left due to lack of faith in the business and hurt feelings," he said.

Owen said he took over the manager position Monday because the last manager was fired, but he has worked at the Metropolitan as a server since the restaurant first opened in February.

Tobacco workers to testify against industry practices

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON—For Ian Uydess, the moment of truth came in front of the television set. It was a Sunday night in February and a whistle-blowing scientist named Jeffrey Wigand was revealing dark secrets about the nation's cigarette business.

Uydess knew those same secrets. A former cancer researcher, he had been lured to Philip Morris USA in 1977 with the promise that he could help engineer a safer cigarette.

But after 11 years, he left in silent fury as company officials first shelved his findings on how to remove poisonous nitrates from tobacco, then muzzled other scientists who were examining nicotine's addictive nature, he said.

Now Uydess had decided to go public, to give a sworn statement to the Food and Drug Administration. It wouldn't be easy.

There on television, Wigand was talking about how his former bosses at Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp. were suing him for breaking his confidentiality agreement and how his marriage had collapsed from the stress.

Thus did Uydess, who shared his story recently in an interview, resolve to join a small cadre of tobacco industry turncoats — many of them scientists — who, in their own parlance, have "come out," helping to crack the once-impenetrable wall that the tobacco industry had built around itself.

During the last two years, seven defectors — six named and one known only as "Deep Cough" — have come forward, as Uydess has, to cooperate with federal investigations; of their former employers. It is a remarkable development for an industry that has kept a tight lock on its secrets for decades.

Most of the leaks are coming from industry short-timers, men whose first allegiance was to science rather than their companies. Wigand, for example, had spent 20 years in the health care and biotechnology industries before going to Brown & Williamson.

Recreation Center cooks free lunch for employees

By Melissa Jakubowski
DE Assistant Features Editor

While flipping burgers from behind a grill, Bill McMinn labored for two hours to please the people who usually work hard for him.

McMinn, director of the Student Recreation Center, cooked food at the Student Appreciation lunchtime picnic sponsored by the Recreation Center at Campus Lake Tuesday. The picnic ran in conjunction with Student Appreciation Week, which begins April 6.

McMinn said the picnic served as a thank you to all center student employees.

"We have about 600 students employees that are critical to our everyday operation," he said. "We empower them with a lot of responsibility that is equal to that of a full-time job. We are very blessed to have such a dedicated staff."

While basking in the sunshine, students took boats out on the lake and participated in a drawing to win door prizes, which included paid lunches with full-time staff members and athletic apparel.

"Having different events like this shows that they are not out to slave drive their workers."

Jeremy Hall
Student Recreation Center supervisor

Gary Tisdale, marketing and publicity coordinator for the center, said the purpose of the free lunches was to make the full-time staff more accessible to students.

"We want them to know we are on the same level," he said.

Michael Stone, a graduate student in recreation from Cape Girardeau, Mo., and graduate assistant for the Disabled Student Association at the center, said the picnic not only gave students a pat on the back but also provided much-needed relaxation. "Right now, it's crunch time," he said. "Everyone has papers or tests to worry about in school. It's nice to take the time off and have a break."

Besides relishing the free food, students welcomed the chance to socialize with co-workers.

Lori Barone, a senior in psychology from Cincinnati, who is a life-guard at the center. She said the picnic gave her a chance to talk with students she usually does not see.

"I think it brings the different departments together," she said. "You get to spend the day outside and hang out with everyone. It's a good release from the everyday monotony."

Jeremy Hall, supervisor of the center, said he likes the attitude of the employees compared to other jobs on campus.

"Having different events like this shows that they are not out to slave drive their workers," said Hall, a senior in aviation management from Birds. "There is a good worker/employee relationship there."

St. Lawrence Seaway trade celebrated

Shipping season opens with speeches, music; Canadian government might privatize transit

The Washington Post

WELLAND CANAL, Ontario—The sound of 21 million gallons of water pouring into the lock chamber here Tuesday morning was quieter than that of the 10-flute choir that accompanied it.

The lock, which works on gravity, lifted the 18,000-ton grain carrier SS Algouf nearly 50 feet on its voyage from Lake Ontario to Lake Erie. The bypass of Niagara Falls along Welland Canal will require 13 hours, eight locks and an elevation of 326 feet.

The trilling notes of the St. Catharine's Flute Choir and the speeches of the dignitaries marked a special day for this portion of the 37-year-old St. Lawrence Seaway — opening day of the shipping season. The Algouf, on its way to Thunder Bay on Lake Superior for a load of grain, was the first official vessel through. Its captain, following tradition, signed his name on a top hat.

This also is a special year for the seaway. If the government of Canada has its way, the St. Lawrence Seaway will be privatized this year—over the objections of the United States, which shares in operating the 2,297-mile-long system of locks and canals.

The seaway makes possible commercial transit along the St. Lawrence River and the Great Lakes, which together form much of the border between Canada and the United States. Each year, thousands of Canadian, American and other vessels carrying grain, steel, coal, iron ore and salt use the seaway to bypass not only Niagara Falls but several sets of turbulent rapids near Montreal, east of here. For both countries, it has been an invaluable commercial waterway for decades.

Now, the government of Canada is in serious negotiations with a consortium of eight Canadian companies that use the seaway — steel companies, grain companies and shipping companies — to turn over operation of the Canadian portions of the seaway to a nonprofit corporation they would form. Officials hope to present a final agreement to Parliament by June.

The idea is to increase efficiency and streamline operations, but the United States fears that a group of large Canadian companies could act against the interests of American seaway users.

Private Canadian control over the seaway also conflicts with the American goal of unifying administration of the transport link, perhaps through a binational agency. And Americans say they feel a tad out of the loop since they have been given little information about the privatization discussions.

Rolling her eyes a bit, Seaway Development Corp. administrator

Gail C. McDonald, here for the opening day ceremony, said more contact and information from the Canadians "might have been helpful."

Canadian officials point out that there is no final agreement with the consortium of corporations and that the Americans will be informed when there is. Neither, they say, is private operation of the seaway inconsistent with someday creating joint administration of the system, nor will it lead to a conflict of interest.

"It is shippers, carriers and receivers who use the system, so maybe they know how to best operate it and use it in the most efficient manner," said Glendon R. Stewart, president of the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority, the Canadian government corporation that runs the Canadian side of the system. "I'm not sure where those (American) concerns come from."

Commercial management of the seaway, should it come to pass, is just the latest step in a long jour-

Lawyer shortage helps death row inmates survive

Los Angeles Times

Before California's death row inmates even enter the time-consuming thicket of state and federal appeals, another type of delay is quietly stretching their lives.

It is a shortage of death penalty appeals lawyers.

And it has left 128 men and six women sitting on death row at San Quentin prison.

Waiting. Some convicted killers have waited up to four years without making any legal moves, while the state hunts for qualified appeals attorneys willing to represent them.

The shortage further cripples an appeals process that most legal experts already view as a mockery of the swift justice that Californians hoped to see after they voted to reinstate the death penalty nearly 18 years ago.
