CANDLELIGHT MARCH:

DE CAMPUS LIFE EDITOR

The 30th anniversary of the assassination of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. was marked by King followers in Carbondale and across the nation Saturday.

About 45 students participated in the 19th annual campus "March for Martin" observance sponsored by the Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity. Holding their small candles aloft while protecting flames from the chilled breeze, marchers kept a slow and steady pace from Grinnell Cafeteria to Quigley Hall.

King, a Nobel Peace Prize winner, also was a member of the national fraternity.

Fraternity member Michael Hoard, a second-year law student from Chicago, participated in the march for the first time Saturday.

"I felt the need to recognize Dr. King's death," he said. "Once we realize what King actually did and went through, I believe we can find inspiration for solving many of the problems in the black community."

King's influence has spread well beyond the African-American community.

On Friday, a nationwide poll reported that a majority of white Americans adults believe King's life has influenced them. The poll, administered by the Marist College Institute for Public Opinion, found 53 percent of whites feel King's influence compared to 89 percent of African-Americans. Sixty-two percent of white Americans believe race relations have improved since King's death, while only 40 percent of African-Americans are of this opinion.

King, whose eloquence and espousal of non-violent tactics brought him international admiration, has often been honored by SIUC students. In 1986, 47 SIUC students traveled to Atlanta to participate in the historic first observance of a national holiday honoring King's birthday. King's birthday has been formally celebrated by the Carbondale chapter of the NAACP for 15 years.

On Saturday marchers gathered around the Tree of Hope upon reaching Quigley Hall, a tree that was planted 12 years ago to honor the slain civil rights leader.

Beggs hears concerns voiced at BAC Town Hall Meeting

BLACK AFFAIRS COUNCIL:

Task force investigates needs of African-American students.

LONDON WILLIAMS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Chancellor Beggs joined the Black Affairs Council task force and African-American students Thursday night at the Student Center in an attempt to find solutions to concerns of African-American student council members believe are overlooked.

Beggs appeared before a group of about 45 students at a BAC Town Hall Meeting and attempted to individually address each of the students questions.

"Although the turnout was small, the meeting was good because there was a lot of energy and enthusiasm from people who wanted to make a change," BAC coordinator Tiffany Thomas said.

The BAC task force, formed to investigate the needs of the African-American population, presented statistics from a survey of African-American students before each topic of discussion. Topics discussed were the lack of African-American professors, and administration's treatment of African-American students and organizations.

Beggs, Seymour Bryson, executive assistant to the chancellor, and Jim Seales, director of Career Services, were some of the administrators invited to attend the town hall meeting.

Data collected from the survey revealed 64 percent of the students surveyed agreed there is an inadequate representation of African-American staff at SIUC.

Beggs said he also is not pleased with faculty dispersion, but SIUC's potential African-American professors have a number

Union rejects contract offer with call for mediation

WILLIAM HATFIELD
DE MANAGING EDITOR

The faculty union president called for mediation Saturday, saying that the settlement package since withdrawn by the administration was deceptive and "a public ultimatum."

Administrators are disappointed by both the rejection of the settlement and the call for mediation but say that they will continue the arduous task of negotiating toward a first contract.

The request for mediation was the finale in a three-day local media blitz that included three press conferences beginning Thursday when SIUC President Ted Sanders announced that the administration was offering a settlement package proposal.

The proposal offered a 12-percent merit salary increase over three years and faculty involvement in University decision making. It also offered to prepare a new faculty handbook using the Faculty Senate and Graduate Council.

The package proposal was withdrawn Friday less than 24 hours after it was unveiled after faculty negotiators deemed it unacceptable and presented a counter-proposal. As it was a package settlement, all parts of the offer had to be approved or the offer would be withdrawn.

The withdrawal of the package settlement prompted the association to call for mediation.

"The administration's vision is diametrically opposed to the faculty's," faculty union president Jim Sullivan said. "The mediator should nudge both sides closer together."

Mediation is the first step in a four-part plan association members approved in March. The four-part plan empowers the faculty union president to call for mediation,

Almanac

ON THIS DATE IN 1979:

- The Illinois Senate's 25-19 vote fell 11 votes short of the 36 needed to approve the measure restoring the age for drinking beer and wine to 21 — lowered to 19 in 1973. The arguments for lowering the age in 1973 stemmed from the logic that men who were old enough to fight in Vietnam were also old enough to drink. In the Illinois House, however, a bill was passed to raise the drinking age for beer and wine from 19 to 21. It also barred Illinois' 92 "home rule" units from setting their own alternative legal drinking ages.
- "The Deer Hunter," nominated for 9 Academy Awards, including Best Picture, Best Director and Best Actor and starring Robert De Niro, was playing at the Saluki Theater. Tickets were $2.
- Olympia Beer sponsored a 30-hour dance marathon featuring seven local bands at SIU Arena to benefit the Muscular Dystrophy Association. SIU student Penny Williams raised $1,125.30 of the total $10,000 and won a trip for two to New Orleans.
- Students from the University of California at Berkeley were selling raffle tickets in support of an initiative on the city ballot to stymie enforcement of marijuana laws. The prize: some high-grade Colombian pot.
- An Associated Press-NBC News poll reported that most Americans favored the death penalty for those convicted of murder and remained convinced that it did deter some people from committing murder. The poll was taken just before the first U.S. execution in over a year was scheduled on this day for a man in Alabama sentenced to die in the electric chair.

Sumo wrestling a huge success

POINTFEST: Thompson Point Council event attracts close to 400 area students.

KAREN BLATTER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Mary Kaufman spent part of her Saturday outside her residence hall bearing the cold while watching fellow residents get velvored in large brown Sumo wrestler's suits.

"You were in this huge suit with a fake hair helmet," said Kaufman, a junior in zoology from Dongola. "You looked 900 pounds and you would smack into the other person. After you collided, you had no choice but to fall down."

Kaufman attended the Thompson Point Executive Council-sponsored Pointfest, the biggest Thompson Point event of the semester. The event featured bands, free food, prizes and Sumo wrestling. Sixty pizzas were devoured by residents.

Although the weather was chilly, 400 people came in and out of their rooms throughout the four-hour event to take part in the activities. Sumo wrestling was one of the most popular of them.

Head residents fought other head residents, resident assistants fought other resident assistants, and students fought each other, but it was all fun and games.

JUSTIN JONES/DAILY EGYPTIAN

AVALANCHE: Mike Davis of Lofton Promotions holds the balloon as Sharon Ibrahim, a freshman in business from Sterling, prepares to avalanche Jake Schmitz, a sophomore in computer engineering from Carlyle, during Pointfest at Thompson Point Saturday.

Kaufman did not build up the guts to enter the Sumo ring herself, but was entertained by just watching friends and head residents fight it out.

"It was so funny to see my head resident duke it out with another head resident," she said. "People were making fools of themselves. They all looked so hilarious."

The Thompson Point Executive Council is a student organization that uses housing activity fees to provide programs to enhance life for Thompson Point residents.

Steve Kopp, Thompson Point Executive Council adviser, said students in the council have been working on the finer details of Pointfest for the past three months. Kopp said events like Pointfest add to the unity of the community.

"It gives us a chance to build a closer community," he said. "People on Thompson Point can come together in one big area and interact with each other."

Council President Justin Whitt was upset about the weather conditions but felt the goal of the activity was achieved. Whitt said activities like Pointfest provide something to do for residents outside and together.

"There isn't a lot to do on campus on Saturdays," he said. "This is an alternative to sitting in your room watching television."

This semester event provided a different experience for Kaufman than her normal Saturday afternoon.

"You meet new people from different buildings that you normally don't have the chance to meet," she said. "You were able to find out more about the people that live in the same area as you."

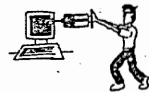

SIUC offers software to protect against viruses

AWARENESS: University set to battle dangerous obstacles for safety of computers.

JAYETTE BOLINSKI
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

In an effort to defend University computers against electronic viruses, SIUC officials hope to distribute virus protection software to staff, students and faculty by the end of the semester.

Gus Bode

Gus says: I think my computer has TB.

Al Allen, director of Information Technology, said that during a recent compliance audit, inspectors raised concerns about computer security and a variety of other issues, including virus protection for on and off campus computers.

"One of the options we would like to accommodate is the ability to protect all of our desktops on campus, but also allow students, faculty and staff to be able to take this software home and put it on their computers there," he said.

A computer virus is potentially destructive software that spreads from program to program or from disk to disk. Viruses generally attack a "host" program and then are transferred to other programs on a computer.

Allen said viruses encountered at SIUC are generally transferred from floppy disks.

Viruses that have appeared on campus computers are posted on the Computer Wide Information Service home page so that other people will know about them (<http://www.siu.edu/~compcamp>). He said there have been no major virus outbreaks at SIUC in the last six months.

"We've had occasional ones, however, that we were able to identify and fix before they got out of control," he said.

According to data posted on the Information Technology Customer Service Center home page, there are several varieties of computer viruses, including computer worms, Trojan Horses, and mail bombs.

Computer worms copy themselves and spread over an entire network. Trojan Horses appear in the form of a program that may seem useful but can be destructive when triggered, and mail bombs are e-mail messages that appear normal but bombard a person's e-mail box with hundreds or thousands of duplicates of the message.

Willard Walker, network administrator for computers in the Physics Department, said his department experiences computer viruses from time to time.

"I was having a lot of problems with viruses last year, but not this year," he said. "I don't think any of them came off the net, though. They were mostly carried in on floppy disks."

Walker said individual departments are currently required to purchase their own virus protection software.

"I think it would be very nice get to new virus software and not have each department pay for it individually," he said.

Allen said the Carbondale campus hopes to obtain site licensing, which means the University obtains one license to load the software onto all of its computers. Currently, the SIU-Edwardsville campus has such a program in place.

Information Technology staff members are looking into a variety of vendor products at this time. They hope to make a decision by the end of the semester, at which time they also hope to have located funding for the project. Officials are unsure of the cost of at this time.

Allen asked that anyone who encounters a computer virus contact the Information Technology Customer Service Center.

"We can either help them resolve it or have an opportunity to determine whether this might be a situation where there might be more than one instance involved," he said.

Verification problems may cause candidate to lose battle

INELIGIBLE: Questions regarding signature policies plague student trustee hopeful.

TRAVIS DE'NEAL
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A student trustee candidate who was removed from the ballot last week, tried to rally support for her reinstatement Friday, and the final decision may not be a neutral one, one supporter says.

Yvette Johnson was declared ineligible to run for student trustee last week because she had not completed one semester at SIUC.

Later in the week, the Student Trustee Election Commission received word from Student Development, which verifies signatures on student petitions, that Johnson did not have the 350 verified signatures required.

Johnson, however, said at a press conference that the commission had been ineffective because it did not give her a copy of eligibility rules.

She said she would not have sought office if she had known a candidate must have one semester at SIUC completed.

"I wasted my time, 350 people's time and my party's time," she said.

Johnson also said she had more than 350 signatures on her petition. When the petition was returned to her, 180 names were on it and 169 of those had been declared invalid. Johnson said part of the petition somehow disappeared from the time she filed the petition until it was verified.

She said she knew several people who had signed her petition whose names were not on

Former Herrin man faces murder trial in November

A former Herrin man charged with the murders of three Las Vegas residents in 1996 faces a November trial in a Las Vegas district court with two other suspects.

Tony Ray, 41, 21, of Las Vegas is charged with murder with a deadly weapon, attempted murder, battery with a deadly weapon and unlawful flight to avoid prosecution after three men were killed and a 17-year-old girl was injured.

During a March hearing, Amati waived his right to trial within 60 days and pleaded not guilty to the charges.

Amati, originally believed to be hiding out in Southern Illinois, was arrested Feb. 27 near Atlanta, six days after being featured on "America's Most Wanted." Anonymous tips led FBI agents to the motel in an Atlanta suburb where Amati was staying.

Bill might lower prices of gas in coming months

Illinois may see lower gas prices in the near future, now that a bill designed to remove the state sales tax on gas has been passed by the Illinois Senate.

The intent of the bill is to regain an estimated $100 million lost in tax revenues annually from people crossing borders at Indiana, Missouri and Iowa to avoid Illinois' 5-percent sales tax on gas.

The bill, known as SB 1458, contains a clause stating that if the state does not see a significant increase in gas sales, the tax will be reinstated Jan. 1, 2003.

The bill now is in the Illinois House of Representatives.

Clinton signals show 'own over '99 budget

Signaling election-year budget and tax battles ahead, President Clinton hastily took to the Rose Garden this morning to put the Senate on notice: its newly passed $1.73 trillion federal budget does not accommodate administration priorities.

The president, back from Africa not 11 hours, assembled his economic team outside the Oval Office also to knock a highway spending bill bloated with special projects for members of Congress. With hints of a veto growing stronger in recent days, Clinton said today he was "determined that highway spending, though it is quite important ... must be within the balanced budget and should not crowd out critical investments in education, child care, health care, or threaten our budget discipline."

Friends remember faculty member Dr. Randall Nelson

WELL-TRAVELED:

Professor known to be seen walking dogs around campus.

HAROLD G. DOWNS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

About 150 co-workers, family members, friends and a guide dog named Rocco paid their final respects at the School of Law Auditorium Saturday afternoon to a former faculty member who, despite his disability, excelled at his profession.

Dr. Randall H. Nelson died March 25 at the age of 78. He was born in Mobile, Ala., in 1919. He served as an army captain during World War II and was permanently blinded by German bazooka shell fire while crossing the Rhine River. He was awarded the Bronze Star and Purple Heart oak cluster awards for his heroics.

Nelson came to SIUC in 1955 after receiving his bachelor's, master's and doctorate from the University of Michigan and being elected to Phi Beta Kappa. He joined the Political Science Department and served as chairman and professor until he retired from teaching in 1984.

Nelson served as faculty and staff ombudsman from 1982-1989. During his tenure at SIUC, he could be seen walking around campus with his guide dogs.

Nelson was active in the political spectrum as well.

He served as Jackson County chairman for John F. Kennedy's presidential election campaign in 1960 and for Paul Simon's 1970 gubernatorial campaign.

John Jackson, vice-chancellor for Academic Affairs and provost, said it was Nelson who recruited him to SIUC in 1969 when he was looking for his first teaching job.

"Randy, I thought when I interviewed here, would be the first boss and the first chair that I could enjoy working with," Jackson said. "Randy was not only my first chair, but he became a mentor in every respect and a great friend."

Jackson said through Nelson he met politicians such as Paul Simon, Dick Durbin and Walter Mondale. He said the Nelson home was a place where political conversations were welcome.

"The Nelson living room was always a great place for political gathering, whether it was formal or informal conversation about politics and government," Jackson said. "Randy loved politics, he loved government, he loved the law and he loved the Constitution."

John Foster, former chairman of the Political Science Department, commended Nelson for his keen ability to touch every person he met.

"He had a gift to cause you to see yourself," Foster said. "He taught us all what the human spirit was able to accomplish."

Foster related an article he had read that said there were not any heroes left in the world. But "if that author had spent some time in Southern Illinois with Randy, that article would have come out entirely different," Foster said.

Kirsten Trimble, who was Nelson's reader for more than 20 years, said some students were not convinced of his disability.

"There were some students who thought he could really see, because when a student would talk, he would turn towards them and look right at them," Trimble said. "I am going to miss him a lot and miss the discussion of politics."

Nelson's brother, James, said Nelson was his inspiration.

"My brother was my hero," Nelson said. "We spent many happy days together growing up."

"In academics, he was cum laude. In life, he was magna cum laude."

of other job opportunities.

"We're not satisfied with the distribution of faculty in respect to race," he said. "A reason why there is not adequate representation is because African-American professors have so many job opportunities."

Other statistics revealed 42 percent of the students surveyed believed SIUC does not provide a sense of belonging among African-American students.

Fifty-seven percent disagreed that SIUC's administration actively works to provide support and assistance to African-American individuals and organizations on and off campus.

Beggs said the issues stated at the task force meeting were concerns expressed to him by only African-American students but other student groups as well and all of these issues were a concern.

When asked what is being done to make sure these issues are resolved, Beggs said an affirmative action group has been set up to address these concerns, but that a lack of communication seems to be bigger issue.

"An affirmative action group is set up to brief me on these issues," he said, "but the issues seems to be our inability to communicate effectively with students."

Beggs asked the students to help the administration assist students through constructive criticism. Constructive criticism, he said, is the key to understanding.

Beggs made an early exit from the meeting, but said the issues discussed will not go unheard by the other members of administration.

"It won't stop here," he said.

"I will talk to the director of these departments and a written report will be put in my transition file."

Beggs said Jo Ann Argersinger, the next SIUC chancellor, will be briefed through these files, and he believes she is qualified to handle these types of problems.

Abdul Rahim Khalil, a graduate in social work, had mixed feelings about the meeting.

While he is proud of the task force's effort, he is ashamed of the lack of interest expressed by other African-American students. He believes it is troubling that more SIUC African-American students to attend social events than events such as Thursday's town hall meeting. "This meeting was necessary," he said.

"It addressed issues that should have been addressed years ago. All of the people who attended the 'Players Ball' should be ashamed that they did not attend this focus group.

"This shows where our priorities are. We can't blame anyone else for our problems if we don't address them ourselves."

felt skeptical about the future of SIUC's environment in respect to African-American students, but commended the task force for a job well done.

"I'm interested in seeing how many of the pledges made in this meeting are lip service," said Tisha Henson, a junior in history from Chicago.

"But the task force gets a lot of respect from me for stepping up and taking the leadership role in binding arbitration and an intent to strike notice. Union members can then prepare for a strike or other measures. Sullivan said striking remains an "extreme" option.

Margaret Winters, spokeswoman for the administration, said the request for mediation may be premature as progress has been made. She said the counter-proposal is being considered and was discussed Saturday.

If the administration joins the request, a federal mediator will travel to campus to speak with both sides. The mediator will represent the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service and bear limited cost to both sides. If the administration does not join the request, the union has the right to seek a private mediator at a cost to the University.

Winters said the administration will determine today if it will join the request for mediation.

The three-day cataclysm of events is characteristic of a turbulent first contract negotiations for SIUC tenured and tenure-track faculty. A mediator was sought last July to help draw both sides together in the development of an interim contract. The interim contract was ultimately defeated by a union vote of 172 to 83.

Winters said bargaining is recessed and will resume after the mediator is on campus.

"We tried to offer a kind of shortcut," she said. "It was not accepted, so I imagine we are back to the process we were engaged in."

Sullivan said a core problem with the settlement package was that it did not address SIUC faculty salary inequity. He said faculty are 14 percent behind their peers.

"If you use the formula in that proposal we'd never catch up to peers," he said. "The arithmetic doesn't add up."

Union leaders have previously said that money can be reallocated internally for salaries.

Sanders, however, said this is not always possible and that the package settlement was the first step toward equalizing SIUC salaries to that of its peer institutions

"There aren't piles of money stashed away somewhere that can be used for these purposes as many people believe," he said.

Sullivan said the package proposal also erodes tenure.

"Tenure decisions are left solely in the hands of the Board of Trustees," he said. "This all but does away with the tenure system."

Sanders disagreed, saying the proposed tenure system almost mirrors the system in place.

Sanders said he was stunned at the announcement of the proposal's rejection in total.

"We regret that the union has chosen to turn down the proposal without even taking it to the bargaining unit for their consideration, Sanders said. "As you know last September on the interim agreement, they at least took the matter to the bargaining unit for their consideration."

"I'm just surprised that within 24 hours you can reject a proposal that took us some time to put together."

Sullivan said some of the proposals in the package settlement were unacceptable and others were workable.

"But given to us as it was, as an ultimatum, we were left with no choice but to provide a counter-proposal," Sullivan said. "That's what negotiation is all about. It's a give and take situation.

"Their is no negotiation in take it or leave it."

The counter-proposal was discussed Saturday and Winters said it will continue to be discussed. The specifics regarding the proposal have not yet been made public.

At a Friday press conference Sanders railed against the union's counter-proposal.

"I wouldn't call it a counter-proposal. They might cast it that way," he said. "It really was a hodge-podge stating where they were at the table on a number of items.

"It really suggests that we start bargaining from the proposal that we put on the table as a package and presumes that we go from there and that's not where we are."

In light of the new developments, Sanders said it is not likely that a contract will be settled by Scales said the meeting was a success but also said concerned African-American students should take a hands-on approach to these concerns.

He wants the information covered at the meeting and the data collected by the task force to be forwarded to the directors of campus departments in which students have a concern.

"The data from these findings should be presented to the actual directors of these departments," he said.

"Once they know the needs of the students, they can be held accountable for amending the system."

Bryson said the chancellor's involvement added to the discussion between students and the administration. He added that students must continue to build BAC's voice.

"We've come this far because of the leadership of Tiffany Thomas and BAC," he said.

"We must continue to build up BAC to be the voice for the African student body."

May 1, the second target date set by the association.

"I had thought a move like this may actually move us to an agreement by their self-imposed May 1 deadline," Sanders said

"I think the May 1 deadline looks very doubtful at this time, given obviously that there is a great deal of distance between our positioning on a number of issues."

Sullivan rejected Sanders' statements, saying that the deadline is possible.

"We've contested that stance over and over again," Sullivan said. "If there is a will, we are close enough that with two weeks of sustained and accelerated bargaining we could have a fair and reasonable contract."

Sullivan said union leaders stayed up all night and put forth a "Herculean effort" Thursday to draft the counter-proposal.

Sanders said both sides are a "long way" apart from a full agreement.

"We're not going to let time constraints force us into a bad contract, but that does not mean we're stalling negotiations."

Drug may cut breast cancer risk

WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — Women at high risk for breast cancer can cut their chances of developing the disease by about half, at least over the short term, by taking the drug tamoxifen.

That finding is the main conclusion of the Breast Cancer Prevention Trial, a huge federally funded study that was halted last week when the benefit of the drug became obvious to scientists and officials overseeing it.

Details of the study will be presented Monday afternoon at a news conference in Washington. A person familiar with the study results, however, said that women randomly assigned to take tamoxifen had a 45 percent lower risk of developing invasive breast cancer than women taking inactive, or placebo, pills.

The study enrolled about 13,000 women from around the United States and Canada, and was scheduled to last at least a year longer. It was the largest clinical experiment ever testing a drug's ability to prevent cancer.

Previous research had shown that taking tamoxifen reduced the chances of a breast cancer recurrence in women who had been successfully treated for the disease.

workers. He had planned to lead the strikers in a protest march April 8.

Saturday in Memphis, about 4,000 marchers followed nearly the same route the original strikers' march was take. In New York, thousands of observers marched to Times Square while about 300 people gathered at King's tomb in Atlanta.

King's family planned a private ceremony at the tomb Saturday. On Thursday, the family called for a national commission to investigate his assassination, citing a litany of unanswered questions persisting 30 years later. Family members say a trial for King's convicted killer James Earl Ray, who is serving a 99-year prison sentence, would help answer those questions.

Ray, who now is 70-years-old and dying of liver disease, confessed shortly after King's assassination, but immediately recanted. He has since maintained his innocence, but has never been to trial.

Several investigations have concluded that Ray acted alone, but King's family says they remain unconvinced of that conclusion. They also question whether Ray committed the crime at all.

A Memphis businessman claims meetings to discuss King's assassination were organized at his restaurant days before King was killed. The restaurant owner also said he was told to be at the back of the restaurant April 4, and that a police officer tossed him a smoking rifle.

Prosecutor Bill Gibbons dismissed the business man's story, believing it to be fabricated for money.

Hoard says he believes the investigation should be reopened but doubts that King's family's wishes will be realized.

"I think they should get the whole truth," he said.

"I think he (Ray) had a part in it, in terms of being the fall guy. But I don't think they will open the investigation, even with all the pressure."

National Student Employment Week begins today

CORINNE MANNINO
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

National Student Employee week begins today and is used to celebrate over 8,300 student workers on the SIUC campus — one of the largest student employment programs in the country.

"This is the fun thing we get to do to honor student employees," said Pam A. Britton, director of financial aid, in reference to National Student Employee Week. During the week, many student workers are honored with activities in the office they work in.

Many offices have barbecues, decorate their offices or have other employee activities to make a fun week for their student workers.

The Recreation Center has a picnic to honor their students, but it is conducted later in the year because of a scheduling conflict.

"[The student workers] are our operation. Without them we couldn't get it done. They're very special to us," said Bill McMinn, director of intramural sports and the Recreation Center.

Morris Library student workers are honored with a button that says "Library Affairs salutes their student assistants," Carolyn Snyder, Dean of Library Affairs, said.

The library also has a reception on the afternoon of April 9 to honor their workers. Student employees who have worked at Morris Library for four or more semesters get a book selected from their major to have their name plate put into.

Thyra Russell, associate dean of personnel and budget services for Morris Library, said the library has been doing this for seven years.

For all the students nominated, their supervisors and deans, there is a celebration the morning of April 9 to honor students who have been nominated and the student who won the position of SIUC Student

Students are evaluated on reliability, quality of work, initiative, professionalism and, in case of a tie, uniqueness of contribution.

The Student Employee of the Year at each institution goes on to state competition, which could lead to regional and then national competition.

For the past six years, an SIUC student has been named the Illinois Student of the Year, and the first year this was done, eight years ago, an SIUC student won the top honor.

Hollywood settles potential strike

LOS ANGELES TIMES

HOLLYWOOD — A strike threat by actors that could have paralyzed Hollywood over the next few weeks ended Sunday when representatives of actors and producers agreed to a tentative three-year contract that still leaves unresolved the thorniest issue of how much performers deserve when their work airs on cable TV or in the booming foreign markets.

The settlement, which is expected to be ratified by members, is a relief for an industry that viewed this year's labor negotiations as potentially one of the most contentious ever.

Any strike, or slowdown in activity caused by the threat of a strike, would have sent a sharp ripple through the Southern California economy because entertainment production has been booming. Hollywood's growth over the past five years has given it a central role in the overall health of the Southern California economy.

Even though the actors' current contract did not expire until June 30, the mere threat of a potential strike this summer had the industry on the verge of what is commonly known as a "de facto strike." That happens when producers choose to slow, halt or move productions they fear might have to be shut down later.

So much money is at stake making films and TV shows — which require months of preparation — that many producers would have rather postponed shooting than risk suffering the huge losses they would absorb if forced to pull the plug on projects midstream.

Scattered reports of a slowdown in production already had surfaced in recent weeks. Companies were frantically preparing contingency plans and speeding up work on some projects to protect themselves. Financiers had become wary of funding new production.

The core of the new deal, according to sources, includes three annual raises in the basic minimum amount actors in an array of categories receive: 3 percent the first year, and 3.5 percent in each of the last two years of the contract. Other issues include gains for performers such as TV dancers, stunt coordinators and extras.

Affected are about 130,000 performers nationwide represented largely by the Screen Actors Guild.

the copy returned to her.

Johnson also said it was unfair to disqualify her for not completing one semester because the commission had not followed its own laws.

By rules, for instance, the commission is to be named by members of Undergraduate Student Government and Graduate and Professional Student Council by the first week of March. However, the entire commission was not named until last week.

Student trustee Pat Kelly, a USG vice presidential candidate, spoke in Johnson's favor, citing past problems with student trustee election commissions.

"Like Yvette, last year I was a victim of the same laws, and the year before my friend Troy Arnold, our current representative on [Illinois] Board of Higher Education], was removed from the ballot," he said.

Kelly also said one member of the appeals board, who will hear Johnson's appeal today, may be biased against Johnson.

"Tim Hoerman, the graduate student sitting on the appeals board, has a conflict of interest," Kelly said. "Nobody on the board is supposed to have a relationship with anyone on the election commission, but Mr. Hoerman does have a personal relationship with the student trustee election commissioner."

Hoerman said he can remain neutral about the issue.

"It's almost impossible in a small town like this to not have a relationship with someone involved in student government," he said. "Whether I have a personal relationship with someone on the commission will not influence me. I will remain entirely objective."

Hoerman also said he met with Kelly and promised to remain neutral about the hearing. In addition, Hoerman said that Kelly would be allowed in the room as a silent observer to ensure that no impropriety takes place.

"I don't think some people trust me or have faith in me because during the past couple of weeks I've been bashing [Kelly]," he said. "This is a legitimate concern of [Kelly]'s, but he needs to realize I can be reliable when I am called upon."

"I have no vested interest in Yvette Johnson staying off of the ballot."

The Salukis were edged by defending champion Southeast Missouri State, which finished with 188 points, followed by Missouri with 175 and the Salukis with 163 in the nine-team meet.

Women's coach Don DeNoon said because the relays were scored twice as much as other meets, they hurt his team's chances for a first-place finish.

"As far as the relays go, we always seem to be one person short," DeNoon said. "I'm not sure how the meet would have been if it was scored in a regular fashion. We probably would have been on top, because we were so close already with the relays being scored double."

The team was competing without its top thrower, senior Amy Stearns, top sprinter freshman Shaneka Williams and pole vaulter/high jumper freshman Amber Chrans in the meet because of illnesses.

DeNoon said the loss of the three athletes hurt, but the team performed well with the athletes they brought to the meet.

"I feel we're not as strong as we have been in the past, but the kids we have continue to step up and compete well," DeNoon said.

SIUC took a 4-3 lead in the top of the second, and added one more in the top of the third when senior third baseman Matt Dettman hit a solo home run to lead off the inning.

The Shockers got another run in bottom of the third. But it was centerfielder Jeff Ryan who delivered the final blow to the Salukis when he hit a two-run homer off junior pitcher Adam Biggs, who relieved Frasier in the fifth. The Shockers hung on to win 6-5 as Marc Bluma got the save, for Wichita.

The Salukis got a solid performance from senior pitcher Chris Schullian in the second game of the doubleheader Saturday, but the Shocker hurler Brandon Sloan was almost unhitatable.

Sloan went eight innings and allowed just one run on four hits while walking none.

The Salukis lost 4-1 and could not get anything going offensively. Schullian gave 10 hits and walked three. He was in trouble in most every inning but managed to pitch his way out.

Callahan said the only thing the Salukis can do is look to the future and be glad they will not see Wichita State again until the conference tournament.

"Hopefully we can get something positive out of this weekend, and bounce back Wednesday at Indiana State," Callahan said.

SIUC sweeps four key games against MVC opponents

VICTORIOUS: Softball team improves to 22-7-1 as Winters earns two victories over weekend.

SHANDEL RICHARDSON
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The loss of an hour of sleep did not stop the awakening of timely hitting for the Saluki softball team.

After stranding 16 batters in a two-game sweep of Indiana State University Saturday, SIUC came through with clutch hits Sunday to defeat Illinois State University 4-0 for a two-game sweep of the Redbirds at IAW Fields. SIUC won the first game 3-0.

With the four wins, the Salukis improved to 22-7-1 overall and 4-0 in Missouri Valley Conference. Indiana State fell to 9-19, 0-2 while Illinois State dropped to 11-19, 0-4. "It was kind of a day with mixed emotions," SIUC coach Kay Brechtelsbauer said of the wins over Indiana State. "It wasn't a pretty ballgame. [Indiana State] took a lot of hits away from us."

Despite being out hit 7-6 in game two of the doubleheader with the Redbirds, the Salukis got the bats swinging when most needed. Junior outfielder Jen Feldmeier opened the scoring by singling home freshman outfielder Marta Viehhaus in the third. Feldmeier would later score on a throwing error by Redbird shortstop April Schermann.

The Salukis added one run in each of the next two innings, courtesy of a sacrifice fly by junior outfielder Jaymie Cowell and double from sophomore second baseman Jamie Campbell.

"We had some sacrifice flies today we haven't been able to get," Brechtelsbauer said. "Those are big runs for us. I mean you can get hits and not score, and you can get outs and score. We just came through with some timely hits."

Erin Stremsterfer, who has been suffering from an ankle injury all season, earned the win behind a strong six-hit performance in 5 2/3 innings. Stremsterfer, who improved to 6-2 on the season, pitched 11 innings of relief in the Salukis 4-3 victory over Indiana State Saturday in 13 innings.

SIUC defeated the Sycamores 2-0 in the series opener Saturday.

"I'm feeling a lot more confident about (the injury)," Stremsterfer said. "After a week of practice, it's gotten a lot stronger."

In the first game, SIUC took advantage of Redbird senior pitcher Jayme Jacobsen's two hit batsmen and wild pitch in the first inning. Stremsterfer's sacrifice fly scored junior outfielder Jen Feldmeier to start a three-run inning.

Junior first baseman Theresa Shields and sophomore shortstop Lori Greiner also contributed to the early lead. Shields' single coupled with a fielding error scored junior third baseman Nikki Beard, while Greiner's double with two out drove home Shields.

That provided all the runs sophomore pitcher Carisa Winters needed. Winters allowed three hits and struck out five to pick up the win. The victory was the second shutout of the weekend for Winters. She blanked Indiana State, allowing three hits and striking out nine.

She finished the weekend with 18 strikeouts, four shy of the single-season school record.

As a whole, the Saluki pitching staff allowed no earned runs in the four games. The mound has been a constant for the team all season.

"I thought our pitchers did a good job for the most part," Brechtelsbauer said. "We had shutouts against two pretty good hitting ball clubs."

Offensively, Viehhaus sparked the Salukis. She went 4-for-5 in the extra-inning game with the Sycamores and her two-run homer in the 13th turned out to be the difference.

"I was really surprised because I didn't even finish my swing," Viehhaus said. "It was just one of these days."

But Brechtelsbauer knows these days are not going to happen every weekend. The Salukis play host for their final two games of the season this weekend against Wichita State University and Southwest Missouri State University.

"We didn't execute some things we have done in the past," Brechtelsbauer said. "I think that they are just going to have to stay determined."

Salukis flounder against 13th-ranked Shockers

MISTAKES: SIUC falls to 12-19 after team loses four straight games to WSU.

TRAVIS AKIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The Salukis needed to play nearly perfect baseball to beat Wichita State University, but their performance during the weekend was far from perfect.

Misplays and a few poor relief pitching performances ended their hopes of beating the 12th-ranked team in the nation. The Shockers swept a four-game series with the Salukis Sunday.

The first three games were close but resulted in Saluki losses. The Shockers completely dominated the last game of the series Sunday, putting 11 runs across the plate on 16 hits.

Wichita State blew the game wide open in the fifth when it scored six on six hits and took an 8-0 lead.

The Shockers added three more runs to win the game 11-1 and complete the four-game sweep.

Coach Dan Callahan said the one problem with the game on Sunday was the way the Salukis struggled at the plate.

"We never could get anything going offensively," Callahan said. "And once the Shockers broke things open in the sixth, we were basically done."

"After battling Wichita State the first three games of this series, we just didn't stay with them today."

The Salukis dropped the first three games of the series. In two of the first three games, the Salukis jumped out in front, but late-inning rallies did the Salukis in.

"I guess my biggest disappointment with the series is we really had a great chance to win at least two of these games," Callahan said.

SIUC is now 12-19 overall and 6-6 in the Missouri Valley Conference.

With the victories, the Shockers are 20-3 overall and are 4-0 in conference play.

The Salukis started the first two games well, but lost in the late innings. In the first game of the series Friday, the Salukis took a 3-0 lead early in the game.

The Shockers scored one run in the sixth and added two in the seventh to tie the game.

Sophomore pitcher Jim Pecoraro replaced junior pitcher Dave Piazza in the eighth but was unable to hold the Shockers. With two outs, the Shockers rallied to win with four hits and a walk as four runs crossed the plate for a 7-3 victory against the Salukis.

In the first game of the Saturday doubleheader, the Salukis jumped out in front of the Shockers 3-0 in the top half of the first, but junior pitcher Jason Frasar gave up three runs and the game was tied going into

BASEBALL

•The Salukis next play on the road Wednesday at Indiana State.

Saluki runners fall short at relays in Cape Girardeau

FALLING APART: Men's team falters after leading 120-96 early in competition.

COREY CUSICK
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The SIUC men's track and field team led the entire meet — until the end.

The Saluki men's and women's track and field team fell short at the All Sport Relays in Cape Girardeau, Mo., this weekend.

The men's team slowly watched the 120-96 lead it built Friday slip away in relay competition Saturday.

Heading into the final event of the weekend, the 4 x 400-meter relay, the men's team was slightly ahead of the University of Missouri. The Salukis needed to finish first in the relay to secure a first-place finish in the meet. However, Missouri squeaked by the Salukis with a 2.2 second victory — 3 minutes 14.64 seconds to 3:16.84.

The first-place finish in the relay gave Missouri a 203.50-199 victory in the meet. Southeast Missouri State University finished third (130.50) in the seven-team meet.

The Salukis were successful in two of the relays with first-place finishes in the 4 x 100-meter and the 4 x 200-meter by the team of senior Orlando McKee, junior Romante Archer, sophomore Brad Bowers and freshman Peter Forde, but failed to produce another first-place finish that would have sealed the victory.

Men's coach Bill Cornell said that if the Salukis would have won the final relay they would have won the meet by 11 points, but they fell short in the final event.

"We could have won the meet if we could have won just one more relay," Cornell said. "They (Missouri) just kept plugging away, and the last race they caught us."

Top individual performers for the Salukis were McKee in the 100-meter dash with a first-place finish (10.80 seconds), followed by Archer in second-place in the event (10.87 seconds). Sophomore Michael Sandusky placed first in the hammer throw with a toss of 151 feet 11 inches.

Junior Joseph Parks finished first in the 5,000-meter run (14:46.20) while senior Ben Basaly placed first in the 10,000-meter run (32:29.40) for the Salukis.

Cornell was pleased with his team's performance in the wind-chilled 40-degree weather.

"It was a cold meet, but I was really happy with the way the team performed," Cornell said. "They never complained and are continuing to make strong progress."

The women's team was led by two first-place finishes from junior Felicia Hill, but it was not enough to put the Salukis any higher than third place.

Hill took first place in both the high jump (5 feet 2 inches) and the triple jump (39 feet 9.5 inches). Hill placed first in the high jump on her first jump at 5 feet 2
