Iraq claims it is ready to talk or fight

United Press International

Iraq said Tuesday it was ready to talk or to fight, but warned that the United States would be humiliated in a Mideast war that would not be a "vacation" like the U.S. invasions of Panama and Grenada.

The statements by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein and Iraq's foreign minister came after U.S. spy satellites spotted what appeared to be Iraqi ground-to-ground Scud missiles deployed in occupied Kuwait, within range of the Saudi capital and of the nearly 50,000 U.S. troops in neighboring Saudi Arabia.

The White House said it had little to discuss with the Baghdad regime until it releases foreign hostages it is holding at strategic locations as human shields against U.S. attack, hostages it continues to describe as "guests."

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher blasted Saddam for trying to "hide behind Western women and children." French President Francois Mitterrand condemned the taking of hostages and Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak made an impassioned call for Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait.

Despite the mounting world condemnation of Iraq's actions, the U.N. Security Council had still not approved a U.S.-sponsored resolution that would authorize Washington to use "minimum force" to enforce U.N. economic sanctions against Baghdad.

White House press spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said U.S. warships were tracking several Iraqi oil tankers and supply ships in the Persian Gulf region.

Reports from foreign offices indicated at least 214 Britons, Americans, French and West Germans had been rounded up and moved to undisclosed locations. Iraq has said citizens of "aggressive nations" would be kept at military and other key installations in Iraq and occupied Kuwait.

In a statement broadcast by a spokesman on Iraqi television, Saddam defended his use of Westerners as shields against attack. He said the detention of foreigners was "not out of revenge but to avert a crime of aggression that President Bush intends to commit against the people of Iraq" after "occupying" Saudi Arabia.

"If he commits this crime, a great catastrophe will befall not only the region but the whole world," Saddam said in an "open letter" to Bush.

Saddam said Iraq, which invaded oil-rich Kuwait Aug. 2, had "no intention" of attacking Saudi Arabia, and accused President Bush of "twisting the words and concealing the motives ... and mixing the causes with results" in his remarks to the American public.

Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz said "If the American leader thinks this is a vacation like that they had in Panama or Grenada, they are mistaken."

"There is going to be a bloody conflict and America will lose and America will be humiliated," Aziz said in a news conference during a visit to Jordan.

Hartigan requests urgency for fuel price investigations

By Brian Gross
Staff Writer

As gas prices continue to rise, Illinois Attorney General Neil Hartigan criticized the federal government Monday for not giving the problem enough attention.

At a conference of about 35 attorneys general in Washington D. C., Hartigan said the Justice Department as well as the FBI and IRS should expand their investigations into gasoline price increases.

Hartigan told James Rill, head of the anti-trust division of the Department of Justice, to "bring the same sense of urgency in Washington to the investigation of oil company rip-offs as the President has brought to the military crisis in the Middle East."

The National Association of Attorneys General met to discuss the gas prices which jumped up after Iraq invaded Kuwait and consumers' anger and suspicions over price gouging. Oil companies said they are ignoring President Bush's plea to restrain increases because of higher crude prices.

Hartigan told the Justice Department that its investigative efforts have been insufficient and that efforts in investigating possible fuel price gouging be intensified. Peter Cunningham, a spokesman for the attorney general, said.

Rural America faces growing AIDS cases

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ignorance, discrimination and the lack of health care are causing the AIDS epidemic to spread through the nation's rural communities, the national AIDS Commission reported Tuesday.

The commission, formed by Congress to oversee the nation's fight against the deadly disease, warned that the number of AIDS cases in rural America is growing at a dangerous rate.

"The Commission is alarmed at that many rural areas and small towns are currently unable to deal with the three epidemics of HIV infection, drug addiction and sexually transmitted diseases," the commission said in a statement released on Tuesday.

While the AIDS epidemic is worse in the nation's large cities, the disease appeared to be spreading faster in the countryside.

There was a 37 percent increase in rural areas compared to 5 percent in cities.

"What's happening is there is a three-pronged fear effect," said Dr. June Osborn, head of the 15-member commission and dean of the University of Michigan School of Public Health in Ann Arbor. "Fear of the virus because of a relative lack of education about the virus, homophobia and then the fear of drugs and drug users."

Rural Americans picture the AIDS epidemic as a city problem and that perception allows the virus to spread silently and quickly through the heartland, Osborn said.

"What you've got is a kind of a license to pretend its somebody else's problem coupled with a relative lack of opportunity to learn about it, and then some reinforced

Students study fairness of state tuition

By Christina Hall
Staff Writer

The Illinois Student Association appointed student representatives from five Illinois universities and colleges to work on a committee report on tuition policy.

Darrell Johnson, a student from Carbondale, will represent students from SIU-C and SIU-E.

The joint committee on college tuition will study current tuition policy to determine whether the cost of tuition is fair to students and relatively equal among public universities and colleges in Illinois. The study will be reviewed by the General Assembly in January.

State senator Jeremiah Joyce, D-Chicago, wrote a resolution for a tuition freeze in response to rising tuition over the last ten years, said David Starrett, executive director of the ISA.

The tuition freeze resolution was never passed but transformed into Joyce's resolution for the Joint Committee on College Tuition. This resolution also empowered the ISA to appoint five student members to the 14 member panel.

The committee task force has frozen tuition temporarily because governing boards were urged not to raise undergraduate tuition until the committee has submitted the report to the General Assembly in January, Susan Hall, chair member of ISA said.

The Illinois Board of Higher Education uses a guideline that states tuition should be no more than one-third of the cost of instruction, yet most Illinois universities including SIU-C exceed that level, according to a report by the Illinois Auditor.

"Tuition shouldn't be more than one-third of instruction," Johnson said.

In the past, IBHE did not penalize institutions exceeding the tuition policy level. Johnson will suggest to the panel to "go back to the one-third policy and have it be enforceable," Johnson said.

What would the legends of baseball earn today?

United Press International

Funny things happen during rainouts.

They had one in Detroit the other day and, among other things, they started showing old clips of yesterday's heroes to entertain the customers while they waited.

First up, Joe DiMaggio ripping his way through his 56-game hitting streak. Incredible. Great swing.

Next, Willie Howard Mays. No. 24 on your scorecard. No. 1 on a lot of people's lists of all-around best players. What a thrill to look at that Giant of a player as he sped around the bases, then shifted into higher gear when he spotted an opening.

Commentary

Gimme some Mickey Mantle, too. Speed and power from both sides of the plate. Great stroke either way.

Don't forget Ted Williams and Sandy Koufax, either.

Great nostalgia for the older fans who saw these superstars in action. An excellent introduction to baseball's past for those who didn't.

How good were they? How do they stand up with other all-time greats? Their numbers are right there for you to look up in The Baseball Encyclopedia.

But it got the mind wondering. Where do they stand on today's measuring scale — the salary scale?

How much do you think Sandy Koufax would be worth if he were at his prime today?

Let's see. Mark Langston and Mark Davis are the current financial benchmarks.

Koufax was a pitcher who went out and threw nine innings of shutout or one-run ball 20-25 times a year? With 10 strikeouts thrown in.

"Koufax would be worth $5-6 million a year easy," Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson responded when the question was put to him.

And might be cheap at that price.

Only two pitchers on the scene today are genuine drawing cards—their fans in the seats no matter where they play. That would be Nolan Ryan and Roger Clemens.

Do people come out to see Langston lose games? Nope. Or Mark Davis perform as the highest priced setup (or mopup) man in the history of baseball? Nope.

How about DiMaggio? Hit for high average, with power, drove in runs, played excellent defense, could run bases and throw. And didn't strike out at all, by today's standards.

If Jose Canseco can command $5 million for a season, bad back and all, would DiMaggio be worth $7 million?

"He," Anderson said, "would want to be part-owner of the franchise."

And might get it, too. What about Mays? Or Mantle? Either of them in his prime also eclipses anyone playing the game today.

This reinforces the theory that while baseball is more popular than ever, it's also sub-standard baseball. And we're going to dilute it further with expansion.

Is the fact Ryan is still able to dominate games a testament to his skills and mental toughness? Or is it witness to the decline of the batters he is facing?

Remember Reggie Jackson? For all his flair, he was only an ordinary outfielder at best.

Yankee owners help Steinbrenner

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Two minority owners of the New York Yankees Tuesday appealed a federal judge's refusal to grant a temporary restraining order blocking the ouster of general partner George Steinbrenner.

On Monday, U.S. District Judge Alice Batchelder in Cleveland refused to grant the order, noting Steinbrenner had signed an agreement with baseball Commissioner Fay Vincent under which he surrendered control of the club.

In their filing with the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, lawyers for Daniel McCarthy and Harold Bowman sought a motion that would immediately order Batchelder to grant the restraining order.

A spokeswoman for the appeals court said the court had not yet taken any action, but she added that such petitions are rarely granted. Attorney Mark Cohn originally filed an appeal, along with a request for a stay pending the appeal and a writ of mandamus.

The writ of mandamus was later withdrawn.

McCarthy and Bowman submitted a lengthy brief with their appeal, and the next step — assuming the appeals court does not summarily deny the appeal — would be for lawyers for major-league baseball to file a response. The spokeswoman said baseball had 10 days to file a response and baseball also had the option to ask the court to dismiss the case.

James Sennett, an attorney at the Cleveland law firm Jones Day Reavis and Pogue, and one of five lawyers who represented baseball at Monday's hearing, said a response would be filed.

"In terms of the application for stay, yes we will be filing something," Sennett said. "We're going to try and work on it right away."

Asked if there were any plans to ask for a dismissal, Sennett said: "We're going to examine all of our alternatives, obviously. That is one of our options."

Patrick McCarthy, also a partner of Jones Day Reavis and Pogue, said Monday Batchelder's decision could not be appealed successfully.

McCarthy owns 4 percent of the Yankees and Bowman owns 0.6 percent. Cohn said an appeals court sometimes will treat a temporary restraining order and a preliminary injunction as the same thing.

"I know that it's not even asked for that often," Cohn said. "It's unusual to be asking for it. It's an unusual kind of case."

Steinbrenner resigned as general partner of the Yankees Monday, although under terms of the agreement he is allowed to be involved in the team's financial operations and his family maintains a 55 percent share of stock in the team. He cannot, however, be involved in the baseball side of the team or attend a game without Vincent's permission.

The suit was designed to keep Steinbrenner as general partner until the lawsuit could be resolved.

Young prospects to lead Salukis

Men's tennis head coach Dick Lefevre is looking to the 1990-1991 season as a rebuilding year, which may seem strange considering his team captured its first Missouri Valley Conference title in 12 years in 1989.

Four of Lefevre's top six players from last season will not be returning this year. Heading the list of players not returning is last year's No. 1 singles player Mickey Maule.

"Mickey is going to be very difficult to replace," Lefevre said. "Anytime you lose your number one singles champ it's hard to find someone to step up and take his place."

No. 5 singles champ, George Hime, Yan Lerval and John Brown are the other top players Lefevre lost this year.

Returning players include senior Joe Demeterco, who played number two behind Mickey Maule last year, and sophomore Rich Stenstrom. Lefevre also will look to sophomore Tim Derouin to pick up the slack for the departing players.

"Three of our top six players this season are freshmen," Lefevre said, "and with the stiff competition we expect to face this year, we're going to lose some matches."

Sooners hope to stay alive in Big 8

United Press International

Having been proved to be vulnerable, the Oklahoma Sooners now have to prove they are not dead.

A year after the ugliest 12 months in Oklahoma football history, the Sooners think they are ready to show not only life but enough festivity to cost their Big Eight brethren dearly in the budget.

The Sooners, ineligible for postseason play because of NCAA sanctions, would cost the Big Eight more than $4 million if they win the conference title. If the Orange Bowl deems the runner-up not up to its standards, it could void the league's contract with the bowl and the huge paycheck that comes with the Jan. 1 appearance in Miami.

But to play the spoiler, the Sooners must return to championship caliber from off-the-field depths.

The 1988 season ended with a Citrus Bowl loss that started a series of problems ranging from criminal charges to NCAA sanctions to the resignation of coach Barry Switzer. Once football started, the Sooners thought everything was behind them, but a tough schedule and key injuries dragged Oklahoma to a 7-4 record and third-place Saluki volleyball coach Patti Hagemeyer accomplished all of her goals in 1989, her first year at SIU-C. Now her main goal is to win the Gateway Conference title.

"We will make a run for it," Hagemeyer said. "The team is working at a level higher than any point in my tenure here, but we are very young. We only have two seniors on the roster. Half of our starters could be freshmen or sophomores."

The Salukis finished last season with a record of 18-11, the first winning record since 1986. In the Gateway tournament they lost to Illinois State in the first round.

Hagemeyer plans to change that record this year.

have been difficult," Hagemeyer said, "but I sincerely believe this year's team will play with more intensity and more confidence."

The Salukis qualified in 1989 to play in the Gateway tournament for the sixth straight year, but Illinois State knocked them out in their first match.

Illinois State, the defending Gateway champions, have proved to be the Salukis biggest rival. They hold six conference titles. The Salukis play Illinois State on Oct. 12.

Hagemeyer came to SIU-C last February after gaining experience as assistant coach at Notre Dame.

Hagemeyer

Her recruiting class at Notre Dame was rated the fifth best in the nation by American Volleyball magazine.

A St. Paul, Minn. native, Hagemeyer played for the University of Minnesota for four years. She was named Athlete of the Year in 1980, and in 1986, she was inducted into the school's Hall of Fame.

The Salukis open this season at the Ball State Invitational Aug. 31-Sept. 1. There the Salukis will try to notch their first win ever over powerful Colorado State.

The first home meet for the Salukis is Sept. 7-8 with the Saluki Invitational at Davies Gymnasium. Hagemeyer seeks first-time wins over Bowling Green, Alabama, and Northwestern.

East German party leaders agree to Oct. 14 unification

EAST BERLIN (UPI) — Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere and leaders of all other East German political parties agreed Tuesday that German unification will take place Oct. 14. The officials need the approval of their parties, but there was little doubt that the proposal would be approved, ending weeks of disagreements over the timetable of unification. De Maiziere said that the officials agreed at a special all-party meeting that the Volkskammer, the East German parliament, should formally declare on Oct. 9 its intention of joining.

No end to violence among feuding tribes

PRETORIA, South Africa (UPI) — President Frederik de Klerk and Zulu leader Mangosuthu Buthelezi met Tuesday in efforts to halt a wave of violence between supporters of his Inkatha movement and the African National Congress that has left more than 400 dead in nine days of bloody clashes. No immediate breakthrough was reported in efforts to stop the outbreak of suburban tribal strife not seen at 42 years of minority white rule, and police reported a surge of violence Tuesday in the townships of Tokoza and KwaThema.

Ethnic violence death toll hits at least 12

MOSCOW (UPI) — The leader of Azerbaijan warned Mikhail Gorbachev Tuesday that his republic may be forced to take independent action if Soviet troops cannot stop attacks by Armenian extremists. The death toll from four days of ethnic violence along the two republics' border rose to at least 12, including Soviet soldiers who died trying to keep the warring sides apart. Armenian deputies met with the commanders of illegal Armenian armies and persuaded them to impose a ceasefire, but the truce was quickly broken.

Military spending on hold with gulf crisis

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Middle East crisis has brought more uncertainty to the future of military spending, in which U.S. contractors are already engaged in a battle to attract scarce federal dollars for their projects. Even before Iraq invaded Kuwait, big name weapons makers poured millions of dollars into the coffers of lawmakers to get any advantage over the competition. Lockheed Corp. topped the list, donating $332,000 to senators and House members between Jan. 1, 1989, and July, while Northrop Corp. contributed $310,800.

FBI agent attributes honesty to Mormons

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Richard Miller, the only FBI agent ever charged with espionage, testified Tuesday that his admissions to the FBI that he passed secrets to his Soviet lover sprang partially from a concern about his "personal spirituality." Miller, 53, said he wanted to be truthful during interrogations in 1984 with FBI agents who, like him, were Mormons. "I wanted to be so honest even to the side of error," Miller testified during a hearing. The hearing was held before Miller's third trial, which was expected to begin later Tuesday.

Start of school brings threat of strikes for state students

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — More than 8,500 students and 510 teachers in school districts scattered around the state are under a threat of teacher strikes, the head of a state labor board said Tuesday. Robert Perkovich, Illinois Educational Labor Relations board executive director, said more districts usually file strike notices as the school year gets under way during the next few weeks in Illinois' nearly 960 school districts. "This is not an atypical number of notices for this time of year," said Clay Marquardt of the Illinois Education Association.

Student's local landscape paintings on display

By Melynda Findlay
Staff Writer

The Shawnee National Forest is one of the greatest gifts Southern Illinois has to offer, local artist Jill McHenry said.

"I want my paintings to enhance people's appreciation for the area," McHenry said.

A graduate student in art at SIUC, McHenry uses her scenic paintings of Southern Illinois landscapes for just that purpose.

"Southern Illinois is blessed with beautiful landscapes," McHenry said. "That's why I chose this area to paint. I've always had a great admiration and love for the woods, even as a child."

McHenry currently has 20 paintings on display at the University Museum in Fanner Hall that were produced to help her meet the master of fine arts degree requirements.

Unlike many artists who paint in their studios from slides and photographs, McHenry does her work outside.

"On slides, everything is all figured out for you," McHenry said. "An artist's thoughts and emotions are what goes down on the canvas, and painting outside gives me an emotional tie to the landscape."

"I can't relate the great intensity of the elements if I'm not participating," she added.

Her "participation" in the elements has given her unique perspective on landscapes.

"Colors and forms in the landscapes aren't necessarily real," McHenry said. "I just throw paint down into big blocks of color on the canvas and then refine it. I paint what I see, which isn't always an objective reality."

"I can't always reach the real intensity, especially in the spring and fall," McHenry said. "I love color."

McHenry, Centralia native, chooses these Shawnee Forest landscapes simply by driving around and looking.

"Anyone can stop and look at a spectacular scene and say, 'Wow,'" McHenry said. "So I stopped to ask myself, 'What elements make this scene so appealing that I had to stop and look?'"

The exhibit will remain on display through Saturday.

Court clears way for logging work

CHICAGO (UPI) — A controversial timber harvest in Southern Illinois' Shawnee National Forest has moved one step closer to reality now that a federal appeals court has rejected an environmental group's request to stop the logging.

The 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said it would not grant an emergency order to halt proposed logging in Jackson County south of Murphysboro.

"We're pleased, but this really doesn't change anything," said Tom Hagerty, a spokesman for the Forest Service.

Hagerty said work had begun on a logging road into the area after one protester was arrested for standing in front of the roadbuilder's bulldozer last week.

As many as 15 protesters are still camped illegally in the forest. Environmentalists threw rocks at a Forest Service truck Tuesday and blocked the logging road with abandoned cars last weekend but there have been no serious acts of violence, Hagerty said.

"It seems like we're in kind of an uneasy truce," he said.

The environmental group Regional Association of Concerned Environmentalists, or RACE, had appealed an order drafted July 27 by U.S. District Judge James Foreman in Benton.

Foreman ruled the Forest Service could allow a private company to cut down 25.7 acres of trees in the Fairview Church area.

RACE, Shawnee Earth First and other environmentalists have protested the proposed harvest for almost two months because they say it amounts to "clearcutting," a method where all the trees are removed from a certain area.

Federal officials maintain the trees will be cut through a process called "group selection" that will harvest clumps of trees spread out over 144 acres of the forest.

Hagerty said the timber harvest could begin in as little as two weeks thanks to the Monday's appeals court ruling. Spokesmen for the environmentalists were not available for comment.

Also Tuesday, Hagerty rejected environmentalists' claims that a proposed new timber harvest near Lake Kincaid in Jackson County would worsen siltation in the popular recreation spot.

The government announced plans last week for the harvest.

Gas price gouging must be eliminated

THE ESCALATING crisis in the Persian Gulf has caused not only gas prices to escalate in the United States, but tempers as well.

Local politicians angered over a 20-cent-a-gallon increase in gas prices have called for investigations into the price gouging. We applaud their efforts to stabilize, and hopefully reduce, the skyrocketing prices before a full-blown economic crisis is at hand.

U.S. SEN. Paul Simon, D-Makanda, said some U.S. companies are taking advantage of the consumers with the hiked-up gas prices, and called for President George Bush to look into the problem.

Although the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait is the main culprit in the rising gas prices, larger American companies are taking advantage of the situation and are hitting us where it hurts worse—the pocketbook.

It's time to fight back.

IF POSSIBLE, walk to school. Most students live on the outskirts of campus and are able to walk to their classes. The ever-present parking problem could also be curtailed if more students chose to walk rather than drive. Furthermore, the fewer cars on the roads, the fewer toxic emissions in the air. We have the opportunity to help clean the environment as well as conserve gas.

IF DRIVING your car is a must, make sure it's tuned-up. A report from the U.S. Department of Energy said a poorly tuned car could use up to 9 percent more gasoline than a well-tuned one. Keep at a constant speed and keep braking at a minimal. Remove all excess weight from the car, and don't overspill when pumping the gas.

TRY SHOPPING around for the lowest gas prices in town. Owners have managed to keep prices at some gas stations, albeit few, at a reasonable rate. Reward the dealers and distributors who are working to keep the price low by buying their gas. These places might not be conveniently located, but this may get the message out to other oil companies that we want the gouging to stop.

GO AHEAD and write to you local politicians, urging them to launch an investigation into the gas price surge that seems to have fallen upon us. If the public gets fed up enough with this problem, perhaps we'll see some solutions. The end to the crisis in the Gulf may not be in sight, but hopefully an end to this gas crisis in America is.

Quotable Quotes

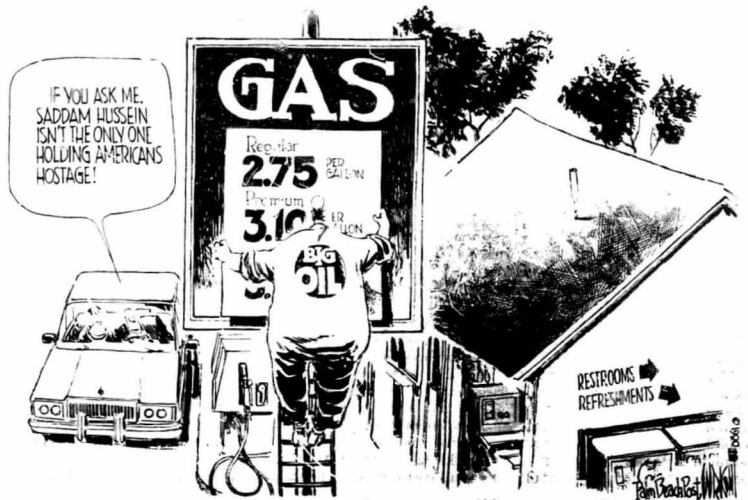

"I am available to make love with Hussein to achieve peace in the Middle East." —Italian legislator and former pornography actress Ilona Staller said in an attempt to put an end to the crisis in the Persian Gulf.

"I have nothing left. I'm going down to the five-and-dime store to get a little costume jewelry until I get this other stuff back." — Oil heiress Carolyn Skelly after being robbed of more than $1 million of uninsured diamonds and pearls.

"Now that the Cold War is over, I am afraid Arabs are replacing the Russians as the enemy in the minds of Americans." — Jawad George, executive director of the National Association of Arab-Americans, said in reference to Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

Drinking age needs lowering

Daily Illini

THE DRIVE for a federally mandated drinking age of 21 was a cause to celebrate of the election year of 1984. Awareness of drunk driving's social damage had reached its zenith, and the anti-drunk-driving lobby was pressing its case into the halls of Congress, looking for a way to legislate drunk driving out of existence.

With massive public support but no real way to legislate an end to drunk driving, the lobby, led by such groups as Mothers Against Drunk Driving and Save Our Students, chose a non-controversial goal: They pushed for an increase in the drinking age.

THEY HAD statistical support for their cause, of course; they were bolstered by a seldom-challenged study by the Presidential Commission on Drunk Driving, which asserted that a national drinking age of 21 would save 730 young lives each year. Other statistics showed that 16- to 24-year-olds, who constitute only 20 percent of all licensed drivers, were involved in 42 percent of fatal alcohol-related crashes.

BUT MADD and its ilk were also riding a wave of overzealous, emotional politics, and Congress, drunk on sobriety, passed a law mandating that states pass a minimum drinking age of 21 or lose up to 10 percent of their federal highway funds. The states quickly fell into line.

In Illinois, the impact was scarcely noticeable; four years before this law was passed, the drinking age rose from 19 to 21. But in Illinois as well as states across the nation, it became clear that the laws did nothing to stop drinking in the underage population—even among high-school students.

SOME RECENT statistics have indicated that although drinking among teen-agers has increased, fatal crashes involving drunk teenage drivers have decreased dramatically; such numbers perhaps indicate that public awareness, not stricter alcohol laws, is a better way to decrease drunk driving. SW II 11/89

Certainly, the percentage of fatal accidents involving alcohol among 19- to 20-year-olds in Illinois declined only slightly in the year after the 21-year-old drinking age was passed; it rose again in the year after that, according to a study published in the July 1986 edition of Consumers' Research magazine.

RECENT STUDIES have also indicated that despite the increase in the drinking age, the proportion of under-age college students who drink is higher than the proportion of legal-age students who drink.

Ineffectiveness aside, however, the martinets of alcohol use have left unanswered an important question of legal equity—namely, why is consumption of a specific category of beverages considered an adult privilege to be granted no sooner than a person's 21st birthday?

And why is this so if, for instance, the law assumes youth responsible as adults for criminal actions at 17? Ironically, a 20-year-old can be arrested as an adult for underage drinking.

THE STATE also assumes that 18-year-olds are responsible enough to take care of themselves without parental care; the Selective Service assumes 18-year-old males responsible enough to register for the draft and responsible enough to report for duty in time of war. Yet the law never assumes a 20-year-old responsible enough to drink.

YES, SAY some advocates of the higher drinking age, but 18- to 20-year-olds are not responsible enough to drink safely and thus pose a threat to society. Following that same logic, however, we would also raise the minimum driving age to 20 and take away the licenses of drivers older than 75, since both groups, statistically, are the most dangerous drivers on the highways and pose a serious threat of their own.

THE TRAGIC death last year of 19-year-old University student Joseph Irey has become a rallying cry for raising Champaign's bar-entrance age not just because Irey is believed to have been intoxicated when he fell off a fire escape.

Rather, it has become a rallying cry because he was 19 and is believed to have been intoxicated. Had Irey been 23, or 40, there would have been no cries for raising the drinking age to 24 or 41. Had Irey been sober, there would have been no cries for outlawing fire escapes.

RATHER IN the name of fairness, perhaps it would be wise to change the legal age of adulthood to 19. The current legal framework, at worst, is patently unfair to the 18- to 20-year-old age group, a category that could be termed "under age adults."

Saddam called "cornered coward"

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Saddam Hussein hides behind the diapers and petticoats of Iraq's foreign hostages, but he remains as dangerously unpredictable as any other cornered coward.

Incredibly, to some of his Moslem neighbors in the Middle East, the Baghdad butcher who raped tiny Kuwait still is regarded as the heroic "Sword of the Arabs."

As for Saddam's main adversary, vacationing George Bush looks less than heroically presidential as he fishes frantically and golfs grimly while America teeters on the brink of war.

Bush briefly laid aside his rod and clubs Monday to warn the Baghdad bully in a Baltimore speech to the Veterans of Foreign Wars that he holds him responsible for the safety of the helpless hostages, who include babies and women.

By making pawns of innocents abroad, the president contended, Saddam has earned "the scorn and condemnation of the entire world." The president's belated use of the term "hostage" demonstrated his deepening concern for an estimated 3,000 Americans held in Iraq and occupied Kuwait.

Still, some of us were not reassured when Bush resumed his vacation in Maine.

White House press secretary

Marlin Fitzwater says it is important for the American people to see that the president "is not holed up in the White House."

The idea is that Bush must demonstrate that he is not held hostage by Saddam's hostage-holding.

Baloney! When a foreign dictator takes thousands of Americans hostage and starts to deploy them in a human shield, the commander-in-chief should put his golf cart and head for the oval office.

Bush got a little testy during the weekend over the television images of him vacationing during the national crisis.

Trump off billionaire listing

NEW YORK (UPI) — Donald Trump's fading fortune no longer rates him a listing by Fortune magazine as one of the world's 182 individuals or families who have assets of $1 billion or more.

The magazine's Aug. 27 issue, due on newsstands next week, will drop Trump from its annual listing of the world's billionaires, it was learned Tuesday.

Magazine spokeswoman Emma Dockendorff said Fortune put Trump on the list in 1988, reportedly after he complained about not being on the list the previous year.

"He said he was a billionaire that year, but we didn't accept it," Dockendorff said. "Indeed we stated in the magazine that published reports estimated his net worth as high as $3 billion, but — despite the fast talk and hyperbole

— he cashed in at below a billion." In 1988, however, Fortune was convinced and listed Trump as being worth $1.3 billion and noting that he still claimed to be worth $3 billion. The magazine put his picture on the cover. In 1989, it listed him as being worth $1.7 billion.

"Donald Trump has now fallen off the list due to his faltering finances, reducing him to mere millionaire status," Dockendorff said.

Still at the top of the list was Brunei's oil-rich 44-year-old Sultan Hassanah Bolkiah, whose worth of $25 billion is unchanged from last year. His fortune could climb even higher if the Persian Gulf showdown forces oil prices up the magazine observed.

Sheikh Jaber Ahmed Al-Sabah, Kuwait's ousted ruler, isn't even in the Brunei ruler's class. His family's fortune is listed by Fortune as $4.8 billion, much of it in foreign investments that bring the Al-Sabah dynasty in more income than oil ever did.

"Sheikh Jaber and his clan may well return, but even if they do not, they won't be forced to drive camels for a living," the magazine observed.

King Fahd of threatened Saudi Arabia and his family rank second with a shared fortune of some $18 billion, followed by Forrest E. Mars Sr. of Las Vegas, Nev., the Mars Bars candy tycoon, and his three children, $11.7 billion, and publishers Sam and Donald Newhouse and family of New York, $11.3 billion. The Reichman family of Toronto's Olympia & York Developments came in fifth with $11.1 billion.

fears," she said. "The result is people walking away from the epidemic pretending it can't happen here."

The commission traveled to rural Georgia where it examined the AIDS epidemic.

"In Georgia, the number of AIDS cases has tripled in the past two years," the report states. "For the first time, the spread of the disease in rural Georgia and small cities has equalled the growth of infection in metropolitan Atlanta."

The Commission's report, its third since it was formed in August of 1989, also cited severe problems with the AIDS clinical trial program, the fight against opportunistic infections and a shortage of health care workers willing to treat people with AIDS and HIV infection.

Women, minorities and children are underrepresented in clinical trials designed to find treatments for the diseases, according to the report.

"To put it bluntly, the number of people involved in clinical trials (12,000) versus the number of people eligible for clinical trials is pitifully small," the report states. "The ground rules for trials often seem to rigid to permit many (such as drug users) from being included."

The report criticized the National Institutes of Health (NIH) and the nation's academic health centers for their performance regarding opportunistic infections and clinical trials.

While the report said the NIH was moving too slowly on treatments for opportunistic infections — diseases which strike people with AIDS because of their weakened condition — Osborn said it was trying to take a carrot and stick approach.

"We are urging (the NIH) to continue to do their job and to continue what is a relatively recent set of attentions to research involving women and children," she said. "We were intending to say good job. Do more of that."

The lack of health care workers willing to treat people with AIDS and HIV is a "crises shortage," and Osborn said it was the "least excusable" problem the commission found.

The commission recommended the establishment of a comprehensive community-based health care system, more AIDS education and outreach services, expanding the NIH clinical trials program and a renewed emphasis on educating and retaining health care professionals.

"I think there has to be a community consensus that these are sick people, not guilty people and that they deserve to be cared for as all Americans," Osborn said.

The old system was similar to a phone tree. The police would contact certain areas on campus and who would in turn contact other areas. The problem with this, Ferry said, was that the chain would break down along the way and some people would not receive the message.

When the police receive notice of an emergency, the first of three phone calls is made. Each call reaches 25 phones in a little over a minute.

Once this is done, a recording will say, "Stand by for an emergency message." The message is read and can then be relayed throughout campus. It takes between three and five minutes to complete the calls and deliver the initial message.

Each designated phone area is required to submit a plan to police describing how it intends to notify people. Some, for example, have public address systems while others need someone to contact each room or area in each building.

"I really believe the system will work quite well for us," Ferry said. Installation was completed and the first test was run last Friday. "It

"He gave them hell for being so lazy," Cunningham said.

Bringing conspiracy charges against the oil companies for an anti-trust suit is not likely to occur, but the government could get some money back if consumer violations are proved, Cunningham said.

"That should be a high priority of the Justice Department," he said. "How much oil is threatened by the Middle East crisis is not clear. If it is threatened, then why did prices rise so quickly?"

The attorneys general adopted a 15-point platform which includes setting up an investigative task force, amending anti-trust legislation and sponsoring new price-gouging legislation.

Hartigan wrote to major oil companies two weeks ago asking for cooperation in investigations and for restraint in rising their prices. Amoco and Shell replied and pledged their full cooperation, Cunningham said.

Bailout plan for Trump approved

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — Donald Trump's faltering casino empire won a reprieve Tuesday by New Jersey gaming regulators who approved his plan for a $65 million emergency loan from 70 banks.

Lawyers said that without the loan, which required approval of the state Casino Control Commission, Trump would have been forced into bankruptcy.

Commission Chairwoman Valerie Armstrong said the board approved the plan with "severe reservations," adding, "This is not a total solution."

If the commission had rejected the plan, Trump would have had to surrender his interest in his three Atlantic City casinos, and the commission would have appointed a conservator to run the casinos until they could be sold to the highest bidder.

worked beautifully," Ferry said. Eighty-four percent of the 75 phones reported receiving the message.

Some of the people were not aware of the test and did not finish listening to the message. "I want to see 100 percent," Ferry said.

Additional tests will be run monthly.

Ferry stressed the importance of notifying people of chemical spills and explosions occurring on railroad tracks. "Anything and everything comes through this town on a constant basis," he said.

lawyer in Chicago who was appointed by Hartigan as a special assistant attorney general to investigate the increases, has filed interrogatories with the oil companies, Cunningham said.

"They (the interrogatories) are 17 pages of questions, not technically a subpoena," Cunningham said, "questions like who runs this, what communications have been made, and who is in charge of this. But these things take time."

SIU-Voralberg approaching reality

By Michelle R. Walker
Staff Writer

For Bruno Gruber, an SIU campus in Austria started as a dream.

By the end of fall semester plans for that dream could become a reality.

The vision began in the mind of Gruber, a physics professor at SIU-C and a native of Voralberg, where the campus would be located. Gruber still has a home and some family there.

Voralberg lies on the western border of Austria and is isolated from the rest of the country by a mountain range.

Although the arrangement is not official yet, Gruber said, "There is no longer a question of whether this will be or not be; it is only a question of precisely what it will be."

Gruber taught a symposium in science in Voralberg over the past few years, and he said SIU-C and Voralberg already are linked by a formal corporation agreement.

Several SIU-C professors with different backgrounds have taught in Voralberg, and the branch campus would be the effect of a relationship that has been growing gradually over the past several years, he said.

University President John C. Guyon went to Voralberg in August to negotiate plans for the new campus.

A feasibility study is being conducted by a consolidating company based in Frankfurt, and Guyon said the results of the study will be disclosed in November and then talks between SIU-C and Voralberg will resume.

All agreements then will be brought before SIU Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit and the SIU

Graphic by Derek Jay Wilson

Board of Trustees for approval.

"The Austrian initiative is one of many efforts to cultivate and sustain a global perspective at the University," Pettit said. "It will provide unusual opportunities for SIU faculty and students to be near the center of a new East-West rapprochement in Europe."

Beverly Walker, coordinator for the branch campus located in Japan, said it is important for SIU-C to branch out on the international scale.

"A major thrust of this university is to strive toward international dimension," Walker said.

With the changes in Europe, Walker said the countries are becoming a common community and a loose federation of states. If Austria becomes a member of the European Economic Community, which will begin in 1992, all students in EEC countries will be able to attend state schools in other EEC countries without paying outside tuition rates.

"It is important for the U.S. to be involved, to be a part of all that. And the university is a good place to start," Walker said.

Gruber said, there are many factors making it possible for SIU to branch out to Voralberg. First, Voralberg is the only state in Austria without its own university and the people want one, he said.

Voralberg has a stable economy, making funding for the project very plausible, Gruber said. He also said all expenses for the branch location would be taken care of by Voralberg.

In addition, Gruber said he has the support of both SIU-C administration and Voralberg politicians for the branch campus. He has been working with Guyon and Charles Klasek, vice president of academic affairs, to plan this project.

"The way I see the program, we are not limited to any field," said Gruber, adding that European universities specialize as either technical or fine arts schools.

At first it will probably offer only a limited number of majors in science or engineering, he said.

"When people from Voralberg visit SIU-C, they are flabbergasted with the potential," Gruber said. "They cannot even comprehend it until they see it."

Private U.S. liberal arts colleges dwindling

NEW YORK (UPI) — Private liberal arts colleges in the United States have dwindled to just over 200 and are threatened with extinction as the demand for professional degrees grows, the former president of one of the small schools believes.

Writing in the current issue of The College Board Review, David Breneman said he had reviewed about 600 schools that define themselves as liberal arts colleges and whittled the list to 212 institutions that do not "cater to current student concerns with the job market."

"The liberal arts college as we know it is disappearing from the landscape, and another type of institution — the professional college — is taking its place," said Breneman, former president of Kalamazoo College in Michigan.

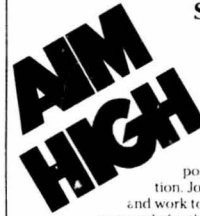

Breneman defined a typical liberal arts college as residential, with an enrollment of between 800 and 2,500 students between 18 and 24 which offers only bachelor of arts degrees in about 20 majors encompassing the arts, humanities, languages, social sciences and physical sciences.

"Only the liberal arts colleges are distinguished by a mission of providing four-year baccalaureate education exclusively, in a setting that emphasizes and rewards good teaching above all else," he said.

Breneman said many colleges that still define themselves as liberal arts schools offer a high percentage of professional degrees.

"Perhaps there is no 'good' alternative for many of these college as they struggle to survive in a rapidly changing marketplace," he said. "Because of their valuable and unique characteristics, though, it will be a serious loss to the nation."

Center for massage to open

By Stephanie Steiner
Staff Writer

Lynn Norman, a 1987 SIUC graduate of psychology, really knows how to take the kinks out of life.

She plans to open a Muscle Therapy and Wellness Center at 1515 Walnut in Murphysboro in early September.

On Aug. 11, Norman and her 56 classmates graduated from The Chicago School of Massage Therapy.

Inspired by the Norman Cousin's book, "Mind-Body Awareness," Norman wanted to explore the mind-body connection.

"I wanted to deal with the whole person, not just the mind," Norman said.

CSMT, a member of the American Massage Therapy Association, is one of 56 massage therapy schools in the United States. However, it is the only one in Illinois.

Since its opening in 1981, more than 600 students have graduated from CSMT.

"Recently, there has been a resurgence and growth in interest in massage therapy," said Robert Champe, an administrator at CSMT.

Students must have a high school diploma and previous experience in working with the body in order to be considered for the CSMT, Champe said. Previous massage therapy workshop experience also is necessary.

Candidates must meet these requirements and be interviewed by an administrator to be admitted to the CSMT.

Once in the CSMT program, a student must complete 450 hours professional training and 100 hours of internship experience in this year long program. The cost of tuition at CSMT is $4400.

Classes in anatomy, physiology, theory and practice of massage, as well as specialty training in sports massage, acupuncture and muscle therapy are required courses for CSMT students.

The CSMT internship program features massage therapy training at some of the major athletic events in Chicago, including the Bud Lite Triathlon series, the Chicago Marathon and the Illinois Masters' swim meet.

NASA blamed of ozone depletion

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — The exhaust from space shuttle launches makes NASA one of the nation's biggest contributors to ozone depletion, an environmental group said Tuesday.

"Each launch of the space shuttle or the Air Force's Titan IV does more to deplete the fragile ozone layer ... than the annual ground-level emissions of chlorofluorocarbons from most individual (industrial) plants," said the report by the National Toxics Campaign Fund of Boston.

"No industrial plant in Florida releases quantities of CFC-113 as much as a single shuttle launch," said Lenny Siegel, of Mountain View, Calif., author of the report.

Shuttle launches are exempt from air safety regulations, and unless they can be brought into compliance with those rules, NASA should be forced to abandon the use of solid rocket fuel, the report said.

It also said that before the United States considers any new space ventures, the government should re-evaluate the environmental impact of the space program.

"We've just got a copy of the report. We're in the process of reviewing it, and we'll have a response tomorrow morning," said Ed Campion, a NASA spokesman in Washington.

However, he said that NASA prepared an environmental impact study in the 1970s before launching the shuttle program.

The environmental damage caused by the shuttle program was less than what was projected, Campion said.

Shuttles and the Titan IV are propelled into space by solid rocket fuel, and it is the exhaust from that fuel that causes the environmental damage cited in the report.

Each shuttle booster emits into the atmosphere exhaust containing 75 tons of hydrogen chloride, a substance that breaks down ozone, the report said.

In 1978, NASA predicted that if it were to make 40 shuttle launches a year, that would cause an ozone depletion of .25 percent.

The ozone layer screens out harmful ultraviolet light from the sun, and studies indicate its depletion could lead to an increase in skin cancer.

The European Ariane rocket and Soviet Energia rocket use liquid-fuel, which the report said was less damaging to the environment.

Groups sue against waste disposal deregulation

Environmentalists: NRC plan could expose public to dangerous levels of radiation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Twenty-nine environmental groups and the state of Maine, alleging unreasonable health risks, sued Tuesday to block a Nuclear Regulatory Commission plan to deregulate disposal of some low-level radioactive waste.

In announcing the lawsuit, the groups also released an analysis showing that Illinois, Pennsylvania, New York, Georgia and North Carolina likely would be most affected by the new NRC policy.

The groups, filing suit in the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, charged the NRC "below regulatory concern" policy would violate federal nuclear safety laws by exposing the public to dangerously high levels of cancer-causing radiation.

"The NRC's below regulatory concern rule trades off people's lives in favor of the financial interests of the nuclear industry," said Joan Claybrook, president of Public Citizen, the Ralph Nader group that is leading the legal effort.

NRC officials contend the new policy would pose little — if any — additional health risk to the public and that its deregulation policy will free up NRC regulators and industry resources to focus on more serious radiation problems.

However, Claybrook said while

NRC officials minimized the possible health threat, "Our judgment of what is small is different from the NRC."

The NRC policy would ease environmental protection requirements for the disposal of slightly radioactive waste that, in the judgment of NRC officials, does not pose a significant health threat to the public.

Before the NRC's June 27 policy change, nuclear power plant operators, medical research facilities and other generators of low-level waste were required to ship that material to specially designed landfills with stringent environmental controls.

Under the new policy, the NRC will consider requests from industry for exemptions from those strict disposal regulations and permission to ship waste to ordinary municipal landfills or incinerators. The policy also would allow slightly radioactive materials to be recycled into consumer products.

The NRC said it would not grant exemptions for any wastes that could expose people living near landfills to more than 10 millirems of radiation each year — about half the exposure received in getting a chest X-ray.

Among the items that might qualify for exemptions are contaminated protection clothing worn by nuclear power plant workers, diagnostic instruments used in hospitals and laboratory animal carcasses.

NRC officials say they will carefully limit the number of exemptions to ensure cumulative exposures remain below 100 millirems.

In comparison, Americans are exposed to an estimated 360 millirems of "background" radiation each year in their daily lives from such natural sources as radon gas and cosmic rays.

Despite NRC assurances, the deregulation policy has been criticized by the Environmental Protection Agency, which charges the NRC plan could lead to much larger exposures than anticipated by the commission. The policy also has been questioned by NRC staff officials and one NRC commissioner.

Critics note the NRC's own safety analysis determined the deregulation plan could pose a one-in-2,500 risk of cancer to the most exposed individual. In contrast, the EPA generally bars the use of any pesticide posing a cancer risk greater than one in a million.

Minority program offers tutoring for faltering engineering students

By Brandi Tipps
Staff Writer

University engineering students not prepared in high school for the engineering curriculum may find success difficult, but help is on the way.

A new tutoring center will be opening Sept. 4 for engineering students.

The center, located in Technology Building A, Room 308, will be open from 7 to 9 p.m., Sunday through Thursday.

Graduate assistants and student workers will tutor subjects like basic math, algebra, calculus, chemistry, physics and biology, said the director of the Minority Engineering Program, Johnny B. Patterson.

"I initiated the program because I felt it was needed," he said. "We were recycling so many minority students."

Patterson said the students were being recycled by repeating so many classes and receiving inadequate grades to continue to advanced levels of study.

A "C" in college algebra is an inadequate grade to continue on into calculus, he said.

Many students have problems in college because they were not adequately prepared in high school, he said.

Some students chose not to take the necessary science and math courses while in high school, now they have to make up for it in college, Patterson said.

Other students were advised by counselors to take basic math and science courses their freshman and sophomore years because they were not sure what field they were interested in, he said.

High school algebra does not prepare students for the engineering field — they should have finished calculus by their senior year, Patterson said.

Freshman students who received scholarships from the Minority Engineering Program are required to attend the tutoring center as a part of their scholarship package, he said.

The students will be required to attend a tutoring session at least one day per week, maybe more depending on their studies and the difficulty of their course, said Patterson.

The center is restricted to engineering students from 7 to 8 p.m., but will be open to all students from 8 to 9 p.m., he said.

Patterson said he feels the center might get off to a slow start because it is a new and many students may not know about it.

It will definitely pick up speed towards finals week and should be pretty active all throughout the spring 1991 semester, he said.

The center is supported by the Minority Engineering Program.

Probe image inconclusive

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — Photo-like test images from the Magellan probe indicate the hidden surface of Venus is a tortured, alien landscape wracked by volcanoes, lava-filled valleys, and giant fault systems, scientists said Tuesday.

Whether the hellish planet is still geologically active, or whether its surface is made up of slowly moving continent-size "plates" like those making up Earth's crust, remains to be seen.

But scientists at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory said Tuesday Magellan should answer their most fundamental questions about Earth's sister planet despite a glitch last week, possibly caused by a passing cosmic ray, that temporarily knocked the spacecraft out of contact with Earth.

"We can't tell from what we've seen if (Venus is) currently active or even whether the proposed volcanism that we're seeing is very young," said project scientist Stephen Saunders. "But we're seeing such a small part of the planet. It'll just take some time for us to identify the areas that are potentially active."

He made the comments at a news conference Tuesday highlighted by the release of a series of black-and-white pictures taken by Magellan's radar mapping system just before contact was temporarily lost Thursday.

"We (are) seeing volcanic depressions of various kinds, volcanic lava flows and very highly faulted regions that are called 'tessera,' the Latin word for tile," Saunders said in an earlier interview.

"It's a very highly deformed, faulted terrain, very rugged. We've seen that before at much larger scale, and now with Magellan we're seeing it all the way down to the scale of a few hundred yards," he said.

While scientists are elated with Magellan's initial results, JPL engineers are still not sure what caused a computer glitch last week that threw Magellan into a protective form of computer-induced hibernation.

At least three problems, including the loss of a computer's electronic "heartbeat," derailed Magellan's three-week test program almost as soon as it got started.

But engineers regained contact with the spacecraft last Friday and officials are optimistic they will be able to get the program back on track.

Campus Ministries caters to students' spiritual needs

University policy allows clergy to visit students by invitation, but clergy cannot solicit religion door-to-door

By Leslie Colp
Staff Writer

Diverse denominations come together under the Campus Ministries umbrella in hopes of fulfilling the spiritual needs of the University community.

Campus Ministries is composed of 15 distinct groups from the American Baptist Campus Ministry and the Newman Center to the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation and the Wesley Foundation. Campus Ministries "believe in, and affirm the presence of God among us as a people," according to its charter of 1980.

Although Campus Ministries has no legal incorporation and is not a recognized student group, it provides a "forum for ideas to be discussed," said the Rev. Al Turl, president of Campus Ministries.

In the past, some of these topics included supporting an end to the annual Halloween party and taking a stand against alcohol abuse. In addition to providing counseling, Bible studies and fellowship, Campus Ministries works with SIU-C in contacting students when a family crisis occurs.

If desired, a campus minister representing the student's faith or denomination will deliver the message.

Campus Ministries has not been without its share of obstacles.

"Access to residence halls has been difficult," Turl said. "Our group has had to ban together to visit our people in the dormitories."

According to a memorandum written in March 1987 by Sam McVay, acting director of Housing and Food Service, "any clergy is welcome to visit any student from whom an invitation has been received."

Soliciting door-to-door in the residence halls, however, is not allowed.

Campus Ministries is allowed to present special programs at residence halls but are restricted from promoting a specific religion. The exception to this occurs when the residence hall governments approve such a program.

"Some schools simply don't allow it (religious programs)" said Steve Kirk, assistant director of Residence Life. "Others are more liberal. We try to walk a middle line."

Any ministry recognized by a sponsoring religious body may become a member.

Council alarmed by holy rituals

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A City Council panel, alarmed by reports that hundreds of animals are beheaded, disembowled and tortured in occult rituals each year, endorsed a proposed ordinance Monday outlawing the sacrifice and maiming of animals for religious purposes.

The proposal, based on a model developed by the Humane Society, is designed to curb the practices of Santeria, a secretive African-Cuban religion, and various forms of satanism and black magic.

Devotees who practice the ritual killing and maiming have complained in the past that such a law would be a violation of their freedom of religion, but none appeared at the Public Safety Committee meeting to speak against the proposal, which was approved unanimously.

Michael Burns, a supervisor in the Department of Animal Regulation, said the agency received reports of at least 100 incidents in the last six months in which goats, sheep, chickens and other livestock were killed in Santeria rituals.

The killings primarily involve a "cleansing ritual" in which a so-called holy person decapitates the animal and then drains the blood.

Mother Theresa befriends murderer, appeals to parole board to spare life

ATLANTA (UPI) — A murderer scheduled to die Wednesday was spared by the state parole board Tuesday after requests for clemency from friends and relatives of his victim and from Nobel Peace Prize winner Mother Teresa.

The Georgia Board of Pardons and Paroles commuted Willie Neal Moore's death sentence to life in prison. The action came a day after Mother Teresa, the Roman Catholic nun who has devoted her life to work among the poor, called the panel from India to ask that Moore's life be spared.

Moore, 39, had been scheduled to die in the electric chair Wednesday evening for the April 1974 robbery-slaying of Fredger Stapleton, 74, of Wrens, Ga. Moore, encouraged by Stapleton's nephew, went to the man's house to rob him of money reportedly hidden in his home.

When Stapleton came to the door, he fired a shotgun blast at Moore, but missed. Moore fired back, killing the victim.

The parole board issued the decision to commute Moore's death sentence about an hour after hearing a final plea for Moore's life from his attorneys.

Among those gathered in support of the commutation were friends and family members of the victim, who said that taking Moore's life would not represent an act of justice.

A parole board official said Mother Teresa asked the panel to "do what Jesus would do" — grant clemency — during a two-minute phone call Monday from her headquarters in Calcutta, India.

"She also said she would be praying, and hoped the people making the decision would also," said Marsha Bailey, public affairs assistant.

He has gained the support of hundreds of Christians.

Bush shows veto-threat flair in office

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush's unbroken series of successful vetoes and the threat of more has allowed him to dictate the terms of legislation and, to an extent, the agenda of the Democratic Congress.

Since taking office 19 months ago, Bush has vetoed 13 bills. Each time, Congress, despite strong Democratic majorities in the Senate and House, has caved in — failing to muster the two-thirds vote needed to override.

In compiling this remarkable political record, Bush has shown an impressive flair, notably in the Senate, of persuading Republicans to switch their votes and provide him with the margin of victory.

Several of the bills Bush vetoed dealt directly with the agenda spelled out for the 101st Congress by Democratic leaders in January 1989.

For instance, an increase in the federal minimum wage, which Bush considered too large, was vetoed, forcing Congress to rewrite the bill to meet the White House objections.

In the same manner, legislation extending the Amtrak passenger rail system was vetoed over a provision giving the Interstate Commerce Commission power over the acquisition of rails by non-rail companies.

The veto was sustained by the Senate and after the offensive provision was deleted, Bush signed the bill.

Two other bills, a revision of the Hatch Act governing political activity by federal employees and legislation to provide unpaid leave for the parents of a newborn or to take care of a sick member of the family, were vetoed. Both were major goals of organized labor and both may be dead for the session.

Now, with the session moving into its final weeks, the veto threat hangs over a number of measures.

Chinese groups replace Mafia as heroin suppliers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Asian organized crime groups that have replaced the Mafia as principal suppliers of heroin are threatening the United States with a new drug epidemic, the FBI told a Senate committee Tuesday.

The Asian groups, chiefly ethnic Chinese, are smuggling large supplies of heroin that are substantially more pure than past supplies and therefore more attractive to potential users, FBI agents said during a hearing by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., chairman of the panel, warned that the number and power of the Chinese crime groups—known as Triads—"may very well explode in this decade."

Information gathered by the committee suggests that during the 1990s, "Asian organized crime in the United States may grow to double the number of members that the Mafia had at its peak in the early 1960s," Biden said.

Biden said heroin now coming in is "six or seven times purer than the heroin brought to this country via the 'French connection' in the 1970s."

"This new pure heroin can be smoked, making it far more attractive to thousands of users," he added.

Robert Bryant, deputy assistant FBI director, told the committee the new situation is partly the result of successes in prosecuting traditional drug suppliers.

"Historically, the source of heroin in the black community had been the Mafia—La Cosa Nostra—trafficking in Southwest Asian heroin," Bryant said.

"Today, the major source is ethnic Chinese traffickers dealing in Southeast Asian heroin."

Bryant said most of the heroin now comes from the Golden Triangle area of Burma, Laos and Thailand.

The trade is dominated by ethnic Chinese, organized in Triads, Bryant said.

H&R BLOCK'S TAX COURSE PREPARES STUDENTS FOR A REWARDING CAREER

Each year thousands of students earn money for their school expenses by working as H&R Block income tax preparers. They prepare for this challenging work by enrolling in the H&R Block Income Tax course.

Block's Income Tax Course provides them with hands-on experience preparing individual income tax. Students learn how to handle increasingly complex tax situations as the term progresses and they learn which tax strategies can save them the most money.

Block's experienced instructors have trained thousands of tax preparers. Many graduates of the course have gone on to rewarding careers in income tax preparation. Classes begin September 10. A choice of morning, afternoon, evening and weekend classes allows students to pick a time that best fits their schedule.

Graduates of the H&R Block Income Tax Course receive Certificates of Achievement and continuing education units (CEUs). Qualified graduates of the course may be offered job interviews with H&R Block but are under no obligation to accept employment.

Those interested in more information about the H&R Block Income Tax Course may contact the H&R Block office at Carbondale #57-0449; Marion 997-1411; Anna 831-2222; Mt. Vernon 244-3627.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING POLICY

Please Be Sure To Check Your Classified Advertisement For Errors On The First Day Of Publication

The Daily Egyptian cannot be responsible for more than one day's incorrect insertion. Advertisers are responsible for checking their advertisements for errors on the first day they appear. Errors not the fault of the advertiser which lessen the value of the advertisement will be adjusted.

All classified advertising must be processed before 12:00 Noon to appear in the next day's publication. Anything processed after 12:00 Noon will go in the following day's publication. Classified advertising must be paid in advance except for those accounts with established credit. A 25¢ charge will be added to billed classified advertising. A service charge of $7.50 will be added to the advertiser's account for every check returned to the Daily Egyptian unpaid by the advertiser's bank. Early cancellation of a classified advertisement will be charged a $2.00 service fee. Any refund under $2.00 will be forfeited due to the cost of processing.

All advertising submitted to the Daily Egyptian is subject to approval and may be revised, rejected, or cancelled at any time.

The Daily Egyptian assumes no liability if for any reason it becomes necessary to omit an advertisement.

A sample of all mail-order items must be submitted and approved prior to deadline for publication.

No ads will be misclassified.

MRS. CAUCUS, YOU WERE ONE OF MRS. DAVENPORT'S CLOSEST AIDES. HOW DO YOU FEEL SUDDENLY BEING OUT IN THE COLD?

WELL, I'M A WORKING MOTHER, SO OBVIOUSLY I'M NOT THRILLED. BUT THE CIRCUMSTANCES WERE BOTH COMPELLING AND UNIQUE.

I MEAN, I LOST MY JOB BECAUSE MY BOSS HAD THE COURAGE TO ACT ON HER REMARKABLE SENSE OF HONOR. I CAN LIVE WITH THAT.

BUT WON'T YOU BE TAINTED? I CAN ONLY HOPE SO.

U.S. gas still a bargain despite soaring prices

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite the steep price hikes that followed Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, Americans are still getting a bargain at the filling station — compared with drivers around the world, that is.

U.S. motorists on average paid $1.237 a gallon for unleaded regular gas this week, 15.7 cents more than they did before Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, the American Automobile Association said.

Compare that with Italian drivers, who are filling up at $5.09 a gallon — perhaps the world's highest-flying gas prices — and 30 percent more than before the gulf crisis.

Or with the French, who are forking over $4.40 a gallon for fuel as they whiz off on August holidays to the coasts, and the Japanese who pay $2.97 a gallon and Indians, who fill up at $2.84 a gallon.

Among the few non-Arab nations where gas is cheaper than the United States are Indonesia, an oil producer and OPEC member, where drivers are tanking up at 92 cents a gallon and Mexico, another oil country, where subsidized unleaded gas is 90 cents a gallon in most places.

But Western European, Latin American, and some African drivers are choking with North Americans on gas price hikes related to the gulf crisis.

The jumps show West German gas is up 32 percent, French up 15 percent, Argentinian up 22 percent, Peruvian up a whopping 3,000 percent, Zambian up 55 percent.

In Britain, drivers are paying about $4.16 a gallon, or 9.5 percent above the pre-crisis price, but they are not happy about it.

Inquires have turned up only one nation so far — Zambia — that is reporting severe gasoline shortages and long gas lines. Asian motorists in general pay more than Americans for gas, but thanks to some government intervention prices so far have not risen during the gulf crisis.

But if drivers in general are swallowing their anger and continuing to pump the higher prices, some of their elected leaders are questioning the hikes.

"Looks like the oil companies are profiteering to me," said Kenneth Warren, chairman of Britain's House of Commons Select Committee on Trade and Industry. "The price of crude oil is racing far ahead of what they claim is the lost capacity. That lost capacity has not yet hit Western markets."

"Within one day of the invasion of Kuwait they were accounting for the fact that the price of petrol in Rotterdam was up 5.5 percent a gallon."

"The United Arab Emirates, Venezuela all say they can produce more. They can really cut into the 20 percent loss that could be anticipated," Warren said.

Australia's federal treasurer, Paul Keating, froze prices Aug. 9, for 21 days, a week after Iraq invaded Kuwait.

"We had one company telephoning the Prices Surveillance Authority seven minutes after the Iraq invasion was announced," Keating said. There is widening concern among government authorities about possible collusion between oil companies to keep prices high.

University researchers link amino acids to alcoholism

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI) — Purdue University researchers say they have identified a "feel good" string of amino acids—part of a hormone the body produces under stress or after drinking alcohol — that could lead to development of an anti-alcoholism drug.

If such a drug contained these same amino acids, the researchers say, it might replace alcoholics' desire to drink to feel happy.

Suchitra A. Krishnan, a doctoral student in Purdue's School of Pharmacy and Pharmaceutical Sciences, presented the study's findings Tuesday at the 21st Congress of the International Society of Psychoneuroendocrinology in Buffalo.

"When rats are placed under stress or drink alcohol, the result is the same — they produce a hormone called ACTH," Krishnan said. "We think a fragment of the hormone is responsible for making the rats want to drink alcohol after the stress is relieved — even if they were low- or non-drinkers before. Apparently, they learn to drink to reproduce that good feeling."

Purdue professor Roger P. Maickel said it's been known for some time that stress can lead people to drink, but the biochemical reasons haven't been understood. Although other studies have looked at the role of this ACTH fragment in other bodily processes, he said to his knowledge the Purdue study is the first to show that the fragment might be the biochemical spark in alcoholism.

Isolation of the fragment — or even a smaller piece of it — could be a key to fight alcoholism and possibly other substance abuse, he said.

"Rats normally have an aversion to alcohol," said Maickel, professor of pharmacology and toxicology.

"But just like people, they learn that drinking can make them feel good. The key factor here seems to be a portion of ACTH that makes them want to drink to reproduce that good feeling over and over again."

He said the advantage of developing an anti-alcoholism drug from a product already found in the body is that there would be few side effects.

"Also, assuming this drug would have no abuse potential and not impair your ability to function, it obviously would be the better alternative to using alcohol, cocaine and other harmful substances," he said.

Produced by the pituitary gland, ACTH (adrenocorticotropic hormone) is a string of 39 amino acids, the building blocks of protein. In people, the hormone aids in maintaining normal bodily and cell functions.

Krishnan used a section of the hormone — the string of amino acids labeled 4-10 — which causes the "feel good" syndrome.

To conduct the study, Krishnan placed rats in individual cages with two bottles for the same solution but with 10 percent alcohol added. After being observed for three weeks, each rat's alcohol consumption was classified as low, none, moderate or high.

Krishnan stressed one group of rats by closely confining each one randomly for periods of time over several days. During the confinement, the animals still could choose to drink alcohol or the saccharin-only solution, but all of them drank less alcohol than they had before being stressed.

For any type of accident or personal injury, Girado Chiropractic will provide a complete chiropractic examination. This examination will include an orthopedic test, a neurological test, a spinal alignment test, and an examination for restricted or excess motion in the spine. If X-rays or other tests are needed, you will be advised of any costs before proceeding.

WHY? Because during my years as a chiropractor, I have seen countless cases of late appearing injuries, injuries that were left untreated because they were not painful at the time. These untreated injuries often had developed into severe problems. Suffering was greater than it should have been as was the cost of rehabilitative treatment. Had these people taken a few minutes for a chiropractic examination the cost would have been less. Certainly their suffering would have been far less. Even if you feel fine today, don't leave yourself unprotected. If you have been injured, take the few minutes for a chiropractic examination. Act now! Call 457-0452.

WSIU-FM finalist for national radio broadcast award

By Eric Reyes
 Staff Writer

WSIU-FM radio is one of five finalists eligible for a national award given to one public radio station each year.

Any non-commercial radio station can enter the competition for the Flo Award, which is presented by the Public Radio Program Director's Association in Olney, Maryland.

Tom J. Godell, WSIU station manager, said the PRPDA selects one day of the year, and all stations competing for the award must tape that broadcast day.

The winner will be announced Sept. 6 in San Diego.

The stations compile a 20-minute tape of the day's best excerpts and submit it, Godell said.

Craig Oliver, PRPDA president, said a broadcast professional from public radio, one from commercial radio and someone who is a regular listener to public radio are chosen to judge the tape.

"It's what the station sounds like overall," Oliver said. "The judges ask themselves, 'Would I engage in listening or tune this station out?'"

Oliver said 35 stations entered the national competition this year.

WSIU is judged in a category with other stations around the country for markets of less than 800,000 listeners, Oliver said.

Godell said one of the reasons WSIU made the finals was because of the quality of its broadcasters.

"They like bright and compelling personalities. We have very good, entertaining people," he added.

Godell said the station learned a lot by entering the five-year-old competition last year, even though they failed to make the 1989 finals.

"Whatever happens, the competition gets the staff and directors to listen to the sound overall. The staff thinks of the whole station's sound. We learned a lot just by entering last year," Godell said.

NIU's Pettibone has great expectations for 1990

DEKALB, Ill. (UPI) — To say Northern Illinois envisions great things from its football team this fall is an understatement.

In fact, two Heisman goals are a pre-season bowl bid, something the independent university has done only once since 1966, and a Heisman Trophy for senior quarterback Stacey Robinson.

"I really think we ought to be considered one of the Top 25 teams in the nation," sixth-year Coach Jerry Pettibone said.

"This is really the season we've been building for. We are going to have a great team. I can make that statement."

Pettibone was disappointed last season when his team went 9-2 and was left out of the bowl picture. That team returns a school-record 52 lettermen, including 19 starters.

"We're going to have a collective chip on our shoulders," is Pettibone's 1990 war cry. "And based on what happened last year, we've got something to prove -- to the nation, to the bowls, to the polls."

Also seeking to prove something is Robinson, recently reinstated to the squad after a Pettibone-imposed suspension due to troubles in the classroom. Robinson passed summer school and now will attempt to surpass his impressive performance of 1989.

Last season, the 6-foot-1, 189-pound Danville native led the nation's quarterbacks in rushing with 1,443 yards and touchdowns with 19 while flying out of the wishbone formation. The Huskies explosive offense set 31 school records, and Pettibone returns 10 starters.

Despite their offensive unit ranked 24th in the nation last season, more significantly might be the fact Northern Illinois led the nation with the fewest turnovers at the Division I level.

The university's sports information staff began touting Robinson as a Heisman candidate when 1989 ended, and Pettibone has stoked the fire by agreeing.

And Pettibone, an assistant under Jackie Sherrill at Texas A&M for three years, as well as an assistant at Nebraska and Oklahoma, has been involved with two Heisman Trophy winners. He is credited with helping to recruit former Oklahoma halfback Billy Sims, the 1978 Heisman Trophy winner, and former Nebraska running back Mike Rozier, the 1983 trophy winner.

"Why not?" Pettibone said. "His offensive output speaks for itself."

He added: "Oklahoma would die, they'd even kill for Stacey Robinson. They'd slit both wrists and crawl all the way from Norman to DeKalb to get Stacey Robinson. He's the good, a wishbone quarterback."

Tennessee coach Majors predicts team as dark horse for NCAA title

ATLANTA (UPI) — Johnny Majors may have his best team since he won college football's national championship at Pittsburgh in 1976. But that doesn't stop the Tennessee coach from calling the No. 9 Volunteers a dark horse for this year's title.

"It would be very presumptuous to call us a national championship contender," Majors says. "For us to figure into the picture, we would need to get all the breaks."

Tennessee wound up 11-1 a year ago, including a victory over No. 4 Auburn and a Cotton Bowl victory over No. 15 Arkansas, and has 18 starters returning. But Majors, starting his 23rd season as a college head coach, argues the Vols' schedule could be a killer.

The Vols open Sunday against No. 5 Colorado in the Pigskin Classic at Anaheim, Calif. A month later, there's a trip to Auburn and down the road are home games with No. 17 Alabama (only team to beat Tennessee last year) and No. 2 Notre Dame.

"We're playing three of the preseason top five teams in the nation," Majors says. "When we add Colorado and Notre Dame to our Southeastern Conference schedule, we face one of the most demanding jobs you can imagine."

The Vols got a big boost when sophomore tailback Chuck Webb regained academic eligibility. Webb took over as starting tailback last fall when Reggie Cobb was dismissed from the team at midseason and wound up with 1,236 yards, second best in the SEC.

With Webb, the Vols, No. 2 in the SEC in total offense last year, return their starting backfield.

"We should have a strong offense, but anybody who knows me well can tell you if I have a choice I will take a strong defense and solid kicking game over an explosive offense," Majors says.

"We'll need a strong defense starting with our first game against Colorado and it's not like likely our defense will be as strong as our offense was last year."

Tennessee should have a better passing game. The Vols led the SEC in rushing last year, averaging 246 yards per game, but were seventh in passing at 163 with sophomore Andy Kelly at quarterback.

"I have been extremely pleased with the progress Andy has made," Majors says. "He got better and better during spring practice."

There was other work to be done as well.

"We have had a sense of urgency in getting our junior college players ready," Majors says. "That's why we recruited them. They're especially needed on the defensive line and in the secondary and I don't rule out having them ready for the first game."

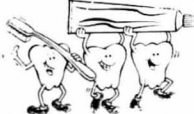

Tennessee's key losses are All-America offensive lineman Eric Still, all-SEC defensive lineman Marion Hobby and all-SEC punter Kent Elmore.

"Punting was one of the areas in which we went through spring practice without accomplishing as much as we had hoped to," Majors says. "At the end of spring practice, Andy Kelly was designated to be our punter as well as our starting quarterback. Obviously, quarterbacking a team should be enough responsibility for one man so we are hoping one of the young punters will progress enough that we can take Kelly off that assignment."

This will be the first meeting between Tennessee and Colorado, also 11-1 last season. It also marks the second time in four years Tennessee will open the college football season.

Soviet cyclist wins 1st title at Cycling Championships

MAEBASHI, Japan (UPI) — Reigning Olympic champion Alexander Kirichenko of the Soviet Union captured the one-kilometer title Tuesday in second day of the World Cycling Championships.

In the first final of the seven-day competition, Kirichenko, the world record-holder, completed the four laps around the indoor track at Maebashi Green Dome in 1 minute, 3.565 seconds.

Australia's Martin Vinnicombe, the 1987 world champion, was second in 1:03.919. Defending champion Jens Glucklich of the Soviet Union was third in 1:04.211.

Last year, Kirichenko was on a winning pace when his handlebars broke at the world championships in Lyon, France. He finished third.

Controversy began early in the competition when defending pro sprint champion Claudio Golinelli of Italy claimed interference in his second-round race against Eichi Sakamoto of Japan. Sakamoto was disqualified and placed in the consolation round.

Officials granted Golinelli a rematch, which he easily won against Japan's Yuichiro Kamiyama.

Golinelli shouted at twice pointed forcefully at his opponent and was fined $50 for his conduct.

In a subsequent consolation round, Carey Hall of Australia crashed for the second time in the championships after a lane violation against Sakamoto.

Hall, who suffered a punctured lung, was transported to a local hospital, where he will remain for several days.

Sakamoto was fined $300 and disqualified for the second time for riding an improper line.

In earlier quarterfinals, new world record-holder Michael Hubner of East Germany and American Mike McCarthy advanced with impressive efforts in the pro sprint and amateur pursuit.

Hubner, who set a new flying start sprint record of 10.345 seconds Monday, advanced with consecutive match sprint wins over Yuichiro Kamiyama in 10.164 and 11.774 seconds.

McCarthy posted the fastest amateur pursuit for the second straight day, advancing with a come-from-behind win over Jens Lehmann of East Germany. McCarthy trailed by nearly four seconds at midrace before rallying to finish in 4:32.33.

Other cyclists advancing included Bill Huck of East Germany and three-time women's world sprint champion Cornie Young of the U.S.

Heacock hopes ISU builds on last season

NORMAL, Ill. (UPI) — Illinois State Coach Jim Heacock hopes ISU's roller coaster ride has ended and the Gateway Conference team will hit its stride.

After starting last year 1-4, the Redbirds reeled off four straight wins in the conference and ended the season 4-2 in the regular and 5-6 overall.

This year, Heacock wants his team to complete its recovery and challenge for the Gateway title.

"The keys being able to play well each week," he said. "We have to improve our offensive balance and be more of a threat in the passing game. The defense has to eliminate big plays by opponents and have more of a bend-but-not-break attitude."

Heacock has to start with a team that lost eight starters and 14 seniors from last year and begin with a replay of last year's quarterback battle.

Senior Brian Chaney, 6-foot-3 and 196 pounds, and junior Adrian Wilson, 6-2, 195, have picked up last year's contest for the starting role where they left off. Chaney was 94 of 111 last year for 1,019 yards with five touchdowns and nine interceptions. Wilson was 18 of 45 for 123 yards.

"Both have improved in confidence and execution of the passing game in the spring," Heacock said. "We'll play the best one."

The rest of the offense stacks up with a choice of several running backs, the loss of two starting receivers and the need for leadership on the offensive line.

The defense is also depleted by graduation, and Heacock faces rebuilding across the line and in the secondary.

"This group has big shoes to fill, but, from the early indications, they are up to the task," Heacock said.

The Redbirds open the season at Alton Sept. 1 before hosting Ball State on the new Hancock Stadium artificial turf Sept. 8. The pre-conference season also includes a Sept. 19 game at Western Kentucky and home contest Sept. 22 against Missouri-Rolla.

EIU's Spoo expects tough Gateway

CHARLESTON, Ill. (UPI) — Eastern Illinois Coach Bob Spoo, entering his fourth year, expects this season in the Gateway Conference to be the toughest he's seen yet. How that affects his team's chances is a matter of opinion.

Coming off a 9-4 season that took them to the quarterfinals of NCAA Division I-AA, the Panthers have experience, with 15 returning starters.

But the positions where experience is lacking — quarterback, linebacker and the offensive line — could be critical.

Spoo must start from scratch at quarterback this year. After leaning toward picking redshirt freshman Kip Hennelly as the starter, Spoo learned Hennelly was leaving the team for personal reasons, opening the door for new recruit Jeff Thome.

"Because of Kip's departure, Thome is logically No. 1," Spoo said.

Thome took Wheaton Central to the state semifinals in 1989.

His high school career included a state record 57 touchdowns and 27 games passing for more than 100 yards.

Graduation seriously depleted EIU's linebacking corps.

"That's another concern because we don't have a lot of bodies," Spoo said. "Inside is where we're short on depth."

Heading into fall practices, senior John Noll and freshman Warren Cushingberry were considered the favorites at inside linebacker. Noll has been used primarily as a backup, but did start last year's two playoff games, making 16 tackles.

Cushingberry was redshirted last year and linebacker coach Brock Spack has said the 205-pounder will need experience and weight training to compete for the starting job.

The Panthers' strength will surely be in the running game, with or without a running quarterback.

"I'm probably most pleased about our situation at running back because of the numbers of quality people," Spoo said. "We seem to have both speed and size, which gives us some flexibility."

All of last year's running backs will return, including junior tailback Jamie Jones, who led the team with 887 yards rushing and 1,266 all-purpose yards.

To open the holes, Spoo will rely on a very inexperienced offensive line.

"The facts are that we have only two returning starters, Dan Purcell and Brad Fichtel, and both were just redshirt freshmen last year," he said. "Incoming freshmen will immediately be put in the situation of playing as backups."

Spoo, however, heads a program that has won 98 games and attended six NCAA tournaments during the last 12 years. And his previous experience at Purdue with developing quarterbacks, including Jim Everett of the Los Angeles Rams, could turn what question mark into an exclamation point.

Western starting '90 season with new head coach

MACOMBE, Ill. (UPI) — Things can only get better for Western Illinois' football program, which weathered some major disasters last year.

After guiding the Fighting Leathernecks to the school's best season ever in 1988 — a 10-2 record, a first-ever NCAA I-AA playoff spot and a No. 2 ranking nationally — coach Bruce Craddock was diagnosed as having liver and stomach cancer shortly after the 1989 spring practice session.

The illness cast a shadow on the WIU program and served as an omen of the disastrous campaign to follow.

After winning three of the first four, the Leathernecks lost quarterback Gene Benhart to a hip injury. Another 20 starters went down with injuries between then and the end of the season, and Western finished with a dismal 4-7 record.

Craddock died in February 1990, leaving the newly successful program without its mentor.

Now new coach Randy Ball faces the task of picking up the pieces.

"I'm really excited," Ball said. "I really think we have a good football team. We have a lot of new faces."

Ball said his squad is talented, but needs more experience. The most solid aspect should be the running game.

"Our running back corps is very solid," he said. "I'd have to say that area there has depth and has quality people."

Senior Mike Cox returns at tailback this year after being redshirted with an ankle injury last year. He is the fifth-leading rusher in WIU history.

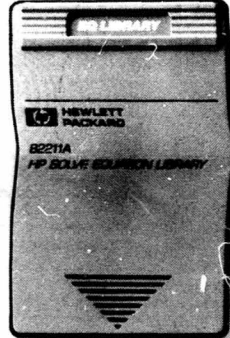

"We also have a good offensive line, if we can stay healthy," Ball said. "Our depth there concerns me."

At quarterback, Ball said he looks for Senior Ron Reed to blossom this year much the same way Eric Arnold did at Eastern Illinois last year.

"Ron had the unenviable task last year of playing after Gene was injured, for a team that was pretty much decimated by injuries. I feel very strong that Ron Reed will be a great quarterback for us."

On defense, Ball said the talent is better than last year's, which ranked among the nation's top 15.

King turned down for flights

SENECA FALLS, N.Y. (UPI) — More than 20 Fortune 500 companies rejected requests from the National Women's Hall of Fame to fly tennis great Billie Jean King to her induction ceremony Sunday.

Emilie Sissoo, executive director of the hall, said King was unable to get a commercial flight out of the small, upstate community after the event to New York City, where she is to do television commentary of the U.S. Open.

So the hall contacted some of America's largest corporations to kick in $3,000 for a charter or maybe lend a corporate jet. Their answer, Sissoo said, was no.

Sissoo said $3,000 "is not a lot of money" for "some of the big guys" and she suggested there was more at work than financial constraints.

"It is partly because it's a women's issue," she said. Sissoo called the snub a "failure of corporate America" that "shows how much more women across America must accomplish, in order to prove themselves worthy of the honors and recognition they so richly deserve."

"It is partly because it's a women's issue."

Said Eastman Kodak Co. spokeswoman Darlene Aiken: "We did turn them down. It didn't fit into our program at this time."

King will be honored along with the late photographer Margaret Bourke-White, former U.S. Rep. Barbara Jordan and Dr. Florence Seibert, known for her breakthrough work in tuberculosis testing. Jordan and Seibert cannot attend.

Aiken said Kodak has donated more than $20,000 this year to the Society of Women Engineers and other women's groups. She noted the company's donations budget for 1990 is down 15 percent to $14.7 million and said Kodak's rejection was not intended as a slight.

Xerox Inc. spokesman Robert Wagner said his company awarded a grant to the hall after receiving a request Feb. 12 for financial support. He would not say how large the grant was.

Sissoo said the hall would pay for King's charter flight despite being strapped for cash.

Lewis looking out for his future, won't negotiate Celtic contract

BOSTON (UPI) — Reggie Lewis, the amiable shooting star of the Boston Celtics, Tuesday made the grim-faced announcement that his philosophy and outlook have changed and now he's only looking out for himself.

"I'll do whatever is best for me," the 6-foot-7 wingman repeated over and over during a press conference at the Celtics offices.

The 1990-91 season will be Lewis's last under his present contract but the Celtics have the right to match offers from any other NBA team. Lewis has the bargaining leverage of selling his services overseas, where NBA players can now make more than $1 million a year. In the coming season he will make less than $400,000.

Jerome Stanley, Lewis's new agent, has taken a belligerent stance, saying he will not negotiate with the Celtics. Lewis affirmed that his views are being expressed by Stanley: "Everything he's said is from me."

Asked if there are any other considerations besides money, Lewis declined to answer.

Stanley also represents Lewis's close friend Brian Shaw, who signed a multi-year pact with Boston in January but now says he would rather not play basketball than play for the Celtics. Shaw has played two years professionally, leaving Boston after one season to take a million-dollar offer for a year in the Italian League.

"What Brian did opened a lot of guys' eyes to the market," said Lewis. "It's a big market out there."

Lewis played his college basketball at Northeastern University, which is located in Boston. His selection in the 1987 draft, with the 22nd pick overall, was a surprise but his local popularity carried over to Boston Garden, where he was always one of the crowd favorites.

Asked if the Celtics have made him an offer, Lewis replied: "I'd rather not say anything about it."

Asked about his past relationship with team management, Lewis responded: "I feel I've been 100 percent loyal to the Celtics." Asked if this had been reciprocated, he replied, "The Celtics have been loyal to me but I don't want to get into it." Later, when questioned about his popularity, he said, "I like the fans. I like Boston — the city."

Asked if he would negotiate with the Celtics about the 1991-92 season, Lewis replied: "We'll see."

Asked why he switched from the established agent firm of ProServ to Stanley, who has never negotiated an NBA contract, Lewis said: "I don't feel I have to explain everything I do to the media."

finish. "That isn't the type of season we expect around here. I think we'll be highly motivated around here," said Coach Gary Gibbs, who took over for Switzer. "We'll have the right kind of attitude as far as going out an having the chance to compete with the Colorados and Nebraskas and UCLAs and Pittsburghs. There's a lot of pride in this program. We'll be a hungry football team."

As in past seasons, the road to the Big Eight title goes through Lincoln, Neb. But along with Nebraska, which never has been worse than 9-3 in any of Tom Osborne's 17 years of coaching, there is a new player at the top of the standings.

Colorado surprised many last season by riding an emotional charge — fueled by a great defense — to within an Orange Bowl loss of the national championship.

The question is whether the Buffaloes, who played for quarterback Sal Aunese after he died last season, can recapture the desire. If they can't, have they truly risen above the crowd in terms of overall talent and win on that level?

There is no way Colorado can play at the emotional pitch of 1989 and with the schedule just as tough, the Buffaloes indeed will be hard-pressed to become the first team other than Nebraska or Oklahoma to repeat as Big Eight champion since Kansas in 1946-47.

Darian Hagan had a sensational year at quarterback, both passing and rushing for more than 1,000 yards.

The heart of the Buffaloes lies in the defense, with linebackers Kanavis McGhee and Alfred Williams both likely first-round picks in next year's NFL draft.

Nebraska races through the first two months of its season with its usual soft schedule. The Cornhuskers shouldn't even be tested until they are hosts to Colorado Nov. 3 and then when they go to Oklahoma Nov. 23.

The biggest question in Lincoln is quarterback but with eight games worth of tryouts, Osborne should be able to find a good one by November.

The rest of the Big Eight is the usual jumble, with Missouri the pick to make this year's charge. Oklahoma State, with probation even harsher than Oklahoma's, should slip the most.

Missouri went through expected growing pains inflicted by a cold-turkey switch from a wishbone offense to a passing attack. By the time the team was clicking on offense, the defense was too beat up to play well.

TENNIS, from Page 32 —

The future of the Saluki men's tennis team may be in the hands of this year's new players, most of whom are freshmen. These freshmen include Shelly Maturin from Lafayette, La., Kai Kramer from Reno, Nev., and Danny Gonzalez from Kadiz, Spain. Another newcomer is sophomore Jeff Kamikow from Chicago, who transferred from Indiana State this year.

LeFevre expects the "stiff competition" to come from Auburn, Notre Dame, and Iowa State, all of whom finished in the top 20 in the country last year. "It's unrealistic to expect freshmen to come in and compete with such experienced teams," LeFevre said, "so we've got a long tough haul ahead of us."

Southwest Missouri State is the team LeFevre picks as favorite to make the MVC title this season, closely followed by Wichita State. Wichita State, who took the MVC title the 12 seasons previous to last year's SIU-C title, will also be going through a rebuilding stage this year.

"Wichita State has lost a few players because of disciplinary problems as well as other things," LeFevre said, "so they are pretty much in the same boat as we are."

LeFevre also gives Drake an outside chance because of the quality of players they have been recruiting the last two seasons. He credits Drake's recruiting success to the superior scholarships they offer.

Colts' Dickerson still cautious about injury

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) -- Eric Dickerson's physician and employers want more tests on his injured left hamstring, but the Indianapolis Colts running back remains reluctant to risk a setback.

Dr. Tom Parr, the physician overseeing Dickerson's rehabilitation in Houston, met with the All-Pro rusher Tuesday and suggested re-testing the hamstring. When or if Dickerson will perform the test is not known.

"He's a little hesitant because he doesn't want to hurt it again," Parr said. "You have to go full out during the test so you run a risk of injury. I haven't had people injure themselves but I haven't had an Eric Dickerson before either. He's thinking, 'I'm on schedule. There's less pain than before. Why mess up a good thing when I'm getting better?'"

Parr said Dickerson could be ready to play by the Colts' opener Sept. 9 at Buffalo and should be ready for the team's first home game, Sept. 16 against New England.

"He is doing better. He feels stronger," Parr said. "There is less pain but it's still there and still bothering him. He's on schedule. It's tough to say when he could be back. The second game is our goal. The first game is possible."

Dickerson sat out the first 11 days of training camp, unhappy about having to fulfill the final year of a Colts contract for $1.45 million. He failed a physical with a weak left hamstring and went to Houston's Tom Williams Clinic for rehabilitation. The Colts want Dickerson to return to Indianapolis for more tests by Dr. K. Donald Shelbourne, the team physician.

Daryl Henry, a friend of Dickerson, said the rusher does not plan on returning to the Colts until he is pronounced ready to play. Parr said even if he clears Dickerson after a test, the Colts may have tougher standards and Dickerson's test in Indianapolis could produce different results even a day later.

"The test can be affected by how you feel at the time. It's not cast-in-stone reproducible," Parr said. "You could blow it out of the water or flunk it the next day."

The Colts face a Sept. 3 deadline for reducing their roster to 47 players. Questions still remain about Dickerson's availability.

Bears' Bailey faces possible arrest for outstanding probation fines, fees

HOUSTON (UPI) — An arrest warrant for Chicago Bears rookie running back Johnny Bailey may be issued later this week if he does not resolve outstanding probation fines and fees stemming from a 1986 drug conviction.

Harris County assistant district attorney Bob Stabe confirmed Tuesday he told Bailey's attorney, Bailey allegedly has failed to pay about $1,400 over the past four years.

Bob Bennett, to have the rookie football player in Houston by Friday. "If not, I'm going to have our local authorities contact the authorities up in Illinois to have him arrested," Stabe said.

Bailey was a ninth-round draft pick of the Bears after a standout career at Texas A&I University in which he became college football's all-time leading rusher with 6,320 yards. Bailey allegedly has failed to pay about $1,400 in probation fines and fees over the past four years.

Bailey also has failed to report to a probation officer seven times in the past three years, violating terms of a deferred adjudication agreement following a cocaine arrest in 1986, authorities said.

The 5-foot-9, 180-pound Bailey scored two third-quarter touchdowns in his NFL debut last Saturday, leading the Bears to a 17-9 victory over the Phoenix Cardinals.

Bailey's first professional carry was a 55-yard scoring run that broke a 3-3 tie. He finished the game with 86 yards on six carries.
