Returning students mean big returns

Carbondale businesses experience surge in sales since summer

TIM CHAMBERLAIN
AND BURKE SPEAKER
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Although her shelves were almost bare and various items were strewn about in a post-frenzy mess Sunday, Kim Busby could not have been happier.

Busby, assistant manager at the Carbondale Wal-Mart, said the rush of incoming students was noticeable throughout the week.

"The students are extremely important to us," Busby said. "This week is just about our busiest week of the year, probably even bigger than Christmas."

Gus Bode

Gus says: What more can I give?

Busby said Wal-Mart increases its manpower for the student rush and estimates at least a 10 percent increase in employees for that period.

The influx of new and returning students translates into a sharp increase in the community, adding thousands of dollars to the economy.

Interim Chancellor John Jackson expressed his delight in having students return to their SIUC home, bringing fresh excitement for the new year and also cash for the community.

"It really invigorates the University and the University community to have the students, mostly young people coming to the campus, many for the first time," Jackson said.

"Not only are they here physically, they are here with their buying power."

Jackson said the University distributed more than $11 million in financial aid to SIUC students last week, and much of the money will find its way back into the local economy.

Jackson said 54 percent of SIUC undergraduates and 62 percent of graduate students received either federal, state or local financial aid for the semester.

While official enrollment numbers will not be available until later in the semester, Jackson did express "concern" at first week numbers of new student enrollment compared to the same week last year.

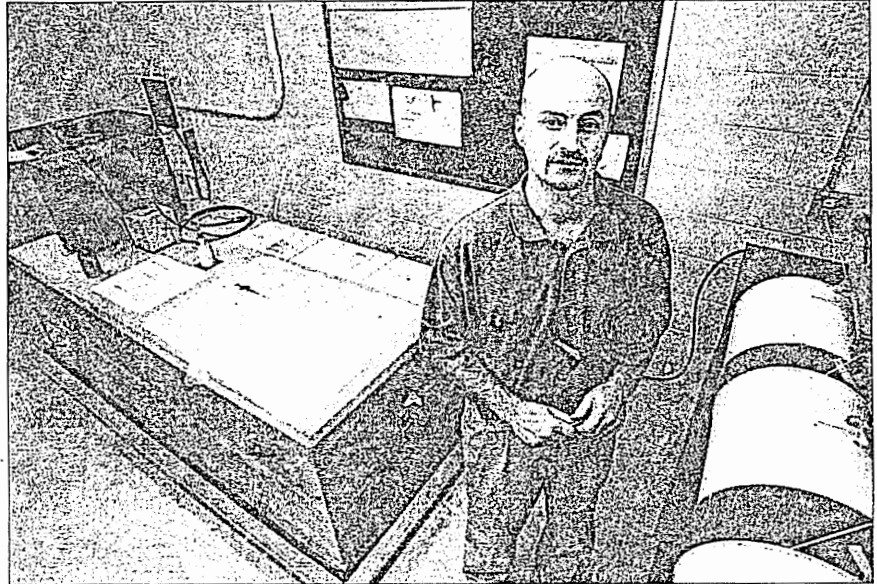

Vice Chancellor for Administration Glenn Poshard said the money students spend on tuition, housing and all other amenities provide cash for major companies.

"Last year SIUC gave out $133 million in financial aid," he said. "This equals the payroll of a lot of big company's combined."

Jackson said even area merchants will bask in the students' buying power.

"We suspect that the area merchants will think it's great because they've brought their

Turkish-American student turns attention to earthquake victims

As the death toll in Turkey exceeded 12,000 Monday, Elif Fehmi-Sullivan, a senior in zoology, looks for ways to help from afar.

Though she was born in Carbondale, her slight accent shows for her Turkish upbringing. One side of her family lives in Turkey, and she visits as regularly as she can afford to.

Sullivan was in good spirits Saturday, having heard that her family is safe.

Although Sullivan and her family are feeling relief, many have not been so lucky.

Just after 3 a.m. Aug. 17, a magnitude-7.4 earthquake hit northwestern Turkey. While current figures for fatalities are already high, officials have estimated the final numbers could be as high as 40,000.

"We got a call, and our family said, 'We're OK and everything's fine,'" Sullivan said.

Now that Sullivan knows her own family has survived, she and her mother, Saide Sullivan, direct their attention toward those in need.

"There's a student that came (to Carbondale) from that area the day of

Southern Illinois region possesses 'groundshaking' potential

RHONDA SCIARRA

In a small room in the basement of Parkinson Lab, the SIUC Seismic Observatory recorded the disastrous earthquake magnitudes that decimated Turkey a week ago — a local reminder that SIUC is in the midst of its own seismically active region.

The New Madrid Seismic Zone is a fault system spanning Southern Illinois, Missouri and Arkansas. It is the most active seismic zone east of the Rocky Mountains. Other seismic zones in the Southern Illinois region include the Wabash Valley Fault Systems and the Rough Creek Graben.

"There are a lot of geologic structures and faults that are capable of producing earthquakes in the region," said Harvey Henson, research project specialist for the SIUC Geology Department.

"We live in an earthquake seismic zone, and people need to be aware and informed about what that means."

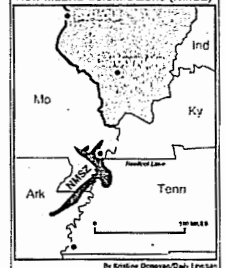

The SIUC Seismic Observatory is equipped with a St. Louis University broadband seismic station that records any ground shaking of local, regional, national and global proportions.

The station, which was installed in February, is a part of the Cooperative New Madrid Seismic Network headed by SLU, the University of Memphis and the United States National Seismograph Network.

Henson has been studying the New Madrid Seismic Zone and watching the seismic activity that occurs in this area.

School of Journalism welcomes Tribune's 'patron saint of interns'

RHONDA SCIARRA
DAILY EGYPTIAN

When Bill Recktenwald found an Internet site in which the population density of various zip codes were configured, he realized how much of a drastic move he had made from the Chicago Tribune to Southern Illinois.

He entered the zip code of the Chicago Tribune and found a population density of 29,000 people in one square mile. He entered the zip code of where he lived in Evanston and found a population of 8,000.

When he entered the zip code of his new home in Karber's Ridge about 60 miles from SIUC, the population density was eight.

Recktenwald left his home in Evanston a week ago for SIUC where he will teach in the School of Journalism after 22 years at the Chicago Tribune.

The School of Journalism was able to add Recktenwald to its faculty this year as a "journalist-in-residence," after receiving a $75,000 grant from the Freedom Forum.

Recktenwald will instruct a course on reporting and news writing, and he will develop a new course on investigative or public affairs reporting this spring.

"The prospect of my first class tomorrow — I am looking forward to it," he said. "I enjoy working with people, and I am not a bit shy."

He also will conduct workshops for journalists in the area, assist with projects for the Public Policy Institute, and advise SIUC faculty on how to incorporate reporting techniques into their classes.

Recktenwald is more than glad to bring his background as a veteran Chicago Tribune reporter and deputy bureau chief to Carbondale.

"The journalism program is very well known and highly respected," Recktenwald said. "My background in the news business is from last week. It's very fresh, and there have been a lot of changes made in the newsroom."

Don Jugenheimer, director of the School of Journalism, said he is excited about the addition of Recktenwald to the faculty and about the experience he brings with him.

"Having somebody with his depth of experience is a boon to the School of Journalism, is a boon to journalism students," he said.

Jugenheimer said Recktenwald can offer current insight and ideas from a large, well-respected newspaper to his students at SIUC.

"He has worked training new journalists for many years at the Chicago Tribune," he said. "He is going to bring that experience along with his deep commitment to good journalistic practices."

Recktenwald said his transition to SIUC has been smooth despite not quite adjusting to a new schedule without the Chicago Tribune in mind.

Dining halls create more convenient way to service busy students

CHRIS KENNEDY
DAILY EGYPTIAN

SIUC Dining Services has implemented new programs this semester designed to alleviate problems that plagued the previous carry-out system, including damage to University carpets and long lines.

Grab 'N' Go, the combined brainchild of University housing officials and selected students, is an evolution of the former carry-out service that provided students with insulating containers to leave the dining hall with their purchases.

Grab 'N' Go — featured in Trueblood, Lentz and Grinnell Hall — is set up in a room adjacent to the dining halls so students using the program do not have to wait in line with those dining in. Everything is individually packaged to avoid spilling and the use of insulating containers has been drastically reduced.

According to Beth Scally, University marketing coordinator, some students last year complained about excessive use of insulating containers out of concern for the environment.

Also, spills caused from unfastened lids on insulating container cups forced students to repurchase their drinks and often resulted in damage to University carpeting.

Students also expressed disdain from waiting in line with other people who were dining in, Scally said.

Kim Boomer, a sophomore in radio and television from Decatur, said the new program would help busy students.

"I think this is going to make carry-out a lot easier," said Boomer, who stayed at Thompson Point last year. "I used carry-out quite a bit because of short time between classes. The Styrofoam took longer and was messier."

Peggy Corley, assistant director of housing residence hall dining, said the program is up to par with other universities.

"We've looked into other universities, and this seems to be right in line," Corley said. "Except ours is much bigger and has more variety."

Service Manager Karen Parks said dining hall employees wanted to make sure students have an entire meal that is quick and can be picked up on the way to class.

Officials at SIUC dining services also have implemented new programs at Cafe Latte and Grinnell's Pizzeria which included expanded menus, additional TVs and games.

Ed Jones, director of Housing, said the program was well planned but, in the end, student reaction would determine success or failure.

"We picked items that were popular with students, but we also added variety," Jones said. "I think we'll get a lot of people using the program."

Udo Robler, a chef at Grinnell Hall, wants students to know what they mean to him and fellow chefs Bill Conners and Phil Reed, who will be involved in the Grab 'N' Go.

"Our motto is southern hospitality," Robler said. "You're not a number, we're here to serve you. We're very customer oriented."

Trustee's position still under fire as legislators, governor discuss legalities

TIM CHAMBERLAIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN

SIU Trustee George Wilkins has come under fire in recent months because of his Indiana residency, and some state legislators have said they think he should step down.

A recent report by an area newspaper stated Rep. Mike Bost, R-Murphysboro, and Sen. Jim Rea, D-Christopher, both said Wilkins should step down from the board because of his Indiana residency.

State law does not require board members to live in Illinois.

Bost told the Daily Egyptian recently he did not necessarily think out-of-state board members should be outlawed, but he did not like the fact Wilkins was not up front about his residency.

"My problem was the idea he painted that he lived in-state," Bost said. "I don't doubt that he is very loyal to Southern Illinois University."

While Bost said the law allowing board members to live out of state should be examined, he does not think universities should limit themselves with only in-state board members.

For example, Bost said that if a prominent alumni wanted to serve on the board and that person lived out of state, any legislative changes could backfire.

"Do we want to limit ourselves to those with a physical residence in Illinois when they may be loyal to SIU and a tremendous asset?" Bost said.

Rea could not be reached for comment as of press time.

Wilkins, still listed as an Edwardsville resident in the latest University directories, maintains his current residence in Culver, Ind., where he registered to vote in 1994, according to registration records.

In September 1996, Wilkins registered to vote in Charleston and used this address when signing his oath of office for his re-appointment to the SIU Board of Trustees.

Wilkins has deferred all questions on his residency and board status to Board Chairman A.D. VanMeter. VanMeter said he still stands by Wilkins and the role he plays on the board.

"He has many interests in Illinois, and he's still a licensed physician in Illinois," VanMeter said. "His position is legal."

Residency has not been the only reason Wilkins has come under fire recently. Questions were raised earlier this summer about his party affiliation.

State law requires that no more than four of the seven board members can be from the same party as the governor.

Current Gov. George Ryan is a Republican, and four Republicans, not counting Wilkins, presently serve on the board.

Wilkins, who was first appointed to the board as a Democrat in 1979, voted in the 1998 Republican primary in Indiana, according to voting records.

Records also indicate he voted in the Democratic primaries from 1989 to 1992, with no record of voting from 1993 to 1997.

Ryan's office has said the party affiliation at the time of the appointment is what is considered. Otherwise, "the law is silent" about what a trustee does after appointment.

Nick Palazzolo, a Ryan spokesman, said the governor will talk with Wilkins when his board term is up and will make his decision about Wilkins at that time.

OUR WORD

TEC facility should take flight at SI Airport

The debate between Illinois Rep. Larry Woolard, D-Carterville, and no one else regarding the location of a $34 million Transportation Education Center for the Aviation and Automotive Departments is puzzling, to say the least.

The facility, which will receive $30.6 million in funding from the state, will combine SIU's Aviation Technology, Aviation Management and Flight, and Automotive Technology departments into a centralized location.

The new location will enhance capacities for the industrial needs of the Aviation Department and provide a new home for the automotive center, which is operating in vastly deteriorated conditions in its current Carterville location.

After looking at potential sites, chairpersons and professors within these departments and at least one higher-up in the SIUC administration believe the TEC facility will be best situated at the Southern Illinois Airport. Graciously, the Southern Illinois Airport Authority Board pledged $2 million in support for the project. The donation reduces the University matching fund burden to $1.4 million.

In addition, several necessary facilities already exist at the SI Airport and would become part of the TEC facility, reducing construction costs. Last, but for students certainly not least, the SI Airport is less than six miles from campus.

Sounds pretty good right? Evidently, it's not good enough for Woolard. He thinks the TEC facility should operate out of the Williamson County Airport, coincidentally located in Woolard's district.

Woolard says he isn't concerned with keeping jobs in his district, rather, he thinks the facility would receive better visibility at the Williamson County Airport, which is at least twice as far from campus as the SI Airport. Both airports are located on state Route 13.

Politically, Woolard has created a no-lose situation for himself. If the facility is built at the Williamson County Airport, he has secured a visible improvement to his district, both in jobs and potential revenue from any restaurant and hotel spin-offs. If the Williamson County Airport doesn't get the facility, he still comes off as the noble representative who is always looking out for ways to benefit his district.

We don't blame Woolard for his politics, just the issue. The academic programs must come first. The aviation program needs the upgrade to stay abreast of technology, and the automotive facilities are so poor and crumbling they would benefit from having one of the bombs dropped on the site that were made there during World War II.

Our automotive program was just voted tops in the nation, but the students attend classes in buildings without air conditioning, proper heating or even drinkable water. Imagine what the program could accomplish with the proper surroundings. In recruitment and retention terms, there is no time to debate the site of the TEC facility. Who would want to pay money to attend classes in buildings that are literally falling apart?

SI Airport is closer and more cost effective. SIUC already signed a property lease with the SI Airport which still has nine years and $1.9 million dollars of commitment remaining on it. Any move would have to contain a payoff of the lease, the cost of construction for facilities the SI Airport has that the program needs, and the way to recoup the $2 million donation.

That means the University will have to come up with a minimum of $5.3 million for the TEC facility to be constructed anywhere other than the SI Airport where it currently only bears a $1.9 million burden. That's nearly an increase of 180 percent.

The best part is that Carterville doesn't lose an automotive program, it gains a land development project. SIUC is currently in the early stages of looking at land usage projects for the site on which the automotive program currently operates.

The key here is to work smarter, not harder. It doesn't take a "Math for Dummies" book to see that $5.3 million is a lot more money than $1.9 million. Let's not bypass a good thing because we're looking for a non-existent better.

If the Williamson County Airport and Rep. Woolard can manufacture a deal that offsets the move, the construction costs and provide an all-around better home for the TEC facility, then we'll consider it. Anything else just won't fly.

'News' doesn't necessarily mean bad

Think back to the last time you turned on a television or radio and picked up a magazine or newspaper. If you think really hard, you might be able to remember some of the topics discussed in the media you spent your valuable time and hard-earned money on.

Unfortunately, most of the news I have encountered has been overwhelmingly negative, which is most unfortunate.

Yes, bad things happen. But some people look at the word "news" as a synonym for "negativity." Call me a "Pollyanna," but I believe most of the news does not have to be negative.

Our campus paper is not exempt from the examples given above. I dare you to flip to the front of the paper. Chances are, you will encounter a plethora of negativity, ranging from continuing updates on the Argersinger scandal to the Pepsi controversy.

What is my point? Life, in my humble opinion, is full of ups and

Angels Among Us

ANNA BETH TRAYNOR

traynor@siu.edu

Angels Among Us appears Tuesdays. Anna is a senior in English education. Her opinion does not necessarily reflect that of the DAILY EGYPTIAN.

downs. In our society, we focus more on the downs while ups are happening around us daily.

Even on the SIUC campus, there are countless angels walking around among us with hidden halos and paper-thin wings.

For example, last spring, I was driving to class around finals time. Tired and cranky from running late again, I sat in my air-conditioned car glaring at the red light. For some reason, I looked up in time to see a young male SIUC student in a wheelchair topple over near the corner just past the Student Recreation Center.

As I frantically tried to figure out how to help while stuck in traffic, four SIUC students immediately dropped what they were doing and ran to help the student get back in the chair and pick up the belongings scattered around him.

It is very easy to overlook the good things in life. From now on, it is my intent to inform you, the reader, of good things that happen to students, faculty and workers around campus.

So, while you are moving in, finding your classes and getting settled, keep your eyes peeled for people who are doing good things for others and feel free to write or call me and tell me what happened.

In a time of overwhelming negativity and hardships on campus, it is about time that some home-grown goodness shines through.

USG offers advice to students

I want to welcome all new and returning students. You have made an excellent choice in your decision to attend SIUC.

This is my fourth year here, and it seems just like yesterday I was moving into the residence halls for my first semester.

I have seen many students come and go for a variety of reasons as the semesters have passed.

But I am proud to say most of my floormates and my roommate from my freshman year are still here. Very few seniors can make that same statement.

Looking back that year, all my floormates had three things in common: a little bit of discipline, some time management skills and we all got involved in some organization on campus.

Discipline, time management and involvement are the keys to success. If you do those three things, you are almost guaranteed a diploma in four years.

I have been fortunate enough to have an excellent academic adviser, though, many students have told me horror stories about their academic advisers. My advice to all students is to read the undergraduate catalog and plan your classes for all four years. The catalog lists every class you must take for your major. It also lists all academic policies.

My adviser has never picked classes for me; he just gives me advice. If you let your adviser pick your classes every semester for you, they are only human and will make mistakes — mistakes that might force you to stay here a fifth year!

Jan. 1 of each year, start getting your financial aid applications turned in. Do not wait until the summer. Man accused in the murder of SIUC instructor put to trial

BOB JACOBINI
DAILY EGYPTIAN

After a flurry of pre-trial rulings this summer, the trial of Frank Lynch, the man accused of killing SIUC associate professor Loyd Yates, is now scheduled to go to trial Sept. 13 in Jackson County.

Lynch

Judge David Watt Jr. granted a defense motion to suppress a taped conversation between Lynch and Chad Baldwin while Lynch was in custody at the Jackson County Jail.

An eavesdropping device previously was approved by court order.

Patricia Gross, Lynch's attorney, successfully argued that Baldwin was acting as a police agent and Lynch refused police interrogation without his attorney, so the conversations with Baldwin were taped illegally.

Gross could not be reached for comment Monday evening.

Lynch is charged with three counts of first-degree murder in the Feb. 6 homicide of Yates in Lynch's home at a Carbondale mobile home park. Lynch is accused of stabbing and beating Yates to death.

Watt also postponed ruling on a defense motion to change the venue of the trial. Jackson County State's Attorney Mike Wepsiec said the judge reserved ruling on the motion pending jury selection.

Watt also ruled favorably on two motions by the prosecution.

He ordered the defense not to introduce testimony from numerous potential witnesses concerning their opinions about the guilt or innocence of both defendant Lynch and prosecution witness Baldwin.

Baldwin, Lynch's former roommate, first reported the murder to Herrin police. He was not charged in the slaying.

Watt ruled in July that Wepsiec could not use phone records obtained by police during the investigation.

Wepsiec also requested that Gross not be able to use the records in defense. Watt has yet to rule on that request.

Lynch is still being held in lieu of $1 million at Jackson County Jail.

include winning the Edward Scott Beck Award for stories detailing conditions of Pontiac State Prison while Recktenwald posed as a prison guard.

Ellen Warren, a columnist for the Chicago Tribune, said Recktenwald was known as patient, generous and always willing to help out his coworkers in any possible way.

Warren cited an instance in which Recktenwald helped her with the computer and e-mail systems when she arrived in 1993 at the Tribune.

"He's a great guy, great teacher and everybody here loved him," she said. "He's a wonderful guy and I miss him today."

She said, the Chicago Tribune staff misses Recktenwald greatly after only one week.

"We want him back—we want him here," she said.

The ups and downs of online textbooks

BURKE SPEAKER
DAILY EGYPTIAN

While college students now have an opportunity to save cash following a reduction in textbook prices from an Internet-based company, some students say they would rather not get tangled in the web.

The U Zone (www.theuzone.com) became the first company to sell new and used textbooks at cost Aug. 20, offering books 20 to 50 percent off normal retail prices. Textbooks are delivered within one to four days after purchase and have a 30-day return policy.

The company, which is not affiliated with any campus bookstores, utilizes website advertising to generate profits. Founders Matt Ogden and Jeffrey Kuperman, recent college graduates who understand the thrifty college lifestyle, dropped prices to generate interest in their website and to fill a niche in the growing online marketplace.

"We wanted to service the college (market), and there were really no sites fulfilling those needs," Ogden said.

But some students and area book store managers say online purchasing is a hassle not worth the extra cash saved. Jami Steckelrider, a senior in accounting and finance from Benton, said her experience purchasing books online was one she will likely never repeat. Steckelrider said she spent $10 on returning two books because the company had delivered the wrong ones and another required book was not available on the site.

"From now on, I'd just rather go to the store because I can see the actual merchandise and know what I'm buying," said Steckelrider. "The books were cheaper but it ended up costing more after I had to send those books back."

Natalie Helm, a sophomore in early childhood education, estimates her textbooks will exceed $400, but said local purchasing is the simple way to buy books.

"This is my second year coming here," said Helm, referring to 710 Book Store. "I've just never thought about (the online) service."

Carbondale bookstore managers say while the delay for textbook delivery and possible credit card security leaks are drawbacks to online purchasing, they welcome the new surge of competition. Mike Pollock, manager of 710 Book Store, 710 S. Illinois Ave., said because of problems such as these, the online text sales have not put a dent in his sales.

"We occasionally check these sites but find that we have books here they don't carry," Pollock said.

The U Zone is just one in a recent explosion of online textbook sites that include frontrunners Varsity-Books.com, BigWords.com and Amazon.com. Each online distributor differs in price range and return policy.

Ogden said the future of textbook sales will eventually veer his way, despite initial problems in the system.

"(Local bookstores) will see a small piece of their pie taken," Ogden said. "Over time, students will increasingly see the benefits of competition."

Picnic welcomes 1,000 students

TY WEBER
freshman from Edwardsville

BRYNN SCOTT
DAILY EGYPTIAN

I just came for the free food.

Students and faculty shared warm conversation in the midst of Sunday's sweat-inducing heat, taking rests under the shady trees and large tents at the University Picnic.

The University Picnic welcomed more than 1,000 SIUC students, and offered a chance for them to socialize with faculty and fellow students.

Greek representatives, SLAs, members of the football team, softball team, Marching Salukis, Saluki Cheerleaders and Saluki Shakers participated in the event.

University Housing led the gesture of hospitality, providing tasty, large amounts of food to hungry students.

Peggy Corley, assistant director of residence hall dining, was happy to commend all the people who devoted many hours to making the University Picnic a success.

"It took a huge commitment from the student resident dining staff from 8 p.m. Saturday night until 9 p.m. Sunday night," Corley said.

"Also, a big commitment came from the Physical Plant, Sysco, University Housing and student groups such as the band, cheerleaders, color guard and shakers."

A handful of athletes took advantage of the picnic.

"I'm here to represent the SIU football team and to get out and meet some new students and parents and just interact with people on campus," said Patrick Clark, a senior in radio-television from Fairview Heights.

A number of students came to the picnic for different reasons.

"I just came for the free food," said Ty Weber, an undecided freshman from Edwardsville.

The Marching Salukis pumped up the crowd with tunes ranging from the "Southern Alma Mater" to "La Vida Loca" by Ricky Martin.

Along with the band, the Saluki Color Guard, the Saluki Cheerleaders and the Saluki Shakers threw a groovy gist into the mix.

The Color Guard twirled their flags to the beat of the music, the cheerleaders threw up death-defying partner stunts and the shakers showed off their vitality.

"There are a lot of managers, service staff and city workers coming together to make this happen," said University Housing Manager Mike Jarvis.

"We worked yesterday and all day today to put it together."

Smithsonian Institute ducks goose stuffing controversy

WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON—The Smithsonian Institution tried to duck another controversy Monday by canceling a sold-out evening devoted to foie gras. Officials cited "the well-being of our participants" as a foremost reason for their decision.

In the last week the Smithsonian had received dozens of protest letters from celebrities, animal-rights activists and other citizens who asked the museum to reconsider "Foie Gras: A Gourmet's Passion," a lecture and tasting scheduled for next month. Actors Sir John Gielgud and Bea Arthur were among those who wrote saying the duck and goose liver dish should be condemned for cruelty to animals, not celebrated. The delicacy is made by force-feeding ducks and geese to swell their livers.

Museum officials initially said they wouldn't cancel, but the "strong language" in some of the correspondence prompted them to poll a number of the 133 ticket-holders. "We telephoned a large cross section over the weekend and found there was unease about what might happen at the program," said David J. Umansky, the Smithsonian's director of communications.

He declined to say whether any of the correspondence contained threats, but a Smithsonian letter to attendees said, "Because we are always concerned with the well-being of our participants, we have regretfully concluded that it would be in the best interests of everyone involved to cancel the program on foie gras."

Catnip ingredient repels roaches 100 times better than insecticide

Cockroach infestations linked to rising rates of asthma

DOUGLAS BIRCH
BALTIMORE SUN

The stuff in catnip that intoxicates tabbies repels cockroaches 100 times better than a powerful insect repellent, scientists said Monday.

The discovery could lead to new nontoxic methods for curbing these tenacious insects, which are more than just a nuisance.

Roach infestations have been linked to rising rates of asthma among children in inner cities.

"We've been chasing cockroach treatments for three years," says Dr. Peyton Eggleston, professor of pediatrics at Johns Hopkins Children's Center. "If you could do it with a repellent, that would be great."

Chris Peterson and Joel Coats of Iowa State University told a meeting of the American Chemical Society in New Orleans on Monday that they had isolated a chemical that even the loathsome roach finds repulsive.

Now the scientists hope that a chemical manufacturer will use their findings.

"There are plenty of things that kill cockroaches," Peterson said in a telephone interview. "But currently there are no cockroach repellents on the market."

Peterson and Coats began studying catnip a few years ago, when a summer intern told them the plant was resistant to insects.

"We decided to look at the chemical basis of that resistance," he said.

So they boiled catnip leaves and distilled the active ingredient, a chemical called nepetalactone. Then they teased the most abundant form of nepetalactone from another, more elusive form with a slightly different atomic structure.

"The chemistry of catnip has been known for a while, but we're the first to separate the different forms of the same chemical," Peterson said.

They discovered that this rare, more potent form of nepetalactone killed flies. But the work might have ended there if another intern, Leah Nemetz, hadn't told Peterson and Coats that some people put catnip in planter boxes to keep insects away.

She decided to study it as a repellent. Nemetz soaked half of a piece of filter paper in the chemical and left the other side dry. Then she put the paper and some German cockroaches, a common species of the insect, in a dish and watched them scuttle away from the treated side.

Scientists tested their discovery against a widely used repellent, called DEET. Their catnip-derived chemical worked at doses only 1 percent as high.

Iowa researchers have not tested the effectiveness of simply spreading natural catnip leaves around the house. It might require so much of the stuff as to be impractical, Peterson said. And, of course, it might attract a lot of cats.

The two scientists, both entomologists, have also tested the osage orange or "hedge apple," an inedible fruit common in the Midwest, long believed to repel any number of pests. They have not yet isolated the active ingredients.

Allergy to roach excrement is thought to be a major cause of asthma in children. Nationwide, asthma rates rose 75 percent in all groups, and by 160 percent among infants to 4-year-olds, between 1980 and 1994.

The rate of illness among black children is estimated to be 40 percent to 50 percent higher than among whites. Black children are hospitalized with the disease three to five times more frequently than whites, and their death rates are three times higher.

There are plenty of things that kill cockroaches, but currently there are no cockroach repellents on the market.

California cracks down on amusement park rides after back-to-back incidents

LOS ANGELES TIMES

In the wake of back-to-back accidents at California theme parks, including one in which a wooden board flew from a Knott's

Berry Farm ride Monday and struck five people in the head, a state Senate committee voted to require statewide inspections of all amusement park rides.

Though Senate committee members did not discuss Sunday's tragedy—a 12-year-old boy fell to his death at a San Francisco Bay area amusement park—state Assemblyman Tom Torlakson of Antioch said the incident added momentum to support for the bill.

"In memory of these individuals and young people who have been killed, we need to try to get this legislation in place," said Torlakson, the bill's sponsor.

The bill now goes before the full Senate, where it is expected to be approved and then sent back to the Assembly for fine-tuning.

The Assembly already passed the measure but must approve Senate changes before the bill goes to California Gov. Gray Davis. Davis has not indicated a position on the bill.

The state Senate committee vote came hours after part of a 5-foot-long, 2-by-2-inch piece of wood broke from the GhostRider attraction at Knott's Berry Farm in Buena Park, flipped into the air and struck five people riding in two of the roller coaster's cars.

GhostRider, billed as the West's biggest roller coaster, opened last December as part of a strategy to boost Knott's appeal by adding new thrill rides.

Shino Shoji, 59, a tourist from Gumma, Japan, was taken to the University of California, Irvine, Medical Center, where he received stitches to close a cut on his head. Four youths were treated for minor scratches on their faces, said Buena Park police Sgt. Terry Branum.

Two representatives from Custom

Coaster Inc., the Cincinnati, Ohio, company that built the ride, left Monday for Buena Park, a company employee said.

"They're going out there to inspect the coaster and see what happened," the employee said.

Jack Falfas, general manager of the theme park, said the ride also will be examined by two other experts: Gary Gast, a wooden roller coaster specialist from Knott's parent company, Ohio-based Cedar Fair LP, and Richard Brown, a dynamics expert who has done extensive work for amusement parks.

Knott's officials say the entire length of the track is inspected each day before the GhostRider begins operations, and bolts are tightened and wood pieces replaced at any sign of weakness. Since the ride opened amid much fanfare last December, no serious accidents had occurred until Monday, said park spokesman Bob Ochsner.

The roller coaster incident followed Sunday's tragedy at the Drop Zone Stunt Tower in Paramount's Great America Theme Park in Santa Clara. A 12-year-old boy, described as severely disabled, apparently slipped out of a safety harness and plunged to his death.

"There is no excuse for someone to die with a safety harness on," said Kathy Dreslar, a consumer lobbyist for Children's Advocacy Institute.

The Drop Zone, which opened in 1996, drops riders in a free fall 129 feet at 62 mph. Sunday's incident was the first for the ride. A 24-year-old man was killed at a different ride at the park last year after hopping a 6-foot security fence to retrieve his wife's hat.

Knott's maintains a similar Drop Zone ride, called Supreme Scream, but has no plans to shut it down, Knott's boss Falfas said.

The ride is made by a different manufacturer but uses a similar type of restraint system for riders.

Civil rights groups express anger over radio station gag

LOS ANGELES TIMES

LOS ANGELES - Civil rights activists are expected to call Tuesday for a boycott of the Walt Disney Co. unless the family entertainment giant publicly apologizes for its role in a radio promotion called "The Black Hoe."

The news conference, scheduled for Tuesday afternoon at the Los Angeles headquarters of the Congress for Racial Equality, comes on the heels of a lawsuit accusing Disney, ABC Inc. and the management of its KLOS-FM radio station of violating anti-discrimination laws last year by giving away dark, plastic gardening tools called "Black Hoes" as gag prizes on the air to listeners and advertisers.

Disney was sued Aug. 6 by KLOS Traffic Manager Judy Goodwin, a black employee who contends the radio station undertook the "Black Hoe" promotion with the "conscious aim and intent of providing racially offensive, sexually charged entertainment for its primarily white male listening audience and advertising clients."

Goodwin's suits says she suffered retaliation for complaining about the promotion, which was broadcast to millions across the United States on the station's syndicated "Mark & Brian" show.

An ABC spokesperson on Monday said, "It was never our intention to offend any group," adding that Goodwin's suit was without merit.

CORE vice-chairwoman Sandra Moore said, "Disney needs to come forward and apologize for this mean-spirited, malicious attack against African American females and admit that they have a problem with the 'Mark & Brian' show that needs to be fixed."

If Disney isn't willing to do that, they are going to see us protesting outside Disneyland and every theme park and retail store that they own."

Moore said representatives from the Nation of Islam, the Brotherhood Crusade and several national church groups will join CORE in condemning Disney at Tuesday's gathering. Leaders from other civil rights organizations, including the National Political Congress of Black Women and the Feminist Majority, are expected to release statements Tuesday demanding that Disney apologize.

During the last decade, Disney has been singled out for a series of protests and boycotts by conservative watchdogs, religious groups and other critics concerned about some of the controversial movies, music and even health benefit policies associated with the corporation, which has been built on its reputation for wholesome family entertainment.

KLOS-FM disc jockeys Mark Thompson and Brian Phelps were unavailable for comment Monday. Disney and KLOS-FM declined to comment, referring queries to its ABC Inc. division, where Patricia J. Matson, senior vice president of communications, released brief statements: "The promotion ran for about six weeks without a complaint from the public. Once our management at the station learned of the promotion, it was pulled from the air."

Responding to Goodwin's lawsuit for the first time, Matson said: "There is no basis to the claims asserted by Ms. Goodwin, and the station intends to vigorously defend itself in this litigation. After concerns were raised (about the "Black Hoe" campaign), top management at KLOS-FM acted promptly to cancel the give-away and personally apologized to Ms. Goodwin and other employees who were offended."

Ms. Goodwin has been treated fairly in every aspect of her employment as has every other employee who raised a concern."

Goodwin's attorney James R. DeBose said Monday that no one at KLOS-FM has ever apologized to his client.

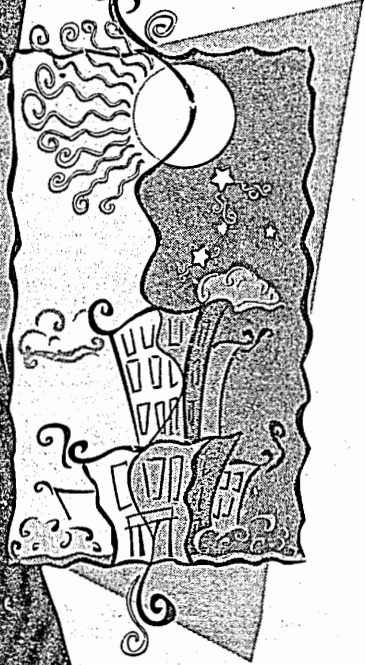

To the contrary, DeBose says Goodwin suffered harassment and retaliation by station management after she complained about the "Black Hoe" campaign.

"Judy Goodwin stands by every allegation spelled out in her lawsuit," DeBose said.

After Goodwin complained to ABC/Disney's human resource department, senior management at KLOS decided to suspend the campaign, the suit says.

Following her complaints, Goodwin was taunted by white male managers and employees who passed the gag gifts around the office and shouted jokes to one another in "stereotypical mock Black accents" about how much "they loved their own personal Black Hoes," the suit says.

Morris Library hit with double whammy

ANDY EGENES
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Jim Fox, associate dean for Public and Collection Development Services, and his wife Mary Anne are stepping down Sept. 1 after a combined 43 years of service at Morris Library.

Mary Anne, head of cataloging at Morris Library, met her husband at the University of North Carolina before they moved to Carbondale in January 1975.

She served as assistant librarian in the departments of Education and Psychology, as well as a cataloger at the School of Law before moving over to the library in 1978.

Since that time, the couple has helped make Morris Library a better place for SIU students to research and study. They plan to continue this inner policy until they walk out the door for the last time.

"He is a little modest because he did provide significant leadership in the development of the collection and getting additional resources," said Carolyn Snyder, dean of Library Affairs.

Part of that work came in the teamwork Jim and Mary Anne did routinely.

They worked together in purchasing various library materials.

"Both of them are very effective in working as a part of a team, and leading people, as well," Snyder said. "I received several high compliments from people who work for them."

Snyder said she is currently in the process of conducting a national search to find a replacement for Jim. She hopes to interview several possible candidates by the end of September.

She did not know when the next person would officially begin work.

Last week, Jim was still meeting with architects to review the latest renovations of the third floor conference room and window replacements.

Also, Jim has led the parade through vigorous red-tape to establish funding for the 24-hour service. Morris Library started around-the-clock hours for the first floor Nov. 1.

It took only one night of being open before it seemingly took off.

Fox explained how well the idea was received, especially during the midterm and final exam weeks.

"If you walked around, there would be more people here at 4 a.m. on a Wednesday than around 9 o'clock on a Saturday morning," Fox said.

The Fox family will soon begin a 24-hour retirement consisting of traveling, pursuing hobbies and, of course, reading.

Jim said it was a gradual decision to retire but a big decision that the family eventually had to make. His wife agreed.

"I'm going to miss the people around town and really miss the work I'm doing," Mary Anne said.

Both of them are very effective in working as a part of a team, and leading people, as well.

DAN HONERBY - DAILY EGYPTIAN

Jim Fox, associate dean for Public and Collection Development Services, will retire, along with his wife, Mary Anne, from the University Sept. 1. Fox said he is looking forward to life away from Morris Library but leaves with one last comment: "It's been fun."

of the earthquake," she said. "He was like, 'I don't know what happened, I don't know what's going on, I can't find people and I need to call,' so we're trying to help him."

Saide and Elif have become experts of sorts in Turkish phone lines and trying to get information for concerned Turkish students.

Elif is the president of the Turkish Student Association (TSA), an organization her mother was involved in before Elif was born. Elif's position in TSA provides her with greater opportunities to help overseas. She said she has been most concerned about SIUC graduate student, Ahmet Uysal who went with his family to Turkey for the summer.

"They were supposed to come back this week, and we haven't heard from him," she said. "My mother and I are trying to call in Turkey to find out if he's OK, but the lines are cut."

Unable to get through by phone, Elif and her mother have taken to the Internet where Turkish Newspapers post vital information.

"They have lists of people who have died confirmed," she said. "They weren't there." Saide said she is happy to see her daughter take an interest in Turkey and help with the tragedy.

"I am very, very proud of her," she said. "I guess you'd call her Turkish-American."

In the midst of the nightmare, Elif takes comfort in the small blessings.

"It was very good to see that Greece, which is a known adversary of Turkey, helped out a lot," she said. "They sent dogs and help, and it's just excellent how everybody like the States have sent people over there to help."

Wise Guys Pizza manager Kamal Naser could not agree more with Jackson's assessment.

In fact, Naser usually hires eight drivers and eight cooks for fall semester because his business experiences a 160 percent increase in sales compared to the summer season.

"In the summer we're very, very slow here," Naser said. "So, we're happy with them returning."

"On the average, there are one or two small earthquakes in the New Madrid Seismic Zone a week," he said. "Most people don't feel those earthquakes — they are so small only seismic equipment can detect them."

Henson said their ability to monitor geological disturbances in this area allows them to better understand seismic potential of the fault system.

"As researchers, these remind us we are in a seismic zone," he said. "People tend to forget we are in a seismic zone because we do not have earthquakes they can feel very often."

A series of earthquakes over a three-month period occurred in 1811 and 1812 at an estimated magnitude greater than 8.0 and were accompanied by more than 100 aftershocks.

"We do know that it happened in 1811 and 1812, and it's possible a large earthquake could happen again," he said.

According to Henson, research on the New Madrid Seismic Zone began in the early 1970s and has shown that a magnitude 4.0 or 4.5 earthquake is likely to occur every 12 to 15 years. However, an earthquake, similar to the one in Turkey, is only likely every 500 years or more.

Geology Professor John Sexton and his students have studied the New Madrid Fault Zone, utilizing ground penetrating radar and seismic reflection.

"We know the location of some deep faults. We see how deep and how shallow they go," he said. "If they offset the young sediment at the surface the fault has been active recently."

Sexton said despite learning a lot ground activity, being able to accurately pin down when an earthquake will occur is hard.

"The likelihood of predicting when an earthquake is going to happen is pretty low," Sexton said. "The New Madrid area has hundreds of earthquakes every year but they are so very small."

Henson said recent devastation in Turkey is unfortunate but can bring about knowledge of how to survive another quake of those proportions.

"A large earthquake like this in Turkey causes us to stop and think how a large earthquake in this area would effect us," he said.

"One thing we can learn from this is that large earthquakes like that have occurred as recently as the winter of 1811 and 1812 in the New Madrid Seismic Zone."

Young back on line for San Francisco

CLARK JUDGE
KNIGHT-RIDDER NEWSPAPERS

NAPA, CALIF. — When Bryant Young rejoined the 49ers nearly two weeks ago, Coach Steve Mariucci said he planned to supervise the defensive tackle's comeback and keep him out of team drills until shortly before the regular season.

So much for best-laid plans. Young took part in roughly 10 plays of pass-rush and team work Sunday, exactly three weeks before the 49ers' Sept. 12 opener, in what amounted to another step in a remarkable recovery and an encouraging sign for a defense in need of impact players.

"I guess a lot of people are surprised," Young said. "Not myself." Young's lower right leg was broken in a Nov. 30 victory over the New York Giants last season. Originally, he was not supposed to return until mid-season. That forecast changed, however, when Young joined the team for its Aug. 10 practice at Stockton. It was then that Mariucci said Young would practice in "a controlled environment," a plan that went kaput when Young stepped in with the first team Sunday morning.

"He's driving me crazy," an obviously pleased Mariucci said. "I'm caving in."

Young said there is no reason not to. He experiences no pain "in the break site" of his right leg, feels great and wants as much work as coaches are willing to give him. As Mariucci addressed reporters on the field after practice, Young stayed behind with defensive end Charles Haley to continue their workouts.

"I have to get my timing to get a feel for being back in a game," said Young, one of the league's top defensive linemen. "I need the work. I'm doing more (than expected), but at the same time I'm being smart about it. I'm just pushing to get more reps, and it felt pretty good."

Young does not expect his coach to

"cave in" on his decision to keep Young out of exhibition games ("I think he's pretty firm," Young said), but he does expect to practice more with the first team.

Mariucci said Young was so impatient to join teammates on the field Sunday that he had the countdown to opening day marked in days, hours and minutes. Kept out of 9-on-7 drills, Young was allowed to join the starting defense for the first time in nearly nine months after everyone on offense was alerted he was on the field.

"We kept it very safe," Mariucci said. "It's kind of like when Jerry (Rice) came back last year. It was like: 'He's over there, defensive backs. Don't be an All-American.' Nobody's trying to double-team him or cut him, but he just needs to be around some bodies, survive and feel good."

What was important for the 49ers' defense, which finished 23rd last year, is that Young felt good and looked better. Guard Derrick Deese and center Chris Dalman were Young's opponents, and Deese said there was no difference between blocking the Bryant Young of a year ago and blocking the Bryant Young of today.

"Everyone knows we can't afford to have him hurt again on something stupid, but the hard part is that it is 'B.Y.," Deese said.

"He's coming off the ball fast, and he's trying to get ready to play. I see a lot of (explosion), and I'm amazed. I think he'll be back and be ready to go. I've seen him working after practice and running. I knew it was just a matter of days before he'd show up in team drills."

Playing in the Sept. 12 opener against Jacksonville remains Young's intention.

"I need the pileup and the hits and the guys tipping me up," Young said, "just to let me know I don't have to worry about the mental part."

Mariucci is cautious and has said that when Young returns to games, he will do so gradually. Initially, Young won't be allowed to play an entire game and might not be allowed to play half of one. He will be eased into the lineup, playing more as he feels comfortable.

"He still has a ways to go," Mariucci said. "He's in running shape, he's in lifting shape, he just needs to be in football shape."

But he is where four of the team's eight draft picks are not - on the field and in the lineup - and that wasn't lost on Mariucci as he watched Young rush the quarterback.

"You get the Jerry Rice recoveries, you get the Bobb McKittrick situation - you get those kinds of efforts to get back at it," Mariucci said. "If that's not being a leader by example, I don't know what is."

"I just hope that everybody else who's around this organization, whether you're a rookie, an employee, a coach or a fan understands what it takes to come back from something that's really difficult."

McGwire-Sosa home run sequel still hasn't lost its fun

SCOTT FOWLER
KNIGHT-RIDDER NEWSPAPERS

Isn't this cool? Sammy Sosa and Mark McGwire are treating us one more time to a summer of love and loud cracks. The highlight reels show their faces and their swings every night, and I have found myself lost in this single-season home-run sequel that really doesn't mean anything but is so much fun to watch.

Baseball's two best sluggers each banged their way to the 50-home-plateau this weekend. This duel - while not as historic in its scope - may turn out to be even finer than their first one.

It was McGwire's turn to break into a slow trot Sunday. After Sosa had hit four homers in two games to give himself a 51-48 lead, McGwire pounded a couple of his own.

One of them was thought to be Big Mac's longest of the year - it would have traveled an estimated 502 feet but instead dented the New York Mets scoreboard and shattered a light bulb.

Sosa didn't hit one Sunday, so he maintained a 51-50 edge over McGwire entering tonight's games. One of the best parts about McGwire-Sosa II is that Sosa is actually leading occasionally this year. In 1998, when McGwire finished with 70 homers and Sosa 66, Sosa never once went to bed at night with the outright lead.

Of course, there are no ghosts to chase this season. That's why this sequel isn't grabbing the publicity the first one did, when Roger Maris and Babe Ruth seemed as much a part of the race as Sosa and McGwire did.

Now, McGwire and Sosa just chase each other. Their teams are out of the playoff race already - so none of their games are meaningful except in a home-run context.

"He's doing it, and I'm doing it, and there's not too much more you can ask from two guys who went through it last year," Sosa said in a recent press conference.

You could ask for a pennant race, but no such luck. McGwire's St. Louis team lingers around .500. Sosa's Chicago Cubs are in last place in their division.

All we've got is McGwire and Sosa. No playoffs. No Maris. No Ruth.

And still, isn't it a blast?

Not for everyone, obviously. The St. Louis Post-Dispatch published a piece earlier this season that said McGwire should be traded to improve the team, since his trade value would never be higher than it is at this moment.

The Chicago Tribune sometimes puts Sosa's exploits on the inside pages of its sports section.

Certainly, the home run today has been diluted by dollhouse stadiums and mediocre pitching. But only four players have ever hit 50 or more homers in consecutive seasons - Ruth, Ken Griffey Jr., McGwire and Sosa. This is something.

Home runs are gorgeous and quick. I am not a baseball purist, and so the fact that McGwire-Sosa might generate more publicity late in the season than the Atlanta Braves-New York Mets race in the NL East doesn't bother me.

In fact, I hope that happens, because that would mean Sosa and McGwire are keeping up the frantic pace that they have already set this season. They face each other in the last three games of the season - Oct. 1-3, when the Cubs visit St. Louis - and that could be wonderful.

It was F. Scott Fitzgerald who once wrote: "There are no second acts in American lives." But this is a superb second act that gives us just what we want - more of the thunderbolts that are why we love McGwire and Sosa in the first place.

I'm hoping for both of them to hit 71 on the season's last day and for the home-run race to end in a tie.

Women's team earns all-American honors

The SIU women's swimming and diving team was honored by the College Swimming Coaches Association of America Academic All-American Team with a team grade point average of 3.228.

T.L. Salukis, who rank 36th in the nation, now have received 18 consecutive semesters of academic All-American accolades from the CSCAA.

BASKETBALL

Men's team faces UMass in opener in Puerto Rico

The SIU men's basketball team is one of eight teams competing in a highly competitive tournament in San Juan, Puerto Rico, Dec. 21-23. The Salukis will begin the tournament against the University of Massachusetts Dec. 21.

The winner of that game will face the winner of the University of Tennessee and American University the following day at 5:30 p.m. Losers will meet the same day at 12:30 p.m.

Regardless of the outcome of their first two games, the Salukis will meet one of the top-bracket teams which includes the University of North Carolina-Charlotte, the University of Tulsa, Boston College and the University of Illinois-Chicago the final day of the tournament Thursday, Dec. 23.

The rest of the schedule is expected to be released this week.

SIUC athletics academic adviser vacancy filled

Paul L. Henderson Jr. of Detroit was hired earlier this month as SIU athletics academic adviser.

Henderson, a graduate of Morehouse College (Atlanta, Ga.) in 1995, received his master's degree from the United States Sports Academy (Daphne, Ala.) in 1998 and for the past year has been director of compliance and academic support at the University of Detroit Mercy.

He previously had served an internship with Conference USA in Chicago and had been a graduate assistant at Jackson State University (Jackson, Miss.).

Henderson will work with academic adviser Kristina Theriault.

opposing teams before the quarterback released the ball, with rampant disarray in SIU's defensive backfield leading to ugly coverage breakdowns.

First-year assistant coach Adrian White has the unenviable task of patching together a competent secondary around Scott.

White's crew will have it easier if the defensive line can build upon the subtle strides it has made the last couple years.

Anybody who has gotten a glimpse of junior Saluki defensive tackle Tavita Tovio, who makes up for being a modest 6 feet tall by throwing his listed 262 pounds around with reckless abandon, knows the well-fed Saluki from Honolulu is the kind of guy that causes quarterbacks to wake up at night in a cold sweat.

Tovio is a good starting point for a defensive line that figures to improve, with a determined Brian Broussard playing the other tackle spot sandwiched between ends Andre Bailey and line-backer convert Bryan Archibald.

And even with Scott at safety, the line-backers should provide sturdy play as a few fresh faces team with dependable returnees Dante Stovall, Luther Claxton, Jason Nolda and Jimmy Bear et.

The most crucial task for the Saluki defense will be to develop leaders who can keep their teammates from coming unglued when the going gets tough.

After losing so many tight games in 1998, the Salukis are all-too-aware that a game's outcome is often determined by forcing a timely turnover or a critical third down stop.

As usual for SIU, the beginning, middle and end of the story behind the team's success in 1999 will be whether the defense will allow the offense to stick to its game plan and function effectively.

The challenge is out there for SIU players on the defensive side of the ball. The alternatives are clear.

Make this the year the Saluki defense discovers its swagger, or watch as another football season in Carbondale slip away.

and 137 kills during the year. Kemner is also the niece of Caren Kemner, a three-time volleyball Olympian.

Helping Locke tutor the freshmen and newcomers falls in the hands of a couple returning athletes from last season's squad, most notably senior setter Debbie Barr.

Barr owns the all-time SIUC assist record (4,123), set last season, and should provide some excitement this season on her quest to 5,000.

However, Locke is counting on Barr to assist her younger teammates in other ways as well this season.

"It's just like football, when you have a quarterback returning that knows the offense," Locke said. "She provides a lot of confidence for the new players and helps them learn faster."

Barr will be joined by fellow senior outside hitters Marizza Kimbrough and Beth Morris and defensive specialist Lenika Vazquez who will help the new faces feel comfortable and build confidence.

"I love it because that's what I want to end up doing is coaching," Barr said.

"I think it makes the freshmen feel better knowing that we're helping them instead of looking down on them like 'Oh no, they can't do that.'"

Time for SIU to get defensive

Few football teams have learned football's most basic lesson in a harsher fashion than SIU.

If Football 101 was offered at the University, it is easy to guess what fundamental message would quickly be purveyed in any curriculum worth its salt: Defense wins football games.

That is why it is no mystery why SIU's football team has labored through a miserable decade, registering a sorry 32-67 during the '90s.

Despite having had its share of prolific offensive players in recent years, the defense has been a continual sore spot for the Salukis. So has not seen a winning football team since 1991 in which it finished 7-4.

With the dawn of a new season upon us, the Saluki defense will once again be under the microscope after giving up a meaty 27 points per game en route to a 3-8 season a year ago.

SIU is headed back to the bottom of the Gateway again if you put stock in the media pundits, who slated the Salukis for last place in its recent pre-season poll.

Of late, head coach Jan Quarless was less than ecstatic with the first week of practice, and the headache caused by the unresolved playing status of SIU's most productive running back of all-time, Karlton Carpenter, is no minor one.

Luckily for Quarless, when the Salukis travel to Cape Girardeau, Mo., for the season opener at Southeast Missouri State University Sept. 2, all the polls, predictions and speculative jabber go out the proverbial window.

And optimists can take heart in the knowledge that the cupboard is hardly barren for SIU.

This year's squad looks like it should be able to generate points, with a potent wide receiving corps, capable offensive line and a dynamo of a running back if Carpenter finds his way back to practice.

Unfortunately, the offensive skill possessed by the likes of Carpenter and dangerous wide receivers Cornell Craig and Brian Hamlett will go to waste if the defense remains as soft as a melting ice cream sandwich.

A lack of overall strength and speed, coupled with occasional poor fundamental tackling, spelled doom for SIU in 1998.

Not to say the Saluki defense is incapable of righting the ship this season. In fact, there is reason to believe the much maligned unit will pick up the slack in '99.

Quarless has moved Bart Scott, who was SIU's leading tackler as a freshman linebacker last season, to free safety this year in an effort to delegate a needed boost to the secondary.

Scott has the strength and skill to break all sorts of records — and likely a few opposing ball carriers' bones — by the time his SIU career is complete.

Volleyball team welcomes seven new players to fill in for departed graduates

As the doors opened into a dimly lit Davies Gymnasium last Wednesday, SIU head volleyball coach Sonya Locke could have thrown a welcoming party.

Or she could just as easily have handed out name tags.

Entering her ninth season at the helm of the SIU volleyball team, Locke must rely on a group of seven new faces — five which are fresh: in — to help fill the void left by four seniors who graduated last year.

Three-time All-Missouri Valley Conference selection Marlo Moreland, two-time All-MVC middle blocker Laura Pier along with key starters, outside hitter Lindsay Resmer and middle blocker Monique Galvin, all help lead the Salukis to a 19-12 finish overall and a third-place finish in the Valley last season.

FIRST GAME

The SIU volleyball team opens the season Sept. 3 at the Official All-Star Cafe/UNLV Volleyball Classic in Las Vegas.

"Those four seniors played a lot for us the past couple of years, produced for us the last couple of years and definitely were responsible for a lot of the success that we had last year," Locke said. "So to replace them is impossible."

While replacing the foursome may be out of the question, Locke is confident her young team will overcome the loss.

"We have filled those holes with some very determined, young people," she said.

The young, determined group has Locke excited, especially when taking notice of the size of her latest recruiting class.

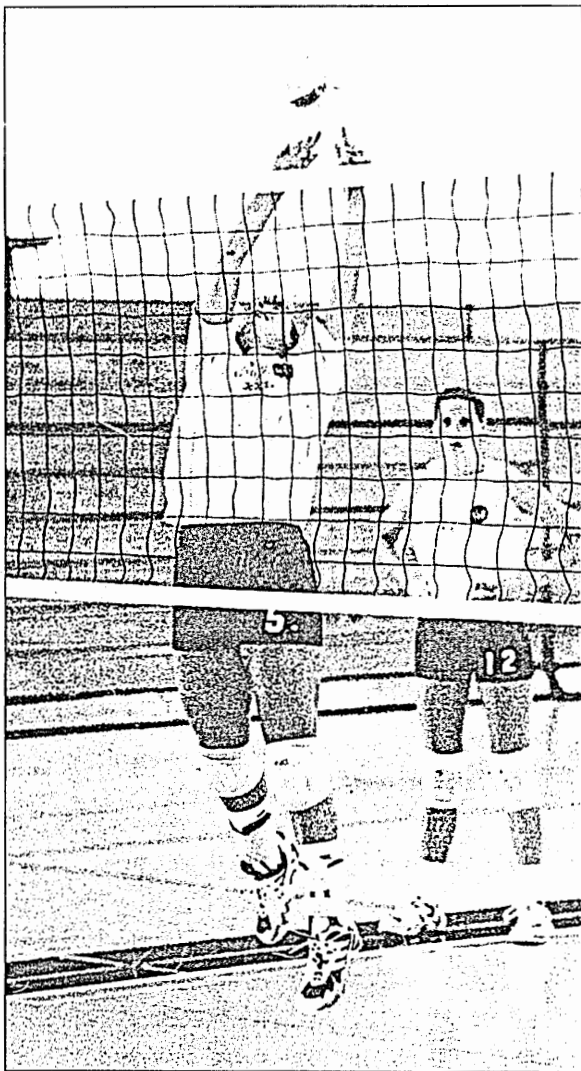

Not simply size in quantity, but in height. Locke added three 6-footers — all freshmen — to her squad, something rarely seen on the court last season.

Amber Britton, of Louisville, Ky., provides a 6-foot-1 threat at middle blocker, and 6-foot Lindsay Schultz of Valparaiso, Ind., will also provide needed size at the middle blocker position.

Toss in 6-foot outside hitter Tara Cains of LaPorte, Ind., and 5-foot-11 freshman outside hitter Kristie Kemner of Quincy into the mix, and it has one thinking size does matter.

Kemner led her high school squad to a state title her senior year, recording 96 aces

Missouri transfer joins quarterback competition

The SIU football team has yet another challenger for its starting quarterback position. Ryan Douglass, a transfer quarterback from the University of Missouri, joined Northeast Oklahoma A&M Junior College transfer Shared Potete and red-shirt freshmen Tyler Paopao and Kevin Kobe in the race.

Douglass, who spent the past two seasons behind Mizzou standout Corby Jones, is the son of former Chicago Bears' quarterback Bobby Douglass.

The 6-2, 205-pound junior saw action in six games during his freshman season at Missouri, but only recorded two passing attempts. Douglas was 0-6 in four games last season for the Tigers.

The Salukis begin action against Southeast Missouri State University 6 p.m. Sept. 2 in Cape Girardeau, Mo.

SWIMMING AND DIVING

Swimmers representing Salukis in Australia

SIU senior swimmer Herman Louw and graduate Liam Weseloh, along with men's head coach Rick Walker, are representing the Salukis this week at the 1999 Pan Pacific Championships in Sydney, Australia.

Louw, a native of Middelbury, South

Africa, is competing for his country in several relay events and is a strong contender to become a medalist.

Weseloh, who graduated in May, hopes to attain his second medal at the Pan Pacific Championships for his native country of Canada following a silver medal performance in the 25-kilometer open water swim at the 1997 games in Japan.

Walker will represent the Salukis while leading the U.S. National Team head coach for distance swimming.

The Pan Pacific Games feature world-class athletes from several countries and occur every four years in the summer preceding the Olympic Games.
