Commerce group backs amusement tax

By Bob Bondurant
Staff Writer

The proposal to have the City of Carbondale levy an "amusement tax" to help fund the planned downtown parking garage received the "total and confirmed support" of the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce Thursday.

The Carbondale City Council has scheduled a public hearing on the tax at its meeting at 7 p.m. Monday in the City Council chambers.

The city plans to build the Gus says the amusement tax no doubt will amuse the bond buyers all the way to the bank.

garage across the street from the proposed convention center, which is being privately financed by Stan Hoye and Associates.

The tax, as proposed by the city administration, would be levied on the receipts of restaurants, bars and hotels, and would be used to fund the debt service of the bonds issued to finance the parking garage.

The debt service on the $4.25 million in bonds will total about $590,000 per year. Revenue from the operation of the parking garage is not expected to equal the amount needed to meet the debt service until five years after the garage is built.

City Manager Carroll Fry has said that the tax, in theory, would be levied against the people who would benefit from the increased business which the convention center would produce. The tax could be reduced or phased out once revenue from the garage increases.

In a letter sent Thursday to members of the City Council and the mayor, Chamber of Commerce President Patrick Burley said "after careful review of the alternative methods of financing this project, the pass-through tax is the most equitable available."

The Chamber of Commerce's board of directors met Thursday morning and decided to support the tax after Fry met with the Chamber's general membership Tuesday night to explain the reasoning behind, and some of the mechanics, of the proposed tax.

Describing the Chamber's reaction to the presentation as favorable, Fry said the members were trying to find out how to make the tax work.

In his letter, Burley said, "Input from our membership indicates that there exists a great deal of confusion and misunderstanding as to how the tax will be administered, and its effects on the cost of the products and services affected."

Fry responded to Burley's comment, stating that the city administration would "carefully prepare rules on it once the council establishes what the tax will be and how."

The presentation of the amusement tax will not include the exact details of the implementation of the tax, although the mechanics are set up to do so, Fry said.

Carbondale restaurant owners and merchants have had mixed reactions to the tax, which would be levied against them.

Randy Webster, a manager speaking on behalf of Danver's Restaurant, said he was against levying the amusement tax.

"The parking garage is not going to benefit us one bit," Webster said. "The general public, which won't benefit from it much, will be penalized."

"We don't feel that the convention center is going to help us any more than the downtown stores that don't serve food or liquor."

Lothar Brown, general manager of the Ramada Inn, said he has mixed feelings about the amusement tax.

"If part of the tax would be used to promote the tourist industry, then it would be acceptable," Brown said. "If it's purely to support the parking garage, at this time under current economic conditions I would not be in favor of it."

Differing from most of the businessmen contacted, Walt Nash, manager of Denny's Restaurant, said that he supports the amusement tax, and the convention center.

He said that the tax would be inconvenient for many people, but once the convention center is built it would offset any losses from the tax.

"People are being short-sighted if they're not looking at the long haul of the situation," Nash said.

Amusement tax plan opposed by senate

By Andrew Straug
Staff Writer

The Student Senate has unanimously approved a resolution opposing the proposed city amusement tax and also decided not to support a proposed campus housing rate increase.

The senate said that the proposed amusement tax, designed to help fund construction of a downtown parking garage and applicable to revenue from the "amusement industry", such as bars, restaurants, hotels and motels, would mean that SIU-C students would pay most of the cost of a building that few students would use.

"The utility for SIU-C students would be little, if any at all," Mark Murphy, author of the anti-tax resolution, told the senate.

John Dunning, a senator representing the College of Human Resources, added, "I personally don't want to pay for a parking garage. I don't even have a car here."

Murphy said the garage should be funded by permanent Carbondale residents because they will receive the benefits from the convention center. He said increases in property taxes or in sales taxes for all items would be a more equitable way to pay for the garage.

If the City Council implements the amusement tax, "they might as well go to Woody Hall and ask the University for a check to pay for the garage," Murphy said.

The senate also refused to endorse proposed University Housing rate increases after John Stewart, a representative of Small Group Housing (SGH) residents, said formulation of the SGH increase was unfair.

The proposed increase for SGH is 16.5 percent, the largest increase of the six Housing areas.

According to Housing Director Sam Rinella, the increase is needed to pay for rising housing costs, for equipment and for special projects. Rinella said inflation has increased the cost of salaries by 9.5 percent, food by 10 percent, utilities by 19.9 percent, maintenance by 10 percent and administrative costs by 8 percent.

However, Stewart said those inflationary increases should not have been used to determine the SGH rate increase because SGH residents buy their own food. In addition, Stewart said, the maintenance cost figures used by Housing for the SGH buildings are too high because the figure includes those costs incurred by the SGH administrative buildings.

USO revokes status of Moslem group

By Andrew Straug
Staff Writer

The Student Senate voted overwhelmingly to revoke the recognized student organization status of the Moslem Student Society, one of two Iranian student groups whose members were involved in a fight Sept. 4 in the Student Center.

The Office of Student Development must make the final decision on the revocation, Fritz Levenhagen, chairman of the senate's Committee on Internal Affairs, told the senate. The committee recommended the revocation on Monday.

Nancy Harris, director of student development, was unavailable for comment

Thursday.

Levenhagen told the senate that Harris had said she would consider the senate's recommendation in making her decision on the group's status.

Withdrawal of status was proposed to punish the group for its involvement in a fight with the Iranian Moslem Association. According to SIU-C police, seven people were injured in the fight, which began after pro-Ayatollah Khomeini students, including Iranian Moslem Association members, refused to allow anti-Khomeini students, including members of the Moslem Student Society, to speak at a memorial service.

Additional IAC delegates suggested

By Alan Scully
Staff Writer

An ad hoc committee, formed to study the Intercollegiate Athletics Advisory Committee, has recommended that two student representatives and a faculty representative be added to the IAC.

A second recommendation provides that the committee elect a chairman on a yearly basis. Currently, the chairman rotates between the faculty voting representatives to the National Collegiate Athletic Association and to the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women.

The IAC is a committee which advises the administration on athletics.

Albert Somit, president of SIU-C, sent the report to the University's constituency groups for comment. He will meet with the ad hoc committee to discuss the report, according to an SIU-C news release.

After gathering the input from the constituency groups and the ad hoc committee, Somit will decide what the new IAC policy should be. Jean Paratore, assistant to the vice president for student affairs, said.

The 16-member ad hoc committee was formed in August by Somit to study the IAC's role in the University's athletics program and suggest revisions in the committee's membership.

The ad hoc committee was divided into two sub-committees, one studying the IAC's role, and the other, its membership.

The additional representatives to the IAC would increase the group's membership to 19. The recommended makeup would include six Faculty Senate representatives, three Undergraduate Student Organization representatives,

Israel, United States publish peacekeeping force declaration

JERUSALEM (AP) — The United States and Israel published a joint declaration Thursday aimed at clearing the way for European participation in the Sinai peacekeeping force.

But Jewish settlers opposed to Israel's planned withdrawal from Sinai in April staged violent protests in the area.

They burned a government office in the Sinai town of Yamit on the Mediterranean and barricaded the town gates to protest the government's refusal to meet their compensation demands. The office was damaged but there were no injuries.

The joint declaration said the 2,400-troop force, half of it

American, will have the functions defined in the Egyptian-Israel peace treaty and an attached protocol, "and there can be no derogation or reservation from them."

The declaration said Europe agreed, in letters to the United States dated Nov. 26, that "they have attached no political conditions" to their participation.

The clarifications by Britain, France, Italy and the Netherlands appeared to be a retreat from their earlier position linking the force to progress on the Palestinian issue.

The four countries alarmed Israel when they announced they would send troops, but at the same time underscored Europe's Mideast policy calling for inclusion of the Palestine Liberation Organization, Israel's arch-enemy, in the peace process.

The joint statement was aimed at severing the link between the force and Europe's policy.

A spokesman said Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir forwarded the statement to the four countries, and it was now up to them to explicitly accept the declaration. "It is not enough that they say nothing," said another official.

Waldheim withdraws from election

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—Incumbent Kurt Waldheim dropped out of the deadlocked balloting for U.N. secretary general Thursday but remained under consideration for an unprecedented third term in office.

Ugandan Ambassador Olara Otunnu, Security Council president for December, was asked by a reporter whether Waldheim's candidacy had been withdrawn following 16 inconclusive rounds of council balloting. He said "absolutely not."

Otunnu said he had asked both Waldheim and the Third World challenger, Tanzanian Foreign Minister Salim Ahmed Salim, "to step aside so we can consider other candidates, and Waldheim complied."

Otunnu said Salim's reply was expected after a meeting of the group of African U.N. member states.

China is committed to electing a Third World candidate and has consistently vetoed Waldheim and the United States has repeatedly vetoed Salim.

Otunnu said it was possible that, if the 15-member council could not agree on a compromise candidate, it might agree as a last resort to split the next term between Waldheim and Salim.

"I want the matter to be settled before Dec. 15," when the U.N. General Assembly's current session is due to adjourn, Otunnu said.

Solidarity: Reconciliation is wrecked

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Solidarity declared Thursday that Polish authorities wrecked chances for reconciliation by using force to end the firefighter cadets' protest, and that the union will consider a retaliatory general strike.

"The developments of the past weeks prove that by opting for violence the government has jettisoned the possibility of dialogue with society," the independent union's leaders said after a meeting in central Radom.

"The ushering in of the so-called extraordinary measures... is tantamount to an attempt at liquidating civil and employee rights won in 1980," the statement said.

Allen failed to disclose client names

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard V. Allen failed to disclose the identity of his consulting firm's clients despite a legal requirement that any of them "directly involved" with him be listed if they paid at least $5,000 during the two years before he joined the White House.

White House spokesman David Gergen said Thursday he wasn't sure whether the national security adviser should have listed his clients and other White House officials refused to discuss the issue.

Allen has argued that the White House counsel's office told him he did not have to list his clients because, technically, he was an employee of the company, Potomac International Corp., and fees were paid to the firm.

Chief job of university relations is fund raising, candidate says

By David Murphy
Staff Writer

Raising funds for SIU-C's academic projects will be the chief responsibility of the next vice president for university relations, according to William J. Farrell, a candidate for the position.

Farrell, one of three candidates being considered, was on campus Thursday for meetings with University officials and members of the SIU-C community.

"I think the number one task of the vice president for university relations can be summarized in two words; fund raising," Farrell said. "That's the top priority, I think, without any doubt."

The 45-year-old Farrell is presently the associate vice president for educational development and research at the University of Iowa. After two days on the SIU-C campus, he said he was favorably impressed with both the faculty and facilities.

Generating funds from the private sector will be necessary to maintain future high standards at the University, according to Farrell. The fact that SIU-C has a tradition of research and service to the Southern Illinois region will be useful in building support, he said.

"I think what we're talking about is that if the University

GSC OKs allocation revisions

By Alan Sculley

The Graduate Student Council approved revisions to its recently-adopted fee allocation guidelines, in an attempt to iron out problems caused after the new guidelines were passed.

In October, the GSC approved guidelines that limited the council to allocating 60 percent of its fee money for professional development activities, such as attending conferences; 10 percent on university-wide events, such as speakers; and 30 percent for special support.

One problem that arose was that the amount of money allocated earlier under the previous university-wide activities rules exceeded the new guideline.

serves the region, and I think it does, it's fair to ask for some reciprocal support from within the region," Farrell said.

Successful fund raising requires a steady "give and

To solve the funding problem, the GSC voted Wednesday to calculate the 10 percent figure from the university-wide funds remaining for this year.

Another problem which developed dealt with limits for single special support activities. The new guidelines had limited allocations to 25 percent of the cost of the activity or $200.

But many groups that apply for special support activities have limited funding sources, and a 25 percent limit wouldn't allow the GSC to fully fund an event costing less than $200. If there were not enough other sources of funding, Nelson said.

To alleviate the problem, the GSC voted Wednesday to eliminate the 25 percent ceiling.

New Right, Republicans divided

Conservative wave spreading boundaries

By Karen Galle
Staff Writer

The New Right. The Moral Majority. The Young Americans For Freedom. The names of today's right-wing organizations ring like the slogans of an advertising campaign.

They are catch phrases for a new wave of conservatism sweeping the country. They are the product of a merging of conservative political reactionaries and sophisticated media messengers that has made the so-called "New Right" one of the most controversial and important political phenomena in American history.

Although the New Right is closely associated with the Republican Party, the movement has broken the boundaries of traditional Republican philosophies in a number of areas. The kinds of issues it addresses, the supporters it attracts and the methods it employs to reach those supporters have placed the New Right a step beyond traditional conservatism.

Like Republicanism, the New Right is dedicated to a limited government, free enterprise and a strong national defense. It also opposes the Equal Rights Amendment and abortion, as did the Republican platform in the 1980 presidential election. However, the New Right's positions on social and moral issues are what sets it apart from traditional Republicanism. The New Right is the pro-American, pro-family, pro-religion movement. It opposes homosexuality and gay rights, pornography, school busing for integration and sex education in public schools. It supports censorship of school textbooks, classroom prayer, the family security act and scientific creationism.

"The center and the right of the Republicans are pretty united in foreign and economic issues," says John Jackson, chairman of SIU-C's political science department. "But they are divided on social and moral issues. There are generally two strands of thought among Republicans on those issues. Some think that government should stay out of certain issues such as abortion and drugs. Others feel that it's the government's business to put an end to things like abortion and ERA."

Those who embrace the latter philosophy are primary targets of the New Right message. By tapping the hopes and fears of single issue constituencies and raising the funds to elect and defeat candidates of its choice, the New Right is beating the left with what used to be the left's own weapons, including political action committees and think-tanks.

The movement began around 1974 after Watergate. Some political scientists say that its emergence is a manifestation of a growing cynicism towards politics—a period of conservatism following a period of liberalism and radicalism.

"The movement has something to do with political cycles, but it has even more to do the cyclical patterns of how much attention the public pays to extremist groups," Jackson said. "Ten years ago everyone was talking about the New Left and how it was here to stay. Today, few people talk about the New Left."

Defining the New Right as a political entity is difficult. The movement opposes more issues than it supports—a sort of politics of negativism. It follows that it's perhaps easier to discuss what the New Right is not, rather than what it is.

For example, the New Right is not related to what was known as the Old Right of the late 1950s and early 1960s, a fanatical religious movement that has since disintegrated. The New Right is not solely comprised of elitist organizations such as the John Birch Society, although both groups have taken similar positions on many issues. The New Right is not merely an outgrowth of today's traditional Republican conservatives, the right-of-the-center politicians who are the budget-cutters and supply-siders.

In his book, "Thunder on the Right," Alan Crawford, a former member of the New Right, offers an accurate definition of the movement. The New Right is "an institutionalized, disciplined, well-financed political network that capitalizes on the passions behind single issue causes and skillfully commands the use of increasingly powerful political action committees," writes Crawford. "It's leadership, mostly white, mostly middle-class, are using their new found power to tip elections, veto legislation and initiate referenda."

The key words in Crawford's definition are "well financed network." With almost 30 organizations representing and promoting and raising funds for the movement, the New Right network is literally giving the liberals a run for their money.

JUST WHO ARE THESE

Although Jerry Falwell and Jesse Helms are the better known names among leaders of the New Right, the true architects of the movement are several Washington political technicians.

"The New Right is a lot of new groups with new people getting a lot of new attention," Jackson said.

The new guys are men like Richard Viguerie, a Texan who headed the conservative Young Americans for Freedom in the 1960s. Viguerie owns a huge computerized direct-mail company that is the life blood of the New Right. He handles fund raising and membership drives for 70 candidates and conservative groups and claims to have the names of 10 to 20 million conservative activists stored in his computers. Viguerie also owns a communications corporation which publishes the Conservative Digest, the major publication of the New Right.

Paul Weyrich, a former senatorial press aide, masterminded the effort to forge single issue groups into a formidable right wing monolith, the Moral Majority. With financial assistance from brewery magnate Joseph Coors, Weyrich founded the Heritage Foundation, a $3.2 million a year right-wing think tank.

A successful fund-raising mechanism and a think-tank are just part of the components it takes to build a successful political organization. Another important ingredient is a large constituency.

According to Jackson, a majority of New Right supporters live in the West and Southwest and can be divided into two groups. The first group consists of the nouveau riche, the young, upwardly mobile business people who vote Republican. The second group is quite a contrast to the first; they are grass roots followers, middle and lower class folks without political experience.

"The second group are people who are threatened in a sociological sense, their traditional values are threatened by new lifestyles and things like gay rights," Jackson said. "Their fear and hate drive them to become activists."

By uniting single issue constituencies—advocates of restoring prayer in public schools, anti-abortionists, anti-gun control, anti-busing, anti-communist and anti-union organizations—the New Right has garnered the support of millions of Americans.

"That's why they have become as powerful as they are," says Jean Hardisty, director of Midwest Research Inc., a Chicago-based political research firm which monitors the activities of the right.

Hardisty said that many of the New Right organizations share leadership and membership.

"There has been quite a bit of interlocking within discreet segments of single issue groups, mainly within the religious fundamentalist groups who are concerned with strictly social issues," she said. "The trick is to arouse the members to become activists."

County. But according to the Rev. Jack Nelson, Murphysboro Baptist minister who was to be chairman of the group, the chapter never materialized.

The New Right apparently hasn't surfaced at SIUC. The only organized conservative group is the College Republicans. According to Tom Wood, the group's president, the organization is an outgrowth of Youth for Reagan, a campaign organization. After the election, the organization broke up and at the beginning of fall semester, Wood organized the College Republicans. He said the group has 45 active members.

Wood says he sees a shift towards conservatism on today's campus.

"An example of the shift is this year's Halloween party," said the 21-year-old senior. "The party wasn't as crazy as it usually is. Students are turning mellow and more conservative."

Wood said Republicanism covers a vast range of philosophies.

UNITING THE NOUVEAU RICHE AND THE GRASS ROOTS

Once they become activists, the next trick is to get the followers to vote for the right candidates, which they did in the 1980 elections. The New Right was quick to claim—with some accuracy—responsibility for the Republican sweep of the Senate. The National Conservative Political Action Committee (NCPAC), the most powerful right wing organization, was instrumental in defeating several key liberal Senators, including George McGovern of South Dakota and Birch Bayh of Indiana.

In Southern Illinois, Paul Simon, a moderate Democrat, defeated his Republican opponent in the 24th Congressional District by only 1,000 votes and it is expected that he will have a tough time in the 1982 election. In July, NCPAC named Simon and 13 other congressmen as targets on its "hit list" for their opposition to Reagan's tax program. The groups began an anti-Simon mail campaign and bought 30 spots on local radio stations to urge the public to vote against Simon in the next election.

The New Right surfaced briefly in Jackson County last summer. In June, the Moral Majority sponsored the 1981 organization convention in Jackson

Athletics merger opposed by GSC

By Alan Sculley
Staff Writer

A resolution opposing the proposed merger of the men's and women's athletics departments was passed by the Graduate Student Council at its meeting Wednesday.

Another resolution passed at the meeting urges the administration to decide soon on how surplus money from last year's women's athletics budget will be spent. Others passed recommended a 14 percent increase in graduate fellowship stipends and opposed a system of differential tuition for law and medical students.

Reasons cited by the resolution opposing the athletics merger include that it would not save money, that the program is already appropriately coordinated and the philosophical values and policies of the men's and women's programs differ.

The GSC also voiced concern in the resolution about the "gradual move toward merger," and asked that Bruce Swinburne, vice president for student affairs, weigh carefully each step taken in that direction.

The resolution urging the administration to decide how the surplus of about $125,000 from the 1980-81 women's athletics budget will be redistributed requests that Swinburne keep the surplus money in the women's program.

Support was given for the resolution favoring a 14 percent increase in graduate fellowship stipends after council members noted that, while fellowships are considered more prestigious than graduate assistantships, pay for a fellowship is lower.

Center offers exam workshops

With final exams just around the corner, the Center for Basic Skills is offering three workshops to aid the exam-conscious student.

The center will conduct a "Studying for Tests" workshop at 11 a.m. Tuesday in Pulliam Hall, Room 34. "Test-taking Techniques" will be discussed at 2 p.m. Wednesday in the Wham Building, Room 317. Finally, a workshop on "Fighting Exam Anxiety" will be held at 2 p.m. Thursday in the Wham Building, Room 203.

fellowship would increase from $410 to $470, and a stipend for a doctoral student with a fellowship would go up to $500 from $440, the resolution states.

The increase for fellowships, however, would reduce the total number offered from 75 to 65, Debbie Brown, GSC president, told the council.

The resolution opposing differential tuition for law and medical students was passed after concern was expressed by several council members that allowing different tuition for law and medical students could lead to different tuition levels between other majors.

Swinburne told the council that one reason that SIU-C has fought the concept of differential tuition is that it could lead to an approach like the one at the University of Illinois where juniors and seniors pay higher tuition than freshmen and sophomores.

In other action, Gordon Nakagawa, a student in speech communication, was elected as a GSC representative to the Graduate Council. Nakagawa replaces Wendy Broadbooks, who resigned early this semester. His position begins this spring.

GSC committee to probe sabbatical leave policy

By Alan Sculley
Staff Writer

Concerns voiced over a new sabbatical leave policy, which is supported by the Faculty Senate, prompted the Graduate Council to refer the issue to its research committee for study. Meeting on Thursday, the council also formed an ad hoc committee to look into the distribution of funds for summer classes and referred study of a proposal for a new category of graduate fellowships to committee.

John Giv'a, vice president for academic affairs and research, told the council that the new sabbatical policy would let faculty apply for an extension of a sabbatical from 4½ months to six months. Current policy limits to 4½ months the paid leaves granted to conduct research.

Marvin Kleinau, Faculty Senate president, said any extended sabbaticals would be granted by the Summer Research Fellowships Committee, but funding would come from other areas within academic affairs and research.

Gordon Pitz, chairman of the Graduate Council's research committee, said he was concerned that priority funding would be given to applicants for sabbaticals, and not just anyone who requests aid for their research. He said that if extra money is available, all types of research should be considered, not just sabbaticals.

The research committee will find out if graduate faculty disagree with the sabbatical extension policy, and if so, ask that they report the disagreements to the Faculty Senate.

The ad hoc committee on distribution of funds for summer classes will study how funds are currently dispersed, and then the council will decide what guidelines for summer funding it would support.

Study of the new category of fellowships, the Morris Graduate Fellowship Program, was referred to the educational policies committee. It would establish up to ten fellowships, paying $7,500 for nine months, for new doctoral students.

Funding would come from the current fellowship program, John Jackson, acting dean of the Graduate School, has said.

Moral Majority to liberal conservatives.
"People may think of Jerry Falwell when they think 'right,' but for the most part when people think 'right' they think Reagan," Wood said. "The Moral Majority gives us a bad name."

IS REAGAN 'RIGHT' ENOUGH?

Wood isn't the only one who thinks the New Right is bad for the Republican image. White House political analysts have concluded that an endorsement by Jerry Falwell can amount to a kiss of death. And apparently the feelings of the New Right leaders is somewhat mutual. The two entities feed off each other: The Republicans use the New Right to win elections and the New Right taps the Republican party as a source of constituents. But leaders of the New Right have voiced dissatisfaction with the Reagan administration and Republican congressmen for not pushing right-wing causes and for appointing Sandra Day O'Connor to the U.S. Supreme Court. Apparently some right-wing politicians are not "right" enough for the New Right.

"The Republican Party has an ambivalent feeling about the New Right," Hardisty said. "It's impossible for them to turn down the support, but they are not that extreme. The Republican party and the New Right are married, but it is not a completely happy marriage."

For now, the Republicans and the New Right are stuck with each other, but their union may face tough times in the next few years. According to recently published surveys conducted by the Republican National Committee, Jerry Falwell is now unpopular among voters by margins of 3 to 1 and 3 to 1 all over the country, even in the Bible Belt. Whether that's an indication that the New Right may be faltering is as unforeseen as was the movement's emergence.

New questions in actress' death

LOS ANGELES (AP) — New questions were raised Thursday about the drowning of Natalie Wood as a woman who was near the actress' yacht reported she heard a female voice screaming for help and then heard someone say "We're coming to get you."

Marilyn Wayne, who was aboard the yacht Capricorn off Santa Catalina Island Saturday night, said she told authorities earlier this week that she heard a woman's cries at 11:45 p.m. Saturday.

Investigators refused comment Thursday on Ms. Wayne's report.

Assistant Los Angeles County Coroner Richard Wilson said the coroner's office learned of the reported screams through news accounts Thursday and doubted they would affect the findings of death by accidental drowning with "no evidence of foul play."

Fifth Madrigal Dinner series keeps English traditions alive

SIU-C will get a taste of Renaissance revelry next week with The Fifth Madrigal Dinner Concert series. Tuesday through Sunday nights in Ballroom D of the Student Center.

The madrigal dinner has been a tradition since its origins in the 15th and 16th centuries. English composers revised the originally Italian madrigal into an informal type of entertainment performed in the castles and country manors of English noblemen.

The Student Center-sponsored dinners will be decked with all the trimmings of a feast in "Merrie Olde England," including costumed performers singing madrigal songs and yuletide carols, and dancers, jugglers, a string quartet and a brass ensemble. Flaming plum pudding and sparkling wassail will complement the repast.

Each program will begin at 6:30 p.m. The price of the dinner is $11.95. Reservations may be made at the Student Center Central Ticket Office from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. weekdays.

two Graduate Student Council representatives and one representative each from the Alumni Association, the Administrative-Professional Staff Council and the Civil Service Council. The civil service representative would be able to vote on the IAC, whereas that position presently does not have a vote.

In addition, the president would appoint four more faculty representatives and a community representative.

A National Collegiate Athletics Association rule requires the IAC to have a majority of faculty, and the ten take" between the University and the region, according to Farrell.

Efforts at fund raising would be directed at industries which make use of SIU-C graduates and alumni, according to Farrell, who said that SIU-C's "party school" image would also be one of his concerns as vice president. The school's image is not as bad as many people here believe it to be, he said.

"I think it's a better school than some people here think it is," Farrell said. "I think a lot of people here are concerned with the way it's viewed, but that also happens at a lot of other universities."

The vice presidential position was vacated May 12 when George Mace took a leave of absence to become an executive consultant with the American Council on Education in Washington. The two remaining candidates, whose names have not been released, will visit the campus next week.

faculty now constitute the majority.

Also included in the report is an objection by W.D. Klimstra, a faculty representative to the IAC, to the proposed membership of students. Klimstra said students should be selected as a single constituency rather than from both the USO and the GSC.

He said that if the two-student-constituency approach is used, he advocates having only one graduate student representative because there are fewer graduate students than undergraduates.

The changes recommended by the ad hoc committee were designed to be more specific on the IAC's role, Paratore said.

Forest images to be exhibited

A sculpture exhibit of forest images will open at 6 p.m. Friday at the University Museum in Faneer Hall.

Aileen MacKeogh, a Fulbright Scholar from Ireland, used mainly wood and paper in her master of fine arts thesis show. The scale of work in the exhibit varies from small hand pieces to a piece large enough for viewers to walk through.

MacKeogh, who recently received another scholarship from Ireland, has exhibited her work in major American shows.

The exhibit will be open through Dec. 16 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on weekdays and from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. Sundays. Admission is free and open to the public.

"Illinois' a pretty good team this year," Hill said. "I think we could beat them in a dual meet, but I'm not sure about we'll do against them in a meet where they're scoring 16 places.

"They're probably the favorites for two reasons: It's their pool and they have five more swimmers than we do," said Hill.

The second-year coach said that both Illinois and Wisconsin have more depth than does his team.

"We're a little weak in depth right now," said Hill. "We really are in need of about two more strong swimmers. But all of the girls know that they will need to contribute. Some of the girls feel in dual meets that they don't contribute to the team because they don't score. In this meet, they'll have the chance to score some points for the team."

The Salukis were dealt a blow last week when sophomore backstroke and freestyler Deb Riker quit the team. Riker holds a school record of 2:10.51 in the 200 backstroke.

Hill said that the Salukis will win a majority of the events, as far as top finishes are concerned, "but when you start adding up the points for the fifths, sevenths, ninths and tenths. It could hurt us."

Hills said he expects his team to win the 50-, 100- and 200-meter butterfly events; the 50, 100 and 200 breaststroke events; the 200, 500 and 1650 freestyle; and the 100, 200 and 400 individual medley events.

Wrestling coach looks for intensity

By Steve Metcalf
Staff Writer

Coach Linn Long said the wrestling team needs "intensive perfect practice" if it is to perform well this weekend. "You have to approach each day like a new day and have a certain goal to meet," Long said. "All I ask is that they wrestle as good as they possibly can in each match."

The team will be grappling with over 400 wrestlers in the Illinois Invitational at Champaign Friday and Saturday.

Long said the only way a wrestler can get "whipped" by an opponent is through tactical errors, improper strategy, or a technical breakdown. All three pitfalls can be avoided by proper conditioning, according to Long.

"Tactical errors and improper strategy are mostly savvy factors, which can be only experience can cure," he said. "Technical breakdown results from a lack of concentration and proper emphasis on individual drills in practice."

"If a guy is lazy in his practice drills, he will tend to be a little short on his execution in competition," Long said. "If he doesn't involve mental concentration in practice, he will come up with technical errors."

Two rookie Salukis—Ted Bessette and Mike Turnbull—both need help in cutting down errors in their strategy and tactics, according to Long.

"They have both been very emotional, motivated, and prepared mentally for competition. As long as they continue to operate like that, there's not much more I can ask for," he said.

Long also applauded the play of senior Dale Shea, who finished fourth in the 190-pound weight class at Oklahoma and first at Southwest Missouri State.

"Dale put both fists into his personal training program during the spring, summer, and fall. Now that hard work is paying dividends," Long said.

Sophomore Mark Hedstrom will be competing with the team for the first time this season. He returned to practice earlier this week after spending 10 days in the hospital with a stomach infection.

"Mark's going to give it a try," Long said. "He hopes to compete in the 190-pound weight class."

The invitational will be split into two divisions—open and freshman-sophomore. Long said it's up to the team which division SIU-C will compete in.

In all-around competition Muenz will look to sophomore John Levy to represent the Salukis, expecting good performances in the high bar and vaulting events. "John has been a little slow on his compulsories, like on the side horse, but he should finish in the top twelve in all-around competition," Muenz said.

Muenz added that Lawrence Williamson and Herb Voss also have a shot at making it to the finals in their respective competitions. According to Muenz, Voss has a chance to advance to the finals in pommel horse competition "if he keeps consistent."

Knothole Gang leads polo series

By Rod Furlow
Staff Writer

Inner tube water polo probably won't ever make the Olympic scene, but its season has made a splash at the SIU-C Recreation Center.

The Knothole Gang paddled to a 17-12 win over the Tubers-Egyptian Divers Wednesday night to take a 1-0 lead in the men's Division A best-of-three championship series.

Tom Sweeney paced the Knotholers with eight goals. John Hayman added four, Jim Knibus threw in three, and John Slifer scored two.

Larry Dodson paced the Tubers with five goals, Pete Freeman fired in four, and Jeff Plimpton had the other three.

The game wasn't the first match between the teams this season. Being the only two teams entered in their division, they met three times in the regular season. The Tubers won all three, giving Dodson reason to believe his team can come back to win two games in a row for the crown.

"I'm pretty optimistic since we beat them three games already," the senior in chemistry said Thursday. "We didn't play our game last night.

We usually pass the ball around real well, but we threw it away a lot last night. They're a good team and they took advantage of the mistakes."

Dodson, who has been playing the game ever since he enrolled in SIU-C, said that inner tube water polo can be both easier and more difficult to play than regular water polo.

"It's easier to move around because of the tubes, so you can move faster," he said. "But the tubes make it harder to stop and change directions. That's how it's tougher than regular polo."

Unbeaten cagers to play at SEMO

By Keith Mascitti
Staff Writer

The phrase "too close for comfort" is more than the title of television situation comedy to women's basketball Coach Cindy Scott.

In each of the Salukis first two games, SIU-C has turned easy wins into nail-biting adventures.

In the season opener at Murray State, the Salukis held a 13-point advantage until the final five minutes of the game when the Racers took a run at them but fell short by six, 68-62.

In the home opener against Indiana, SIU-C enjoyed 13- and 17-point leads throughout much of the contest, but a stagnant Saluki offense, combined with Hoosier pressure made the score closer than it really was. 77-76.

"We've been a little concerned about having teams down and coming back," Scott said. "We have to learn that when we have a team down we have to put them away."

"Our point guards have to take control and the other players have to do what the floor leaders tell them to do," she said. "We should have worked with the 30 second clock more then we did. The kids know what they did wrong and we're learning from our mistakes. They keep hanging in and that says a lot about your team."

Scott thinks a factor in the team's early-season lapses might be youth.

"We're a young team and we will make mistakes," Scott said. "But I think we're going to have a good team this year."

SIU-C will travel to Cape Girardeau to face Southeast Missouri State in a game they are favored to win. But Scott said SEMO cannot be overlooked.

"They're a scrappy club," Scott said. "They'll be sky-high for this one. There is nothing they would rather do than knock off SIU."

"SEMO isn't one of the stronger schools on our schedule," Scott said. "But they're better than they were last year. If we take them lightly we'll come home on the short end."

Scott said she would like to use some of her younger players in the SEMO game, especially Cheri Bacon. Bacon, a 6-foot freshman forward from Crystal Lake, who Scott says is a good player who needs some early season experience.

Sophomore forward Roslyn Bartley, who has been placed on probation by Scott, will not dress for the SEMO contest. Bartley had left the team before Thanksgiving break to become a missionary in her hometown of University City, Mo., but returned to the team the Nov. 27.

"She's been working hard and doing good on the floor but she has to do good in her classes," Scott said. "She's a good player and we're just as anxious as she is to get her back in the lineup. But she still has some proving to do."

Team depth to be key at Illinois swim meet

By Doug Applebaugh
Staff Writer

Three weeks ago, the women's swimming and diving team proved it had enough talent and the depth to win a major dual meet when it drowned Big Ten powerhouse Indiana 95-54.

But the Salukis will be put to another test Friday when they enter the three-day Illini Invitational at Champaign. Coach Tim Hill said that because of the scoring format to be used in the meet, the team with most overall depth will probably win the meet.

Points will be awarded to the top 16 finishers in each of the meet's 24 events. Twenty points will be awarded for a first-place finish, 17 points for a second, 16 points for a third, and so on.

Hill said that Illinois should be considered the favorite of the six-team field, which also includes Wisconsin, Purdue, Iowa State and Texas A&M.

Gymnasts to try for Morava Award

Bob Morand
Staff Writer

The men's gymnastics team will carry more than their sweats and grips to the Windy City Invitational tournament this weekend in Chicago.

Although Coach Meade will not be able to join his team because of a death in his family, his team will carry the memory of a former Saluki, Gary Morava, who was killed in a gym accident in 1974 while practicing a routine in the Arena.

The top all-around performer of the 12 team tournament this weekend will receive the Gary Morava Award, an honor awarded annually at this tournament since the gymnast's death.

"Gary was the tenth best gymnast in the world at the time of his death," said Assistant Coach Dan Mueez. "It's a prestigious award to win."

But the award won't be the main objective of the team this weekend, the competition will take precedence.

The Salukis will face the awesome Nebraska Cornhuskers, the No. 1 team in the nation boasting the No. 1 all-around gymnast in Jim Hartung. The Cornhuskers have won the NCAA title for the past three years in a row and have fueled the U.C. National team with Hartung, Phil Cahoy and Scott Johnson. SIU-C's Brian Babcock, although redshirted this year, also is a member of the national team.

"Nebraska obviously will be the toughest team to beat," Mueez said. "They're always the biggest threat."

Rounding out this weekend's tournament will be Penn State, Oklahoma, Iowa, Iowa State,
